THE
OF
Mr. JOHN FLAVEL,
Miniſter of DARTMOUTH.

THoſe of the Name of Flavel, derive their Pedigree from one who was the Third Great Officer that came over with William the Conqueror; but this Worthy Divine was far from that Weakneſs and Vanity to boaſt of any thing of that Nature, being of the Poet's Mind, who ſaid,

> Et genus, & proavos, & quæ non fecimus ipſi,
> Vix ea noſtra Voco———

His Father was Mr. Richard Flavel, a Painful and Eminent Miniſter: He was firſt Miniſter at Bromſgrove in Worceſterſhire, then at Haſler, and removed from thence to Willerſey in Glouceſterſhire, where he continued till 1660. that he was Outed upon the Reſtoration of King Charles II. becauſe it was a Sequeſtred Living, and the Incumbent then alive: This did not ſo much affect Mr. Flavel, as that he wanted a fixed Place for the Exerciſe of his Paſtoral Function. He was a Perſon of ſuch Extraordinary Piety, that thoſe who converſ'd with him, ſaid, they never heard one Vain Word drop from his Mouth. A little before the Turning out of the Nonconformiſt Miniſters, being near Totneſs in Devon, He preach'd from Hoſea. 7. 9. The Days of Viſitation are come, the Days of Recompence are come, Iſrael ſhall know it. His Application was ſo cloſe that it offended ſome People, and occaſioned his being carried before ſome Juſtices of the Peace, but they could not reach him, ſo that he was Diſcharged. He afterwards quitted that Country, and his Son's Houſe, which was his Retiring Place, and came to London, where he continued in a Faithful and Acceptable diſcharge of his Office, till the time of the dreadful Plague in 1665. that he was Taken and Impriſoned in the manner following. He was at Mr. Blake's Houſe in Covent-Garden, where ſome People had met privately for Worſhip: Whilſt he was at Prayer, a Party of Soldiers brake in upon them with their Swords drawn, and demanded their Preacher, threatning ſome, and flattering others, to diſcover him, but in Vain. Some of the Company threw a Coloured Cloak over him, and in this diſguiſe he was, together with his Hearers, carried to Whitehall; the Women were diſmiſſed, but the Men detain'd, and forc'd to lye all that night upon the bare Floor; and becauſe they would not pay Five Pound each, were ſent to Newgate, where the Peſtilence raged moſt Violently, as in other places of the City. Here Mr. Flavel and his Wife were ſhut up, and ſeized with the Sickneſs; they were Bailed out, but Died of the Contagion; of which their Son John had a Divine Monition given him by a Dream, as we ſhall obſerve in its proper place. Mr. Richard Flavel left two Sons behind him, both Miniſters of the Goſpel, viz. John and Phineas.

John the Eldeſt was Born in Worceſterſhire. It was obſervable, that whilſt his Mother Lay-in with him, a Nightingale made her Neſt in the outſide of the Chamber Window, where ſhe us'd to ſing moſt ſweetly. He was Religiouſly Educated by his Father, and having profitted well at the Grammar Schools, was ſent early to Oxford, and ſettled a Commoner in Univerſity-Colledge. He plied his Studies hard, and exceeded many of his Contemporaries in Univerſity-Learning.

Soon after his Commencing Batchelor of Arts, Mr. Walplate, the Miniſter of Diptford in the County of Devon, was rendred uncapable of performing his Office by reaſon of his Age and Infirmity, and ſent to Oxford for an Aſſiſtant; Mr. Flavel, tho' but young, was recommended to him as a Perſon duly qualified, and was accordingly ſettled there by the Standing Committee of Devon, April 27. 1650. to Preach as a Probationer and Aſſiſtant to Mr. Walplate.

Mr. Flavel conſidering the Weight of his Charge, applied himſelf to the Work of his Calling with great Diligence; and being aſſiduous in Reading, Meditation and Prayer, he increas'd in Miniſterial Knowledge daily, (for he found himſelf that he came raw enough in that reſpect from the Univerſity) ſo that he attain'd to an high Degree of Eminency and Reputation for his uſeful Labours in the Church.

About Six Months after his ſettling at Diptford, he heard of an Ordination to be at Salisbury, and therefore went thither with his Teſtimonials, and offer'd himſelf to be Examined and Ordain'd by the Presbytery there: They appointed him a Text, upon which he Preach'd to their General Satisfaction; and having afterwards examin'd him as to his Learning, &c. they ſet him apart to the Work of the Miniſtry with Prayer and Impoſition of Hands, on the 17th day of October, 1650.

Mr. Flavel being thus Ordain'd, return'd to Diptford, and after Mr. Walplate's Death ſucceeded in the Rectory. To avoid all Incumbrances from the World, and Avocations from his Studies and Miniſterial Work, he choſe a Perſon of Worth and Reputation in the Pariſh (of whom he had a good Aſſurance that he would be Faithful to himſelf and Kind to his Pariſhioners) and Let him the whole Tythes much below the Real Value, which was very well pleaſing to his People. By this Means he was the better able to deal with them in private, ſince the Hire of his Labours was no way a hindrance to the ſucceſs of them.

Whilſt he was at Diptford he Married one Mrs. Joan Randall, a pious Gentlewoman, of a Good Family, who died in Travail of her firſt Child without being delivered. His Year of Mourning being expired, his Acquaintance and Intimate Friends adviſ'd him to Marry a ſecond time, wherein he was again very happy. Some time after this ſecond Marriage, the People of Dartmouth (a Great and Noted Sea-port in the County of Devon, formerly under the Charge of the Reverend Mr. Anthony Hartford deceas'd, unanimouſly choſe Mr. Flavel to ſucceed him. They urg'd him to accept their Call, (1.) Becauſe there were Exceptions made againſt all the other Candidates, but none againſt him. (2) Becauſe being acceptable to the whole Town, he was the more like to be an Inſtrument of healing the Breaches amongſt the good People there. (3.) Becauſe Dartmouth being a Conſiderable and Populous Town, requir'd an Able and Eminent Miniſter, which was not ſo neceſſary for a Country Pariſh, that might beſides be more eaſily ſupplied with another Paſtor than Dartmouth.

Elizabeth Morrice.

That which made them more Preſſing and Earneſt with Mr. Flavel, was this; at a Provincial Synod in that County, Mr. Flavel, tho' but a young Man, was Voted into the Chair as Moderator, where he opened the Aſſembly with a moſt Devout and Pertinent Prayer, he examin'd the Candidates who offered themſelves to their Trials for the Miniſtry with great Learning, ſtated the Caſes and Queſtions propos'd to them with much Acuteneſs and Judgment, and in the whole, demean'd himſelf with that Gravity, Piety, and Seriouſneſs, during his Preſidency, that all the Miniſters of the Aſſembly Admir'd and Lov'd him. The Reverend Mr. Hartford, his Predeceſſor at Dartmouth, took particular Notice of him, from that time forward Contracted a ſtrict Friendſhip with him, and ſpoke of him among the Magiſtrates and People of Dartmouth, as an Extraordinary Perſon, who was like to be a great Light in the Church: This, with their having ſeveral times heard him Preach, occaſioned their Importunity with Mr. Flavel to come and be their Miniſter; upon which having ſpread his Caſe before the Lord, and ſubmitted to the Deciſion of his Neighbouring Miniſters, he was prevail'd upon to remove to Dartmouth, to his Great Loſs in Temporals, the Rectory of Diptford being a much Greater Benefice.

Mr. Flavel being ſettled at Dartmouth by the Election of the People, and an Order from Whitehall by the Commiſſioners for Approbation of Publick Preachers of the 19th of December, 1656. he was aſſociated with Mr. Allein Geere, a very Worthy, but Sickly, Man. The Miniſterial Work was thus divided betwixt them, Mr. Flavel was to preach on the Lord's Day at Townſtall, the Mother-Church, ſtanding upon a Hill without the Town; and every Fortnight in his Turn at the Wedneſday's Lecture in Dartmouth. Here God Crowned his Labours with many Converſions. One of his Judicious Hearers expreſs'd himſelf thus concerning him, 'I could ſay much, tho' not enough, of the Excellency of his Preaching, of his Seaſonable, Suitable and Spiritual Matter, of his Plain Expoſitions of Scripture, his Taking Method, his Genuine and Natural Deductions, his Convincing Arguments, his Clear and Powerful Demonſtrations, his Heart-ſearching Applications, and his Comfortable Supports to thoſe that were Afflicted in Conſcience. In ſhort, that Perſon muſt have a very ſoft Head, or a very hard Heart, or both, that could ſit under his Miniſtry unaffected.

By his unwearied application to Study he had acquir'd a Great Stock both of Divine and Humane Learning. He was Maſter of the Controverſies betwixt the Jews and Chriſtians, Papiſts and Proteſtants, Lutherans and Calviniſts, and betwixt the Orthodox, and the Arminians, and Socinians. He was likewiſe well read in the Controverſies about Church Diſcipline, Infant-Baptiſm, and Antinomianiſm. He was well acquainted with the School Divinity, and drew up a Judicious and Ingenious Scheme of the whole Body of that Theology in good Latin; which he preſented to a Perſon of Quality, but 'twas never printed. He was ſingularly well Verſ'd and Exact in the Oriental Languages. He had one way of improving his Knowledge, which is very proper for Young Divines; Whatever remarkable Paſſage he heard in private Conference, if he was familiar with the Relator, he would deſire him to repeat it again, and inſert it into his Averſaria: By theſe Methods he acquir'd a Vaſt Stock of proper Materials for his popular Sermons in the Pulpit, and his more elaborate Works for the Preſs.

He had an Excellent Gift of Prayer, and was never at a Loſs in all his Various Occaſions for ſuitable Matter and Words; and which was the moſt remarkable of all, he always brought with him a Broken Heart and Moving Affections; His Tongue and Spirit were touch'd with a Live Coal from the Altar, and he was evidently aſſiſted by the Holy Spirit of Grace and Supplication in that Divine Ordinance. Thoſe who Liv'd in his family ſay, that he was always full and copious in Prayer, ſeem'd conſtantly to exceed himſelf, and rarely made uſe twice of the ſame Expreſſions.

When the Act of Uniformity turn'd him out with the Reſt of his Nonconforming Brethren, he did not thereupon quit his Relation to his Church, he thought the Souls of his Flock to be more precious than to be ſo tamely neglected: He took all Opportunities of miniſtring the Word, and Sacraments to them in private Meetings, and join'd with other Miniſters in Solemn Days of Faſting and Humiliation, to Pray that God would once more reſtore the Ark of his Covenant unto his afflicted Iſrael. About four Months after that fatal Bartholomew-day, his Reverend Collegue, Mr. Allein Geere, died, ſo that the whole Care of the Flock devolv'd upon Mr. Flavel, which tho' a heavy and preſſing Burden he undertook very cheerfully.

Upon the Execution of the Oxford Act, which Baniſh'd all Nonconformiſt Miniſters Five Miles from any Towns which ſent Members to Parliament, he was forced to leave Dartmouth, to the Great Sorrow of his People, who follow'd him out of Town, and at Townſtall Churchyard they took ſuch a Mournful Farewel of one another, as the Place might very well have been call'd Bochim. He remov'd to Slapton, a Pariſh Five Miles from Dartmouth, or any other Corporation, which put him out of the Legal Reach of his Adverſaries. Here he met with Signal Inſtances of God's Fatherly Care and Protection, and Preach'd twice every Lord's Day to ſuch as durſt adventure to hear him, which many of his own People and others did, notwithſtanding the Rigor and Severity of the Act againſt Conventicles. He many times Slipp'd privately into Dartmouth, where by Preaching and Converſation he edified his Flock to the Great Refreſhment of his own Soul and theirs, tho' with very much Danger, becauſe of his Watchful Adverſaries, who conſtantly laid Wait for him, ſo that he could not make any long ſtay in the Town.

In thoſe Times Mr. Flavel being at Exeter, was invited to Preach by many good People of that City, who for ſafety choſe a Wood about Three Miles from the City, to be the Place of their Aſſembly, where they were broke up by their Enemies by that time the Sermon was well begun. Mr. Flavel, by the Care of the People, made his eſcape thro' the middle of his enraged Enemies; and, tho' many of his Hearers were taken, carried before Juſtice Tuckfield, and Fined; yet the reſt being nothing diſcourag'd, reaſſembled, and carrying Mr. Flavel to another Wood, he Preach'd to them without any Diſturbance, and after he had concluded, Rode to a Gentleman's Houſe near the Wood, who tho' an abſolute Stranger to Mr. Flavel, Entertain'd him with great Civility that Night, and next Day he returned to Exeter in Safety. Amongſt thoſe taken at this time, there was a Tanner who had a Numerous Family, and but a Small Stock: He was Fined notwithſtanding Forty Pound; at which he was nothing diſcourag'd, but told a Friend who ask'd him how he bore up under his Loſs, That he took the Spoiling of his Goods Joyfully for the ſake of his Lord Jeſus, for whom his Life, and all that he had, was too little.

As ſoon as the Nonconformiſts had any reſpite from their Trouble, Mr. Flavel laid hold on the Opportunity, and return'd to Dartmouth, where during the firſt Indulgence granted by King Charles II. he kept open Doors, and Preach'd freely to all that would come and hear him; and when that Liberty was revok'd, he made it his Buſineſs notwithſtanding to Preach in Seaſon and out of Seaſon, and ſeldom miſs'd of an Opportunity of Preaching on the Lord's Day. During this time, God was pleas'd to deprive him of his ſecond Wife, which was a Great Affliction, ſhe having been a Help meet for him; and ſuch an one he ſtood much in need of, as being a Man of an Infirm and Weak Conſtitution, who labour'd under many Infirmities. In convenient time he Married a third Wife, Mrs. Ann Downe, Daughter of Mr. Thomas Downe, Miniſter of Exeter, who lived very happily with him Eleven Years, and left him Two Sons, who are Youths of great Hopes.

The Perſecution againſt the Nonconformiſts being renew'd, Mr. Flavel found it unſafe to ſtay at Dartmouth, and therefore reſolv'd to go to London, where he hop'd to be in leſs Danger, and to have more Liberty to exerciſe his Function. The Night before he Embark'd for that End, he had the following Premonition by a Dream. He thought he was on Board the Ship, and that a Storm aroſe, which exceedingly terrified the Paſſengers; during their Conſternation, there ſat writing at the Table a Perſon of Admirable Sagacity and Gravity, who had a Child in a Cradle by him that was very froward; he thought he ſaw the Father take up a little Whip, and give the Child a Laſh, ſaying, Child, be quiet, I will diſcipline, but not hurt thee. Upon this Mr. Flavel awak'd, and muſing on his Dream, he concluded that he ſhould meet with ſome Trouble in his Paſſage: His Friends being at Dinner with him, aſſur'd him of a pleaſant Paſſage, becauſe the Wind and Weather were very fair; Mr. Flavel replied, That he was not of their Mind, but expected much Trouble becauſe of his Dream; adding, That when he had ſuch Repreſentations made to him in his Sleep, they ſeldom or never fail'd.

Accordingly when they were advanc'd within Five Leagues of Portland in their Voyage, they were overtaken by a dreadful Tempeſt, inſomuch that betwixt One and Two in the Morning the Maſter and Seamen concluded, That unleſs God chang'd the Wind, there was no hope of Life; it was impoſſible for 'em to Weather Portland, ſo that they muſt of neceſſity be Wrack'd on the Rocks or on the Shoar. Upon this Mr. Flavel call'd all the Hands that could be ſpared into the Cabbin to Prayer; but the Violence of the Tempeſt was ſuch, that they could not prevent themſelves from being thrown from the one ſide unto the other as the Ship was toſs'd; and not only ſo, but mighty Seas broke in upon them, as if they would have drown'd them in the very Cabbin. Mr. Flavel in this Danger took hold of the two Pillars of the Cabbin-Bed, and calling upon God, begg'd Mercy for himſelf and the reſt in the Ship. Amongſt other Arguments in Prayer, he made uſe of this, That if he and his Company periſh'd in that Storm, the Name of God would be blaſphem'd, the Enemies of Religion would ſay, That tho' he eſcaped their Hands on Shoar, yet Divine Vengeance had overtaken him at Sea. In the midſt of Prayer his Faith and Hope were rais'd, inſomuch that he expected a gracious Anſwer; ſo that committing himſelf and his Company to the Mercy of God, he concluded the Duty. No ſooner was Prayer ended, but one came down from the Deck, crying, De- liverance! Deliverance! God is a God hearing Prayer! In a Moment the Wind is come fair Weſt! And ſo Sailing before it, they were brought ſafely to London. Mr. Flavel found many of his Old Friends there; and God rais'd him New Ones, with Abundance of Work, and Extraordinary Encouragement in it. During his ſtay in London, he Married his fourth Wife, a Widow Gentlewoman (Daughter to Mr. George Jefferies formerly Miniſter of King's-Bridge) but now his ſorrowful Relict.

Mr. Flavel, while he was in London, narrowly eſcaped being taken with the Reverend Mr. Jenkins, at Mr. Foxe's in Moorfields, where they were keeping a Day of Faſting and Prayer. He was ſo near, that he heard the Inſolence of the Officers and Soldiers to Mr. Jenkins when they had taken him; and obſerv'd it in his Diary, that Mr. Jenkins might have eſcap'd as well as himſelf, had it not been for a piece of Vanity in a Lady whoſe long Train hinder'd his going down Stairs, Mr. Jenkins out of his too great Civility having let her paſs before him.

Mr. Flavel after this return'd to Dartmouth, where with his Family and Dear People he bleſs'd God for his Mercies towards him. He was in a little time after Confin'd Cloſe Priſoner to his Houſe, where many of his Dear Flock ſtole in over Night, or betimes on the Lord's Day in the Morning, to enjoy the benefit of his Labours, and ſpend the Sabbath in Hearing, Praying, Singing of Pſalms, and holy Diſcourſes.

Mr. Jenkins above-mentioned dying in Priſon, his People gave Mr. Flavel a Call to the Paſtoral Office among them, and Mr. Reeves his People did the like. Mr. Flavel Communicated thoſe Calls unto his Flock, and kept a Day of Prayer with them to beg Direction from God in this Important Affair; he was graciouſly pleas'd to anſwer them by fixing Mr. Flavel's Reſolution to ſtay with his Flock at Dartmouth. Many Arguments were made uſe of to perſwade him to come to London, as that ſince he was turn'd out by the Act of Uniformity, he had had but very little Maintenance from his Church; that thoſe at London were Rich and Numerous Congregations; that he had a Family and Children to provide for; and that the City was a Theatre of Honour and Reputation; but none of thoſe things could prevail with him to leave his Poor People at Dartmouth.

In 1687. when it pleas'd God ſo to over-rule Affairs, that King James II. thought it his Intereſt to diſpence with the Penal Laws againſt them, Mr. Flavel, who had formerly been confin'd to a Corner, ſhone Brightly, as a flaming Beacon upon the Top of an Hill. His Affectionate People prepar'd a large Place for him, where God bleſs'd his Labours to the Conviction of many People by his Sermons on Revelations 3. 20. Behold I ſtand at the Door and knock. This encourag'd him to Print thoſe Sermons under the Title of England's Duty, &c. hoping that it might do good abroad as well as in his own Congregation. He had made a Vow to the Lord under his Confinement, that if he ſhould be once more entruſted with publick Liberty, he would improve it to the Advantage of the Goſpel; this he perform'd in a moſt Conſcientious Manner, Preaching twice every Lord's Day, and Lectur'd every Wedneſday, in which he went over moſt of the Third Chapter of St. John, ſhewing the Indiſpenſible Neceſſity of Regeneration. He Preach'd likewiſe every Thurſday before the Sacrament, and then after Examination admitted Communicants. He had no Aſſiſtance on Sacrament-days, ſo that he was many times almoſt Spent before he diſtributed the Elements. When the Duty of the Day were over, he would often complain of a ſore Breaſt, an aking Head, and a pained Back; yet he would be early at Study again next Monday. He allow'd himſelf very little Recreation, accounting Time a Precious Jewel that ought to be improv'd at any rate.

He was not only a Zealous Preacher in the Pulpit, but a Sincere Chriſtian in his Cloſet, Frequent in Self-Examination, as well as in preſſing it upon others; being afraid, leſt while he Preach'd to others, he himſelf ſhould be a Caſtaway. To prove this, I ſhall tranſcribe what follows from his own Diary.

'To make ſure of Eternal Life, ſaid he, is the great Buſineſs which the Sons of Death have to do in this World. Whether a Man conſider the Immortality of his own Soul, the ineffable Joys and Glory of Heaven, the extream and endleſs Torments of Hell, the unconceivable Sweetneſs of Peace of Conſcience, or the Miſery of being ſubject to the Terrors thereof.' All theſe put a Neceſſity, a Solemnity, a Glory upon this Work. But, Oh! the Difficulties and Dangers attending it! How many? And how great are theſe? What Judgment, Faithfulneſs, Reſolution, and Watchfulneſs, doth it require? Such is the Deceitfulneſs, Darkneſs and Inconſtancy of our Hearts, and ſuch the Malice, Policy and Diligence of Satan to manage and improve it, that he who attempts this Work had need both to watch his Seaſons for it, and frequently look up to God for his Guidance and Illumination, and to ſpend many ſad and ſerious Thoughts, before he adventure upon a Determination and Concluſion of the State of his Soul.

'To the end therefore that this moſt important Work may not miſcarry in my Hands, I have Collected, with all the Care I can, the Beſt and Soundeſt Characters I can find in the Writings of our Modern Divines, taken out of the Scripture, and by their Labours illuſtrated and prepared for uſe, that I might make a right Application of them.

'1. I have earneſtly beſought the Lord for the Aſſiſtance of his Spirit, which can only manifeſt my own Heart unto me, and ſhow me the true State thereof, which is that thing my Soul doth moſt earneſtly deſire to know; and I hope the Lord will anſwer my deſire therein according to his Promiſes, Luke 11. 13. John 14. 26.

'2. I have endeavoured to caſt out and lay aſide Self-love, leſt my Heart being prepoſſeſſed therewith, my Judgment ſhould be perverted, and become partial in paſſing Sentence on my Eſtate. I have in ſome Meaſure brought my Heart to be willing to Judge and Condemn my ſelf for an Hypocrite, if ſuch I ſhall be found on Trial, as to approve my ſelf for Sincere and ‘Upright. Yea, I would have it ſo far from being grievous to me ſo to do, that if I have been all this while miſtaken and deceived, I ſhall rejoice and bleſs the Lord with my Soul, that now at laſt it may be diſcovered to me, and I may be ſet right, tho' I lay the Foundation new again. This I have laboured to bring my Heart to, knowing that Thouſands have daſhed and ſplit to pieces upon this Rock. And indeed he that will own the Perſon of a Judge, muſt put off the Perſon of a Friend.

‘3. It hath been my Endeavour to keep upon my Heart a deep Senſe of that great Judgment-Day throughout this Work; as knowing by experience what a potent Influence this hath on the Conſcience, to make it Deliberate, Serious, and Faithful in its Work. And therefore I have demanded of my own Conſcience before the Reſolution of each Queſtion, O! My Conſcience, deal faithfully with me in this particular, and ſay no more to me than thou wilt own and ſtand to in the Great Day, when the Counſels of all Hearts ſhall be made manifeſt.

‘4. Having ſeriouſly weighed each Mark, and conſidered wherein the Weight and Subſtance of it lyeth, I have gone to the Lord in Prayer for his Aſſiſtance, e'er I have drawn up the anſwer of my Conſcience; and as my Heart hath been perſwaded therein, ſo have I determined and reſolved; what hath been clear to my Experience, I have ſo ſet down; and what hath been dubious, I have here left it ſo.

‘5. I have made choice of the fitteſt Seaſons I had for this Work, and ſet to it when I have found my Heart in the moſt quiet and ſerious Frame. For as he that will ſee his Face in a Glaſs, muſt be fixt, not in Motion, or in the Water, muſt make no Commotion in it; ſo it is in this Caſe.

‘6. Laſtly, To the end I may be ſucceſsful in this Work, I have laboured all along carefully to diſtinguiſh betwixt ſuch Sins as are Grounds of Doubting, and ſuch as are only Grounds of Humiliation. Knowing that not every Evil is a Ground of Doubting, tho' all, even the ſmalleſt Infirmities, adminiſter Matter of Humiliation. And thus I have deſired to Enterprize this great Buſineſs. O Lord, aſſiſt thy Servant, that he may not miſtake herein! But if his Conſcience do now condemn him, he may lay a better Foundation whilſt he hath time. And if it ſhall now acquit him, he may alſo have Boldneſs in the Day of Judgment.

Theſe things being previouſly diſpatch'd, he tried himſelf by the Scripture Marks of Sincerity and Regeneration; by this means he attained to a well-grounded Aſſurance; the raviſhing Comforts of which were many times ſhed abroad in his Soul; this made him a powerful and ſucceſsful Preacher, as one who ſpoke from his own Heart to thoſe of others. He preached what he felt, what he had handled, what he had ſeen and and taſted of the Word of Life, and they felt it alſo.

We may gueſs what a ſweet and bleſſed Intercourſe he had with Heaven from that Hiſtory we meet with in his Πνευματολογία, P. which I refer to, and likewiſe from that Revelation he had of his Father and Mothers Death, Page . He was a mighty Wreſtler with God in ſecret Prayer, and particularly begg'd of him to Crown his Sermons, printed Books, and private Diſcourſes, with the Converſion of poor Sinners, a Work which his Heart was much ſet upon. It pleas'd God to anſwer him by many Inſtances, of which the two that follow deſerve peculiar Notice.

In 1673. there came into Dartmouth Port a Ship of Pool, in her return from Virginia; the Chirurgeon of this Ship, a luſty young Man of 23 Years of Age, fell into a deep Melancholy, which the Devil improved to make him Murder himſelf. This he attempted on the Lord's-Day early in the Morning; when he was in Bed with his Brother, he firſt cut his own Throat with a Knife he had prepar'd on purpoſe, and leaping out of the Bed, thruſt it likewiſe into his Stomach, and ſo lay wallowing in his own Blood, till his Brother awak'd and cry'd for help; a Phyſician and Chirurgeon were brought, who concluded the Wound in his Throat Mortal. They ſtitch'd it up however, and applied a Plaiſter, but without hopes of cure, becauſe he already breathed thro' the Wound, and his Voice was become inarticulate. Mr. Flavel came to viſit him in this Condition, and apprehending him to be within a few Minutes of Eternity, labour'd to prepare him for it; he ask'd him his own Apprehenſions of his Condition, and the young Man anſwered, that he hop'd in God for Eternal Life. Mr. Flavel replied, that he feared his Hopes were ill-grounded; the Scripture tells us, that no Murderer hath Eternal Life abiding in him; Self-Murder was the Groſſeſt of all Murder, &c. Mr. Flavel inſiſted ſo much upon the Aggravations of the Crime, that the young Man's Conſcience began to fail, his Heart began to melt, and then he broke out into Tears, bewailing his Sin and Miſery, and ask'd Mr. Flavel, if there might yet be any Hope for him? He told him there might; and finding him altogether unaccquainted with the Nature of Faith and Repentance, he opened them to him. The poor Man ſuck'd in this Doctrine greedily, prayed with great Vehemence to God that he would work them on his Soul, and intreated Mr. Flavel to pray with him, and for him, that he might be, tho' late, a ſincere Goſpel Penitent, and Sound Believer. Mr. Flavel prayed with him accordingly, and it pleas'd God exceedingly to melt the young Man's Heart during the Performance of that Duty. He was very loth to part with Mr. Flavel, but the Duty of the Day obliging him to be gone, in a few Words he ſumm'd up thoſe Counſels that he thought moſt Neceſſary, and ſo took his Farewel of him, never expecting to ſee him any more in this World. But it pleaſed God to order it otherwiſe; the young Man continued alive contrary to all Expectation, panted earneſtly after the Lord Jeſus, and no Diſcourſe was pleaſing to him, but that of Chriſt and Faith. In this Frame Mr. Flavel found him in the Evening; he rejoiced greatly when he ſaw him come again, intreated him to continue his Diſcourſe upon thoſe Subjects, and told him, Sir, the Lord hath given me Repentance for this and for all my other Sins; I ſee the Evil of them now, ſo as I never ſaw them before, O I loath my ſelf! I do alſo believe, Lord, help my Unbelief. I am heartily willing to take Chriſt upon his own Terms, but one thing troubles me. I doubt this Bloody Sin will not be pardoned. Will Jeſus Chriſt, ſaid he, apply his Blood to me, that have ſhed my own Blood? Mr. Flavel told him, that the Lord Jeſus ſhed his Blood for them that with wicked Hands had ſhed his own Blood, which was a a greater Sin than the ſhedding of his; to which the Wounded Man replied, I will caſt my ſelf upon Chriſt, let him do what he will. In this Condition Mr. Flavel left him that Night.

Next Morning his Wounds were to be opened, and the Chirurgeon's Opinion was, that he would immediately expire; Mr. Flavel was again requeſted to give him a Viſit, which he did, found him in a very ſerious Frame, and pray'd with him. The Wound in his Stomach was afterwards opened, when the Ventricle was ſo much Swoln, that it came out at the Orifice of the Wound, and lay like a lived diſcoloured Tripe upon his Body, and was alſo cut through; every one thought it impoſſible for him to live; however the Chirurgeon enlarg'd the Orifice of the Wound, fomented it, and wrought the Ventricle again into his Body; and ſtitching up the Wound, left his Patient to the diſpoſal of Providence.

It pleaſed God that he was cured of thoſe dangerous Wounds in his Body; and upon ſolid Grounds of a Rational Charity, there was ground to believe that he was alſo cured of that more dangerous Wound which Sin had made in his Soul. Mr. Flavel ſpent many Hours with him, during his Sickneſs; and when the Chirurgeon Return'd to Pool, after his Recovery, Mr. Samuel Hardy, that worthy Miniſter there, thank'd Mr. Flavel in a Letter for the great Pains he had taken with that young Man, and congratulated his ſucceſs, aſſuring him, that if ever a great and thorough Work was wrought, it was upon that Man.

The ſecond Inſtance is this, Mr. Flavel being in London in 1673. his old Bookſeller, Mr. Boulter, gave him this following Relation, viz. That ſome time before, there came into his Shop a Sparkiſh Gentleman to enquire for ſome Play-Books, Mr. Boulter told him he had none, but ſhew'd him Mr. Flavel's little Treatiſe of Keeping the Heart, intreated him to read it, and aſſur'd him it would do him more good than Play-Books. The Gentleman read the Title, and glancing upon ſeveral Pages here and there, broke out into theſe and ſuch other Expreſſions, What a damnable Phanatick was he, who made this Book? Mr. Boulter begg'd of him to buy and read it, and told him he had no cauſe to cenſure it ſo bitterly; at laſt he bought it, but told him he would not read it; what will you do with it then, ſaid Mr. Boulter? I will tear and burn it, ſaid he, and ſend it to the Devil; Mr. Boulter told him then he ſhould not have it; upon this the Gentleman promis'd to read it; and Mr. Boulter told him, if he diſlik'd it upon reading, he would return him his Money. About a Month after, the Gentleman came to the Shop again in a very modeſt Habit, and with a ſerious Countenance beſpeaks Mr. Boulter thus; Sir, I moſt heartily thank you for putting this Book into my Hands; I bleſs God that mov'd you to do it, it hath ſaved my Soul; bleſſed be God that ever I came into your Shop; and then he bought a Hundred more of thoſe Books of him, told him he would give them to the Poor who could not buy them, and ſo left him, praiſing and admiring the Goodneſs of God. Thus it pleaſed God to bleſs the Sermons, Diſcourſes and Writings of Mr. Flavel.

He never delighted in Controverſies, but was oblig'd, contrary to his Inclinations, to write againſt Mr. Cary, the principal Anabaptiſt in Dartmouth, with whom however he maintain'd a Friendly and Chriſtian Correſpondence; when he wrote his Planelogia: Or, Blow at the Root, he declar'd to his Friends, that tho' thoſe Studies were very Neceſſary, he took no Pleaſure in them, but had rather be imployed in practical Divinity. When he compos'd his Reaſonableneſs of Perſonal Reformation, he told an intimate Acquaintance of his, that he ſeldom had a vain Thought to interrupt him, which made him hope it would do the more good in the World. He purpos'd to have enlarg'd his Book of Sacramental Meditations, and had moſt judiciouſly ſtated and handled ſeveral Caſes of Conſcience on that Occaſion, which he deſign'd to have inſerted in the next Edition, but liv'd not to finiſh them for the Preſs.

Many times when he preach'd abroad, he has had Letters ſent him from unknown Perſons, informing him how God had bleſſed his Miniſtry to their Souls, and converted them from being bitter Enemies to Religion. This encouraged him when he rode abroad, not only to accept of Invitations to preach, but many times to offer his Labours unto thoſe that would be pleas'd to hear him; tho' for this he had no Occaſion where he was known, the People being generally Importunate with him. One Day after a long and hard Journey, an Intimate Friend of his, out of a tender Regard to him, preſs'd him with Cogent Arguments to forbear preaching at that Seaſon, but could not prevail with him; his Bowels of Compaſſion to needy and periſhing Souls made him over-look all Conſiderations of himſelf; he preach'd an excellent Sermon, by which there was one converted, as he declar'd himſelf afterwards upon his admiſſion to the Lord's Table.

The laſt Sermon that he preach'd to his People at Dartmouth, was on a publick Day of Faſting and Humiliation; in the Cloſe of which he was enlarg'd in ſuch an extraordinary Manner, when offering up Praiſes to God for Mercies received, that he ſeem'd to be in an Extaſie; this happened about a Week before his Death, and may juſtly be accounted a Foretaſte of thoſe heavenly Raptures that he now enjoys amongſt the bleſſed Spirits above.

The laſt Sermon he preach'd was on the 21ſt of June 1691. at Aſhburton, from 1 Cor. 10. 12. Wherefore let him that ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall. It was a very Pathetical and Excellent Diſcourſe, tending to awaken careleſs Profeſſors, and to ſtir them up to be Solicitous about their Souls. After having preach'd this Sermon, he went to Exeter, and at Topſham, within three Miles of that City, he preſided as Moderator in an Aſſembly of the Nonconformiſt Miniſters of Devonſhire, who unanimouſly Voted him into the Chair; the Occaſion of their meeting was about an Union betwixt the Presbyterians and Independants, which Mr. Flavel was very Zealous to promote, and brought to ſo good an Iſſue in thoſe parts, that the Miniſters declar'd their Satisfaction with the Heads of Agreement concluded on by the London Miniſters of thoſe Denominations. Mr. Flavel cloſed the Work of the Day with Prayer and Praiſes, in which his Spirit was carried out with wonderful Enlargement and Affection.

He wrote a Letter to an Eminent Miniſter in London, with an Account of their Proceedings that ſame Day that he died; Providence ordering it ſo, that he ſhould finiſh that good Work his Heart was ſo intent upon, before he finiſhed his Courſe.

The Manner of his Death was ſuddain and ſurprizing; his Friends thought him as well that Day in the Evening of which he died, as he had been for many Years. Towards the End of Supper, he complain'd of a Deadneſs in one of his Hands, that he could not lift it to his Head. This ſtruck his Wife, and his Friends about him, into an Aſtoniſhment; they us'd ſome means to recover it to its former Strength, but inſtead thereof, to their great Grief, the Diſtemper ſeiz'd upon all one ſide of his Body. They put him to Bed with all Speed, and ſent for Phyſicians, but to no purpoſe; his Diſtemper prevail'd upon him ſo faſt, that in a ſhort time it made him Speechleſs. He was ſenſible of his approaching Death; and when they carried him up Stairs, expreſs'd his Opinion that it would be the laſt time; but added, I know that it will be well with me; which were ſome of his laſt Words. Thus died this Holy Man of God Suddenly, and without Pain, not giving ſo much as one Groan. He exchanged this Life for a better, on the 26th Day of June 1691. in the 64th Year of his Age.

His Corps was carried from Exeter to Dartmouth, attended by ſeveral Miniſters, and a great many other Perſons of good Quality; abundance of People rode out from Dartmouth, Totneſs, Newton, Aſhburton, and other places, to meet the Corps; when it was taken out of the Hearſe at the Water-ſide, his People and other Friends could not forbear expreſſing the Senſe of their great Loſs by Floods of Tears, and a bitter Lamentation. It was Interr'd that ſame Night in Dartmouth Church, and next Day Mr. George Troſſe, a Miniſter of Exeter, preach'd his Funeral Sermon from Eliſha's Lamentation upon the Tranſlation of Elijah, 2 Kin. 2. 12. My Father, my Father, the Chariot of Iſrael, and the Horſemen thereof.

We ſhall conclude with a Character of Mr. Flavel. He was a Man of a Middle Stature, and full of Life and Activity. He was very thoughtful, and when not diſcourſing or reading, much taken up in Meditation, which made him digeſt his Notions well. He was ready to learn from every Body, and as free to communicate what he knew. He was bountiful to his own Relations, and very charitable to the Poor, but eſpecially to the Houſhold of Faith, and the neceſſitous Members of his own Church, to whom, during their Sickneſs, he always ſent ſuitable Supplies. He freely taught Academical Learning to four young Men whom he bred to the Miniſtry, and one of them he maintain'd all the while at his own Charge. He was exceedingly Affectionate to all the People of Dartmouth, of which we ſhall give one remarkable Inſtance. When our Fleet was firſt engaged with the French, he called his People together to a Solemn Faſt, and like a Man in an Agony, wreſtled with God in Prayer for the Church and Nation, and particularly for the poor Seamen of Dartmouth, that they might obtain Mercy; the Lord heard and anſwer'd him, for not one of that Town was killed in the Fight, tho' many of 'em were in the Engagement. As he was a faithful Ambaſſador to his Maſter, he made his Example the Rule of his own practice; and was ſo far from reviling again thoſe that revil'd him, that he pray'd for thoſe that deſpitefully us'd him; one remarkable Inſtance of which is as follows. In 1685. ſome of the People of Dartmouth, accompanied too by ſome of the Magiſtrates, made up his Effigies, carried it through the Streets in deriſion, with the Covenant and Bill of Excluſion pinn'd to it, and ſet it upon a Bonefire, and burnt it; ſome of the Spectators were ſo much affected with the reproach and ignominy done to this Reverend and Pious Miniſter, that they Wept, and others Scoff'd and Jeer'd; it was obſervable, that at the very ſame time, tho' he knew nothing of the Matter, he was heaping Coals of Fire of another Nature upon the Heads of thoſe Wicked Men; for he was then praying for the Town of Dartmouth, its Magiſtrates and Inhabitants; and when News was brought him, upon the Concluſion of his Prayer, what they had been doing, he lift up this Prayer unto God for them in our Saviour's Words, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.

THE Fountain of Life
OPENED:
Or, A Diſplay of Chriſt in His Eſſential and Mediatorial Glory. Containing Forty-two Sermons on Various Texts.

To his much Honoured and Beloved Kinſman, Mr. John Flavel of London, Merchant, and his Vertuous Conſort, the Author wiſheth Grace, Mercy, and Peace.

My Dear and Honoured Friends,

IF my Pen were both able and at leiſure to get Glory in Paper, it would be but a Paper-glory when I had gotten it: but if by diſplaying (which is the deſign of theſe Papers) the tranſcendent Excellency of Jeſus Chriſt, I may win Glory to him from you, to whom I humbly offer them, or from any other into whoſe Hands Providence ſhall caſt them, that will be Glory indeed, and an occaſion of glorifying God to all Eternity.

It is not the deſign of this Epiſtle to compliment, but to benefit you; not to blazon your Excellencies, but Chriſt's; not to acquaint the World how much you have endeared me to your ſelf, but to increaſe and ſtrengthen the Endearments betwixt Chriſt and you, upon your part. I might indeed (this being a proper Place for it) pay you my Acknowledgments for your great Kindneſſes to me and mine; of which I aſſure you I have, and ever ſhall have, deep Reſentments: but you and I are Theatre enough to one another, and can ſatisfie our ſelves with the incloſed Comforts and Delights of our mutual Love and Friendſhip: But let me tell you, the whole World is not a Theatre large enough to ſhew the Glory of Chriſt upon, or unfold the one half of the unſearchable Riches that lye hid in him. Theſe things will be far better underſtood, and ſpoken of in Heaven, by the noon-day Divinity, in which the immediately illuminated Aſſembly do there Preach his Praiſes, than by ſuch a ſtammering Tongue, and ſcribling Pen as mine, which doth but marr them.

Alas! I write his Praiſes but by Moon-light; I cannot Praiſe him ſo much as by halves. Indeed, no Tongue but his own (as Nazianzen ſaid of Baſil) is ſufficient to undertake that Task. What ſhall I ſay of Chriſt? The excelling Glory of that Object dazles all Apprehenſion, ſwallows up all Expreſſion. When we have borrowed Metaphors from every Creature that hath any Excellency or lovely Property in it, till we have ſtript the whole Creation bare of all its Ornaments, and cloathed Chriſt with all that Glory; when we have worn our Tongues to the ſtumps, in aſcribing Praiſes to him, alas! we have done nothing, when all is done.

Yet wo is me! how do I every Day behold reaſonable Souls moſt unreaſonably diſaffected to my lovely Lord Jeſus! denying Love to one who is able to compel Love from the ſtonieſt Heart! yea, though they can never make ſo much of their Love (would they ſet it to ſale) as Chriſt bids for it.

It's horrid and amazing to ſee how the Minds of many are captivated and inſnared by every ſilly trifle; and how others can indifferently turn them with a kind of ſpontaneity to this Object, or to that (as their fancy ſtrikes) among the whole Univerſe of Beings, and ſcarce ever reluctate, recoil, or nauſeate, till they be perſwaded to Chriſt; and then 'tis as eaſie to melt the obdurate Rocks into Sweet Syrup, as their Hearts into Divine Love.

How do the great Men of the World ambitiouſly court the Honours and Pleaſures of it? the Merchants of the Earth trade and ſtrive for the dear-bought Treaſures of it; whilſt the Price of Chriſt (alas! ever too low) falls every day lower and lower upon the Exchange of this World! I ſpeak it as a ſad Truth, if there were no quicker a Trade (as dead as they ſay it is) for the periſhing Treaſures of the Earth than there is for Chriſt this Day in England, the Exchange would quickly be ſhut up, and all the Trading Companies diſſolv'd.

Dear Sir, Chriſt is the peerleſs Pearl hid in the field, Mat. 13. 46. Will you be that wiſe Merchant that reſolves to win and compaſs that Treaſure, whatever it ſhall coſt you? Ah Sir, Chriſt is a Commodity that can never be bought too dear.

My dear Kinſman, my Fleſh and my Blood; my Soul thirſteth for your Salvation, and the Salvation of your Family. Shall you and I reſolve, with good Joſhua, that whatever others do, we and our Families will ſerve the Lord; That we will walk as the Redeemed of his Blood, ſhewing forth his Vertues and Praiſes in the World? that as God hath made us one in Name, and one in Affection; ſo we may be one in Chriſt: That it may be ſaid of us, as it was of Auſtin and Alippius long ago, that they were ſanguine Chriſti conglutinati, glued together by the Blood of Chriſt.

For my own part, I have given in my Name to him long ſince; wo to me, if I have not given in my Heart alſo: For ſhould I deceive my ſelf in ſo deep a Point as that, how would my Profeſſion as a Chriſtian, my Calling as a Miniſter, yea, theſe very Sermons now in your hands, riſe in Judgment to condemn me? Which God forbid.

And doubtleſs, Sir, your Eyes have ſeen both the Vanity of all Creatures, and the neceſſity and infinite worth of Chriſt. You cannot forget what a Vanity the World appeared to you, when in the Year 1668. you were ſummoned by the Meſſengers of Death (as you and all that were about you then apprehended) to ſhoot the Gulf of vaſt Eternity; when a malignant Fever and Pleuriſie *(whereof your * Phyſician hath given an account to the World) did ſhake the whole frame of the Tabernacle wherein your Soul through Mercy yet dwells; and long may it dwell there, for the ſervice and praiſe of your great Deliverer. I hope you have not, nor ever will forget how the vain world appeared to your Eye; when you looked back (as it were over your ſhoulder) and ſaw how it ſhrunk away from you. Nor will you ever forget the awful apprehenſions of Eternity, that then ſeized your Spirit, or the Value you then had for Chriſt; which things I hope ſtill do, and ever will remain with you.*

* Dr. Thomſon's 'Αιματίοσις, p. 91

And for you, Dear Couſin, as it becomes a Daughter of Sarah, let your Soul be adorned with the Excellencies of Chriſt, and Beauties of Holineſs. A King from Heaven makes ſuit for your Love. If he eſpouſe your Soul now, he will fetch it home to himſelf at Death in his Chariot of Salvation; and great ſhall be your Joy, when the Marrage of the Lamb is came. Look often upon Chriſt in this Glaſs; he is fairer than the Children of Men. View him believingly, and you cannot but like and love him. For (as one well ſaith) Love when it ſeeth, cannot but caſt out its Spirit and Strength upon amiable Objects, and things love-worthy. And what fairer things than Chriſt! O fair Sun, and fair Moon, and fair Stars, and fair Flowers, and fair Roſes, and fair Lilies, and fair Creatures! but O ten thouſand, thouſand times fairer Lord Jeſus! Alas, I wronged him in making the compariſon this way. O black Sun and Moon; but O fair Lord Jeſus! O black Flowers, and black Lilies, and Roſes; but O fair, fair, ever fair Lord Jeſus! O all fair things, black, deformed and without Beauty, when ye are ſet beſide the faireſt Lord Jeſus. O black Heavens, but O fair Chriſt! O black Angels, but O ſurpaſſingly fair Lord Jeſus!

Ep. S.R.

Mr. Baxter's Directions to the Converted for their Eſtabliſhment, p. 96.

I hope you both are agreed with Chriſt, according to the Articles of Peace propounded to you in the Goſpel; and that you are every day driving on Salvation-work, betwixt him and you in your Family, and in your Cloſets.

And now my dear Friends, if theſe Diſcoveries of Chriſt, which I humbly offer to your hands, may be any way uſeful to your Souls, to aſſiſt them either in obtaining, or in clearing their Intereſt in him, my Heart ſhall rejoice, even mine: for none under Heaven can be more willing (though many are more able) to help you thither, than is

From my Study in Dartmouth, March
14. 1671.

Your moſt affectionate and obliged Kinſman and Servant,

JOHN FLAVEL.

To the Chriſtian Readers, eſpecially thoſe in the Town and Corporation of Dartmouth, and Parts adjacent; who have either befriended, or attended theſe Lectures.

Honoured and Worthy Friends,

KNowledge is Man's Excellency above the Beaſts that periſh, Pſal. 32. 9. the Knowledge of Chriſt is the Chriſtian's Excellency above the Heathen, 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. Practical and ſaving Knowledge of Chriſt is the ſincere Chriſtian's Excellency above the ſelf-cozening Hypocrite, Heb. 6. 4, 6. but methodical and well digeſted Knowledge of Chriſt is the ſtrong Chriſtian's Excellency above the weak, Heb. 5. 12, 13, 14. A ſaving, tho' an immethodical knowledge of Chriſt, will bring us to Heaven, John 17. 2. but a regular, and methodical, as well as ſaving knowledge of him, will bring Heaven into us, Col. 2. 2, 3.

For ſuch is the Excellency thereof, even above all other knowledge of Chriſt, that it renders the Underſtanding judicious, the Memory tenacious, and the Heart highly and fixedly joyous. How it ſerves to confirm and perfect the Underſtanding, is excellently diſcovered by a worthy Divine of our own, in theſe words.

Mr. Baxter's Directions to the Converted for their Eſtabliſhment, p. 96.

A young ungrounded Chriſtian, when he ſeeth all the fundamental Truths, and ſeeth good Evedence and Reaſons of them, perhaps may be yet ignorant of the right order and place of every Truth: It's a rare thing to have young Profeſſors to underſtand the neceſſary Truths methodically; and this is a very great Defect. For a great part of the uſefulneſs and excellency of particular Truths, conſiſteth in the reſpect they have to one another. This therefore will be a very conſiderable part of your Confirmation, and growth in your Underſtandings, to ſee the Body of the Chriſtian Doctrine as it were at one view, as the ſeveral parts of it are united in one perfect Frame; and to know what aſpect one Point hath upon another, and which is their due places. There is a great difference betwixt the ſight of the ſeveral parts of a Clock or Watch, as they are disjointed and ſcattered abroad, and the ſeeing of them conjoined, and in uſe and motion. To ſee here a Pin, and there a Wheel, and not know how to ſet them all together, nor ever ſee them in their due places, will give but little ſatisfaction: It is the frame and deſign of holy Doctrine that muſt be known, and every part ſhould be diſcerned as it hath its particular uſe to that Deſign, and as it is connected with the other parts.

By this means only can the true nature of Theology, together with the harmony and perfection of Truth, be clearly underſtood. And every ſingle Truth alſo will be much better perceived by him that ſeeth its place and order, than by any other: For one Truth exceedingly illuſtrates, and leads in another into the Underſtanding——Study therefore to grow in the more methodical knowledge of the ſame Truths, which you have received, and tho' you are not ripe enough to diſcern the whole Body of Theology in due method, yet ſee ſo much as you have attained to know, in the right order, and placing of every part. As in Anatomy, it's hard for the wiſeſt Phyſician to diſcern the courſe of every branch of the Veins and Arteries; but yet they may eaſily diſcern the place and order of the principal parts, and greater Veſſels, (and ſurely in the Body of Religion there runs not a branch of greater or more neceſſary Truth than theſe) ſo it is in Divinity, where no Man hath a perfect view of the whole, till he come to the ſtate of perfection with God; but every true Chriſtian hath the knowledge of all the Eſſentials, and may know the orders and places of them all.

And as it ſerves to render the Mind more judicious, ſo it cauſes the Memory to be more tenacious, and retentive of Truths. The Chain of Truth is eaſily held in the Memory, when one Truth links in another; but the looſing of a Link indangers the ſcattering of the whole Chain. We uſe to ſay, Order is the Mother of Memory; I am ſure it's a ſingular Friend to it: Hence it's obſerved, thoſe that write of the Art of Memory, lay ſo great a ſtreſs upon Place and Number. The Memory would not ſo ſoon be overcharged with a multitude of Truths, if that multitude were but orderly diſpoſed. It's the incoherence, and confuſion of Truths, rather than their number, that diſtracts. Let but the Underſtanding receive them regularly, and the Memory will retain them with much more facility. A bad Memory is a common complaint among Chriſtians. All the benefit that many of you have in hearing, is from the preſent influence of Truths upon your Hearts. There is but little that ſticks by you, to make a ſecond and third Impreſſion upon them. I know it may be ſaid of ſome of you, that if your Affections were not better than your Memories, you would need a very large Charity to paſs for Chriſtians. I confeſs it's better to have a well-ordered Heart, than a methodical Head; but ſurely both are better than either. And for you that have conſtantly attended theſe Exerciſes, and followed us through the whole ſeries and deduction of theſe Truths, from Text to Text, and from Point to Point; who have begun one Sabbath, where you left another; it will be your inexcuſable fault, if theſe things be not fixed in your Underſtanding and Memories, as Nails faſtned in a ſure place; eſpecially Providence hath now brought to your Eyes, what hath been ſo often ſounded in your Ears, which is no ſmall help to fix theſe Truths upon you, and prevent that great hazard of them, which commonly attends bare hearing: for now you may have recourſe as often as you will to them, view, and review them, till they become your own.

But tho' this be a great and ſingular advantage, yet it is not all you may have by a methodical underſtanding of the Doctrine of Chriſt: Its more than a judicious underſtanding them, or faithful remembring them that you and I muſt deſign, even the warm, vital, animating Influences of theſe Trubs upon our Hearts, without which we ſhall be never the better; yea, much the worſe for knowing and remembring them.

Truth is the ſanctifying Inſtrument, Joh. 17. 17. the Mould into which our Souls are caſt, Rom. 6. 17. according therefore to the Stamps and Impreſſions it makes upon our Underſtandings, and the order in which Truths lie there, will be the depth and laſtingneſs of their Impreſſions and Influences upon the Heart; as the more Weight is laid upon the Seal, the more fair and laſting Impreſs is made upon the Wax. He that ſees the grounds and reaſons of his Peace and Comfort moſt clearly, is like to maintain it the more conſtantly.

Great therefore is the advantage Chriſtians have by ſuch methodical Syſtems. Surely they may ſet down among the deſiderata Chriſtianorum, the moſt deſired things of Chriſtians.

*Mr. Wall's None but Chriſt.
† Mr. Iſaac Ambroſe his Looking to Jeſus.

Divers worthy modern Pens have indeed undertaken this noble Subject before me, ſome more* ſuccinctly, others more † copiouſly: Theſe have done worthily, and their praiſes are in the Churches of Chriſt? Yet ſuch a Breadth there is in the Knowledge of Chriſt, that not only thoſe who have written on this Subject before me, but a thouſand Authors more may imploy their Pens after us, and not one interfere with, or ſtraiten another.

And ſuch is the Deliciouſneſs of this Subject, that were there ten thouſand Volumes written upon it, they would never cloy, or become nauſeous to a gracious Heart. We uſe to ſay one things tires, and its true that it doth ſo, except that one thing be vertually, and eminently all things, as Chriſt is; and then one thing can never tire: For ſuch is the variety of Sweetneſs in Chriſt, who is the deliciæ humani generis, the Delights of the Children of men, that every time he is opened to Believers, from Pulpit or Preſs, it is as if Heaven had furniſhed them with a new Chriſt; and yet he is the ſame Chriſt ſtill.

The Synopſis prefixed to this Treatiſe will ſhew you, that the Method is wholly new; and the Treatiſe it ſelf will ſatisfie you, that I have not boaſted in another Man's Line, of things made ready to my Hand: which I ſpeak not in the leaſt to win any Praiſe to my ſelf from the Undertaking, but to remove Prejudice from it; for I ſee more defects in it, than moſt of my Readers will ſee, and can forethink more Faults to be found in it, than I ſhall now ſtand to tell thee of, or make Anſwer for. It was written in a time of great Diſtractions; and didſt thou but know how oft this Work hath died, and revived under my Hand, thou wouldſt wonder that ever it came to thine.

I am ſenſible it may fall under ſome cenſorious (it may be envious) Eyes, and that far different Judgments will paſs upon it; for pro captu lectoris habent ſua fata libelli: And no wonder if a Treatiſe of Chriſt be, when Chriſt himſelf was to ſome a ſtone of ſtumbling, and a rock of offence. I expect not to pleaſe every Reader, eſpecially the envious; magna debet eſſe eloquentia, quæ invitis placet. It is as hard for ſome to look upon other Mens Gifts without Envy, as it is to look upon their own without Pride: nor will I be any farther concerned with ſuch Readers, than to pity them; well knowing that every proud Contempt and envious Cenſure is a Granado that breaks in the Hand of him that caſts it.

But to the ingenious and candid Reader, I owe Satisfaction for the Obſcurity of ſome part of this Diſcourſe occaſioned by the Conciſeneſs of the Stile; to which I have this only to ſay, that I was willing to crowd as much matter as I could into this number of Sheets into thy Hand, that I might therein eaſe thee, both in thy Pains and Purſe. I confeſs the Sermons were preached in a more relaxed Style, and moſt of theſe things were enlarged in the Pulpit, which are deſignedly contracted in the Preſs, that the Volume might not ſwell above the Ability of common Readers. And it was my purpoſe at firſt to have compriſed the ſecond Part, viz. the Application of the Redemption that is with Chriſt unto Sinners, in one Volume, which occaſioned the contraction of this; but that making a juſt Volume it ſelf, muſt await another Seaſon to ſee the light. If the Reader will be but a little the more intent, and conſiderate in reading, this Conciſeneſs will turn to his advantage.

This may ſuffice to ſhew the uſefulneſs of ſuch Compoſures, and to prevent offence; but ſomething yet remains with me, to ſay to the Readers in general, to thoſe of this Town in ſpecial, and to the Flock committed by Chriſt to my Charge more eſpecially.

1. To Readers in general, according as their different States and Conditions may be, there are ſix things earneſtly to be requeſted of them.

(1.) If you be yet Strangers to Chriſt, let theſe things begin, and beget your firſt acquaintance with him. I aſſure thee, Reader, it was a principal part of the Deſign thereof; and here thou wilt find many Directions, Helps, and ſweet Incouragements, to aſſiſt a poor Stranger, as thou art, in that great Work. Say not, I am an Enemy to Chriſt, and there is no hope of Reconcilation; for here thou wilt ſee, how God was in Chriſt, reconciling the Word to himſelf. Say not, all this is nothing, except God had told thee ſo, and appointed ſome to treat with thee about it; for he hath committed unto us the Word of this Reconciliation. Say not, Yea, that may be from your own Pity and Compaſſion for us, and not from any Commiſſion you have for it; for we are Ambaſſadours for Chriſt, 1 Cor. 5. 19.

Say not, O but my Sins are greater than can be forgiven; the difficulties of my Salvation too great to be overcome, eſpecially by a poor Creature as ~~I am~~, that am able to do nothing, no not to raiſe one penny towards the diſcharge of that great Debt I owe to God: for here thou wilt find upon thy Union with Chriſt, that there is Merit enough in his Blood, and Mercy enough in his Bowels to juſtify, and ſave ſuch an one as thou art. Yea, and I will add for thine incouragement, that it is a righteous thing with God to juſtifie and ſave thee, that canſt not pay him one penny of all the vaſt Sums thou oweſt him, when by the ſame Rule of Juſtice he condemns the moſt ſtrict, ſelf righteous Phariſee that thinks thereby to quit ſcores with him. It is righteous for a Judge to caſt him that hath paid ninety nine Pounds of the hundred which he owed, becauſe the Payment was not full; and to acquit him, whoſe Surety hath paid all, tho' himſelf did not, and freely confeſs that he cannot pay one farthing of the whole Debt.

(2.) If thou be a ſelf-deceiving Soul, that eaſily takeſt up thy ſatisfaction about thine Intereſt in Chriſt, look to it as thou valueſt thy Soul, Reader, that a fond and groundleſs conceit of thine Intereſt in Chriſt do not effectually and finally obſtruct a true and ſaving Intereſt in him. This is the common and fatal Error in which Multitudes of Souls are inſnared and ruined: for look as a conceit of great Wiſdom hinders many from the attaining of it; ſo a groundleſs Conceit that Chriſt is already thine, may prove the greateſt Obſtacle betwixt Chriſt and thee. But here thou wilt meet with many Rules that will not deceive thee, Trials that will open thy true Condition to thee.

Quam multi ſapuiſſent niſi ſe prius ſapere putaſſent? Sen.

Thou ſometimes reflecteſt upon the State of thy Soul, and enquirſt, is Chriſt mine? May I depend upon it, that my Condition is ſafe? Thy Heart returns thee an Anſwer of Peace, it ſpeaks as thou wouldſt have it; but remember (Friend) and mark this Line, Thy final Sentence is not yet come from the Mouth of thy Judge; and what if after all thy ſelf-flattering Hopes and groundleſs Confidences a Sentence ſhould come from him quite croſs to that of thine own Heart? where art thou then? what a confounded Perſon wilt thou be? Chriſtleſs, ſpeechleſs, and hopeleſs all at once!

O therefore build ſure for Eternity; take heed leſt the loſs of thine eternal Happineſs be at laſt imputed by thee to the deceitfulneſs, and lazineſs of thine own Heart; leſt thy Heart ſay to thee in Hell, as the Heart of Apollodorus ſeemed in his ſufferings to ſay to him, I am the cauſe of all this Miſery to thee.

Ἐγὼ σοὶ τέων αἰτία.

(3.) If thou be one whoſe Heart is eagerly ſet upon this vain World, I beſeech thee to take heed, leſt it interpoſe it ſelf betwixt Chriſt and thy Soul, and ſo cut thee off from him for ever. O beware leſt the Duſt of the Earth getting into thine Eyes, ſo blind thee, that thou never ſee the Beauty or Neceſſity of Chriſt: the God of this World ſo blinds the Eyes of them that believe not. And what are the ſparkling Pleaſures that dazle the Eyes of ſome, and the diſtracting Cares that wholly divert the Minds of others, but as a Napkin drawn by Satan over the Eyes of them that are to be turned off into Hell? 1 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

Some general Aims, and faint Wiſhes after Chriſt you may have; but alas! the World has centered thy Heart, intangled thy Affections, and will daily find new diverſions for thee from the great buſineſs of Life: ſo that if the Lord break not this Snare, thou wilt never be able to deliver my Soul.

(4.) If thou be a looſe and careleſs Profeſſor of Chriſt, I beſeech thee, let the things thou ſhalt read in this Treatiſe of Chriſt, convince, ſhame, and reclaim thee from thy vain Converſation. Here thou wilt find how contrary thy Converſation is to the grand Deſigns of the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt. O methinks, as thou art reading the deep Humiliation, and unſpeakable Sorrows Chriſt underwent for the expiating of Sin, thou ſhouldeſt thenceforth look upon Sin as a tender Child would upon that Knife that ſtab'd his Father to the Heart! Thou ſhouldeſt never whet, and ſharpen it again, to wound the Son of God afreſh. To ſuch looſe, and careleſs Profeſſors, I particularly recommend the laſt general Uſe of this Diſcourſe, containing many great motives to Reformation, and ſtrict Godlineſs, in all that call upon the Name of the Lord Jeſus.

(5.) If thou haſt been a profane and vain Perſon, but now art pardoned, and doſt experience the ſuper-abounding riches of Grace; my requeſt to thee is, that thou love Jeſus Chriſt with a more fervent Love than ever yet thou hadſt for him. Here thou wilt find many great Incentives, many mighty Arguments to ſuch a love of Chriſt. Poor Soul! conſider what thou haſt been, what the Morning of thy Life was; what Treaſures of Guilt thou laidſt up in thoſe Days; and then think, Can ſuch a one as I receive Mercy, and that Mercy not break my Heart? Can I read my Pardon, and mine Eyes not drop? What! Mercy for ſuch a Wretch as I! a Pardon for ſuch a Rebel! O what an ingenious Thaw ſhould this cauſe upon thy Heart! if it do not, what a ſtrange Heart is thine!

Did the Love of Chriſt break through ſo many Impediments, to come to thee? Did it make its way through the Law, through the Wrath of God, through the Grave, through thine own Unbelief and great Unworthineſs, to come to thee? O what a Love was the Love of Chriſt to thy Soul! And is not thy Love ſtrong enough to break through the Vanities and Trifles of this World which intangle it, to go to Chriſt? How poor, how low and weak is thy Love to Chriſt then?

(6.) Laſtly, Art thou one that haſt through Mercy at laſt attain'd Aſſurance, or good Hope, through Grace, of thy Intereſt in Chriſt? Rejoice then in thy preſent Mercy, and long ardently to be with thine own Chriſt in his Glory. There be many things diſperſed through this Treatiſe of Chriſt, to animate ſuch Joy, and excite ſuch Longings. It was truly obſerved by a worthy Author, (whoſe Words I have mentioned more freely than his Name in this Diſcourſe) that it is in a manner as natural tural for us to leap when we ſee the New Jeruſalem, as it is to laugh when we are tickled. Joy is not under the Soul's command, when Chriſt kiſſeth it. And for your deſires to be with Chriſt, what Conſiderations can you find in this World ſtrong enough to rein them in! O when you ſhall conſider what he hath done, ſuffered, and purchaſed for you, where he is now, and how much he longs for your coming, your very Hearts ſhould groan out thoſe Words, Phil. 1. 23. I deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt. The Lord direct your Hearts into the Love of God, and into the patient waiting for of Chriſt.

2. Having delivered my Meſſage to the Reader in general, I have ſomewhat more particularly to ſay to you of this Place.

You are a People that were born under, and bred up with the Goſpel. It hath been your ſingular Priviledge, above many Towns and Pariſhes in England, to enjoy more than ſixty Years together an able and fruitful Miniſtry among you. The Dews of Heaven lay upon you, as it did upon Gideon's Fleece, when the Ground was dry in other Places about you. You have been richly watered with Goſpel-Showers: You, with Capernaum, have been exalted to Heaven in the Means of Grace. And it muſt be owned to your Praiſe, that you teſtified more Reſpect to the Goſpel, than many other Places have done, and treated Chriſt's Ambaſſadors with more Civility, whilſt they propheſied in Sackcloth, than ſome other Places did. Theſe things are praiſe-worthy in you. But all this, and much more than this, amounts not to that which Jeſus Chriſt expects from you, and which in his Name I would now perſwade you to. And O that I (the leaſt and unworthieſt of all the Meſſengers of Chriſt to you) might indeed prevail with all that are Chriſtleſs among you, (1.) To anſwer the long-continued Calls of God to you, by a thorough and ſound Converſion, that the long-ſuffering of God may be your Salvation, *and you may not re*ceive all this Grace of God in vain. O that the Damned might never be ſet a wondering, to ſee a People of your Advantages for Heaven, ſinking as much below many of themſelves in Miſery, as you now are above them in Means and Mercy.

Dear Friends, my Heart's Deſire and Prayer to God for you is, that you may be ſaved. O that I knew how to engage this whole Town to Jeſus Chriſt, and make faſt the Marriage-knot betwixt him and you, albeit after that I ſhould preſently go to the place of Silence, and ſee Man no more, with the Inhabitants of the World. Ah Sirs, methinks I ſee the Lord Jeſus laying the merciful Hand of a Holy Violence upon you; methinks he calls to you, as the Angel to Lot, ſaying, Ariſe, leſt ye be conſumed: and while he lingred, the men laid hold upon his hand, the Lord being merciful unto him. And they brought him without the City, and ſaid, Eſcape for thy Life, ſtay not in all the Plain; eſcape to the Mountain, leſt thou be conſumed, Gen. 19. 15. How often (to allude to this) hath Jeſus Chriſt in like manner laid hold upon you in the Preaching of the Goſpel, and will you not fly for Refuge to him? Will you rather be conſumed than endeavour an eſcape? A Beaſt will not be driven into the Fire, and will not you be kept out? The merciful Lord Jeſus, by his admirable Patience and Bounty hath convinced you, how loth he is to leave or loſe you. To this Day his Arms are ſtretched forth to gather you, and will you not be gathered? Alas for my poor Neighbours! Muſt ſo many of them periſh at laſt? What ſhall I do for the Daughter of my People?

Lord, by what Arguments ſhall they be perſwaded to be happy? What will win them effectually to thy Chriſt? They have many of them eſcaped the Pollutions of the World through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour. They are a People that love thine Ordinances, they take delight in approaching to God; thou haſt beautified many of them with lovely and obliging Tempers and Diſpoſitions: Thus far they are come, there they ſtick; and beyond this no Power but thine can move them. O thou to whoſe Hand this Work is and muſt be left, put forth thy ſaving Power, and reveal thine Arm for their Salvation: Thou haſt glorified thy Name in many among them; Lord, glorifie it again.

(2.) My next Requeſt is, that you will all be perſwaded, whether Converted or Unconverted, to ſet up all the Duties of Religion in your Families, and govern your Children and Servants as Men that muſt give an Account to God for them in the great Day. O that there were not a Prayerleſs Family in this Town! How little will your Tables differ from a Manger, where Beaſts feed together, if God be not owned and acknowledged there, in your Eating and Drinking? And how can you expect Bleſſings ſhould dwell in your Tabernacles, if God be not called on three? Say not, you want Time for it, or that your Neceſſities will not allow it; for had you been more careful of thoſe Duties, it's like you had not been expoſed to ſuch Neceſſities: Beſides, you can find time to be idle, you can waſte a part of every Day vainly: Why could not that Time be redeemed for God? More- over, you will not deny, but the Succeſs of all your Affairs at home and abroad depends upon the Bleſſing of God; and if ſo, think you it is not the right way, even to temporal Proſperity, to engage his Preſence and Bleſſing with you, in whoſe Hand your All is? Say not, your Children and Servants are ignorant of God, and therefore you cannot comfortably join with them in thoſe Duties; for the neglect of theſe Duties is the cauſe of their Ignorance; and it is not like they will be better, till you uſe God's means to make them ſo.

Beſides, Prayer is a part of natural Worſhip, and the vileſt among Men are bound to pray, elſe the neglect of it were none of their Sin. O let not a Duty, upon which ſo many and great Bleſſings hang, fall to the Ground, upon ſuch ſilly (not to ſay wicked) pretences to ſhift it off. Remember, Death will ſhortly break up all your Families, and disband them; and who then, think you, will have moſt Comfort in beholding their Dead? The Day of Account alſo haſtens, and then who will have the moſt comfortable appearing before the Juſt and Holy God? Set up, I beſeech you, the ancient and comfortable Duties of reading the Scriptures, ſinging of Pſalms, and Prayer in all your dwelling-places; and do all theſe conſcientiouſly, as Men that have to do with God; and try the Lord herewith, if he will not return in a way of Mercy to you, and reſtore even your outward Proſperity to you again. However, to be ſure, far greater Encouragements than that lye before you, to oblige you to your Duties.

3. More eſpecially I have a few things to ſay to you, that have attended on the Miniſtry, or are under my overſight in a more particular manner, and then I have done. And,

1ſt, I cannot but with deep reſentments obſerve to you the Goodneſs of our God, yea, the Riches of his Goodneſs:

Who freely gave Jeſus Chriſt out of his own Boſom for us, and hath not withheld his Spirit, Ordinances and Miniſters, to reveal and apply him to us. Here's Love that wants an Epithet to match it!

Who engaged my Heart upon this tranſcendent Subject in the courſe of my Miniſtry among you: A Subject which Angels ſtudy and admire as well as we.

Who ſo ſignally protected and overſhadowed our Aſſembly in thoſe Days of trouble, wherein theſe Truths were delivered to you. You then ſate down under his Shadow with great delight, and his Fruit was ſweet to your Taſte. His Banner over you was Love; your Bread was then ſure, and your Waters failed not. Yea, ſuch was his peculiar Indulgence, and ſpecial Tenderneſs to you, that he ſuffered no Man to do you harm; and it can hardly be imagined any could attempt it, that had but known this, and no worſe than this, to be your only deſign and buſineſs.

Who made theſe Meditations of Chriſt a ſtrong Support, and ſweet Relief to mine, now with Chriſt, and no leſs to me, under the greateſt Exerciſes and Trials that ever befel me in this World: Preſerving me yet (though a broken Veſſel) for ſome farther uſe and ſervice to your Souls.

Who in the Years that are paſt left not himſelf without witneſs among us, bleſſing my Labours to the Converſion and Edification of many; ſome of which yet remain with us, but ſome are fallen aſleep.

Who hath made many of you that yet remain, a willing and obedient People, who have in ſome meaſure ſupported the Reputation of Religion by your Stability and Integrity in Days of abounding Iniquity; my Joy, and my Crown; ſo ſtand ye faſt in the Lord.

Who after all the Days of Fears and Troubles, through which we have paſt, hath at laſt given us and his Churches reſt; that we being delivered out of the hands of our Enemies, might ſerve him without Fear in Righteouſneſs and Holineſs (which doing, this Mercy may be extended to us) all the Days of our Life.

In Teſtimony of a thankful Heart for theſe invaluable Mercies, I humbly and cheerfully reer up this Pillar of remembrance, inſcribing it with EBENEZER, and JEHOVAH JIEREH.

2ly, As I could not but obſerve theſe things to you, ſo I have a few things to requeſt of you, in neither of which I can bear a denial; ſo deeply doth Chriſt's, your own, and my Intereſt lye in them.

(1.) Look to it (my dear Friends) that none of you be found Chriſtleſs at your appearance before him. Thoſe that continue Chriſtleſs now, will be left ſpeechleſs then. God forbid that you that have heard ſo much of Chriſt, and you that have profeſſed ſo much of Chriſt, ſhould at laſt fall into a worſe Condition than thoſe that never heard the Name of Chriſt.

(2.) See that you daily grow more Chriſt-like by converſing with him, as you do, in his precious Ordinances. Let it be with your Souls, as it is with a piece of Cloth, which receives a deeper dye every time it is dipt into a Fat. If not, you may not expect the continuance of your Mercies much longer to you.

(3.) Get theſe great Truths well digeſted both in your Heads and Hearts, and let the Power of them be diſplayed in your Lives; elſe the Pen of the Scribe, and Tongue of the Preacher, are both in vain. Theſe things that ſo often warm'd your Hearts from the Pulpit, return now to make a ſecond Impreſſion upon them from the Preſs. Hereby you will recover and fix thoſe Truths, which it's like are in great part already vaniſht from you. This is the Fruit I promiſe my ſelf from you; and whatever Entertainment it meet with from others, in this Chriſt-deſpiſing Age, yet two things relieve me; one is, that future Times may produce more humble and hungry Chriſtians than this glutted Age enjoys, to whom it will be welcome: The other is, that Duty is diſcharged, and Endeavours uſed to bring Men to Chriſt, and build them up in him; wherein he doth and will rejoice, who is a well-wiſher to the Souls of Men.

SERMON I.

Serm. 1. Opens the Excellency of the Subject.

1 COR. II. 11.

For I determined not to know any thing among you, ſave Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified.

THE former Verſe contains an Apology for the plain and familiar manner of the Apoſtle's Preaching, which was not (as he there tells them) with excellency of Speech, or of Wiſdom; i. e. he ſtudied not to gratifie their curioſity with Rhetorical ſtrains, or Philoſophical niceties. In this he gives the Reaſon, for I determined not to know any thing among you, ſave Jeſus Chriſt, &c.

Non τεχνολογεῖν, ſed θεολογεῖν.

I determined not to know.] The meaning is not, that he ſimply deſpiſed, or contemned all other ſtudies and knowledge; but ſo far only as they ſtand in competition with, or oppoſition to the ſtudy and knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt. And it is as if he ſhould ſay, It is my ſtated, ſettled Judgment, not a haſty, inconſiderate Cenſure; but the product, and iſſue of my moſt ſerious and exquiſite enquiries. After I have well weighed the caſe, turned it round, and viewed it exactly on every ſide, ballanced all advantages and diſadvantages, pondered all things that are fit to come into conſideration about it, this is the reſult and final determination, that all other Knowledge, how profitable, how pleaſant ſoever, is not worthy to be named in the ſame day with the knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt. This therefore I reſolve to make the ſcope and end of my Miniſtry, and the end regulates the means. Such pedantick Toys and airy Notions as injudicious ears affect, would rather obſtruct than promote my grand deſign among you: Therefore wholly waving that way, I applied my ſelf to a plain, popular, unaffected Dialect, fitted rather to pierce the Heart, and convince the Conſcience, than to tickle the Fancy. This is the ſcope of the Words. In which three things fall under conſideration.

Ἔκρινα ſignificat æſtimare, aut eximium durare; in hoc autem non temnit, nec damnat omnem aliam ſcientiam, niſi ut opponitur ſcientiæ Chriſti, &c. Wall.

Firſt, The ſubject-matter of his Doctrine, to wit, Jeſus Chriſt. I determined to know nothing, i. e. to ſtudy nothing my ſelf, to teach nothing to you but Jeſus Chriſt. Chriſt ſhall be the Center to which all the lines of my Miniſtry ſhall be drawn. I have ſpoken and written of many other Subjects in my Sermons and Epiſtles, but it is all reductively the Preaching and Diſcovery of Jeſus Chriſt: Of all Subjects in the World, this is the ſweeteſt: If there be any thing on this ſide Heaven worthy our time and ſtudies, this is it. Thus he magnifies his Doctrine, from the excellency of its ſubject-matter, accounting all other Doctrines but airy things, compared with this.

Secondly, We have here that ſpecial reſpect or conſideration of Chriſt, which he ſingled out from all the reſt of the excellent Truths of Chriſt, to ſpend the main ſtrength of his Miniſtry upon; and that is, Chriſt as crucified: And the rather, becauſe hereby he would obviate the vulgar prejudice raiſed againſt him upon the account of his Croſs: For Chriſt crucified was to the Jews a Stumbling-block, and to the Greeks Fooliſhneſs, chap. 1. 23. This alſo beſt ſuited his end, to draw them on to Chriſt: As Chriſt above all other Subjects, ſo Chriſt Crucified above all things in Chriſt: There is therefore a great Emphaſis in this Word, And him Crucified.

Vehementem habet ἔμφασιν quod adjecit, & hunc crucifixum. Pet. Martyr in loc.

Thirdly, The manner in which he diſcourſed this tranſcendent Subject to them is alſo remarkable: He not only preached Chriſt Crucified, but he preached him aſſidiouſly and plainly: He preach'd Chriſt frequently; and whenever he preach'd of Chriſt crucified, he preach'd him in a crucified Stile. This is the ſum of the Words; to let them know that his Spirit was ſo intent upon this Subject, as if he neither knew, or cared to ſpeak of any other: All his Sermons were ſo full of Chriſt, that his Hearers might have thought he was acquainted with no other Doctrine. Hence obſerve, Chriſtum crucifixum ſtylo crucifixo prædicabat.

Doct. That there is no Doctrine more excellent in it ſelf, or more neceſſary to be preached and ſtudied, than the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt, and him Crucified.

All other Knowledge, how much ſoever it be magnified in the World, is and ought to be eſteemed but Droſs, in compariſon of the excellency of the knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, Phil. 3. 8. In him are hid all the Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge, Col. 2. 3.

Eudoxus was ſo affected with the Glory of the Sun, that he thought he was born only to behold it: Much more ſhould a Chriſtian judge himſelf born only to behold and delight in the glory of the Lord Jeſus.

The truth of this Propoſition will be made out by a double conſideration of the Doctrine of Chriſt.

Firſt, Let it be conſidered abſolutely, and then theſe lovely Properties with which it is naturally clothed, will render it ſuperior to all other Sciences and Studies.

1. The knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt is the very marrow and kernel of all the Scriptures; the ſcope and center of all Divine Revelations: Both Teſtaments meet in Chriſt. The Ceremonial Law is full of Chriſt, and all the Goſpel full of Chriſt: The bleſſed lines of both Teſtaments meet in him; and how they both harmonize, and ſweetly concenter in Jeſus Chriſt, it is the chief ſcope of that excellent Epiſtle to the Hebrews, to diſcover; for we may call that Epiſtle the ſweet Harmony of both Teſtaments. This argues the unſpeakable excellency of this Doctrine, the knowledge whereof muſt needs therefore be a Key to unlock the greateſt part of the ſacred Scriptures: For it is in the underſtanding of Scripture, much as it is in the knowledge men have in Logick and Philoſophy. If a Scholar once come to underſtand the bottom Principle, upon which, as upon its Hinge, the Controverſie turns, the true knowledge of that Principle ſhall carry him through the whole Controverſie, and furniſh him with a Solution to every Argument: Even ſo the right knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, like a Clew, leads you thro' the whole Labyrinth of the Scriptures.

Qui ſcientiam ſecularem præponit ſtudio aut cognitioni huic ſacræ, is theſauro quiſquilias præfert. Daven. in Col. 2. *v.*3.

2. The knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt is a fundamental knowledge; and Foundations are moſt uſeful, tho' leaſt ſeen: The knowledge of Chriſt is fundamental to all Graces, Duties, Comforts, and Happineſs.

(1.) It's fundamental to all Graces: They all begin in Knowledge; Col. 3. 10. The new man is renewed in Knowledge. As the old, ſo the new Creation begins in Light; the opening of the Eyes is the firſt work of the Spirit. And as the beginnings of Grace, ſo all the after Improvements thereof depend upon this increaſing knowledge; 2 Pet. 3. 18. But grow in Grace, and in the Knowledge of our Lord and Saviour. See how theſe two, Grace and Knowledge, keep equal pace in the Soul of a Chriſtian; in what degree the one increaſes, the other increaſes anſwerably.

(2.) The Knowledge of Chriſt is fundamental to all Duties: The Duties, as well as Graces of Chriſtians, are all founded in the Knowledge of Chriſt. Muſt a Chriſtian believe? That he can never do without the knowledge of Chriſt. Faith is ſo much dependent upon his Knowledge, that it is denominated by it, Iſa. 53. 11. By his Knowledge ſhall my righteous Servant juſtifie many: And hence, Joh. 6. 40. Seeing and Believing are made the ſame thing. Would a man exerciſe Hope in God? That he can never do without the Knowledge of Chriſt, for he is the Author of that Hope, 1 Pet. 1. 3. He is alſo its Object, Heb. 6. 19. its Ground-work and Support, Col. 1. 27. And as you cannot believe or hope, ſo neither can you pray acceptably, without a competent degree of this Knowledge. The very Heathen could ſay, Non loquendum de Deo ſine lumine, (i. e.) Men muſt not ſpeak of God without Light: The true way of converſing with, and enjoying God in Prayer, is by acting Faith on him through a Mediator: So much of Faith and Chriſt as is in a Duty, ſo much Comfort and true Excellency there is in it, and no more. O then how indiſpenſible is the Knowledge of Chriſt to all that do addreſs themſelves to God in any Duty!

(3.) It's fundamental to all Comforts: all the Comforts of Believers are ſtreams from this Fountain. Jeſus Chriſt is the very object-matter of a Believer's Joy, Phil. 3. 3. Our rejoicing is in Chriſt Jeſus: Take away the knowledge of Chriſt, and a Chriſtian is the moſt ſad and melancholy creature in the World: Again, let Chriſt but manifeſt himſelf, and dart the beams of his Light into their Souls, it will make them kiſs the Stakes, ſing in Flames, and ſhout in the pangs of Death, as men that divide the ſpoil.

Laſtly, This Knowledge is fundamental to the eternal happineſs of Souls: As we can perform no duty, enjoy no comfort, ſo neither can we be ſaved without it. John 17. 3. This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. And if it be eternal life to know Chriſt; then it is eternal Damnation to be ignorant of Chriſt: As Chriſt is the Door that opens Heaven, ſo Knowledge is the Key that opens Chriſt. The excellent gifts, and renowned parts of the Moral Heathens, tho' they purchaſed to them great eſteem and honour among men; yet left them in a ſtate of perdition, becauſe of this grand defect: They were ignorant of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 21. Thus you ſee how fundamental the knowledge of Chriſt is, and eſſentially neceſſary to all the Graces, Duties, Comforts, and Happineſs of Souls.

3. The Knowledge of Chriſt is profound and large: All other Sciences are but Shallows; this, a boundleſs, bottomleſs Ocean: No creature hath a line long enough to fathom the depth of it: There is heighth, length, depth, and breadth aſcribed to it, Eph. 3. 14. yea, it paſſeth knowledge: There is a manifold Wiſdom of God in Chriſt, Eph. 3. 10. It is of many ſorts and forms, of many folds and plights: It is indeed ſimple, pure and unmixed with any thing but it ſelf, yet it is manifold in degrees, kinds and adminiſtrations: Tho' ſomething of Chriſt be unfolded in one Age, and ſomething in another, yet Eternity it ſelf cannot fully unfold him. I ſee ſomething (ſaid Luther) which bleſſed Auſtin ſaw not; and thoſe that come after me, will ſee that which I ſee not. It is in the ſtudying of Chriſt, as in the planting of a new diſcovered Country; at firſt men ſit down by the Sea ſide, upon the skirts and borders of the Land, and there they dwell, but by degrees they ſearch farther and farther into the heart of the Country: Ah, the the beſt of us are yet but upon the borders of this vaſt Continent!

4. The ſtudy of Jeſus Chriſt is the moſt noble Subject that ever a Soul ſpent it ſelf upon, thoſe that rack and torture their brains upon other ſtudies, like Children, weary themſelves at a low game: The Eagle plays at the Sun it ſelf; the Angels ſtudy this Doctrine, and ſtoop down, to look into this deep abyſs: What are the Truths diſcovered in Chriſt, but the very ſecrets that from Eternity lay hid in the boſom of God? Eph. 3. 8, 9. God's heart is opened to men in Chriſt, John 1. 18. this makes the Goſpel ſuch a glorious diſpenſation, becauſe Chriſt is ſo glorioully revealed therein, 2 Cor. 3. 9. and the ſtudying of Chriſt in the Goſpel, ſtamps ſuch a Heavenly Glory upon the contemplating Soul, v. 18.

5. It is the moſt ſweet and comfortable knowledge; to be ſtudying Jeſus Chriſt, what is it, but to be digging among all the veins and ſprings of comfort? And the deeper you dig, the more do thoſe ſprings flow upon you. How are hearts raviſhed with the diſcoveries of Chriſt in the Goſpel? What extaſies, meltings, tranſports, do gracious Souls meet there? Doubtleſs, Philip's extaſie, John 1. 45. ἐυρήκαμεν Ἰεσῦν, we have found Jeſus! was far beyond that of Archimedes. A Believer could ſit from Morning to Night, to hear Diſcourſes of Chriſt; his mouth is moſt ſweet, Cant. 5. 16.

Omnis cognitio tuæ veritatis longe jucundiſſima eſt, ſuaviſſima & amœniſſima etiamque proſtat pro foribus, & obviam cuique ſeſe ſponte data; quantum deliciarum eſt illius, quam in intimis penetralibus reconditam apud te habes, multiſque ſeris, & repagulis clauſam? Brightman in Cant.

Secondly, Let us compare this Knowledge with all other knowledge, and thereby the excellency of it will further appear.

Firſt, All other knowledge is natural, but this wholly ſupernatural; Matth. 11. 27. No man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any the Father, ſave the Son, and he to whomſoever the Son will reveal him. The wiſeſt Heathens could never make a diſcovery of Chriſt by their deepeſt ſearches into Nature; the moſt eagle-eyed Philoſophers were but Children in knowledge, compared with the moſt illiterate Chriſtians.

Secondly, Other knowledge is unattainable by many: All the helps and means in the World would never enable ſome Chriſtians to attain the learned Arts and Languages: Men of the beſt Wits, and moſt pregnant Parts, are moſt excellent in theſe; but here is the myſtery and excellency of the Knowledge of Chriſt, that Men of moſt blunt, dull, and contemptible Parts, attain (thro' the teaching of the Spirit) to this Knowledge, in which the more acute and ingenious are utterly blind. Matth. 11. 25. I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto Babes. 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. You ſee your calling, Brethren, how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the World, to confound the wiſe, &c.

Thirdly, Other knowledge, tho' you ſhould attain the higheſt degree of it, would never bring you to Heaven, being defective and lame both in the integrity of Parts, the principal thing, viz. Chriſt, being wanting, and in the purity of its nature: For the knowing Heathens grew vain in their imaginations, Rom. 1. 21. and in the efficacy and influence of it on the heart and life, They held the truth in unrighteouſneſs: Their luſts were ſtronger than their light, Rom. 1. 18. But this Knowledge hath potent Influences, changing Souls into its own image, 2 Cor. 3. 18. and ſo proves a ſaving knowledge unto men, 1 Tim. 2. 4. And thus I have in a few particulars pointed out the tranſcendency of the Knowledge of Chriſt.

The uſe of all this I ſhall give you in a few Inferences, on which I ſhall not enlarge, the whole being only preliminary to the Doctrine of Chriſt; only for the preſent I ſhall hence infer,

Inference 1.

The ſufficiency of the Doctrine of Chriſt, to make Men wiſe unto Salvation. Paul deſired to know nothing elſe, and indeed nothing elſe is of abſolute neceſſity to be known: A little of this knowledge (if ſaving and effectual upon thy heart) will do thy Soul more Service than all the vain Speculations and profound Parts that others ſo much glory in. Poor Chriſtian, be not dejected, becauſe thou ſeeſt thy ſelf outſtripp'd, and excelled by ſo many in other parts of knowledge: If thou know Jeſus Chriſt, thou knoweſt enough to comfort and ſave thy Soul. Many learned Philoſophers are now in Hell, and many illiterate Chriſtians in Heaven.

Inference 2.

If there be ſuch Excellency in the Knowledge of Chriſt, let it humble all, both Saints and Sinners, that we have no more of this clear and effectual Knowledge in us, notwithſtanding the excellent Advantages we have had for it. Sinners, concerning you I may ſigh and ſay with the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 15. 34. Some have not the Knowledge of Chriſt, I ſpeak this to your ſhame. This, O this is the Condemnation; and even for you that are enlightned in this Knowledge, how little do you know of Jeſus Chriſt, in compariſon of what you might have known of him? What a ſhame is it, that you ſhould need to be taught the very firſt Truths, when for the time you might have been Teachers of others? Heb. 5. 12, 13, 14. That your Miniſters cannot ſpeak unto you as ſpiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto Babes in Chriſt, 1 Cor. 3. 1, 2. O how much time is ſpent in other Studies, in vain Diſcourſes, frivolous Pamphlets, worldly Employments? How little in the ſearch and ſtudy of Jeſus Chriſt?

Inference 3.

How ſad is their Condition, that have a knowledge of Chriſt, and yet, as to themſelves, it had been better they had never had it! Many there be that content themſelves with an unpractical, ineffectual, and meerly notional knowledge of him; of whom the Apoſtle ſaith, It had been better for them not to have known, 2 Pet. 2. 21. it ſerves only to aggravate Sin and Miſery: For tho' it be not enough to ſave them, yet it puts ſome weak reſtraints upon Sin, which their impetuous Luſts breaking down, expoſes them thereby to a greater Damnation.

Vid. Zanch. in Eph. 4. p. 161. de duplici cognitione Chriſti.

Inference 4.

Fourthly, This may inform us by what Rule to judge both Miniſters and Doctrines; certainly that is the higheſt Commendation of a Miniſter, to be an able Miniſter of the New-Teſtament; not of the Letter, but of the Spirit, 2 Cor. 3. 6. He is the beſt Artiſt, that can moſt livelily and powerfully diſplay Jeſus Chriſt before the People, evidently ſetting him forth as crucified among them; and that is the beſt Sermon that is moſt full of Chriſt, not of Art and Language. I know that a holy Dialect well becometh Chriſt's Miniſters, they ſhould not be rude and careleſs in language or method: But ſurely the Excellency of a Sermon lyes not in that, but in the plaineſt Diſcoveries and livelieſt Applications of Jeſus Chriſt.

Inference 5.

Let all that mind the honour of Religion, or the peace and comfort of their own Souls, wholly ſequeſter and apply themſelves to the ſtudy of Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified. Wherefore ſpend we our ſelves upon other Studies, when all Excellency, Sweetneſs and Deſireableneſs is concenter'd in this one? Jeſus Chriſt is fairer than the Children of Men, the chiefeſt among ten thouſands, as the Apple-tree among the trees of the Wood; Quæ faciunt diviſa beatum, in hoc mixta fluunt; theſe things which ſingly raviſh and delight the Souls of Men, are all found conjunctly in Chriſt. O what a bleſſed Chriſt is this! whom to know is Eternal Life. From the Knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt do bud forth all the Fruits of Comfort, and that for all Seaſons and Conditions. Hence Rev. 22. 2. he is called the Tree of Life which bears twelve manner of Fruits, and yields its Fruit every Month, and the very Leaves of this Tree are for healing. In Chriſt Souls have, (1.) All Neceſſaries for Food and Phyſick. (2.) All Varieties of Fruits, twelve manner of Fruits, a diſtinct Sweetneſs in this, in that,and in the other Attribute,Promiſe,Ordinance. (3.) In him are theſe Fruits at all times, he bears Fruit every Month; there is precious Fruit in Jeſus Chriſt, even in the black Month; Winter Fruits, as well as Summer Fruits. O then ſtudy Chriſt, ſtudy to know him more extenſively. There be many excellent things in Chriſt, that the moſt Eagle-eyed Believer hath not yet ſeen: Ah 'tis pity that any thing of Chriſt ſhould lye hid from his People! Study to know Chriſt more intenſively, to get the experimental Taſte, and lively Power of his Knowledge upon your Hearts and Affections: This is the Knowledge that carries all the ſweetneſs and comfort in it. Chriſtian, I dare appeal to thy Experience, whether the Experimental Taſte of Jeſus Chriſt in Ordinances and Duties have not a higher and ſweeter reliſh than any created Enjoyment thou ever taſted in this World? O then ſeparate, devote, and wholly give thy Self, thy Time, thy Strength, to this moſt ſweet tranſcendent Study.

I am ſure (ſaith a holy one) the Saints at their beſt, are but Strangers to the weight and worth of the incomparable ſweetneſs of Chriſt: He is ſo new, ſo freſh in excellency every day to thoſe that ſearch more and more into him, as if Heaven could furniſh us many new Chriſts (if I may ſo ſpeak) as there are days betwixt him and us; and yet he is one and the ſame ſtill: O we love an unknown lover when we love Chriſt!

Inference 6.

Laſtly, Let me cloſe the whole with a double Caution, one to our ſelves, who by our Callings and Profeſſions are the Miniſters of Chriſt; another to thoſe that ſit under the Doctrine of Chriſt daily.

Firſt, If this Doctrine be the moſt excellent, neceſſary, fundamental, profound, noble, and comfortable Doctrine, let us then take heed leſt while we ſtudy to be exact in other things, we be found ignorant in this. Ye know it's ignominious by the common Suffrage of the civiliz'd World, for any Man to be unacquainted with his own Calling, or not to intend the proper Buſineſs of it. It's our Calling (as the Bridegroom's Friends) to woo and win Souls to Chriſt, to ſet him forth to the People as crucified among them, Gal. 3. 1. to preſent him in all his attractive Excellencies, that all Hearts may be raviſhed with his Beauty, and charmed into his Arms by Love: We muſt alſo be able to defend the Truths of Chriſt againſt undermining Hereticks, to inſtil his Knowledge into the Ignorant, to anſwer the Caſes and Scruples of poor doubting Chriſtians. How many intricate Knots have we to untie? What pains, what ſkill is requiſite for ſuch as are imployed about our work? And ſhall we ſpend our precious time in frivolous Controverſies, philoſophical Niceties, dry and barren ſcholaſtick Notions? Shall we ſtudy every thing but Chriſt? Revolve all Volumes but the ſacred ones! What is obſerved even of Bellarmin, that he turn'd with loathing from School-Divinity, becauſe it wanted the ſweet Juice of Piety, may be convictive to many among us, who are often too much in love with worſe Imployment, than what he is ſaid to loath. O let the Knowledge of Chriſt dwell richly in us!

Cavete ne germinante indies arbore ſcientiæ, ſola ſterileſcat arbor vitæ; cavete ne donis ſpiritus contenti, donum ſpiritum nihili æſtimetis. S. Ford. amb. Sacr. p. 35.

Peritum eſſe, & ſine doctrina pietatis periturum. Aug.

Melius eſt ut nos reprehendant grammatici, quam ut non intelligant populi—non quanta eloquentia, ſed quanta evidentia; non rhetoricè, ſed Apoſtolicè; non diſerta,ſed fortia.

Quod à ſtudiis ſcholaſticæ theologiæ averteretur ferè nauſeabundus, quoniam ſucco carebant liquidæ pietatis. Fuligat. in vita Bel.

Secondly, Let us ſee that our knowledge of Chriſt be not a powerleſs, barren, impracticable Knowledge: O that in its paſſage from our Underſtandings to our Lips it might powerfully melt, ſweeten, and raviſh our Hearts! Remember, Brethren, a holy Calling never ſaved any Man, without a holy Heart; if our Tongues only be ſanctified, our whole Man muſt be damned. “We and our People muſt be judged by the ſame Goſpel, and ſtand at the ſame Bar, and be ſentenc'd on the ſame Terms, and dealt with as ſeverely as any other Men: We cannot think to be ſaved by our Clergy, or to come off with a Legit ut clericus, when there is wanting the Credidit, & vixit ut Chriſtianus; as an eminent Divine ſpeaks. O let the Keepers of the Vineyards look to, and keep their own Vineyard: We have a Heaven to win or loſe as well as others.

Gildas Salvianus, p. 27.

Thirdly, Let us take heed that we withhold not our Knowledge of Chriſt in unrighteouſneſs from the People. O that our Lips may diſperſe Knowledge, and feed many! Let us take heed of the Napkin, remembring the day of account is at hand. Remember, I beſeech you, the Relations wherein you ſtand, and the Obligations reſulting thence: Remember the great Shepherd gave himſelf for, and gave you to the Flock; your Time, your Gifts are not yours but God's. Remember the pinching wants of Souls who are Periſhing for want of Chriſt; and if their Tongues do not, yet their Neceſſities do beſpeak us, as they did Joſeph, Gen. 47. 15. Wherefore ſhould we die in thy preſence? give us Food that we may live and not die. Even the Sea-monſters draw forth their Breaſts to their young ones, and ſhall we be cruel! cruel to Souls! Did not Chriſt think it too much to ſweat Blood, yea to die for them? and ſhall we think it much to watch, ſtudy, preach, pray, and do what we can for their Salvation? O let the ſame mind be in you which was alſo in Chriſt!

We may apply to Miniſters, what Tacitus ſpeaks of Magiſtrates; Ita nati eſtis, ut bona, malaq; veſtra ad Rempub. pertineant. Tacit. Anal. Lib. 4.

Secondly, To the People that ſit under the Doctrine of Chriſt daily, and have the light of his Knowledge ſhining round about them.

Firſt, Take heed ye do not reject and deſpiſe this Light. This may be done two ways: Firſt, When you deſpiſe the means of Knowledge by ſlight and low eſteems of it. Surely if you thus reject Knowledge, God will reject you for it, Hoſea 4. 6. it is a deſpiſing of the richeſt Gift that ever Chriſt gave to the Church: and however it be a Contempt and Slight that begins low, and ſeems only to vent it ſelf upon the weak Parts, inartificial Diſcourſes, and untaking Tones and Geſtures of the Speakers; yet (believe it) it's a daring Sin, that flies higher than you are aware, Luke 10.6. He that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me; and he that deſpiſeth me, deſpiſeth him that ſent me. Secondly, You deſpiſe the Knowledge of Chriſt, when you deſpiſe the Directions, and loving Conſtraints of that Knowledge; when you refuſe to be guided by your Knowledge, your Light and your Luſts conteſt and ſtruggle within you: O 'tis ſad when your Luſts maſter your Light; you ſin not as the Heathens ſin, who know not God; but when you ſin, you muſt ſlight and put by the notices of your own Conſciences, and offer violence to your own Convictions: And what ſad work will this make in your Souls? How ſoon will it lay your Conſciences waſte?

Secondly, Take heed that you reſt not ſatisfied with that Knowledge of Chriſt you have attained, but grow on towards Perfection. It's the Pride and Ignorance of many Profeſſors when they have got a few raw and indigeſted Notions, to ſwell with ſelf-conceits of their excellent Attainments; and it's the Sin even of the beſt of Saints, when they ſee (veritas in profundo) how deep the Knowledge of Chriſt lyes, and what pains they muſt take to dig for it, to throw by the Shovel of Duty, and cry Dig we cannot. To your work, Chriſtians, to your work; let not your Candle go out, ſequeſter your ſelves to this ſtudy, look what Intercourſes and Correſpondences are betwixt the two Worlds; what Communion ſoever God and Souls maintain, it is in this way: count all therefore but Droſs in compariſon of that excellency which is in the Knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 2. Sets forth Chriſt in his Eſſential and Primeval Glory.

SERMON II.

8 PROV. ~~III.~~ 30.

Then was I by him, as one brought up with him; and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him.

THeſe words are a part of that excellent commendation of Wiſdom, by which in this Book Solomon intends two things, Firſt, Grace, or Holineſs, Prov. 4. 7. Wiſdom is the principal thing; Secondly, Jeſus Chriſt, the fountain of that Grace: And look as the former is renowned for its excellency, Job 28. 14, 15. ſo the latter in this context, wherein the Spirit of God deſcribes the moſt bleſſed ſtate of Jeſus Chriſt, the Wiſdom of the Father, from thoſe eternal delights he had with his Father, before his aſſumption of our nature: Then was I by him, &c. that long ævum was wholly ſwallowed up and ſpent in unſpeakable delights and pleaſures. Which delights were twofold, (1.) The Father and Son delighted one in another, (from which delights the Spirit is not here excluded) without communicating that their joy to any other, for no creature did then exiſt ſave in the mind of God, ver. 30. (2) They delighted in the ſalvation of men, in the proſpect of that work, tho' not yet extant, ver. 31. My preſent buſineſs lyes in the former, viz. the mutual delights of the Father and Son, one with and in another: The account whereof we have in the Text: Wherein conſider,

1. The glorious condition of the non-incarnated Son of God, deſcribed by the perſon with whom his fellowſhip was, then was I by him, or with him; ſo with him as never was any, in his very boſom, John 1. 18. the only begotten Son was in the boſom of the Father; an expreſſion of the greateſt dearneſs and intimacy in the World: as if he ſhould ſay, wrapt up in the very Soul of his Father, emboſomed in God.

2. This fellowſhip is illuſtrated by a Metaphor, wherein the Lord will ſtoop to our capacities [as one brought up with him] the Hebrew word אָמוֹן is ſometimes rendred a cunning workman, or curious Artiſt, as in Cant. 7. 1. which is the ſame word. And indeed Chriſt ſhewed himſelf ſuch an Artiſt in the Creation of the World; for all things were made by him, and without him there was nothing made, that was made, Joh. 1. 3. but Montanus, and others render it nutricius, and ſo Chriſt is here compared to a delightful child, ſporting before its Father: The Hebrew root שָׂחַק which our tranſlation renders rejoicing before him, ſignifies to laugh, play, or rejoice; ſo that look as Parents delight to ſee their Children ſporting before them, ſo did the Father delight in beholding this Darling of his boſom.

3. This delight is farther amplified by the perpetuity and uninterruptedneſs thereof; I was day by day his delights, rejoycing always before him: Theſe delights of the Father and the Son one in another, knew not a moment's interruption or diminution: Thus did theſe great and glorious Perſons mutually let forth their fulleſt pleaſure and delight each into the heart of other: They lay as it were imboſomed one in another, entertaining themſelves with delights and pleaſures ineffable, and unconceivable. Hence we obſerve, Doct. That the condition and ſtate of Jeſus Chriſt before his Incarnation, was a ſtate of higheſt and moſt unſpeakable delight and pleaſure, in the enjoyment of his Father.

John 1.18. Metaphoricè intima communio filii Dei cum patre innuitua, quæ conſiſtit in æterna generatione, tum in arctiſſima unitate naturæ, tum in ardentiſſima dilectione, deniq; in ſecretiſſimorum communicatione. Glaſſ.

* Hieron. Quem approbat. Pagn. & Mont. complacuit animæ meæ. Sept. quem ſuſcepit anima mea.

John tells us, he was in the boſom of his Father: to lye in the boſom is the poſture of deareſt love, John 13. 23. Now there was leaning on Jeſus boſom one of his Diſciples whom Jeſus loved: but Chriſt did not lean upon the Father's boſom, as that Diſciple did on his, but lay in it: And therefore in Iſa. 42. 1. The Father calls him mine elect, in whom my ſoul delighteth; which is * variouſly rendered, the Septuagint quem ſuſcepit, whom my Soul takes, or wraps up: Others complacuit, one that highly pleaſes and delights my very Soul: And 2 Cor. 8. 9. he is ſaid in this eſtate, wherein I am now deſcribing him, to be rich: And Phil. 2. 7. To be equal with God, and to be in the form of God, (i. e.) to have all the glory and enſigns of the Majeſty of God; and the riches which he ſpeaks of, was no leſs than all that God the Father hath, John 16. 15. All that the Father hath is mine: And what he now hath in this his exalted ſtate, is the ſame he had before his humiliation, Joh. 17. 5. Now to glimpſe out (as we are able) the unſpeakable felicity of that ſtate of Chriſt, whilſt he lay in that bleſſed boſom, I ſhall conſider it three ways, negatively, poſitively, and comparatively.

1. Let us conſider that ſtate negatively, by removing from it all thoſe degrees of Abaſement, and Sorrow, which his Incarnation brought him under: As,

Firſt, He was not then abaſed to the condition of a Creature, which was a low ſtoop indeed, and that which upon the matter undid him, in point of Reputation; for by this (ſaith the Apoſtle) he made himſelf of no Reputation, Phil. 2. 7. it emptied him of his glory: For God to be made Man, is ſuch an Abaſement as none can expreſs: but then not only to appear in true Fleſh, but alſo in the likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, as Rom. 8. 3. O what is this!

Secondly, Chriſt was not under the Law in this Eſtate. I confeſs it was no diſparagement, to Adam in the ſtate of Innocency, to Angels in their ſtate of Glory, to be under Law to God; but it was an unconceivable Abaſement to the abſolute independent Being to come under Law; yea, not only under the obedience, but alſo under the malediction and curſe of the Law, Gal. 4. 4. But when the fulneſs of time was come, God ſent forth his Son, made of a Woman, made under the Law.

Thirdly, In this State he was not liable to any of thoſe ſorrowful conſequents and attendants of that frail and feeble ſtate of Humanity, which he afterwards aſſumed, with the nature: as, (1.) He was unacquainted with Griefs, There was no ſorrowing nor ſighing in that Boſom were he lay; tho' afterwards he become a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with Grief, Iſa. 53. 3. a Man of Sorrows, as if had been conſtituted and made up of pure and unmixed Sorrows: Every day converſing with Griefs, as with his intimate Companions and Acquaintance. (2.) He was never pinched with Poverty and Wants, while he continued in that Boſom, as he was afterwards when he ſaid, the Foxes have holes, and the Birds of the Air have Neſts, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head. Ah bleſſed Jeſus! thou needeſt not to have wanted a place to have lain thine Head, hadſt thou not left that Boſom for my ſake. (3.) He never underwent reproach and ſhame in that Boſom, there was nothing but Glory and Honour reflected upon him by his Father, tho' afterwards he was deſpiſed and rejected of Men, Iſa. 53. 3. his Father never looked upon him without Smiles and Love, Delight and Joy, tho' afterwards he became a reproach of Men, and deſpiſed of the People, Pſal. 22. 6. (4.) His holy Heart was never offended with an impure ſuggeſtion or Temptation of the Devil; all the while he lay in that Boſom of Peace and Love, he never knew what it was to be aſſaulted with Temptations, to be beſieged and battered upon by unclean Spirits, as he did afterwards, Matth. 4. 1. Then was Jeſus led up of the Spirit into the Wilderneſs to be tempted of the Devil. It was for our ſakes that he ſubmitted to thoſe exerciſes of Spirit, to be in all points tempted like as we are, that he might be unto us a merciful and faithful High-Prieſt, Heb. 4. 14. (5.) He was never ſenſible of pains and tortures in Soul or Body, there were no ſuch things in that bleſſed Boſom where he lay; tho' afterwards he groaned and ſweat under them, Iſa. 53. 5. The Lord embraced him from Eternity, but never wounded him till he ſtood in our place and room. (6.) There were no hidings or withdrawments of his Father from him, there was not a Cloud from Eternity upon the face of God, till Jeſus Chriſt had left that boſom: It was a new thing to Chriſt to ſee frown in the face of his Father; a new thing for him to cry, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Matth. 27. 46. (7.) There were never any impreſſions of his Father's wrath upon him, as there were afterwards: God never delivered ſuch a bitter cup of wrath into his hands before, as that was, Matth. 26. 39. Laſtly, There was no Death, to which he was ſubject in that boſom. All theſe things were new things to Chriſt, he was above them all, till for our ſakes he voluntarily ſubjected himſelf unto them. Thus you ſee what that ſtate was not.

Mat. 8. 20.

He that was in the boſom of the Father: An Expreſſion ſhewing the intimate, cloſe, and ſecret delight and love he had from the Father. How unſpeakable is it that he ſhould deprive himſelf of the ſenſe of it? to put himſelf as it were out of Heaven into Hell; this is deeper love than ever we can imagine or conceive: No wonder the Apoſtle calls it [illegible] and [illegible] the unſearchable riches of Grace: we are never able to go to the bottom of it, but ſtill there is more Grace and Love behind.

Mr. Anth. Burgeſs, Lect. in Joh. 17. p. 503.

2. Let us conſider it poſitively, what it was, and gueſs by ſome particular Conſiderations (for indeed we can but gueſs) at the glory of it: As, (1.) We cannot but conceive it to be a ſtate of matchleſs Happineſs, if we conſider the Perſons enjoying and delighting each in other: He was with God, John 1. 1. God you know is the Fountain, Ocean, and Center of all Delights and Joys, Pſal. 16. 11. In thy preſence is fulneſs of Joy. To be wrapt up in the Soul and Boſom of all Delights, as Chriſt was, muſt needs be a State tranſcending Apprehenſion; to have the Fountain of Love and Delight letting out it ſelf ſo immediately, and fully, and everlaſtingly upon this only begotten darling of his Soul, ſo as it never did communicate it ſelf to any; judge what a ſtate of tranſcendent felicity this muſt be. Great Perſons have great delights.

(2.) Or if we conſider the intimacy, dearneſs, yea, oneneſs of thoſe great Perſons one with another: The nearer the union, the ſweeter the communion: Now Jeſus Chriſt was not only near and dear to God, but one with him, I and my Father are one, Joh. 10. 30. one in nature, will, love and delight; there is indeed a Moral union of Souls among Men by Love, but this was a natural oneneſs; no Child is ſo one with his Father, no Husband ſo one with the Wife of his Boſom, no Friend ſo one with his Friend, no Soul ſo one with its Body, as Jeſus Chriſt and his Father were one. O what matchleſs delights muſt neceſſarily flow from ſuch a bleſſed Union!

(3.) Conſider again the purity of that delight with which the bleſſed Father and Son embraced each other; the beſt Creature-delights one in another, are mixed, debaſed, and allayed: If there be ſomething raviſhing and ingaging, there is alſo ſomething cloying and diſtaſting: The purer any delight is, the more excellent. Now there are no Chriſtal ſtreams flowing ſo purely from the Fountain, no beams of light ſo unmixed from the Sun, as the Loves and Delights of theſe holy and glorious Perſons were: The holy, holy, holy Father embraced the thrice holy Son with a moſt holy Delight and Love.

(4.) Conſider the conſtancy of this delight: It was from everlaſting, as in ver. 23. and from Eternity; it never ſuffered one moment's interruption: The ever-flowing Fountain of God's Delight and Love never ſtopt its courſe, never ebbed; but as he ſpeaks in the Text, I was daily his delight, rejoycing always before him. Once more, conſider the fulneſs of that delight, the perfection of that pleaſure; I was delights: So the word is in its original; not only plural delights, all delights, but alſo in the abſtract Delight it ſelf: As afterwards from the abundance of his ſorrows, he was ſtiled, a Man of Sorrows, ſo here, from the fulneſs of his delights: As who ſhould ſay, even conſtituted and made up of pleaſure and delight.

3. Once more, let us conſider it comparatively, and this ſtate will yet appear more glorious, comparing it with either the choiceſt delights that one creature takes in another, or that God takes in the creature, or that the creature takes in God: Meaſure theſe immenſe delights betwixt the Father, and his Son, by either of theſe lines, and you ſhall find them infinitely ſhort: For, (1.) Tho' the delights that creatures take in each other, be ſometimes a great delight; ſuch was Jacob's delight in Benjamin, whoſe Life is ſaid to be bound up in the lad's life, a dear and high expreſſion, Gen. 44. 30. ſuch was that of Jonathan in David, whoſe Soul was knit with his Soul, and he loved him as his own Soul, 1 Sam. 13. 1. and ſuch is the delight of one Friend in another, there is a Friend that is as a Man's own Soul, Deut. 13. 6. yet all this is but Creature-delight, and can in no particular match the delights betwixt the Father and the Son: For this is but a finite delight, according to the meaſure and abilities of Creatures; but that is infinite, ſuitable to the infinite perfection of the Divine Being: This is always mixed, that perfectly pure. (2.) Or if you compare it with the delight that God takes in the Creatures; it is confeſſed that God takes great delight in ſome Creatures, The Lord takes pleaſure in his Saints, he rejoices over them with ſinging; and reſteth in his Love, Zeph. 3. 17. Iſa. 62. 5. But yet there is a great difference betwixt his delight in Creatures, and his delights in Chriſt; for all his delight in the Saints is ſecondary, and for Chriſt's ſake: But his delights in Chriſt are primary, and for his own ſake: We are accepted in the beloved, Eph. 1. 6. he is beloved, and accepted for himſelf. (3.) To conclude, compare it once more with the delights that the beſt of creatures take in God and Chriſt, and it muſt be confeſſed that is a choice Delight, and a tranſcendent Love, with which they love and delight in him, Pſal. 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee! and on Earth there is none that I deſire beſides thee. What pangs of Love? What raptures of delight, did the Spouſe expreſs to Chriſt? O thou whom my Soul loveth! But ſurely our delight in God is no perfect rule to meaſure his delight in Chriſt by: For our love to God (at the beſt) is ſtill imperfect, that's the burden and conſtant complaint of Saints, but this is perfect: Ours is inconſtant, up and down, ebbing and flowing, but this is conſtant. So then to conclude, the Condition and State of Jeſus Chriſt before his Incarnation, was a ſtate of higheſt and matchleſs Delight, in the enjoyment of his Father. The Uſes follow.

Amote, Domine, pluſquam meos, pluſquam mea, pluſquam me. Bern. Suppoſe (ſaith one) there were a Hell betwixt me and Chriſt, and Chriſt ſhould ſay, put in thy Foot and come through, or thou ſhalt have none of me, would I not do it?

Uſe of Incarnation.

Inference 1. What an aſtoniſhing act of Love was this then, for the Father to give the Delight, the Darling of his Soul, out of his very Boſom, for poor Sinners? All Tongues muſt needs pauſe and falter, that attempt the expreſſion of his Grace; expreſſions being here ſwallowed up: God ſo loved the World that he gave his only begotten Son, John 3. 16. here is a ſic, without a ſicut; ſo loved them: How did he love them? Nay, here you muſt excuſe the Tongues of Angels; which of us would deliver a Child, the Child of our Delights, an only Child to death, for the greateſt Inheritance in the World? What tender Parent can endure a parting pull with ſuch a Child? When Hagar was taking her laſt leave (as ſhe thought) of her Iſhmael, Gen. 21. 26. the Text ſaith, ſhe went and ſate her down over againſt him, a good way off; for ſhe ſaid, Let me not ſee the Death of the Child; and ſhe ſate over againſt him, and lift up her Voice, and wept: Tho' ſhe were none of the beſt Mothers, nor he the beſt of Children; yet ſhe could not give up a Child. O 'twas hard to part! What an outcry did David make, even for an Abſalom! Wiſhing he had died for him. What a Hole (as I may ſay) hath the Death of ſome Children made in the Hearts of ſome Parents, which will never be cloſed up in this World? Yet ſurely, never did any Child lye ſo cloſe to a Parent's Heart, as Chriſt did to his Father's; and yet he willingly parts with him, tho' his only One, the Son of his Delights, and that to Death, a curſed Death, for Sinners, for the worſt of Sinners. O miranda Dei Philanthropia! matchleſs Love, a Love paſt finding out! Let all Men therefore, in the Buſineſs of their Redemption, give equal Glory to the Father with the Son, John 5. 23. if the Father had not loved thee, he had never parted with ſuch a Son for thee.

Infer. 2. From one wonder, let your Souls turn to another, for they are now in the midſt of Wonders: adore, and be for ever aſtoniſhed at the Love of Jeſus Chriſt to poor Sinners; that ever he ſhould conſent to leave ſuch a Boſom, and the ineffable Delights that were there, for ſuch poor Worms as we are. O heights, depths, lengths, and breadths of unmeaſurable Love! O ſee Rom. 5. 6, 7, 8. read, and wonder; how is the Love of Chriſt commended in raviſhing Circumſtances to poor Sinners! You would be loth to leave a Creature's Boſom, a comfortable Dwelling, a fair Eſtate, for the beſt Friend in the World; your Souls are loth to leave their Bodies, tho' they have no ſuch great content there: But which of you, if ever you found by experience what it is to be in the Boſom of God by Divine Communion, would be perſwaded to leave ſuch a Boſom for all the good that is in the World? And yet Jeſus Chriſt, who was imbraced in that Boſom, after another manner than ever you were acquainted with, freely left it, and laid down the Glory and Riches he enjoined there, for your ſakes; and as the Father loved him, even ſo (Believers) hath he loved you, Joh. 17. 22. What manner of Love is this! Who ever loved as Chriſt loves? who ever denied himſelf for Chriſt, as Chriſt denied himſelf for us?

It is admirable that Chriſt ſhould not only put himſelf out of comfort, but alſo from the enjoyment of that manifeſted Glory and Honour he might have retained to himſelf: for he prayeth here for that Glory which he had with the Father from the beginning of the World: He had it in Right, but not in Poſſeſſion: He voluntarily diveſted himſelf of that to accompliſh our Redemption. Burgeſs on John 17. v. 19.

Infer. 3. Here we are informed, That Intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt is the true way to all ſpiritual Preferment in Heaven. Do you covet to be in the Heart, in the favour and delight of God? Get Intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt, and you ſhall preſently be there. What old Iſrael ſaid of the Children of his beloved Joſeph, thy Children are my Children, the ſame God ſaith of all the dear Children of Chriſt, Gen. 48. 5, 9. You ſee among Men, all things are carried by Intereſt; Perſons riſe in this World, as they are befriended; Preferment goes by Favour: So 'tis in Heaven, Perſons are preferred according to their Intereſt in the Beloved, Epheſ. 1. 6. Chriſt is the great Favourite in Heaven; his Image upon your Souls, and his Name in your Prayers, makes both accepted with God.

Infer. 4. How worthy is Jeſus Chriſt of all our Love, and Delight? You ſee how infinitely the Father delighteth in him, how he raviſhes the Heart of God; and ſhall he not raviſh our Hearts? I preſent you a Chriſt this Day, able to raviſh any Soul that will but view and conſider him. O that you did but ſee this lovely Lord, Jeſus Chriſt! Then would you go home ſick of Love: ſurely he is a drawing Saviour, John 12. 32. Why do ye laviſh away our precious Affections upon Vanity? None but Chriſt is worthy of them; when you ſpend your precious Affections upon other Objects, what is it, but to dig for Droſs with golden Mattocks? The Lord direct our Hearts into the Love of Chriſt. O that our Hearts, Loves and Delights did meet and concenter with the Heart of God in this moſt bleſſed Object! O let him that left God's Boſom for you, be emboſomed by you, tho' yours be nothing to God's; he that left God's Boſom for you, deſerves yours.

Infer. 5. If Chriſt be the beloved Darling of the Father's Soul, think what a grievous and unſufferable thing it is to the Heart of God, to ſee his dear Son deſpiſed, ſlighted, and rejected by Sinners: Verily there is no ſuch cut to the Heart of God in the whole World. Unbelievers trample upon God's darling, tread under foot him that eternally lay in his Boſom, Heb. 10. 29. Smite the apple of his Eye, and how God will bear this, that Parable, Mat. 21. 37, to 40. will inform you; ſurely he will miſerably deſtroy ſuch wretched Sinners. If you would ſtudy to do God the greateſt deſpight, there is none like this. What a diſmal word is that, 1 Cor. 16. 22. If any Man love not our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, let him be Anathema Maranatha, (i. e.) let the great Curſe of God lye upon that Man till the Lord come. O Sinners! You ſhall one day know the price of this Sin, you ſhall feel what it is to deſpiſe a Jeſus, that is able to compel Love from the hardeſt Heart. O that you would ſlight him no more! O that this Day your Hearts might fall in love with him! I tell you, if you would ſet your Love to ſale, none bids ſo fair for it as Chriſt.

2. Uſe of Exhortation.

1. To Saints; If Chriſt lay eternally in his Boſom of Love, and yet was content to forſake and leave it for your ſakes; then, (1.) Be you ready to forſake and leave all the Comforts you have on Earth for Chriſt; famous Galleacius left all for his Enjoyment. Moſes left all the glory of Egypt. Peter, and the other Apoſtles, left all, Luk. 18. 28. But what have we to leave for Chriſt, in compariſon of what he left for us? Surely Chriſt is the higheſt patern of Self-denial in the World. (2.) Let this confirm your Faith in Prayer: If he that has ſuch an Intereſt in the Heart of God intercede with the Father for you, then never doubt of Audience and Acceptance with him; ſurely you ſhall be accepted through the Beloved, Epheſ. 1. 6. Chriſt was never denied any thing that he asked, John. 11. 42. the Father hears him always; tho' you are not worthy, Chriſt is, and he ever lives to make Interceſſion for you, Heb. 7. 25. (3.) Let this incourage thy Heart, O Saint, in a dying Hour, and not only make thee patient in Death, but in a holy manner impatient till thou be gone; for whither is thy Soul now going, but to that Boſom of Love whence Chriſt came? John 17. 24. Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am: and where is he? But in that Boſom of Glory and Love where he lay before the World was, ver. 5. O then let every Believer incourage his Soul; comfort ye one another with theſe words, I am leaving the Boſom of a Creature, I am going to the Boſom of God.

2. To Sinners, exhorting them to embrace the Boſom-Son of God: Poor Wretches! Whatever you are, or have been; whatever Guilt or Diſcouragement at preſent you lye under, embrace Chriſt who is freely offered you, and you ſhall be as dear to God as the holieſt and moſt eminent Believer in the World: But if you ſtill continue to deſpiſe and neglect ſuch a Saviour, ſorer Wrath is treaſured up for you than other Sinners, even ſomething worſe than dying without Mercy, Heb. 10. 28. O that theſe diſcoveries and overtures of Chriſt may never come to ſuch a fatal Iſſue with any of your Souls, in whoſe Eyes his Glory hath been this day opened!

Serm. 3. Opens the Covenant of Redemption betwixt the Father and the Redeemer.

SERMON III.

ISA. LIII. 12.

Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he ſhall divide the ſpoil with the ſtrong, becauſe he hath poured out his Soul unto death: And he was numbred with the Tranſgreſſors, and he bare the Sin of many, and made Interceſſion for the Tranſgreſſors.

IN this Chapter the Goſpel ſeems to be epitomized, the ſubject Matter of it is the death of Chtiſt, and the glorious Iſſue thereof; by reading of it, the Eunuch of old, and many Jews ſince, have been converted to Chriſt. Chriſt is here conſidered abſolutely and relatively; abſolutely, and ſo his Innocency is induſtriouſly vindicated, ver. 9. Tho' he ſuffer'd grievous things, yet not for his own Sins, for he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his Mouth; but relatively conſidered in the capacity of a Surety for us: So the Juſtice of God is as fully vindicated in his Sufferings; ver. 6. The Lord hath laid upon him the Iniquity of us all. How he came to ſuſtain this Capacity, and relation of a Surety for us, is in theſe Verſes plainly aſſured to be by his Compact and Agreement with his Father before the Worlds were made, ver. 10, 11, 12.

Norton's Orthodox Evangeliſt, pag. 41. The Call of the Lord Jeſus unto Office, includes Election on the Father's part, and Acceptation on the Mediator's part; and is ſet down after the manner of mutual Tranſaction between God and Chriſt, whereby he was deſigned thereunto, as it were, by way of Covenant. If his Soul ſhould ſee it ſelf an Offering for Sin, (for ſo according to the Original do good Authors read the Text) he ſhall ſee his Seed, prolong his Days, and the Pleaſure of the Lord ſhall proſper in his hand, vers 10.

In this Verſe we have, (1.) His Work. (2.) His Reward. (3.) The Reſpect or Relation of each to the other. (1.) His Work, which was indeed a hard Work, to pour out his Soul unto Death, aggravated by the Companions, with whom, being numbred with Tranſgreſſors; the Capacity in which, bearing all the Sins of the Elect, he bear the Sins of many; and by the manner of his bearing it, viz. meekly, and forgivingly, he made Interceſſion for the Tranſgreſſors; this was his Work. (2.) The Reward or Fruit which is promiſed him for this work, Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he ſhall divide the Spoil with the ſtrong; wherein is a plain Alluſion to Conquerors in War, for whom are reſerved the richeſt Garments, and moſt honourable Captives to follow the Conqueror as an addition to his Magnificence and Triumph; theſe were wont to come after them in Chains, Iſa. 45. 14. ſee Judg. 5. 3. (3.) The Reſpect or Relation betwixt that Work and this Triumph: Some will have this Work to have no other relation to that Glory than a meer Antecedent to a Conſequent: Others give it the reſpect and relation of a meritorious Cauſe to a Reward. 'Tis well obſerved by Dr. Featly, that the Hebrew particle לָכֵן which we render therefore, noting order, it is not worth ſo much contention about it, whether it be the order of Cauſality, or meer Antecedency; neither do I foreſee any abſurdity in calling Chriſt's Exaltation, the Reward and Fruit of his Humiliation: However 'tis plain, whether one or other, 'tis that the Father here agrees and promiſes to give him, if he will undertake the Redemption the Elect, by pouring out his Soul unto death: of all which this is the plain reſult, Doct. That the buſineſs of Man's Salvation was tranſacted upon Covenant terms, betwixt the Father and the Son, from all Eternity.

I would not here be miſtaken, as tho' I were now to treat of the Covenant of Grace, made in Chriſt betwixt God and us; it is not the Covenant of Grace, but of Redemption I am now to ſpeak to, which differs from the Covenant of Grace both and regard of the Federates: In this 'tis God the Father, and Jeſus Chriſt, that mutually covenant; in that it's

God and Man: They differ alſo in the preceptive part; in this it is required of Chriſt that he ſhould ſhed his Blood, in that it is required of us that we believe: They alſo differ in their Promiſes; in this God promiſes to Chriſt a Name above every Name, ample Dominion from Sea to Sea; in that to us Grace and Glory: So that theſe are two diſtinct Covenants.

The ſubſtance of this Covenant of Redemption is Dialoguewiſe expreſt to us in Iſa. 49 where (as Divines have well obſerved) Chriſt begins at the firſt and ſecond Verſes, and ſhews his Commiſſion, telling his Father, how he had both called and prepared him for the Work of Redemption; The Lord hath called me from the Womb—he hath made my Mouth like a ſharp Sword, and made me a poliſhed Shaſt, &c. q. d. by reaſon of that ſuperabundant meaſure of the Spirit of Wiſdom and Power wherewith I am anointed and filled, my Doctrine ſhall as a Sword pierce the Hearts of Sinners, yea, like an Arrow drawn to the head, ſtrike point-blank into Souls ſtanding at a great diſtance from God and Godlineſs.

Vid. Goodwin's Triumph of Faith.

Having told God how ready and fit he was for his Service, he will know of him what Reward he ſhall have for his Work, for he reſolves his Blood ſhall not be ſold at low and cheap Rates: Hereupon, ver. 3. The Father offers him the Elect of Iſrael for his Reward, bidding low at firſt (as they that make Bargains uſe to do) and only offers him that ſmall Remnant, ſtill intending to bid higher: But Chriſt will not be ſatisfied with theſe, he values his Blood higher than ſo; therefore in ver. 4. He is brought in complaining, I have laboured in vain, and ſpent my Strength for nought, q. d. This is but a ſmall Reward for ſo great a Suffering as I muſt undergo, my Blood is much more worth than this comes to, and will be ſufficient to redeem all the Elect diſperſed among the Iſles of the Gentiles, as well as the loſt Sheep of the Houſe of Iſrael. Hereupon the Father comes up higher, and tells him, he intends to reward him better than ſo; and therefore, ver. 6. tells him, It's a light thing that thou ſhouldſt be my Servant, to raiſe up the Tribes of Jacob, and to reſt over the preſerved of Iſrael: I will alſo give thee for a Light to the Gentiles, that thou mayeſt be my Salvation to the ends of the Earth. Thus is the Treaty carried on betwixt them, tranſacting it after the manner of Men.

Now to open this great Point, we will here conſider, (1.) The Perſons tranſacting one with another. (2.) The Buſineſs tranſacted. (3.) The quality and manner of the Tranſaction, which is federal, (4.) The Articles to which they agree. (5.) How each Perſon performs his Engagement to the other. And laſtly, The Antiquity or Eternity of this Covenant-Tranſaction.

(1.) The Perſons tranſacting and dealing with each other in this Covenant; and indeed they are great Perſons, God the Father, and God the Son; the former as a Creditor, and the latter as a Surety: The Father ſtands upon Satisfaction, the Son engages to give it. If it be demanded why the Father and the Spirit might not as well have treated upon our Redemption, as the Father, and Son? It is anſwered, Chriſt is the natural Son of God, and therefore fitteſt to make us the adopted Sons of God. Chriſt alſo is the middle Perſon in the Trinity, and therefore fitteſt to be the Mediator and middle Perſon betwixt us and God. The Spirit hath another Office aſſigned him, even to apply, as Chriſt's Vicegerent, the Redemption deſigned by the Father, and purchaſed by the Son for us.

Vide Robert's Medulla Bib. p. 1577. & Lyſ. Teſt. p. 83, 84.

(2.) The Buſineſs tranſacted betwixt them, and that was the Redemption and Recovery of all God's, Elect; our Eternal Happineſs lay now before them, our Deareſt and Everlaſting Concerns were now in their hands; the Elect (tho' not yet in being) are here conſidered as exiſtent, yea, and as fallen, miſerable, forlorn Creatures: How theſe may again be reſtored to Happineſs (ſalva juſtitia Dei) without prejudice to the Honour, Juſtice, and Truth of God; this, this is the Buſineſs that lay before them.

(3.) For the manner or quality of the Tranſaction, it was federal, or of the nature of a Covenant; it was by mutual engagements and ſtipulations, each Perſon undertaking to perform his part in order to our recovery.

We find each Perſon undertaking for himſelf by ſolemn Promiſe; the Father promiſeth that he will hold his Hand and keep him, Iſa. 42. 6. The Son promiſeth he will obey his Father's call to ſuffering, and not be rebellious, Iſa. 50. 5. And having promiſed, each holds the other to his Engagement. The Father ſtands upon the Satisfaction promiſed him: And when the Payment was making, he will not abate him one Farthing; Rom. 8. 32. God ſpared not his own Son, (i. e.) he abated nothing of the full Price he was to have at his hands for us.

Cauſa externa ſatiſfactionis à patre decretæ, & à filio ſuſceptæ, eſt miſeria noſtra, id eſt peccata & quidem æternam pœnam promerentia, & exigentia, in quam miſeratio Dei ferebatur, & ob quam pœnas omnes nobis debitas ſubiit Filius Dei, ut per eum priſtinæ felicitati reſtitueremur. Synop. purior. Theol. p. 350.

And as the Father ſtood ſtrictly upon the Terms of the Covenant, ſo did Chriſt alſo; Joh. 17. 45. I have glorified thee on Earth, (ſaith he to the Father) I have finiſhed the Work thou gaveſt me to do; and now, Father, glorifie me with thine own ſelf: As if he had ſaid, Father, the Work is done, now where's the Wages I was promiſed? I call for Glory as my due, as much my due as the hire of the Labourer is his due when his Work is done.

(4.) More particularly; we will next conſider the Articles to which they do both agree, or what it is that each Perſon doth for himſelf promiſe to the other. And to let us ſee how much the Father's Heart is engaged in the Salvation of poor Sinners, there are five things which he promiſeth to do for Chriſt if he will undertake that Work.

Firſt, He promiſeth to inveſt him, and anoint him to a threefold Office, anſwerable to Miſery that lay upon the Elect, as ſo many barrs to all communion with, and enjoyment of God; for if ever Man be reſtored to that Happineſs, the blindneſs of his Mind muſt be cured, the guilt of Sin expiated, and his Captivity to Sin led captive: Anſwerably, Chriſt muſt of God be made unto us Wiſdom, Righteouneſs, Sanctification, and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

1. 30. And he is made ſo to us, as our Prophet, Prieſt, and King: but he could not put himſelf into either of theſe, for if ſo, he had acted without Commiſſion, and conſequently all he did had been invalid; Heb. 5. 5. Chriſt glorified not himſelf to be made a High-Prieſt, but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son. A Commiſſion there for to act authoritatively in theſe Offices being neceſſary to our recovery, the Father engages to him to ſeal him ſuch a threefold Commiſſion.

He promiſed to inveſt him with an Eternal and Royal Prieſthood; Pſal 110. 4. The Lord hath ſworn, and will not repent; thou art a Prieſt for ever after the Order of Melchiſedeck. This Melchiſedeck being King of Righteouſneſs, and King of Salem, that is, Peace, had a Royal Prieſthood: and his deſcent not being reckoned, it had an adumbration of Eternity in it, and ſo was more apt to type and ſhadow forth the Prieſthood of Chriſt, than Aaron's was, Heb. 7. 16, 17, 24, 25. as the Apoſtle accommodates them there.

He promiſeth moreover to make him a Prophet, and that an extraordinary one, even the Prince of Prophets; the chief Shepherd, as much ſuperior to all others, as the Sun is to the leſſer Stars: So you have it, Iſa. 42. 6, 7. I will give thee for a Light to the Gentiles, to open the blind Eyes, &c.

And not only ſo, but to make him King alſo, and that of the whole Empire of the World; ſo Pſal. 2. 6, 7, 8. Ask of me, and I will give thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance, and the utmoſt ends of the Earth for thy Poſſeſſion. Thus he promiſeth to qualifie and furniſh him compleatly for the work, by his inveſtiture with this threefold Office.

Secondly, And for as much as he knew it was a hard and difficult work his Son was to undertake, a work that would have broken the backs of all the Angels in Heaven, and Men on Earth, had they engaged in it, therefore he promiſeth to ſtand by him, and aſſiſt and ſtrengthen him for it: So Iſa. 42. 5, 6, 7. I will hold thy hand, or take hold of thee with my hand, for ſo it may be rendred, (i. e.) I will under-prop and ſupport thy Humanity when it's even overweighed with the Burden that is to come upon it, and ready to ſink down under it; for ſo you know the caſe ſtood with him, Mark 14. 34. and ſo it was foretold of him, Iſa. 53. 7. He was oppreſſed, &c. and indeed the Humanity needed a prop of no leſs ſtrength than the infinite power of the Godhead: The ſame Promiſe you have in the firſt verſe alſo, Behold my Servant, whom I uphold.

Ego, cujus immenſa ac infinita eſt potentia, ſic tibi favebo, ita te fulciam, ut nihil adverſus te poſuit omnes adverſarii tui. Marlor. in loc.

Thirdly, He promiſeth to crown his work with ſucceſs, and bring it to a happy Iſſue, Iſa. 53. 10. He ſhall ſee his Seed, he ſhall prolong his Days; and the Pleaſure of the Lord ſhall proſper in his Hand. He ſhall not begin, and not finiſh; he ſhall not ſhed his invaluable blood upon hazardous Terms; but ſhall ſee and reap the ſweet fruit thereof: As the joyful Mother forgets her pangs, when ſhe delightfully embraces and kiſſes her living Child.

Fourthly, The Father promiſeth to accept him in his work, tho' millions ſhould eternally periſh, Iſa. 49. 4. Surely (ſaith he) my work is with the Lord. And (verſe 5.) I ſhall be glorious in the eyes of the Lord. His Faith had therein reſpect to this compact and Promiſe. Accordingly the Father manifeſts the ſatisfaction he had in him, and in his work, even while he was about it on Earth, when there came ſuch a voice from the excellent Glory, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed.

Fifthly, He engaged to reward him highly for his work by exalting him to ſingular and ſupereminent Glory and Honour, when he ſhould have diſpatched and finiſhed it. So you read, Pſal. 2. 7. I will declare the decree; the Lord hath ſaid unto me, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. It's ſpoken of the day of his Reſurrection, when he had juſt finiſhed his ſuffering. And ſo the Apoſtle expounds and applies it, Acts 13. 32, 33. For then did the Lord wipe away the reproach of his Croſs, and inveſted him with ſuch Glory that he looked like himſelf again. As if the Father had ſaid, Now thou haſt again recovered thy Glory, and this day is to thee as a new Birth-day.

Theſe are the Incouragements and Rewards propoſed and promiſed to him by the Father. This was the joy ſet before him, (as the Apoſtle phraſeth it in Heb. 12. 2.) which made him ſo patiently to endure the Croſs, and deſpiſe the Shame.

And in like manner Jeſus Chriſt reſtipulates, and gives his engagement to the Father; that upon theſe Terms he is content to be made Fleſh, to diveſt (as it were, himſelf of his Glory, to come under the obedience and malediction of the Law, and not to refuſe any, the hardeſt ſufferings it ſhould pleaſe his Father to inflict on him. So much is carried in Iſa. 50. 5, 6, 7. The Lord hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back; I gave my back to the Smiters, and my cheeks to them that pulled off the hair; I hid not my Face from ſhame and ſpitting: For the Lord God will help me, therefore ſhall I not be confounded; I have ſet my Face as a flint, and I know that I ſhall not be aſhamed. When he ſaith I was not Rebellious, he meaneth I was moſt heartily willing and content to accept the Terms; for there is a Meioſis in the words, and much more is intended than expreſſed. And the ſenſe of this place is well delivered to us in other terms, Pſal. 40. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. Then ſaid I, lo I come, I delight to do thy will O God, thy Law is within my heart. O ſee with what a full conſent the heart of Chriſt cloſeth with the Father's Offers and Propoſals; like ſome Eccho, that anſwers your voice twice or thrice over. So doth Chriſt here anſwer his Father's call, I come, I delight to do thy will; yea, thy Law is in my heart. And thus you ſee the Articles to which they both ſubſcribed, or the Terms they agreed on.

(5.) I will briefly ſhew how theſe Articles and Agreements were on both parts performed, and that preciſely and punctually to a tittle. For, (1.) The Son having thus conſented, accordingly he applies himſelf to the diſcharge of his work. He took a Body, in it fulfilled all Righteouſneſs, even to a tittle, Mat. 3. 15. And at laſt his Soul was made an Offering for Sin. So that he could ſay as it is, John 17. 4. Father, I have glorified thee on Earth, I have finiſhed the work thou gaveſt me to do. He went through all the parts of his active and paſſive Obedience chearfully and faithfully. (2.) The Father made good his engagements to Chriſt all along with no leſs Faithfulneſs than Chriſt did his. He promiſed to aſſiſt and hold his hand, and ſo he did; Luke 22. 23. And there appeared to him an Angel from Heaven ſtrengthening him. That was one of the ſoreſt brunts that ever Chriſt met with, it was ſeaſonable aid and ſuccour. He promiſed to accept him in his work, and that he ſhould be glorious in his Eyes, ſo he did. For he not only declared it by a voice from Heaven, Luke 3. 22. Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed: But it was fully declared in his Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, which were a full Diſcharge and Juſtification of him. He promiſed him that he ſhould ſee his Seed, and ſo he did, for his very Birth-dew was as the dew of the Morning; and ever ſince his Blood hath been fruitful in the World. He promiſed glorioully to reward, and exalt him; and ſo he hath, Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11. and that highly and ſupereminently, giving him a Name above every name in Heaven and Earth. Thus were the Articles performed.

Antequam ab omnibus retro ſeculis tempora fluere inciperent, decrevit Deus hanc nobis ſalutis gratiam per Chriſtum conferre. Calv. in loc.

(6.) Laſtly, When was this Compact made betwixt the Father and Son? I anſwer, It bears date from Eternity. Before this World was made, then were his delights in us, while as yet we had no exiſtence, but only in the infinite mind and purpoſe of God, who had decreed this for us in Chriſt Jeſus, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Tim. 1. 9. What Grace was that which was given us in Chriſt before the World began, but this Grace of Redemption, which from everlaſting was thus contrived and deſigned for us, in that way which hath been here opened? Then was the Council, or Conſultation of Peace betwixt them both, as ſome take that Scripture, Zech. 6. 13.

Next let us apply it to our ſelves.

Uſe 1. The firſt Uſe that offers it ſelf to us from hence, is the abundant ſecurity that God hath given the Elect for their Salvation, and that not only in reſpect of the Covenant of Grace made with them, but alſo of this Covenant of Redemption made with Chriſt for them; which indeed is the foundation of the Covenant of Grace. God's ſingle promiſe is ſecurity enough to our Faith, his Covenant of Grace adds ex abundanti farther ſecurity; but both theſe viewed as the effects and fruits of this Covenant of Redemption, make all faſt and ſure. In the Covenant of Grace, we queſtion not the performance on God's part, but are often ſtumbled at the grand defects on our parts: But when we look to the Covenant of Redemption, there's nothing to ſtagger our Faith, both the Federates being infinitely able and faithful to perform their parts; ſo that there is no poſſibility of a failure there. Happy were it, if puzzled and perplext Chriſtians would turn their eyes from the defects that are in their own obedience, to the fulneſs and compleatneſs of Chriſt's Obedience; and ſee themſelves compleat in him, when moſt lame and defective in themſelves.

Hence alſo be informed, that God the Father, and God the Son, do mutually rely and truſt to one another, in the buſineſs of our Redemption. The Father relies upon the Son for the performance of his part; as it is, Iſa. 42. 1. Behold my Servant, whom I uphold. Montanus turns it, on whom I lean or depend. As if the Father had ſaid, behold what a faithful Servant I have choſen, in whom my Soul is at reſt: I know he will go through with his work, I can depend upon him. And to ſpeak plain, the Father ſo far truſted Chriſt, that upon the credit of his Promiſe to come into the World, and in the fulneſs of time to become a Sacrifice for the Elect, he ſaved all the Old-Teſtament-Saints, whoſe Faith alſo reſpected a Chriſt to come; with reference whereto it is ſaid, Heb. 11. 39, 40. That they received not the Promiſe, God having provided ſome better thing for us, that they without us ſhould not be made perfect, (i. e.) without Jeſus Chriſt manifeſted in the Fleſh in our Times; tho' believed on as to come in the Fleſh, in their Times. And as the Father truſted Chriſt, ſo doth Chriſt in like manner depend upon and truſt his Father. For having performed his part, and left the World again, he now truſteth his Father for the accompliſhment of that Promiſe made him, Iſa. 53. 10. That he ſhall ſee his Seed, &c. He depends upon his Father for all the Elect that are behind, yet unregenerated, as well as thoſe already called, that they ſhall be all preſerved unto the Heavenly Kingdom, according to that, John 17. 11. And now I am no more in the World, but theſe are in the World; and I come unto thee: Holy Father, keep through thine own Name thoſe whom thou haſt given me. And can it be imagined, that the Father will fail his Truſt, who every way acquitted himſelf ſo punctually to the Son? It cannot be.

Uſe 3. Moreover, Hence we infer the validity and unqueſtionable ſucceſs of Chriſt's Interceſſion in Heaven for Believers. You read, Heb. 7. 25. That he ever lives to make Interceſſion; and Heb. 12. 24. That his Blood ſpeaks for good things for them. Now that his Blood ſhall obtain what it pleads in Heaven for, is undoubted, and that from the conſideration of this Covenant of Redemption. For here you ſee that the things he now asks of his Father, are the very ſame which his Father promiſed him, and covenanted to give him, before this World was: So that beſides the intereſt of the Perſon, the very equity of the matter ſpeaks its ſucceſs, and requires performance: Whatever he asks for us, is as due to him as the Wages of the Hireling, when the work is ended; if the work be done, and done faithfully, as the Father hath acknowledged it is, then the Reward is due, and due immediately: And no doubt but he ſhall receive it from the hands of a righteous God.

Uſe 4. Hence in like manner you may be informed of the conſiſtency of Grace with full ſatiſfaction to the Juſtice of God. The Apoſtle, 2 Tim. 1. 9. tells us, We are ſaved according to his own purpoſe and Grace, which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus, before the World began. That is, according to the gracious terms of this Covenant of Redemption; and yet you ſee notwithſtanding, how ſtrictly God ſtands upon Satisfaction from Chriſt: So then, Grace to us, and Satisfaction to Juſtice, are not ſo inconſiſtent as the Socinian Adverſaries would make them; what was Debt to Chriſt, is Grace to us: When you hear Men cry out, Here's Grace indeed! pay me all, and I will forgive you; remember, how all Mouths are ſtopt with that one Text, Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, and yet he adds, through the Redemption that is in Chriſt.

Uſe 5. Again, Hence judge of the Antiquity of the Love of God to Believers: what an antient Friend he hath been to us; who loved us, provided for us, and contrived all our Happineſs, before we were, yea, before the World was. We reap the fruits of this Covenant now, the Seed whereof was ſown from Eternity; yea, it is not only antient, but alſo moſt free: No excellencies of ours could engage the Love of God, for as yet we were not.

Uſe 6. Judge hence, How reaſonable it is that Believers ſhould embrace the hardeſt terms of Obedience unto Chriſt, who complied with ſuch hard Terms for their Salvation: They were hard and difficult Terms indeed, on which Chriſt received you from the Father's hand; it was, as you have heard, to pour out his Soul unto Death, or not to enjoy a Soul of you. Here you may ſuppoſe the Father to ſay, when driving this Bargain with Chriſt for you:

Father. My Son, here be a company of poor miſerable Souls, that have utterly undone themſelves, and now lye open to my Juſtice! Juſtice demands Satisfaction for them, or will ſatisfie it ſelf in the eternal ruin of them: What ſhall be done for theſe Souls? And thus Chriſt returns.

Son. O my Father, ſuch is my love to, and pity for them, that rather than they ſhall periſh eternally, I will be reſponſible for them as their Surety: bring in all thy Bills, that I may ſee what they owe thee. Lord, bring them in all, that there may be no after-reckonings with them; at my hand ſhalt thou require it. I will rather chuſe to ſuffer thy wrath, than they ſhould ſuffer it. Upon me, my Father, upon me be all their Debt.

Father. But, my Son, if thou undertake for them, thou muſt reckon to pay the laſt Mite, expect no Abatements; if I ſpare them, I will not ſpare thee.

Son. Content, Father, let it be ſo: Charge it all upon me, I am able to diſcharge it; and tho' it prove a kind of undoing to me, tho' it impoveriſh all my Riches, empty all my Treaſures, (for ſo indeed it did, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Tho' he were rich, yet for our ſakes became poor) yet I am content to undertake it. Bluſh ungreatful Believers, O let ſhame cover your Faces. Judge in your ſelves now, hath Chriſt deſerved that you ſhould ſtand with him for Trifles, that you ſhould ſhrink at a few petty Difficulties, and complain, this is hard, and that is harſh? O if you knew the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in this his wonderful Condeſcenſion for you, you could not do it. True indeed

Uſe 7. Laſtly, How greatly are we all concerned to make it ſure to our ſelves, that we are of this number, which the Father and the Son agreed for before the world was, that we were comprehended in Chriſt's bargain and compact with the Father?

Obj. Yea, but you will ſay, Who can know that? there were no Witneſſes to that Bargain.

Sol. Yes, We may know without aſcending into Heaven, or prying into unrevealed Secrets, that our names were in that Covenant, if, (1.) You are Believers indeed; for all ſuch the Father then gave to Chriſt, John 17. 8. The men that thou gaveſt me, (for of them he ſpake immediately before) they have believed that thou didſt ſend me. (2.) If you ſavingly know God in Jeſus Chriſt, ſuch were given him by the Father, John 17. 6. I have manifeſted thy Name unto the men thou gaveſt me: By this they are diſcriminated from the reſt, ver. 25. The World hath not known thee, but theſe have known, &c. (3.) If you are Men and Women of another World: John 17. 16. They are not of the World, as I am not of the World. May it be ſaid of you, as of dying Men, that you are not Men and Women for this World, that you are crucified and dead to it, Gal. 6. 14. that you are Strangers in it? Heb. 11. 13, 14. (4.) If you keep Chriſt's word; Joh. 17. 6. Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me; and they have kept thy word: By keeping his word, underſtand the receiving of the Word in its ſanctifying effects and influences into your Hearts, and your perſeverance in the profeſſion and practice of it to the end; John 17. 17. Sanctifie them through thy Truth, thy Word is Truth; Joh. 15. 7. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye ſhall ask what ye will. Bleſſed and happy is that Soul upon which theſe bleſſed Characters appear, which our Lord Jeſus hath laid ſo cloſe together within the compaſs of a few Verſes in this 17*th* of John; theſe are the Perſons the Father delivered unto Chriſt, and he accepted from the Father in this bleſſed Covenant.

SERMON IV.

Serm. 4. Opens the admirable Love of God in giving his own Son for us.

JOHN III. 16.

For God ſo loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son, &c.

YOU have heard of the gracious Purpoſe and Deſign of God to recover poor Sinners to himſelf by Jeſus Chriſt, and how this deſign of Love was laid and contrived in the Covenant of Redemption, whereof we laſt ſpake.

Now, according to the Terms of that Covenant, you ſhall hear from this Scripture, how that Deſign was by one degree advanced towards its accompliſhment, in God's actual giving or parting with his own Son for us: God ſo loveed the World, that he gave, &c.

The whole precedent Context is ſpent in diſcovering the Nature and Neceſſity of Regeneration; and the Neceſſity thereof is in this Text argued and inferred from the peculiar reſpect and eye God had upon Believers, in giving Chriſt for them; they only reaping all the ſpecial and ſaving Benefits and Advantages of that Gift: God ſo loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh.

In the Words are conſiderable.

1. The original Spring or Fountain of our beſt Mercies, the Love of God. The Love of God is either benevolent, beneficient, or complacential; His benevolent Love is nothing elſe but his deſire and purpoſe of ſaving and doing us good: So his Purpoſe and Grace to Jacob is called Love, Rom. 9. 13. Jacob have I loved; but this being before Jacob was, could conſiſt in nothing elſe but the gracious Purpoſe of God towards him. His beneficent Love is his actual doing good to the Perſons beloved, or the beſtowing the Effects of his Love upon us according to that purpoſe. His complacential Love is nothing elſe but that Delight and Satisfaction he finds in beholding the Fruits and Workings of that Grace in us which he firſt intended for us, and then actually collated or beſtowed on us. This Love of Benevolence is that which I have opened to you under the former head, God's Compact with Chriſt about us, or his deſign to ſave us on the Articles and Terms therein ſpecified.

The Love of Beneficence, is that which this Scripture ſpeaks of; out of this Fountain Chriſt flowed to us, and both run into that of Complacency; for therefore he both purpoſed, and actually beſtowed Chriſt on us, that he might everlaſtingly delight in beholding the Glory and Praiſe of all this reflected on himſelf by his redeemed Ones. This then is the Fountain of our Mercies.

2. The Mercy flowing out of this Fountain, and that is Chriſt: The Mercy, as he is emphatically called, Luke 1. 72. The Marrow, Kernel, and Subſtance of all other Mercies. He gave his only begotten Son: This was the Birth of that Love, the like whereunto it never brought forth before, therefore it's expreſt with a double Emphaſis in the Text, the one is that particle οὕτω ſo; he ſo loved the World: Here is a ſic without a ſicut: How did he love it? why he ſo loved it; but how much the Tongues of Angels cannot declare. And moreover, to encreaſe and aggravate the Mercy, he is ſtiled his only begotten Son: to have given a Son, had been wonderful; but to give an only begotten Son, that's Love unexpreſſible, unintelligible.

Hic igitur unigeniti nomen ἐμφατικον eſt ad commendandam in nos amoris divini vehementiam. Bulling in loc.

3. The Objects of this Love, or the Perſons into whoſe Lap and Arms the eternal Love delivered Chriſt, and that is the [World] this muſt reſpect the Elect of God in the World, ſuch as do or ſhall actually believe, as it is exegetically expreſt in the next breath, That whoſoever believes in him, ſhould not periſh? Thoſe whom he calls the World in that, he ſtiles Believers in this expreſſion; and the word [World] is put to ſignifie the Elect, becauſe they are ſcattered through all parts, and are among all Ranks of Men in the World; theſe are the Objects of this Love: It is not Angels, but Men that were ſo loved; he is called φιλάνθρωπος, a Lover, a Friend of Man, but never φιλάγγελος, or φιλίκτιστος, the Lover or Friend of Angels, or Creatures of another Species.

4. The manner in which this never-enough-celebrated Mercy flows to us from the Fountain of Divine Love, and that is moſt freely and ſpontaneouſly. He gave, not he ſold, or barely parted from, but gave. Nor yet doth the Father's giving imply Chriſt to be meerly paſſive; for as the Father is here ſaid to give him, ſo the Apoſtle tells us, Gal. 2. 20. That he gave himſelf, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me: The Father gave him out of good will to Men, and he as willingly beſtowed himſelf on that Service. Hence the Note is,

Doct. That the Gift of Chriſt is the higheſt and fulleſt Manifeſtation of the Love of God to Sinners, that ever was made from Eternity to them.

How is this Gift of God to Sinners ſignalized in that place of the Apoſtle, 1 Joh. 4. 10. Herein is Love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and ſent his Son to be the Propitiation for our Sins? Why doth the Apoſtle ſo magnifie this Gift, in ſaying herein is love, as if there were love in nothing elſe? May we not ſay, that to have a being, a being among the rational Creatures, therein is Love? To have carried our Life ſo many years like a Taper in the hand of Providence, thro' ſo many dangers, and not yet put out in obſcurity, therein is love? to have Food and Raiment convenient for us, Beds to lye in, Relations to comfort us, in all theſe is love? Yea, but if you ſpeak comparatively, in all theſe there is no love, to the Love expreſt in ſending or giving Chriſt for us: Theſe be great Mercies in themſelves, but ſet by this Mercy, they are all ſwallowed up, as the light of Candles when brought into the Sunſhine. No, no, herein is the Love, that God gave Chriſt for us. And it is remarkable that when the Apoſtle would ſhew us in Rom. 5. 8. what is the nobleſt Fruit that moſt commends to Men the Root of Divine Love that bears it, he ſhews us this very Fruit of it that I am now opening; But God (ſaith he) commendeth his Love towards us, in that while we were yet Sinners, Chriſt died for us: This is the very Flower of that Love.

Omnia diligit Deus quæ recit, & inter ea, magis creaturas rationales, & de illis ea amplius quæ ſunt membra unigeniti, & multo magis ipſum unigenitum. Aug. T. 9. in Johan.

The Method into which I will caſt this precious Point ſhall be this: (1.) To ſhew how Jeſus Chriſt was given by the Father. (2.) How that Gift is the fulleſt and richeſt Manifeſtation of the Love of God that was ever made to the World. (3.) And then draw forth the Uſes of it.

1. How was Jeſus Chriſt given by the Father, and what is implied therein.

You are not ſo to underſtand it, as tho' God parted with his intereſt and propriety in his Son, when he is ſaid to give him; he was as much his own as ever. When Men give, they tranſfer Propriety to another; but when God had given him, he was, I ſay, ſtill as much his own as ever: But this giving of Chriſt implies, (1.) His deſignation and appointment unto Death for us; for ſo you read that it was done according to the determinate Counſel of God, Acts 2. 23. Look as the Lamb under the Law was ſeparated from the Flock, and ſet apart for a Sacrifice; tho' it were ſtill living, yet it was intentionally and preparatively given, and conſecrated to the Lord: So Jeſus Chriſt was by the counſel and purpoſe of God, thus choſen, and ſet apart for his Service; and therefore in Iſa. 42. 1. God calls him his Elect, or choſen one.

(2.) His giving Chriſt, implies a parting with him, or ſetting him (as the French hath it) at ſome diſtance from himſelf for a time. There was a kind of parting betwixt the Father and the Son, when he came to tabernacle in our Fleſh: So he expreſſeth it, John 16. 28. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the World; again, I leave the World, and go to the Father. This diſtance that his Incarnation and Humiliation ſet him at, was properly as to his Humanity, which was really diſtant from the Glory into which it is now taken up, and in reſpect of manifeſtation of delight and love: The Lord ſeemed to carry it as one at diſtance from him. O this was it that ſo deeply pierced and wounded his Soul, as is evident from that complaint, Pſal. 22. 1, 2. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Why art thou ſo far from the voice of my roaring? O my God, I cry in the day-time, and thou heareſt not? &c.

(3.) God's giving of Chriſt, implies his delivering him into the hands of Juſtice to be puniſhed: even as condemned Perſons are by ſentence of Law, given or delivered into the hands of Executioners. So Acts 2. 23. Him being delivered by the determinate Counſel of God, ye have taken, and wicked hands have ſlain: And ſo he is ſaid, Rom. 8. 32. To deliver him up to death for us all. The Lord, when the time was come that Chriſt muſt ſuffer, did as it were, ſay, O all ye roaring Waves, of my incenſed Juſtice, now ſwell ſo high as Heaven, and go over his Soul and Body; ſink him to the bottom, let him go like Jonah his Type into the Belly of Hell, unto the roots of the Mountains. Come all ye raging Storms that I have reſerved for this day Wrath, beat upon him, beat him down, that he may not be able to look up, Pſal. 40. 12. Go Juſtice, put him upon the Rack, torment him in every part, till all his Bones be out of joint, and his Heart within him be melted as Wax in the midſt of his Bowels, Pſal. 22. 14. And ye Aſſembly of the wicked Jews and Gentiles, that have ſo long gaped for his Blood, now he is delivered into your Hands, you are permitted to execute your Malice to the full: I now looſe your Chain, and into your Hand and Power is he delivered.

(4.) God's giving of Chriſt, implies his Application of him, with all the Purchaſes of his Blood, and ſetling all this upon us as an Inheritance and Portion; John 6. 32, 33. My Father giveth you the true Bread from Heaven; for the Bread of God is he which cometh down from Heaven, and giveth Life unto the World. God hath given him as Bread to poor ſtarving Creatures, that by Faith they might eat and live. And ſo he told the Samaritaneſs, John 4. 10. If thou kneweſt the Gift of God, and who it is that ſaith unto thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldſt have asked of him, and he would have given thee living Waters. Bread and Water are the two neceſſaries for the ſupport of natural Life; God hath given Chriſt you ſee to be all that, and more to the ſpiritual Life.

2. How this Gift of Chriſt was the higheſt and fulleſt Manifeſtation of the Love of God, that ever the World ſaw: And this will be evidenced by the following Particulars.

God might have redeemed us in another way (for I ſuppoſe 'tis opus liberi conſilii) a free Diſpenſation; but God ſo loved the world, (i.e.) he took this way, that we might love Chriſt as well as believe in him. He might have redeemed us ſo much in another way, but he could not oblige us ſo much in another way. Manton on Jude, p. 108.

(1.) If you conſider how near and dear Jeſus Chriſt was to the Father: He was his Son, his only Son, ſaith the Text: The Son of his Love: The darling of his Soul: His other ſelf; yea one with himſelf: The expreſs Image of his Perſon: The brightneſs of his Father's Glory: In parting with him, he parted with his own Heart, with his very Bowels, as I may ſay. Yet to us a Son is given, Iſa. 9. 6. And ſuch a Son as he calls his dear Son, Col. 1. 13. A late Writer tells us, that he hath been informed, that in the Famine in Germany, a poor Family being ready to periſh with famine, the Husband made a motion to the Wife, to ſell one of the Children for Bread, to relieve themſelves and the reſt; the Wife at laſt conſents it ſhould be ſo, but then they began to think which of the four ſhould be ſold: and when the Eldeſt was named, they both refuſed to part with that, being their firſt-born, and the beginning of their ſtrength. Well, then they came to the Second, but could not yield that he ſhould be ſold, being the very Picture and lively Image of his Father. The Third was named, but that alſo was a Child that beſt reſembled the Mother. And when the Youngeſt was thought on, that was the Benjamin, the Child of their old Age; and ſo were content rather to periſh altogether in the Famine, than part with a Child for relief. And you know how tenderly Jacob took it, when his Joſeph and Benjamin were rent from him. What is a Child, but a piece of the Parent wrapt up in another Skin? And yet our deareſt Children are but as Strangers to us, in compariſon of the unſpeakable dearneſs that was betwixt the Father and Chriſt. ——— Now that he ſhould ever be content to part with a Son, and ſuch an only one, is ſuch a manifeſtation of Love, as will be admired to all Eternity! And then,

Mr. Wall, in his None but Chriſt.

(2.) Let it be conſidered, to what he gave him, even to death, and that of the Croſs; to be made a Curſe for us; to be the Scorn and Contempt of Men; to the moſt unparallell'd Sufferings that ever were inflicted or born by any. It melts our Bowels, it breaks our Heart, to behold our Children ſtriving in the pangs of Death: But the Lord beheld his Son ſtruggling under Agonies that never any felt before him. He ſaw him falling to the ground, groveling in the duſt, ſweating Blood; and amidſt thoſe Agonies turning himſelf to his Father, and with a heart-rending Cry beſeeching him, Father, if it be poſſible, let this Cup paſs, Luke 22. 42. To Wrath, to the Wrath of an Infinite God with-without mixture, to the very torments of Hell, was Chriſt delivered, and that by the Hand of his own Father. Sure then that Love muſt needs want a Name, which made the Father of Mercies deliver his own only Son to ſuch miſeries for us.

(3.) It is a ſpecial Conſideration to enhance the Love of God in giving Chriſt, that in giving him, he gave the richeſt Jewel in his Cabinet; a Mercy of the greateſt worth, and moſt ineſtimable value: Heaven it ſelf is not ſo valuable and precious as Chriſt is. He is the better half of Heaven. And ſo the Saints account him; Pſal. 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? Ten thouſand thouſand Worlds, (ſaith one) as many Worlds as Angels can number, and then as a new World of Angels can multiply, would not all be the bulk of a Ballance, to weigh Chriſt's Excellency, Love, and Sweetneſs. O what a fair one! what an only one! what an excellent, lovely, raviſhing one, is Chriſt! Put the Beauty of ten thouſand Paradiſes, like the Garden of Eden, into one; put all Trees, all Flowers, all Smells, all Colours, all Taſtes, all Joys, all Sweetneſs, all Lovelineſs in one: O what a fair and excellent thing would that be! And yet it ſhould be leſs to that fair and deareſt well-beloved Chriſt, than one drop of Rain to the whole Seas, Rivers, Lakes, and Fountains of ten thouſand Earths. Chriſt is Heaven's wonder, and Earth's wonder.

Chriſtus, & cœlum non patiuntur hyperbolem.

Now for God to beſtow the Mercy of Mercies, the moſt precious thing in Heaven or Earth, upon poor Sinners; and as great, as lovely, as excellent as his Son was, yet not to account him too good to beſtow upon us, what manner of Love is this?

(4.) Once more, let it be conſidered on whom the Lord beſtowed his Son: Upon Angels? No, but upon Men. Upon Man his Friend? No, but upon his Enemies. This is Love; and on this conſideration the Apoſtle lays a mighty weight, in Rom. 5. 8, 9, 10. But God (ſaith he) commendeth his Love towards us, in that while we were yet Sinners, Chriſt died for us.—— When we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son. Who would part with a Son for the ſake of his deareſt Friends? but God gave him to, and delivered him for Enemies. O Love unſpeakable!

(5.) Laſtly, Let us conſider how freely this Gift came from him. It was not wreſted out of his hand by our importunity; for we as little deſired as deſerved it: It was ſurprizing, preventing, eternal Love that delivered him to us: Not that we loved him, but he firſt loved us, 1 John 4. 19. Thus as when you weigh a thing, you caſt in Weight after Weight, till the Scales break; ſo doth God, one Conſideration upon another to overcome our Hearts, and make us admiringly to cry, what manner of Love is this? And thus I have ſhewed you what God's giving of Chriſt is, and what matchleſs Love is manifeſted in that incomparable Gift.

Next we ſhall apply this, in ſome practical Corollaries.

Corollary 1. Learn hence the exceeding Preciouſneſs of Souls, and at what a high rate God values them, that he will give his Son, his only Son out of his Boſom, as a Ranſom for them. Surely this ſpeaks their Preciouſneſs: God would not have parted with ſuch a Son for ſmall matters: All the World could not redeem them; Gold and Silver could not be their Ranſom. 1 Pet. 1. 18. So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, You were not redeemed with corruptible things, as Silver and Gold, but with the precious Blood of Chriſt. Such an eſteem God had for them, that rather than they ſhould periſh, Jeſus Chriſt ſhall be made a Man, yea, a Curſe for them. O then learn to put a due Value upon your own Souls: Don't ſell that cheap, which God hath paid ſo dear for: Remember what a Treaſure you carry about you: The Glory that you ſee in this World, is not equivalent in worth to it, Mat. 16. 26. What ſhall a Man give in exchange for his Soul?

Corollary 2. If God has given his own Son for the World, then it follows, that thoſe for whom God gave his own Son, may warrantably expect any other temporal Mercies from him. This is the Apoſtle's Inference, Rom. 8. 32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up to death for us all; how ſhall he not with him freely give us all things? And ſo 1 Cor. 3. 21, 22. All is yours, for ye are Chriſt's, (i. e.) They hold all other things in Chriſt, who is the capital, and moſt comprehenſive Mercy.

To make out the grounds of this comfortable Deduction, let theſe four things be pondered, and duly weighed in your thoughts. (1.) No other Mercy you need, or deſire, is, or can be ſo dear to God, as Jeſus Chriſt is: He never laid any other thing in his Boſom, as he did his Son. As for the World, and the Comforts of it, it is the duſt of his Feet, he values it not; as you ſee by his providential diſpoſals of it, having given it to the worſt of Men. All the Turkiſh Empire (ſaith Luther) as great and glorious as it is, is but a crumb which the Maſter of the Family throws to the Dogs. Think upon any other outward enjoyment that's valuable in your eyes, and there is not ſo much compare betwixt it and Chriſt, in the eſteem of God, as is betwixt your dear Children, and the lumber of your Houſes, in your eſteem. If then God have parted ſo freely from that which was infinitely dearer to him than theſe; how ſhall he deny theſe, when they may promote his Glory, and your Good? (2.) As Jeſus Chriſt was nearer the Heart of God than all theſe, ſo Chriſt is in himſelf much greater and more excellent than them all: Ten thouſand Worlds, and the Glory of them all, is but the Duſt of the Ballance, if weighed with Chriſt. Theſe things are but poor Creatures, but he is over all, God bleſſed for ever, Rom. 9. 5. They are common Gifts, but he is the Gift of God, John 4. 10. They are ordinary Mercies, but he is the Mercy, Luke 1. 72. As one Pearl or precious Stone is greater in value than ten thouſand common Pebbles. Now if God have ſo freely given the greater, how can you ſuppoſe he ſhould deny the leſſer Mercies? Will a Man give to another a large Inheritance, and ſtand with him for a Trifle? How can it be? (3.) There is no other Mercy you ſtand in want of, but you are entitled to it by the Gift of of Chriſt: It is (as to right) conveyed to you with Chriſt. So in the forecited 1 Cor. 3. 21, 22, 23. The World is yours, yea, all is yours; for ye are Chriſt's. So 2 Cor. 1. 20. For all the promiſes of God in Chriſt, in him they are yea, and in him Amen. With him he hath given you all things, εἰς ἀπολαῦσιν, 1 Tim. 6. 17. richly to enjoy. The word ſignifies rem aliquam cum lætitia percipere, to have the ſweet reliſh and comfort of an Enjoyment. So have we in all our Mercies, upon the account of our title to them in Chriſt. (4.) Laſtly, If God have given you this nearer, greater, and all-comprehending Mercy, when you were enemies to him, and alienated from him; it is not imaginable he ſhould now deny you any inferiour Mercy, when you are come into a ſtate of Reconciliation and Amity with him. So the Apoſtle reaſons, Rom. 5. 8, 9, 10. For if when we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; much more being reconciled, we ſhall be ſaved by his Life. And thus you have the ſecond Inference with its grounds.

Corollary 3. If the greateſt Love hath been manifeſted in giving Chriſt to the World, then it follows that the greateſt Evil and Wickedneſs is manifeſted in deſpiſing, ſlighting and rejecting Chriſt. 'Tis ſad to abuſe the love of God manifeſted in the loweſt gift of Providence; but to ſlight the richeſt diſcoveries of it, even in that peerleſs Gift, wherein God commends his Love in the moſt taking and aſtoniſhing manner, this is Sin with a witneſs. Bluſh, O Heavens, and be aſtoniſhed, O Earth; yea, be ye horribly afraid! No guilt like this. The moſt flagitious wretches among the barbarous Nations are innocent in compariſon of theſe. But are there any ſuch in the World? Dare any ſlight this gift of God? Indeed if Mens words might be taken, there are few or none that dare do ſo; but if their Lives and Practices may be believed, this, this is the Sin of the far greater part of the Chriſtianized World. Witneſs the lamentable ſtupidity and ſupineneſs; witneſs the contempt of the Goſpel; witneſs the Hatred and Perſecution of his Image, Laws and People. What is the Language of all theſe but a vile eſteem of Jeſus Chriſt?

And now let me a little expoſtulate with theſe ungrateful Souls that trample under foot the Son of God, that value not this Love that gave him forth. What is that Mercy which you ſo contemn and undervalue? Is it ſo vile and cheap a thing as your entertainment ſpeaks it to be? Is it indeed worth no more than this in your eyes? Surely you will not be long of that opinion. Will you be of that mind, think you, when Death and Judgment ſhall have throughly awakened you? O no, then a thouſand Worlds for a Chriſt! As it's ſtoried of our Crook-back'd Richard, when he loſt the Field, and was in great danger by his Enemies that preſſed upon him; O now (ſaid he) a Kingdom for a Horſe! Or think ye, that any beſide you in the World are of your mind? You are deceived if you think ſo. To them that believe he is precious through all the World, 1 Pet. 2. 7. And in the other World they are of a quite contrary mind. Could you but hear what is ſaid of him in Heaven, in what a dialect the Saved of the Lord do extol their Saviour; or could you but imagine the Self revenges, the Self-torments, which the Damned ſuffer for this their Folly, and what a value they would ſet upon one tender of Chriſt if it might but again be hoped for; you would ſee that ſuch as you are the only deſpiſers of Chriſt. Beſide, methinks it's aſtoniſhing that you ſhould deſpiſe a Mercy in which your own Souls are ſo dearly ſo deeply, ſo everlaſtingly concerned, as they are in this Gift of God. If it were but the Soul of another; nay, leſs, if but the Body of another; and yet leſs than that, if but another's Beaſt, whoſe Life you could preſerve, you are obliged to do it: But when it is thy ſelf, yea, the beſt part of thy ſelf; thine own invaluable Soul that thou ruineſt and deſtroyeſt hereby, O what a Monſter art thou to caſt it away thus! What! will you ſlight your own Souls? Care you not whether they be ſaved, or whether they be damned? Is it indeed an indifferent thing with you which way they fall at Death? Have you imagined a tolerable Hell? Is it eaſie to periſh? Are you not only turned God's Enemies, but your own too? O ſee what Monſters can Sin turn Men and Women into! O the ſtupifying, beſotting, intoxicating Power of Sin! But perhaps you think that all theſe are but uncertain Sounds, with which we alarm you. It may be thine own Heart will preach ſuch Doctirne as this to thee; Who can aſſure thee of the Reality of theſe things? What ſhouldſt thou trouble thy ſelf with an inviſible World, or be ſo much concerned for what thine Eyes never ſaw, nor didſt ever receive the Report from any that have ſeen them? Well, tho' we cannot now ſhew you theſe things, yet ſhortly they ſhall be ſhewn you; and your own Eyes ſhall behold them. You are convinced and ſatisfied that many other things are real which you never ſaw. But be aſſured, That If the Word ſpoken by Angels was ſtedfaſt, and every Tranſgreſſion and Diſobedience received a juſt recompence of Reward: How ſhall we eſcape if we neglect ſo great Salvation, which at firſt began to be ſpoken to us by the Lord, and was confirmed to us by them that heard him, God alſo bearing them witneſs? Heb. 2. 2, 3, 4. But if they be certain, yet they are not near: it will be a long time before they come. Poor Soul! how doſt thou cheat thy ſelf? It may be not by twenty parts ſo long a time as thy own Fancy draws it forth for thee; thou art not certain of the next moment.

Fie, fie (ſaith one) upon this condemned and fooliſh World, that will give ſo little for Chriſt and Salvation: O! if there were but a free Market proclaimed of Chriſt and Salvation in that Day, when the Trumpet of God ſhall awaken the Dead; how many Buyers would be there? God ſend me no more Happineſs but that which the blind World [to their eternal Woe] letteth ſlip through their fingers.

And ſuppoſe what thou imagineſt, What is Twenty or Forty Years when it is paſt? yea, what is a Thouſand Years to the vaſt Eternity? Go trifle away a few Days more, ſleep out a few Nights more, and then lye down in the Duſt; it will not be long e'er the Trump of God ſhall awaken thee, and thine Eyes ſhall behold Jeſus coming in the Clouds of Heaven, and then you will know the price of this Sin. O therefore, if there be any ſenſe of Eternity upon you, any pity or love for your ſelves in you; if you have any Concernments more than the Beaſts that periſh, deſpiſe not your own offered Mercies, ſlight not the richeſt Gift that ever was yet opened to the World; and a ſweeter cannot be opened to all Eternity.

Serm. 5. Treats of Chriſt's wonderful Perſon.

SERMON V.

JOHN I. 14.

And the Word was made Fleſh, and dwelt among us, &c.

YOU have heard the Covenant of Redemption opened. The work therein propounded by the Father, and conſented to by the Son, is ſuch as infinitely exceeds the power of any meer Creature to perform. He that undertakes to ſatisfie God by Obedience for Man's Sin, muſt himſelf be God; and he that performs ſuch a perfect Obedience, by doing and ſuffering all that the Law required in our rooms, muſt be Man. Theſe two Natures muſt be united in one Perſon, elſe there could not be a concourſe or co-operation of either Nature in his Mediatory Works. How theſe Natures are united in the wonderful Perſon of our Immanuel, is the firſt part of the great Myſtery of Godlineſs: A Subject ſtudied and adored by Angels! And the Myſtery thereof is wrapp'd up in this Text. Wherein we have,

The Incarnation is the Miracle of Miracles, a Teſtimony againſt Unbelievers, Iſa. 7. 14. and a Document to Believers. None can declare his Generation, Iſa. 53. 8. Neither can any declare his Incarnation, his Name is Secret, Judg. 13. 18. Wonderful, Iſa. 9. 6. A Name that no Man knoweth, viz. perfectly, but himſelf. The Trinity is the greateſt, the Incarnation the next Myſtery. Norton's Orth. Evang. p. 38.

Firſt, The Incarnation of the Son of God plainly aſſerted.

Secondly, That Aſſertion ſtrongly confirmed.

(1.) In the Aſſertion we have three Parts.

1. The Perſon aſſuming, ὁ λόγος, the Word, (i. e.) the ſecond Perſon, or Subſiſtent in the moſt glorious Godhead, call'd the Word, either becauſe he is the ſcope and principal matter, both of the prophetical and promiſſory word; or becauſe he expounds and reveals the Mind and Will of God to Men, as verſe 18. The only-begotten Son, which is in the boſom of the Father, he hath declared or expounded him.

Verbum Subſtantiale, non prolatum. Fulgent. lib. 1.

2. The Nature aſſumed, σάρξ, Fleſh, (i. e.) the intire Human Nature, conſiſting of a true Human Soul and Body. For ſo this word σάρξ in Rom. 3. 20. and the Hebrew word בָּשָׂר which anſwers to it, by a uſual Metonymy of a part for the whole is uſed, Gen. 6. 12. And the word Fleſh is rather uſed here, than Man, on purpoſe to aggravate the admirable Condeſcenſion and Abaſement of Chriſt: there being more of vileneſs, weakneſs, and oppoſition to Spirit in this word than in that, as is pertinently noted by ſome. Hence the whole Nature is denominated by that part, and called Fleſh.

3. The Aſſumption it ſelf, ἐγένετο, he was made, not fuit, he was, (as Socinus would render, in deſign to overthrow the Exiſtence of Chriſt's glorified Body now in Heaven) but factus eſt, it was made, (i. e.) he took or aſſumed the true Human Nature, (called Fleſh, for the Reaſon before rendered) into the unity of his Divine Perſon, with all its integral Parts, and eſſential Properties; and ſo was made, or became a true and real Man, by that Aſſumption. The Apoſtle ſpeaking of the ſame act, Heb. 2. 16. uſes another word, He took on him, ἐπιλαμβάνεται, fitly rendred he took on him, or he aſſumed: Which aſſuming, tho' inchoative, it was the Work of the whole Trinity, God the Father, in the Son, by the Spirit forming or creating that Nature; as if three Siſters ſhould make a Garment betwixt them, which only one of them wears: yet terminative it was the act of the Son only; 'twas he only that was made Fleſh. And when 'tis ſaid, he was made Fleſh, miſconceive not, as if there was a mutation of the Godhead into Fleſh, for this was performed, * not by changing what he was, but by aſſuming what he was not, as Auguſtine well expreſſeth it. As when the Scripture in a like Expreſſion ſaith, He was made Sin, 2 Cor. 5. 21. and made a Curſe, Gal. 3. 13. the meaning is not, that he was turned into Sin, or into a Curſe: no more may we think here the Godhead was turned into Fleſh, and loſt its own Being and Nature, becauſe it's ſaid he was made Fleſh. This is the ſum of the Aſſertion.

Voluit Evangeliſta uti potius carnis, quam hominis nomine; ut magis appareret, quo ſe divinum verbum abjecerit, cum caro factum eſt. Nam & vilitas major in carne apparet, & oppoſitio major cum ſpiritu. Maccov. loc. cum.

* Non mutando quod erat, ſed aſſumendo quod non erat. Aug.

(2.) This Aſſertion [that the Word was made Fleſh] is ſtrongly confirmed. He dwelt among us, and we ſaw his Glory. This was no Phantaſm, but a moſt real and indubitable thing. For ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ὑμῖν, he pitcht his Tent, or tabernacled with us. And we are eye-witneſſes of it. Parallel to that, 1 John 1. 1, 2, 3. This which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of Life, &c. declare we unto you. Hence note, Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt did really aſſume the true and perfect nature of Man, into a perſonal union with his Divine Nature; and ſtill remains true God, and true Man, in one Perſon for ever.

The Propoſition contains one of the deepeſt Myſteries in Godlineſs, 1 Tim. 3. 16. A myſtery by which Apprehenſion is dazled, Invention aſtoniſhed, and all Expreſſion ſwallowed up. If ever the Tongues of Angels were deſirable to explicate any word of God, they are ſo here. Great is the intereſt of words in this Doctrine. We walk upon the brink of Danger. The leaſt tread awry may ingulph us in the Boggs of Error. Arius would have been content if the Council of Nice Incarnatio eſt opus Dei, quo Filius Dei ſecundum œconomiam divini conſilii patris, & ſui, & ſpiritus ſancti ſeſe humilians, veram, integram, perfectam, ſanctamque carnem ex Virgine Mariæ, ſpiritus ſancti operatione, & efficacia, in unitate perſonæ ſibi aſſumpſit; ita ut caro illa nullam propriam ſubſiſtentiam extra Dei Filium habeat, ſed ab illo, & in eo vere ſuſtentetur & geſtetur: duabus perfectis naturis inter ſe ἀτρέπτως καὶ ἀσυγχύτως, ἀδιαιρέτως καὶ ἀχωρίστως unitis; unde conſtituitur perſona Chriſti θεανθρώπων, &c. Synopſis purioris Theologiæ, p. 295.

would but have gratified him in a Letter, ὁμοούσιος, and ὁμοιούσιος. The Neſtorians alſo deſired but a Letter, Θεοδόχος, θεοτόκος. Theſe ſeemed but ſmall and modeſt Requeſts, but if granted, had proved no ſmall prejudice to Jeſus Chriſt and his Truths. I deſire therefore the Reader would with greateſt attention of mind apply himſelf to theſe Truths. 'Tis a Doctrine hard to underſtand, and dangerous to miſtake. I am really of his mind that ſaid,* It's better not touch the bottom, than not keep within the Circle; melius eſt neſcire centrum, quam non tenere circulum. He did aſſume a true humane Body; that is plainly aſſerted, Phil. 2. 7, 8, &c. Heb. 2. 14, 16. In one place it's call'd taking on him the Seed of Abraham, and in the Text Fleſh. He did alſo aſſume a true humane Soul, that's undeniable by its operations, paſſions, and expiration at laſt, Matth. 26. 38. and 27. 50. And that both theſe Natures make but one Perſon, is as evident from Rom. 1. 3, 4. Jeſus Chriſt was made of the ſeed of David according to the Fleſh, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of Holineſs, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. So Rom. 9. 5. Of whom as concerning the Fleſh, Chriſt came, who is over all, God bleſſed for ever, Amen. But that you may have a ſound and clear underſtanding of this Myſtery, I will, (1.) open the Nature; (2.) the Effects; and (3.) the Reaſons or Ends of this wonderful Union.

* Reaſon (ſaith one) can never ſhew it ſelf more reaſonable than in ceaſing to reaſon about things which are above Reaſon. Quæ ſunt occulta, non ſunt ſcrutanda. Quæ manifeſta, non negligenda. Proſper. Nomina concreta non multiplicantur, niſi multiplicentur ſuppoſita, Unum autem cum tantum ſit in Chriſto ſuppoſitum; Unus tantum ſit Chriſtus, neceſſe eſt. Trelcat. p. 67.

The Nature of the Hypoſtatical Union opened.

Firſt; The Nature of this Union. There be three illuſtrious and dazling Unions in Scripture: That of three Perſons in one God, Eſſentially. That of two diſtinct Natures, and Perſons; by one Spirit, Myſtically: And this of two diſtinct Natures in one Perſon, Hypoſtatically. This is my task to open at this time. And for the more diſtinct and perſpicuous management thereof, I ſhall ſpeak to it both Negatively and Poſitively.

Non συνουσιωδῶς.

1. Negatively. Think not when Chriſt aſſumed our Nature that it was united Conſubſtantially, ſo as the three Perſons in the Godhead are united among themſelves. They all have but one in the ſame Nature and Will; but in Chriſt are two diſtinct Natures and Wills, tho' but one Perſon.

Non φυσικῶς.

2. Nor yet that they are united Phyſically, as Soul and Body are united in one Perſon. For Death actually diſſolves that, but this is indiſſoluble. So that when his Soul was expir'd, and his Body interred, both Soul and Body were ſtill united to the ſecond Perſon as much as ever.

Non μυστικῶς.

3. Nor yet is it ſuch a myſtical Union, as is between Chriſt and Believers. Indeed that is a glorious Union; but tho' Believers are ſaid to be in Chriſt, and Chriſt in them, yet they are not one Perſon with him. They are not Chriſted into Chriſt, or Godded into God, as blaſphemous Familiſts ſpeak.

2*dly*, Poſitively. But this Aſſumption of which I ſpeak, is that whereby the Second Perſon in the Godhead did take the Humane Nature into a Perſonal Union with himſelf, by virtue whereof the Manhood ſubſiſts in the Second Perſon, yet without Confuſion, both making but one Perſon, Θεάνθρωπος, or Immanuel, God with us.

ἕνωσις ἐστὶν καθ' ὑπόστασιν, non quidam ἕτερον ἐξ ἑτέρου, aliud ex aliis, ſed αὐταὶ αἱ φύσεις; duæ ipſæ naturæ, in perſonam unitæ, Damaſc.

So that tho' we truly aſcribe a twofold Nature to Chriſt, yet not a double Perſon. For the Human Nature of Chriſt never ſubſiſted ſeparately and diſtinctly, by any perſonal ſubſiſtence of its own, as it doth in all other Men, but from the firſt Moment of conception ſubſiſted in union with the Second Perſon.

To explicate this Myſtery more particularly, let it be conſidered.

Firſt, The Human Nature was united to the Second Perſon miraculouſly and extraordinarily, being ſupernaturally fram'd in the Womb of the Virgin, by the over-ſhadowing power of the Higheſt, Luke 1. 34, 35. By reaſon whereof it may truly and properly be ſaid to be the fruit of the Womb, not of the Loins of Man, but not by Man. And this was neceſſary to exempt the aſſumed Nature from the ſtain and pollution of Adam's Sin, which it wholly eſcaped; in as much as he received it not, as all others do, in the way of ordinary Generation, wherein Original Sin is propagated: But this being extraordinarily produced, was a moſt pure and holy thing, Luke 1. 35. And indeed this perfect ſhining Holineſs in which it was produced was abſolutely neceſſary, both in order to its union with the Divine Perſon, and the deſign of that Union; which was both to ſatisfie for, and to ſanctifie us. The two Natures could not be conjoined in the Perſon of Chriſt, had there been the leaſt taint of Sin upon the Humane Nature. For God can have no Fellowſhip with Sin, much leſs be united to it. Or ſuppoſing ſuch a conjunction with our ſinful Nature, yet he being a Sinner himſelf, could never ſatisfie for the Sins of others; nor could an unholy thing ever make us holy. Such a High-Prieſt therefore became us as is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from Sinners, Heb. 7. 26. And ſuch an one muſt he needs be, whom the Holy Ghoſt produces in ſuch a peculiar way, τὸ ἅγιον, that holy thing.

Humana natura non eſt ἰδιοσύστατος, per ſe ſubſiſtens, neque prius humana natura fuit, & poſtea aſſumpta fuit, ſed ἅμα σάρξ ἅμα θεοῦ λόγου σάρξ, atq; in perſona τοῦ λόγου ſubſiſtit. Et ſic una eſt Chriſti perſona, in qua quidem eſt ἄλλο καὶ ἄλλο, aliud atq; aliud, ſed non ἄλλος καὶ ἄλλος, alius atq; alius. Ut Greg. Naz. apud Theodoret. Dialog. 2.

Secondly, As it was produced miraculouſly, ſo it was aſſumed integrally; that is to ſay, Chriſt took a compleat and perfect Humane Soul and Body, with all and every Faculty and Member pertaining to it And this was neceſſary (as both Auſtin and Fulgentius have well obſerved) that hereby he might heal the whole Nature of that Leproſie of Sin, which had ſeiz'd and infected every Member and Faculty. Πάντα ἀνέλαβεν ἵνα πάντα ἁγιάζῃ. He aſſumed all, to ſanctifie all; as Damaſcen expreſſeth it. He deſign'd a perfect recovery by ſanctifying us wholly in Soul, Body, and Spirit; and therefore aſſumed the whole in order to it.

Aug. de Civit. Dei, lib. 10. cap. 27. p. 586. Fulgent. ad Tra. l. 1. p. 251. Damaſc. lib. 3. cap. 20.

Thirdly, He aſſumed our Nature as with all its integral parts, ſo with all its ſinleſs Infirmities. And therefore it's ſaid of him, Heb. 2. 17. That it behoved him, κατὰ πάντα ὁμοιωθῆναι, according to all things (that is, all things natural, not formally ſinful, as it's limited by the ſame Apoſtle, Heb. 4. 15.) to be made like unto his Brethren. But here our Divines do carefully diſtinguiſh Infirmities into Perſonal and Natural. Perſonal Infirmities are ſuch as befal particular Perſons, from particular Cauſes, ſuch as Dumbneſs, Blindneſs, Lameneſs, Leproſies, Monſtroſities, and other Deformities. Theſe it was no way neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould, nor did he at all aſſume; but the natural ones, ſuch as Hunger, Thirſt, Wearineſs, Sweating, Bleeding, Mortality, &c. Which tho' they are not in themſelves formally and intrinſecally ſinful; yet are they the effects and conſequents of Sin. They are ſo many marks, that Sin hath left of it ſelf upon our Natures. And on that account Chriſt is ſaid to be ſent in the likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, Rom. 8. 3. Wherein the gracious condeſcenſion of Chriſt for us is marvelouſly ſignalized, that he would not aſſume our innocent Nature, as it was in Adam before the fall, while it ſtood in all its primitive glory and perfection; but after Sin had quite defaced, ruined, and ſpoil'd it.

Nec ulla peccati contagio naturam illam humanam Chriſti inficere potuit, cujus ſubſtantiam in ſe alioqui corruptam originarie, ineffabilis ſpiritus ſancti operatio ab omni prorſus macula ſanctificavit & purgavit pleniſſime; & ita fieri debuit, ut pote in qua purgatio peccatorum noſtrorum facienda erat. Trelc. Inſtit. p. 58.

Fourthly, The Humane Nature is ſo united with the Divine, as that each Nature ſtill retains its own eſſential properties diſtinct. And this Diſtinction is not, nor can be loſt by that Union. So that the two Underſtandings, Wills, Powers, &c. viz. the Divine and Humane, are not confounded; but a line of Diſtinction runs betwixt them ſtill in this wonderful Perſon. It was the Hereſie of the Eutychians condemned by the Council of Chalcedon, to affirm that there was no diſtinction betwixt the two Natures in Chriſt. Againſt whom that Council determined, that they were united ἀσυγχύτως, with out any Immutation, or Confuſion.

Neque tamen humanitas hac ratione exaltata, aut in deitatem mutata, aut cum eâdem eſt confuſa; quaſi ulliuſque deitati peculiaris exiſtet, ſive qualitatis, ſive proprietatis particeps facta: Sed ab eâdem diſtincta manſit, uſque manetque conſtans nempè finito corpore conſimiliq; quoad ſubſtantiam & facultates eſſentiales hominum aliorum omnium anima. Bradſhaw de Juſtific. p. 79.

Fifthly, The Union of the two Natures in Chriſt, is an inſeparable Union; ſo that from the firſt moment thereof, there never was, nor to Eternity ſhall be, any ſeparation of them.

Doubt. If you ask how the Union remained betwixt them, when Chriſt's Humane Soul and Body were ſeparated from each other upon the Croſs? Is not Death the diſſolution of Union betwixt Soul and Body?

Reſolution. True, The natural Union betwixt his Soul and Body was diſſolved by Death for a time, but this Hypoſtatical Union remained even then as intire and firm as ever. For tho' this Soul and Body were divided from each other, yet neither of them from the Divine Nature. Divines aſſiſt our conception of this Myſtery by an apt Illuſtration. A man that holds in his hand a Sword ſheathed, when he pleaſeth, draws forth the Sword; but ſtill holds that in one hand, and the ſheath in the other, and then ſheaths it again, ſtill holding it in his hand: So when Chriſt died, his Soul and Body retained their Union with the Divine Nature, tho' not (during that ſpace) one with another.

Tolletus rem ſic eleganter illuſtrat.

Quemadmodum homo habens enſem in vagina, quando vult exerit enſem, & tamen unà manu vaginam tenet, & altera enſem; ſic divina perſona per mortem, animam à corpore veluti enſem a vagina ſeparavit, utramque tamen partem ſibi habuit unitam: Per reſurrectionem autem animam corpori copulavit, quaſi enſem reponens in vagina.

And thus you are to form and regulate your conceptions of this great Myſtery. Some Adumbrations and imperfect Similitudes of it may be found in Nature. Among which ſome * commend that Union which the Soul and Body have with each other; they are of different natures, yet both make one individual Man. Others † find fault with this, becauſe both theſe united make but one compleat Human Nature; whereas in Chriſt's Perſon are two Natures: and commend to us a more perfect Emblem, viz. that of the Cyens and the Tree or Stock, which have two Natures, yet make but one Tree. But then we muſt remember that the Cyens wants a Root of its own, which is an Integral part, but Chriſt aſſumed our Nature integrally. This defect is by others * ſupplied in the Miſcletoe and the Oak, which have different Natures; and the Miſcletoe ſubſiſts in Union with the Oak, ſtill retaining the difference of Nature; and tho' making but one Tree, yet bears different Fruits. And ſo much to the firſt thing, namely the Nature of this Union.

The reſults of the Hypoſtatical Union.

Secondly, For the effects or immediate reſults of this marvellous Union, let theſe three be well conſidered.

1. The two Natures being thus united in the Perſon of the Mediator, by vertue thereof the properties of each Nature are attributed and do truly agree to the whole Perſon: ſo that it's proper to ſay, the Lord of Glory was Crucified, 1 Cor. 2. 8. And the Blood of God redeemed the Church, Acts 20. 28. That Chriſt was both in Heaven, and in Earth at the ſame time, Joh. 3. 13.

Yet we do not believe that one Nature doth transfuſe or impart its Properties to the other, or that it is proper to ſay the Divine Nature ſuffered, bled or died; or the Humane is Omniſcient, Omnipotent, Omnipreſent: But that the Properties of both Natures are ſo aſcribed to the Perſon, that it is proper to affirm any of them of him in the concrete, tho' not abſtractly. The right underſtanding of this would greatly aſſiſt in teaching the true Senſe of the forenamed, and many other dark Paſſages in the Scriptures.

Proprietates utriuſq; naturæ toti perſonæ, in concreto verè competunt. Filius hominis, qui eſt perſona duabus conſtans naturis, eſt omnipræſens, æternus, adorabilis, adorandus, nempe ſecundum naturam divinam, cujus hæc ſunt ἰδιώματα; adoramus deitatem incarnatam, ipſa autem deitas eſt proprium & abſolutum Divinæ adorationis objectum.

2. Another fruit of this Hypoſtatical Union, is the ſingular advancement of the Human Nature in Chriſt far beyond and above what it is capable of in any other Perſon; it being hereby repleniſh'd and fill'd with an unparallell'd meaſure of Divine Graces and Excellencies; in which reſpect he is ſaid to be anointed above or before his fellows, Natura humana ita aſſumpta, ſupra creaturam univerſam aſſumptionis hujus virtute; mirum in modum eſt exaltata, Heb. 1. 4, 5, 6. Guil. Bradſhaw, de juſtificatione, p. 79.

Pſal. 45. 8. and ſo becomes the Object of Adoration and Divine Worſhip, Acts 7. 59. This the Socinians oppugn with this Argument. He that is worſhipped with a Divine Worſhip, as he is Mediator, is not ſo worſhipped as God: but Chriſt is worſhipped as Mediator. But we ſay, that to be worſhipped as Mediator, and as God, are not oppoſite, but the one is neceſſarily included in the other; and therein is farther included the ratio formalis ſub qua of that Divine Religious Worſhip.

3. Hence in the laſt place, follows, as another excellent fruit of this Union, The concourſe and co-operation of each Nature to his Mediatory Works: For in them he acts according to both Natures. The Human Nature doing what is Human, viz. Suffering, Sweating, Bleeding, Dying: and his Divine Nature ſtamping all theſe with infinite value; and ſo both ſweetly concur unto one glorious work and deſign of Mediation, Papiſts generally deny that he performs any of this Mediatory works as God, but only as Man; but how boldly do they therein contradict theſe plain Scriptures? See 2 Cor. 5. 19. Heb. 9. 14, 15. And ſo much as to the ſecond thing propounded, viz. the fruits of this Union.

The Reaſons of the Hypoſtatical Union.

Thirdly, The laſt thing to be opened is the grounds and reaſons of this Aſſumption. And we may ſay touching that, (1.) That the Human Nature was not aſſumed to any intrinſecal perfection of the Godhead, not to make that Human Nature it ſelf perfect. The Divine did not aſſume the Human Nature neceſſarily, but voluntarily; not out of indigence, but bounty; not becauſe it was to be perfected by it, but to perfect it, by cauſing it to lye as a Pipe to the infinite all-filling Fountain of Grace and Glory, of which it is the great Receptacle. (2.) And ſo conſequently to qualifie and prepare him for a full diſcharge of his Mediatorſhip in the Offices of our Prophet, Prieſt, and King. Had he not this double Nature in the unity of his Perſon, he could not have been our Prophet: for as God he knows the Mind and Will of God, Joh. 1. 18. & 3. 13. and as Man he is fitted to impart it ſuitably to us, Deut. 18. 15, 16, 17, 18. compared with Acts 3. 22.

As Prieſt, had he not been Man, he could have ſhed no Blood; and if not God, it had been no adequate value for us, Heb. 2. 17. Acts 20. 28.

As King, had he not been Man, he had been an Heterogenous, and ſo no fit Head for us. And if not God, he could neither rule nor defend his Body the Church.

In naturâ humanâ ſatisfecit, ſed pretium, dignitas, efficacia & applicatio illius ſatisfactionis a natura divina prævenit. Ameſ. Bell. Enerv. lib. 5.

Theſe then were the deſigns and ends of that aſſumption.

Let all Chriſtians rightly inform their Minds in this Truth of ſo great concernment in Religion; and hold it faſt againſt all ſubtle Adverſaries that would wreſt it from them. The Learned Hooker obſerves, that the dividing of Chriſt's Perſon, which is but one, and the confounding of his Natures, which are two, hath been the occaſion of thoſe Errors which have ſo greatly diſturbed the Peace of the Church. The Arians deny'd his Deity, levelling him with other meer Men. The Apollinarians maimed his Humanity. The Sabellians affirmed that the Father and Holy Ghoſt were incarnated, as well as the Son; and were forced upon that Abſurdity by another Error, viz. denying three diſtinct Perſons in the Godhead, and affirming they were but three Names. The Eutychians confounded both Natures in Chriſt, denying any diſtinction of them. The Seleuſians affirmed that he uncloathed himſelf of his Humanity when he aſcended, and hath no Human Body in Heaven. The Neſtorians ſo rent the two Natures of Chriſt aſunder, as to make two diſtinct Perſons of them.

But ye (Beloved) have not ſo learned Chriſt. Ye know he is, (1.) True and very God. (2.) True and very Man: that, (3.) Theſe two Natures make but one Perſon, being united inſeparable. (4.) That they are not confounded or ſwallowed up one in another, but remain ſtill diſtinct in the Perſon of Chriſt. Hold ye the form of ſound words, which cannot be condemned. Great things hang upon all theſe Truths. O ſuffer not a ſtone to be looſed out of the Foundation.

Ἀλληθὸς Θεὸς τέλειος ἄνθρωπος, ἀδιαιρέτως, ἀσυγχύτως, &c.

Uſe 2. Adore the Love of the Father, and Son, who bid ſo high for your Soul; and at this rate were contented you ſhould be recovered.

1. The Love of the Father is herein admirably conſpicuous, who ſo vehemently willed our Salvation, that he is content to degrade the Darling of his Soul to ſo vile and contemptible a State, which was upon the matter an undoing to him, in point of Reputation; as the Apoſtle intimates, Phil. 2. 7. If two Perſons be at variance, and the Superior, who alſo is the wronged Perſon, begin to ſtoop firſt, and ſay, you have deeply wronged me, yea, your Blood is not able to repair the wrongs you have done me; however ſuch is my Love to you, and willingneſs to be at peace with you, that I will part with what is moſt Dear to me in all the World, for peace-ſake; yea, tho' I ſtoop below my ſelf, and ſeems as it were to forget my own Relation and Endearments to my own Son, I will not ſuffer ſuch a breach betwixt me and you. Joh. 3. 16. God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son.

2. And how aſtoniſhing is the Love of Chriſt! that would make ſuch a ſtoop as this to exalt us! O 'tis raviſhing to think he ſhould paſs by a more excellent and noble ſpecies of Creatures, refuſing the Angelical Nature, Heb. 2. 16. to take Fleſh; and not to † ſolace and diſpart himſelf in it neither, not to experience ſenſitive Pleaſures in the Body: for as he needed them not, being at the Fountain-head of the higheſt Joys, ſo it was not at all in his deſign, but the very contrary, even to make himſelf a Subject capable of Sorrows, Wounds and Tears. It was, as the Apoſtle elegantly expreſſeth it, in Heb. 2. 9. ὅπως ὑπὲρ παντὸς γεύσηται θανάτου; that he might ſenſibly taſte what reliſh Death hath, and what bitterneſs is in thoſe Pangs and Agonies. Now O that you would get your Hearts ſuitably impreſt and affected with theſe high Expreſſures of the Love both of the Father and Son! How is the Courage of ſome Noble Romans celebrated in Hiſtory, for the brave Adventures they made for the Common-wealth! But they could never ſtoop as Chriſt did, being ſo infinitely below him in perſonal Dignity.

Nullus jacentem ſuſcitat, niſi inflectione ſui. Nierem.

Uſe 3. And here the Infinite Wiſdom hath alſo left a famous and everlaſting mark of it ſelf; which invites, yea, even chains the eyes of Angels and Men to it ſelf. Had there been a general Council of Angels, to adviſe upon a way of recovering poor Sinners, they would all have been at an everlaſting demurr and loſs about it. It could not have entred their thoughts, (tho' they are Intelligencies, and moſt ſagacious Creatures) that every Mercy, Pardon and Grace ſhould find ſuch a way as this to iſſue forth from the Heart of God to the Hearts of Sinners. O how wiſely is the method of our Recovery laid! So that Chriſt may well be call'd ϑεοῦ δύναμις, ϗ σοφία, 1 Cor. 1. 24. the Power and Wiſdom of God; for as much as in him the Divine Wiſdom is more glorified than in all the other Works of God, upon which he hath impreſt it. Hence it is that ſome of the Schoolmen affirm (tho' I confeſs my ſelf unſatisfied with it) that the Incarnation of Chriſt was in it ſelf ſo glorious a Demonſtration of God's Wiſdom and Power, and thereupon ſo deſirable in it ſelf, that tho' Man had not ſinned, yet Chriſt would have been made Man.

Non eſt ingenii vel humani, vel angelici etiam, ejuſmodi aliquem inventum iri; aut excogitatum ſperare. Unde ſi peccator maledictionis divinæ peccatis ſuis debitæ, ad ejuſmodi inveſtigandum ſibi ipſi relinqueretur; quo magis in negotio iſto deſudaret, eo ſe magis in infinitum horroris & deſperationis barathrum præcipitem daret. Bradſhaw de Juſtif. p. 74.

Uſe 4. Hence alſo we inferr the incomparable ſweetneſs of the Chriſtian Religion, that ſhews poor Sinners ſuch a fair Foundation to reſt their trembling Conſciences upon. While poor diſtreſſed Souls look to themſelves, they are perpetually puzled. That's the cry of diſtreſſed natural Conſcience, Mic. 6. 6. Wherewith ſhall I come before the Lord? the Hebrew is בַּמָּה אֲקַדֵּם יְהוָה how ſhall I prevent or anticipate the Lord? and ſo Montanus renders it, in quo præoccupabo Dominum? Conſcience ſees God arming himſelf with Wrath to avenge himſelf for Sin; cries out, O how ſhall I prevent him! If he would accept the fruit of my Body (thoſe dear pledges of Nature) for the Sin of my Soul, he ſhould have them. But now we ſee God coming down in Fleſh, and ſo intimately uniting our Fleſh to himſelf, that it hath no proper ſubſiſtance of its own, but is united with the Divine Perſon; hence it's eaſie to imagine what worth and value muſt be in that Blood, and how eternal Love, ſpringing forth triumphantly from it, flouriſhes into Pardon, Grace, and Peace. Here is a way in which the Sinner may ſee Juſtice and Mercy kiſſing each other, and the latter exerciſed freely without prejudice to the former. All others Conſciences through the World lye either in a deep ſleep in the Devil's Arms, or elſe are rolling (Sea-ſick) upon the Waves of their own Fears and diſmal Preſages. O happy are they that have dropt Anchor on this Ground, and not only know they have Peace, but why they have it!

Uſe 5. Of how great concernment is it, that Chriſt ſhould have Union with our particular Perſons, as well as with our common Nature? For by this Union with our Nature alone never any Man was or can be ſaved. Yea, let me add, that this Union with your Natures is utterly in vain to you, and will do you no good, except he have Union with your Perſons by Faith alſo. It is indeed infinite Mercy that God is come ſo near you, as to dwell in your Fleſh; and that he hath fitted ſuch an excellent Method to ſave poor Sinners in. And hath he done all this? Is he indeed come home, even to your own doors, to ſeek Peace? Doth he vail his unſupportable Glory under Fleſh, that he might treat thee more familiarly? And yet do you refuſe him, and ſhut your hearts againſt him? then hear one word, and let thine ears tingle at the ſound of it; thy Sin is hereby aggravated beyond the Sin of Devils, who never ſinn'd againſt a Mediator in their own Nature; who never deſpiſed, or refuſed, becauſe indeed they were never offered terms of Mercy, as you are.

And I doubt not but the Devils themſelves, who now tempt you to reject, will to all Eternity upbraid your Folly for rejecting this great Salvation, which in this excellent way is brought down, even to your own doors.

Uſe 6. If Jeſus Chriſt has aſſumed our Nature, Then he is ſenſibly toucht with the Infirmities that attend it, and ſo hath pity and compaſſion for us under all our Burdens. And indeed this was one end of his aſſuming it, that he might be able to have compaſſion on us, as you read, Heb. 2. 17, 18. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his Brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful High-prieſt in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the Sins of the People. For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. O What a comfort is this to us, that he who is our High-prieſt in Heaven, hath our Nature on him, to enable him to take compaſſion on us!

Uſe 7. Hence we ſee, To what a height God intends to build up the Happineſs of Man, in that he hath laid the Foundation thereof ſo deep, in the incarnating of his own Son.

They that intend to build high, uſe to lay the Foundation low. The Happineſs and Glory of our Bodies, as well as Souls, is founded in Chriſt's taking our Fleſh upon him. For therein, as in a Model or Pattern, God intended to ſhew what in time he reſolves to make of our Bodies; for he will μετασχηματίζειν, transform our vile Bodies, and make them one day conformable to the glorious Body of Jeſus Chriſt, Phil. 3. 21. This Fleſh was therefore aſſumed by Chriſt, that in it might be ſhewn, as in a Pattern, how God intends to honour and exalt it. And indeed a greater Honour cannot be done to the Nature of Man, than what is already done it, by this Grace of Union. Nor are our Perſons capable of higher Glory, than what conſiſts in their conformity to this glorious Head. Indeed the Fleſh of Chriſt will ever have a diſtinct Glory from ours in Heaven, by reaſon of this Union; for being the Body which the Word aſſumed, it is two ways advanced ſingularly above the Fleſh and Blood of all other men, viz. Subjectively, and Objectively; Subjectively, it is the Fleſh and Blood of God, Acts 20. 28. and ſo hath a diſtinct and incommunicable Glory of its own. And Objectively, it is the Fleſh and Blood which all the Angels and Saints adore. But tho' in theſe things it be ſupereminently exalted, yet it is both the Medium and Pattern of all that Glory which God deſigns to raiſe us to.

Uſe 8. Laſtly, How wonderful a comfort is it that he who dwells in our Fleſh is God! What Joy may not a poor Believer make out of this? What Comfort one made out of it, I will give you in his own words. I ſee it a work of God (ſaith he) that Experiences are all loſt, when Summons of Improbation to prove our Charters of Chriſt to be counterfeit, are raiſed againſt poor Souls in their heavy Trials. But let me be a Sinner, and worſe than the chief of Sinners, yea, a guilty Devil, I am ſure my Well-beloved is God, and my Chriſt is God. And when I ſay my Chriſt is God, I have ſaid all things, I can ſay no more. I would I could build as much on this, My Chriſt is God, as it would bear: I might lay all the World upon it.

God and Man in one Perſon, O thrice happy Conjunction! As Man, he is full of experimental ſenſe of our Infirmities, Wants, and Burdens; and as God, he can ſupport and ſupply them all. The Aſpect of Faith upon this wonderful Perſon, how relieving, how reviving, how abundantly ſatisfying is it? God will never divorce the believing Soul and its Conſort; after he hath married our Nature to his own Son, by the Hypoſtatical, and our Perſons alſo by the bleſſed Myſtical Union.

SERMON VI.

Serm. 6. Shews the Authority by which Chriſt as Mediator acted.

JOHN VI. 27.

For him hath God the Father ſealed.

YOU have heard Chriſt's Compact or Agreement with the Father in the Covenant of Redemption; as alſo what the Father did in purſuance of the Ends thereof, in giving his Son out of his Boſom, &c. alſo what the Son hath done towards it, in aſſuming Fleſh. But tho' the glorious Work be thus far advanced, yet all he ſhould act in that aſſumed Body, had been invalid and vain, without a due Call and Commiſſion from the Father ſo to do. Which is the import of the Words now before you.

This Scripture is a part of Chriſt's excellent reply to a ſelf-ended Generation, who followed him, not for any ſpiritual excellencies that that they ſaw in him, or Soul-advantages they expected by him, but for Bread. Inſtead of making his Service their Meat and Drink, they only ſerved him that they might eat and drink. Self is a thing may creep into the beſt Hearts and Actions; but it only predominates in the Hypocrite. Theſe people had ſought Chriſt from place to place, and having at laſt found him, they ſalute him with an impertinent Compliment, Rabbi, whence cameſt thou hither? verſ. 25. Chriſt's reply is partly diſſwaſive, and partly directive. He diſſwades them from putting the ſecondary and ſubordinate in the place of the principal and ultimate end; not to prefer their Bodies to their Souls, their fleſhly Accommodations to the Glory of God. Labour not for the meat that periſheth. Wherein he doth not take them off from their lawful Labours and Calling: but he diſſwades them, firſt, from minding theſe things too intently; and ſecondly, he diſſwades them from that odious Sin of making Religion but a pretence for the Belly.

And it is partly directive, and that in the main end and buſineſs of Life. But labour for that Meat which endures to eternal Life; to get Bread for your Souls to live eternally by. And that he might engage their Diligence in ſeeking it to purpoſe, he ſhews them not only where they may have it, [Which the Son of Man ſhall give you] but alſo how they may be fully ſatisfied that he hath it for them, in the Clauſe I have pitched on; For him hath God the Father ſealed.

In theſe words are three parts obſervable.

1. The Perſon ſealing or inveſting Chriſt with Authority and Power; which is ſaid to be God the Father. Tho' all the Perſons in the Godhead are equal in Nature, Dignity and Power, yet in their Operation there is an Order obſerved among them; the Father ſends the Son, the Son is ſent by the Father, the Holy Ghoſt is ſent by both.

2. The Subject in which God the Father lodges this Authority, [Him] that is the Son of Man. Jeſus Chriſt he is the πρῶτον δεκτικὸν, firſt Receptacle of it. And he muſt here be underſtood excluſively. God the Father hath ſo ſealed him as he never ſealed any other before him, or that ſhall ariſe after him. No Name is given in Heaven or Earth, but this Name by which we are ſaved, Acts 4. 12. The Government is upon his Shoulders, Iſa. 9.

3. Here is farther obſervable, the way and manner of the Father's delegating and committing this Authority to Chriſt; and that is, by Sealing him. Where we have both a Metonymy, the Symbol of Authority being put for the Authority it ſelf; and a Metaphor, Sealing, which is a human act, for the ratifying and confirming an Inſtrument or Grant, being here applied to God. Like as Princes, by ſealed Credentials, confirm the Authority of thoſe that are ſent by them: as the Dutch Annotators well expreſs the meaning of it. Hence we note, Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt did not of himſelf undertake the work of our Redemption, but was ſolemnly ſealed unto that Work by God the Father.

When I ſay, he did not of himſelf undertake this Work, I mean not that he was unwilling to go about it, for his Heart was as fully and ardently engaged in it as the Father's was: So he tells us, Pſal. 40. 7. Lo, I come to do thy will, O God; thy Law is in my Heart. But the meaning is, he came not without a due Call, and full Commiſſion from his Father. And ſo it is to be underſtood in oppoſition to Intruſion, not voluntary Suſception, And this is the meaning of that Scripture, Joh. 8. 42. I proceeded and came from God; neither came I of my ſelf, but he ſent me. And this the Apoſtle plainly expreſſeth, and fully clears, Heb. 5. 4, 5. And no Man taketh this Honour to himſelf, but he that is call'd of God, as was Aaron : ſo alſo, Chriſt glorified not himſelf to be made a High-Prieſt; but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son. And on the account of theſe ſealed Credentials he received from his Father, he is called the Apoſtle and High-Prieſt of our Profeſſion, Heb. 3. 1. i. e. one called and ſent forth by the Father's Authority. Our preſent buſineſs then is to open Chriſt's Commiſſion, and view the great Seal of Heaven by which it was ratified.

Nihil aliud poſſe ex dicto Apoſtoli elici, niſi hoc, Chriſtum ab eo vocatum eſſe ad munus mediatorium, a quo genitus eſt. Cameronis Myrothec. p. 317.

And to preſerve a clear Method in the explication of this great Truth, into which your Faith and Comfort is reſolved, I ſhall, Firſt. Shew what was the Work and Office to which the Father ſealed him.

Secondly, What his ſealing to this Work doth imply.

Thirdly, How and by what acts the Father ſealed him to it.

Fourthly, Why it was neceſſary that he ſhould be thus ſealed and authorized by his Father. And then improve it in its proper Uſes.

Firſt, What was that Office or Work to which his Father ſealed him ? I anſwer more generally, he was ſealed to the whole Work of Mediation for us, thereby to recover and ſave all the Elect, whom the Father had given him : So John 17. 2. It was to give eternal Life to as many as were given him: It was to bring Jacob again to him, Iſa. 49. 5. or, as the Apoſtle expreſſes it, 1 Pet. 3. 18. That he might bring us to God. More particularly, in order to the ſure and full effecting of this moſt glorious Deſign, he was ſealed to the Offices of a Prophet, Prieſt and King, that ſo he might bring about and compaſs this Work.

1. God ſealed him a Commiſſion to preach the glad-tidings of Salvation to Sinners. This Commiſſion Chriſt opened and read in the audience of the People, Luke 4. 18, 19, 20, 21. And when he had opened the Book, he found the place where it is written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath anointed me to preach the Goſpel to the Poor; he hath ſent me to heal the Broken-hearted, to preach Deliverance to the Captives, and the recovering of Sight to the Blind; to ſet at liberty them that are bruiſed; to preach the acceptable Year of the Lord. And he cloſed the Book, &c. And he began to ſay unto them, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your Ears.

2. He alſo ſealed him to the Prieſthood, and that the moſt excellent ; authorizing him to execute both the parts of it, viz. Oblatory and Interceſſory. He call'd him to offer up himſelf a Sacrifice for us, I have Power (ſaith he) to lay down my Life ; this Commandment have I received of my Father, Joh. 10. 18. And upon that account his offering up of his Blood is by the Apoſtle ſtiled an Act of Obedience, as it is Phil. 2. 8. He became obedient unto Death. He alſo call'd him to interceed for us, Heb. 7. 21, 24, 25. Theſe Prieſts were made without an Oath, but this with an Oath ; by him that ſaid unto him, The Lord ſware, and will not repent, thou art a Prieſt for ever : Becauſe his Sacrifice is virtually continued in his living for ever to make Interceſſion, as it is ver. 24. Yea, he call'd him to his Regal Office ; he was ſet upon rhe higheſt Throne of Authority by his Father's Commiſſion, as it is, Mat. 28. 18. All Power in Heaven and Earth is given to me. To all this was Chriſt ſealed and authorized by his Father.

Secondly, What doth the Father's ſealing of Chriſt to this Work and Office imply ? There are divers things implied in it. As,

1. The Validity and Efficacy of all his Mediatory Acts. For by vertue of this his ſealing, whatever he did was fully ratified. And in this very thing lyes much of a Believer's Comfort and Security ; for as much as all Acts done without Commiſſion and Authority, (how great or able ſoever the Perſon that doth them is, yet) are in themſelves null and void. But what is done by Commiſſion and Authority, is authentick and moſt allowable among Men. Had Chriſt come from Heaven, and entred upon his Mediatory Work without a due Call, our Faith had been ſtumbled at the very threſhold; but this greatly ſatisfies.

2. It imports the great Obligation lying upon Jeſus Chriſt to be faithful in the Work he was ſealed to. For the Father in this Commiſſion devolves a great Truſt upon him, and relies upon him for his moſt faithful diſcharge thereof. And indeed upon this very account Chriſt reckons himſelf ſpecially obliged to purſue the Father's deſign and end, Joh. 9. 4. I muſt work the Works of him that ſent me. And Joh. 5. 30. I ſeek not my own Will, but the Will of the Father which ſent me. Still his Eye is upon that Work and Will of his Father. And he reckons himſelf under a neceſſity of punctual and preciſe Obedience to it ; and, as a faithful Servant, will have his own Will ſwallowed up in the Father's Will.

3. It imports Chriſt's compleat qualification or inſtrumental fitneſs to ſerve the Father's deſign and end in our Recovery. Had not God known him to be every way fit and qualified for the Work, he would never have ſealed him a Commiſſion for it. Men may, but God will not ſeal an unfit or incapable Perſon for his Work. And indeed whatever is deſirable in a Servant, was eminently found in Chriſt. For Faithfulneſs, none like him. Moſes indeed was faithful to a Pin, but ſtill as a Servant : But Chriſt as a Son, Heb. 3. 2. He is the faithful and true Witneſs, Rev. 1. 5. For Zeal, none like him. The Zeal of God's Houſe did eat him up, Joh. 2. 16, 17. He was ſo intent upon his Father's Work, that he forgot to eat Bread, counting his Work his Meat and Drink, Joh. 4. 32. Yea, and Love to his Father carried him on through all his Work, and made him delight in the hardeſt piece of his Service ; for he ſerved him as a Son, Heb. 3. 5, 6. All that ever he did was done in love. For Wiſdom, none like him. The Father knew him to be moſt wiſe, and ſaid of him before he was imploy'd, Behold, my Servant ſhall deal prudent- ly, Iſa. 52. 13. To conclude, for Self-denial, never any like him; he ſought not his own Glory, but the Glory of him that ſent him, Joh. 8. 50. Had he not been thus faithful, zealous, full of Love, prudent, and ſelf-denying, he had never been imployed in this great Affair.

Omnes ante me (id eſt, me non mittente, Ultro cum non fuerint miſſi cucurreunt, ſe pro Meſſia venditarunt) ſunt fures, & latrones; latronum more adulterino quapiam oſtia cœli commenti ſunt, & per ea homines in æternæ damnationis ſpeluncam præcipitarunt. Dietericus.

4. It implies Chriſt's ſole Authority in the Church, to appoint and enjoy what he pleaſeth. And this is his peculiar Prerogative. For the Commiſſion God ſealed him in the Text, is a ſingle, not a joint Commiſſion; he hath ſealed him, and none beſide him. Indeed there were ſome that pretended a Call and Commiſſion from God; but all that were before him were Thieves and Robbers, that came not in at the Door as he did, Joh. 10. 8. And he himſelf foretells, that after him ſome ſhould ariſe, and labour to deceive the World with a feigned Commiſſion, and a counterfeit Seal, Matth. 24. 24. There ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſt's, and falſe Prophets, and ſhall ſhew great Signs and Wonders; inſomuch, that if it were poſſible, they ſhould deceive the very Elect. But God never commiſſionated any beſides him, neither is there any other Name under Heaven, Acts 4. 12. Thus you ſee how the validity of his Acts, his Obligation to be faithful, his compleat Qualifications, and ſole Authority in the Church, are imported in his Sealing.

Thirdly, Let us inquire how God the Father ſealed Jeſus Chriſt to this Work, and we ſhall find that he was ſealed by four Acts of the Father.

בחורו Electus, i. e. eximius, preſtans, excellens.

Vid, Dutch Annot. in loc.

1. By ſolemn Deſignation to this Work. He ſingled him out, and ſet him apart to it; and therefore the Prophet Iſaiah, chap. 42. v. 1. calls him God s Elect. And the Apoſtle Pet, 1 Pet. 2. 4. Choſen of God. This word which we render Electe doth not only ſignify one that in himſelf is eximious, worthy, and excellent, but alſo one that is ſet a part and deſigned, as Chriſt was for the work of Mediation. And ſo much is carried in Joh. 10. 36. where the Father is ſaid 1o ſanctifie him, i. e. to ſeparate. and devote him to this Service.

A Chriſto Chriſtiani dicuntur (h. e) unctionis ſanctæ μέτοχοι non enim titulum gerunt ſine re, ſed qui dicuntur vere Chriſtiani, χρίσμα etiam obtinent. Glaſſius. Dona iſta abſolute & in ſe finita fuere ſicut, & ipſa Chriſti natura finita eſt; noſtri namen reſpectu ſunt abſq; menſura. Dr. Al. Explicat. Cat. pars2. p. 70.

2. He was ſealed not only by ſolemn Deſignation, but alſo by ſuper-eminent and unparallell'd Sanctification. He was anointed as well as appointed to it. The Lord filled him with the Spirit, and that without meaſure, to qualify him for this Service. So Iſa. 61. 1, 2, 3. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath anointed me to preach, &c. Yea, the Spirit of the Lord was not only upon him, but he was full of the Spirit, Luke 4. 1. and ſo full as never was any beſide him: For God anointed him with the Oil of Gladneſs above his fellows, Pſal. 45. 7. Believers are his Fellows, or Copartners of this Spirit: They have an Anointing alſo, but not as Chriſt had: In him it dwelt in its fulneſs, in them according to meaſure. It was poured out on Chriſt our Head abundantly, and ran down to the hem of his Garment. God gave not the Spirit to him by meaſure, Joh. 3. 34. God filled Chriſt's Humane Nature to the utmoſt capacity with all fulneſs of the Spirit of Knowledge, Wiſdom, Love, &c. beyond all Creatures, for the plenary and more effectual Adminiſtration of his Mediatorſhip: He was full extenſively with all kinds of Grace; and full intenſively with all degrees of Grace. It pleaſed the Father that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell, Col. 1. 19. as Light in the Sun, or Water in a Fountain, that he might not only fill all things, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Epheſ. 1. 22. but that he might be prompt, expedite, and every way fit to diſcharge his own Work, which was the next and immediate end of it: So that the holy Oil that was poured out upon the Heads of Kings and Prieſts, whereby they were conſecrated to their Offices, was but typical of the Spirit by which Chriſt was conſecrated or ſealed to his Offices.

Exod. 30. 23, 24, 25, 30, 31, 32.

3. Chriſt was ſealed by the Father's immediate Teſtimony from Heaven, whereby he was declared to be the Perſon whom the Father had ſolemnly deſigned and appointed to this Work. And God gave this extraordinary Teſtimony of him at two remarkable ſeaſons; the one was juſt as his entrance on his publick Miniſtry, Mat. 3. ult. the other but a little before his Sufferings, Matth. 17. 5. This Voice was not formed by ſuch Organs and Inſtruments of Speech as ours are, but by creating a Voice in the Air, which the People heard ſounding there; by this God owned, approved, and as by a Seal ratified his Work.

Caryll in Job 1. 7.

4. Chriſt was ſealed by the Father in all thoſe extraordinary miraculous Works wrought by him, in which the Father gave yet more full and convincing Teſtimonies to the World, that this was He whom he had appointed to be our Mediator. Theſe were convictive to the World that God had ſent him, and that his Doctrine was of God. God anointed Jeſus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghoſt and Power, who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppreſſed of the Devil; for God was with him, Acts 10. 38. And ſo Joh. 5. 36. I have a greater Witneſs than that of John; for the Works which the Father hath given me to finiſh, the ſame Works that I do bear witneſs of me, that the Father hath ſent me. Therefore he ſtill referr'd thoſe that doubted of him, or of his Doctrine, to the Seal of his Father, even the miraculous Works he wrought in the Power of God, Matth. 11. 3, 4, 5. And thus the Father ſealed him.

Fourthly, and laſtly, We will inquire why it was neceſſary Chriſt ſhould be ſealed by his Father to this Work: And there are theſe three weighty Reaſons for it.

1. Elſe he had not correſponded with the Types which prefigured him, and in him it was neceſſary that they be all accompliſhed. You know under the Law, the Kings and High Prieſts had their Inaugurations by ſolemn Unctions; in all which, this Conſecration, or ſealing of Chriſt to his Work, was ſhadow'd out: And therefore you ſhall find, Heb. 5. 4, 5. No Man taketh this Honour to himſelf, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron: So alſo (mark the neceſſary Correſpondency betwixt Chriſt and them) Chriſt glorified not himſelf, to be made a High-Prieſt; but he that ſaid unto him, Thou art my Son.

2. Moreover, hereby the Hearts of Believers are the more engaged to love the Father, in as much as it appears hereby that the Father's Love and Good will to them was the Original and Spring of their Redemption. For had not the Father ſealed him ſuch a commiſſion, he had not come; but now he comes in the Father's Name, and in the Father's Love as well as his Name: and ſo all Men are bound to aſcribe equal Glory and Honour to them both; as it is Joh. 5. 23.

3. And eſpecially, Chriſt would not come without a Commiſſion, becauſe elſe you had no ground for your Faith in him. How ſhould we have been ſatisfied that this is indeed the true Meſſiah, except he had opened his Commiſſion to the World, and ſhew'd his Father's Seal annexed to it? If he had come without his Credentials from Heaven, and only told the World that God had ſent him, and that they muſt take his bare word for it; Who could have reſted his Faith on that Teſtimony? And that is the true meaning of that place, Joh. 5. 31. If I bear witneſs of my ſelf, my witneſs is not true. How ſo? You will ſay, doth not that contradict what he ſaith, Joh. 8. 14. Tho' I bear record of my ſelf, yet my Record is true? Therefore you muſt underſtand Truth, not as it is oppoſed to Reality; but the meaning is, if I had only given you my bare word for it, and not brought other Evidence from my Father, my Teſtimony had not been authentick and valid, according to human Laws; but now all Doubtings are precluded. Let us next improve this.

Inf. 1. Hence we infer the unreaſonableneſs of Infidelity, and how little the Rejecters of Chriſt can have to pretend for their ſo doing. You ſee he hath opened his Commiſſion in the Goſpel, ſhewn the World his Father's Hand and Seal to it, given as ample Satisfaction as Reaſon it ſelf could deſire or expect; yet even his own received him not, Joh. 1. 11. And he knew it before-hand, and therefore complain'd by the Prophet, Iſa. 53. 1. Who hath believed our Report? &c. Yea, and that he is believed on in the World, is by the Apoſtle put among the great Myſteries of Godlineſs, 1 Tim. 3. 16. A Man that well conſiders with what convincing Evidence Chriſt comes, would rather think it a Myſtery that any ſhould not believe. But O the brutiſh Obſtinacy and deviliſh Enmity that is in Nature to Jeſus Chriſt! Deviliſh did I ſay? you muſt give me that word again, for he compell'd the Devils Aſſent; We know thee whom thou art. And it is equally as wonderful to ſee the facility that is in Nature to comply (mean while) with any, even the moſt fooliſh Impoſture. Let a falſe Chriſt ariſe; and he ſhall deceive many, as it is Mat. 24. 24. Of this Chriſt complains, and not without great reaſon, Joh. 5. 43. I am come in my Father's Name, and ye receive me not: If another come in his own Name, him will ye receive, q. d. You are incredulous to none but me: Every Deceiver, every pitiful Cheat that hath but Wit, or rather Wickedneſs enough to tell you the Lord hath ſent him, tho' you muſt take his own ſingle word for it, he ſhall obtain and get Diſciples: but tho' I come in my Father's Name, i. e. ſhewing you a Commiſſion ſign'd and ſeal'd by him, doing thoſe Works that none but a God can do, yet ye receive me not. But in all this we muſt adore the Juſtice of God in permitting it to be ſo, giving Men up to ſuch unreaſonable Obſtinacy and Hardneſs. It is a ſore Plague that lyes upon the World, and a wonder that we all are not ingulphed in the ſame Infidelity.

Inf. 2. If Chriſt were ſealed to his Work by his Father, then how great is the Sin of thoſe that reject and deſpiſe ſuch as are ſent and ſealed by Jeſus Chriſt? for look as he came to us in his Father's Name, ſo he hath ſent forth, by the ſame Authority, Miniſters in his Name; and as he acts in his Father's, ſo they in his Authority. As thou haſt ſent me into the World, even ſo have I alſo ſent them into the World, Joh. 17. 18. And ſo Joh. 20. 21. As my Father hath ſent me, ſo have I ſent you. You may think it a ſmall matter to deſpiſe or reject a Miniſter of Chriſt, (a Sin, in the guilt whereof I think no Age hath been plunged deeper than this) but hear, and let it be a warning to you for ever; in ſo doing you deſpiſe, and put the ſlight both upon the Father that ſent Jeſus Chriſt, and upon Chriſt that ſent them: So that it is a Rebellion, that however it ſeems to begin low in ſome ſmall piques againſt their Perſons, or ſome little quarrels at their Parts and Utterance, Tones, Methods or Geſtures; yet it runs high, even to the Fountain-head of the moſt ſupream Authority. You that ſet your ſelves againſt a Miniſter of Chriſt, ſet your ſelves againſt God the Father, and God the Son; Luke 10. 16. He that heareth you, heareth me; and he that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me; and he that deſpiſeth me, deſpiſeth him that ſent me. God expects that you behave your ſelves under the Word ſpoken by us, as if he himſelf ſpake it: Yea, he expects ſubmiſſion to his Word in the mouths of his Miniſters from the greateſt on Earth. And therefore it was that God ſo ſeverely puniſhed Zedekiah, becauſe he humbled not himſelf before Jeremiah the Prophet, ſpeaking from the Mouth of the Lord, 2 Chron. 36. 12. God was angry with a great King, for not humbling himſelf before a poor Prophet. Yet here you muſt diſtinguiſh both of Perſons, and of Acts. This reverence and ſubmiſſion is not due to them as Men, but as Men in Office, as Chriſt's Embaſſadors; and muſt involve that reſpect ſtill in it. Again, we owe it not to them, commanding or forbidding in their own names, but in Chriſt's; not in venting their own Spleen, but the Terrors of the Lord: And then to reſiſt is a high Rebellion and Affront to the ſovereign Authority of Heaven. And by the way, this may inſtruct Miniſters, that the way to maintain that veneration and reſpect that is due to them in the Conſciences of their Hearers, is by keeping cloſe to their Commiſſion.

Hæc Apoſtolorum à Chriſto miſſionis formula ſatis evidenter comprobat Apoſtolici muneris dignitatem in Apoſtolorum authoritate & poteſtate, quæ fuit ſumma, & incomparabilis. Cameron.

Ut ſi herus famulo præſcribat primum quid debeat præſcribere agendum in familia; tum ſubjungeret. Qui te audit, me audit: non inde ſequeretur fieri non poſſe ut ille famulus diſcedat ab heri præſcripto; aut ſic ubi diſceſſerit, ei eſſe parandum. Camer. Myro. p. 130.

Inf. 3. Hence alſo we infer, How great an evil it is to intrude into the Office of the Miniſtry, without a due Call. It's more than Chriſt himſelf would do; he glorified not himſelf: The Honours and Advantages attending that office, have invited many to run before they were ſent. But ſurely this is an inſufferable violation of Chriſt's Order. Our Age hath abounded with as many Church-levellers as State-levellers. I wiſh the Miniſters of Chriſt might at laſt ſee and conſider, what they were once warned of by a faithful Watchman: 'I believe (ſaith he) God hath permitted ſo many to intrude

Mr. Strong.

'into the Miniſters Calling, becauſe Miniſters 'have too much meddled with, and intruded 'into other Mens Callings.

Inference 4. Hence be convinced of the great Efficacy that is in all Goſpel-Ordinances duly adminiſtred: For Chriſt having received full Commiſſion from his Father, and by vertue thereof having inſtituted and appointed thoſe Ordinances in the Church, all the Power in Heaven is engaged to make them good, to back and ſecond them, to confirm and ratifie them. Hence, in the Cenſures of the Church you have that great Expreſſion, Mat. 18. 18. Whatſoever ye bind or looſe on Earth, ſhall be bound or looſed in Heaven. And ſo for the Word and Sacraments, Mat. 28. 18, 19, 20. All Power in Heaven and Earth is given unto me: Go therefore, &c. They are not the Appointments of Men; your Faith ſtands not in the Wiſdom of Men, but in the Power of God. That very Power God the Father committed to Chriſt, is the Fountain whence all Goſpel-Inſtitutions flow. And he hath promiſed to be with his Officers, not only the extraordinary Officers of that Age, but with his Miniſters in ſucceeding Ages to the end of the World. O therefore when we come to an Ordinance, come not with ſlight thoughts, but with great reverence, and great expectations, remembring Chriſt is there to make all good.

Inference 5. Again, here you have another Call to admire the Grace and Love both of the Father and Son to your Souls: It is not lawful to compare them, but it's duty to admire them. Was it not wonderful Grace in the Father, to ſeal a Commiſſion for the Death of his Son, for the humbling him as low as Hell, and in that method to ſave you, when you might have expected he ſhould have ſealed your Mittemus for Hell, rather than a Commiſſion for your Salvation? He might rather have ſet his irreverſible Seal to the Sentence of your Damnation, than to a Commiſſion for his Son's Humiliation for you. And no leſs is the Love of Chriſt to be wondred at, that would accept ſuch a Commiſſion as this for us, and receive this Seal, underſtanding fully (as he did) what were the Contents of that Commiſſion that the Father delivered him thus ſealed, and knowing that there could be no reverſing of it afterwards.

O then, love the Lord Jeſus all ye his Saints, for ſtill you ſee more and more of his Love breaking out upon you. I commend to you a ſealed Saviour this day: O that every one that reads theſe Lines might, in a pang of Love, cry out with the enamoured Spouſe, Cant. 8. 6. Set me as a Seal upon thy Heart, as a Seal upon thy Arm; for Love is ſtrong as Death, Jealouſie is cruel as the Grave: The Coals thereof are Coals of Fire, which have a vehement Flame.

Inference 6. Once more, hath God ſealed Chriſt for you? Then draw forth the Comfort of his ſealing for you, and be reſtleſs till ye alſo be ſealed by him.

1. Draw out the Comfort of Chriſt's ſealing for you. Remember that hereby God ſtands engaged, even by his own Seal, to allow and confirm whatever Chriſt hath done in the buſineſs of your Salvation. And on this ground you may thus plead with God: Lord, thou haſt ſealed Chriſt to this Office, and therefore I depend upon it, that thou alloweſt all that he hath done, and all that he hath ſuffered for me, and wilt make good all that he hath promiſed me. If Men will not deny their own Seals, much leſs wilt thou.

2. Get your Intereſt in Chriſt ſealed to you by the Spirit, elſe you cannot have the Comfort of Chriſt's being ſealed for you. Now the Spirit ſeals two ways, Objectively and Effectively; the firſt is by working thoſe Graces in us, which are the Conditions of the Promiſes; the latter is by ſhining upon his own Work, and helping the Soul to diſcern it, which follows the other both in order of Nature, and of Time. And theſe Sealings of the Spirit are to be diſtinguiſhed both ex pare Subjecti, by their Subject, or the Quality of the Perſon ſealed, which always is a Believer, Eph. 1. 13. for there can be no reflex, till there have been a direct Act of Faith; and ex parte Materiæ, by the Matter of which that Comfort is made; which if it be of the Spirit, is ever conſonant to the written Word, Iſa. 8. 20. And partly ab effectis, by its Effects; for it commonly produces in the ſealed Soul great care and caution to avoid Sin, Epheſ. 4. 30. Great love to God, John 14. 22. Readineſs to ſuffer any thing for Chriſt, Rom. 5. 3, 4, 5. Confidence in Addreſſes to God, 1 John 5. 13, 14. and great Humility and Self-abaſement; as in Abraham, who lay on his face when God ſealed the Covenant to him, Gen. 17. 1, 2, 3. This, O this brings home the ſweet and good of all, when this Seal is ſuper-added to that.

SERMON VII.

Serm. 7. Treats of the ſolemn Conſecration of the Mediator.

JOHN XVII. 19.

And for their ſakes I ſanctifie my ſelf.

JEſus Chriſt being fitted with a Body, and authorized by a Commiſſion, now actually devotes, and ſets himſelf apart to his Work. In the former Sermon you heard what the Father did; in this you ſhall hear what the Son hath done towards the farther advancement of that glorious Deſign of our Salvation: He ſanctified himſelf for our ſakes. Wherein obſerve, (1.) Chriſt's ſanctifying of himſelf. (2) The End or Deſign of his ſo doing.

1. You have Chriſt's ſanctifying of himſelf. The word ἁγιάζω is not here to be underſtood for the cleanſing, purifying, or making holy that which was before unclean and unholy, either in a moral ſenſe, as we are cleanſed from Sin by Sanctification; or in a ceremonial ſenſe, as perſons and things were ſanctified under the Law? tho' here is a plain Alluſion to thoſe legal Rites. But Chriſt's ſanctifying himſelf, imports, (1.) His Separation, or ſetting apart to be an Oblation or Sacrifice. So Beza, nempe ut ſacerdos & victima; as the Prieſt and Sacrifice. I ſanctifie my ſelf, imports, (2.) His Conſecration, or Dedication of himſelf to this holy Uſe and Service. So the Dutch Annotations, I ſanctifie my ſelf, (i. e.) I gave up my ſelf for a Holy Sacrifice. And ſo our Engliſh Annotations, I ſanctifie, (i. e.) I conſecrate and voluntarily offer my ſelf a holy and unblemiſhed Sacrifice to thee for their Redemption. And thus under the Law, when any Day, Perſon, or Veſſel was conſecrated and dedicated to the Lord, it was ſo intirely for his uſe and ſervice, that to uſe it afterward in any common Service, was to profane and pollute it, as you ſee, Dan. 5. 3.

Sanctificare eſt in uſus divinos ſeparare. Brentius in loc.

2. The End of his ſo ſanctifying himſelf, [for their ſakes, and that they might be ſanctified] where you have the finis cujus, the End for whom, for their, (i. e.) for the Elect ſake, for them whom thou gaveſt me; and the finis cui, the End for which, that they might be ſanctified. Where you alſo ſee that the Death of Chriſt wholly reſpects us; he offered not for himſelf, as other Prieſts did, but for us, that we may be ſanctified. Chriſt is ſo in love with Holineſs, that at the price of his Blood he will buy it for us. Hence the Obſervation is;

Eſt igitur ſenſus; ego ſanctifico meipſum, i. e morior pro ipſis. Ut ipſi per mortem meam ſpiritu ſanctitatis impleantur, & fiant ſancta Dei vaſa, per revelatum Dei ſpiritum. Marlorat. in loc.

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt did dedicate, and wholly ſet himſelf apart to the Work of a Mediator, for the Elect ſake.

This Point is a Glaſs, wherein the eye of your Faith may ſee Jeſus Chriſt preparing himſelf to be offered up to God for us, fitting himſelf to die. And to keep a clear method, I ſhall open theſe two things in the doctrinal part; Firſt, What his ſanctifying himſelf implies. Secondly, How it reſpects us.

Firſt, What is implied in this Phraſe, I ſanctifie my ſelf. And there are ſeven things carried in it.

1. This Phraſe [I ſanctifie my ſelf] implies the perſonal union of the two Natures in Chriſt: For what is that which he here calls himſelf, but the ſame that was conſecrated to be a Sacrifice, even his humane Nature? This was the Sacrifice. And this alſo was himſelf: So the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 9. 14. He through the eternal Spirit, offered up himſelf to God, without ſpot. So that our Nature by that aſſumption is become himſelf. Greater honour cannot be done it, or a greater ground of Comfort propoſed to us. But having ſpoken of that Union in the former Sermon, I ſhall remit the Reader thither.

2. This ſanctifying or conſecrating himſelf to be a Sacrifice for us, implies the greatneſs and dreadfulneſs of that Breach which Sin made betwixt God and us. You ſee no leſs Sacrifice than Chriſt himſelf muſt be ſanctified to make Atonement. Judge of the greatneſs of the Wound by the breadth of the Plaiſter. Sacrifice and offering, and burnt-offering for Sin, thou wouldeſt not; but a Body haſt thou prepared me, Heb. 10. 5. All our Repentance, could we ſhed as many tears for Sin, as there have fallen drops of Rain ſince the Creation, could not have been our Atonement: But God was in Chriſt reconciling the World to himſelf. And had he not ſanctified Chriſt to this end, he would have ſanctified himſelf upon us in Judgment and Fury for ever.

3. This his ſanctifying himſelf, implies his free and voluntary undertaking of the Work. It is not I am ſanctified, as if he had been meerly paſſive in it, as the Lambs that typed him out were when pluckt from the Fold; but it's an active Verb that he uſeth here, I ſanctifie my ſelf; he would have none think that he died out of a neceſſity of compulſion, but out of choice: Therefore he is ſaid to offer up himſelf to God, Heb. 9. 14. And in John 10. 18. I lay down my Life of my ſelf: no Man takes it from me. And altho' it's often ſaid his Father ſent him, and gave him; yet his Heart was as much ſet on that Work, as if there had been nothing but Glory, Eaſe and Comfort in it; he was under no conſtraint but that of his own Love. Therefore as when the Scripture would ſet forth the willingneſs of the Father to this Work, he ſaith, God ſent his Son, and God gave his Son; ſo when it would ſet forth Chriſt's willingneſs to it, it ſaith, he offered up himſelf, gave himſelf, and here in the Text, ſanctified himſelf. The Sacrifice that ſtruggled, and came not without force to the Altar, was reckon'd ominous and unlucky by the Heathen: Our Sacrifice dedicated himſelf; he died out of choice, and was a free-will Offering.

4. His ſanctifying himſelf, implies his pure and perfect Holineſs; That he had no ſpot or blemiſh in him. Thoſe Beaſts that prefigured him, were to be without blemiſh, and none elſe were conſecrated to that ſervice. So, and more than ſo, it behoved Chriſt to be, Heb. 7. 29. Such a High-Prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from Sinners: And what it became him to be, he was. Therefore in alluſion to the Lambs offered under the Law, the Apoſtle calls him, a Lamb without blemiſh, or ſpot, 1 Pet. 1. 19. Every other Man hath a double ſpot on him, the Heart-ſpot and the Life-ſpot; the Spot of Original, and the Spots of Actual Sins. But Chriſt was without either, he had not the Spot of Original Sin, for he was not by Man: he came in a peculiar way into the World, and ſo eſcaped that: Nor yet of Actual Sins; for as his Nature, ſo his Life was ſpotleſs and pure, Iſa. 53. 9. He did no iniquity. And tho' tempted to ſin externally, yet he was never defiled in heart or practice; he came as near it as he could for our ſakes, yet ſtill without ſin, Heb. 4. 15. If he ſanctifie himſelf for a Sacrifice, he muſt be ſuch as the Law required, pure and ſpotleſs.

5. His ſanctifying himſelf for our ſakes, ſpeaks the ſtrength of his Love, and largeneſs of his Heart to poor Sinners thus to ſet himſelf wholly and entirely apart for us. So that what he did and ſuffered, muſt all of it have a reſpect and relation to us. He did not (when conſecrated for us) live a moment, do an act, or ſpeak a word, but it had ſome tendency to promote the great Deſign of our Salvation. He was only and wholly, and always doing your Work, when conſecrated for your ſakes. His Incarnation reſpects you; Iſa. 9. 6. For as a Child is born, to us a Son is given. And he would never have been the Son of Man, but to make you the Sons and Daughters of God. God would not have come down in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, in the habit of a Man, but to raiſe up ſinful Man into the likeneſs of God. All the Miracles he wrought were for you, to confirm your Faith. When he raiſed up Lazarus, John 11. 42. Becauſe of the People which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that they might believe that thou haſt ſent me. While he lived on Earth, he lived as one wholly ſet apart for us; and when he died, he died for us, Gal. 3. 13. He was made a Curſe for us. When he hanged on that curſed Tree, he hanged there in our room, and did but fill our place. When he was buried, he was buried for us; for the end of it was, to perfume our Graves, againſt we come to lye down in them. And when he roſe again, it was (as the Apoſtle ſaith) for our Juſtification, Rom. 4. 25. When he aſcended into Glory, he proteſted it was about our buſineſs, that he went to prepare places for us: And if it had not been ſo, he would have told us, John 14. 2. And now he is there, it is for us that he there lives: For he ever lives to make interceſſion for us, Heb. 7. 25. And when he ſhall return again to Judge the World he will come for us too. He comes (whenever it be) to be glorified in his Saints, and admired in them that believe, 2 Theſſ. 1. 10. He comes to gather his Saints home to himſelf, that where he is, there they all may be, in Soul and Body with him for ever. Thus you ſee how, as his Conſecration for us doth ſpeak him ſet apart for our uſe; ſo he did wholly beſtow himſelf, time, life, death, and all upon us; living and dying for no other end, but to accompliſh this great Work of Salvation for us.

6. His ſanctifying himſelf for us, plainly ſpeaks the Vicegerency of his Death, that it was in our room or ſtead. When the Prieſt conſecrated the Sacrifice, it was ſet apart for the People. So it's ſaid for the Scape-Goat; And Aaron ſhall lay both his hands upon the head of the Live-Goat, and confeſs over him all the Iniquities of the Children of Iſarel, and all their tranſgreſſions in all their Sins, putting them upon the head of the Goat, and ſhall ſend him away by the hand of a fit Man into the Wilderneſs, Levit. 16. 21. Thus Iſa. 53. 6, 7. He ſtood in our room, to bear our burden. And as Aaron laid the Iniquities of the People upon the Goat, ſo were ours laid on Chriſt: It was ſaid to him in that day; On thee be their pride, their unbelief, their hardneſs of heart, their vain thoughts, their earthly-mindedneſs, &c. Thou art conſecrated for them, to be the Sacrifice in their room. His Death was in our ſtead, as well as for our good. And ſo much his ſanctifying himſelf [for us] imports.

7. His ſanctifying himſelf, imports the extraordinarineſs of his Perſon: For it ſpeaks him to be both Prieſt, Sacrifice and Altar, all in one; a thing unheard of in the World before. So that this Name might well be called Wonderful. I ſanctiſie my ſelf: I ſanctifie, according to both Natures; my ſelf, that is my humane Nature, which was the Sacrifice upon the Altar of my Divine Nature; for 'tis the Altar that ſanctifies the Gift. As the three Offices never met in one Perſon before, ſo theſe three things never met in one Prieſt before. The Prieſts indeed conſecrated the bodies of Beaſts for Sacrifice, but never offered up their own Souls and Bodies as a whole Burnt-offering, as Chriſt did. And thus you have the import of this Phraſe, I ſanctiſie my ſelf for their ſake.

Secondly, I ſhall ſhew you briefly the habitude and reſpect that all this hath to us; for unto us the Scriptures everywhere refer it. So in 1 Cor. 3. 7. Chriſt our Paſſover is ſacrificed for us. Eph. 5. 2. He loved the Church, and gave himſelf for it. See Tit. 2. 14. This will be made out by a threefold conſideration of Chriſt's Death. And,

1. Let it be conſidered, that he was not offered up to God for his own Sins, for he was moſt holy. Iſa. 53. 9. No Iniquity was found in him. Indeed the Prieſts under the Law offered for themſelves as well as the People; but Chriſt did not ſo, Heb. 7. 27. He needed not daily, as thoſe High-Prieſts, to offer up Sacrifice, firſt for his own Sins, and then for the Peoples. And indeed had he been a Sinner, what value or efficacy could have been in his Sacrifice? He could not have been the Sacrifice, but would have needed one. Now if Chriſt were moſt holy, and yet put to death, and cruel ſufferings; either his Death and Sufferings muſt be an act of Injuſtice and Cruelty; or it muſt reſpect others, whoſe Perſons and Cauſe he ſuſtained in that ſuffering capacity. He could never have ſuffered or died by the Father's hand, had he not been a Sinner by imputation. And in that reſpect (as Luther ſpeaks) he was the greateſt of Sinners; or, as the Prophet Iſaiah ſpeaks, all our Sins were made to meet upon him: not that he was ſo intrinſically, but was made ſo, ſc. by imputation, as is clear from 2 Cor. 5. 11. He was made Sin for us, that had no Sin. So that hence it's evident, that Chriſt's Death, or Sacrifice, is wholly a reſpective or relative thing.

2. It is not to be forgotten here, that the Scriptures frequently call the Death of Chriſt a Price, 1 Cor. 6. 20. and a Ranſom, Mat. 20. 28. or Counterprice. To whom then doth it relate, but to them that were and are in Bondage and Captivity? If it were to redeem any, it muſt be Captives: But Chriſt himſelf was never in Captivity; he was always in his Father's Boſom, as you have heard; but we were in cruel Bondage and Thraldom, under the Tyranny of Sin and Satan: And it's we only that have the benefit of this Ranſom.

λύτρον, ἀντίλυτρον, i. e. pretium ex adverſo reſpondens.

3. Either the Death of Chriſt muſt relate to Believers, or elſe he muſt die in vain. As for the Angels, thoſe that ſtood in their Integrity, needed no Sacrifice; and thoſe that fell, are totally excluded from any benefit by it: He is not a Mediator for them. And among Men that have need of it, Unbelievers have no ſhare in it, they reject it; ſuch have no part in it. If then he neither died for himſelf, as I proved before, nor for Angels, nor Unbelievers; either his Blood muſt be ſhed with reſpect to Believers, or, which is moſt abſurd, and never to be imagined, ſhed as water upon the ground, and totally caſt away: So that you ſee by all this it was for our ſakes (as the Text ſpeaks) that he ſanctified himſelf. And now we may ſay, Lord, the Condemnation was thine, that the Juſtification might be mine; the Agony thine, that the Victory might be mine; the Pain was thine, and the Eaſe mine; the Stripes thine, and the healing Balm iſſuing from them mine; the Vinegar and Gall was thine, that the Honey and Sweet might be mine; the Curſe was thine, that the Bleſſing might be mine; the Crown of Thorns was thine, that the Crown of Glory might be mine; the Death was thine, the Life purchaſed by it mine; Thou paid'ſt the Price, that I might enjoy the Inheritance.

We come next to the Inferences of Truth deducible from this point, which follow.

Inference 1. If Jeſus Chriſt did wholly ſet himſelf apart for Believeres, How reaſonable is it, that Believers ſhould conſecrate and ſet themſelves apart wholly for Chriſt; Is he alſo for us, and ſhall we be nothing for him? What he was, he was for you. What ever he did, was done for you: And all that he ſuffered, was ſuffered for you. O then, I beſeech you, Brethren, by the mercies of God, preſent your Bodies, i. e. your whole ſelves, (for ſo Body is there ſynechdochically put, to ſignifie the whole Perſon) I ſay, preſent your Bodies a living Sacrifice, holy acceptable to God; which is your reaſonable ſervice, Rom. 12. 1. As your Good was Chriſt's end, ſo let his Glory be your end. Let Chriſt be the end of your Converſation, Heb. 13. 7. As Chriſt could ſay, to me to live is you; ſo do you ſay, for us to live is Chriſt, Phil. 1. 21. O that all who profeſs Faith in Chriſt, could ſubſcribe cordially to that profeſſion, Rom. 14. 8. None of us liveth to himſelf, and no Man dieth to himſelf; but whether we live, we live to the Lord; and whether we die, we die to the Lord: ſo then whether we live or die we are the Lord's. This is to be a Chriſtian indeed. What is a Chriſtian, but a holy dedicated thing to the Lord? And what greater evidence can there be that Chriſt ſet himſelf apart for you, than your ſetting your ſelves apart for him?

Synechdochè Hebraica, pro vos totos. Sic Pareus in loc.

This is the Marriage-Covenant, Hoſ. 3. 3. Thou ſhalt be for me, and not for another; ſo will I be for thee. Ah what a Life is the Life of a Chriſtian! Chriſt all for you, and you all for him. Bleſſed exchange! Soul, (ſaith Chriſt) all I have is thine. Lord, (ſaith the Soul) and all I have is thine. Soul, (ſaith Chriſt) my Perſon is wonderful, but what I am I am for thee: My Life was ſpent in labour, and travel; but lived for thee. And, Lord, (ſaith the Believer) my Perſon is vile, and not worth thy accepting; but ſuch as it is, 'tis thine; my Soul, with all and every Faculty; my Body, and every Member of it, my Gifts, Time, and all my Talents are thine.

And ſee that as Chriſt bequeathed and made over himſelf to you, ſo ye in like manner beſtow and make over your ſelves to him. He lived not, neither died (as you hear) for himſelf, but you! O that you in like manner would down with Self and up with Chriſt in the room of it. “Wo, wo, is me (ſaith one) that the holy profeſſion of Chriſt is made a ſtaggy Garment by many to bring home a vain Fame; and Chriſt is made to ſerve Mens ends. This is to ſtop an Oven with a King's Robes. Except Men martyr and ſlay the Body of Sin in ſanctified Self-denial, they ſhall never be Chriſt's Martyrs and faithful Witneſſes. O if I could be maſter of that Houſe-Idol my ſelf, mine own, mine own Wit, Will, Credit, and Eaſe, how bleſſed were I! O but we have need to be redeemed from our ſelves, rather than from the Devil and the World. Learn to put out your ſelves, and to put in Chriſt for your ſelves. I ſhould make a ſweet Bargain, and give old for new, if I could ſhuffle out Self, and ſubſtitute Chriſt my Lord in place of my ſelf; to ſay, not I, but Chriſt, not my will, but Chriſt's, not my Eaſe, not my Luſts, not my Credit, but Chriſt, Chriſt.— O wretched Idol my Self, when ſhall I ſee thee wholly decourted, and Chriſt wholly put in thy room? O if Chriſt had the full place and room of my ſelf, that all my Aims, Purpoſes, Thoughts and Deſires would coaſt and land upon Chriſt, and not upon my Self.

He ſet himſelf apart for you Believers, and no others; no, not for Angels, but for you: Will ye alſo ſet your ſelves apart peculiarly for Chriſt? Be his, and no other's? Let not Chriſt and the World ſhare and divide your Hearts in two halves betwixt them; let not the World ſtep in and ſay, half mine. You will never do Chriſt right, nor anſwer this Grace, till you can ſay, as it is, Pſal. 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? and on Earth there is none that I deſire in compariſon of thee. None but Chriſt, none but Chriſt, is a proper Motto for a Chriſtian.

He left the higheſt and beſt Enjoyments, even thoſe in his Father's Boſom, to ſet himſelf apart for Death and Sufferings for you: Are you ready to leave the Boſom of the beſt and ſweeteſt Enjoyments you have in this World to ſerve him? If you ſtand not habitually ready to leave Father, Mother, Wife, Children, Lands, yea, and Life too, to ſerve him, you are not worthy of him, Mat. 10. 37.

He was ſo wholly given up to your ſervice, that he refuſed not the worſt and hardeſt part of it, even bleeding, groaning, dying work; his love to you ſweetned all this to him: Can you ſay ſo too? Do you account the Reproaches of Chriſt greater riches than the Treaſures of Egypt? as Moſes did, Heb. 11. 26.

He had ſo intirely devoted himſelf to your Work, that he could not be at reſt till it was finiſhed. He was ſo intent upon it, that he forgot to eat Bread, Joh. 4. 31, 32. So it ſhould be with you; his ſervice ſhould be Meat and Drink to you. To conclude,

He was ſo wholly given up to your Work and Service, that he would not ſuffer himſelf to be in the leaſt diverted, or taken off from it. And if Peter himſelf counſel him to favour himſelf, he ſhall hear, Get thee behind me Satan. O happy were it if our Hearts were but ſo engaged for Chriſt! In Galen's time it was proverbial, when they would expreſs the impoſſibility of a thing; You may aſſoon take off a Chriſtian from Chriſt. Thus you ſee what uſe you ſhould make of Chriſt's ſanctifying himſelf for you.

Inference 2. If Chriſt have ſanctified or conſecrated himſelf for us; learn hence what a horrid evil it is to uſe Chriſt or his Blood, as a common and unſanctified thing. Yet ſo ſome do, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 10. 29. The Apoſtate is ſaid to tread upon the Son of God, as if he were no better than the Dirt under his Feet, and to count his Blood an unholy (or common) thing. But wo to them that ſo do, they ſhall be counted worthy of ſomething worſe than dying without Mercy, as the Apoſtle there ſpeaks.

And as this is the Sin of the Apoſtate, ſo it is alſo the Sin of all thoſe that without Faith approach, and ſo prophane the Table of the Lord, unbelievingly and unworthily handling thoſe awful things. Such eat and drink judgment to themſelves, not diſcerning the Lord's Body, 1 Cor. 11. 29. whereas the Body of Chriſt was a thing of the deepeſt Sanctification that ever God created; ſanctified (as the Text tells us) to a far more excellent and glorious purpoſe than ever any Creature in Heaven or Earth was ſanctified. It was therefore the great Sin of thoſe Corinthians, not to diſcern it, and not to behave themſelves towards it, when they ſaw and handled the ſigns of it, as ſo holy a thing.

And as it was their great Sin, ſo God declared his juſt Indignation againſt it, in thoſe ſore Strokes inflicted for it. As they diſcerned not the Lord's Body, ſo neither did the Lord diſcern their Bodies from others, in the judgments that were inflicted. And as one well obſerves, God drew the Model and Platform of their Puniſhment, from the ſtructure and proportion of their Sin. And truly if the moral and ſpiritual Seeds and Originals of many of our outward Afflictions and Sickneſſes were but duly ſifted out, poſſibly we might find a great part of them in the Bowels of this Sin.

The juſt and righteous God will build up the Breaches we make upon the Honour of his Son, with the Ruins of that beauty, ſtrength and honour which he hath given our Bodies. O then, when you draw nigh to God in that Ordinance, take heed to ſanctifie his Name, by a ſpiritual diſcerning of this moſt holy, and moſt deeply ſanctified Body of the Lord; ſanctified beyond all Creatures, Angels or Men, not only in reſpect of the Spirit, which fill'd him without meaſure with inherent Holineſs, but alſo in reſpect of its dedication of ſuch a Service as this, it being ſet apart by him to ſuch holy ſolemn ends and uſes as you have heard.

And let it for ever be a warning to ſuch as have lifted up their Hands to Chriſt in a holy Profeſſion, that they never lift up their Heel againſt him afterwards by Apoſtacy. The Apoſtate treads on God's dear Son, and God will tread upon him for it. Thou haſt troden down all that err from thy Statutes, Pſal. 119. 118.

Inference 3. What a choice Pattern of Love to Saints have we here before us! calling all that are in Chriſt to an Imitation of him, even to give up our ſelves to their Service, as Chriſt did; not in the ſame kind, ſo none can give himſelf for them, but as we are capable. You ſee here how his Heart was affected to them, that he would ſanctifie himſelf as a Sacrifice for them. See to what a height of Duty the Apoſtle improves this Example of Chriſt, 1 Joh. 3. 16. Hereby perceive we the Love of God, becauſe he laid down his Life for us; and we ought alſo to lay down our Lives for the Brethren. Some Chriſtians came up fairly to this Pattern in the Primitive Times; Priſcilla and Aquilla laid down their Necks for Paul, Rom. 16. 4. i. e. eminently hazarded their Lives for him; and even he himſelf could rejoice if he were offered up upon the Sacrifice and Service of their Faith, Phil. 2. 17. And in the next times, what more known, even to the Enemies of Chriſtianity, than their fervent Love one to another? Ecce quam mutuo ſe diligunt, & mori volunt pro alterutris! See how they love one another, and are willing to die for one another!

But alas! the Primitive Spirit is almoſt loſt in this degenerate Age. Inſtead of laying down Life, how few will lay down Twelve Pence for them? I remember it's the Obſervation of a late Worthy, upon Mat. 5. 40. That he is perſwaded there is hardly that Man to be found this Day alive, that fully underſtands, and fully believes that Scripture. O did Men think what they do for them, is done for Chriſt himſelf, it would produce other effects than are yet viſible.

Inference 4. Laſtly, If Chriſt ſanctified himſelf, that we might be ſanctified by [or in] the Truth; then it will follow by ſound Conſequence, That true Sanctification is a true Evidence that Chriſt ſet apart himſelf to die for us. *In vain did he ſanctifie himſelf (as to you) unleſs you be ſanctified. Holy Souls only can claim the benefit of the great Sacrifice. O try then, whether true Holineſs (and that is only to be judged by its conformity to its Pattern, 1 Pet. 1. 15. As he that called you is holy, ſo be ye holy) whether ſuch a Holineſs as is, and acts (according to its meaſure) like God's Holineſs in the following Particulars, be found in you.

1. God is univerſally holy in all his ways; ſo Pſal. 145. 17. His Works are all holy: whatever he doth, it's ſtill done as becomes a holy God. He is not only holy in all things, but at all times unchangeably holy. Be ye therefore holy in all things, and at all times too, if ever ye expect the benefit of Chriſt's ſanctifying himſelf to die for you.

O Brethren, let not the Feet of your Converſation be as the Feet of a lame Man, which are unequal, Prov. 20. 7. Be not ſometimes hot, and ſometimes cold; at one time careful, at another time careleſs; one day in ſpiritual Rapture, and the next in a fleſhly Frolick: but be ye holy ἐν πάσῃ ἀναςροφῇ, 1 Pet. 1. 15. in all manner of Converſation; in every creek and turning of your lives: And let your holineſs hold out to the end. Let him that is holy, be holy ſtill, Rev. 22. 11. Not like the Hypocrites paint, but as a true natural Complexion.

2. God is exemplarily holy, Jeſus Chriſt is the great Pattern of Holineſs. Be ye Examples of Holineſs too, unto all that are about you. Let your Light ſo ſhine before Men, that they may may ſee your good Works, Mat 5. 16. As wicked Men infect one another by their Examples, and diffuſe their Poiſon and Malignity where ever they come; ſo do ye diſſeminate Godlineſs in all places and companies, and let thoſe that frequently converſe with you, eſpecially thoſe of your own Families, receive a deeper Dye and Tincture of Heavenlineſs, every time they come nigh you; as the Cloth doth, by every new dipping into the Fat.

3. God delights in nothing but Holineſs, and Holy Ones; he hath ſet all his pleaſure in the Saints. Be ye holy herein, as God is holy. Indeed there is this difference betwixt God's Choice and yours; he chuſes not Men, becauſe they are holy, but that they may be ſo; ſo you are to chuſe them for your delightful Companions, that God hath choſen, and made holy. Let all your Delights be in the Saints, even them that excel in Vertue, Pal. 16. 3.

4. God abhors and hates all Unholineſs, Do ye ſo alſo, that you may be like your Father which is in Heaven. And when the Spirit of Holineſs runs down thus upon you, a ſweeter evidence the World cannot give that Chriſt was ſanctified for you. Holy Ones may confidently lay the Hand of their Faith on the Head of this great Sacrifice, and ſay, Chriſt our Paſſover is ſacrificed for us.

SERMON VIII.

Serm. 8. Gives an account of the nature of Chriſt's Midiation.

1 TIM. II. V.

And one Mediator betwixt God and Men, the Man Chriſt Jeſus.

God is moſt holy, Man a lump of Iniquity. Extremes meet not but by their middle; ſinful Man can never have Communion with, or Enjoyment of God, but in and by a Mediator.

GReat and long Preparations beſpeak the Solemnity and Greatneſs of the Work for which they are deſigned: A Man that had but ſeen the Heaps of Gold, Silver and Braſs which David amaſſed in his time, for the building of the Temple, might eaſily conclude before one Stone of it was laid, that it would be a magnificent Structure. But lo here is a deſign of God as far tranſcending that, as the Subſtance doth the Shadow. For indeed that glorious Temple was but the Type and Figure of Jeſus Chriſt, Joh. 2. 19, 21. and a weak adumbration of that living ſpiritual Temple which he was to build, cementing the lively Stones thereof, together with his own Blood, 1 Pet. 2. 5, 6. that the great God might dwell and walk in it, 2 Cor. 6. 16. The Preparations for that Temple were but of few years, but the Conſultations and Preparations for this were from Eternity, Prov. 8. 31. And as there were Preparations for this Work (which Chriſt diſpatch'd in a few years) before the World began; ſo it will be matter of of eternal Admiration and Praiſe, when this World ſhall be diſſolved. What this aſtoniſhing glorious Work is, this Text will inform you, as to the general nature of it. It is the Work of Mediation betwixt God and Man; managed by the ſole Hand of the Man Chriſt Jeſus.

In this Scripture (for I ſhall not ſpend time to examine the Works in their Contexture) you have a deſcription of Jeſus the Mediator; and he is here deſcribed four ways, viz. by his Work or Office, a Medaitor; by the Singularity of his Mediation, one Mediator; and by the Nature and Quality of his Perſon, imploy'd in this ſingular way of Mediation, the Man; and laſtly, his Name, Jeſus Chriſt.

1 He is deſcribed by the Work or Office he is imploy'd about, Μεσίτης a Mediator, a middle Perſon. So the word imports a fit, indifferent, and equal Perſon, that comes between two Perſons that be at variance, to take up the Difference, and make Peace. Such a middle, equal, indifferent Perſon is Chriſt. A Days-man, to lay his hand upon both; to arbitrate and award juſtly, and give God his due, and that without ruin to poor Man.

2. He is deſcribed by the Singularity of his Mediation, One Mediator, and but one. Tho' there be many Mediators of Reconciliation among Men, and many Interceſſors in a petitionary way, betwixt God and Men; yet but εἷς Μεσίτης, one only Mediator of Reconciliation betwixt God and Men: And 'tis as needleſs and impious to make more Mediators than one, as to make more Gods than one. There is one God, and one Mediator betwixt God and Men.

3. He is deſcribed by the Nature and Quality of his Perſon ἄνθρωπος Χριστὸς, &c. the Man Chriſt Jeſus. This Deſcription of him by one Nature, and that the Human Nature alſo; (wherein, as you ſhall ſee anon, the Lord eſpecially conſulted our Encouragement and Comfort) I ſay, his being ſo deſcribed to us, hath through the Corruption of Men been improved to the great diſhonour of Jeſus Chriſt, both by the Arians and Papiſts. The former took occaſion from hence, to affirm that he was but ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπος a meer Man. The latter allow him to be the true God, but on this weak ground affirm, that he performed not the Work of Meditation as God, but only as Man. Thus what the Spirit ordered for our comfort is wickedly retorted to Chriſt's diſhonour. For I doubt not but he is deſcribed by his Human Nature in this place; not only becauſe in this Nature he paid that Ranſom, (which he ſpeaks of in the words immediately following) but eſpecially for the drawing of Sinners to him; ſeeing he is the Man Chriſt Jeſus, one that clothed himſelf in their own Fleſh; and to encourage the Faith of Believers, that he tenderly reſents all their Wants, and Miſeries, and that they may ſafely truſt him with all their Concerns, as one that will carefully mind them as his own, and will be for them a merciful and faithful High Prieſt in things pertaining to God.

Cur quæſo addidit homo? niſi ad exprimendam naturam, ſecundam quam Chriſtus eſt mediator? Bell. de Chriſto Med. lib. 5. cap. 3. tom- 2.

4. He is deſcribed by his Names; by his appellative Name Chriſt, and his proper Name Jeſus. The Name Jeſus, notes his Work about which he came, and Chriſt the Offices to which he was anointed; and in the execution of which he is our Jeſus. In the Name Jeſus, the whole Goſpel is hid; it is the Light, the Food, the Medicine of the Soul, as one ſpeaks. The note from hence is,

In nomine JESU totam latet evangelium; hoc nomen eſt lux, cibus, & medicina animæ, S. Glaſſimus.

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt is the true and only Mediator betwixt God and Men.

Ye are come to Jeſus the Mediator of the New Covenant. Heb. 12. 24. And for this cauſe he is the Mediator of the New Teſtament, &c. Heb. 9. 14. I might ſhew you a whole vein of Scriptures running this way; but to keep a profitable and clear Method, I ſhall ſhew, Firſt, What is the ſenſe of this word Μεσίτης a Mediator.

Secondly, What it implies, as it is applied to Chriſt.

Thirdly, How it appears that he is the true and only Mediator betwixt God and Men.

Fourthly, In what capacity he performed his Mediatory Work.

Firſt, What is the Senſe and Import of this word Μεσίτης, a Mediator? The true Senſe and Importance of it, is a middle perſon, or one that interpoſes betwixt two Parties at variance, to make peace betwixt them. So that as Satan is medium disjungens, a Medium of Diſcord; ſo Chriſt is medium conjungens, a Medium of Concord and Peace. And he is ſuch a Middler, both in reſpect of his Perſon, and Office: In reſpect of his Perſon, he is a Middler; that is, one that hath the ſame Nature both with God and us, true God, and true Man; and in reſpect of his Office or Work, which is to interpoſe or tranſact the buſineſs of Reconciliation between us and God. The former ſome call his ſubſtantial, the latter his evergitical or operative Mediation. Tho' I rather conceive that which is call'd his ſubſtantial Mediation, is but the aptitude of his Perſon to execute the Mediatorial Function; and that it doth not conſtitute two kinds of Mediation. His being a middle Perſon, fits and capacitates him to ſtand in the midſt betwixt God and us. This, I ſay, is the proper ſenſe of the word; tho' Μεσίτης a Mediator be rendred variouſly; ſometimes an Umpire, or Arbitrator; ſometimes a Meſſenger that goes betwixt two Perſons; ſometimes an Interpreter, imparting the mind one to another; ſometimes a Reconciler or Peacemaker. And in all theſe ſenſes Chriſt is the Μεσίτης the middle Perſon, in his Mediation of Reconciliation or Interceſſion, that is, either in his mediating by ſuffering to make Peace, as he did on Earth, or to continue, and maintain Peace, as he doth in Heaven, by meritorious Interceſſion. Both theſe ways he is the only Mediator. And he manageth this his Mediation.

Vocamus mediatorem eum qui iter aliquos diffidentes, aut certe conjunctos medium ſe interponit, ut eos redigat ad concordiam, vel novo fœdere conjungat. Nomen Mediatoris in ſua propriâ ſignificatione non eſt nomen ſubſtantiæ, ſed muneris; & officii ſubſtantia igitur, & operatio non conſtituunt duo genera mediationis ſed unum & idem. Dr. Ames. Bellarum. lib. 5. p. 117. Mediator dicitur Chriſtus, tum quà medius, tum quam medians; medius perſona, medians officio. Trelcat. Juſtit. p. 78.

1. As an Umpire or Arbitrator; one that layeth his hands upon both Parties, as Job ſpeaks, ch. 9. 33. ſo doth Chriſt, he layeth his hands (ſpeaking after the manner of Men) upon God; and ſaith, Father, wilt thou be at peace with them, and readmit them into thy favour? If thou wilt, thou ſhalt be fully ſatisfied for all that they have done againſt thee. And then he layeth his hand upon Man, and ſaith, Poor Sinner, be not diſcouraged, thou ſhalt be juſtified and ſaved.

Μεσίτης, Sequeſter, Arbiter, Interpreter, Conciliator.

2. As a Meſſenger or Ambaſſador; ſo he came to impart the mind of God to us, and ſo he preſents our deſires to God. And in this ſenſe only Socinus would allow Chriſt to be Mediator. But therein he endeavours to undermine the Foundation, and to exclude him from being a Mediator by Suretiſhip. Which is,

3. The third way of this Mediation. So the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 7. he is ἔγγυος, the Surety, or Pledge. Which, as the learned David Pareus well expreſſeth it, is one that engageth to ſatisfie another, or gives Caution or Security by a Pledge in the hand for it. And indeed both theſe ways Chriſt is our Mediator by Suretiſhip viz. in a way of ſatisfaction, coming under our obligation to anſwer the Law; this he did on the Croſs; and in a way of caution, a ſurety for the Peace, or good Behaviour. But to be more explicate and clear, I ſhall, ἔγγυος eſt ſponſor, fidejuſſor, præs, à γῖνος, manus; & ἐν quaſi ἐν γύιοις in manibus; vel ut Suidas ἄγγυ; vel γύια terra, quà eſt firma, ſtabilis, immobilis.

Secondly, In the next place enquire, what it implies and carries in it, for Chriſt to be a Mediator betwixt God and us. And there are mainly theſe five things in it.

1. At the firſt ſight, it carries in it a moſt dreadful breach and jar betwixt God and Men; elſe no need of a Mediator of Reconciliation. There was indeed a ſweet League of Amity once between them, but it was quickly diſſolved by Sin; the wrath of the Lord was kindled againſt Man, purſuing him to Deſtruction, Pſal. 5. 5. Thou hateſt all the Works of Iniquity. And Man was filled with unnatural Enmity againſt his God, Rom. 1. 30. θεοσογεῖς, Haters of God; this put an end to all friendly Commerce and Intercourſe between him and God. Reader, ſay not in thy Heart, that it's much one Sin, and that ſeemingly ſo ſmall, ſhould make ſuch a Breach as this, and cauſe the God of Mercy and Goodneſs ſo to abhor the works of his hands, and that as ſoon as he had made Man; for it was a heinous and aggravated Evil. It was upright, perfect Man, created in the Image of God, that thus ſinned: he ſinned when his Mind was moſt bright, clear and apprehenſive; his Conſcience pure and active; his Will free, and able to withſtand any Temptation; his Conſcience pure and undefiled: yea, he was a publick, as well as a perfect Man, and well knew that the Happineſs or Miſery of his numberleſs Offſpring was involved in him.

The Condition he was placed in was exceeding happy. No neceſſity or want could arm and edge a Temptation. He lived amidſt all natural and ſpiritual Pleaſures and Delights, the Lord moſt delightfully converſing with him. Yea, he ſinned while as yet his Creation-mercy was freſh upon him, and in this Sin was moſt horrible Ingratitude, yea, a caſting off the Yoke of Obedience, almoſt as ſoon as God had put it on. God now ſaw the Work of his hands ſpoiled, a Race of Rebels now to be propagated, who in their ſucceſſive Generations would be fighting againſt God. He ſaw it, and his juſt Indignation ſparkled againſt Man, and reſolves to purſue him to the bottom of Hell.

2. It implies a neceſſity of Satisfaction and Reparation to the Juſtice of God: for the very deſign and end of this Mediation was to make Peace, by giving full Satisfaction to the Party that was wronged. The Photinians and ſome others, have dreamed of a Reconciliation with God, founded not upon Satisfaction, but upon the abſolute Mercy, Goodneſs, and Free-will of God. But concerning that abſolute Goodneſs and Mercy of God, reconciling Sinners to himſelf, there is a deep ſilence throughout the Scriptures: And whatever is ſpoken of it upon that account, is as it works to us through Chriſt, Epheſ. 1. 3, 4, 5. Acts 4. 12. Joh. 6. 40. And we cannot imagine, either how God could exerciſe Mercy to the prejudice of his Juſtice, which muſt be, if we muſt be reconcil'd without full Satisfaction; or how ſuch a full Satisfaction ſhould be made by any other than Chriſt. Mercy indeed moved in the Heart of God to poor Man; but from his Heart it found no way to vent it ſelf for us, but through the Heart-blood of Jeſus Chriſt: And in him the Juſtice of God was fully ſatisfied, and the Miſery of the Creature fully cured. And ſo, as Auguſtine ſpeaks, God neither loſt the ſeverity of his Juſtice in the goodneſs of Mercy, nor the goodneſs of his Mercy in the exactneſs of his Severity. But if it had been poſſible God could have found out a way to reconcile us without ſatisfaction, yet it's paſt doubt now, that he hath pitch'd and fix'd on this way. And for any now to imagine to reconcile themſelves to God by any thing but Faith in the Blood of this Mediator, is not only moſt vain in it ſelf, and deſtructive to the Soul, but moſt inſolently derogatory to the Wiſdom and Grace of God.

De abſoluta enim bonitate, & voluntate ſalvandi, ſcriptura magis muta eſt quam piſcis. Dieteric. His poſitis, ſequitur Dei neque naturam, neque Juſtitiam ſummam pati, ut legis tranſgreſſio ulla, ſine compenſatione juſta, dimittatur. Bradſhaw de Juſtif. p. 68. Nec in bonitate miſericordiæ perdit judicii ſeveritatem; nec in judicando cum ſeveritate amittit miſericordiæ bonitatem. Aug. in Pſ. 100.

And to ſuch I would ſay, as Tertullian to Marcion, whom he calls the Murderer of Truth, Spare the only hope of the whole World, O thou who deſtroyeſt the moſt neceſſary Glory of our Faith! All that we hope for is but a Phantaſm without this. Peace of Conſcience can be rationally ſettled on no other Foundation but this: For God having made a Law to govern Man, and this Law violated by Man; either the Penalty muſt be levied on the Delinquent, or Satisfaction made by his Surety. As good no Law, as no Penalty for Diſobedience; and as good no Penalty, as no Execution. He therefore that will be a Mediator of Reconciliation betwixt God and Man, muſt bring God a Price in his hand, and that adequate to the Offence and Wrong done him, elſe he will not treat about Peace; and ſo did our Mediator.

Parce unicæ ſpei totius orbis, O tu qui deſtruis neceſſarium decus fidei. Tertul. lib. de Carne Chriſti.

3. Chriſt's being a Mediator of Reconciliation and Interceſſion, implies the infinite value of his Blood and Sufferings, as that which in it ſelf was ſufficient to ſtop the courſe of God's Juſtice, and render him not only placable, but abundantly ſatisfied and well pleaſed, even with thoſe that before were Enemies. And ſo much is ſaid of it, Col. 1. 21, 22. And ye that were ſometimes alienated, and Enemies in your Minds by wicked Works, yet now hath he reconciled, in the Body of his Fleſh through Death, to preſent you holy, and unblameable, and unreproveable in his ſight. Surely, that which can cauſe the Holy Ghoſt, juſtly incenſed againſt Sinners, to lay aſide all his Wrath, and take an Enemy into his Boſom, and eſtabliſh ſuch an Amity as can never more be broken, but to reſt in his Love, and to joy over him with ſinging, as it is Zeph. 3. 17. this muſt be a moſt excellent and efficacious thing.

4. Chriſt being a Mediator of Reconciliation, implies the ardent Love, and large Pity that filled his Heart towards poor Sinners. For he doth not only mediates by way of Intreaty, going betwixt both, and perſwading and begging Peace; but he mediates (as you have heard) in the capacity of a Surety, by putting himſelf under an Obligation to ſatisfie our Debts. O how compaſſionately did his Heart work towards us, that when he ſaw the Arm of Juſtice lifted up to deſtroy us, would interpoſe himſelf, and receive the ſtroke, tho' he knew it would ſmite him dead! Our Mediator, like Jonah his Type, ſeeing the ſtormy Sea of God's Wrath working tempeſtuouſly, and ready to ſwallow us up, caſt in himſelf to appeaſe the Storm. I remember how much that noble Act of Marcus Curtius is celebrated in the Roman Story, who being informed by the Oracle, that the great Breach made by the Earthquake could not be cloſed, except ſomething of worth were caſt into it, heated with love to the Commonwealth, he went and caſt in himſelf. This was looked upon as a bold and brave Adventure: But what was this to Chriſt?

5. Chriſt being a Mediator betwixt God and Men, implies, as the fitneſs of his Perſon, ſo his authoritative Call to undertake it. And indeed the Father, who was the wronged Perſon, call'd him to be the Umpire and Arbitrator, truſting his Honour in his hands. Now Chriſt was inveſted with this Office and Power virtually, ſoon after the Breach was made by Adam's Fall; for we have the early promiſe of it, Gen. 3. 15. Ever ſince, till his Incarnation, he was a virtual and effectual Mediator; and on that account he is call'd the Lamb ſlain from the beginning of the World, Rev. 13. 8. And actually, from the time of his Incarnation. But having diſcuſſed this more largely in a former Diſcourſe, I ſhall diſmiſs it here, and apply my ſelf to the third Thing propoſed, which is,

Thirdly, How it appears that Jeſus Chriſt is the true and only Mediator betwixt God and Men. I reply, It's manifeſt he is ſo,

1. Becauſe he, and no other, is revealed to us by God: And if God reveal him, and no other, we muſt receive him, and no other as ſuch. Take but two Scriptures at preſent, that in 1 Cor. 8. 5. The Heathen have many gods, and many Lords, i. e. many great gods, ſupream Powers and ultimate Objects of their Worſhip; and leſt theſe great gods ſhould be defiled by their immediate and unhallowed approaches to them, they therefore invented Heroes, Demi-gods, Intermediate Powers, that were to be as Agents, or Lord-Mediators betwixt the gods, and them, to convey their Prayers to the gods, and the Bleſſings of the gods back again to them. But unto us (ſaith he) there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we by him, i. e. one ſupream Eſſence, the firſt Spring and Fountain of Bleſſings; and one Lord, i. e. one Mediator, δι᾽ οὗ τὰ πάντα, ϗ ἡμεῖς δι᾽ αὐτοῦ; by whom are all things, and we by him. By whom are all things which come from the Father to us, and by whom are all our Addreſſes to the Father, ſo Acts 4. 12. Neither is there Salvation in any other; for there is none other Name under Heaven given among Men, whereby we muſt be ſaved. No other Name, i. e. no other Authority, or rather no other Perſon authorized under Heaven, i. e. in the whole World: for Heaven is not here oppoſed to Earth, as tho' there were other Interceſſors in Heaven beſides Chriſt; no, no, in Heaven and Earth God has given him, and none but him, to be our Mediator. One Sun is ſufficient for the whole World; and one Mediator for all Men in the World. So that the Scriptures affirm this is he, and exclude all others.

Διὰ δαιμονίων πᾶσα ὁμιλία, ϗ διάλεκτος μεταξὺ θεῶν, ϗ ἀνθρώπων. Plut.

Ονομα ἕτερον i. e. Alia cujuſquam auctoritas. Per nomen, res ipſa, hic Chriſtus ipſe; ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν i. e. uſpiam, Neque enim hoc loco cœlum opponitur terræ, quaſi in cœlo ſint alii præter Chriſtum deprecatores; in terra vero non item: ſed in Heb. eſt Plœnaſmus. Beza in loc.

2. Becauſe he, and no other, is fit for and capable of this Office. Who but he that hath the Divine and Human Nature united in his ſingle Perſon, can be a fit Days-man to lay his Hand upon both? Who but he that was God could ſupport under ſuch Sufferings as were by Divine Juſtice exacted for Satisfaction? Take a Perſon of the greateſt Spirit, and put him but an hour in the caſe Chriſt was in when he ſweat Blood in the Garden, or utter'd that heart-rending Cry upon the Croſs, and he had melted under it as a Moth.

Sol nondum conſpectus, illuminat orbem.

3. Becauſe he is alone ſufficient to reconcile the World to God by his Blood, without Acceſſions from any other. The virtue of his Blood reach'd back as far as Adam, and reaches forward to the end of the World; and will be as freſh, vigorous, and efficacious then, as the firſt moment it was ſhed. The Sun makes Day before it actually riſe, and continues Days to us ſome time after it is ſet: So doth Chriſt, who is the ſame yeſterday, to day, and for ever; ſo that he is the true and only Mediator betwixt God and Men: No other is revealed in Scripture; no other ſufficient for it; no other needed beſide him.

Fourthly, The laſt thing to be explained is, in what a Capacity he executed his Mediatory Work.

Divinitas ſine humanitate, & humanitas ſine divinitate, non eſt Mediatrix, ſed inter divinitatem ſolam, & humanitatem ſolam; Mediatrix eſt humana divinitas, & divina humanitas. Aug. Hom. 2. Appellationes officii competunt Chriſto ſecundum utramque naturam. Ames Belion. cap. 5.

About which we affirm, according to Scripture, that he performs that Work as God-Man in both Natures. Papiſts, in denying Chriſt to act as Mediator according to his Divine Nature, do at once ſpoil the whole Mediation of Chriſt of all its Efficacy, Dignity and Value, which riſes from that Nature, which they deny to co-operate, and exert its virtue in his active and paſſive Obedience. They ſay the Apoſtle in my Text diſtinguiſhes the Mediator from God, in ſaying, There is one God, and one Mediator. Ours aptly reply, that the ſame Apoſtle diſtinguiſhes Chriſt from Man, Gal. 1. 1. Not by Man, but by Jeſus Chriſt. Doth it thence follow, that Chriſt is not true Man? Or that, according to his Divine Nature only he call'd Paul? But what need I ſtay my Reader here? Had not Chriſt, as Mediator, power to lay down his Life, and power to take it up again? Joh. 10. 17, 18. Had he not, as Mediator, all Power in Heaven and Earth to inſtitute Ordinances, and appoint Officers? Matth. 28. 18. to Baptize Men with the Holy Ghoſt and Fire? Matth. 3. 11. to keep thoſe his Father gave him in this World? Joh. 17. 12. to raiſe up the Saints again in the laſt day? Joh. 1. 54. Are theſe, with many more I might name, the Effects of the meer Human Nature? Or, were they not performed by him as God-man? And beſides, how could he, as Mediator, be the Object of our Faith, and Religious Adoration, if we are not to reſpect him as God-man? But I long now to be at the Application of this: And the firſt Inference from it is this.

Inference 1.

That it is a dangerous thing to reject Jeſus Chriſt, the only Mediator betwixt God and Men. Alas! there is no other to interpoſe and skreen thee from the devouring Fire, the everlaſting Burnings! O it's a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God! And into his hands you muſt needs fall, without an Intereſt in the only Mediator. Which of us can dwell with devouring Fire? who can endure the everlaſting Burnings? Iſa. 33. 14. You know how they ſinged and ſcorched the green Tree, but what would they do to the dry Tree? Luke 23. 31. Indeed, if there were another Plank to ſave after the Shipwrack, any other way to be reconciled to God beſide Jeſus the Mediator, ſomewhat might be ſaid to excuſe this Folly; but you are ſhut up to the Faith of Chriſt, as to your laſt Remedy, Gal. 3. 23. You are like ſtarving Beggars that are come at the laſt door. O take heed of deſpiſing or neglecting Chriſt! if ſo, there's none to intercede with God for you; the Breach betwixt him and you can never be compoſed. I remember here the words of Eli to his prophane Sons, who cauſed Men to abhor the Offerings of the Lord, 1 Sam. 2. 25. If one Man ſin againſt another, the Judge ſhall judge him; but if a Man ſin againſt the Lord, who ſhall intreat for him? the meaning is, in common Treſpaſſes betwixt Men, the Civil Magiſtrate takes cognizance of it, and decides the Controverſie by his Authority, ſo that there is an end of that Strife: but if Man ſin againſt the Lord, who ſhall intreat or arbitrate in that caſe? Eli's Sons had deſpiſed the Lord's Sacrifices, which were the ſacred Types of Chriſt, and the ſtated way that Men had then to act Faith on the Mediator in. Now (ſaith he) if a Man thus ſin againſt the Lord, by deſpiſing Chriſt ſhadowed out in that way, who ſhall intreat for him? what hope, what remedy remains?

Conculcârant ſacrificia, legeſque omnes divinas, atque ita quantum in ſe erat ſuſtuleruntè medio omnia praſidia. Sic Grotius in loc.

I remember it was the Saying of Luther, and he ſpake it with deep reſentment, Nolo Deum abſolutum, I will have nothing to do with an abſolute God, i. e. with God without a Mediator. Thus the Devils have to do with God: but will ye, in whoſe Nature Chriſt is come, put your ſelves into their ſtate and caſe? God forbid!

Inference 2.

Hence alſo be informed, how great an Evil it is to join any other Mediators, either of Reconciliation, or meritorious Interceſſion, with Jeſus Chriſt. O this is a horrid Sin, and that which both pours the greateſt Contempt upon Chriſt, and brings the ſureſt and soreſt Deſtruction upon the Sinner! I am aſhamed my Pen ſhould engliſh what mine Eyes have ſeen in the Writings of Papiſts, aſcribing as much, yea, more to the Mediation of Mary than to Chriſt, with no leſs than blaſphemous Impudence, thus commenting upon Scripture:

What is that which the Lord ſaith, I have trod the Wine-preſs alone, and of the People there was no Man with me? True, Lord, there was no Man with thee, but there was a Woman with thee, who received all theſe Wounds in her Heart, which thou received'ſt in thy Body. I will not blot my Paper with more of this, but refer the learned Reader to the Margin, where he may (if he have a mind to ſee more) be informed, not only what Blaſphemy hath dropt from ſingle Pens, but even from Councils, to the reproach of Jeſus Chriſt, and his Blood.

Mariale Argentinenſe lib. 1. c. 4. fol. 13. Vincent. Brun. in meditat. feſt. B. Virginis, Colon. 1559. p. 11. Liber Cantionum Dilingæ, Anno 1577. Concil. Trident. Seſſ. 25. Pſalt. Mariæ, Anno 1573. p. 29.

How they ſtamp their own ſordid Works with the peculiar dignity and value of Chriſt's Blood; and therein ſeek to enter at the Gate which God hath ſhut to all the World, becauſe Jeſus Chriſt the Prince entred in thereby, Ezek. 44. 2, 3. He entred into Heaven in a direct immediate way, even in his own Name, and for his own ſake; this Gate, ſaith the Lord, ſhall be ſhut to all others: And I wiſh Men would conſider it, and fear, leſt while they ſeek entrance into Heaven at the wrong Door, they do not for ever ſhut againſt themſelves the true and only Door of Happineſs.

Inference 3.

If Jeſus Chriſt be the only Mediator of Reconciliation betwixt God and Men; then reconciled Souls ſhould thankfully aſcribe all the Peace, Favour, and Comforts they have from God, to their Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Whenever you have had free Admiſſion, and ſweet Entertainment with God in the more publick Ordinances, or private Duties of his Worſhip, when we had his Smiles, his Seals, and with Hearts warmed with Comfort, are returning from thoſe Duties, ſay, O my Soul, thou may'ſt thank thy good Lord Jeſus Chriſt for all this! Had not he interpos'd as a Mediator of Reconciliation, I could never have had acceſs to, or friendly Communion with God to all Eternity.

Immediately upon Adam's Sin, the Door of Communion with God was lock'd, yea, chain'd up, and no more coming nigh the Lord: Not a Soul could have any acceſs to him, either in a way of Communion in this World, or of Enjoyment in that to come. It was Jeſus the Mediator that open'd that Door again, and in him it is that we have Boldneſs, and Acceſs with Confidence, Epheſ. 3. 12. We can now come to God by a new and a living way, conſecrated for us through the Vail, that is to ſay, his Fleſh, Heb. 10. 20. The Vail had a double uſe, as Chriſt's Fleſh anſwerably hath: It hid the Glory of the Sanctum Sanctorum, and alſo gave entrance into it. Chriſt's Incarnation rebates the Edge of the Divine Glory and Brightneſs, that we may be able to bear it, and converſe with it; and it gives admiſſion into it alſo. O thank your dear Lord Jeſus for your preſent, and your future Heaven! Theſe are Mercies which daily emerge out of the Ocean of Chriſt's Blood, and come ſwimming in it to our Doors. Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Inf. 4. If Jeſus Chriſt be the true and only Mediator, both of Reconciliation and meritorious Interceſſion betwixt God and Men, how ſafe and ſecure then is the condition and ſtate of Believers! Surely, as his Mediation by Sufferings hath fully reconciled, ſo his Mediation by Interceſſion will everlaſtingly maintain the ſtate of Peace betwixt them and God, and prevent all future Breaches. Being juſtified by Faith, we have Peace with God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. 5. 1. It's a firm and laſting Peace, and the Mediator that made it, lies as a Lidger in Heaven to maintain it for ever, and prevent new Jars, Heb. 9. 24. There to appear in the preſence of God for us; according to the Cuſtom of Princes and States, who being confederate, have their Agents reſident in each others Courts, who upon all Occaſions appear in the preſence of the Prince, in the name and behalf of thoſe whom they repreſent, and negotiate for.

And here it's proper to reflect upon the profound and incomprehenſible Wiſdom of God, who hath made an Advantage to us even out of our Sin and Miſery. Come, ſee and adore the Wiſdom of our God, that hath ſo improved, reduced, and diſpoſed the Fall of Adam, as to make a ſingular advantage, thereby to advance his Offſpring to a better State. It was truly ſaid by one of the Ancients upon this account, That Job was a happier Man upon the Dunghil, than Adam was in Paradice. His Holineſs indeed was perfect, his Happineſs very great; but neither of them permanent and indefeaſible, as our Happineſs by the Mediator is. So that in the ſame ſenſe ſome Divines call Judas his Treaſon, Fœlix ſcelus, a happy Wickedneſs; we may call Adam's Fall, Fœlix lapſus, a happy Fall, becauſe ordered and over-ruled by the Wiſdom of God, to ſuch an advantage for us. And to that purpoſe Auſtin ſomewhere ſweetly ſpeaks; O how happily did I fall in Adam, who roſe again more happily in Chriſt! Thus did the Lord turn a Poiſon into an Antidote, thus did that dreadful Fall make way for a more bleſſed and fixed State. Now we are ſo confirmed, fixed, and eſtabliſhed by Chriſt in the Favour of God, that there can be no more ſuch fatal Breaches and dreadful Jars betwixt God and his reconciled ones for ever. The Bone that's well ſet is ſtronger where its knit than it was before. Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Fœlicior Job in Sterquilinio, quam Adamus in Paradiſo.

O quam fœliciter cecidi in Adamo, qui poſt lapſum fœlicius reſurrexi in Chriſto! Aug.

Inference 5. Did Jeſus Chriſt interpoſe betwixt us and the Wrath of God, as a Mediator of Reconciliation? Did he rather chuſe to receive the ſtroke upon himſelf, than to ſee us ruined by it? How well then doth it become the People of God, in a thankful ſenſe of this Grace, to interpoſe themſelves betwixt Jeſus Chriſt and the Evils they ſee like to fall upon his Name and Intereſt in the World? O that there were but ſuch a Heart in the People of God! I remember it's a Saying of Jerom, when he heard the Revilings and Blaſphemings of many againſt Chriſt, and his precious Truths, O (ſaid he) that they would turn their Weapons from Chriſt to me, and be ſatisfied with my Blood! And much to the ſame ſenſe is that ſweet one of Bernard, Happy were I, if God would vouchſafe to uſe me as a Shield. And David could ſay, The Reproaches of them that reproached thee fell upon me, Pſal. 69. 9. Ten Thouſand of our Names are nothing to Chriſt's Name: His Name is κάλον ὄνομα, a worthy Name; and no Man that gives up his Name as a Shield to Chriſt, but ſhall thereby ſecure and increaſe the true Honour of it. And tho' wicked Men for the preſent may beſpatter them, yet Jeſus Chriſt will take it out of the Dirt, (as one ſpeaks) wipe it clean, and give it us again. O 'tis the leaſt one can do to interpoſe our ſelves and all that is dear to us, betwixt Jeſus Chriſt and the Wrath of Men, when he (as you hear) interpoſed himſelf betwixt you and the eternal Wrath of God!

O if I could be a Bridge over the Water for my Lord Jeſus to walk upon, and keep his Feet dry! O, if my poor bit of Heaven could go betwixt my Lord, and Blaſphemy and Diſhonour! ſaid another Worthy.

Serm. 9. Opens the firſt Branch of the Prophetical Office, conſiſting in the Revelation of the Will of God.

ACTS. III. 22.

A Prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your Brethren like unto me; him ſhall ye hear in all things, whatſoever he ſhall ſay unto you.

HAving in the former Diſcourſes ſhewn you the ſolemn Preparations both on the Father's part, and on the Son's, part, for the bleſſed Deſign of reconciling us by the meritorious Mediation of Chriſt; and given you a general proſpect of that his Mediation in the former Sermon; Method now requires, that I proceed to ſhew how he executes this his Mediation, in the diſcharge of his bleſſed Offices of Prophet, Prieſt and King.

His Prophitical Office conſiſts of two Parts; one External, conſiſting in true and full Revelation of the Will of God to Men, according to that, John 17. 6. I have manifeſted thy Name to the Men thou gaveſt me. The other in Illuminating the Mind, and opening the Heart to receive and embrace that Doctrine. The firſt Part is contained in the words before us; A Prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up, &c.

Which words are an Allegation out of Moſes, recorded in Deut. 18. 15. and here by Peter pertinently applied to Chriſt, to convince the incredulous Jews, that he is the true and only Meſſiah, and the great Prophet of the Church; whoſe Doctrine it was highly dangerous to contemn, tho' out of the Mouths of ſuch (otherwiſe contemptible) Perſons as he and John were. And it's well obſerved by Calvin, he ſingles out this Teſtimony of Moſes rather than any other, becauſe of the great eſteem they had for Moſes and his Writings beyond any others. Now in the words themſelves are two general Parts.

Firſt, Chriſt, according to his Prophetical Office, deſcribed.

Secondly, Obedience to him as ſuch a Prophet, ſtrictly enjoined.

Firſt, You have here a deſcription of Chriſt in his prophetical Office; A Prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your Brethen like unto me. Where Chriſt is deſcribed,

1. By his Title, Prophet; and that, Princeps Prophetarum, the Prince of the Prophets, or the great and chief Shepherd, as he is ſtiled, Heb. 13. 10. 1 Pet. 5. 4. It belongs to a Prophet to expound the Law, declare the Will of God, and foretell things to come: All theſe meet, and that in a ſingular and eminent manner, in Chriſt our Prophet, Mat. 5. 21, &c. Joh. 1. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 11.

2. He is deſcribed by his Type; A Prophet like unto Moſes, who therein typified and prefigured him. But it is not ſaid of Moſes, in Deut. 34. 10. That there aroſe not a Prophet ſince in Iſrael like unto Moſes, whom the Lord knew face to face? True, of meer Men there never aroſe ſo great a Prophet in Iſrael, as Moſes was; either in reſpect of his Familiarity with God, or of his Miracles which he wrought in the Power of God: But Moſes himſelf was but a Star to this Sun. However, in theſe following Particulars Chriſt was like him. He was a Prophet that went between God and the People, carry'd God's Mind to them, and returned theirs to God, they not being able to bear the Voice of God immediately, Deut. 18. 16, 17. According to all that thou deſireſt of the Lord thy God in Horeb, in the day of thy Aſſembly, ſaying, Let me not hear again the Voice of the Lord my God, neither let me ſee this great fire any more, that I die not. And upon this their Requeſt, God makes the Promiſe which cited in the Text; Verſe 17, 18. They have well ſpoken that which they have ſpoken; I will raiſe them up a Prophet like unto thee, &c. Moſes was a very faithful Prophet, preciſely Faithful, and exact in all things that God gave him in charge, even to a Pin of the Tabernacle. Moſes verily was faithful in all his houſe, as a Servant, for a Teſtimony of thoſe things which were to be ſpoken after: But Chriſt as a Son over his own houſe, Heb. 3. 5, 6. Again, Moſes confirmed his Doctrine by Miracles, which he wrought in the preſence, and to the conviction of gain-ſayers. Herein Chriſt our Prophet is alſo like unto Moſes, who wrought many, mighty, and uncontrolled Miracles, which could not be denied, and by them confirmed the Goſpel which he Preached. Laſtly, Moſes was the Prophet which brought God's Iſrael out of literal Egypt, and Chriſt his out of ſpiritual Egypt, whereof that Bondage was a figure. Thus he is deſcribed by his likeneſs to Moſes, his Type.

Qui divinam illam majeſtatem é cœlo loquentem formidarent, jam in aſſumpta carne deliteſcentem & ſimilem illis factam, audire non timerant.

3. He is deſcribed by his Stock and Original, from which according to his fleſh he ſprang;

I will raiſe him up from among thy Brethren. Of Iſrael, as concerning the fleſh, Chriſt came. Rom. 9. 5. And it's evident that our Lord ſprang out of Judah, Heb. 7. 14. He honoured that Nation by his Nativity. Thus the Prophet is deſcribed.

Secondly, Here is a ſtrict Injunction of Obedience to this Prophet; Him ſhall ye hear in all things, &c. By hearing, underſtand Obedience. So words of ſenſe are frequently put in Scripture, to ſignifie thoſe Affections that are moved by, and uſe to follow thoſe ſenſes. And this Obedience is required to be yielded to this Prophet only univerſally, and under great penalties. It's required to be given to him only, for ſo [him] in the Text muſt be underſtood, as excluſive of all others. It's true, we are commanded to obey the Voice of his Miniſters, Heb. 13. 17. But ſtill it's Chriſt ſpeaking to them, to whom we pay our Obedience: He that heareth you, heareth me: We obey them in the Lord, i. e. commanding or forbidding in Chriſt's Name and Authority. So when God ſaid, Deut. 6. 13. [Thou ſhalt ſerve him] Chriſt expounds it excluſively, Mat. 4. 10. Him only ſhalt thou ſerve. He is the only Lord, Jude 4. and there to him only our Obedience is required. And as it's due to him only, ſo to him univerſally; Him ſhall ye hear in all things: His Commands are to be obeyed, not diſputed. A Judgment of diſcretion indeed is allowed to Chriſtians, to judge whether it be the Will of Chriſt or no. We muſt prove what is that holy, good and acceptable Will, Rom. 13. 2. His Sheep hear his Voice, and a Stranger they will not follow: They know his Voice, but know not the Voice of Strangers, John 10. 4, 5. But when his Will is underſtood and known, we have no liberty of choice, but are concluded by it, be the Duty commanded never ſo difficult, or the Sin forbidden never ſo tempting: And this is alſo required ſeverely, under penalty of being deſtroyed from among the People, and of God's requiring it at our hands, as it is in Deut. 18. i. e. of revenging himſelf in the deſtruction of the Diſobedient. Hence the Obſervation; Ipſum audies, i. e. ipſum ſolum; ſic illi ſervies, Deut. 6. 13. exponitur illi ſoli, Mat. 4. 10.

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt is called and appointed by God to be the great Prophet and Teacher of the Church.

He is anointed to preach good tidings to the meek, and ſent to bind up the broken-hearted, Iſa. 61. 1. When he came to Preach the Goſpel among the People, then was this Scripture fulfilled, Mat. 11. 27. Yea, all things are delivered him of his Father; ſo as no Man knoweth who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him. All Light is now collected into one Body of Light, the Son of Righteouſneſs; and be enlightneth every Man that cometh in the World, John 1. 1. And tho' he diſpenſeth Knowledge variouſly, in the times paſt, ſpeaking in many ways, and divers manners, to the Fathers; yet now the method and way of revealing the Will of God to us is fixt and ſettled in Chriſt: In theſe laſt times he hath ſpoken to me by his Son.

Twice hath the Lord ſolemnly ſealed him to this Office, or approved and owned him in it, by a miraculous Voice from the moſt excellent Glory, Mat. 3. ult. and Mat. 17. 5.

In this Point there are two things doctrinally to be diſcuſſed and opened, viz. What Chriſt's being a Prophet to the Church implies: And how he executes and diſcharges this his Office.

Firſt, What is implied in Chriſt's being a Prophet to the Church. And it neceſſarily imports theſe three Things.

1. The natural ignorance and blindneſs of Men in the things of God. This ſhews us that vain Man is born as the wild Aſſe's Colt.— The World is involved in darkneſs: The People ſit as in the region and ſhadow of Death, till Chriſt ariſe upon their Souls, Mat. 4. 15, 16, 17. 'Tis true, in the ſtate of Innocency Man had a clear apprehenſion of the Will of God without a Mediator; but now that Light is quencht in the corruption of Nature, and the natural Man receiveth not the things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 14. Theſe things of God are not only contrary to corrupt carnal Reaſon, but they are alſo above right Reaſon. Grace indeed uſeth Nature, but Nature can do nothing without Grace. The mind of a natural Man hath not only a native blindneſs, by reaſon whereof it cannot diſcern the things of the Spirit, but alſo a natural enmity, Rom. 8. 7. and hates the Light, 1 John 3. 19, 20. So that until the mind be healed, and enlightned by Jeſus Chriſt, the natural Faculty can no more diſcern the things of the Spirit, than the ſenſitive Faculty can diſcern the things of Reaſon. The Myſteries of Nature may be diſcovered by the Light of Nature; but when it comes to the ſupernatural Myſteries, there omnis Platonicorum caligavit ſubtilitas, as Cyprian ſomewhere ſpeaks, the moſt ſubtil, ſearching, penetrating Wit and Reaſon is ſtalled, and at a loſs.

Res cœleſtes rationis captum excedunt ſunt enim ſupra rationem rectam; prudentiæ carnis adverſantur, ſunt enim contra rationem pravam: natura indiget gratiâ, ut facultas ad ſupernaturale objectum recipiendum rectè diſponatur; & gratia utitur naturâ, ut mentis acumine, judicii perſpicacia & bonarum literarum luce, feliciores fiant in ſacrarum literarum ſtudio progreſſus. Dr. Reynold's Animalis homo.

2. It implies the Divinity of Chriſt, and proves him to be true God, foraſmuch as no other can reveal to the World in all Ages the Secrets that lay hid in the Heart of God, and that with ſuch convincing Evidence and Authority. He brought his Doctrine from the Boſom of his Father; John 1. 18. The only begotten Son, who is in the Boſom of the Father, he hath revealed him. The ſame words which his Father gave him, he hath given us, John 17. 8. He ſpake to us that which he had ſeen with his Father, John 8. 38. What Man can tell the Boſoms-counſels and Secrets of God? Who but he that eternally lay in that Boſom can expound them?

Si doctrina Chriſti ejuſdemq; conciones examinentur, ex iiſdem ſole clarius patebit verba ejus non eſſe verba nubi hominis, aut Prophetæ alicujus, ſed ipſius Patris, adeoque veri Dei. Portulit enim non tantum evangelium & doctrinam ſuam è ſinu Partis, ſed & non docuit ut Phariſæi & alii (puri puti) homines, ſed ὡς ἐξȣσίαν ἔχων, ut habens divinam auctoritatem, Luk. 4. 23. Id quod Phariſæorum miniſtri, hoſtes ejus, confitebantur his verbis, nunquam ita locutus eſt homo ut hic homo; quod ſi ergo verba ejus Patris ſunt verba, & non humanâ, ſed divinâ auctoritate prolata ſunt, utique; & verus Deus erit, cum effectus divinus arguat cauſam; & ſic cum non ſit, niſi unus verus Deus unicus certe, & ejuſdem cum Patre eſſentiæ Chriſtus erit. Dietericus Analyſis Evang. par. 3. p. (mihi) 341.

Beſides, other Prophets had their times aſſigned them to riſe, ſhine, and ſet again by Death, Zech. 1. 5. Your Fathers, where are they? And do the Prophets live for ever? But Chriſt is a fixed and perpetual Sun, that gives Light in all Ages of the World: For he is the ſame yeſterday, to day, and for ever, Heb. 13. 8. Yea, and the very Beams of his Divinity ſhone with awfulneſs upon the Hearts of them that heard him. So that his very Enemies were forced to ackcowledge, that never any Man ſpake like him, John 7. 46.

3. Implies Chriſt to be the Original and Fountain of all that Light which is miniſterially diffuſed up and down the World by Men. Miniſters are but Stars, which ſhine with a borrowed Light from the Sun: So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 3. 6, 7. For God who commanded the Light to ſhine out of darkneſs, hath ſhined in our Hearts, to give the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God, in the Face of Jeſus Chriſt. Thoſe that teach Men, muſt be firſt taught by Chriſt. All the Prophets of the Old, and all the Apoſtles, Paſtors, and Teachers of the New Teſtament, have lighted their Candles at his Torch: 'Twas Chriſt that gave them a Mouth, and Wiſdom, Luk. 21. 15. What Paul received from the Lord, he delivered to the Church, 1 Cor. 11. 23. Jeſus Chriſt is the chief Shepherd, 1 Pet. 5. 4. And all the under-Shepherds receive their Gifts and Commiſſions from him. Theſe things are manifeſtly implied in Chriſt's Prophetical Office.

Secondly, We ſhall next enquire how he executes and diſcharges this his Office, or how he enlightens and teacheth Men the Will of God. And this he hath done variouſly, gradually, plainly, powerfully, ſweetly, purely and fully.

1. Our great Prophet hath revealed unto Men the Will of God variouſly; not holding one even and conſtant tenour in the manifeſtations of the Father's Will, but as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, πολυμερῶς ϗ πολυτρόπως, at ſundry times, and in divers manners, Heb. 1. 1. Sometimes he taught the Church immediately, and in his own Perſon, John 18. 10. He declared God's Righteouſneſs in the great Congregation, Pſal. 22. 22. And ſometimes mediately, by his Miniſters and Officers, deputed to that Service by him: So he diſpenſed the knowledge of God to the Church before his Incarnation; it was Chriſt that in the time, and by the Miniſtry of Noah, went and preached to the Spirits in Priſon, as it is 1 Pet. 3. 10. that is, to Men and Women then alive, but now ſeparated from the Body, and impriſoned in Hell for their diſobedience: And it was Chriſt that was with the Church in the Wilderneſs, inſtructing and guiding them by the Miniſtry of Moſes and Aaron, Acts 7. 37, 38. and ſo he hath taught the Church ſince his Aſcenſion. He cannot now be perſonally with us, having other buſineſs to do for us in Heaven; but however, he will not be wanting to teach us by his Offices, whom for that end he hath ſet and appointed in the Church, Epheſ. 4. 11, 12.

2. He hath diſpenſed his bleſſed Light to the Church gradually. The diſcoveries of Light have been πολυμερῶς, that is, in many parts or parcels; ſometimes more obſcure and cloudy, as it was to the Old-Teſtament-Believers, by Viſions, Dreams, Urim, Thummim, vocal Oracles, Types, Sacrifices, &c. which tho' comparatively it were but a weak glimmering Light, and had no glory ſet by that which now ſhines, 2 Cor. 3. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. yet it was ſufficient for the Inſtruction and Salvation of the Elect in thoſe times; but now is Light ſprung up glorioſly in the Goſpel diſpenſation: And we all with open face, behold, as in a Glaſs, the Glory of the Lord. It is to us not a Twilight, but the Light of a perfect Day; and ſtill it is advancing in the ſeveral Ages of the World. I know more (ſaith Luther) than bleſſed Auſtin knew; and they that come after me will know more than I know.

3. Jeſus Chriſt our great Prophet hath manifeſted to us the Will of God plainly and perſpicuouſly. When he was on Earth himſelf, he taught the People by Parables, and without a Parable he ſpake nothing, Mat. 13. 3, 4. He cloathed ſublime and ſpiritual Myſteries in earthly Metaphors, ſtooping them thereby to the low and dull capacities of Men; ſpeaking ſo familiarly to the People about them, as if he had been ſpeaking earthly things to them, John 3. 22. And ſo (according to his own Example) would he have his Miniſters preach, uſing great plainneſs of ſpeech, 2 Cor. 3. 12. and by manifeſtation of the Truth, commending themſelves to every Man's Conſcience, 2 Cor. 4. 2. Yet not allowing them to be rude and careleſs in Expreſſion, pouring out indigeſted, crude, immethodical Words; no, a holy, ſerious, ſtrict, and grave Expreſſion befits the Lips of his Embaſſadors: And whoever ſpake more weightily, more logically, or perſwaſively than that Apoſtle, by whoſe Pen Chriſt hath admoniſhed us to beware of vain affectation, and ſwelling words of vanity? But he would have us ſtoop to the underſtandings of the meaneſt, and not give the People a Comment darker than the Text: He would have us rather pierce their Conſciences, than tickle their Fancies; and break their Hearts, than pleaſe their Ears. Chriſt was a very plain Preacher.

Nec tamen eo tendit hæc Apoſtoli apologia quaſi concionatoribus quaſlibet loquendi ſordes, & quicquid in buccam venerit, effutiendi libidinem, nullo ſenſu, methodo, gravitite, judicio dictaret. Quis enim Paulo noſtro aut conſcientiis hominum altius intonat, Quis ſuavi- aut Argumentorum pondere firmiorem aſſenſum cogit? magis, ſed cœleſtivi, effectus in tranſverſum rapit? Reynold's Ubi ſupra..

4. Jeſus Chriſt diſcovered Truth powerfully; ſpeaking as one having Authority, and not as the Phariſees, Mat. 7. 29. They were cold and dull Preachers, their words did even freeze betwixt their lips; but Chriſt ſpake with Power, there was heat as well as light in his Doctrine: And ſo there is ſtill, tho' it be in the mouth of poor contemptible Men, 2 Cor. 10. 4. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God, to the caſting down of ſtrong holds: 'Tis ſtill quick and powerful, ſharper than a two-edged Sword; and piercing to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, Heb. 4. 12. The bleſſed Apoſtle imitated Chriſt; and being filled with his Spirit, ſpake home and freely to the hearts of Men. So many Words, ſo many claps of Thunder, (as one ſaid of him) which made the hearts of Sinners ſhake and tremble in their Breaſts. All faithful and able Miniſters are not alike gifted in this particular; but ſurely there is a holy ſeriouſneſs and ſpiritual grace and majeſty in their Doctrine, commanding reverence from their Hearers.

Optabat Auguſtinus Paulum audiviſſe è ſuggeſtu, quem tubam appellabat Chriſti, & Dei nubem, utquot verba, tot tonitrua, auribus ſuis inſonare videbantur.

5. This Prophet, Jeſus Chriſt, taught the People the Mind of God in a ſweet, affectionate, and taking manner. His words made their hearts burn within them, Luk. 24. 32. It was propheſied of him, Iſa. 42. 2. He ſhall not cry, nor lift up, nor cauſe his Voice to be heard on high. A bruiſed Reed he ſhall not break, and ſmoaking Flax he ſhall not quench. He knew how to ſpeak a word in ſeaſon to the weary Soul, Iſa. 61. 1. He gathered the Lambs with his Arms, and gently led thoſe with young, Iſa. 4. 11. How ſweetly did his words ſlide to the melting hearts about him! He drew with Cords of Love, with the Bands of a Man: He diſcouraged none, upbraided none that were willing to come to him: His familiarity and free condeſcenſions to the moſt vile and deſpiſeable Sinners, was often made the matter of his reproach. Such is his gentle and ſweet carriage to his People, that the Church is called the Lamb's Wife, Rev. 19. 7.

6. He revealed the Mind of God purely to the Men; his Doctrine had not the leaſt daſh of Error to debaſe it, his moſt enviouſly obſervant Hearers could find nothing to charge him: He is the faithful and true Witneſs, Rev. 1. 5. and he hath commanded his Miniſters to conſerve the ſimplicity and purity of the Goſpel, and not to blend and ſophiſticate it, 2 Cor. 4. 2.

7. And laſtly, He revealed the Will of God perfectly and fully, keeping back nothing needful to Salvation. So he tells the Diſciples, John 15. 15. All things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. He was faithful as a Son over his own Houſe, Heb. 3. 6. Thus you have a brief account of what is implied in this part of Chriſt's Prophetical Office, and how he performed it.

Inference 1. If Jeſus Chriſt, who is now paſſed into the Heavens, be the great Prophet and Teacher of the Church; hence we juſtly infer the continual neceſſity of a ſtanding Miniſtry of the Church: For by his Miniſters he now teacheth us, and to that intent hath fixed them in the Church, by a firm Conſtitution, there to remain to the end of the World, Mat. 28. ult. He teacheth Men no more Perſonally, but Miniſterially. His Miniſters ſupply the want of his Perſonal Preſence, 2 Cor. 5. 10. We pray you in Chriſt's ſtead. Theſe Offices he gave the Church at his Aſcenſion, i. e. when he ceaſed to teach them any longer with his own Lips; and ſo ſet them in the Church, that their Succeſſion ſhall never totally fail: For ſo that the word ἔθετο he hath ſet, 1 Cor. 12. 28. plainly implies. They are ſet by a ſure Eſtabliſhment, a firm and unalterable Conſtitution, even as the Times and Seaſons, which the Father hath put ἔθετο in his own power; it's the ſame Word: and it's well they are ſo firmly ſet and fixed there; for how many Adverſaries in all Ages have endeavoured to ſhake the very Office it ſelf? pretending that it's needleſs to be taught by Men, and wreſting ſuch Scriptures as theſe to countenance their Error, Joel 2. 28, 29. I will pour out my Spirit upon all Fleſh; and your Sons and Daughters ſhall propheſie, &c. And Jer. 31. 34. Theſe ſhall teach no more every Man his Neighbour, and every Man his Brother, ſaying, Know the Lord; for they ſhall all know me from the leaſt of them to the greateſt of them. As to that of Joel, it is anſwered, That if an Old-Teſtament-Prophecy may be underſtood according to a New-Teſtament-Interpretation, then that Prophecy doth no way oppoſe but confirm the Goſpel-Miniſtry. How the Apoſtle underſtood the Prophet in that his Prophecy, may be ſeen in Acts 2. 16. when the Spirit was poured out on the Day of Pentecoſt upon the Apoſtles. And ſurely he muſt be a confident Perſon indeed that thinks not an Apoſtle to be as good an Expoſitor of the Prophet, as himſelf. And for that in Jer. 31. we ſay,

1. That if it conclude againſt Miniſterial Teachings, it muſt equally conclude againſt Chriſtian Conferences.

2. We ſay that cannot be the ſenſe of one Scripture which contradicts the plain ſenſe of other Scriptures: But ſo this would, Eph. 4. 11, 12. 1 Cor. 12. 28.

3. And we ſay, the ſence of that Text is not negative but comparative; not that they ſhall have no need to be taught any Truth, but no ſuch need to be taught the firſt Truths; That there is a God, and who is this true God: They ſhall no more teach every Man his Brother, ſaying, Know the Lord; for they ſhall all know me. To conclude, God hath given Miniſters to the Church for Converſion and Edification-work, till we all come into the Unity of the Faith, to a perfect Man, Eph. 4. 11, 12. So that when all the Elect are converted, and all thoſe Converts become perfect Men; when there is no Error in Judgment or Practice, and no Seducer to cauſe it, then, and not till then, will a Goſpel-Miniſtry be uſeleſs. But (as it's well obſerved) there is not a Man that oppoſes a Goſpel-Miniſtry, but the very Being of that Man is a ſufficient Argument for the continuance of it.

Inference 2. If Chriſt be the great Prophet of the Church, and ſuch a Prophet; then it follows, That the weakeſt Chriſtians need not be diſcouraged at the dulneſs and incapacity they find in themſelves. For Chriſt is not only a patient and condeſcending Teacher, but he can alſo (as he often hath done) reveal that to Babes which is hid from the Wiſe and Learned, Mat. 11. 25. The Teſtimonies of the Lord are ſure, making wiſe the ſimple, Pſal. 19. 7. Yea, and ſuch as you are the Lord delights to chuſe, that his Grace may be the more conſpicuous in your Weakneſs, 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. You will have nothing of your own to glory in: You will not ſay, as a proud Wretch once ſaid, Ego, & Deus meus; I, and my God did this. Jeſus Chriſt affects not ſocial Glory, he will not divide the Praiſe with any. Well then, be not diſcouraged; others may know more in other things than you, but you are not incapable of knowing ſo much as ſhall ſave your Souls, if Chriſt will be your Teacher. In other Knowledge they excel you; but if ye knew Jeſus Chriſt, and the Truth as it is in him, one Drop of your Knowledge is worth a whole Sea of their Gifts: One Truth ſuckt by Faith and Prayer from the [illegible] of Chriſt, is better than ten thouſand dry Notions beaten out by wracking the Underſtanding. It's better in kind; the one being but natural, the other ſupernatural, from the ſaving Illuminations and inward Teachings of the Spirit: And ſo is one of thoſe better things that accompany Salvation. It's better in reſpect of Effects; other Knowledge leaves the Heart as dry, barren, and unaffected, as if it had its ſeat in another Man's Head: but that little you have been taught of Chriſt, ſheds down its gracious Influences upon your Affections, and ſlides ſweetly to your melting Hearts. So that as one preferr'd the moſt deſpicable work of a plain Ruſtick Chriſtian, before all the Triumphs of Alexander and Cæſar; much more ought ye to prefer one ſaving Manifeſtation of the Spirit, to all the powerleſs Illuminations of natural Men.

Si mihi daretur optio, eligerem Chriſtiani ruſtici ſordidiſſimum & maxime agreſte opus, præ omnibus victoriis & triumphis Alexandri & Cæſaris.

Inference 3. If Chriſt be the great Prophet and Teacher of the Church; it follows, That Prayer is a proper means for the increaſe of Knowledge: Prayer is the Golden Key which unlocks that Treaſure. When Daniel was to expound that Secret which was contained in the King's Dream, about which the Caldean Magicians had rackt their Brains to no purpoſe; what courſe doth Daniel take? Why, he went to his Houſe (ſaith the Text) Dan. 2. 17, 18. and made the thing known to Hananiah, Miſhael, and Azariah his Companions; that they would deſire Mercies of the God of Heaven concerning this Secret. And then was the Secret revealed to Daniel. Luther was wont to ſay, three Things make a Divine; Meditation, Temptation, and Prayer. Holy Mr. Bradford was wont to ſtudy upon his Knees. Thoſe Truths that are got by Prayer, leave an unuſual Sweetneſs upon the Heart. If Chriſt be our Teacher, it becomes all his Saints to be at his Feet.

Tria faciunt Theologum, Meditatio, Tentatio, Precatio. Luther.

Inference 4. If Chriſt be the great Prophet and Teacher of the Church, We may thence diſcern and judge of Doctrines, and it may ſerve us as a Teſt to try them by. For ſuch as Chriſt is, ſuch are the Doctrines that flow from him; every Error pretends to derive it ſelf from him: but as Chriſt was holy, humble, heavenly, meek, peaceful, plain and ſimple, and in all things alien, yea, contrary to the wiſdom of the World, the Gratifications of the Fleſh; ſuch are the Truths which he teacheth. They have his Character and Image ingraven on them. Would you know then whether this or that Doctrine be from the Spirit of Chriſt or no? Examine the Doctrine it ſelf by this rule. And whatſoever Doctrine you find to incourage and countenance Sin, to exalt Self, to be accommodated to earthly Deſigns and Intereſts, to warp and bend to the Humours and Luſts of Men; in a word, what Doctrine ſoever directly, and as a proper cauſe makes them that profeſs it carnal, turbulent, proud, ſenſual, &c. you may ſafely reject it, and conclude this never came from Jeſus Chriſt. The Doctrine of Chriſt is after Godlineſs; his Truth ſanctifies. There is a Guſtus ſpiritualis judicii, a Spiritual taſte, by which thoſe that have their Sences exerciſed, can diſtinguiſh things that differ. The Spiritual Man judgeth all things, 1 Cor. 2. 15. His Ear tries Words, as his Mouth taſteth Meats, Job 34. 3. Swallow nothing (let it come never ſo ſpeciouſly) that hath not ſome reliſh of Chriſt and Holineſs in it. Be ſure Chriſt never reveal'd any thing to Men, that derogates from his own Glory, or prejudices and obſtructs the ends of his own Death.

Inference 5. And as it will ſerve us for a Teſt of Doctrines, ſo it ſerves for a Teſt of Miniſters; and hence you may judge who are authorized and ſent by Chriſt the great Prophet to declare his Will to Men. Surely thoſe whom he ſends have his Spirit in their Hearts, as well as his Words in their Mouths. And according to meaſures of Grace received, they faithfully endeavour to fulfil their Miniſtry for Chriſt, as Chriſt did for his Father: As my Father hath ſent me, (ſaith Chriſt) ſo ſend I you, Joh. 20. 21. They take Chriſt for their Pattern in the whole courſe of their Miniſtration, and are ſuch as ſincerely endeavour to imitate the great Shepherd in theſe Six Particulars following.

1. Jeſus Chriſt was a faithful Miniſter, the faithful and true Witneſs, Rev. 1. 5. He declared the whole Mind of God to Men. Of him it was prophetically ſaid, Pſal. 40. 10. I have not hid thy Righteouſneſs within my Heart; I have declared thy faithfulneſs, and thy Salvation; I have not concealed thy Loving-kindneſs and thy Truth from the great Congregation. To the ſame ſenſe, and almoſt in the ſame words, the Apoſtle Paul profeſſed, in Acts 20. 20. I have kept back nothing that was profitable unto you; and verſe 35. I have ſhewed you all things. Not that every faithful Miniſter doth in the courſe of his Miniſtry, anatomize the whole body of Truth, and fully expound and apply each particular to the People: No, that is not the meaning, but of thoſe Doctrines which they have opportunity of opening, they do not out of fear, or to accommodate and ſecure baſe low ends, withhold the Mind of God, or ſo corrupt and abuſe his words, as to ſubject Truth to their own or other Mens Luſts. They preach not as pleaſing men, but God, 1 Theſſ. 2. 4. For if we yet pleaſe men, we cannot be the ſervants of Chriſt, Gal. 1. 10. Truth muſt be ſpoken, tho' the Greateſt on Earth be offended.

2. Jeſus Chriſt was a tender-hearted Miniſter, full of compaſſion to Souls. He was ſent to bind up the broken in heart, Iſa. 61. 1. He was full of Bowels to poor Sinners. He grieved at the hardneſs of Mens Hearts, Mark 3. 5. He mourned over Jeruſalem, and ſaid, O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, how oft would I have gathered thy Children as a Hen gathers her brood under her wings! Matth. 23. 37. His Bowels yerned when he ſaw the multitude as Sheep having no Shepherd, Matth. 9. 37. Theſe Bowels of Chriſt muſt be in all the under-Shepherds. God is my witneſs (ſaith one of them) how greatly I long after you all in (or after the pattern of) the bowels of Chriſt Jeſus, Phil. 1. 8. He that ſhews a hard Heart, unaffected with the Dangers and Miſeries of Souls, can never ſhew a Commiſſion from Chriſt to authorize him for Miniſterial Work.

In pro instar.

3. Jeſus Chriſt was a laborious painful Miniſter, he put a neceſſity on himſelf to finiſh his Work in his day; a Work infinitely great, in a very little time. Joh. 9. 4. I muſt work the Works of him that ſent me, while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work. O how much Work did Chriſt do in a little time on Earth! He went about doing good, Acts. 10. 38.

He was never idle. When he ſits down at Jacob's Well, to reſt himſelf being weary, preſently he falls into his Work, preaching the Goſpel to the Samaritaneſs. In this muſt his Miniſters reſemble him; ſtriving according to his working, that worketh in them mightily, Col. 1. 28, 29. An idle Miniſter ſeems to be a contradiction in adjecto; as who ſhould ſay, a dark Light.

4. Jeſus Chriſt delighted in nothing more than the ſucceſs of his Miniſtry; to ſee the Work of the Lord proſper in his hand, this was meat and drink to him. When the Seventy returned, and reported the ſucceſs of their firſt Embaſſy; Lord, even the Devils are ſubject to us through thy Name! Why, ſaith Chriſt, I beheld Satan fall as Lightning from Heaven. As if he had ſaid, You tell me no News, I ſaw it when I ſent you out at firſt: I know the Goſpel would make work where it came. And in that hour Jeſus rejoiced in Spirit, Luk. 10. 17, 18, 21. And is it not ſo with thoſe ſent by him? Don't they value the ſucceſs of their Miniſtry at a high rate? It is not (ſaith one) the expence, but the recoiling of our labours back again upon us, that kills us. Miniſters would not die ſo faſt, nor be grayheaded ſo ſoon, could they but ſee the travail of their Souls. My little Children (ſaith Paul) of whom I travel again in birth, πάλιν ὠδίνω, till Chriſt be formed in you, Gal. 4. 19. As for thoſe that have the name of Shepherds only, who viſit the Flock only once a year, about ſhearing time; who have the inſtruments of a fooliſh Shepherd (forcipes & mulctra) the Shears and Pail, Zech. 11. 15. woful will be their condition at the appearing of this great Shepherd.

5. Jeſus Chriſt was a Miniſter that lived up to his Doctrine: His Life and Doctrine harmonized in all things. He preſſed to Holineſs in his Doctrine, and was the great Pattern of Holineſs in his Life, Matth. 11. 28. Learn of me, I am meek and lowly. And ſuch his Miniſters deſire to approve themſelves, Phil. 4. 9. What ye have heard, and ſeen in me, that do. He preacht to their Eyes, as well as Ears. His Life was a Comment on his Doctrine. They might ſee Holineſs acted in his Life, as well as ſounded by his Lips. He Preacht the Doctrine, and lived the Application.

6. And laſtly, Jeſus Chriſt was a Miniſter that minded and maintained ſweet, ſecret communion with God, for all his conſtant publick labours. If he had been preaching and healing all the day, yet he would redeem time from his very ſleep to ſpend in ſecret Prayer: Matth. 14. 23. When he had ſent the Multitude away, he went up into a Mountain apart to pray, and was there alone. O bleſſed Pattern! Let the Keepers of the Vineyards remember they have a Vineyard of their own to keep; a Soul of their own that muſt be look'd after as well as other Mens. Thoſe that in theſe things imitate Chriſt, are ſurely ſent to us from him, and are worthy of double honour: They are a choice Bleſſing to the People.

Ser. 10. Opens the ſecond Branch of the Prophetical Office, conſiſting in the Illumination of the Underſtanding.

SERMON X.

LUKE XXIV. 45.

Then opened he their Underſtandings, &c.

KNowledge of Spiritual things is well diſtinguiſhed into Intellectual and Practical: the firſt hath its ſeat in the Mind, that latter in the Heart. This latter Divines call a Knowledge peculiar to Saints; and in the Apoſtle's Dialect it is ὑπερέχον γνώσεως Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ, Phil. 3. 8. The eminency or excellency of the Knowledge of Chriſt.

And indeed there is but little excellency in all thoſe petty Notions which furniſh the Lips with diſcourſe, unleſs by a ſweet and powerful Influence they draw the Conſcience and Will to the Obedience of Chriſt? Light in the Mind is neceſſarily antecedent to the ſweet and heavenly motions and mountains of the Affections. For the farther any man ſtands from the Light of Truth, the farther he muſt needs be from the Heat of Comfort. Heavenly quicknings are begotten in the Heart, while the Son of Righteouſneſs ſpreads the Beams of Truth into the Underſtanding, and the Soul ſits under thoſe its Wings: yet all the Light of the Goſpel ſpreading and diffuſing it ſelf into the Mind, can never ſavingly open and change the Heart, without another act of Chriſt upon it; and what that is, the Text informs you, Then opened he their Underſtandings, that they might underſtand the Scriptures.

In which Words we have both an act of Chriſt upon the Diſciples Underſtandings, and the immediate end and ſcope of that Act.

1. Chriſt's Act upon their Underſtandings; he opened their Underſtandings. By Underſtanding is not here meant the Mind only, in oppoſition to the Heart, Will and Affections, but theſe were opened by and with the Mind. The Mind is the Heart, as the Door to the Houſe: What comes into his Heart, comes in at the Underſtanding, which is Introductive to it; and altho' Truths ſometimes go no farther than the Entry, never penetrate the Hearts, yet here this effect is undoubtedly included.

Expoſitors make this Expreſſion parallel to that in Acts 16. 14. The Lord opened the Heart of Lydia. And it is well obſerved, that it is one thing to open the Scriptures, that is, to expound them, and give the meaning of them, as Paul is ſaid to do in Acts 18. 3. and another thing to open the Mind or Heart, as it is here. There are, as a learned Man truly obſerves, two doors of the Soul barr'd againſt Chriſt; the Underſtanding by Ignorance, and the Heart by Hardneſs; both theſe are opened by Chriſt. The former is opened by the preaching of the Goſpel, the other by the internal operation of the Spirit. The former belongs to the firſt part of Chriſt's Prophetical Office, opened in the former; the latter to that ſpecial internal part of his Prophetical Office, to be opened in this Sermon.

Ipſe eſt qui aperit cor noſtrum in lege ſuâ. Cagel. ſpecil. p. 57.

And that it was not a naked Act upon their Minds only, but that their Hearts and Minds did work in fellowſhip, being both touched by this Act of Chriſt, is evident enough by the Effects mentioned, verſ. 52, 53. They returned to Jeruſalem with great Joy, and were continually in the Temple praiſing and bleſſing God. It is confeſſed, that before this time Chriſt had opened their Hearts by Converſion; and his Opening is not to be underſtood ſimply, but ſecundum quid, in reference to thoſe particular Truths, in which till now they were not ſufficiently informed, and ſo their Hearts could not be duly affected with them. They were very dark in their apprehenſions of the Death and Reſurrection of Chriſt; and conſequently their Hearts were ſad and dejected about that which had befallen him. Verſ. 17. But when he opened his Scriptures and their Underſtandings and Heart together, then things appeared with another Face, and they return bleſſing and praiſing God.

2. Here is farther to be conſidered the deſign and end of this Act upon their Underſtandings; That they might underſtand the Scriptures. Where let it be marked, Reader, That the Teachings of Chriſt, and his Spirit, were never deſigned to take Men off from the reading, ſtudying, and ſearching for the Scriptures, as ſome vain Notioniſts have pretended, oppoſing thoſe things which are ſubordinated; but to make their ſtudies and duties the more fruitful, beneficial and effectual to their Souls; or that they might this way receive the end or bleſſing of all their Duties. God never intended to aboliſh his Word by giving his Spirit: And they are true Fanaticks, (as Calvin upon this place calls them) that think, or pretend ſo. By this means he would at once impart more Light, and make that they had before more operative and uſeful to them, eſpecially in ſuch a time of need as this was. Hence we obſerve, Neque enim ſpiritum Deus ſuis confert, qui verbi ſui Uſum aboleat, ſed potius qui fructuoſum reddat; quare perperam Fanatici homines revelationum prætextu ſpernendæ ſcripturæ ſibi licentiam concedunt. Calv. in loc.

Doct. That the opening of the Mind and Heart, effectually to receive the Truths of God, is the peculiar Prerogative and Office of Jeſus Chriſt.

One of the great Miſeries under which lapſed Nature labours, is ſpiritual Blindneſs. Jeſus Chriſt brings that Eye-ſalve which only can cure it. Rev. 3. 18. I counſel thee to buy of me Eye-ſalve, that thou mayeſt ſee. Thoſe to whom the Spirit hath applied it, can ſay as it is, 1 Joh. 5. 20. We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an Underſtanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jeſus Chriſt: this is the true God, and eternal Life.

To the Spiritual Illumination of a Soul it ſuffices not that the Object be revealed, nor yet that Man, the Subject of that Knowledge, have a due uſe of his own Reaſon; but it is further neceſſary that the Grace and ſpecial Aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit be ſuperadded, to open and mollifie the heart, and ſo give it a due taſte and reliſh of the ſweetneſs of Spiritual Truth. By opening the Goſpel, he reveals Truth to us, and by opening the heart in us. Now tho' this cannot be without that, yet it's much more excellent to have Truth revealed in us, than to us. This Divines call præcipuum illud ἀποτέλεσμα muneris Prophetici, the principal perfective effect of the Prophetical Office; the ſpecial Bleſſing promiſed the in new Covenant, Heb. 8. 10. I will put my Laws in their Mind, and write them in their Hearts.

For explication of this part of Chriſt's Prophetical Office, I ſhall, as in the former, ſhew what is included in the opening of the Underſtanding, and by what Acts Chriſt performs it.

Firſt, Give you a brief account of what is included in this Act of Chriſt; take it in the following Particulars.

1. It implies the tranſcendent nature of Spiritual things, far exceeding the higheſt flight and reach of Natural Reaſon. Jeſus Chriſt muſt by his Spirit open the Underſtandings of Men, or they can never comprehend ſuch Myſteries. Some Men have ſtrong natural Parts, and by improvement of them, are become Eagle-ey'd in the Myſteries of Nature. Who more acute than the Heathen Sages? Yet to them the Goſpel ſeemed Fooliſhneſs, 1 Cor. 1. 20. Auſtin confeſſes that before his Converſion, he often felt his Spirit ſwell with offence and contempt of the Goſpel; and he deſpiſing it, ſaid dedignabar eſſe parvulus; he ſcorned to become a Child again. Bradwardine, that profound Doctor, learned uſque ad ſtuporem, even to a wonder, profeſſes that when he read Paul's Epiſtles, he contemned them, becauſe in them he found not a Metaphyſical Wit. Surely it's poſſible a Man may with Berengarius, be able to diſpute de omni ſcibili, of every point of Knowledge; to unravel Nature, from the Cedar in Lebanon, to the Hyſop on the Wall; and yet be as blind as a Bat in the Knowledge of Chriſt. *Yea, it's poſſible a Man's Underſtanding may be improved by the Goſpel, to a great ability in the literal knowledge of it, ſo as to be able to expound the Scriptures orthodoxly, and enlighten others by them, as it is Mat. 7. 22. The Scribes and Phariſees were well acquainted with the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament; yea, ſuch were their abilities and eſteem among the People for them, that the Apoſtle ſtiles them the Princes of this World, 1 Cor. 2. 8. And yet notwithſtanding Chriſt truly calls them blind Guides, Mat. 23. Till Chriſt open the heart, we can know nothing of

* The moſt refined and ingenious ſort of unregenerate Men have nothing in them, which is more excellent than common Grace; and common Grace leaves them in the ſtate of Nature, under the power of Sin, and in the very Suburbs of Hell, wholly at the command of Satan: And if any Man think otherwiſe, let him take heed that every Thought doth not nail him faſt to that unregenerate and curſed Eſtate for evermore. Dr. Chynelles Divin. Trin. p. 410, &c.

him, or of his Will, as we ought to know it. So experimentally true is that of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. The natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſs to him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. But he that is ſpiritual, judgeth all things; yet he himſelf is judged of no Man. The ſpiritual Man can judge and diſcern the carnal Man, but the carnal Man wants a faculty to judge of the ſpiritual Man. As a Man that carries a dark Lanthorn, can ſee another by its light, but the other cannot diſcern him. Such is the difference betwixt perſons whoſe Hearts Chriſt hath, or hath not opened.

2. Chriſt opening the Underſtanding, implies the inſufficiency of all external Means, how excellent ſoever they are in themſelves, to operate ſavingly upon Men, till by Chriſt his Power open the Soul, and ſo makes them effectual. What excellent Preachers were Iſaiah and Jeremiah to the Jews? The former ſpake of Chriſt more like an Evangeliſt of the New, than a Prophet of the Old Teſtament; the latter was a moſt convictive and pathetical Preacher: Yet the one complains, Iſa. 53. 1. Who hath believed our Report? And to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed? the other laments the ſucceſſleſneſs of his Miniſtry, Jer. 6. 18. The Bellows are burnt, the Lead is conſumed of the Fire, the Founder melteth in vain. Under the New Teſtament what People ever enjoyed ſuch choice helps and means, as thoſe that lived under the Miniſtry of Chriſt and the Apoſtles? Yet how many remained ſtill in Darkneſs? Mat. 11. 27. We have piped to you, but ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, but ye have not lamented. Neither the delightful Airs of Mercy, nor the doleful Ditties of Judgment, could affect or move their Hearts.

Modum inſtitutionis propheticæ duplicem ſtatuimus; immediatum, & mediatum; priore docendi modo & mentes hominum, aliquo poſterioris adminiculo intus illuſtrari, & corda ipſorum ad fidei obedientiam inflati poſſunt. Poſteriore neutrum effectum abſq; prioris ſubſidio produci poteſt. Synopſis pur. Theol. diſp. XXVI. p. 318.

And indeed if you ſearch into the reaſon of it, you will be ſatisfied, that the choiceſt Means can do nothing upon the Heart, till Chriſt by his Spirit open it, becauſe Ordinances work not as natural Cauſes do: For then the effect would always follow, unleſs miraculouſly hindred; and it would be equally wonderful that all that hear ſhould not be converted, as that the three Children ſhould be in the fiery Furnace ſo long, and yet not be burned: no, it works not as a natural, but as a moral Cauſe; whoſe efficacy depends on the gracious and arbitrary concurrence of the Spirit. The Wind bloweth where it liſteth, Joh. 3. 8. The Ordinances are like the Pool of Betheſda, John 5. 4. At a certain time an Angel came down and troubled the Waters, and then they had a healing virtue in them. So the Spirit comes down at certain times in the Word, and opens the Heart, and then it becomes the power of God to Salvation. So that when you ſee Souls daily ſitting under excellent and choice means, and remain dead ſtill, you may ſay as Martha did to Chriſt of her Brother Lazarus, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, they had not remained dead. If thou hadſt been in this Sermon, it had not been ſo ineffectual to them.

3. It implies the utter Impotency of Man to open his own Heart, and thereby make the Word effectually to his own Converſion and Salvation. He that at firſt ſaid, Let there be Light, and it was ſo, muſt ſhine into our Hearts, or they will never be ſavingly enlightned. 2 Cor. 4. 6. A double Miſery lyes upon a great part of Mankind, viz. Impotency and Pride. They have not only loſt the true liberty and freedom of their Wills, but with it have ſo far loſt their Underſtanding and Humility, as not to own it. But alas! Man is become a moſt impotent Creature by the Fall; ſo far from being able to open his own Heart, that he cannot know the things of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 14. cannot believe, Joh. 6. 44. cannot obey, Rom. 8. 7. cannot ſpake one good Word, Mat. 12. 34. cannot think one good Thought, 2 Cor. 3. 5. cannot do one good Act, John. 15. 5. O what a helpleſs ſhiftleſs thing is a poor Sinner! Suitably to this ſtate of Impotence, Converſion is in Scripture call'd Regeneration, Joh. 3. 3. a Reſurrection from the Dead, Eph. 2. 5. a Creation, Eph. 2. 10. a Victory, 2 Cor. 10. 5. Which doth not only imply Man to be purely paſſive in his Converſion to God, but a renitency, and oppoſition made to that Power which goes forth from God to recover him.

Fatendum eſt igitur, nos modis omnibus deficere, ut cœleſtis doctrina non aliter utilis ſit nobis vel efficax, niſi quatenus ſpiritus & mentes noſtras ad eam intelligendam & corda noſtra ad ſubeundum ejus jugum format Calv. in loc.

Laſtly, Chriſt's opening the Underſtanding imports his Divine Power, whereby he is able to ſubdue all things to himſelf. Who but God knows the Heart? Who but a God can unlock and open it at pleaſure? no meer Creature, no not the Angels themſelves, who for their large Underſtandings are Intelligencies, can command or open the Heart. We may ſtand and knock at mens Hearts, till our own ake; but no opening till Chriſt come. He can fit a Key to all the croſs wards of the Will, and with ſweet efficacy open it, and that without any force or violence to it. Theſe things are carried in this part of his Office, conſiſting in opening the Heart: Which was the firſt thing propounded for Explication.

Cathedram in cœlis habet, qui corda docet.

Secondly, In the next place, let us ſee by what Acts Jeſus Chriſt performs this Work of his, and what way and method he takes to open the Heart of Sinners.

And there are two principal ways by which Chriſt opens the Underſtandings and Hearts of Men, viz. By his Word and Spirit.

1. By his Word; to this end was Paul commiſſionated and ſent to preach the Goſpel, Acts 26. 18. To open their Eyes, and turn them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan to God. The Lord can, if he pleaſes, accompliſh this immediately; but tho' he can do it, he will not do it ordinarily without Means, becauſe he will honour his own Inſtitutions. Therefore you ſhall obſerve, that when Lydia's Heart was to be opened, there appeared unto Paul a Man of Macedonia, who prayed him, ſaying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us, Acts 19. 9. God will keep up the Reputation of his Ordinances among Men: And tho' he hath not tied himſelf, yet he hath tied us to them. Cornelius muſt ſend for Peter. God can make the Earth produce Corn, as it did at firſt, without Cultivation and Labour; but he that ſhall now expect it in the neglect of Means, may periſh for want of Bread.

2. But the Ordinances in themſelves cannot do it, as I noted before; and therefore Jeſus

Chriſt hath ſent forth the Spirit, who is his Prorex, his Vicegerent to carry on this Work upon the Hearts of his Elect. And when the Spirit comes down upon the Souls, in the adminiſtration of the Ordinances, he effectually opens the Heart to receive the Lord Jeſus, by the hearing of Faith. He breaks in upon the Underſtanding and Conſcience by powerful Convictions and Compunctions: So much that word, Joh. 16. 8. imports, He ſhall convince the World of Sin, convince by clear Demonſtration, ſuch as inforces Aſſent, ſo that the Soul cannot but yield it to be ſo: And yet the Door of the Heart is not opened, till he has alſo put forth his Power upon the Will, and by a ſweet and ſecret Efficacy overcome all its Reluctations, and the Soul be made willing in the day of his Power. When this is done, the Heart is opened. Saving Light now ſhines in it; and this Light ſet up the Spirit in the Soul is, ἐλέγξει Demonſtratio eſt Syllogiſmus faciens ſcire. Τὸ μὴ δύνατον ἄλλως ἔχειν ἀλλ' οὕτω ἡμεῖς λέγομεν. Ariſt.

1. A new Light, in which all things appear far otherwiſe than they did before. The names of Chriſt and Sin, the words Heaven and Hell have another ſound in that Man's Ears, than formerly they had. When he comes to read the ſame Scriptures, which poſſibly he had read a hundred times before, he wonders he ſhould be ſo blind as he was, to overlook ſuch great, weighty, and concerning things as he now beholds in them; and ſaith, Where were mine Eyes, that I could never ſee theſe things before?

2. It is a very affecting Light; a Light that hath Heat and powerful Influences with it, which makes deep Impreſſions on the Heart. Hence they whoſe Eyes the great Prophet opens, are ſaid to be brought out of Darkneſs into his marvellous Light, 1 Pet. 2. 9. The Soul is greatly affected with what it ſees. The Beams of Light are contracted and twiſted together in the Mind; and being reflected on the Heart and Affections, ſoon cauſe them to ſmoak and burn. Did not our Hearts burn within us, whilſt he talked with us, and opened to us the Scriptures?

3. And it is a growing Light; like the Light of the Morning, which ſhines more and more unto a perfect Day, Prov. 4. 18. When the Spirit firſt opens the Underſtanding, he doth not give it at once a full ſight of all Truths, or a full ſenſe of the power, ſweetneſs and goodneſs of any Truth; but the Soul in the uſe of Means grows up to a greater Clearneſs day by day. It's Knowledge grows extenſively in meaſure, and intenſively in Power and Efficacy. And thus the Lord Jeſus by his Spirit opens the Underſtanding. Now the uſe of this follows in five practical Deductions.

Inference 1. If this be the Work and Office of Jeſus Chriſt to open the Underſtandings of Men; hence we infer the Miſeries that lyes upon thoſe Men, whoſe Underſtandings to this day Jeſus Chriſt have not opened; of whom we may ſay, as it is Deut. 22. 4. To this day Chriſt hath not given them Eyes to ſee. Natural Blindneſs, whereby we are deprived of the Light of this World, is ſad; but ſpiritual Blindneſs is much more ſad. See how dolefully their caſe is repreſented, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. But if our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt; whoſe Eyes the God of this World hath blinded, leſt the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the Image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them: He means a total and final Concealment of the ſaving power of the Word from them. Why, what if Jeſus Chriſt withhold it, and will not be a Prophet to them, what is their Condition? Truly no better than loſt Men, It is hid τοῖς ἀπολλυμενοῖς, to them that are to periſh, or be deſtroyed. This Blindneſs, like the covering of the Face, or tying the Handkerchief over the Eyes, is in order to their turning off into Hell. More particularly, becauſe the Point is of deep concernment, let us conſider,

1. The Judgment inflicted, and that's ſpiritual Blindneſs. A ſore Miſery indeed! Not an univerſal ignorance of all Truths, O no! in natural and moral Truths they are oftentimes acute, and ſharp-ſighted Men; but in that part of Knowledge which wraps up eternal Life, John 17. 2. there they are utterly blinded: As it's ſaid of the Jews upon whom this Miſery lyes, that Blindneſs in part is happened to Iſrael. They are learned and knowing Perſons in other matters, but they know not Jeſus Chriſt, there is the grand and ſad effect.

2. The Subject of this Judgment, the Mind, which is the Eye of the Soul. If it were but upon the Body, it would not be ſo conſiderable; this falls immediately upon the Soul, the nobleſt part of Man, and upon the Mind, the higheſt and nobleſt Faculty of the Soul, whereby we underſtand, think, and reaſon. This in Scripture is called πνεῦμα the Spirit, the intellectual rational Faculty, which Philoſophers call τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν the leading directive Faculty; which is to the Soul what the natural Eye is to the Body. Now the Soul being the moſt active and reſtleſs thing in the World, always working, and it's leading directive Power blind, judge what a ſad and dangerous ſtate ſuch a Soul is in; juſt like a fiery high-mettled Horſe, whoſe Eyes are out, furiouſly carrying his Rider upon Rocks, Pits, and dangerous Precipices. I remember Chryſoſtom, ſpeaking of the loſs of a Soul, ſaith, that the loſs of a Member of the Body is nothing to it; for, ſaith he, if a Man loſe an Eye, Ear, Hand or Foot, there is another to ſupply its want. Omnia Deus dedit duplicia, God hath given us thoſe Members double; animam vero unam, but he hath not given us two Souls, that if one be loſt, yet the other may be ſaved. Surely it were better for thee, Reader, to have every Member of thy Body made the Seat and Subject of the moſt exquiſite racking Torments, than for ſpiritual Blindneſs to befal thy Soul. Moreover,

3. Conſider the indiſcernableneſs of this Judgment to the Soul on whom it lyes: They know it not, no more than a Man knows that he is aſleep. Indeed it's the Spirit of a deep ſleep poured out upon them from the Lord, Iſa. 29. 10, like that which befel Adam when God opened his Side, and took out a Rib. This renders their Miſery the more remedileſs: Becauſe ye ſay you ſee, therefore your Sin remaineth, Joh. 9. 41. Once more,

4. Conſider the Tendency and Effects of it. What doth this tend but to eternal Ruin? For hereby we are cut off from the only Remedy.

The Soul that's ſo blinded, can neither ſee Sin, nor a Saviour; but, like the Egyptians during the palpable Darkneſs, ſits ſtill, and moves not after its own recovery. And as Ruin is that to which it tends, ſo in order thereto, it renders all the Ordinances and Duties under which that Soul comes, altogether uſeleſs and ineffectual to its Salvation. He comes to the Word, and ſees others melted by it, but to him it ſignifies nothing. O what a heavy ſtroke of God is this! Moſt wretched is their caſe, to whom Jeſus Chriſt will not apply this Eye-ſalve, that they may ſee. Did you but underſtand the Miſery of ſuch a State, if Chriſt ſhould ſay to you, as he did to the blind Man, Mat. 20. 33. What wilt thou that I ſhall do for thee? You would return as he did, Lord, that my Eyes may be opened.

Inference 2. If Jeſus Chriſt be the great Prophet of the Church, then ſurely he will take ſpecial care both of the Church, and the under-Shepherds appointed by him to feed them: Elſe both the Objects and Inſtruments upon and by which he executes his Office, muſt fail, and conſequently this glorious Office be in vain. Hence he is ſaid to walk among the Golden Candleſticks, Rev. 1. 13. and Rev. 2. 1. to hold the Stars in his Right Hand. Jeſus Chriſt inſtrumentally opens the Underſtanding of Men by the preaching of the Goſpel; and whilſt there is an elect Soul to be converted, or a Convert to be farther illuminated, Means ſhall not fail to accompliſh it by.

Inference 3. Hence you that are yet in Darkneſs, may be directed to whom to apply your ſelves for ſaving Knowledge. It's Chriſt that hath the ſovereign Eye-ſalve, that can cure your Blindneſs: He only hath the Key of the Houſe of David; he opens, and no Man ſhutteth. O that I might perſwade you to ſet your ſelves in his way, under the Ordinances, and cry to him, Lord, that my Eyes may be opened. Three things are marvellouſly incouraging to you ſo to do.

So thick is that Cataract which is grown over the Eye of our Underſtanding, that none but God can couch it. Chriſt was ſent to be a Light to the Gentiles, ſo he enlightens the Medium; and to open the Eyes of the blind, ſo he heals the Organ: He is the only Oculiſt. Firmin's Real Chriſtian, p. 30.

1. God the Father hath put him into this Office, for the cure of ſuch as you be, Iſa. 49. 6. I will give thee for a Light to the Gentiles, that thou may'ſt be my Salvation to the end of the Earth. This may furniſh you with an Argument to plead for a Cure. Why do you not go to God, and ſay, Lord, didſt thou give Jeſus Chriſt a Commiſſion to open the blind Eyes? Behold me, Lord, ſuch a one am I, a poor, dark, ignorant Soul. Didſt thou give him to be thy Salvation to the ends of the Earth? No Place nor People excluded from the benefit of this Light; and ſhall I ſtill remain in the ſhadow of Death? O that unto me he might be a ſaving Light alſo. The beſt and moſt excellent Work that ever thou wroughteſt, brings thee no Glory till it come into the Light; O let me ſee and admire it.

2. It's incouraging to think, that Jeſus Chriſt hath actually opened the Eyes of them that were as dark and ignorant as you now are. He hath revealed thoſe things to Babes, that have been hid from the wiſe and prudent, Matth. 11. 25. The Law of the Lord is perfect, making wiſe the ſimple, Pſal. 19. 7. And if you look among thoſe whom Chriſt hath enlightned, you will not find many wiſe after the Fleſh, many mighty, or noble; but the fooliſh, weak, baſe, and deſpiſed. They are they on whom he hath glorified the Riches of his Grace: 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27.

3. And is it not yet further encouraging to you, that hitherto he hath mercifully continued you under the Means of Light? Why is not the Light of the Goſpel put out? Why are times and ſeaſons of Grace continued to you, if God have no further deſign of good to your Souls? Be not therefore diſcouraged, but wait on the Lord in the uſe of Means, that you may yet be healed.

Queſt. If you ask, what can we do to put our ſelves into the way of the Spirit, in order to ſuch a Cure?

Sol. I ſay, tho' you cannot do any thing that can make the Goſpel effectual, yet the Spirit of God can make thoſe Means you are capable of uſing effectual, if he pleaſe to concur with them. And it is a certain Truth, that your Inability to do what is above your power, doth no ways excuſe you from doing what is within the compaſs of your power to do. I know no Act that is ſaving can be done without the concurrence of ſpecial Grace; yea, and no Act that hath a remote order and tendency thereto, without a more general concourſe of God's Aſſiſtance; but herein he is not behindhand with you. Let me therefore adviſe,

1. That you diligently attend upon an able, faithful, and ſearching Miniſtry. Neglect no Opportunity God affords you; for how know you but that may be the time of Mercy to your Souls? If he that lay ſo many Years at the Pool of Betheſda, had been wanting but that hour when the Angel came down and troubled the Waters, he had not been healed.

2. Satisfie not your ſelves with hearing, but conſider what you hear. Allow time to reflect upon what God hath ſpoken to you. What Power is there in Man more excellent, or more appropriate to the reaſonable Nature, than it's reflexive and ſelf-conſidering Power? There is little hope of any good to be done upon your Souls, till you begin to go alone, and become Thinking-Men and Women. Here all Converſion begins. I know a ſeverer Task can hardly be impoſed upon a carnal Heart. It's a hard thing to bring a Man and himſelf together upon this account: But this muſt be if ever the Lord do your Souls good. Pſal. 4. 4. Commune with your own Hearts.

3. Labour to ſee, and ingeniouſly confeſs the inſufficiency of all your other Knowledge to do you good. What if you had never ſo much skill and knowledge in other Myſteries? What if you be never ſo well acquainted with the Letter of the Scripture? What if you had Angelical Illumination? This can never ſave thy Soul. No, all thy Knowledge ſignifies nothing till the Lord ſhew thee by ſpecial Light the deplored ſtate of thy own Heart, and a ſaving ſight of Jeſus Chriſt, thy only Remedy.

Inference 4. Since then there is a common Light, and ſpecial ſaving Light, which none but Chriſt can give, it's therefore the Concernment of every one of you to try what your Light is. We know (ſaith the Apoſtle) 1 Cor. 1. 8. that we all have Knowledge. O but what, and whence is it? Is it the Light of Life ſpringing from Jeſus Chriſt that bright and Morning-ſtar, or only ſuch as the Devils and Damned have? Theſe Lights differ,

1. In their very kind and natures. The one is heavenly, ſupernatural, and ſpiritual; the other earthly, and natural, the effect of a better Conſtitution or Education, James 3. 15, 17.

2. They differ moſt apparently in their Effects and Operations. The Light that comes in a ſpecial way from Chriſt, is humbling, abaſing, and Soul-emptying Light: By it a Man ſees the Vileneſs of his own Nature and Practice, which begets ſelf-loathing in him; but natural Light on the contrary, puffs up, and exalts, makes the Heart ſwell with ſelf-conceitedneſs, 1 Cor. 8. 1.

The Light of Chriſt is practical and operative, ſtill urging the Soul, yea, lovingly conſtraining it to Obedience. No ſooner did it ſhine into Paul's Heart, but preſently he asks, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Acts 9. 6. It brought forth fruit in the Coloſſians, from the firſt day it came to them, Col. 1. 6. but the other ſpends it ſelf in impractical Notions, and is detained in Unrighteouſneſs, Rom. 1. 18. The Light of Chriſt is powerfully transformative of its Subjects, changing the Man in whom it is into the ſame Image, from Glory to Glory, 2 Cor. 3. ult. But common Light leaves the Heart as dead, carnal and ſenſual, as if no Light at all were in it.

In a word, All ſaving Light endears Jeſus Chriſt to the Soul; and as it could not value him before it ſaw him, ſo when once he appears to the Soul in his own Light, he is appreciated and endeared unſpeakably: then none but Chriſt; all is but Dung that he may win Chriſt: None in Heaven but him, nor in Earth deſirable in compariſon of him. But no ſuch Effect flows from natural common Knowledge.

3. They differ in their Iſſues. Natural Common Knowledge vaniſheth, as the Apoſtles ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 13. 8. It's but a May-flower, and dies in its Month. Doth not their Excellency that is in them go away? Job. 4. 21. But this that ſprings from Chriſt is perfected, not deſtroyed by Death: It ſprings up into everlaſting Life. The Soul in which it is ſubjected, carries it away with it into Glory. Joh. 17. 2. this Light is Life eternal. Now turn in, and compare your ſelves with theſe Rules. Let not falſe Light deceive you.

Inference 5. Laſtly, How are they obliged to love, ſerve and honour Jeſus Chriſt, whom he hath enlightned with the ſaving knowledge of himſelf? O that with Hands and Hearts lifted up to Heaven, ye would adore the free Grace of Jeſus Chriſt to your Souls! How many round about you have their Eyes cloſed, and their Hearts ſhut up! How many are in Darkneſs, and there are like to remain, till they come to the blackneſs of Darkneſs, which is reſerved for them? O what a pleaſant thing is it for your Eyes to ſee the Light of this World! But what is it for the Eye of your Mind to ſee God in Chriſt? To ſee ſuch raviſhing ſights as the Objects of Faith are? And to have ſuch a Pledge as this given you of the bleſſed Viſions of Glory? For in this Light you ſhall ſee Light. Bleſs God, and boaſt not. Rejoice in your Light, but be not proud of it. And beware ye ſin not againſt the beſt and higheſt Light in this World. If God were ſo incenſed againſt the Heathens for diſobeying the Light of Nature, what is it in you to ſin with Eyes clearly illuminated with the pureſt Light that ſhines in this World? You know God charges it upon Solomon, 1 Kings 11. 9. that he turned from the way of Obedience, after the Lord had appeared to him twice. Jeſus Chriſt intended when he opened your Eyes, that your Eyes ſhould direct your Feet. Light is a ſpecial help to Obedience, and Obedience a ſingular help to increaſe your Light.

SERMON XI.

Ser. 11. Diſcovers the Nature and Neceſſity of the Prieſthood of Chriſt.

HEB. IX. 23.

It was therefore neceſſary that the Patterns of things in the Heavens ſhould be purified with theſe, but the heavenly things themſelves with better Sacrifices than theſe.

SAlvation (as to the actual diſpenſation of it) is revealed by Chriſt as a Prophet, procured by him as a Prieſt, applied by him as a King: In vain is it revealed, if not purchaſed; in vain revealed and purchaſed, if not applied. How it is revealed, both to us and in us, by our great Prophet, hath been declared. And now from the Prophetical Office, we paſs on to the Prieſtly Office of Jeſus Chriſt, who as our Prieſt purchaſed our Salvation. In this Office is contained the grand relief for a Soul diſtreſſed by the guilt of Sin. When all other Reliefs have been eſſayed, 'tis the Blood of this great Sacrifice, ſprinkled by Faith upon the trembling Conſcience, that muſt cool, refreſh, and ſweetly compoſe and ſettle it. Now ſeeing ſo great a weight hangs upon this Office, the Apoſtle induſtriouſly confirms and commends it in this Epiſtle, and more eſpecially in this 9th Chapter; ſhewing how it was figured to the World by the typical Blood of the Sacrifices, but infinitely excels them all: And as in many other moſt weighty reſpects, ſo principally in this, that the Blood of theſe Sacrifices did but purifie the Types or Patterns of the heavenly things; but the Blood of this Sacrifice purified or conſecrated the heavenly things themſelves ſignified by thoſe Types.

The words read, contain an Argument to prove the neceſſity of the offering up of Chriſt the great Sacrifice, drawn from the proportion betwixt the Types, and Things typified. If the Sanctuary, Mercy-ſeat, and all things pertaining to the Service of the Tabernacle, were to be conſecrated by Blood; thoſe earthly, but ſacred Types, by the Blood of Bulls and Lambs, &c. much more the heavenly things ſhadowed by them, ought to be purified or conſecrated by better Blood than the Blood of Beaſts. The Blood conſecrating theſe, ſhould as much excel the Blood that conſecrated thoſe, as the heavenly things themſelves do in their own nature excel thoſe earthly ſhadows of them. Look what proportion there is between the Type and Anti-type, the like proportion alſo is betwixt the Blood that conſecrates them; earthly things with common, heavenly things with the moſt excellent Blood.

Concludit argumenta ſuperiora de neceſſitate redemptionis, à proportione Typorum, & rerum cœleſtium. Si typica ſacra neceſſe fuit purgari ſanguine typico; tanto ſane præſtantiori ſanguine mundari oportuit τὰ ἐπȣράνια, quanto ipſa ſunt præſtantiora exemplaribus terrenis: ratio eſt aperta, quia qualis inter Typos & res, talis inter Typorum & rerum conſecrationes debet eſſe proportio. Pareus in L.

So then there are two things to be eſpecially obſerved here: Firſt, The Nature of Chriſt's Death and Sufferings: It had the Nature, Uſe, and End of a Sacrifice; and of all Sacrifices the moſt excellent. Secondly, The Neceſſity of his offering up: It was neceſſary to correſpond with all the Types and Prefigurations of it under the Law; but eſpecially it was neceſſary for the expiating of Sin, the propitiating of a juſtly-incenſed God, and the opening a way for reconciled ones to come to God in. The Point I ſhall give you from it, is,

Doct. That the Sacrifice of Chriſt our High-Prieſt, is moſt excellent in it ſelf, and moſt neceſſary for us.

Sacrifices are of two ſorts, Euchariſtical, or Thank-offerings, in teſtification of Homage, Duty and Service; and in token of gratitude for Mercies freely received: And Ilaſtical, or Expiatory, for ſatisfaction to Juſtice, and thereby the atoning and reconciling of God. Of this laſt kind was the Sacrifice offered by Jeſus Chriſt for us: To this Office he was called by God, Heb. 5. 5. In it he was confirmed by the unchangeable Oath of God, Pſal. 110. 4. for it he was ſingularly qualified by his Incarnation, Heb. 5. 6, 7. and all the Ends of it he was fully anſwered, Heb. 9. 11, 12.

Sacrificia alia ſunt Typica, alia ſignificata: & Utraque vel ἐλαςικα, ſeu propitiatoria; vel ευχαρίςικα, ſeu gratiarum actiones. Lucas Trelcat. p. 78.

My preſent Deſign is from this Scripture, to open the general Nature and abſolute Neceſſity of the Prieſthood of Chriſt; ſhewing what his Prieſthood implies in it, and how all this was indiſpenſibly neceſſary in order to our recovery from the deplorable ſtate of Sin and Miſery.

Firſt then, we will conſider what it ſuppoſes and implies; and then, wherein it conſiſts. And there are ſix things which it either preſuppoſeth or neceſſarily includeth in it.

The Nature of Chriſt's Prieſthood opened.

1. At firſt ſight, it ſuppoſes Man's Revolt and Fall from God; and a dreadful breach made thereby betwixt God and him, elſe no need of an atoning Sacrifice. If one died for all, then were all dead, 2 Cor. 5. 14, dead in Law, under ſentence to die, and that eternally. In all the Sacrifices from Adam to Chriſt, this was ſtill preached to the World; that there was a fearful breach betwixt God and Man; and that even ſo Juſtice required our Blood ſhould be ſhed. And the Fire flaming on the Altar, which wholly burnt up the Sacrifice, was a lively Emblem of that fiery Indignation that ſhould devour the Adverſaries. But above all, when Chriſt that true and great Sacrifice was offered up to God, then was the faireſt Glaſs that ever was in the World ſet before us, to ſee our Sin and Miſery by the Fall in.

2. His Prieſthood ſuppoſes the unalterable Purpoſe of God to take vengeance for Sin; He will not let it paſs. I will not determine what God could do in this Caſe by his abſolute Power; and I think it is generally yielded, that by his ordinate Power he could do no leſs than puniſh it in the perſon of the Sinner, or of his Surety.

The Reader may find this Caſe learnedly and ſolidly handled by Dr. Twiſſe, Vindic. gratiæ, Degreſs. 8.

Thoſe that contend for ſuch a Forgiveneſs, as is an Act of Charity, like that whereby private perſons forgive one another, muſt at once ſuppoſe God to part with his Right, cedendo de jure ſuo, and alſo render the Satisfaction of Chriſt altogether uſeleſs as to the procurement of Forgiveneſs; yea, rather an obſtacle, than a means to it. Surely the Nature and Truth of God oblige him to puniſh Sin. He is of purer eyes than to look upon iniquity, Heb. 1. 13. And beſide, the Word is gone out of his Mouth, that the Sinner ſhall die.

Nulla alia ratione palam fieri poteſt odium adverſus peccarum divinum, quam pœnæ commeritæ inflictione. Brad. de Juſtific. p. 61.

3. The Prieſthood of Chriſt pre-ſuppoſeth the utter impotency of Man to appeaſe God, and recover his Favour by any thing he could do or ſuffer. Surely God would not come down to aſſume a Body to die, and be offered up for us, if at any cheaper rate it could have been accompliſhed: There was no other way to recover Man, and ſatisfie God. Thoſe that deny the Satisfaction of Chriſt, and talk of his dying to confirm the Truth, and give us an Example of Meekneſs, Patience, and Self-denial, affirming theſe to be the ſole Ends of his Death, do not only therein root up the Foundation of their own Comfort, Peace and Pardon, but moſt boldly impeach and tax the infinite Wiſdom. God could have done all this at a cheaper rate: The ſufferings of a meer Creature are able to attain theſe Ends: The death of the Martyrs did it. But who by dying can ſatisfie and reconcile God? What Creature can bring him an adequate and proportionable value for Sin? yea, for all the Sin that ever was or ſhall be tranſmitted to the Natures, or committed by the Perſons of all God's Elect, from Adam to the laſt that ſhall be found alive at the Lord's coming? Surely none but Chriſt can do this.

4. Chriſt's Prieſthood implies the neceſſity of his being God-man. It was neceſſary he ſhould be a Man in order to his Paſſion, Compaſſion, and Derivation of his Righteouſneſs and Holineſs to Men. Had he not been Man, he had had no Sacrifice to offer, no Soul or Body to ſuffer in. The Godhead is impatible, immortal, and above all thoſe ſufferings and miſeries Chriſt felt for us. Beſides, his being Man, fills him with bowels of compaſſion, and tender ſenſe of our miſeries: This makes him a merciful and faithful High-Prieſt, Heb. 4. 15. and not only fits him to pity, but to ſanctifie us alſo; for he that ſanctifieth, and they that are ſanctified, are both of one, Heb. 2. 11, 14, 17. And as neceſſary it was our High-Prieſt ſhould be God, ſince the value and efficacy of his Sacrifice reſults from thence.

Hinc igitur apparet quam neceſſarium fuit ut Chriſtus mediator eſſet & Deus & homo; niſi enim homo, non fuiſſet idoneum ſacrificium; & niſi Deus fuiſſet, ſacrificium illud non fuiſſet ſufficientis virtutis. Ames Med. p. 92.

5. The Prieſthood of Chriſt implies the extremity of his Sufferings. In Sacrifices, you know, there was a deſtruction, a kind of annihilation of the Creature to the Glory of God. The ſhedding of the Creature's Blood, and burning its Fleſh with Fire, was but an umbrage, or faint reſemblance of what Chriſt endured when he made his Soul an Offering for Sin.

6. And laſtly, It implies the gracious Deſign of God to reconcile us at a dear rate to himſelf, in that he called and confirmed Chriſt in his Prieſthood by an Oath, and thereby laid out a Sacrifice of infinite value for the World. Sins for which no Sacrifice is allowed, are deſperate Sins; and the caſe of ſuch Sinners is helpleſs: But if God allow, yea, and provide a Sacrifice himſelf, how plainly doth it ſpeak his intentions of Peace and Mercy? Theſe things are manifeſtly preſuppoſed or implied in Chriſt's Prieſthood.

This Prieſthood of Chriſt is that Function wherein he comes before God in our Name and Place, to fulfil the Law, and offer up himſelf to him a Sacrifice of Reconciliation for our Sins; and by his Interceſſion to continue and apply the purchaſe of his Blood to them for whom he ſhed it: All this is contained in that famous Scripture, Heb. 10. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Or more briefly, the Prieſthood of Chriſt is that whereby he expiated the Sins of Men, and obtained the Favour of God for them, Col. 1. 20, 22. Rom. 5. 10. But becauſe I ſhall inſiſt more largely upon the ſeveral Parts and Fruits of this Office, it ſhall here ſuffice to ſpeak thus much as to its general Nature; which was the firſt thing propoſed for explication.

Sacerdotium Chriſti eſt functio qua coram Deo apparet, ut legem ab ipſo acceptam noſtro nomine obſervet; ſeipſum victimam reconciliationis pro noſtris peccatis ipſi offerat; ſuaq; apud Deum interceſſione opem ipſius perennem, ac donationem ſpiritus ſancti nobis impetret, atq; efficaciter applicet. Synopſis purioris Theol. p. 318.

Secondly, The neceſſity of Chriſt's Prieſthood comes next to be opened: Touching which I affirm, according to the Scriptures, it was neceſſary in order to our Salvation, that ſuch a Prieſt ſhould, by ſuch a Sacrifice, appear before God for us.

The truth of this Aſſertion will be cleared by theſe two Principles, which are evident in the Scripture, viz. That God ſtood upon full Satiſfaction, and would not remit one Sin without it: And that fallen Man is totally uncapable of tendring him any ſuch Satiſfaction; therefore Chriſt, who only can, muſt do it, or we periſh.

1. God ſtood upon full Satiſfaction, and would not remit one Sin without it. This will be cleared from the Nature of Sin; and from the Veracity and Wiſdom of God.

1. From the Nature of Sin, which deſerves that the Sinner ſhould ſuffer for it. Penal Evil, in a courſe of Juſtice, follows moral Evil. Sin and Sorrow ought to go together; betwixt theſe is a neceſſary connexion, Rom. 6. 23. The Wages of Sin is Death.

(2.) The Veracity of God requires it. The Word was gone out of his Mouth; Gen. 2. 17. In the day that thou eateſt thereof, thou ſhalt ſurely die. From that time he was inſtantly and certainly obnoxious and liable to the death of Soul and Body. The Law pronounces him curſed, that continues not in all things that are written therein to do them, Gal. 3. 9. Now tho' Man's threatnings are often vain and inſignificant things, yet God's ſhall ſurely take place; Not one tittle of the Law ſhall fail, till all be fulfilled, Mat. 5. 18. God will be true in his Threatnings, tho' thouſands and millions periſh.

Certo ac ſtatim morieris.

(3.) The Wiſdom of God, by which he governs the rational World, admits not of a diſpenſation or relaxation of the Threatnings without ſatisfaction: For as good no King, as no Laws for Government; as good no Law, as no Penalty; and as good no Penalty, as no Execution. To this purpoſe one well obſerves; “It's altogether undecent, eſpecially to the Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs of God, that that which provoketh the execution, ſhould procure the abrogation of his Law; that that ſhould ſupplant and undermine the Law, for the alone preventing whereof, the Law was before eſtabliſhed. How could it be expected, that Men ſhould fear and tremble before God, when they ſhould find themſelves more ſcared than hurt by his threats againſt Sin? So then God ſtood upon Satiſfaction, and would admit no Treaty of Peace on any other ground.

Dr. Reynolds on Pſal. 110. p. 409.

Object. Let none here object, That Reconciliation upon this only ſcore of Satiſfaction, is derogatory to the Riches of Grace; or that we allow not God what we do Men, viz. to forgive an Injury freely, without ſatiſfaction.

Sol. Free forgiveneſs to us, and full ſatisfaction made to God by Jeſus Chriſt for us, are not ἀσύστατα things inconſiſtent with each other, as in its proper place ſhall be fully cleared to you. And for denying that to God which we allow to Men; you muſt know, that Man and Man ſtands on even ground: Man is not capable of being wronged and injured by Man, as God is by Man; there is no compare between the nature of the Offences.

To conclude, Man only can freely forgive Man in a private capacity, ſo far as wrong concerns himſelf; but ought not to do ſo in a publick capacity, as he is a Judge, and bound to execute Juſtice impartially. God is our Law-giver and Judge; he will not diſpence with violations of the Law, but ſtrictly ſtands on compleat ſatisfaction.

2. Man can tender to God no ſatisfaction of his own for the wrong done by his Sin. He finds no way to compenſate and make God amends, either by doing, or by ſuffering his Will.

(1.) Not by doing: This way is ſhut up to all the World: None can ſatisfie God, or reconcile himſelf to him this way; for it's evident our beſt Works are ſinful; All our Righteouſneſs is as filthy rags, Iſa. 64. 6. And it's ſtrange any ſhould imagine, that one Sin ſhould make ſatisfaction for another. If it be ſaid, Not what is ſinful in our Duties, but what is ſpiritual, pure and good, may ingratiate us with God, it is at hand to reply, That what is good in any of our Duties is a Debt we owe to God; yea, we owe him perfect obedience; and it is not imaginable how we ſhould pay one Debt by another; quit a former, by contracting a new Engagement: If we do any thing that is good, we are beholden to Grace for it, Joh. 15. 5. 2 Cor. 3. 5. 1 Cor. 15. 10. In a word, thoſe that have had as much to plead on that ſcore as any now living, have quitted, and utterly given up all hopes of appeaſing and ſatisfying the Juſtice of God that way. It's like holy Job feared God, and eſchewed Evil as much as any of you, yet he ſaith, Job 9. 20, 21. If I juſtifie my ſelf, mine own mouth ſhall condemn me; if I ſay I am perfect, it ſhall alſo prove me perverſe. Tho' I were perfect, yet would I not know my Soul; I would deſpiſe my Life. It may be David was a Man as much after the Heart of God as you; yet he ſaid, Pſal. 143. 2. Enter not into judgment with thy Servant; for in thy ſight ſhall no Man living be juſtified. It's like Paul lived as holy, heavenly, and fruitful a Life as the beſt of you, and far, far beyond you; yet he ſaith, 1 Cor. 4. 4. I know (or am conſcious to my ſelf) of nothing, yet am I not thereby juſtified: His ſincerity might comfort him, but could not juſtifie him. And what need I ſay more? The Lord hath ſhut up this way to all the World; and the Scriptures ſpeak it roundly and plainly, Rom. 3. 20. Therefore by the Deeds of the Law, there ſhall no fleſh be juſtified in his ſight. Compare Gal. 3. 21. Rom. 8. 3.

(2.) And as Man can never reconcile himſelf to God by doing, ſo neither by ſuffering. That is equally impoſſible; for no ſuffering can ſatisfie God, but ſuch as are proportionable to the Offence we ſuffer for. And if ſo, and infinite Suffering muſt be born: I ſay infinite, for ſo Sin is; an infinite Evil, objectively conſidered, as it wrongs an infinite God. Now Sufferings may be ſaid to be infinite, either in reſpect of their weight, exceeding all bounds and limits; the letting out the Wrath and Fury of an infinite God: Or in reſpect of duration, being endleſs and everlaſting. In the firſt ſenſe, no Creature can bear an infinite Wrath, it would ſwallow us up. In the ſecond, it may be born as the damned do; but then, ever to be ſuffering, is never to have ſatisfied.

So that no Man can be his own Prieſt, to reconcile him to God by what he can do or ſuffer. And therefore, one that is able, by doing and ſuffering, to reconcile him, muſt undertake it, or we periſh. Thus you ſee plainly and briefly, the general nature and neceſſity of Chriſt's Prieſthood.

From both theſe, ſeveral uſeful Corollaries, or practical Deductions, offer themſelves.

Corollary 1. This ſhews in the firſt place, the incomparable excellency of the reformed Chriſtian Religion above all other Religions, known to, or profeſſed in the World. What other Religions ſeek, the Chriſtian Religion only finds, even a ſolid foundation for true Peace, and ſettlement of Conſcience. While the Jews ſeek it in vain in the Law; the Mehometan in his external and ridiculous Obſervations; the Papiſt in his own Merits; the Believer only finds it in the Blood of this great Sacrifice: This, and nothing leſs than this, can pacifie a diſtreſſed Conſcience, labouring under the weight of its own Guilt. Conſcience demands no leſs to ſatisfie it, than God demands to ſatisfie him. The grand Inqueſt of Conſcience is, is God ſatisfied? If he be ſatisfied, I am ſatisfied. Woful is the ſtate of that Man, that feels the worm of Conſcience nibling on the moſt tender part of the Soul, and hath no relief againſt it; that feels the intolerable ſcalding wrath of God burning within, and hath nothing to cool it. Hear me, you that ſlight troubles of Conſcience, that call them Fancies and melancholy Whimſies; if you ever had had but one ſick night for Sin, if you had ever felt that ſhame, fear, horror, and deſpair, which are the diſmal effects of an accuſing and condemning Conſcience, you would account it an unſpeakable Mercy to hear of a way for the diſcharge of a poor Sinner from that guilt: You would kiſs the feet of that Meſſenger, that could bring you tidings of Peace: You would call him bleſſed, that ſhould direct you to an effectual Remedy. Now, whoever thou art, that pineſt away in thine Iniquities, that droopeſt from day to day under the preſent Wounds, and diſmal Preſages of Conſcience, know that thy Soul and Peace can never meet, till thou art perſwaded to come to this Blood of Sprinkling.

The Blood of this Sacrifice ſpeaks better things than the Blood of Abel. The Blood of this Sacrifice is the Blood of God, Acts 20. 28. invaluable precious Blood, 1 Pet. 1. 18. One drop of it infinitely excels the Blood of all other Creatures, Heb. 10. 4, 5, 6. Such is the Blood that muſt do thee good. Lord, I muſt have ſuch Blood (ſaith Conſcience) as is capable of giving thee full ſatisfaction, or it can give me no peace. The Blood of all the Cattel upon a thouſand Hills cannot do this. What is the Blood of Beaſts to God? The Blood of all the Men in the World can do nothing in this caſe. What is our polluted Blood worth? No, no, it's the Blood of God that muſt ſatisfie both thee and me.

Yea, Chriſt's Blood is not only the Blood of God, but it's Blood ſhed in thy ſtead, and in thy place and room. Gal. 3. 12. He was made a curſe for us. And ſo it becomes Sin-pardoning Blood, Heb. 9. 22. Eph. 1. 7. Col. 1. 14. Rom. 3. 26. and conſequently, Conſcience-pacifying, and Soul-quieting Blood, Col. 1. 20. Eph. 2. 13, 14. Rom. 3. 26. O bleſs God, that ever the News of this Blood came to thine Ears. With Hands and Eyes lifted up to Heaven, admire that Grace that caſt thy Lot in a place where this joyful ſound rings in the Ears of poor Sinners. What had thy Caſe been, if thy Mother had brought thee forth in the Deſarts of Arabia, or in the Waſtes of America! Or that if thou hadſt been nurſed up by a Popiſh Father, who could have told thee no other Remedy when in diſtreſs for Sin, but to go ſuch a Pilgrimage, to whip and laſh thy ſelf, to ſatisfie an angry God! Surely the pure Light of the Goſpel ſhining upon this Generation, is a Mercy never to be duly valued, never to be enough prized.

Ponetque manum, ſignificans & ſe ſcelera ſua, pœnamque iis debitam, conjicere in caput victimæ. Ut Græcis εἲς τὸν αὐτῦ κεφαλὴν, genus eſt imprecationis. Druſius & Menochius.

Corollary 2. Hence alſo be informed of the neceſſity of Faith, in order to a ſtate and ſenſe of Peace with God: For to what purpoſe is the Blood of Chriſt our Sacrifice ſhed, unleſs it be actually and perſonally applied, and appropriated by Faith? You know when the Sacrifices under the Law were brought to be ſlain, he that brought it, was to put his hand upon the head of his Sacrifice, and ſo it was accepted from him, to make an atonement, Lev. 14. not only to ſignifie, that now it was no more his, but God's, the propriety being transferred by a kind of manumiſſion; nor yet that he voluntarily gave it to the Lord as his own free act; but principally it noted the putting off his Sins, and the Penalty due to him for them, upon the head of the Sacrifice: And ſo it implied in it an Execration, as if he had ſaid, Upon thy Head be the Evil. So the Learned obſerve, the Ancient Egyptians were wont expreſly to imprecate, when they Sacrificed; If any evil be coming upon us, or upon Egypt, let it turn and reſt upon this head, laying their hand at theſe words on the Sacrifice's head. And upon that ground, ſaith the Hiſtorian, none of them would eat of the head of any living Creature. You muſt alſo lay the Hand of Faith upon Chriſt your Sacrifice, not to imprecate, but apply and appropriate him to your own Souls, he having been made a Curſe for you.

Herod. 2. 39.

To this the whole Goſpel tends, even to perſwade Sinners to apply Chriſt, and his Blood to their own Souls. To this he invited us, Mat. 11. 28. Come unto me ye that are weary and heavy-laden, and I will give you reſt. For this end our Sacrifice was lifted up upon the Altar. Joh. 3. 14, 15. As Moſes lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderneſs, ſo muſt the Son of Man be lifted up; that whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. The Effects of the Law, not only upon the Conſcience, filling it with Torments, but upon the whole Perſon, bringing Death upon it, are here ſhadowed out by the ſtingings of fiery Serpents; and Chriſt by the brazen Serpent which Moſes exalted for the Iſraelites, that were ſtung, to look unto. And as by looking to it, they were healed; ſo by believing, or looking to Chriſt in Faith, our Souls are healed. Thoſe that looked not to the Brazen Serpent, died infallibly; ſo muſt all that look not to Jeſus, our Sacrifice, by Faith. It's true, the Death of Chriſt is the meritorious Cauſe of Remiſſion, but Faith is the inſtrumental applying Cauſe: and as Chriſt's Blood is neceſſary in its place, ſo is our Faith in its place alſo. For to the actual remiſſion of Sin, and peace of Conſcience, there muſt be a co-operation of all the Cauſes of Remiſſion and Peace. As there is the Grace and Love of God for an efficient and impulſive Cauſe, and the Death of Chriſt our Sacrifice, the meritorious Cauſe; ſo of neceſſity there muſt be Faith, the inſtrumental Cauſe. And theſe Concauſes do all ſweetly meet in their Influences, and Activities, in our Remiſſion, and Tranquility of Conſcience; and are all (ſuo genere) in their kind and place abſolutely neceſſary to the procuring and applying of it.

It is a rule, that where there is a total and ſufficient Cauſe in act, there the Effect muſt needs follow. But if they be partial Cauſes, then the Cauſes which ſucceed in order, do not produce their compleat Effect, until the laſt Cauſe be in act.

What's the near that the Blood of Chriſt is ſhed, if I have no intereſt in it, no ſaving influences from it? O be convinced, this is the end, the buſineſs of Life. Faith is the Phenix-Grace, as Chriſt is the Phenix-Mercy. He is the gift, John 4. 10. And this is the work of God, John 6. 29. The Death of Chriſt, the Offers and Tenders of Chriſt, never ſaved one Soul in themſelves, without believing Application. But wo is me, how do I ſee Sinners, either not at all toucht with the ſenſe of Sin, and ſo being whole need not the Phyſician; or if any be ſtung and wounded with Guilt, how do they lick themſelves whole with their own Duties and Reformations; as Phyſicians ſay of Wounds, let them but be kept clean, and Nature will find Balſam of its own to heal them. If it be ſo in ſpiritual Wounds, what need Chriſt to have left the Father's Boſom, and come down to die in the quality and nature of a Sacrifice for us? O if Men can but have Health, Pleaſure, Riches, Honours, and any way make a ſhift to ſtill a brawling Conſcience, that it may not check or interrupt them in theſe Enjoyments, Chriſt may go where he will for them.

And I am aſſured, till God ſhew you the Face of Sin in the Glaſs of the Law, make the Scorpions and fiery Serpents, that lurk in the Law, and in your own Conſciences, to come hiſſing about you, and ſmiting you with their deadly Stings; till you have had ſome ſick Nights, and ſorrowful Days for Sin, you will never go up and down ſeeking an intereſt in the Blood of his Sacrifice with Tears.

But, Reader, if ever this be thy condition, then wilt thou know the worth of a Chriſt; then wilt thou have a value for the Blood of Sprinkling. As I remember it's ſtoried of our Crook-back Richard, when he was put to a rout in a field Battel, and flying on foot from his purſuing Enemies; he cried out, O now (ſaith he) a Kingdom for a Horſe. So wilt thou cry, a Kingdom for a Chriſt; ten thouſand Worlds now if I had them, for the Blood of ſprinkling.

Corollary 3. Is Chriſt your High-prieſt, and is his Prieſthood ſo indiſpenſibly neceſſary to your Salvation? Then freely acknowledge your utter impotency to reconcile your ſelves to God, by any thing you can do, or ſuffer; and let Chriſt have the whole glory of your Recovery aſcribed to him. It's highly reaſonable that he that laid down the whole Price, ſhould have the whole Praiſe. If any Man think, or ſay, he could have made an Atonement for himſelf; he doth therein caſt no light reproach upon that profound Wiſdom which laid the deſign of our Redemption in the Death of Chriſt.

But of this I have ſpoken elſewhere. And therefore;

Corollary 4. In the laſt place, I rather chuſe to perſwade you to ſee your neceſſity of this Prieſt, and his moſt excellent Sacrifice; and accordingly to make uſe of it. The beſt of you have polluted Natures, poiſoned in the Womb with Sin; thoſe Natures have need of this Sacrifice, they muſt have the benefit of this Blood to pardon and cleanſe them, or be eternally damned. Hear me ye that never ſpent a Tear for the Sin of Nature; if the Blood of Chriſt be not ſprinkled upon your Natures, it had been better for you, that you had been the Generation of Beaſts, the Off-ſpring of Dragons or Toads. They have a contemptible, but not a vitiated ſinful Nature as you have.

Your Actual Sins have need of this Prieſt and his Sacrifice to procure Remiſſion for them. If he take them not away by the Blood of his Croſs, they can never be taken away, They will lye down with you in the duſt; they will riſe with you, and follow you to the Judgment-ſeat, crying, We are thy Works, and we will follow thee. All thy Repentance and Tears, ſhouldſt thou weep as many Tears as there be drops in the Ocean, can never take away Sin. Thy Duties, even the beſt of them, need this Sacrifice. It is in the virtue thereof that they are accepted of God. And were it not God had reſpect to Chriſt's Offering, he would not regard, or look towards thee, or any of thy Duties. Thou couldeſt no more come near to God, than thou could'ſt approach a devouring Fire, or dwell with everlaſting Burnings.

Well then, ſay, I need ſuch a Prieſt every way. Love him in all his Offices. See the goodneſs of God in providing ſuch a Sacrifice for thee. Meat, Drink and Air, are not more neceſſary to maintain thy natural Life, than the Death of Chriſt is to give and maintain thy ſpiritual Life.

O then, let thy Soul grow big whilſt meditating of the uſefulneſs and excellency of Chriſt, which is thus diſplayed and unfolded in every branch of the Goſpel. And with a deep ſenſe upon thy heart, let thy lips ſay, Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SERMON XII.

Serm. 12. Opens the excellency of our High-Prieſt's Oblation, being the firſt act or part of his Prieſtly Office.

HEB. X. 14.

For by one Offering, he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified.

After this more general view and conſideration of the Prieſthood of Chriſt, Method requires that we come to a nearer and more particular conſideration of the parts thereof; which are his Oblation and Interceſſion, anſwerable to the double Office of the High-Prieſt, offering the Blood of the Sacrifices without the Holy Place, which typed out Chriſt's Oblation; and then once a Year bringing the Blood before the Lord into the moſt holy place, preſenting it before God, and with it ſprinkling the Mercy-ſeat, wherein the Interceſſion of Chriſt (the other Part or Act of his Prieſthood) was in a lively manner typified to us.

My preſent buſineſs is to open and apply the Oblation of Chriſt; the efficacy and excellency whereof is excellently illuſtrated, by a compariſon with all other Oblations, in the precedent Context, and with a ſingular Encomium commended to us in theſe words, from the Singularity of it. It is but one Offering, one not only ſpecifically, but one numerically conſidered; but once offered, and never more to be repeated: For Chriſt dieth no more, Rom. 6. 9. He alſo commends it from the Efficacy of it; by it he hath perfected, i. e. not only purchaſed a poſſibility of Salvation, but all that we need to our full Perfection. It brings in a moſt intire, compleat and perfect Righteouſneſs: All that remains to make us perfectly happy, is but the full application of the benefits procured by this Oblation for us. Moreover, it's here commended from the Extenſiveneſs of it; not being reſtrained to a few, but applicable to all the Saints, in all the Ages and Places of the World; For this indefinite, them that are ſanctified, is equivalent to a univerſal; and is as much as if he had ſaid, to all and every Saint, from the beginning to the end of the World. Laſtly, He commends it from its Perpetuity, It perfects for ever; that is, it is of everlaſting Efficacy: It ſhall abide as freſh, vigorous and powerful to the end of the World, as it was the firſt moment it was offered up. All runs into this ſweet Truth, Oblatio Chriſti unica eſt, non tantum ſpecie, ſed etiam numero, quia nulla poteſt eſſe Oblatio Chriſti, niſi intercedente morte ipſius; eoque falſa eſt Sacrificii cruenti & incruenti diſtinctio. Trelcat. Inſtit. p. 79.

Doct. That the Oblation made unto God by Jeſus Chriſt, is of unſpeakable value, and everlaſting efficacy, to perfect all them that are, or ſhall be ſanctified, to the end of the World.

Out of this Fountain flow all the excellent Bleſſings that Believers either have, or hope for. Had it not been for this, there had been no ſuch things in rerum natura, as Juſtification, Adoption, Salvation, &c. peace with God, and hopes of Glory, pardon of Sin, and Divine Acceptation: Theſe, and all other our beſt Mercies, had been but ſo many entia rationis, meer Conceits. A Man (as one ſaith) might have haply imagined ſuch things as theſe, as he may Golden Mountains, and Rivers of liquid Gold, and Rocks of Diamonds: But theſe things could never have had any real exiſtence extra mentem, had not Chriſt offered up himſelf a Sacrifice to God for us. It is the Blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal Spirit offered up himſelf without ſpot to God, that purges the Conſcience from dead works, Heb. 9. 14. that is, from the Sentence of Condemnation and Death; as it is reflected by Conſcience, for our works ſake.

His appearing before God, as our Prieſt, with ſuch an Offering for us, is that which removes our Guilt and Fear together; He appeared to put away Sin by the Sacrifice of himſelf, Heb. 9. 29. Now for as much as the point before us is of ſo great weight in it ſelf, and ſo fundamental to our Safety and Comfort, I ſhall endeavour to give you as diſtinct and clear account of it, as can conſiſt with that brevity which I muſt neceſſarily uſe. And therefore, Reader, apply thy mind attentively to the conſideration of this excellent Prieſt that appears before God, and the Sacrifices he offers, with the Properties and Adjuncts thereof; the Perſon before whom he brings, and to whom he offers it; the Perſons for whom he offers, and the End for which this Oblation is made.

Firſt, The Prieſt that appears before God with an Oblation for us, is Jeſus Chriſt, God-man: The Dignity of whoſe Perſon dignified, and derived an ineſtimable worth to the Offering he made. There are many Prieſts before him, but none like unto him, either for the purity of his Perſon, or the perpetuity of his Prieſthood: They were ſinful Men, and offered for their own Sins, as well as the Sins of the People, Heb. 5. 3. But He was holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from Sinners, Heb. 7. 2. He could ſtand before God, even in the eye of his Juſtice, as a Lamb without ſpot. Tho' he made his Soul an Offering for Sin, yet He had done no Iniquity, nor was any Guile found in his Mouth, Iſa. 53. 9. And indeed his Offering had done us no good, if the leaſt taint of Sin had been found on him. They were mortal Men, that continued not by reaſon of Death, Heb. 7. 23. But Chriſt is a Prieſt for ever, Pſal. 110. 4.

Sic Oblationes in vaſe mundo offerebantur, Iſa. 66. 20. Raven.

Secondly, The Oblation or Offering he made was not the Blood of Beaſts, but his own Blood, Heb. 9. 12. And herein he tranſcended all other Prieſts, that he had ſomething of his own to offer; He had a Body given him to be at his own diſpoſe, to this uſe and purpoſe, Heb. 10. 10. He offered his Body: Yea, not only his Body, but his Soul was made an Offering for Sin. Iſa. 53. 10. We had made a forefeiture of our Souls and Bodies by Sin, and it was neceſſary the Sacrifice of Chriſt ſhould be anſwerable to the Debt we owed. And when Chriſt came to offer his Sacrifice, he ſtood not only in the capacity of a Prieſt, but alſo in that of a Surety; and ſo his Soul ſtood in the ſtead of ours, and his Body in the ſtead of our Bodies. Now the excellency of this Oblation will appear in the following adjuncts and properties of it: This Oblation being for the matter of it the Soul and Body of Jeſus Chriſt, is therefore,

Bilſon and Fevardentius affirm that Chriſt only offered up his Body, not his Soul, upon this weak ground, that if he had offered both, he had not offered one, but two Sacrifices. Againſt whom the Learned Parker, in his excellent Book de deſcenſu, urgeth my Text, and thus frees it from that corrupt Gloſs. Pulchrè, quaſi holocauſtum non unum fuit Sacrificium, quia ex pluribus partibus conſtabit! — Sacrificium Chriſti unicum dicitur, non in oppoſitione corporis ad animam, ſed in oppoſitione corporis & animæ ſemel oblati, ad multa illa Sacrificia quæ non ſemel, ſed multoties, in lege Moſis offerebantur. Parker de deſcenſu, lib. III. p. 146.

1. Invaluably precious. So the Apoſtle ſtiles it, 1 Pet. 1. 19. Ye were redeemed τιμίῳ αἵματι, with the precious Blood of the Son of God: And ſuch it behoved him to offer. For it being offered as an expiatory Sacrifice, it ought to be equivalent in its own intrinſick value to all the Souls and Bodies that were to be redeemed by it. And ſo it was, and more alſo: for there was a redundancy of value, an overplus of merit, which went to make a purchaſe for the Redeemed; as will be opened in its place. So that as one rich Diamond is more worth than a thouſand Pebbles; one peice of Gold, than many Counters; ſo the Soul and Body of one Chriſt is much more excellent than all the Souls and Bodies in the World.

And yet I dare not affirm, as ſome do, that by reaſon of the infinite preciouſneſs of Chriſt's Blood, one drop thereof had been ſufficient to have redeemed the whole World: for if one drop had been enough, why was all the reſt, even to the laſt drop, ſhed? Was God cruel, to exact more from him than was needful and ſufficient? Beſides, we muſt remember, that the Paſſions of Chriſt, which were inflicted on him as the curſe of the Law, theſe only are the Paſſions which are ſufficient for our Redemption from the Curſe of the Law; now it was not a drop of Blood, but Death which was contained in the Curſe: This therefore was neceſſary to be inflicted. But ſurely as none but God can eſtimate the weight and evil of Sin, ſo none but he can comprehend the worth and preciouſneſs of the Blood of Chriſt, ſhed to expiate it. And being ſo infinitely precious a thing which was offered up to God, it muſt,

Id ſolùm rationem pœnæ habere poteſt, quod infligitur à judice legi convenienter. Non convenit autem legi, quæ mortem pe-nunciat, ut ob ejus violationem id infligatur tantum, ex quo guttula ſanguinis manet. Joh. Cameroi p. 364.

2. Needs be a moſt compleat and all-ſufficient Oblation, fully to expiate the Sins of all whom it was offered, in all for ages of the World. The virtue of this Sacrifice reacheth backward as far as Adam, and reacheth forward to the laſt Perſon of the Elect ſpringing from him. That the efficacy of it thus reached back to Adam is plain; for on the account thereof he is ſtiled the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the World, Rev. 13. 8.

And to the ſame ſenſe a Judicious Expoſitor underſtands thoſe words of Chriſt, Joh. 8. 58. Before Abraham was, I am. And look as the Sun at mid-day extends his light and influence, not only forward towards the Weſt, but alſo backward towards the Eaſt, where he aroſe: ſo did this moſt efficacious Sacrifice reach all the Elect in the virtue of it, who died before Chriſt came in the Fleſh. It is therefore but a vain Cavil that ſome make againſt the ſatisfaction of Chriſt to render it needleſs, when they ſay, many were ſaved without it, even as many as were ſaved before the Death of Chriſt. For they ſay, the Effect cannot be before the Cauſe, which is true of Phyſical, but not of Moral Cauſes; and ſuch was Chriſt's ſatisfaction. As for example, a Captive is freed out of Priſon from the time that his Surety undertakes for him, and promiſes his Ranſom; here the Captive is actually delivered, tho' the Ranſom that delivered him be not yet actually paid. So it was in this caſe; Chriſt had engaged to the Father to ſatisfie for them, and upon that ſecurity they were delivered.

Cauſa phyſica præcedit effectum ſuum tempore, non item cauſa moralis. Cameronis opera, p. 361.

And the virtue of this Oblation not only reaches thoſe Believers that lived and died before Chriſt's day, but it extends it ſelf forward to the end of the World. Hence Heb. 13. 8.

Nunc ſervator non eſt ita ut olim non fuerit; atque ut non ſit ſervator in æternum. Camer. myrothec. p. 337.

Chriſt is ſaid to be the ſame, yeſterday, to day, and for ever; that is, he is not ſo a Saviour to us that now live, as that he was not their Saviour alſo, that believed in him before us from the beginning: Nor yet ſo a Saviour both to them and us, as that he ſhall not be the ſame to all that ſhall believe on him to the World's end.

To the ſame ſenſe are thoſe words, Heb. 11. 40. rightly Paraphraſed, God having provided ſome better thing for us, that they without us ſhould not be made perfect; q. d. God hath appointed the accompliſhment of the promiſe of ſending the Meſſiah, to be in the laſt times: That they (viz. that lived before Chriſt) ſhould not be perfected; that is, juſtified and ſaved, by any thing done in their time, but by looking to our time, and Chriſt's ſatisfaction made therein; whereby they and we are perfected together. No tract of time can wear out the vertue of this eternal Sacrifice. It is as freſh, vigorous, and potent now, as the firſt hour it was offered. And tho' he actually offer it no more, yet he virtually continues it by his interceſſion now in Heaven: for there he is ſtill a Prieſt. And therefore about ſixty years after his Aſcenſion, when he gave the Revelation to John, he appears to him in his Prieſtly Garments, Rev. 1. 13. Cloathed in a Garment down to the Feet, and girt about the Paps with a golden Girdle: in alluſion to the Prieſtly Ephod, and curious Girdle.

Dixon in loc.

And as the vertue of this Oblation reaches backward and forward, to all Ages, and to all Believers, ſo to all the Sins of all Believers, which are fully purged and expiated by it: This no other Oblation could do. The legal Sacrifices were no real expiations, but rather remembrances of Sins; Heb. 9. 9, 12. Heb. 10. 3. And all the vertue they had, conſiſted in their Typical relation to this Sacrifice; Gal. 3. 23. Heb. 9. 13. And ſeparate from it were altogether weak, unprofitable, and inſignificant things, Heb. 7. 18. But this Blood cleanſeth from all Sins, 1 Joh. 1. 7. all Sin, originating, or originated, or actual, flowing from them both. It expiates all fully, without exception, and finally, without revocation. So that by his being made Sin for us, we are made not only righteous, but the Righteouſneſs of God in him, 2 Cor. 5. 21.

3. And Laſtly, to name no more; being ſo precious in it ſelf, and ſo efficacious to expiate Sin, it muſt needs be a moſt grateful Oblation to the Lord, highly pleaſing and delightful in his eyes. And ſo indeed it is ſaid, Eph. 5. 2. He gave himſelf for us, an Offering, and a Sacrifice to God, for a ſweet-ſmelling Savour. Not that God took any delight or content in the bitter Sufferings of Chriſt ſimply and in themſelves conſidered; but with relation to the end for which he was offered, even our Redemption and Salvation.

Odoratus Deo tribuitur, quo itidem Dei εὐωδία, complacentia, & gratia denotatur. Sicut odore bono homo recreatur, eoque delectatur — pertinet huc appellatio רוח ניחוח odor quietis, ſeu ſuavitatis, quæ crebro Sacrificiis Deo oblatis tribuitur, Exod. 19. 2, 25. Levit. 1. 9. S. Glaſſ. Philolog. Sacra.

Hence aroſe the delight and pleaſure God had in it; this made him take pleaſure in bruiſing him, Iſa. 53. 10. God ſmelt a ſavour of reſt in this Sacrifice. The meaning is, that as Men are offended with a ſtench, and their ſtomachs riſe at it, and are on the contrary delighted with ſweet Odors and Fragrancies; ſo the bleſſed God, ſpeaking after the manner of Men, is offended, and filled with loathing and abhorrence by our Sins, but infinitely pleaſed and delighted in the Offering of Chriſt for them, which came up as an Odor of a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour to him, whereof the coſtly Perfumes under the Law, were Types and Shadows. This was the Oblation.

Thirdly, This Oblation he brings before God, and to him he offers it up: So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, Heb. 9. 14. Through the eternal Spirit he offered himſelf without ſpot to God. As Chriſt ſuſtained the capacity of a Surety, ſo God of a Creditor, who expected Satisfaction from him: That is, he required from him, as our Surety, the Penalty due to us for our Sin. And ſo Chriſt had to do immediately with God; yea, with a God infinitely wronged, and incenſed by Sin againſt us. To this incenſed Majeſty, Chriſt our Prieſt approacheth, as to a devouring Fire, with his Sacrifice.

Fourthly, The Perſons for whom, and in whoſe ſtead he offered himſelf to God, was the whole number of God's Elect, which were given him of the Father, neither more nor leſs: So ſpeak the Scriptures; He laid down his Life for the Sheep, Jo. 10. 15. for the Church, Acts 20. 28. for the Children of God, Joh. 11. 50, 51, 52. It is confeſſed there is ſufficiency of Virtue in this Sacrifice to redeem the whole World, and on that account ſome Divines affirm he is called the Saviour of the World, Joh. 4. 42. & alibi. We acknowledge alſo, that he purchaſed the Service of others beſides the Elect, to be uſeful to them, as they many ways are. In which ſenſe others take thoſe Scriptures that ſpeak ſo univerſally of the extent of his Death. We alſo acknowledge that the Elect being ſcattered in all Parts, and among all ranks of Men in the World, and unknown to thoſe that are to tender Jeſus Chriſt to Men by the preaching of the Goſpel; the ſtile of the Goſpel (as it was neceſſary) is by ſuch indefinite Expreſſions ſuited to the general tenders they are to make of him: But that the Efficacy and Saving-Virtue of this all-ſufficient Sacrifice is co-extended with God's Election, ſo that they all, and no others can, or ſhall reap the ſpecial Benefits of it, is too clear in the Scriptures to be denied, Eph. 5. 23. Joh. 17. 2, 9, 19, 20. Joh. 10. 26, 27, 28. 1 Tim. 4. 10.

Docent Theologi Chriſtum pro omnibus ſufficienter, pro electis duntaxat efficaciter mortuum eſſe. Camero ubi ſupro, p. 535.

Mr. Strong.

Fifthly, The deſign and end of this Oblation was to atone, pacifie, and reconcile God, by giving him a full and adequate Compenſation or Satisfaction for the Sins of theſe his Elect: So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, Col. 1. 20. And having made Peace, through the Blood of his Croſs, by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf; by him I ſay, whether they be things in Earth, or things in Heaven. So 2 Cor. 5. 19. God was in Chriſt, reconciling the World to himſelf. Reconciliation is the making up of that Breach cauſed by Sin, between us and God, and reſtoring us again to his Favour and Friendſhip: For this end Chriſt offered up himſelf to God; I ſay, not for this end only, but more eſpecially: hence it's called ἱλασμὸς, a Propitiation; and ſo the Seventy render that place, Numb. 15. ἱλασμένος κριὸς, the Propitiating Ram. But here I would not be miſtaken, as tho' the Reconciliation were made only between us and God the Father by the Blood of the Croſs; for we are reconciled by it to the whole Trinity. Every Sin being againſt the Divine Majeſty, it muſt needs follow, that the Three Perſons having the ſame Divine Eſſence, muſt be all offended by the commiſſion, and ſo all reconciled by the expiation and remiſſion of the ſame. But Reconciliation is ſaid to be with the Father, becauſe, tho' the Works of the Trinity ad extra be undivided, and what one doth, all do; and what is done to one, is done to all; yet by this form and manner of Expreſſion (as a learned Man well obſerves) the Scriptures point out the proper Office of each Perſon. The Father receives us into favour; the Son mediates, and gives the Ranſom which procures it; the Spirit applies and ſeals this to the Perſons and Hearts of Believers. However, being reconciled to the Father, we are alſo reconciled to the Son and Spirit, as they are one God in three Perſons. And if it be objected, that then Chriſt offered up a Sacrifice, or laid down a Price to reconcile us to himſelf; I ſhall more fairly and directly meet with and ſatisfie that Objection, when I come to ſpeak of Chriſt's Satisfaction, which is one of the principal fruits of this his excellent Oblation. For the preſent this may inform you about the nature and precious worth of Chriſt's Oblation. The uſes whereof follow in theſe Five practical Inferences.

Zanch. de tribus Elohim.

Inference 1. Hence it follows, That actual Believers are fully freed from the Guilt of their Sins, and ſhall never more come under Condemnation.

The Obligation of Sin is perfectly aboliſhed by the virtue of this Sacrifice. When Chriſt became our Sacrifice, he both bare, and bare away our Sins. Firſt, It was laid upon him, then expiated by him: So much is imported in that word, Heb. 9. 28. Chriſt was once offered to bear the Sins of many. To bear, the word is a full and emphatical word, ſignifying not only to bear, but to bear away. So Joh. 1. 29. Behold the Lamb of God, ὁ αἴρων, that taketh away the Sins of the World: Not only declaratively, or by way of manifeſtation to the Conſcience; but really, making a purgation of Sin, as it is in Heb. 1. 3. καθαρισμὸν ποιησάμενος, word for word, a Purgation being made, and not only declared. Now how great a Mercy is this, that by him, all that believe ſhould be juſtified from all things, from which they could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes, Acts 13. 39. What ſhall we call this Grace? Surely we ſhould do ſomewhat more than admire it, and faint under the ſenſe of ſuch a Mercy. Bleſſed is he whoſe Tranſgreſſion is forgiven, whoſe Sin is covered, Pſal. 32. 1. or, O the Bleſſedneſs or Felicities of him that is pardoned! who can expreſs the Mercies, Comforts, Happineſs of ſuch a ſtate as this? Reader, let me beg thee, if thou be one of this pardoned number, to look over the cancelled Bonds, and ſee what vaſt Sums are remitted to thee. Remember what thou waſt in thy natural Eſtate; poſſibly thou waſt in that black Bill, 1 Cor. 6. 3. what and yet pardoned! fully and finally pardoned, and that freely as to any hand that thou hadſt in the procurement of it! What canſt thou do leſs than fall down at the feet of free Grace, and kiſs thoſe Feet that moved ſo freely towards ſo vile a Sinner? It is not long ſince thy Iniquities were upon thee, and thou pinedſt away in them. Their Guilt could by no Creature-power be ſeparated from thy Soul. Now they are removed from thee, as far as the Eaſt from the Weſt, Pſal. 103. 11. So that when the Eaſt and Weſt, which are the two oppoſite Points of Heaven, meet, then thy Soul and its Guilt may meet again together.

'Ανενέγκειν, attollere, vel ſurſum ferre. Sic Syriac. ἐβαστάσεν καὶ ἀνένεγκεν, bajulavit, & ſurſum tulit. Beza Græc. Annot.in 1 Pet. 2. 24.

O the unſpeakable Efficacy of Chriſt's Sacrifice, which extends to all Sins! 1 Joh. 1. 7. The Blood of Chriſt cleanſeth from all Sins, Sins paſt and preſent, without exception. And ſome Divines of good note affirm, all Sins to come alſo; for, ſaith Mr. Paul Bains, Original Sin, in which all future Sins are, as fruits in the Root, is pardoned; and if theſe were not pardoned, they would void and irritate former Pardons. And laſtly, it would derogate from the moſt plenary Satisfaction of Chriſt. But the moſt ſay, and I think truly, that all the paſt Sins of Believers are pardoned, without Revocation; all their preſent Sins, without exception, but not their Sins to come by way of anticipation: and yet for them there is a Pardon of courſe, which is applied on their Repentance, and application of Chriſt's Blood; ſo that none of them ſhall make void former Pardons. O let theſe things ſlide ſweetly to thy melting Heart!

Inference 2. From this Oblation Chriſt made of himſelf to God for our Sins, we infer the inflexible Severity of Divine Juſtice, which could be no other way diverted from us, and appeaſed, but by the Blood of Chriſt. If Chriſt had not preſented himſelf to God for us, Juſtice would not have ſpared us: And if he do appear before God as our Surety, it will not ſpare him; Rom. 8. 32. He ſpared not his Son, but delivered him up to Death for us all. If forbearance might have been expected from any, ſurely it might from God, who is very pitiful, and full of tender Mercy, Jam. 5. 11. yet God in this caſe ſpared not. If one might have expected ſparing Mercy and Abatement from any, ſurely Chriſt might moſt of all expect it from his own Father; yet you hear God ſpared not his own Son. Sparing Mercy is the loweſt degree of Mercy, yet it was denied to Chriſt: He abated him not a minute of the Time appointed for his ſuffering, nor one degree of Wrath he was to bear: Nay, tho' in the Garden Chriſt fell upon the ground, and ſweat clodders of Blood, and in that unparallell'd Agony ſcrued up his Spirit to the higheſt intention, in that pitiful cry, Father, if it be poſſible, let this Cup paſs: And tho' he brake out upon the Croſs in that Heart-rending Complaint, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? yet no Abatement. Juſtice will not bend in the leaſt, but having to do with him on this account, reſolves to fetch its pennyworths out of his Blood. If this be ſo, what is the caſe of thy Soul, Reader, if thou be a Man or Woman that haſt no intereſt in this Sacrifice? For if theſe theſe things be done (in Chriſt) a green Tree, what will be done to (thee) the dry Tree? Luk. 23. 31. That is, if God ſo deal with me, that am not only innocent, but like a green and fruitful Tree, full of all delectable Fruits of Holineſs; yet if the Fire of his Indignation thus ſeize upon me, what will be your Condition, that are both barren and guilty, void of all good Fruit, and full of all Unrighteouſneſs, and ſo like dry ſeary Wood are fitted as Fewel to the Fire? Conſider with thy ſelf, Man, how canſt thou imagine thou canſt ſupport that infinite Wrath that Chriſt grappled with in the room of God's Elect? He had the ſtrength of a Deity to ſupport him. Iſa. 42. 1. Behold my Servant, whom I uphold. He had the fulneſs of his Spirit to prepare him, Iſa. 61. 11. He had the Miniſtry of an Angel, who came poſt from Heaven, to relieve him in his Agony; Luke 22. 43. He had the Ear of his Father to hear him, for he cried, and was heard in that he feared, Heb. 5. 7. He was aſſured of the Victory, before the Combat he knew he ſhould be juſtified; Iſa. 50. 8. and yet for all this was ſore amazed, and ſorrowful even to death, and his Heart was melted like Wax in the midſt of his Bowels. If the caſe ſtood thus with Chriſt, notwithſtanding all theſe advantages he had to bear the Wrath of God for a little time; how doſt thou think, a poor Worm as thou art, to dwell with everlaſting Burnings, or contend with devouring Fire? Luther ſaw ground enough for what he ſaid, when he cried out, I will have nothing to do with an abſolute God, i. e. with a God out of Chriſt: for, it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. Wo and alas for evermore to that Man that meets a juſt and righteous God without a Mediator! Whoever thou art that readeſt theſe Lines, I beſeech thee, by the Mercies of God, by all the regard and love thou haſt to thy own Soul, neglect not time, but make quick and ſure work of it. Get an Intereſt in this Sacrifice quickly, what elſe will be thy ſtate when vaſt Eternity opens to ſwallow thee up? What wilt thou do, Man, when thine Eye-ſtrings and Heart-ſtrings are breaking? O what a fearful ſcriech will thy Conſcience give when thou art preſented before the dreadful God, and no Chriſt to ſcreen thee from his Indignation! Happy is that Man who can ſay in a dying hour, as one did, who being deſired a little before his Diſſolution to give his Friends a little taſte of his preſent Hopes, and the grounds of them, chearfully anſwered, I will let you know how it is with me; then ſtretching forth his hand, ſaid, Nolo Deum abſolutum.

Mr. William Lyford.

"Here is the Grave, the Wrath of God, and "devouring Flames, the juſt Puniſhment of "Sin, on the one ſide; and here am I, a poor "ſinful Soul! on the other ſide: But this is my "Comfort, the Covenant of Grace, which is "eſtabliſhed upon ſo many ſure Promiſes, hath "ſalved all. There is an act of Oblivion paſſed "in Heaven: I will forgive their Iniquities, "and their Sins will I remember no more. This "is the bleſſed Priviledge of all within the Co"venant among whom I am one. O 'tis ſweet at all times, eſpecially at ſuch a time, to ſee the reconciled Face of God through Jeſus Chriſt, and hear the voice of Peace, through the Blood of the Croſs!

Inference 3. Hath Chriſt offered up himſelf a Sacrifice to God for us? Then let us improve in every condition this Sacrifice, and labour to get Hearts duly affected with ſuch a ſight as Faith can give us of it. Whatever the condition or complaint of any Chriſtian is, the beholding the Lamb of God that taketh away the Sin of the World, may give him ſtrong Support, and ſweet Relief. Do you complain of the hardneſs of your Hearts, and want of love to Chriſt? Behold him as offered up to God for you; and ſuch a ſight (if any in the World will do it) will melt your hard Hearts. Zech. 12. 10. They ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and and ſhall mourn. It is reported of Johannes Milius, that he was never obſerved to ſpeak of Chriſt and his Sufferings, but his Eyes would drop. Art thou too little touched and unaffected with the Evil of Sin? Is it thy Complaint, Chriſtian, that thou canſt not make Sin bear ſo hard upon thy Heart as thou wouldſt? Conſider but what thou haſt now read; realize this Sacrifice by Faith, and try what Efficacy there is in it to make Sin for ever bitter as Death to thy Soul. Suppoſe thy own Father had been ſtabb'd to the heart with ſuch a Knife, and his Blood were upon it, wouldſt thou delight to ſee, or endure to uſe that Knife any more? Sin is the Knife that ſtabb'd Chriſt to the heart; this ſhed his Blood. Surely you can never make light of that which lay ſo heavy upon the Soul and Body of Jeſus Chriſt.

Or is your Heart preſt down even to Deſpondency, under the Guilt of Sin, ſo that you cry, How can ſuch a Sinner as I be pardoned; My Sin is greater than can be forgiven? Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the Sins of the World. Remember that no Sin can ſtand before the Efficacy of his Blood. 1 Joh. 1. 7. The Blood of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth from all Sin. This Sacrifice makes unto God full ſatisfaction.

Are you at any time ſtaggering through Unbelief? filled with unbelieving ſuſpicions of the Promiſes? Look hither, and you ſhall ſee them all ratified and eſtabliſhed in the Blood of the Croſs, ſo that Hills and Mountains ſhall ſooner ſtart from their own Baſis and Centers, than one tittle of the Promiſe fail: Heb. 9. 17, 18, 19.

Do you at any time find your Hearts fretting, diſquieted, and impatient under every petty Croſs and Trial? See how quietly Chriſt your Sacrifice came to the Altar, how meekly and patiently he ſtood under all the Wrath of God and Men together. This will ſilence, convince and ſhame you.

In a word, Here you will ſee ſo much of the Grace of God, and love of Chriſt, in providing and becoming a Sacrifice for you: you will ſee God taking Vengeance upon Sin, but ſparing the Sinner; you will ſee Chriſt ſtanding as the Body of Sin alone, for he was made Sin for us, that we might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him: that whatever Corruption burdens, this in the believing Application will ſupport; whatever Grace be defective, this will revive it.

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SER-

SERMON XIII.

Serm. 13. Opens the Interceſſion of of Chriſt our High-Prieſt, being the ſecond Act or Part of Chriſt's Prieſtly Office.

HEB. VII. 25.

Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to the uttermoſt, that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.

HAving diſpatcht the firſt Part or Act of Chriſt's Prieſthood, conſiſting in his Oblation; we come to the other Branch of it, conſiſting in his Interceſſion, which is nothing elſe but the virtual continuation of his Offering once made on Earth; that being medium reconciliationis, the means of reconciling; this, medium applicationis, the way and means of his applying to us the Benefits purchaſed by it.

This ſecond Part, or Branch of his Prieſthood, was typified by the High-Prieſt's entring with the Blood of the Sacrifice and ſweet Incenſe into the holy Place: Lev. 16. 12, 13, 14. and he ſhall take the Cenſer full of burning Coals of fire from off the Altar before the Lord, and his hands full of ſweet Incenſe beaten ſmall, and bring it within the Vail. And he ſhall put the Incenſe upon the fire before the Lord, that the Cloud of the Incenſe may cover the Mercy ſeat that is upon the Teſtimony, that he die not. And he ſhall take the blood of the bullock, and ſprinkle it with his finger upon the Mercy-ſeat, eaſtward, &c. Chriſt's offering himſelf on Earth, anſwered to the killing of the Sacrifice without; and his entring into Heaven, there to intercede, was that which anſwered to the Prieſt going with Blood, and his hands full of incenſe, within the Vail. So that this is a part, yea, a ſpecial part of Chriſt's Prieſthood, and ſo neceſſary to it, that if he had not done this, all his Work on Earth had ſignified nothing; nor had he been a Prieſt, that is, a compleat and perfect Prieſt, if he had remained on Earth, Heb. 8. 4. becauſe the very deſign and end of ſhedding his Blood on Earth had been fruſtrated, which was to carry it before the Lord into Heaven. So that is the principal perfective part of the Prieſthood: He acted the firſt part on Earth, in a ſtate of deep Abaſement, in the form of a Servant; but he acts this in Glory, whereto he is taken up, that he may follow on his deſign in dying, and give the Work of our Salvation its laſt compleating Act. So much is imported in this Scripture, which tells us, by reaſon hereof he is able to ſave to the uttermoſt, &c.

The words contain an incouragement to Believers, to come to God in the way of Faith, drawn from the Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven for them: In which you may take notice of theſe three principal parts.

1. The Quality of the Perſons here incouraged, who are deſcribed by a direct Act of Faith, as poor Recumbents that are going out of themſelves to God by Faith; but conſcious of great unworthineſs in themſelves, and thence apt to be diſcouraged.

2. The Incouragement propounded to ſuch Believers, drawn from the Ability of Jeſus Chriſt, in whoſe Name they go to the Father to ſave them to the uttermoſt, i. e. fully perfectly, compleatly; for ſo this emphatical word, εἰς τὸ παντελὲς, ſignifies, the ſaving us wholly, throughly, compleatly, and altogether; giving our Salvation its laſt Act and Complement.

Εἰς τὸ παντελὲς, & εἰς τὸ διηνεκὲς differunt ἐμφάσει, ſubjectà materià non differunt. Nam διηνεκὲς propriè perpetuitatem temporis ſignificat; παντελὲς non hanc ſolam, verum etiam omni modam perfectionem. Camero.

3. The ground or reaſon of this his ſaving Ability: Seeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion; i. e. he hath not only offered up his Blood to God upon the Tree, as a full price to purchaſe Pardon and Grace for the Believers, but lives in Heaven, and that for ever, to apply unto us in the way of interceſſion, all the Fruits, Bleſſings and Benefits that that precious Blood of his deſerves, and hath procured as a price for them. The words thus opened, that Point I ſhall ſingle out, from among many that lye in them, as moſt ſuitable to my deſign and purpoſe, is this;

Doct. That Jeſus our High-Prieſt lives for ever, in the capacity of a potent Interceſſor, in Heaven for Believers.

Here we will inquire, Firſt, What it is for Chriſt to be an Interceſſor. Secondly, By what Acts he performs that Work in Heaven. Thirdly, Whence the potency and prevalency of his Interceſſion is. Fourthly, and laſtly, How he lives for ever to make Interceſſion for us.

Firſt, What it is for Chriſt to be an Interceſſor for us. To intercede in general, is to go betwixt two Parties, to intreat, argue, and plead with one for the other. And of this there are two ſorts; 1. Ex charitate, ut fratres, that whereby one Chriſtian prays and pleads with God for another, 1 Tim. 2. 1. 2. Ex officio mediatorio, that whereby Chriſt, as an act of Office, preſents himſelf before God to requeſt for us. Betwixt theſe two is this difference, that the former is performed not in our own, but another's Name; we can tender no requeſt to God immediately, or for our own ſake, either for our ſelves or for others: Joh. 16. 23. Whatſoever ye ſhall ask the Father in my Name, he will give it you. But the latter, which is proper to Chriſt, is an interceſſion with God for us, in his own Name, and upon the account of his proper Merit; the one is a private act of Charity, the other a publick act of Office: And ſo he is our Advocate or Court friend, as Satan is our Accuſer or Court-adverſary. Satan is ὁ ἀντίδικος, one that charges us before God, 1 Pet. 5. 8. and continually endeavours to make Breaches between us and God. Chriſt is ὁ παράκλητος our Attorney, Advocate or Lidger, that pleads for us, and continues peace and friendſhip between us and God, 1 John 2. 2. If any Man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous.

And thus to make interceſſion, is the peculiar and incommunicable Prerogative of Jeſus Chriſt: None but he can go in his own Name to God. And in that ſenſe we are to underſtand that place. Ezek. 44. 2, 3. Then ſaid the Lord unto me, This Gate ſhall be ſhut, it ſhall not be opened, and no Man ſhall enter in by it; becauſe the Lord the God of Iſrael hath entred in by it, therefore it ſhall be ſhut. It is for the Prince, the Prince he ſhall ſit by it, to eat bread before the Lord, &c. The great broad Gate, called here the Prince's Gate, ſignifies that abundant and direct entrance that Chriſt had into Heaven by his own Merits, and in his own Name; this, ſaith the Lord, ſhall be ſhut, no Man ſhall enter in by it; all other Men muſt come thither as it were, by collateral or ſide doors, which looked all towards the Altar, viz. by vertue of the Mediator, and through the benefit of his Death imputed to them.

See Deodati, and our Engliſh Annot. in loc.

And yet tho' God hath for ever ſhut up and barr'd this way to all the Children of Men, telling us that no Man ſhall ever have acceſs to him in his own Name, as Chriſt the Prince had: How do ſome notwithſtanding, ſtrive to force open the Prince's Gate? So do they that found the interceſſion of Saints upon their own Works and Merits, thereby robbing Chriſt of his peculiar Glory; but all that ſo approach God, approach a devouring fire: Chriſt only in the virtue of his Blood thus comes before him, to make interceſſion for us.

Pet. Lombard. lib 4. diſt. 45.

Secondly, We will inquire wherein the Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven conſiſts, or by what Acts he performs this glorious Office there, And the Scriptures place it in three things:

Quid vero ſibi velit hic ἐμφανισμος pro nobis ἐν πρoσώπῳ θεȣ͂, videndum eſt. Reſpicit ad ὑπόδειγμα pontificis veteris, qui ingreſſus intra velum, dicebatur apparere in conſpectu Dei pro populo, quatenus ſe cum ſanguine hirci piacularis præſentabat Deo, & precibus ſuis ſupplex orabat, ut propter ſanguinem non illum hircinum, ſed illo repræſentatum, Chriſti Mediatoris fundendum, propitius eſſet preccatis ſuis, & populi. Doct. Pareus in loc.

1. In his preſenting himſelf before the Lord in our Names, and upon our Accounts. So we read in Heb. 9. 24. Chriſt is entred into Heaven it ſelf, now to appear in the preſence of God for us. The Apoſtle manifeſtly alludes to the High-Prieſt's appearing in the Holy of Holies, which was the figure of Heaven, preſenting to the Lord the Names of the twelve Tribes of Iſrael, which were on his Breaſt and Shoulders, Exod. 28. 9, 12, 28, 29. To which the Church is ſuppoſed to allude in that requeſt, Cant 8. 6. Set me as a Seal upon thine Heart, as a Seal upon thine Arm. Now the very ſight of Chriſt, our High-Prieſt in Heaven, prevails exceedingly with God, and turns away his diſpleaſure from us. As when God looks upon the Rainbow, which is the Sign of the Covenant, he remembers the Earth in Mercy: So when he looks on Chriſt, his heart muſt needs be towards us upon his account; and therefore in Rev. 4. 3. Chriſt is compared to a Rainbow encompaſſing the Throne.

2. Chriſt performs his interceſſion-work in Heaven, not by a naked appearing in the preſence of God only, but alſo by preſenting his Blood, and all his Sufferings to God, as a moving Plea on our account. Whether he makes any proper oral Interceſſion there, as he did on Earth, is not ſo clear; ſome incline to it, and think it's countenanced by Zech. 1. 12, 13. where Chriſt our Interceſſor preſents a proper vocal Requeſt to the Father, in the behalf of of his People; ſaying, O Lord of Hoſts, How long wilt thou not have Mercy on Jeruſalem, and on the Cities of Judah, againſt whom thou haſt bid indignation theſe threeſcore and ten Years? And the Lord anſwered him with good and comfortable words. And ſo, Acts 2. 23. as ſoon as he came to Heaven, he is ſaid (and that is the firſt Fruits of his Interceſſion) to obtain the Promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt. But ſure I am, an interceeding Voice is by an uſual Proſopopeia attributed to his Blood; which in Heb. 12. 24. is ſaid to ſpeak better things than the Blood of Abel. Now Abel's Blood, and ſo Chriſt's, do cry unto God, as the Hire of the Labourers unjuſtly detained, or the whole Creation, which is in bondage through our Sins, is ſaid to cry and groan in the ears of the Lord, Jam. 5. 4. Rom. 8. 22. not vocally, but efficaciouſly. A rare illuſtration of this efficacious Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven, we have in that famous ſtory of Amintas, who appeared as an Advocate for his Brother Æchylus, who was ſtrongly accuſed, and very likely to be condemned to die. Now Amintas having performed great ſervices, and merited highly of the Common-Wealth, in whoſe ſervice one of his Hands was cut off in the Field; he comes into the Court in his Brother's behalf, and ſaid nothing, but only lifted up his Arm, and ſhewed them cubitum ſine manus, an Arm without a Hand; which ſo moved them, that (without a word ſpeaking) they freed his Brother immediately.

Voluntate ac deſiderio ſuo arcenti quemadmodum in terris antea fecerit, ita & in cœlis apud Patrem mortis ſuæ vim, atq; efficaciam nobis ad ſalutem applicari poſtulat. Synopſ. purior. Theol. p. 346.

Ælian. Hiſt. lib. 5. cap. 19.

And thus if you look into Rev. 5. 6. you ſhall ſee in what poſture Chriſt is repreſented viſionally there, as ſtanding between God and us: And I beheld, and lo, in the midſt of the Throne, and four Beaſts, and in the midſt of the Elders ſtood a Lamb as it had been ſlain; i. e. bearing in his glorified Body the marks of his Death and Sacrifice. Thoſe Wounds he received for our Sins on Earth, are, as it were, ſtill freſh bleeding in Heaven: A moving and prevailing Argument it is with the Father, to give out the Mercies he plead for.

Deodati in loc.

3. And laſtly, He preſents the Prayers of his Saints to God, with his Merits; and deſires that they may for his ſake be granted. He cauſes a Cloud of Incenſe to aſcend before God with them. Rev. 8. 3. All theſe were excellently typed out by the going in of the High-Prieſt before the Lord, with the Names of the Children of Iſrael on his Breaſt, with the Blood of the Sacrifice, and his hands full of Incenſe, as the Apoſtle explains them in Heb. 7. and Heb. 9.

Thirdly, And that this Interceſſion of Chriſt is moſt potent, ſucceſsful, and prevalent with God, will be evinced both from the Qualifications of this our Advocate, from his great Intereſt in the Father, from the Nature of the Place he uſeth with God, and from the Relation and Intereſt Believers have, both in the Father to whom, and the Son by whom this Interceſſion is made.

1. Our Interceſſor in the Heavens is every way able and fit for the Work he is engaged in there. Whatever is deſirable in an Advocate, is in him eminently. It is neceſſary that he who undertakes to plead the Cauſe of another, eſpecially if it be weighty and intricate, ſhould be wiſe, faithful, tender-hearted, and one that concerns himſelf in the ſucceſs of his Buſineſs. Our Advocate Chriſt wants no Wiſdom to manage his Work; he is the Wiſdom of God, yea, only wiſe, Jude 25. There's much folly in the beſt of our Duties, we know not how to preſs an Argument home with God; but Chriſt hath the Art of it. Our buſineſs is in a wiſe hand: he is no leſs faithful than wiſe; therefore he is called a faithful High-Prieſt in things pertaining to God, Heb. 2. 17. He aſſures us we may ſafely truſt our Concerns with him, John 14. 2. In my Father's houſe are many Manſions; if it were not ſo, I would have told you; q. d. Do you think I will deceive you? Men may cheat you, but I will not; your own Hearts may, and daily do deceive you; but ſo will not I. And for tender-heartedneſs, and ſenſible reſentments for our conditions, there is none like him: Heb. 4. 15. For we have not an High-Prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our Infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are; yet without ſin. We have not one that cannot ſympathize, ſo it is in the Greek: And on purpoſe that he might be the better able to ſympathize with us, he came as near to our conditions, as the holineſs of his Nature could permit. He ſuffered himſelf to be in all points tempted like as we are, ſin only excepted.

Μη δυνάμενον συμπαθῆσαι· Tho' he cannot weep, or grieve now as he did on Earth, yet he can love now as much as ever he loved; and therefore he looks down from Heaven upon every particular Member: He ſeeth that this Man wants this Grace, and that Man wants that; and the other is in danger of this corruption, or that temptation: and he is daily carrying on the Cure. You ſee not your Phyſician, he ſtands out of your ſight; but he ſeeth you, and it is he that doth all for you that is done. Baxter's Treatiſe of Converſion.

And then for his concernment and intereſt in the ſucceſs of his Suit; he not only reckons, but hath really made it his own Intereſt, yea, more his own than it is ours: For now by reaſon of the myſtical Union, all our wants and troubles are his, Eph. 1. 23. yea, his own glory and compleatneſs as Mediator, is deeply intereſſed in it; and therefore we need not doubt but he will uſe all care and diligence in that Work. If you ſay ſo he may, and yet not ſpeed for all that, for it depends on the Father's Grant: True, but then,

2. Conſider the great Intereſt he hath in the Father, with whom he ſo intercedes. Chriſt is his dear Son, Col. 1. 13. the beloved of his Soul, Eph. 1. 6. Betwixt him and the Father, with whom when he intercedes, there is an unity, not only of Nature, but Will; and ſo he always hears him, Joh. 11. 42. Yea, and he ſaid to this his dear Son, when he came firſt to Heaven, Aſk of me, and I will give thee, Pſal. 2. 8. Moreover,

3. He muſt needs ſpeed in his Suit, if you conſider the Nature of his Interceſſion, which is juſt and reaſonable for the matter, urgent and continual for the manner of it. The matter of his Requeſt is moſt equal: what he deſires, is not deſired gratis, or upon terms unbecoming the Holineſs and Righteouſneſs of God to grant; he deſires no more but what he hath deſerved, and given a valuable conſideration to the Father for. And ſo the Juſtice of God doth not only not oppoſe, but furthers and pleads for the granting and fulfilling his Requeſts.

Here you muſt remember that the Father is under a Covenant Tie and Bond to do what he asks; for Chriſt having fully performed the Work on his part, the Mercies he intercedes for, are as due as the hire of the Labourer is when the Work is faithfully done. And as the matter is juſt, ſo the manner of his Interceſſion is urgent and continual. How importunate a Suiter he is, may be eaſily gathered from that ſpecimen or handſel given of it in Joh. 17. and for the conſtancy of it, my Text tells us, he ever lives to make interceſſion: 'Tis his great buſineſs in Heaven, and he follows it cloſe. And to cloſe all,

4. Conſider who they are for whom he makes Interceſſion: The Friends of God, the Children of God; thoſe that the Father himſelf loves, and his Heart is propenſe and ready enough to grant the beſt and greateſt of Mercies to: Which is the meaning of John 16. 26, 27. The Father himſelf loveth you. And it muſt needs be ſo, for the firſt Corner-ſtone of all theſe Mercies was laid by the Father himſelf in his moſt free Election. He alſo delivered his Son for us; and how ſhall he not with him freely give us all things? Rom. 8. 32. So then there can remain no doubt upon a conſidering heart, but Chriſt is a prevalent and ſucceſsful interceſſor in Heaven. There only remains one thing more to be ſatisfied, and that is,

Fourthly, In what ſenſe he is ſaid to live for ever to make interceſſion. Shall he then be always at his Work? imployed in begging new Favours for us to eternity? How then ſhall the People of God be perfect in Heaven, if there be need of Chriſt's Interceſſion to Eternity for them?

I anſwer, by diſtinguiſhing the eſſence and ſubſtance of Chriſt's Offices, from the way and manner of Adminiſtration. In the firſt ſenſe it is eternal: For his mediatory Kingdom; as to the eſſence of it, is to abide for ever; Chriſt ſhall never ceaſe to be a Mediator; the Church ſhall never want a Head: For of his Kingdom there ſhall be no end, Luk. 1. 33. However, Chriſt, as Mediator, being employed in a kind of ſubordinate way, 1 Cor. 3. 23. when he ſhall have accompliſhed that deſign for which he became a Mediator, Then ſhall he deliver up the Kingdom (in the ſenſe we ſpake before) to the Father: and ſo God ſhall be all in all, 1 Cor. 15. 24. Then ſhall the Divinity of Chriſt, which was ſo emptied and obſcured in his undertaking this temporary diſpenſatory Kingdom, be more gloriouſly manifeſted, by the full poſſeſſion, uſe and enjoyment of that natural, divine, eternal Kingdom, which belongs to all the three co-eſſential and co-equal Perſons, reigning with the ſame Power, Majeſty and Glory, in the unity of the divine Eſſence, and common Acts, in all, and over all, infinitely, and immutably for ever.

And ſo Chriſt continues to be our Mediator; and yet that affords no Argument that our Happineſs ſhall be incompleat, but rather argues the Perfection of the Church, which thenceforth ſhall be governed no more as now it is, nor have any farther uſe of Ordinances, but ſhall be ruled more immediately, gloriouſly, triumphantly and ineffably in the World to come: The ſubſtance of his Mediatorſhip is not changed, but the manner of the Adminiſtration only.

Uſe 1. Doth Chriſt live for ever in Heaven to preſent his Blood to God in the way of Interceſſion for Believers? How ſad then is their caſe, that have no intereſt in Chriſt's Blood; but inſtead of pleading for them, it cries to God againſt them, as the deſpiſers and abuſers of it! Every Unbeliever deſpiſes it: The Apoſtate treads it under foot. He that is an Interceſſor for ſome, will be an Accuſer of others. To be guilty of a Man's Blood, is ſad; but to have the Blood of Jeſus accuſing and crying to God againſt a Soul, is unſpeakably terrible. Surely when he ſhall make inquiſition for Blood, when the day of his Vengeance is come, he will make it appear by the Judgments he will execute, that this is a Sin never to be expiated, but Vengeance ſhall purſue the Sinner to the bottom of Hell. Ah! What do Men and Women do, in rejecting the gracious Offers of a Chriſt! What, tread upon a Saviour! And caſt Contempt by unbelief and hardneſs of heart upon their only Remedy! I remember I have read of a Harlot that kill'd her Child, and ſaid that it ſmiled upon her when ſhe went to ſtab it. Sinner, doth not Chriſt ſmile upon thee, yern upon thee in the Goſpel? And wilt thou as it were ſtab him to the heart by thine Infidelity? Wo and alas for that Man, againſt whom this Blood cries in Heaven!

Uſe 2. Doth Chriſt live for ever to make Interceſſion? Hence let Believers fetch relief, and draw encouragement againſt all the cauſes and grounds of their Fears and Troubles; for ſurely this anſwers them all.

1. Hence let them be encouraged from all their ſinful Infirmities, and lamented Weakneſſes. 'Tis confeſſed theſe are ſad things; they grieve the Spirit of God, ſadden your own Hearts, cloud your Evidences; but having ſuch a High-prieſt in Heaven, can never be your ruin. 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. My little Children, theſe things write I unto you, that you ſin not: And if any Man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous. [My little Children] Children, eſpecially little Children, when firſt beginning to take the foot, are apt to ſtumble at every ſtraw; ſo are [illegible], young, and unexperienced Chriſtians: But what if they do? Why tho' it muſt be far from them to take encouragement ſo to do from Chriſt and his Interceſſion, yet if by ſurprizal they ſo ſin, let them not be utterly diſcouraged: For we have an Advocate, he ſtops whatever Plea may be brought in againſt us by the Devil, or the Law; and anſwers all by his Satisfaction: He gets out freſh Pardons for new Sins. And this Advocate is with [the Father] he doth not ſay with his Father, tho' that had been a ſingular ſupport in it ſelf, not yet with our Father, which is a ſweet encouragement ſingly conſidered, but with [the Father] which takes in both, to make the encouragement full. Remember, ye that are caſt down under the ſenſe of ſin, that Jeſus your Friend in the Court above, is able to ſave to the uttermoſt. Which is, as one calls it, a reaching VVord, and extends it ſelf ſo far, that thou canſt not look beyond it. "Let thy Soul be ſet on the higheſt " Mount that any Creature was ever ſet on, " and enlarged to take in view the moſt ſpaci- " ous proſpect both of Sin and Miſery, and " difficulties of being ſaved, that ever yet any " poor humble Soul did caſt within it ſelf; yea, " join to theſe all the Hindrances and Objections " that the Heart of Man can invent againſt it " ſelf and Salvation: Lift up thine Eyes, and " look to the utmoſt thou canſt ſee: And " Chriſt by his Interceſſion is able to ſave thee " beyond the Horizon and utmoſt Compaſs of " thy Thoughts, even to the utmoſt.

Goodwin's Triumph, p. 263.

2. Hence draw abundant encouragement againſt all Heart-ſtrainings, and deadneſs of Spirit in Prayer. Thou complaineſt thy Heart is dead, wandring, and contracted in duty. O but remember Chriſt's Blood ſpeaks, when thou canſt not; it can plead for thee, and that powerfully, when thou art not able to ſpeak a word for thy ſelf: To this ſenſe that Scripture ſpeaks, Cant. 3. 6. Who is this that cometh out of the Wilderneſs in Pillars of Smoak, perfumed with Myrrh, and Frankincenſe, all the Powders of the Merchant? The Duties of Chriſtians go up many times, as Pillars or Clouds of Smoak from them, more Smoak than Fire, Prayers ſmoaked and ſullied with their offenſive corruptions: But remember, Chriſt perfumes them with Myrrh, &c. He by his Interceſſion gives them a ſweet perfume.

3. Chriſt's Interceſſion is a ſingular relief to all that come unto God by him, againſt all ſinful Damps, and ſlaviſh Fears for the Juſtice of God. Nothing more promotes the fear of Reverence; nothing more ſuppreſſeth unbelieving Deſpondencies, and deſtroys the Spirit of Bondage. So you find it, Heb. 10. 19, 20, 21. Having therefore, Brethren, boldneſs to enter into the Holieſt, by the Blood of Jeſus, by a new and living way, which he hath conſecrated for us through the Vail, that is to ſay, his Fleſh; and having an High-Prieſt over the Houſe of God, let us draw near with a true Heart, ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πίϛεως, in full aſſurance of Faith: Or let us come unto God, as a Ship comes with full ſail into the Harbour. O what a direct and full gale of encouragement doth this Interceſſion of Chriſt give to the poor Soul that lay a-ground, or was wind-bound before?

If Jeſus be the Mediator of the New Covenant, Believers may go with boldneſs, and look the Juſtice of God in the face; for your Debt is ſatisfied. So long as a Man is in Debt, he ſteals by the Priſon-door in the dark; but if his Surety have paid the Debt, he dares come (as you ſay) and whet his Knife at the Compter-door. Chriſt your Surety hath paid the Debt; you may go with boldneſs, and look Juſtice in the face, the Devil and all the Serjeants of Hell in the face. Mr. W. B. in his Treatiſe of Chriſt and the Covenant, p. 98.

4. The Interceſſion of Chriſt gives admirable ſatisfaction and encouragement to all that come to God, againſt the fears of deſerting him again by Apoſtacy. This, my Friends, this is your principal ſecurity againſt theſe matters of Fear. With this he relieves Peter, Luke 22. 31, 32.

31, 31. Simon, (ſaith he) Satan hath deſired to have you, that he may ſift you as Wheat; but I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not, q. d. Satan will fan thee, not to get out thy Chaff, but boult out thy Flower: His temptations are levell'd againſt thy Faith; but fear not, my Prayer ſhall break his Deſigns, and ſecure thy Faith from all attempts upon it. Upon this powerful Interceſſion of Chriſt, the Apoſtle builds his triumph againſt all that threatens to bring him, or any of the Saints, again into a ſtate of Condemnation. And ſee how he drives on that Triumph, from the Reſurrection, and Seſſion of Chriſt at the Father's right hand; and eſpecially from the work of Interceſſion, which he lives there to perform: Rom. 8. 34, 35. Who is he that condemneth? It's Chriſt that dieth; yea, rather that's riſen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who alſo maketh Interceſſion for us. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the Love of Chriſt?

5. It gives ſweet relief againſt the defects and wants that yet are in our Sanctification. We want a great deal of Faith, Love, Heavenly-mindedneſs, Mortification, Knowledge. We are ſhort and wanting in all. There are the ὑστερήματα, the Remains, or things wanting; as the Apoſtle calls them, 1 Theſ. 3. 10. Well, if Grace be but yet in its weak beginnings, and infancy in thy Soul, this may incourage, that by reaſon of Chriſt's Interceſſion, it ſhall live, grow, and expatiate it ſelf in thy heart. He is not only the Author, but the Finiſher of it, Heb. 12. 2. He is ever begging new and freſh Mercies for you in Heaven; and will never be quiet till all your wants be ſupplied. He ſaves εἰς τὸ παντελὲς, to the uttermoſt, i. e. as I told you before, to the laſt, perfective, compleating act of Salvation. So that this is a Fountain of Relief againſt all your Fears.

Uſe 3. Doth Chriſt live for ever to make Interceſſion? then let thoſe who reap on Earth the Fruits of that his work in Heaven, draw Inſtruction thence about the following Duties to which it leads them as by the hand.

He doth not forget us, tho' he be exalted to his Glory.

1. Do not forget Chriſt in an exalted ſtate. You ſee tho' he be in all the Glory above, at God's right Hand, an enthron'd King, he doth not forget you: He like Joſeph remembers his Brethren in all his Glory. But alas, how oft doth Advancement make us forget him? As the Lord complains in Hoſea 13. 5, 6. I did know thee in the Wilderneſs, in the Land of great Drought: But when they came into Canaan, According to their Paſtures ſo were they filled; they were filled, and their Heart was exalted; therefore have they forgotten me. As if he had ſaid, O my People, you and I were better acquainted in the Wilderneſs, when thou wert in a low condition, left to my immediate Care, living by daily Faith; O then you gave me many a ſweet viſit; but now you are filled, I hear no more of you. Good had it been for ſome Saints, if they had never known Proſperity.

2. Let the Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven for you, encourage you to conſtancy in the good ways of God. To this duty it ſweetly encourages alſo, Heb. 4. 14. Seeing then that we have a great High-Prieſt that is paſſed into the Heavens, Jeſus the Son of God, let us hold faſt our Profeſſion. Here is encouragement to perſeverance on a double account. One is, that Jeſus our Head is already in Heaven; and if the Head be above Water, the Body cannot drown. The other is from the buſineſs he is there imployed about, which is his Prieſthood, he is paſſed into the Heavens, as our great High-prieſt, to intercede; and therefore we cannot miſcarry.

3. Let it encourage you to conſtancy to Prayer: O do not neglect that excellent Duty, ſeeing Chriſt is there to preſent all your Petitions to God; yea, to perfume as well as preſent them. So the Apoſtle, Heb. 4. 16. infers from Chriſt's Interceſſion; Let us therefore come boldly unto the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help in the time of need.

4. Hence be encouraged to plead for Chriſt on Earth, who continually pleads for you in Heaven. If any accuſe you, he is there to plead for you: And if any diſhonour him on Earth, ſee that you plead his Intereſt, and defend his Honour. Thus you have heard what his Interceſſion is, and what Benefits we receive by it.

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

for he is not like the poor ſilly Creatures that cannot bear exaltation without being puffed up, and forgetting both themſelves, their Friends, and their God. No, his Exaltation is Spiritual and Heavenly, perfecting his human Nature to the greateſt height it is capable of — he was never more tender of Jeruſalem when he wept over it, or of his People when he wept, bled, and died for them, than he is now tender over his in Glory. Mr. Baxter's Treatiſe of Converſion, p. 184.

Ser. 14. Aſſerts and vindicates the ſatisfaction of Chriſt, being the firſt principal effect or fruit of his Prieſthood.

SERMON XIV.

GAL. III. 13.

Chriſt hath redeemed us from the Curſe of the Law, being made a Curſe for us.

YOU have ſeen the general nature, neceſſity, and parts of Chriſt's Prieſthood, viz. his Oblation and Interceſſion. Before you part from this Office, it's neceſſary you ſhould farther take into conſideration the principal fruits and effects of his Prieſthood; which are, compleat Satisfaction, and the Acquiſition or Purchaſe of an Eternal Inheritance. The former, viz. The Satisfaction made by his Blood, is manifeſtly contained in this excellent Scripture before us, wherein the Apoſtle (having ſhewn before, at ver. 10. that whoſoever continues not in all things, written in the Law, to do them, are curſed) declares how notwithſtanding the threats of the Law, a Believer comes to be freed from the Curſe of it, namely, by Chriſt's bearing that Curſe for him, and ſo ſatisfying God's Juſtice, and diſcharging the Believer from all Obligations to Puniſhment.

More particularly, in theſe words you have the Believer's diſcharge from the Curſe of the Law, and the way and manner thereof opened.

1. The Believer's Diſcharge; Chriſt hath redeemed us from the Curſe of the Law. The Law of God hath three Parts, Commands, Promiſes, and Threatnings or Curſes. The Curſe of the Law is its condemning Sentence, whereby a Sinner is bound over to Death, even the Death of Soul and Body. The Chain by which it binds him, is the Guilt of Sin; and from which none can looſe the Soul but Chriſt. This Curſe of the Law is the moſt dreadful thing imaginable; it ſtrikes at the Life of a Sinner, yea, his beſt Life, the eternal Life of the Soul; and when it hath condemned, it is inexorable, no Cries nor Tears, no Reformations or Repentance can looſe the guilty Sinner; for it requires for its Reparation that which no meer Creature can give, even an infinite Satisfaction. Now from this Curſe Chriſt frees the Believer; that is, he diſſolves the Oblation to Puniſhment, cancels the Hand-writing, looſes all the Bonds and Chains of Guilt, ſo that the Curſe of the Law hath nothing to do with him for ever.

2. We have here the way and manner in and by which this is done; and that is by a full Price paid down, and that Price paid in the room of the Sinner; both making up a compleat and full Satisfaction. He pays a full Price, every way adequate and proportionable to the Wrong. So much this Word, ἡμᾶς ἐξηγόρασεν, which we tranſlate redeemed, imports; he hath bought us out, or fully bought us; that is, by a full Price. This Price with which he ſo fully bought or purchaſed our Freedom from the Curſe, not only called λύτρον, Mat. 20. 28. or Ranſom, but more emphatically ἀντίλυτρον, in 1 Tim. 2. 5, 6. which might be tranſlated an adequate or fully anſwerable Ranſom. And ſo his freeing us by his Price, is not only expreſſed by ἠγόρασας τῷ Θεῷ ἡμᾶς, Thou haſt bought us to God by thy Blood, Rev. 5. 9. but ἐξηγόρασεν ἡμᾶς he hath fully, perfectly, bought us out.

Quemadmodum qui liber erat, captivum redimit, ſe vadem conſtituendo; & induendo vincula, alteri exeunt: Ita Chriſtus legi ſervandæ obnoxius eſſe voluit, ut nobis immunitatem acquireret. Calv. in Gal. 4.

And as the Price or Ranſom paid was full, perfect, and ſufficient in it ſelf; ſo it was paid in our room, and upon our account: So ſaith the Text, By his being made a Curſe for us, the meaning is not, that Chriſt was made the very Curſe it ſelf, changed into a Curſe; no more than when the word is ſaid to be made Fleſh, the Divine Nature was converted into Fleſh, but it aſſumed or took Fleſh; and ſo Chriſt he took the Curſe upon himſelf. Therefore it's ſaid, 2 Cor. 5. 21. He was made Sin for us who knew no Sin; that is, our Sin was imputed to our Surety, and laid upon him for Satisfaction. And ſo this word ὑπὲρ [for] implies a ſubſtitution of one in the place and ſtead of another. Now the Price being full, and paid in lieu of our Sins, and thereupon we fully redeemed or delivered from the Curſe; it follows, as a fair and juſt Deduction, That,

Factus eſſe dicitur maledictum, & peccatum; non enim ipſummet maledictum factus eſt, ſc. formaliter maledictum; ſed maledictum noſtrum illi imputatum eſt. Cyrillus.

Doct. The Death of Chriſt hath made a full Satisfaction to God for all the Sins of his Elect.

He (to wit our Surety Chriſt) was oppreſſed, and he was afflicted, ſaith the Prophet, Iſa. 53. 7. it may be as fitly rendred, (and the words will bear it without the leaſt force) it was exacted, and he anſwered. But how, being either way tranſlated, it eſtabliſheth the ſatiſfaction of Chriſt, may be ſeen in our learned Annotations on that place. So Col. 1. 14. In whom we have ἀπολύτρωσιν διὰ τοῦ αἵματος, Redemption through his Blood, even the forgiveneſs of Sin. Here we have the benefit, viz. Redemption, interpreted by way of appoſition, even the remiſſion of ſins; and the matchleſs Price that was laid down to purchaſe it, the Blood of Chriſt. So again, Heb. 9. 12. By his own Blood he entred once into the holy place, having obtained, αἰωνίαν λύτρωσιν, eternal Redemption for us. Here's eternal Redemption, the Mercy purchaſed; his own Blood, the Price that procur'd it.

Now for as much as this Doctrine of Chriſt's Satisfaction is ſo neceſſary, weighty, and comfortable in it ſelf, and yet ſo much oppoſed and intricated by ſeveral Enemies to it; the Method I ſhall take for the clearing, eſtabliſhing, and preparing it for uſe, ſhall be,

Firſt, To open the nature of Chriſt's Satiſfaction, and ſhew what it is.

Secondly, To eſtabliſh the truth of it, and prove that he made full Satisfaction to God for all the Sins of the Elect.

Thirdly, To anſwer the moſt conſiderable Objections made againſt it.

And Laſtly, To Apply it.

Firſt, What is the Satisfaction of Chriſt, and what doth it imply? I anſwer, Satisfaction is the Act of Chriſt, God-man, preſenting himſelf as our Surety, in obedience to God, and love to us; to do and ſuffer all that the Law required of us; and thereby freeing us from the Wrath and Curſe due to us for our Sins.

What Divine Satiſfaction is.

1. It is the Act of God-man; no other was capable of giving Satisfaction for an infinite Wrong done to God. But by reaſon of the union of the two Natures in his wonderful Perſon, he could do it, and hath done it for us. The human Nature did what was neceſſary in its kind; it gave the matter of the Sacrifice: The divine Nature ſtampt the dignity and value upon it, which made it an adequate Compenſation: So that it was opus θεανδρικόν, the act of God-man; yet ſo, that each Nature retained its own properties, notwithſtanding their joint influence into the effect. If the Angels in Heaven had laid down their Lives; or if the Blood of all the Men in the World had been poured out by Juſtice, this could never have ſatisfied; becauſe that ἀξίωσις worth and value which this Sacrifice hath, would have ſtill been wanting. It was God that redeemed the Church with his own Blood, Acts 20. 28. If God redeem with his own Blood, he redeems as God man, without any diſpute.

Satisfactio hæc valorem habuit ſufficientem, & aliqua ratione infinitum: primo, à perſona offerentis, qui fuit Deus. 2. A dignitate & præſtantia rei oblatæ; obtulit enim ſemetipſum, Deum & hominem. 3. A modo offerendi, cui divina quædam perfectio infuit, ratione hypoſtaticæ unionis. Dr. Ames. medul. p. 98.

2. If he ſatisfie God for us, he muſt preſent himſelf before God, as our Surety, in our ſtead, as well as for our good; elſe his obedience had ſignified nothing to us: To this end he was made under under the Law, Gal. 4. 4. comes under the ſame obligation with us, and that as a Surety, for ſo he is called, Heb. 7. 22. Indeed his Obedience and Sufferings could be exacted from him upon no other account. It was not for any thing he had done, that he became a Curſe. It was propheſied of him, Dan. 9. 26. The Meſſiah ſhall be cut off, but not for himſelf: And being dead, the Scriptures plainly aſſert it was for our ſins, and upon our account: So 1 Cor. 15. 3. Chriſt died for our ſins according to the Scriptures.

And it's well obſerved by our Divines, who aſſert the Vicegerency and Subſtitution of Chriſt in his Sufferings, that all thoſe Greek Particles which we tranſlate [for] when applied to the Sufferings of Chriſt, do note the meritorious, deſerving, procuring Cauſe of thoſe Sufferings. So you find, Heb. 10. 12. He offered one Sacrifice, ὑπὲρ ἁμαρτιῶν, for Sins. 1 Pet. 3. 18. Chriſt once ſuffered, περὶ, for ſins. Rom. 4. 25. He was delivered, διὰ, for our Offences. Mat. 20. 28. He gave his Life a Ranſom, ἀντι, for many. And there are that confidently affirm this laſt Particle is never uſed in any other ſenſe in the whole Book of God: As an Eye for an Eye, a Tooth for a Tooth, i. e. one in lieu of another. Juſt as thoſe whom the Greeks called ἀντίψυχοι, Men that exchanged their Lives, or gave Life for Life, ſtaking down their own to deliver another's, as Philumene did for Ariſtides. And ſo the Poet Virgil ſpeaks;

Si fratrem Pollux alterna morte redemit.

And indeed this very Conſideration is that which ſupports the Doctrine of Imputation, the imputation of our Sins to Chriſt, and the imputation of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs unto us: For how could our Sins be laid on him, but as he ſtood in our ſtead? Or his Righteouſneſs be imputed to us, but as he was our Surety, performing it in our place? So that to deny Chriſt's Sufferings in our ſtead, is to loſe the Corner-ſtone of our Juſtification, and overthrow the very Pillar which ſupports our Faith, Comfort, and Salvation. Indeed if this had not been, he would have been the righteous Lord, but not the Lord our Righteouſneſs, as he is ſtiled, Jer. 33. 16. So that it is but a vain diſtinction, to ſay it was for our good, but not in our ſtead: For had he not been in our ſtead, we could not have had the good of it.

Rom. 5. 19.

Specialis hæc imputatio eſt meriti alieni loco ejus admiſſio, quod in ipſo reo ineſſe debet. Bradſhaw de Juſt. p. 47.

3. The internal moving Cauſe of Chriſt's Satisfaction for us, was his Obedience to God, and Love to us. That it was an act of Obedience, is plain from Phil. 2. 8. He became obedient unto Death, even the death of the Croſs. Now Obedience reſpects a Command, and ſuch a Command Chriſt received to die for us, as himſelf tells us, Joh. 10. 18. I lay down my Life of my ſelf; I have power to lay it down, and power to take it again; this Commandment have I received of my Father. So that it was an act of Obedience with reſpect to God, and yet a moſt free and ſpontaneous Act with reſpect to himſelf. And that he was moved to it out of pity and love to us, himſelf aſſures us: Gal. 5. 2. Chriſt loved us, and gave himſelf for us an Offering and a Sacrifice to God. Upon this Paul ſweetly reflected, Gal. 2. 20. Who loved me, and gave himſelf for me. As the external moving Cauſe was our Miſery, ſo the internal was his own Love and Pity for us.

4. The Matter of Chriſt's Satisfaction, was his active and paſſive Obedience to all the Law of God required. I know there are ſome that doubt whether Chriſt's active Obedience have any place here, and ſo whether it be imputed as any part of our Righteouſneſs. It is confeſſed, the Scripure moſt frequently mentions his paſſive Obedience, as that which made the Atonement, and procures our Redemption, Mat. 20. 28. and 26. 28. Rom. 3. 24, 25. & alibi: But his paſſive Obedience is never mentioned excluſively, as the ſole Cauſe or Matter of Satisfaction. But in thoſe places where it's mentioned by it ſelf, it's put for his whole Obedience, both active and paſſive, by an uſual Trope; and in other Scriptures it is aſcribed to both, as Gal. 4. 4. he is ſaid to be made under the Law, to redeem them that were under the Law. Now his being made under the Law to this end, cannot be reſtrained to his ſubjection to the Curſe of the Law only, but to the Commands of it alſo. So Rom. 5. 19. As by one Man's Diſobedience many were made Sinners; ſo by the Obedience of one ſhall many be made righteous. It were a manifeſt injury to this Text alſo, to reſtrain it to the paſſive Obedience of Chriſt only. To be ſhort, this twofold Obedience of Chriſt ſtands oppoſed to a twofold Obligation that fallen Man is under; the one to do what God requires, the other to ſuffer what he hath threatned for Diſobedience. We owe him active Obedience as his Creatures, and paſſive Obedience as his Priſoners. Suitably to this double Obligation Chriſt comes under the Commandment of the Law to fulfil it actively, Mat. 3. 15. and under the Malediction of the Law to ſatisfie it paſſively. And whereas it is objected by ſome, if he fulfilled the whole Law for us by his active, what need then of his paſſive Obedience? We reply, great need; becauſe both theſe make up that one, entire, and compleat Obedience, by which God is ſatisfied, and we juſtified. It's a good Rule of Alſted, Obedientia Chriſti eſt una copulativa; The whole Obedience of Chriſt, both active and paſſive, make up one intire perfect Obedience: And therefore there is no reaſon why one Particle either of the one or of the other ſhould be excluded.

Si enim propter Chriſti obedientiam paſſivam ſolam imputatam, à peccatis cujuſq; cujuſcunq; generis, ſive commiſſi illud fuerit, ſive omiſſi, reatu omni immunes habemur; quorſum ad juſtificationem imputetur ulterius activa illa ejuſdem obedientia? Bradſhaw in Epiſt. Lib. de Juſtif.

Duplex eſt Chriſti obedientia, duplici hominis poſt lapſum obligationi oppoſita; activa, pro culpa; paſſiva, pro pœna; ſeu utraque pro utraque. Trel. ubi ſupra.

5. The Effect and Fruit of this his Satisfaction, is our freedom, ranſom, or deliverance from the Wrath and Curſe due to us for our Sins. Such was the dignity, value, and compleatneſs of Chriſt's Satisfaction, that in ſtrict Juſtice it merited our Redemption and full Deliverance; not only a Poſſibility that we might be redeemed and pardoned, but a Right whereby we ought to be ſo, as the learned Dr. Twiſs judiciouſly argues. If he be made a Curſe for us, we muſt then be redeemed from the Curſe, according to Juſtice: So the Apoſtle argues, Rom. 3. 25, 26. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a Propitiation, through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of Sins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God;

Chriſtus nactus eſt jus remittendorum peccatorum, ſed non ejuſmodi quo poſſint remitti, ſed quo remitti debent omnia [illis] pro quibus per mortem ejus ſatiſfactum eſt; alioqui injuſtus eſſet Deus, qui non ageret cum Chriſto filio ſuo, ſecundum exigentiam meritorum ejus. Twiſſe de permiſſ. lib. 2.

to declare, I ſay, at this time his Righteouſneſs, that God might be juſt, and the Juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus. Mark the deſign and end of God in exacting Satisfaction from Chriſt, it was to declare his Righteouſneſs in the remiſſion of Sin to Believers; and leſt we ſhould loſe the emphatical word, he doubles it, to declare, I ſay, his Righteouſneſs. Every one can ſee how his Mercy is declared in Remiſſion: but he would have us take notice that his Juſtification of Believers is an Act of Juſtice; and that God, as he is a juſt God, cannot condemn the Believer, ſince Chriſt hath ſatisfied his Debts. This Attribute ſeems to be the main barr againſt Remiſſion; but now it's become the very ground and reaſon why God remits. O how comfortable a Text is this! Doth Satan or Conſcience ſet forth thy Sin in all its diſcouraging Circumſtances and Aggravations? God hath ſet forth Chriſt to be a Propitiation. Muſt Juſtice be manifeſted, ſatisfied and glorified? So is it in the Death of Chriſt, ten thouſand times more than ever it could in thy Damnation. Thus you have a brief account of the Satisfaction made by Jeſus Chriſt.

Secondly, We ſhall gather up all that hath been ſaid to eſtabliſh the truth of Chriſt's Satisfaction; proving the reality of it, that it is not an improper, catechreſtical, fictitious Satisfaction, by Divine Acceptilation, as ſome have very diminutively called it; but real, proper, and full, and as much accepted by God. For his Blood is the Blood of a Surety, Rom. 7. 22. who came under the ſame Oblations of the Law with us, Gal. 4. 4. and tho' he had no Sin of his own, yet ſtanding before God as our Surety, the Iniquities of us all were laid upon him, Iſa. 53. 6. and from him did the Lord, with great ſeverity, exact ſatisfaction for our Sins, Rom. 8. 32. puniſh them upon his Soul, Mat. 27. 45. and upon his Body, Acts 2. 23. and with this Obedience of his Son is fully pleaſed and ſatisfied, Epheſ. 5. 2. and hath in token thereof raiſed him from the Dead, and ſet him at his own Right-hand, 1 Tim. 3. 16. and for his Righteouſneſs ſake acquitted and diſcharged Believers, who ſhall never more come into Condemnation, Rom. 8. 1, 34. All this is plain in Scripture; and our Faith in the Satisfaction of Chriſt, is not built on the Wiſdom of Man, but the everlaſting ſealed Truth of God: Yet ſuch is the perverſe Nature of Man, and the Pride of his Heart, that whilſt he ſhould be humbly adoring the Grace of God in providing ſuch a Surety for us, he is found accuſing the Juſtice, and diminiſhing the Mercy of God, and raiſing all the Objections which Satan and his own Heart can invent, to overturn that bleſſed Foundation upon which God hath built up his own Honour, and his Peoples Salvation.

Thirdly, In the next place therefore, we ſhall reject thoſe Doctrines, and remove the principal of thoſe Objections that are found militating againſt the Satisfaction of Chriſt.

And in the firſt place, we reject with deep abhorrence that Doctrine, which aſcribes to Man any Power in whole or in part to ſatisfie God for his own, or other Mens Sins. This no meer Creature can do by active Obedience, were it ſo compleat that he could never ſin in Thought, Word or Deed, any more, but live the moſt holy Life that ever any lived: for all this would be no more than his Duty as a Creature, Luke 17. 10. and ſo can be no Satisfaction for what he is by Nature, or hath done againſt God as a Sinner. Nor yet by Suffering; for we have offended an infinite God, and can never ſatisfie him by our finite Sufferings.

We alſo with like deteſtation reject that Doctrine which makes the Satisfaction of Chriſt either impoſſible, or fictitious, and inconſiſtent with Grace, in the free pardon of Sin. Many are the Cavils raiſed againſt Chriſt's Satisfaction; the principal are ſuch as theſe that follow.

Object. The Doctrine of Chriſt's Satisfaction is abſurd, for Chriſt (ſay we) is God; if ſo, then God ſatisfies himſelf, than which what can be more abſurd to imagine?

Sol. I anſwer, God cannot properly be ſaid to ſatisfie himſelf; for that would be the ſame thing as to pardon ſimply, without any Satisfaction. But there is a twofold Conſideration of Chriſt; one in reſpect of his Eſſence and Divine Nature, in which ſenſe he is the Object both of the Offence, and of the Satisfaction made for it: Another in reſpect of his Perſon, and Oeconomy, or Office; in which ſenſe he properly ſatisfies God, being in reſpect of his Manhood another, and inferior to God, Joh. 14. 28. The Blood of the Man Chriſt Jeſus is the Matter of the Satisfaction; the Divine Nature dignifies it, and makes it of infinite value. A certain Family hath committed Treaſon againſt the King, and are all under the Condemnation of the Law for it; the King's Son, moved with Pity and Love, reſolves to ſatisfie the Law, and yet ſave the Family; in order whereunto he marries a Daughter of the Family, whereby her Blood becomes Royal Blood, and worth the Blood of the whole Family whence ſhe ſprang; this Princeſs is by her Husband executed in the room of the reſt. In this caſe the King ſatisfies not himſelf for the Wrong, but is ſatisfied by the Death of another, equivalent in worth to the Blood of them all. This ſimilitude anſwers not to all the Particulars, as indeed nothing in nature doth or can, but it only ſhews what it was that ſatisfied God, and how it became ſo ſatisfactory.

Aliud eſt de divinitate Chriſti in ſe agere ſecundum naturam ipſius ſeorſim, aliud qua in ſuppoſito. Trelcat.

Chriſtus ſecundum naturam divinam convenit cum Deo, qua homo nobiſcum; ut contra, qua Deus diſtat à nobis, qua homo, ſeu Oeconomia voluntaria, à Deo. Idem ibid. vid. Daven. in Col. 103. & Camero, p. 361.

Object. If Chriſt ſatisfied by paying our Debt, then he ſhould have endured eternal Torments; for ſo we ſhould, and the damned ſhall.

Sol. We muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt what is eſſential, and what is accidental in Puniſhment. The primary intent of the Law is Reparation and Satisfaction; he that can make it at one intire Payment (as Chriſt could and did) ought to be diſcharged. He that cannot (as no meer Creature can) ought to lye for ever, as the Damned do, under Sufferings.

Object. If God will be ſatisfied for our Sins before he pardon them, how then is pardon an Act of Grace?

Sol. Pardon could not be an Act of pure Grace, if God received Satisfaction from us; but if he pardon us upon the Satisfaction received from Chriſt, tho' it be of Debt to him, it is of Grace to us: for it was Grace to admit a Surety to ſatisfie, more Grace to provide him, and moſt of all to apply his Satisfaction to us, by uniting us to Chriſt, as he hath done.

Object. But God loved us before Chriſt died for us; for it was the Love of God to the World that moved him to give his only begotten Son. Could God love us, and yet not be reconciled and ſatisfied?

Sol. God's complacential Love is indeed inconſiſtent with an unreconciled ſtate: He is reconciled to every one he ſo loves. But his benevolent Love conſiſting in his purpoſe of Good, may be before actual Reconciliation and Satisfaction.

Object. Temporal Death, as well as Eternal, is a part of the Curſe; if Chriſt have fully ſatisfied by bearing the Curſe for us, how is it that thoſe for whom he bear it die as well as others?

Sol. As Temporal Death is a penal Evil, and part of the Curſe, ſo God inflicts it not upon Believers; but they muſt die for other ends, viz. to be made perfectly happy in a more full and immediate Enjoyment of God, than they can have in the Body: and ſo Death is theirs by way of Priviledge, 1 Cor. 3. 22. They are not Death's by way of Puniſhment. The ſame may be ſaid of all the Afflictions with which God for gracious ends now exerciſes his reconciled ones. Thus much may ſuffice to eſtabliſh this great Truth.

Inference 1. If the Death of Chriſt was that which ſatisfied God for all the Sins of the Elect, then certainly there is an infinite Evil in Sin, ſince it cannot be expiated, but by an infinite Satisfaction. Fools make a mock at Sin, and there are but few Souls in the World that are duly ſenſible and affected with its Evil; but certainly, if God ſhould damn thee to all Eternity, thy eternal Sufferings could not ſatisfie for the Evil that is in one vain Thought. It may be you may think this is harſh and ſevere, that God ſhould hold his Creatures under everlaſting Sufferings for Sin, and never be ſatisfied with them any more. But when you have well conſidered that the Object againſt whom you ſin, is the infinite bleſſed God, which derives an infinite Evil to the Sin committed againſt him: and when you conſider how God dealt with the Angels that fell for one Sin, and that but of the Mind; for having no bodily Organs, they could commit nothing externally againſt God; you will alter your Minds about it. O the depth of the evil of Sin! If ever you will ſee how great and horrid an Evil Sin is, meaſure it in your thoughts, either by the infinite Holineſs and Excellency of God, who is wrong'd by it; or by the infinite Sufferings of Chriſt, who died to ſatisfie for it; and then you will have deeper apprehenſions of the evil of Sin.

Per hanc mortem Chriſti valdè excitamur & ad cautelam, & ad deteſtationem peccati. Mortiferum enim ſit neceſſe eſt, quod aliter ſanari non potuit, quàm morte Chriſti. Quis igitur ſerio cogitans, peccata ſua non eſſe aliter expiata quam ſanguine ipſius filii Dei, non perhorreſcet indies peccando, hunc pretioſiſſimum ſanguinem quaſi conculcare? Daven. in Col. cap. 1. v. 20.

Inference 2. If the Death of Chriſt ſatisfied God, and thereby redeemed the Elect from the Curſe: then the Redemption of Souls is coſtly; Souls are dear things, and of great value with God. Ye know (ſaith the Apoſtle) that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as Silver and Gold, from your vain Converſation received by Tradition; but with the precious Blood of the Son of God, as of a Lamb without ſpot, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Only the Blood of God is found an equivalent Price for the Redemption of Souls. Gold and Silver may redeem from Turkiſh, but not from Helliſh Bondage. The whole Creation ſold to the utmoſt worth of it, is not a value for the Redemption of one Soul. Souls are dear Ware; he that paid for them found them ſo: Yet how cheaply do Sinners ſell their Souls, as if they were but low-priz'd Commodities! But you that ſell your Souls cheap, will buy Repentance dear.

Inference 3. If Chriſt's Death ſatisfied God for our Sins, how unparallell'd is the Love of Chriſt to poor Sinners! It's much to pay a pecuniary Debt to free another, but who will pay his own Blood for another? We have a noted inſtance of Zaleucus, that famous Locrenſian Lawgiver, who decreed, that whoever was convicted of Adultery, ſhould have both his Eyes put out. It ſo fell out, that his own Son was brought before him for that Crime; hereupon the People interpoſing, made ſuit for his Pardon. At length, the Father partly overcome by their Importunities, and not unwilling to ſhew what lawful favour he might to his Son, he firſt put out one of his own Eyes, and then one of his Son's; and ſo ſhewed himſelf both a merciful Father, and a juſt Lawgiver; ſo tempering Mercy with Juſtice, that both the Law was ſatisfied, and his Son ſpared. This is written by the Hiſtorian as an inſtance of ſingular Love in his Father, to pay one half of the Penalty for his Son. But Chriſt did not divide and ſhare in the Penalty with us, but bare it all. Zaleucus did it for his Son, who was dear to him; Chriſt did it for Enemies, that were fighting and rebelling againſt him: Rom. 5. 8. While we were yet Sinners, Chriſt died for us.
“ O would to God (ſaid a holy one) I could “ cauſe Paper and Ink to ſpeak the Worth and “ Excellency, the high and loud Praiſes of our “ Brother-Ranſomer! O the Ranſomer needs
“ not my Report; but O if he would take it,
“ and make uſe of it! I ſhould be happy if I had “ an Errand to this World but for ſome few “ Years, to ſpread Proclamations, and Out-“ cries, and Love-letters of the Highneſs [the “ Highneſs for evermore] of the Ranſomer, “ whoſe Cloaths were wet, and dyed in Blood;
“ howbeit, that after that my Soul and Body
“ ſhould go back to their Mother nothing.

Valerius lib. 6. c. 5.

Inference 4. If Chriſt by dying hath made full Satisfaction, then God is no loſer in pardoning the greateſt of Sinners that believe in Jeſus; and conſequently his Juſtice can be no barr to their Juſtification and Salvation. He is juſt to forgive us our Sins, 1 Joh. 1. 9. What an Argument is here for a poor Believer to plead with God! Lord, if thou ſave me by Jeſus Chriſt, the Juſtice will be fully ſatisfied at one round payment; but if thou damn me, and require ſatisfaction at my hands, thou canſt never receive it: I ſhall make but a dribling payment, tho' I lye in Hell to Eternity, and ſhall ſtill be infinitely behind with thee. Is it not more for thy Glory to receive it from Chriſt's hand, than to require it at mine? One drop of his Blood is more worth than all my polluted Blood. O how ſatisfying a thing is this to the Conſcience of a poor Sinner that is objecting the multitude, aggravations, and amazing circumſtances of Sins, againſt the poſſibility of their being pardoned! Can ſuch a Sinner as I be forgiven? Yes, if thou believeſt in Jeſus, thou mayeſt; for ſo God will loſe nothing in pardoning the greateſt Tranſgreſſors: Let Iſrael hope in the Lord; for with the Lord there is Mercy, and with him is plenteous Redemption, Pſal. 103. 7. i. e. a large ſtock of Merit lying by him, in the Blood of Chriſt, to pay him for all that you have done againſt him.

Inference 5. Laſtly, If Chriſt hath made ſuch a full Satisfaction as you have heard, How much is it the concernment of every Soul to abandon all thoughts of ſatisfying God for his own Sins, and betake himſelf to the Blood of Chriſt the ranſomer, by Faith, that in that Blood they may be pardoned? It would grieve one's heart to ſee how many poor Creatures are drudging and tugging at a taſk of Repentance, and revenge upon themſelves, and Reformation, and Obedience, to ſatisfie God for what they have done againſt him: And alas, it cannot be, they do but loſe their labour; could they ſwelter their very hearts out, weep till they can weep no more, cry till their throats be parched, alas, they can never recompenſe God for one vain thought: For ſuch is the ſeverity of the Law, that when it is once offended, it will never be made amends again by all that we can do; it will not diſcharge the Sinner for all the ſorrow in the World. Indeed if a man be in Chriſt, ſorrow for Sin is ſomething, and renewed Obedience is ſomething; God looks upon them favourably, and accepts them graciouſly in Chriſt: but out of him they ſignifie no more than the intreaties and cries of a condemned Malefactor, to reverſe the legal Sentence of the Judge. You may toil all the days of your life, and at night go to bed without a Candle. To that ſenſe that Scripture ſounds, Iſa. 50. ult. Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compaſs your ſelves about with ſparks; walk in the light of your fire, and in the ſparks that you have kindled: This ſhall ye have of mine hand, ye ſhall lye down in ſorrow. By fire, and the light of it, ſome underſtand the ſparkling pleaſures of this Life, and the ſenſitive joys of the Creatures: But generally it's taken for our own natural Righteouſneſs, and all acts of Duties, in order to our juſtification by them before God. And ſo it ſtands oppoſed to that Faith of recumbency ſpoken of in the Verſe before. By their compaſſing themſelves about with theſe ſparks, underſtand their dependence on theſe their Duties, and glorying in them. But ſee that fatal Iſſue, Ye ſhall lye down in ſorrow: That ſhall be your Recompence from the hand of the Lord; that's all the thanks and reward you muſt expect from him, for ſlighting Chriſt's, and preferring your own Righteouſneſs before his. Reader, be convinced, that one Act of Faith in the Lord Jeſus pleaſes God more than all the Obedience, Repentance, and Strivings to obey the Law through thy whole life can do. And thus you have the firſt ſpecial Fruits of Chriſt's Prieſthood, in the full ſatisfaction of God for all the Sins of Believers.

SERMON XV.

Serm. 15. Surveys the bleſſed Inheritance purchaſed by the Oblation of Chriſt, being the ſecond Effect or Fruit of his Prieſthood.

GAL. IV. 4, 5.

But when the fulneſs of time was come, God ſent forth his Son, made of a Woman, made under the Law, to redeem them that were under the Law, that we might receive the Adoption of Sons.

THIS Scripture gives us an account of a double Fruit of Chriſt's Death, viz. the payment of our Debt, and the purchaſe of our Inheritance.

1. The payment of our Debt expreſſed by our Redemption, or buying us out from the Obligation and Curſe of the Law, which hath been diſcourſed in the laſt Exerciſe.

2. The purchaſe of an Inheritance for thoſe redeemed ones, expreſſed here by their receiving the Adoption of Sons; which is to be our preſent Subject. Adoption is either Civil, or Divine. Of the firſt, the Civil Law gives this Definition; that it is,

A lawful Act, in imitation of Nature, invented for the comfort of them that have no Children of their own. Divine Adoption is that ſpecial Benefit whereby God, for Chriſt's ſake, accepted us as Sons, and makes us Heirs of Eternal Life with him.

Summa Angel. ad verbum. Adoptio eſt actus legitimus, imitans naturam, repertus ſed eorum ſolatium, qui liberos non habent. Adoptio eſt beneficium, quo nos Deus propter Chriſtum in filios recipit, & facit nos cum ipſo hæredes vitæ æternæ. Ravanel.

Betwixt this Civil and Sacred Adoption, there is a twofold Agreement and Diſagreement. They agree in this, that both flow from the pleaſure and good-will of the Adoptant; and in this, that both confer a right to Priviledges, which we have not by Nature: But in this they differ, one is an Act imitating Nature, the other tranſcends Nature; the one was found out for the comfort of them that had no Children; the other for the comfort of them that had no Father. This Divine Adoption is in Scripture either taken properly for that Act or Sentence of God, by which we are made Sons, or for the Priviledges with which the Adopted are inveſted: And ſo it's taken, Rom. 8. 23. and in this Scripture now before us. We loſt our Inheritance by the Fall of Adam; we receive it, as the Text ſpeaks, by the Death of Chriſt, which reſtores it again to us by a new and better Title. The Doctrine hence is,

Hic ergo Adoptio capitur (ſicuti Rom. 8. 23. redemptio) pro ipſa poſſeſſione. Nam ſicuti ultimo die percipimus redemptionis noſtræ fructum, ita nunc percipimus, &c. Calv. in loc.

Doct. That the Death of Jeſus Chriſt hath not only ſatisfied for our Debts, but over and above purchaſed a rich Inheritance for the Children of God.

For this end, or cauſe, he is the Mediator of the New Teſtament; that by means of death, for the redemption of the Tranſgreſſions that were under the firſt Teſtament, they which are called, might receive the Promiſe of the Eternal Inheritance, Heb. 9. 15.

We will here, firſt, ſee what Chriſt paid. Secondly, what he purchaſed. Thirdly, for whom.

Parker de deſcenſul. l. 3. p. 97. Dr. Reynolds in Pſal. 110. Camero, p. 363, &c.

Firſt, What Chriſt paid. Our Divines comprize the Virtue and Fruits of the Prieſthood of Chriſt in theſe two things, viz. Solutio, debiti, & acquiſitio hæreditatis, Payment, and Purchaſe. Anſwerably the Obedience of Chriſt hath a double relation, relatio legalis Juſtitia, the relation of a legal Righteouſneſs; an adequate and exactly proportionated Price. And it hath alſo in it relatio ſuperlegalis Meriti, the relation of a Merit over and beyond the Law.

Satisfactio Chriſti fuit pluſquam ſufficiens, non igitur ex debito, non ex obligato. Fevard. Dialog. 5. p. 382.

Dutch Annot. in loc. Deodat. in loc.

To object (as ſome do) the Satisfaction of Chriſt was more than ſufficient, according to our Doctrine, and therefore could not be intended for the payment of our Debt, is a ſenſeleſs cavil. For ſurely if Chriſt paid more than was owning, he muſt needs pay all that was owing to Divine Juſtice. And truly it is but a bad requital of the Love of Jeſus Chriſt, who beſide the payment of what we owed, would manifeſt his Bounty by the redundancy of his Merit, which he paid to God to purchaſe a bleſſed Inheritance for us. This overplus of Satisfaction (which was the price of that Inheritance I am now to open) is not obſcurely hinted, but plainly expreſſed twice in Rom. 5. 15. But not as the offence, ſo alſo is the free gift: For if through the offence of one, many be dead, πολλῷ μᾶλλον, much more the Grace of God, and the gift by Grace, which is by one Man, Jeſus Chriſt, ἐπερίσσευσε, hath abounded, or flowed abundantly unto many. So ver. 17. For if by one Man's offence, death reigned by one, πολλῷ μᾶλλον, much more they which receive τὴν περισσείαν, the overflowings, or abundance of Grace, and of the gift of Righteouſneſs, ſhall reign in life by one, Jeſus Chriſt. In both which places Chriſt and Adam are compared as the two Roots or common Heads of Mankind, both agreeing in this property of communicating their conditions to thoſe that are theirs; yet there is a great deal of difference betwixt them, for in Chriſt the Power is all divine, and therefore infinitely more active and effectual: He communicates abundantly more to his, than they loſt in Adam; ſo that his Blood is not only ſufficient to redeem all thoſe that are actually redeemed by it, but even the whole World alſo. And were there ſo many Worlds of Men, as there are Men in the World, it would be ſufficient for them alſo; and yet ſtill there would be an overplus of value: For all thoſe Worlds of Men would riſe but to a finite bulk; but this Blood is infinite in its worth and dignity. Since then there is not a whole World, no, not half, but the far leſs part redeemed by the Blood of Chriſt, which was ſufficient for ſo many; how great muſt be the ſurpluſage and redundency of Merit? Here our Divines rightly diſtinguiſh betwixt the ſubſtance and accidents of Chriſt's Death and Obedience. Conſider Chriſt's ſuffering as to the ſubſtance of it, it was no more than what the Law required; for neither the Juſtice, nor Love of the Father, would permit that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer more than what was neceſſary for him to bear, as our Surety: But as to the Circumſtances, the Perſon of the Sufferer, the Cauſe and Efficacy of his Sufferings, &c. it was much more than ſufficient; a ſuperlegale meritum, a Merit above and beyond what the Law required: For tho' the Law required the death of the Sinner, who is but a poor contemptible Creature, it did not require that one perfectly innocent ſhould die; it did not require that God ſhould ſhed his Blood; it did not require Blood of ſuch value and worth as this was: I ſay, none of this the Law required, tho' God was pleaſed, for the advancement and manifeſtation of his Juſtice and Mercy in the higheſt, to admit and order this, by way of commutation, admitting him to be our ἀντίψυχος, or ranſomer, by dying for us. And indeed it was a moſt gracious relaxation of the Law, that admitted of ſuch a commutation as this; for hereby it comes to paſs, that Juſtice is fully ſatisfied, and yet we live and are ſaved; which before was a thing that could not be imagined. Yea, now we are not only redeemed from Wrath, by the adequate compenſation made for our Sins by Chriſt's Blood and Sufferings, ſubſtantially conſidered, but to a moſt glorious Inheritance purchaſed by his Blood, conſidered as the Blood of an Innocent, as the Blood of God, and therefore as moſt excellent and efficacious Blood, above what the Law demanded. And this is the meaning of Athanaſius, when he ſaith that Chriſt recompenſed or made amends for ſmall things, with great: He means not, that Sin conſidered abſolutely and in it ſelf, is ſmall; O no, but compared with Chriſt's Blood, and the infinite excellency and worth of it, it is ſo. And Chryſoſtom to the ſame purpoſe, Chriſt paid much more (ſaith he) than we owed, and ſo much more as the immenſe Ocean is more than a ſmall drop. So that it was rightly determined by holy Anſelm, No Man, ſaith he, can pay to God what he owes him; Chriſt only paid more than he owed him. By this you ſee how rich a Treaſure lyes by Chriſt, to beſtow in a Purchaſe for us, above what he paid to redeem us; even as much as his Soul and Body were more worth than ours for whom it was ſacrificed; which is ſo great Sum, that all the Angels in Heaven, and Men on Earth, can never compute and ſum up, ſo as to ſhew us the total of it: And this was that inexhauſtible Treaſure that Chriſt expended, to procure and purchaſe the faireſt Inheritance for Believers. Having ſeen the Treaſure that purchaſed, let us next enquire into the Inheritance purchaſed by it.

Quoad ſubſtantiam pœnæ nihil plus perpeſſus eſt Chriſtus quàm quod per legem debebatur; quoad circumſtantias autem, patientis perſonam, patiendi cauſam, paſſionis efficaciam, plus quam ſufficiens ſatisfactio Chriſti à nobis dicitur. Park. de deſcenſ. l. 3.

Notant qui de legum relaxatione ſcripſerunt, eas eſſe optimas relaxationes, quibus annexa eſt commutatio. Grotius de ſatisfac. cap. 5.

Chriſtum parva magnis penſaſſe. Athanaſ. de paſſione & cruce.

Multo plura quam debemus Chriſtus pro nobis ſolvit, tantoque plura, quanto guttulam exiguam pelagus excellet immenſum.

Secondly, This Inheritance is ſo large, that it cannot be ſurveyed by Creatures; nor can the boundaries and limits thereof be deſcribed, for it comprehends all things; 1 Cor. 3. 22.

Fidelibus eſt totus mundus. Aug.

All is yours, ye are Chriſt's and Chriſt is God's. Rev. 21. 7. He that overcomes ſhall inherit all things. And yet I do not think or ſay that Dominium fundatur in gratia, that temporal Dominion is founded in Grace. No, that's at the caſt and diſpoſe of Providence: But Chriſt by his Death hath reſtored a right to all things to his People.

But to be more particular, I ſhall diſtribute the Saints Inheritance purchaſed by Chriſt into three heads: All temporal good things, all ſpiritual good things, and all eternal good things are theirs.

Chriſtus meruit nobis omnia bona, ſupernaturalia, & omnia, auxilia, ſive prævenientia, ſive ſubſequentia; ac univerſa illa bona, etſi bona ſint nobis extrinſeca, quæ rationem induunt mediorum ad noſtram ſalutem. Vincent. Auſtricenſ. de habit. Chriſti grat. prælect. q. 5. p. 259.

1. All Temporal good things. 1 Tim. 6. 7. He hath given us all things richly to enjoy. Not that they have the poſſeſſion, but the comfort and benefit of all things: Others have the ſting, gall, wormwood, baits and ſnares of the Creature; Saints only have the bleſſing and comfort of it. So that this little that a righteous Man hath, is, (in this, among other reſpects) better than the treaſures of many wicked: Which is the true Key to open that dark ſaying of the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 6. 10. As having nothing, and yet poſſeſſing all things: They only poſſeſs, others are poſſeſſed by the World. The Saints do uti Mundo, & frui Deo, uſe the World, and enjoy God in the uſe of it. Others are deceived, defiled, and deſtroyed by the World; but theſe are refreſht and furthered by it.

2. All Spiritual good things are purchaſed by the Blood of Chriſt for them; as Juſtification, which comprizes remiſſion of Sins, and acceptation of our Perſons by God: Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Chriſt. Sanctification is alſo purchaſed for them; yea, both initial and progreſſive Sanctification: For of God he is made unto us not only wiſdom and righteouſneſs, but ſanctification alſo, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Theſe two, viz. our Juſtification and Sanctification, are two of the moſt rich and ſhining Robes in the Wardrobe of Free-grace. How glorious and lovely do they render the Soul that wears them! Theſe are like the Bracelets and Jewels Iſaac ſent to Rebecca. Adoption into the Family of God, is purchaſed for us by his Blood; For ye are all the Children of God by Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, Gal. 3. 26. Chriſt as he is the Son, is hæres natus, the Heir by nature; as he is Mediator, he is hæres conſtitutus, the Heir by appointment, appointed Heir of all things, as it is Heb. 1. 2. By the Sonſhip of Chriſt, we being united to him by Faith, become Sons; and if Sons, then Heirs. O what manner of Love is this, that we ſhould be called the Sons of God! 1 Joh. 3. 1. That a poor Beggar ſhould be made an Heir, yea, an Heir of God, and a Joint-Heir with Chriſt! Yea, that very Faith, which is the bond of Union, and conſequently the ground of all our Communion with Chriſt, is the purchaſe of his Blood alſo: 2 Pet. 1. 1. To them that have obtained like precious faith with us, through the Righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. This moſt precious Grace is the dear purchaſe of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: Yea, all that peace, joy, and ſpiritual comfort, which are ſweet Fruits of Faith, are with it purchaſed for us by this Blood.

So ſpeaks the Apoſtle in Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3. Being juſtified by Faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, &c. Moreover the Spirit himſelf, who is the Author, Fountain, and Spring of all theſe Graces and Comfort, is procured for us by his Death and Reſurrection: Gal. 3. 13, 14. Chriſt hath redeemed us from the Curſe of the Law, being made a Curſe for us; for it is written, Curſed is every one that hangeth on a Tree: That the Bleſſing of Abraham might come upon the Gentiles through Jeſus Chriſt, that we might receive the promiſe of the Spirit through Faith. That Spirit that firſt ſanctified, and ſince hath ſo often ſealed, comforted, directed, reſolved, guided, and quickned your Souls, had not come to perform any of theſe bleſſed Offices upon your hearts, if Chriſt had not died.

3. All Eternal good things are the purchaſe of his Blood. Heaven, and all the Glory thereof, is purchaſed for you that are Believers, with this price. Hence that Glory, whatever it be, is called an Inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerved in Heaven for you: To the lively hope whereof ye are begotten again, by the reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead, 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. Not only preſent Mercies are purchaſed for us, but things to come alſo, as it is 1 Cor. 3. 22. Man is a prudent and proſpecting Creature, and is not ſatisfied that it's well with him for preſent, unleſs he have ſome aſſurance it ſhall be well with him for time to come. His mind is taken up about what ſhall be hereafter; and from the good or evil things to come, he raiſeth up to himſelf vaſt hopes or fears.

Therefore to compleat our happineſs, and fill up the uttermoſt capacity of our Souls, all the good of Eternity is put into the Account and Inventory of the Saints Eſtate and Inheritance. This Happineſs is ineffable; it's uſually diſtinguiſht into what is eſſential, and what is acceſſory to it. The Eſſentials of it, as we in our embodied ſtate can conceive, is either the objective, ſubjective, or formal Happineſs to be enjoyed in Heaven.

The Objective Happineſs is God himſelf: Pſal. 73. 25. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? If it could be ſuppoſed (ſaith one) that God ſhould withdraw from the Saints in Heaven, and ſay, Take Heaven and divide it among you; but as for me, I will withdraw from you; the Saints would fall weeping in Heaven, and ſay, Lord, take Heaven, and give it to whom thou wilt; it's no Heaven to us, except thou be there: Heaven would be a very Bokim to the Saints without God. In this our Glory in Heaven conſiſts, to be ever with the Lord, 1 Theſſ. 4. 17. God himſelf is the chief part of a Saint's Inheritance; in which ſenſe, as ſome will underſtand Rom. 8. 17. they are called Heirs of God.

The Subjective Glory and Happineſs is the attemperation and ſuiting of the Soul and Body to God. This is begun in Sanctification and perfected in Glorification. It conſiſts in removing from both all that is indecent, and inconſiſtent with a ſtate of ſuch compleat Glory and Happineſs, and in ſuperinducing and cloathing it with all heavenly Qualities.

The immunities of the Body are its freedom from all natural Infirmities; which as they come in, ſo they go out with ſin. Thenceforth there ſhall be no diſeaſes, deformities, pains, flaws, monſtroſities; their good Phyſician Death hath cured all this, and their vile Bodies ſhall be made like unto Chriſt's glorious Body, Phil. 3. 21. and he made a ſpiritual Body, 1 Cor. 15. 44. For agility, like the Chariots of Amina-dab; for beauty, as the top of Lebanon; for incorruptibility, as if they were pure Spirits.

The Soul alſo is diſcharged and freed from all darkneſs and ignorance of Mind, being now able to diſcern all Truths in God, that chriſtal Ocean of Truth. The leaks of the Memory ſtopt for ever; the roving of its Fancy perfectly cured; the ſtubbornneſs and reluctancy of the Will for ever ſubdued, and retained in due and full ſubjection to God. So that the Saints in glory ſhall be free from all that now troubles them; they ſhall never ſin more, nor be once tempted ſo to do, for no Serpent hiſſes in that Paradiſe; they ſhall never grieve or groan more, for God ſhall wipe all tears from their Eyes: They ſhall never be troubled more, for God will then recompence Tribulation to their troublers, and to them that are troubled, Reſt; they ſhall never doubt more, for Fruition excludes doubting.

The Formal happineſs is the fulneſs of Satiſfaction reſulting from the bleſſed ſight and enjoyment of God, by a Soul ſo attemper'd to him. Pſal. 17. 15. When I awake, I ſhall be ſatisfied with thy likeneſs. This ſight of God in Glory, called the beatifical Viſion, muſt needs yeild ineffable ſatisfaction to the beholding Soul, in as much as it will be an intuitive Viſion. The intellectual or mental eye ſhall ſee God, 1 Joh. 3. 2. The corporeal glorified eye ſhall ſee Chriſt, Job 19. 26, 27. What a raviſhing Viſion will this be? And how much will it exceed all reports and apprehenſions we had here of it! Surely the one half was not told us. It will be a transformative Viſion, it will change the Beholder into its own Image and Likeneſs. We ſhall be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is, 1 Joh. 3. 2. As Iron put into the Fire, becomes all fiery; ſo the Soul by converſing with God, is changed into his very Similitude. It will be an appropriative Viſion; Whom I ſhall ſee for my ſelf, Job 19. 26, 27. In Heaven Intereſt is clear and undoubted; Fear is caſt out: No need of Marks and Signs there; for what a Man ſees and enjoys, how can he doubt of? It will be a raviſhing Viſion; theſe we have by Faith are ſo, how much more thoſe in Glory? How was Paul tranſported, when he was in a viſional way wrapt up into the third Heaven, and heard the unutterable things, tho' he was not admitted into the bleſſed Society, but was with them, as the Angels are in our Aſſemblies, a ſtander by, a looker on! If a ſpark do ſo inflame, what is it to lye down like a Phœnix in her bed of Spices; like a Salamander to live and move in the Fire of Love! It will alſo be an eternal Viſion; vacabimus, & videbimus, (as Auguſtin ſaid) we ſhall then be at leiſure for this Imployment, and have no diverſions from it for ever. No Evening is mentioned to the ſeventh day's Sabbath; no Night in the new Jeruſalem. And therefore, Laſtly, it will be a fully-ſatisfying Viſion: God will then be all in all, Etiam ipſa curioſitas ſatietur, Curioſity it ſelf will be ſatisfied. The bleſſed Soul will feel it ſelf bleſſed, filled, ſatisfied in every part. Ah what a Happineſs is here! to look and love, to drink and ſing, and drink again at the Fountain-head of the higheſt Glory! And if at any time its Eye be turned from a direct to a reflex ſight upon what it once was, how it was wrought on, how fitted for this Glory, how wonderfully diſtinguiſhed by ſpecial Grace from them that are howling in Flames, whilſt himſelf is ſhouting aloud upon his Bed of everlaſting Reſt; all this will enhance the Glory.

And ſo alſo will the Acceſſories of this Bleſſedneſs, The place where God is enjoyed, the Empyrean Heaven, the City of God, whither Chriſt aſcended, where the great Aſſembly are met. Paradiſe and Canaan were but the Types of it; more excelling and tranſcending the Royal Palaces of earthly Princes, than they do a Pigeon-hole. The Company alſo with whom he is enjoyed, adds to the glory. A bliſsful Society indeed! ſtore of good Neighbours in that City. There we ſhall have familiar converſe with Angels, whoſe appearances now are inſupportable by poor Mortals: There will be ſweet and full cloſings alſo betwixt the Saints; Luther and Zuinglius are there agreed. Here they could not fully cloſe with one another, and no wonder, for they could not fully cloſe with themſelves. But there is perfect Harmony and Unity; all meeting and cloſing in God, as Lines in the Center. This is a bleſſed glimpſe of your Inheritance.

Thirdly, All this is purchaſed for Believers: Hence it's call'd, the Inheritance of the Saints in Light, Col. 1. 12. All is yours, for ye are Chriſt's, that is the tenure, 1 Cor. 3. 23. So Rom. 8. 30. Whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called; and whom he called, them he alſo juſtified; and whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified. Only thoſe that are Sons, are Heirs, Rom. 8. 17. The unrighteous ſhall not inherit, 1 Cor. 6. 9. It's the Father's good pleaſure to give the Kingdom to the little flock, Luk. 12. 32.

Inference 1. Hath Chriſt not only redeemed you from wrath, but purchaſed ſuch an eternal Inheritance alſo by the overplus of his Merit for you? O how well content ſhould Believers then be with their lot of Providence in this Life, be it what it will! Content did I ſay? I ſpeak too low, overcome, raviſht, filled with Praiſes and Thankſgivings, how low, how poor, how afflicted ſoever for the preſent they are. O let not ſuch things as grumbling, repining, fretting at Providence be found, or once named among the Expectants of this Inheritance! Suppoſe you had taken a Beggar from your door, and adopted him to be your Son, and made him Heir of a large Inheritance, and after this he ſhould conteſt and quarrel with you for a Trifle; could you bear it? How to work the Spirit of a Saint into Contentment with a low condition here, I have laid down ſeveral rules in another Diſcourſe, to which for preſent I refer the Reader.

A Saint indeed, p. 88, 89, &c.

Inference 2. With what weaned Affections ſhould the People of God walk up and down the World, content to live, and willing to die? For things preſent are theirs if they live, and things to come are theirs if they die. Paul expreſſes himſelf in a frame of holy indifferency, Phil. 1. 22. Which to chuſe I know not. Many of them that are now in fruition of their Inheritance above, had vitam in patientia, mortem in deſiderio, Life in Patience, and Death in Deſire, while they tabernacle with us. " O (cried one) " what would I give to have a Bed made to my " wearied Soul in Chriſt's Boſom? —— I " cannot tell you what ſweet Pain, and delightful " Torments are in his Love; I often challenge " time for holding us aſunder; I profeſs " to you, I have no reſt till I be over head and " ears in Love's Ocean. If Chriſt's Love (that " Fountain of Delights) were laid open to me " as I would wiſh, O how drunken would this " my Soul be! I half call his Abſence cruel; and " the mask and vail on his Face a cruel covering, " that hideth ſuch a fair, fair Face from a " ſick Soul. I dare not challenge himſelf, but " his abſence is a Mountain of Iron upon my " heavy Heart. O when ſhall we meet! How " long is it to the dawning of the marriage-day! " O ſweet Lord Jeſus, take wide ſteps! O my " Lord, come over Mountains at one ſtride! O " my Beloved, flee like a Roe, or young Hart, " upon the Mountains of Separation! O if he " would fold the Heavens together like an old " Cloak, and ſhovel Time and Days out of the " way, and make ready in haſte the Lamb's " Wife for her Husband! Since he looked upon " me, my Heart is not mine own.

Who can be blamed for deſiring to ſee that fair Inheritance which is purchaſed for him? But truly ſhould God hold up the Soul by the power of Faith, from day to day, to ſuch ſights as theſe, who would be content to live a day more on Earth? How ſhould we be ready to pull down the Priſon-walls, and not have patience to wait till God open the Door! As the Heathen ſaid, Victuroſque dii celant, ut vivere durant.

And truly the Wiſdom of God is in this ſpecially remarkable, in giving the next Creature ſuch an admirable Craſis and even temper, as that Scripture, 2 Theſ. 3. 5. expreſſes, The Lord direct your hearts into the Love of God, and patient waiting for of Chriſt. Love inflames with deſire, Patience allays that fervor. So that fervent Deſires (as one happily expreſſes it) are allayed with meek Submiſſion; mighty Love with ſtrong Patience. And had not God twiſted together theſe two Principles in the Chriſtian's Conſtitution, he had framed a Creature to be a torment to it ſelf, to live upon a very Rack.

Inference 3. Hence we infer the impoſſibility of their Salvation that know not Chriſt, nor have intereſt in his Blood. Neither Heathens, nor meerly nominal Chriſtians, can inherit Heaven. I know ſome are very indulgent to the Heathen, and many formal Chriſtians are but too much ſo to themſelves: But Union by Faith with Jeſus Chriſt, is the only way revealed in Scripture by which we hope to come to the heavenly Inheritance. I know it ſeems hard, that ſuch brave Men, as ſome of the Heathens were, ſhould be damned: but the Scripture knows no other way to Glory, but Chriſt put on and applied by Faith. And it is the common ſuffrage of modern ſound Divines, that no Man by the ſole conduct of Nature, without the knowledge of Chriſt, can be ſaved. There is but one way to Glory for all the World, Joh. 14. 6. No man cometh to the Father but by me. Gal. 3. 14. The bleſſing of Abraham comes upon the Gentiles through Faith. Scripture aſſerts the impoſſibility of being or doing any thing that is truly evangelically good out of Chriſt, Joh. 15. 5. Without me ye can do nothing; and Heb. 11. 6. Without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

Scripture every-where connects and chains Salvation with Vocation, Rom. 8. 30. and Vocation with the Goſpel, Rom. 10. 14. To thoſe that plead for the Salvation of Heathens, and profane Chriſtians, we may apply that tart Rebuke of Barnard, that while ſome labour to make Plato a Chriſtian, he feared they therein did prove themſelves to be Heathens.

Inference 4. How greatly are we all concerned to clear up our Title to the heavenly Inheritance! It's horrible to ſee how induſtrious many are for an Inheritance on Earth, and how careleſs for Heaven. By which we may plainly ſee how vilely the noble Soul is depreſſed by Sin, and ſunk down into Fleſh, minding only the concernments of the Fleſh. Hear me ye that labour for the World, as if Heaven were in it; What will ye do when at Death you ſhall look back over your ſhoulder, and ſee what you have ſpent your time and ſtrength for, ſhrinking and vaniſhing away from you? When you ſhall look forward, and ſee vaſt Eternity opening its Mouth to ſwallow you up; O then what would you give for a well-grounded Aſſurance of an eternal Inheritance!

O therefore, if you have any concernment for your poor Souls; if it be not indifferent to you what becomes of them, whether they be ſaved, or whether they be damned, give all diligence to make your Calling and Election ſure, 2 Pet. 1. 10. Work out your own Salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his own good pleaſure, Phil. 2. 12. Remember it is Salvation you work for, and that's no trifle. Remember it's your own Salvation, and not another's. It is for thy own poor Soul that thou art ſtriving; and what haſt thou more?

Remember, now God offers you his helping hand; now the Spirit waits upon you in the means, but of the continuance thereof you have no aſſurance; for it is of his own good pleaſure, and not at yours. To your work Souls, to your work. Ah, ſtrive as Men that know what an Inheritance in Heaven is worth.

And that as for you that have ſolid evidence that it is yours; O that with Hands and Eyes lifted up to Heaven, you would adore that free Grace, that hath entitled a Child of Wrath to a heavenly Inheritance! Walk as becomes Heirs of God, and Joint-heirs with Chriſt. Be often looking Heaven-ward, when Wants pinch here. O look to that fair Eſtate you have reſerved

reſerved in Heaven for you, and ſay, I am haſtning home; and when I come thither, all my Wants ſhall be ſupplied. Conſider what it coſt Chriſt to purchaſe it for thee; and with a deep ſenſe of what he hath laid out for thee, let thy Soul ſay, Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SERMON XVI.

Serm. 16. Opens the Kingly Office of Chriſt, as executed ſpiritually upon the Souls of the redeemed.

2 COR. X. 5.

Caſting down Imaginations, and every thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the Knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every Thought to the Obedience of Chriſt.

WE now come to the Regal Office by which our Glorious Mediator executes and diſchargeth the undertaken deſign of our Redemption. Had he not as our Prophet opened the way of Life and Salvation to the Children of Men, they could never have known it; and ſhould they have clearly known it, except as their Prieſt he had offered up himſelf, to impetrate and obtain Redemption for them, they could not have been redeemed virtually by his Blood; and if they had been ſo redeemed, yet had he not lived in the capacity of a King, to apply this Purchaſe of his Blood to them, they could have had no actual perſonal benefit by his Death: For what he revealed as a Prophet, he purchaſed as a Prieſt; and what he ſo revealed and purchaſed as Prophet and Prieſt, he applies as King; firſt ſubduing the Souls of his Elect to his Spiritual Government; then ruling them as his Subjects, and ordering all things in the Kingdom of Providence for their good. So that Chriſt hath a twofold Kingdom, the own Spiritual and Internal; by which he ſubdues and rules the Hearts of his People; the other Providential and External, whereby he guides, rules, and orders all things in the World in a bleſſed ſubordination to their Eternal Salvation. I am to ſpeak from this Text of his Spiritual and Internal Kingdom.

Theſe Words are conſiderable two ways, either relatively or abſolutely. Conſidered relatively, they are a vindication of the Apoſtle from the unjuſt Cenſures of the Corinthians, who very unworthily interpreted his Gentleneſs, Condeſcenſion, and winning Affability, to be no better than a fawning upon them for ſelf-ends; and the Authority he exerciſed, no better than Pride and Imperiouſneſs. But hereby he lets them know, that as Chriſt needs not, ſo he never uſed ſuch carnal Artifices: The Weapons of our Warfare (ſaith he) are not carnal, but mighty through God, &c.

Abſolutely conſidered, they hold forth the Efficacy of the Goſpel in the plainneſs and ſimplicity of it, for the ſubduing of rebellious Sinners to Chriſt: And in them we have theſe three things to conſider.

1. The Oppoſitions made by Sinners againſt the Aſſaults of the Gſopel, viz. Imaginations, or Reaſonings, as the word λόγισμος may be fitly rendred. He means the Subtilties, Slights, Excuſes, Subterfuges, and Arguings of fleſhly-minded Men; in which they fortifie and entrench themſelves againſt the Convictions of the Word: yea, and there are not only ſuch carnal reaſonings, but many proud high Conceits with which poor Creatures ſwell, and ſcorn to ſubmit to the abaſing, humble, ſelf-denying way of the Goſpel. Theſe are the Fortifications erected againſt Chriſt by the carnal Mind.

Munitiones eleganti metaphora uſurpat pro omni eo, in quo hoſtes evangelii contra veritatem cœleſtis verbi ſeſe muniunt, efferuntque; qualia ſunt carnalis ſapientia eruditio, & eloquentia. S. Glaſſius.

2. We have here the Conqueſt which the Goſpel obtains over Sinners, thus fortified againſt it: It caſts down, and overthrows, and takes in theſe ſtrong Holds. Thus Chriſt ſpoils Satan of his Armour in which he truſted, by ſhewing the Sinner that all this can be no defence to his Soul againſt the Wrath of God. But that's not all; in the next place,

3. You have here the Improvement of the Victory. Chriſt doth not only lead away theſe Enemies ſpoiled, but brings them into Obedience to himſelf, i. e. makes them after Converſion, Subjects of his own Kingdom, obedient, uſeful, and ſerviceable to himſelf; and ſo is more than a Conqueror. They do not only lay down their Arms, and fight no more againſt Chriſt, with them; but repair to his Camp, and fight for Chriſt, with thoſe Reaſons of theirs that were before employed againſt him: As it's ſaid of Jerom, Origen and Tertullian, that they came into Canaan laden with Egyptian Gold; that is, they came into the Church full of excellent Learning and Abilities, with which they eminently ſerved Jeſus Chriſt. O bleſſed Victory, where the Conqueror and Conquered both triumph together! And thus Enemies and Rebels are ſubdued, and made Subjects of the Spiritual Kingdom of Chriſt. Hence the Doctrinal Note is,

O beata victoria, ubi victi cum victoribus ſimul triumphant! Meyer. in loc.

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt exerciſes a Kindly Power over the Souls of all whom the Goſpel ſubdues to his Obedience.

No ſooner were the Coloſſians delivered out of the power of Darkneſs, but they were immeately tranſlated into the Kingdom of Chriſt the Dear Son, Col. 1. 13.

This Kingdom of Chriſt, which is our preſent Subject, is the internal ſpiritual Kingdom, which is ſaid to be within the Saints, Luke 17. 20, 21. The Kingdom of God is within you. Chriſt ſits as an enthroned King in the Hearts, Conſciences and Affections of his willing People, Pſal. 110. 3. And his Kingdom conſiſts in Righteouſneſs, Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14. 17. and is properly Monarchial, as appears in the Margin.

Internum regimen eſt monarchicum & non poteſt non eſſe. Nulli enim tribui debet jus regendi hominum conſcientiam præterquam ei qui idem eſt ſapientiſſimus, & potentiſſimus. Neque in hoc regimine Chriſtus habet vicarium potentiæ, atque poteſtatis ſuæ.

In the proſecution of this Point, I will ſpeak doctrinally to theſe three Heads.

Firſt, How Chriſt obtains the Throne in the Hearts of Men.

Secondly, How he rules in it, and by what Acts he exerciſeth his Kingly Authority.

Thirdly, What are the Priviledges of thoſe Souls over whom Chriſt reigns. And then apply it.

Firſt, We will open the way and manner in which Chriſt obtains a Throne in the Hearts of Men, and that is by Conqueſt: For tho' the Souls of the Elect are his by Donation, and Right of Redemption; the Father gave them to him, and he died for them; yet Satan hath the firſt poſſeſſion: And ſo it fares with Chriſt, as it did with Abraham, to whom God gave the Land of Canaan by Promiſe and Covenant; but the Canaanites, Perezites, and Sons of Anak, had the actual poſſeſſion of it, and Abraham's Poſterity muſt fight for it, and win it by Inches before they enjoy it. The Houſes is conveyed to Chriſt by him that built it, but the ſtrong Man armed keeps the poſſeſſion of it, till a ſtronger than he comes and ejects him, Luke 11. 20, 21, 22. Chriſt muſt fight his way into the Soul, tho' he have a right to enter as into his dearly purchaſed Poſſeſſion. And ſo he doth; for when the time of recovering them is come, he ſends forth his Armies to ſubdue them; as it is, Pſal. 110. 3. Thy People ſhall be willing in the day of thy Power. The Hebrew may as fitly be rendred, and ſo is by ſome, in the day of thine Armies; when the Lord Jeſus ſent forth his Armies of Prophets, Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, Paſtors, Teachers, under the Conduct of his Spirit, armed with that two-edged Sword, the Word of God, which is ſharp and powerful, Heb. 4 12. But that's not all: He cauſes Armies of Convictions, and ſpiritual Troubles, to begirt and ſtraiten them on every ſide, ſo that they know not what to do. Theſe Convictions, like a ſhower of Arrows, ſtrike point-blank into their Conſciences; Acts 2. 37. When they heard this, they were pricked to the Heart, and ſaid, Men and Brethren, what ſhall we do? Chriſt's Arrows are ſharp in the Hearts of his Enemies, whereby the People fall under him, Pſal. 45. 5, 6. By theſe Convictions he batters down all their looſe vain Hopes, and levels them with the Earth.

Nam infinita poteſtas, quantumvis vicaria ſit, in hominem nullum cadere poteſt; etiam eſt quoddam genus unionis, quod cicarium omnem excludat, ut Patris & Filii, Mariti & Uxoris; nam hic certe vicariatus non poteſt habere locum. Maccov. loc. com. p. 641.

Now all their weak Pleas and Defences, from the general Mercy of God, the Example of others, &c. prove but as Paper-walls to them. Theſe ſhake their Hearts, even to the Foundation, and overturn every high Thought there, that exalts it ſelf againſt the Lord. This day in which Chriſt ſits down before the Soul, and ſummons it by ſuch Meſſengers as theſe, is a day of diſtreſs within; yea, ſuch a day of trouble that none is like it. But tho' it be ſo, yet Satan hath ſo deeply entrencht himſelf in the Mind and Will, that the Soul yeilds not at the firſt ſummons, till its Proviſions within are ſpent, and all its Towers of Pride, and Walls of vain Confidence, be undermined by the Goſpel, and ſhaken down about it Ears: And then the Soul deſires a Parley with Chriſt. O now it would be glad of terms, any terms, if it may but ſave its Life; let all go as a prey to the Conqueror. Now it ſends many ſuch Meſſages as theſe to Chriſt, who is come now to the very Gates of the Soul, Mercy, Lord, Mercy; O were I but aſſured thou would'ſt receive, ſpare and pardon me, I would open to thee the next moment! Thus the Soul is ſhut up to the Faith of Chriſt, as it is, Gal. 3. 23. and reduced now to the greateſt ſtrait and loſs imaginable; and now the merciful King, whoſe only deſign is to conquer Heart, hangs forth the White Flag of Mercy before the Soul, giving it hopes it ſhall be ſpared, and pitied, and pardoned, tho' ſo long in Rebellion againſt him, if yet it will yield it ſelf to Chriſt. Many ſtaggerings, heſitations, irreſolutions, doubts, fears, ſcruples, half-reſolves, reaſonings for and againſt, there are at the Counſel-Table of Man's own Heart at this time. Sometimes there is no hope; Chriſt will ſlay me if I go forth to him, and then it trembles. But then, whoever found him ſo that tried him? Other Souls have yeilded, and found Mercy beyond all their expectations. O but I have been a deſperate Enemy againſt him. Admit it, yet thou haſt the Word of a King for it; Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him turn to the Lord, and he will have Mercy on him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon him, Iſa. 55. 7.

But the time of Mercy is paſt, I have ſtood out too long: Yet if it were ſo, How is it that Chriſt hath not made ſhort work, and cut me off? Set Fire, Hell-fire to my Soul, and withdrawn the Siege? Still he waiteth that he may be gracious, and is exalted that he may have Compaſſion. A thouſand ſuch Debates there are, till at laſt the Soul conſidering, if it abide in Rebellion, it muſt needs periſh; if it go forth to Chriſt, it can but periſh; and being ſomewhat encouraged by the meſſages of Grace ſent into the Soul at this time, ſuch as that, Heb. 7. 25. Wherefore he is able to ſave to the utmoſt all that came unto God by him; and that, Joh. 6. 37. He that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out; and that, Mat. 11. 28. Come unto me ye that are weary, and heavy-laden, and I will give you reſt: It is at laſt reſolved to open to Chriſt; and ſaith, Stand open ye everlaſting Gates, and be ye opened ye everlaſting Doors, the King of Glory ſhall come in. Now the Will ſpontaneouſly opens to Chriſt; that Fort-royal ſubmits and yields; all the Affections open to him: The Will brings Chriſt the Keys of all the Rooms in the Soul. Concerning this triumphant Entrance of Chriſt into the Soul, we may ſay, as the Pſalmiſt rhetorically ſpeaks concerning the triumphant Entrance of Iſrael into Canaan, Pſal. 114. 5, 6. The Mountains skipped like Rams, and the little Hills like Lambs; what ailed thee, O thou Sea, that thou fleddeſt? Thou Jordan, that thou waſt driven back? So here, in a like rhetorical torical Triumph, we may ſay, the Mountains and Hills skipt like Rams, the fixed and obſtinate Will ſtarts from its own Baſis and Center; the rocky Hearts rends in twain. A poor Soul comes to the World full of Ignorance, Pride, Self-love, deſperate Hardneſs, and fixed Reſolutions to go on in its way; and by an hour's Diſcourſe the Tide turns, Jordan is driven back: What aileth thee thou ſtout Will, that thou ſurrendereſt to Chriſt? Thou hard Heart, that thou relenteſt, and the Waters guſh out? And thus the Soul is won to Chriſt: He writes down his Terms, and the Soul willingly ſubſcribes them. Thus it comes in to Chriſt by free and hearty Submiſſion, deſiring nothing more than to come under the Government of Chriſt for time to come.

Secondly, Let us ſee how Chriſt rules in the Souls of ſuch as ſubmit to him. And there are ſix things in which he exerts his Kingly Authority over them.

It is proper to Chriſt, who rules abſolutely and monarchically over the Souls and Conſciences of Men, to bind them by his own Authority. None but Chriſt can do it, 1. Becauſe this Authority of Chriſt is infinite. 2. Becauſe it's the Authority of a Husband which cannot be communicated to any other, 1 Cor. 9. 21, 22.

1. He impoſes a new Law upon them, and enjoins them to be ſevere and punctual in their Obedience to it. The Soul was a Belialite before, and could endure no reſtraint; its Luſts gave it Law: We our ſelves were ſometimes fooliſh, diſobedient, ſerving divers Luſts and Pleaſures, Tit. 3. 3. Whatever the Fleſh craved, and the ſenſual Appetite whined after, it muſt have coſt what it would coſt: If Damnation were the price of it, it would have it, provided it ſhould not be preſent pay. Now it muſt not be any longer ἄνομος Θεῷ, ἀλλ' ἔννομος τῷ χριστῷ, without Law to God; but under Law to Chriſt. Thoſe are the Articles of Peace which the Soul willingly ſigns in the day of its admiſſion to Mercy, Mat. 11. 29. Take my Yoak upon you, and learn of me. This Law of the Spirit of Life, which is in Chriſt Jeſus, makes them free from the Law of Sin and Death, Rom. 8. 2. Here's much ſtrictneſs, but no bondage; for the Law is not only written in Chriſt's Statute-book, the Bible, but copied out by his Spirit upon the Hearts of Subjects, in correſpondent Principles; which makes Obedience a pleaſure, and Self-denial eaſie. Chriſt's Yoak is lined with Love, ſo that it never galls the Necks of his People: 1 Joh. 5. 3. His Commandments are not grievous. The Soul that comes under Chriſt's Government, muſt receive Law from Chriſt; and under Law every thought of the Heart muſt come.

2. He rebukes and chaſtiſes Souls for the violations and tranſgreſſions of his Law. That's another act of Chriſt's Regal Authority; whom he loves he rebukes and chaſtens, Heb. 12. 6, 7. Theſe Chaſtiſements of Chriſt are either by the Rod of Providence upon their Bodies and outward comforts, or upon their Spirits and inward comforts. Sometimes his Rebukes are ſmart upon the outward Man, 1 Cor. 11. 30. For this cauſe many among you are weakly, and ſick, and many ſleep. They had not that due regard to his Body that became them, and he will make their Bodies to ſmart for it. And he had rather their fleſh ſhould ſmart, than their ſouls ſhould periſh. Sometimes he ſpares their outward, and afflicts their inner Man, which is a much ſmarter Rod. He withdraws Peace, and takes away Joy from the Spirits of his People. The hidings of his Face are ſore Rebukes. However, all is for emendation, not for deſtruction. And it is not the leaſt priviledge of Chriſt's Subjects, to have a ſeaſonable and ſanctified Rod to reduce them from the ways of Sin: Pſal. 23. 3. Thy Rod and thy Staff they comfort me. Others are ſuffered to go on ſtubbornly in the way of their own Hearts; Chriſt will not ſpend a Rod upon them for their good, will not call them to account for any of their Tranſgreſſions, but will reckon with them for all together in Hell.

3. Another Regal Act of Chriſt, is the reſtraining and keeping his Servants from Iniquity, and withholding them from thoſe Courſes which their own Hearts would incline and lead them to: For even in them there is a Spirit bent to backſliding, but the Lord in tenderneſs over them, keeps back their Souls from Iniquity, and that when they are upon the very brink of ſin; My feet were almoſt gone, my ſteps were well nigh ſlipt, Pſal. 73. 2. Then doth the Lord prevent Sin, by removing the occaſion providentially, or by helping them to reſiſt the Temptation, graciouſly aſſiſting their Spirits in the trial, ſo that no Temptation ſhall befal them, but a way of eſcape ſhall be opened that they may be able to bear it, 1 Cor. 10. 13. And thus his People have frequent occaſions to bleſs his Name for his preventing Goodneſs, when they are almoſt in the midſt of all Evil. And this I take to be the meaning of Gal. 5. 16. This I ſay then, walk in the Spirit, and ye ſhall not fulfil the Luſts of the Fleſh; tempted by them ye may be, but fulfil them ye ſhall not: My Spirit ſhall cauſe the Temptation to die, and wither away in the Womb, in the Embrio of it, ſo that it ſhall not come to a full birth.

4. He protects them in his ways, and ſuffers them not to relapſe from him into a ſtate of Sin, and Bondage to Satan any more. Indeed he is reſtleſs in his endeavours to reduce them again to his Obedience; he never leaves tempting and ſoliciting for their return: and where he finds a falſe Profeſſor, he prevails; but Chriſt keeps his, that they depart not again. Joh. 17. 12. All that thou haſt given me I have kept, none of them is loſt, but the Son of perdition. They are kept by the mighty power of God, through Faith to Salvation, 1 Pet. 1. 5. Kept as in a Gariſon, according to the importance of that word. None more ſolicited, none more ſafe than the People of God. They are preſerved in Chriſt Jeſus, Jude 1. It is not their own Grace that ſecures them, but Chriſt's care, and continual watchfulneſs. Our own Graces left to themſelves, would quickly prove but weights ſinking us to our own ruin, as one ſpeaks. This is his Covenant with them, Jer. 32. 4. I will put my fear in their inwards, and they ſhall not depart from me. Thus as a King he preſerves them.

Chriſt and all his little ones under his two wings, and in the compaſs or circle of his Arms, is ſo ſure, that caſt him and them in the ground of the Sea, he ſhall come up again, and not loſe one. An odd one cannot, nor ſhall not be loſt in the telling. Perfectiones ſibi relictæ, ſunt pondera ad ruinam. Gerſ.

5. As a King he rewards their Obedience, and encourages their ſincere Service. Tho' all they do for Chriſt be duty, yet he hath united their comfort with their duty; this I had, becauſe I kept thy Precepts, Pſal. 119. 56. They are engaged to take this encouragement with them to every duty, that he whom they ſeek, is a bountiful rewarder of ſuch as diligently ſeek him, Heb. 11. 6. O what a good Maſter do the Saints ſerve! Hear how a King expoſtulates with his Subjects, Jer. 2. 31. Have I been a barren Wilderneſs, or a Land of darkneſs to you? q. d. Have I been ſuch a hard Maſter to you? Have you any reaſon to complain of my Service? To whomſoever I have been ſtrait-handed, ſurely I have not been ſo to you. You have not found the ways or wages of Sin like mine.

Brabeutem agit, ſive Agonothetam inter cæteros affectus; nam βραβεύειν, id ſignificat: cum igitur inſurgunt in cordibus noſtris turbidi affectus, iræ, odii, vindictæ, hic pax Dei debet ſuum officium facere, i. e. inſtar agonothetæ lites dirimere. Daven. in Col.

6. He pacifies all inward Troubles, and commands Peace when their Spirits are tumultuous. This Peace of God rules in their Hearts. Col. 3. 15. it doth βραβεύειν act the part of an Umpire, in appeaſing Strife within. When the tumultuous Affections are up, and in a hurry; when Anger, Hatred, and Revenge begin to riſe in the Soul, this huſhes and ſtills all. I will hearken (ſaith the Church) what God the Lord will ſpeak, for he will ſpeak Peace to his People, and to his Saints, Pſal. 85. 8. He that ſaith to the raging Sea, Be ſtill, and it obeys him; he only can Pacifie the diſquieted Spirit. They ſay of Frogs, that if they be croaking never ſo much in the night, bring but a Light among them, and they are all quiet: Such a Light is the Peace of God among our diſordered Affections. Theſe are Chriſt's Regal Acts. And he puts them forth upon the Souls of the People, powerfully, ſweetly, ſuitably.

(1.) Powerfully: whether he reſtrains from Sin, or impels to Duty, he doth it with a Soul-determining Efficacy; For his Kingdom is not in Word, but in Power, 1 Cor. 4. 20. And thoſe whom his Spirit leads, go bound in the Spirit, to the fulfilling and diſcharge of their Duties, Acts 20. 22. And yet,

(2.) He rules not by compulſion, but moſt ſweetly. His Law is a Law of Love, written upon their Hearts. The Church is the Lamb's Wife, Rev. 19. 7. A bruiſed Reed he ſhall not break, and ſmoaking Flax he ſhall not quench, Iſa. 42. 2, 3. I beſeech you by the meekneſs and gentleneſs of Chriſt, ſaith the Apoſtle. 2 Cor. 10. 1. For he delighteth in free, not in forced Obedience. He rules Children not Slaves. And ſo his Kingly Power is mixed with Fatherly Love. His Yoak is not made of Iron, but Gold.

(3.) He rules them ſuitably to their Natures, in a rational way: Hoſ. 11. 4. I drew them with the cords of a Man, with bands of Love, i. e. in a way proper to convince their Reaſon, and work upon their Ingenuity. And thus his internal Kingdom is adminiſtred by his Spirit, who is Prorex, or Vicegerent in our Hearts.

Thirdly, And Laſtly; We will open the Priviledges pertaining to all the Subjects of this Spiritual Kingdom. And they are ſuch as follow.

1. Thoſe Souls over whom Chriſt reigns, are certainly and fully ſet free from the Curſe of the Law. If the Son makes you free, then are you free indeed. Joh. 8. 36. I ſay not, they are free from the Law as a Rule of Life; ſuch a Freedom were no Priviledge to them at all: but free from the rigorous Exactions, and terrible Maledictions of it; to hear our Liberty proclaim'd from this Bondage, is the joyful Sound indeed, the bleſſedſt Voice that ever our Ears heard. And this all that are in Chriſt ſhall hear; If we be led by the Spirit, we are not under the Law, Gal. 5. 18. Bleſſed are the People that hear this joyful ſound, Pſal. 89. 15.

2. Another Priviledge of Chriſt's Subjects, is freedom from the dominion of Sin. Rom. 6. 14. Sin ſhall not reign over them; for they are not under the Law, but under Grace. One Heaven cannot bear two Suns; nor one Soul two Kings: when Chriſt takes the Throne, Sin quits it. It's true, the Being of Sin is there ſtill; its defiling and troubling Power remains ſtill, but its Dominion is aboliſhed. O joyful tidings! O welcome day!

3. Another Priviledge of Chriſt's Subjects, is Protection in all the Troubles and Dangers to to which their Souls or Bodies are expoſed. This Man ſhall be the Peace, when the Aſſyrian ſhall come into our Land, and when he ſhall tread in our Palaces, Mic. 5. 5. Kings owe Protection to their Subjects. None ſo able, ſo faithful in that work as Chriſt: All thou gaveſt me, I have kept, and none is loſt, Joh. 17. 12.

4. Another Priviledge of Chriſt's Subjects, is a merciful and tender bearing of their Burdens and Infirmities. They have a meek and patient King; Tell the Daughter of Sion, thy King cometh meek and lowly. Mat. 21. 5. Mat. 11. 29. Take my yoak, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly. The meek Moſes could not bear the Provocations of the People, Numb. 11. 12. but Chriſt bears them all: He carries the Lambs in his Arms, and gently leads them that be with young, Iſa. 42. 11. He is one that can have compaſſion upon the Ignorant, and them that are out of the way.

5. Again, Sweet Peace, and Tranquillity of Soul, is the Priviledge of the Subjects of this Kingdom: For this Kingdom conſiſteth in Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14. 17. And till Souls come under his Scepter, they ſhall never find Peace: Come unto me ye that are weary, I will give you reſt. Yet do not miſtake, I ſay not they have all actual Peace, at all times: No, they often break that Peace by ſin; but they have the root of Peace, the ground-work and cauſe of Peace. If they have not Peace, yet they have that which is convertible into Peace at any time. They alſo are in a ſtate of Peace, Rom. 5. 11. Being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God. This is a feaſt every day; a Mercy which they only can duly value, that are in the depths of trouble for Sin.

6. And Laſtly, Everlaſting Salvation is the Priviledge of all over whom Chriſt reigns. Prince and Saviour are joined together, Acts. 5. 31. He that can ſay, thou ſhalt guide me with thy Counſels, may add what follows, and afterwards bring me to Glory, Pſal. 73. 24. Indeed the Kingdom of Grace doth but breed up Children for the Kingdom of Glory. And to ſpeak as the thing is, it's the Kingdom of Heaven here begun. The difference betwixt them is not ſpecifical, but only gradual; and therefore this as well as that bears the name of the Kingdom of Heaven. The King is the ſame, and the Subjects the ſame. The Subjects of this are ſhortly to be tranſlated to that Kingdom. Thus I have named, and indeed but named, ſome few of thoſe ineſtimable Priviledges of Chriſt's Subjects. We next apply it.

Inference 1. How great is their Sin and Miſery who continue in bondage to Sin and Satan, and refuſe the Government of Chriſt! Who had rather ſit under the ſhadow of that Bramble, than under the ſweet and powerful Government of Chriſt. Satan writes his Laws in the Blood of his Subjects, grindes them with cruel Oppreſſion, wears them out with bondage to divers Luſts, and rewards their ſervice with everlaſting Miſery. And yet how few are weary of it, and willing to come over to Chriſt! 'Behold (ſaid one of Chriſt's Heraulds) Chriſt 'is in the Field, ſent of God to recover his Right 'and your Liberty: His Royal Standard is pitcht 'in the Goſpel, and Proclamation made, that if 'any poor Sinners, weary of the Devil's Government, and laden with the miſerable Chains of 'his ſpiritual Bondage, (ſo as theſe Irons of his 'Sins enter into his very Soul, to afflict it with 'the ſenſe of them) ſhall thus come and repair 'to Chriſt, he ſhall have protection from God's 'Juſtice, the Devil's Wrath, and Sin's Dominion; 'in a word, he ſhall have reſt, and that glori'ous, Iſa. 11. 10.

Gurnall's Christian Armour, p. 218.

And yet how few ſtir a foot towards Chriſt, but are willing to have their ears bored, and be perpetual ſlaves to that crued Tyrant? O when will Sinners be weary of their Bondage, and ſigh after Deliverance! If any ſuch poor Soul ſhall read theſe Lines, let them know, and I do proclaim it in the Name of my Royal Maſter, and give him the word of a King for it, he ſhall not be rejected by Chriſt, Joh. 6. 37. Come, poor Sinners, come, the Lord Jeſus is a merciful King, and never did, nor will hang up that poor Penitent, that puts the Rope about his own Neck, and ſubmits to Mercy.

Inference 2. How much doth it concern us to enquire and know whoſe Government we are under, and who is King over our Souls; whether Chriſt or Satan be in the Throne, and ſways the Scepter over our Souls?

Reader, the Work I would now engage thy Soul in, is the ſame that Jeſus Chriſt will throughly and effectually do in the great day. Then will he gather out of his Kingdom every thing that offends, ſeparate the Tares and Wheat, divide the whole World into two Ranks, or grand Diviſions, how many Diviſions and Sub-diviſions ſoever there be in it now. It nearly concerns thee therefore to know who is Lord and King in thy Soul. To help thee in this great Work, make uſe of the following hints; for I cannot fully proſecute theſe things as I would.

1. To whom do you yield your Obedience? His Subjects and Servants ye are to whom ye obey, Rom. 6. 16. It's but a mockery to give Chriſt the empty Titles of Lord and King, whilſt ye give your real Service to Sin and Satan. What is this but like the Jews, to bow the Knees to him, and ſay, Hail Maſter, and crucifie him? Then are ye his Diſciples, if ye do whatſoever he commands you, Joh. 15. 14. He that is Chriſt's Servant in jeſt, ſhall be damned in earneſt. Chriſt doth not compliment with you; his Pardons, Promiſes, Salvation are real; O let your Obedience be ſo too! Let it be ſincere and univerſal Obedience, this will evidence your unfeigned Subjection to Chriſt. Do not dare to enterprize any thing, till you know Chriſt's Pleaſure and Will, Rom. 12. 2. Enquire of Chriſt, as David did of the Lord, 1 Sam. 23. 9, 10, 11. Lord, may I do this or that? Or ſhall I forbear? I beſeech thee tell thy Servant.

2. Have you the power of Godlineſs, or a form of it only? There be many that do but trifle in Religion, and play about the skirts and borders of it; ſpending their time about jejune and barren Controverſies: but as to the power of Religion, and life of Godlineſs, which conſiſts in Communion with God in Duties and Ordinances, which promotes Holineſs, and mortifies their Luſts, they concern not themſelves about theſe things. But ſurely, the Kingdom of God is not in Word, but in Power, 1 Cor. 4. 20. It is not Meat and Drink (that is, dry Diſputes about Meats and Drinks) but Righteouſneſs, and Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt; for he that in theſe things ſerveth Chriſt, is acceptable to God, and approved of Men, Rom. 14. 17, 18. O I am afraid when the great Hoſt of Profeſſors ſhall be tried by theſe Rules, they will ſhrink up into a little handful, as Gideon's Hoſt did.

3. Have ye the ſpecial ſaving Knowledge of Chriſt? All his Subjects are tranſlated out of the Kingdom of Darkneſs, Col. 1. 13. The Devil that ruleth over you in the days of your Ignorance, is called the Ruler of the Darkneſs of this World: His Subjects are all blind, elſe he could never rule them: As ſoon as their Eyes be opened, they run out of his Kingdom, and there is no retaining them in ſubjection to him any longer. O enquire then, whether you are brought out of Darkneſs into this marvellous Light! Do you ſee your Condition, how ſad, miſerable, wretched it is by nature? Do you ſee your Remedy, as it lyes only in Chriſt, and his precious Blood? Do you ſee the true way of obtaining Intereſt in that Blood by Faith? Doth this Knowledge run into Practice, and put you upon lamenting heartily your Miſery by Sin? thirſting vehemently after Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs? ſtriving continually for a Heart to believe and cloſe with Chriſt? This will evidence you indeed to be tranſlated out of the Kingdom of Darkneſs into the Kingdom of Chriſt.

4. With whom do you delightfully aſſociate your ſelves? Who are your choſen Companions? You may ſee to whom you belong by the Company you join your ſelves to. What do the Subjects of Chriſt among the Slaves of Satan? If the Subjects of one Kingdom be in another King's Dominion, they love to be together with their own Country-men, rather than the Natives of the place; ſo do the Servants of Chriſt. They are a company of themſelves, as it is ſaid, Acts 4. 23. They went to their own

O how many of us would have Christ divided in two halves, that we might take the half of him only, and take his Office, Jeſus, and Salvation? But Lord is a cumberſome word; and to obey, and work out our own Salvation, and perfect Holineſs, is the cumberſome and ſtormy north-ſide of Chriſt, and that we eſchew and ſhift off.

Company. I know the Subjects of both Kingdoms are here mingled, and we cannot avoid the company of Sinners, except we go out of the World, 1 Cor. 5. 10. but yet all your Delights ſhould be in the Saints, and in the Excellent of the Earth, Pſal. 16. 3.

5. Do ye live holy and righteous Lives? If not, you may claim Intereſt in Chriſt as your King, but he will never allow your Claim. The Scepter of his Kingdom is a Scepter of Righteouſneſs, Pſal. 45. 6. If ye oppreſs, go beyond, and cheat your brethren, and yet call your ſelves Chriſt's Subjects, what greater Reproach can ye ſtudy to caſt upon him? What! is Chriſt the King of Cheats? Doth he patronize ſuch things as theſe? No, no, pull off your Vizards, and fall into your own places; you belong to another Prince, and not to Chriſt.

Regis ad exemplum totus componitur orbis.

Inf. 3. Doth Chriſt exerciſe ſuch a Kingly Power over the Souls of all them that are ſubdued by the Goſpel to him? O then let all that are under Chriſt's Government walk as the Subjects of ſuch a King. Imitate your King; the Examples of Kings are very influential upon their Subjects. Your King hath commanded you not only to take his Yoke upon you, but alſo learn of him, Mat. 11. 29. Yea, and if any Man ſay that he is Chriſt's, let him walk even as Chriſt walked, 1 John 2. 6. Your King is meek and patient, Iſa. 33. 7. as a Lamb for Meekneſs: Shall his Subjects be Lions for Fierceneſs? Your King was humble and lowly; Mat. 21. 5. Behold the King cometh meek and lowly: Will you be proud and lofty? Doth this become the Kingdom of Chriſt? Your King was a ſelf-denying King; he could deny his outward Comforts, Eaſe, Honour, Life, to ſerve his Father's Deſign, and accompliſh your Salvation, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Phil. 2. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. Shall his Servants be ſelf-ended, and ſelf-ſeeking perſons, that will expoſe his Honour, and hazard their own Souls for the trifles of Time? God forbid. Your King was painful, laborious and diligent in fulfilling his Work, Joh. 9. 3. Let not his Servants be lazy and ſlothful. O imitate your King, follow the Pattern of your King: This will give you Comfort now, and Boldneſs in the day of Judgment, if as he was, ſo ye are in this World, 1 Joh. 4. 17.

Ser. 17. Opens the Kingly Office of Chriſt as it is providentially executed upon the World, for the Redeemed.

SERMON XVII.

EPHES. I. 22.

And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the Church.

THE foregoing Verſes are ſpent in a thankful and humble Adoration of the Grace of God, in bringing theſe Epheſians to believe in Chriſt. This effect of that Power that raiſed their Hearts to believe in Chriſt, is here compared with that other glorious effect of it, even the raiſing of Chriſt himſelf from the dead: Both theſe owe themſelves to the ſame efficient Cauſe. It raiſed Chriſt from a low Eſtate, even from the dead, to a high, a very high and glorious ſtate; to be the Head both of the World, and of the Church; the Head of the World by way of Dominion, the Head of the Church by way of Union, and ſpecial Influence, ruling the World for the good of his People in it. He gave him to be Head over all things to the Church.

In this Scripture let theſe four things be ſeriouſly heeded.

1. The Dignity and Authority committed to Chriſt: He hath put all things under his feet; which implies full, ample, and abſolute Dominion in him, and Subjection in them over whom he reigns. This Power is delegated to him by the Father: For beſides the eſſential, native, ingenite Power and Dominion over all, which he hath as God, and is common to every Perſon in the Godhead, Pſal. 22. 28. there is a mediatory diſpenſed Authority, which is proper to him as Mediator, which he receives as the reward or fruit of his Suffering, Phil. 2. 8.

2. The Subject recipient of this Authority, which is Chriſt, and Chriſt primarily, and only: He is the πρῶτον δεκτικὸν, firſt Receptacle of all Authority and Power. Whatever Authority any Creature is cloathed with, is but miniſterial and derivative, whether it be Political or Eccleſiaſtical. Chriſt is the only Lord, Jude 4. the Fountain of all Power.

3. The Object of this Authority, the whole Creation; All things are put under his feet: He rules from Sea to Sea, even to the utmoſt bounds of God's Creation, Thou haſt given him power over all Fleſh, John 17. 2. all Creatures, rational and irrational, animate and inanimate, Angels, Devils, Men, Winds, Seas, all obey him.

4. And eſpecially, take notice of the finis cui, End for which he governs and rules the univerſal Empire: It is to the Church, i. e. for the Advantage, Comfort, and Salvation of that choſen Remnant he died for. He purchaſed the Church; and that he might have the higheſt ſecurity that his Blood ſhould not be loſt, God the Father hath put all things into his hand, to order and diſpoſe all as he pleaſeth. For the furtherance of that his deſign and end, as he bought the Perſons of ſome, ſo the Services of all the reſt; and that they might effectually ſerve the End they are deſigned to, Chriſt will order them all in a bleſſed ſubordination and ſubſerviency thereunto. Hence the Point is,

In bonum Eccleſiæ obtinet hoc imperium. Grotius in loc.

Doct. That all the Affairs of the Kingdom of of Providence are ordered and determined by Jeſus Chriſt, for the ſpecial Advantage and everlaſting Good of his redeemed People.

John 17. 2. As thou haſt given him power over all Fleſh, that he ſhould give Eternal Life to as many as thou haſt given him. Hence it comes to paſs, that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are the called according to his purpoſe, Rom. 8. 28.

That Jeſus Chriſt hath a providential Influence upon all the Affairs of this World, is evident both from Scripture Aſſertions, and Rational Obſervations, made upon the actings of things here below.

The firſt Chapter of Ezekiel contains an admirable Scheme or Draught of Providence. There you ſee how all the VVheels, that is, the Motions and Revolutions here on Earth, are guided by the Spirit that is in them. And ver. 26. it's all run up into the ſupream Cauſe: There you find one like the Son of Man, which is Jeſus Chriſt, ſitting upon the Throne, and giving forth Orders from thence for the Government of all: And if it were not ſo, how is it that there are ſuch ſtrong Combinations, and Prediſpoſitions of Perſons and Things to ſuch ends and iſſues, without any communications of Counſels, or holding of Intelligence with one another? As in Iſrael's deliverance out of Egypt, and innumerable more inſtances have appeared. Certainly if ten Men from ſeveral places ſhould all meet at one place, and about one buſineſs, without any fore-appointment among themſelves, it would argue their Motions were ſecretly over-ruled by ſome inviſible Agent. How is it that ſuch marvellous Effects are produced in the VVorld by Cauſes that carry no proportion to them? Amos 5. 9. and 1 Cor. 1. 27. and as often the moſt apt and likely means are rendred wholly ineffectual? Pſal. 33. 16. In a word, if Chriſt hath no ſuch providential Influx, how are his people in all ages preſerved in the midſt of ſo many millions of potent and malicious enemies, amongſt whom they live as ſheep in the midſt of wolves? Luk. 10. 3. How is it that the Buſh burns, and yet is not conſumed? Exod. 4. 2.

But my buſineſs in this Diſcourſe is not to prove that there is a Providence, which none but Athieſts deny. I ſhall chuſe rather to ſhew by what Acts Jeſus Chriſt adminiſters this Kingdom, and in what manner; and what uſe may be made thereof.

Firſt, He rules and orders the Kingdom of Providence, by ſupporting, permitting, reſtraining, limiting, protecting, puniſhing, and rewarding thoſe over whom he reigns providentially.

1. He ſupports the World, and all Creatures in it, by his Power. My Father works hitherto, and I work, John 5. 17. And in him (that is, in Chriſt) all things conſiſt, Col. 1. 17. It's a conſiderable part of Chriſt's Glory to have a whole world of Creatures owing their Beings and hourly Conſervations to him. The parts of the World are not coupled and faſtned together as the parts of a Houſe, whoſe Beams are pinn'd and nail'd to each other; but rather as ſeveral Rings of Iron, which hang together by the virtue of a Loadſtone. This goodly Fabrick was raiſed to the Foundation when Sin entred, and had tumbled into everlaſting confuſion, had not Chriſt ſtept in to ſhore up the reeling World. For the ſakes of his Redeemed that inhabit it, he doth and will prop it by his omnipotent Power. And when he hath gathered all his Elect out of it into the Kingdom above, then will he ſet fire to the four quarters of it, and it ſhall lye in white Aſhes. Mean while, he is given for a Covenant to the People, to eſtabliſh the Earth, Iſa. 49. 8.

Propter, Eccleſiam in mundo durat mundas, alioquin uno momento conflagaret cœlum & terra; quia mundus non eſt dignus uno grano tritici, ſiquidem plenus eſt blaſphemiis & impietate. Niſi oratione & doctrina ſuſtentaret Eccleſia mundum uno momento perient omnia. Luther in Gen. 30.

2. He permits and ſuffers the worſt of Creatures in his Dominion to be and act as they do. The deceived and the deceiver are his, Job 12. 16. Even thoſe that fight againſt Chriſt and his People, receive both power and permiſſion from him. Say not that it's unbecoming the moſt Holy to permit ſuch Evils, which he could prevent if he pleaſed. For as he permits no more than he will over-rule to his praiſe, ſo that very permiſſion of his is holy and juſt. Chriſt's working is not confounded with the Creatures. Pure Sun beams are not tainted by the noiſom vapours of the Dunghil on which they ſhine. His Holineſs hath no fellowſhip with their Iniquities; nor are their Tranſgreſſions at all excuſed by his permiſſions of them. He is a Rock, his Work is perfect; but they have corrupted themſelves, Deut. 22. 4, 5. This holy permiſſion is but the with-holding of thoſe reſtraints from their Luſts, and denying thoſe common aſſiſtances which he is no way bound to give them. Acts 14. 16. He ſuffered all Nations to walk in their own ways. And yet ſhould he permit ſinful Creatures to act out all the wickedneſs that is in their hearts, there would neither remain peace nor order in the World. And therefore,

He powerfully reſtrains Creatures by the bridle of Providence, from the commiſſion of thoſe things to which their hearts are propenſe enough. Pſal. 76. 10. The remainder of wrath thou wilt reſtrain, or gird up; letting forth juſt ſo much as ſhall ſerve his holy ends, and no more. And truly this is one of the glorious myſteries of Providence, which amazes the ſerious and conſiderate Soul; to ſee the Spirit of a Creature fully ſet to do miſchiefs; Power enough, as one would think, in his hand to do it, and a door of opportunity ſtanding open for it; and yet the effect ſtrangely hindred. The ſtrong propenſions of the Will are inwardly check'd, as in the caſe of Laban, Gen. 31. 24. or a diverſion and rub is ſtrangely caſt in their way; as in the caſe of Senacherib, 2 Kings 19. 7, 8. ſo that their hands cannot perform their enterprizes. Julian had two great deſigns before him, one was to conquer the Perſians, the other to root out the Galileans, as he by way of contempt called the Chriſtians: But he will begin with the Perſians firſt, and then make a Sacrifice of all the

Chriſtians to his Idols. He doth ſo, and periſhes in the firſt attempt. O the wiſdom of Providence!

4. Jeſus Chriſt limits the Creatures in their acting, aſſigning them their boundaries and lines of liberty; to which they may, but beyond it cannot go. Rev. 2. 10. Fear none of thoſe things that ye ſhall ſuffer; behold, the Devil ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon, and ye ſhall have tribulation for ten days. They would have caſt them into their graves, but it ſhall only be into priſons: They would have ſtretch'd out their hands upon them all; no, but only ſome of them ſhall be expoſed: They would have kept them there perpetually; no, it muſt be but for ten days. Ezek. 22. 6. Behold, the Princes of Iſrael were in thee, every one to their power to ſhed blood. They went as far as they had power to go, not as far as they had will to go. Four hundred and thirty years were determined upon the people of God in Egypt; and then, even in that very night, God brought them forth; for then the time of the promiſe was come, Acts 7. 17.

5. The Lord Jeſus providentially protects his People amidſt a world of enemies and dangers. It was Chriſt that appeared unto Moſes in the flaming Buſh, and preſerved it from being conſumed. The Buſh ſignified the People of God in Egypt: The Fire flaming on it, the exquiſite Sufferings they there endured: The Safety of the Buſh amidſt the flames, the Lord's admirable care and protection of his poor ſuffering ones. None ſo tenderly careful as Chriſt. As birds flying, ſo be defends Jeruſalem, Iſa. 31. 5. i. e. as they fly ſwiftly towards their neſts, crying when their young are in danger, ſo will the Lord preſerve his. They are preſerved in Chriſt Jeſus, Jude 1. as Noah and his family were in the Ark. Hear how a Worthy of our own expreſſes himſelf upon this point.

Dr. Owen in his in-dwelling Sin, p. 200.

'That we are at peace in our houſes, at reſt in our beds; that we have any quiet in our enjoyments, is from hence alone. Whoſe perſon would not be defiled or deſtroyed? Whoſe habitation would not be ruined? Whoſe blood almoſt would not be ſhed, if wicked men had power to perpetrate all their conceived ſin? It may be, the ruin of ſome of us hath been conceived a thouſand times. We are beholden to this Providence of obſtructing ſin, for our lives, our families, our eſtates, our liberties, and whatſoever is or may be dear to us. For may we not ſay ſometimes with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 57. 4. My Soul is among Lions, and I lye even among them that are ſet on fire, even the ſons of men, whoſe teeth are ſpears, and their tongue a ſharp ſword? And how is the deliverance of men contrived from ſuch perſons? Pſal. 8. 6. God breaks their teeth in their mouths, even the great teeth of the young Lions. He keeps this fire from burning,—— ſome he cuts off and deſtroys: Some he cuts ſhort in their power: Some he deprives of the inſtruments whereby alone they can work: Some he prevents of their deſired opportunities, or diverts by other objects for their luſts; and oftentimes cauſeth them to ſpend them among themſelves, one upon another. We may ſay therefore with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 104. 24. O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all; the Earth is full of thy Riches.

6. He puniſhes the evil doers, and repays by Providence into their own lap the miſchief they do, or but intend to do unto them that fear him. Pharaoh, Senacherib, both the Julians, and innumerable more, are the laſting monuments of his righteous Retribution. 'Tis true, a ſinner may do evil a hundred times, and his days be prolonged; but oft-times God hangs up ſome eminent Sinners in chains, as ſpectacles and warnings to others. Many a heavy blow hath Providence given the enemies of God, which they were never able to claw off. Chriſt rules, and that with a rod of Iron, in the midſt of his enemies, Pſal. 110. 2.

7. And Laſtly, He rewards by Providence the ſervices done to him and his people. Out of this treaſure of Providence God repays oftentimes thoſe that ſerve him, and that with a hundredfold reward now in this life, Mat. 19. 29. This active vigilant Providence hath its eye upon all the wants, ſtraits and troubles of the Creatures; but eſpecially upon ſuch as Religion brings us unto. What huge volumes of Experiences might the people of God write upon this Subject? And what a pleaſant Hiſtory would it be to read the ſtrange, conſtant, wonderful, and unexpected actings of Providence for them that have ſet themſelves to its care?

Secondly, We ſhall next enquire how Jeſus Chriſt adminiſters this providential Kingdom.

And here I muſt take notice of the means by which, and the manner in which he doth it. The means or inſtruments he uſes in the governing the providential Kingdom, (for he cannot be perſonally preſent with us himſelf) are either Angels or Men; the Angels are miniſtring Creatures ſent forth by him for the good of them that ſhall be the heirs of Salvation, Heb. 1. 14. Luther tells us they have two offices, ſuperius canere, & inferius vigilare, to ſing above, and watch beneath. Theſe do us many inviſible offices of Love. They have dear and tender reſpects and love for the Saints. To them, God, as it were, puts forth his Children to nurſe, and they are tenderly careful of them whilſt they live, and bring them home in their arms to their Father when they die. And as Angels, ſo Men are the ſervants of Providence; yea, bad men as well as good. Cyrus on that account is called God's Servant: they fulfil his will, whilſt they are proſecuting their own luſts. The Earth ſhall help the Woman, Rev. 12. 16. But good Men delight to ſerve Providence: They and the Angels are Fellow-ſervants in one houſe, and to one maſter, Rev. 19. 10. Yea, there is not a Creature in Heaven, or Earth, or Hell, but Jeſus Chriſt can providentially uſe it, and ſerve his ends, and promote his deſigns by it. But whatever the Inſtrument be Chriſt uſes, of this we may be certain, that his providential working is holy, judicious, ſovereign, profound, irreſiſtible, harmonious, and to the Saints peculiar.

1. It's holy. Tho' he permits, limits, orders, and over-rules many unholy perſons and actions, yet he ſtill works like himſelf, moſt holily and purely throughout. The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works, works, Pſal. 145. 17. it's eaſier to ſeparate Light from a Sun-beam, than Holineſs from the Works of God. The beſt of Men cannot eſcape Sin in their moſt holy actions; they cannot touch, but are defiled. But no Sin cleaves to God, whatever he hath to do about it.

Non cæco impetu volvuntur rotæ.

2. Chriſt's providential working is not only moſt pure and holy, but alſo moſt wiſe and judicious. Ezek. 1. 20. The wheels are full of eyes: They are not moved by a blind Impetus, but in deep Counſel and Wiſdom. And indeed the Wiſdom of Providence manifeſts it ſelf principally in the choice of ſuch ſtates for the People of God, as ſhall moſt effectually promote their internal happineſs. And herein it goes quite beyond our underſtandings and comprehenſions. It makes that medicinal and ſalutiferous, which we judge as deſtructive to our comfort and good as Poiſon. I remember it is a note of Suarez, ſpeaking of the Felicity of the other World; then (ſaith he) the bleſſed ſhall ſee in God all things and circumſtances pertaining to them excellently accommodated and attempered; then they ſhall ſee that the croſſing of their deſires was the ſaving of their Souls; and that otherwiſe they had periſhed. The moſt wiſe Providence looks beyond us. It eyes the end, and ſuits all things thereto, and not to our fond deſires.

Beatus in Deo videt res omnes accommodatas ad ſe pertinentes, & omnes circumſtantiis accommodatas. Suarez.

3. The Providence of Chriſt is moſt ſupream and ſovereign. Whatſoever he pleaſeth, that he doth in Heaven and Earth, and in all places, Pſal. 135. 6. He is the Lord of Lords, and King of Kings, Rev. 19. 16. The greateſt Monarchs on Earth are but as little bits of Clay, as the Worms of the Earth to him; they all depend on him. Prov. 8. 15, 16. By me Kings reign, and Princes decree Juſtice: by me Princes rule, Nobles, even all the Judges of the Earth.

Caput ejus aurum auri, quo ſignificatur præcellens ſuper omnia dignitas regni Chriſti. Aurum enim in capite eſt inſigne regium, ex quo Coronæ fiunt; igitur aurum auri perinde valere videtur, atque Rex Regum. Brightman in Cant.

4. Providence is profound and inſcrutable. The Judgments of Chriſt are as the great deeps, and his footſteps are not known, Pſal. 36. 6. There are hard Texts in the Works as well as in the Words of Chriſt. The wiſeſt Heads have been at a loſs in interpreting ſome Providences. Jer. 12. 1, 2. Job 21. 7. The Angels had the hands of a Man under their wings, Ezek. 1. 8. i. e. they wrought ſecretly and myſteriouſly.

Per montes intelligat arcanum Dei conſilium. Calv.

5. Providence is irreſiſtible in its deſign and motions; for all Providences are but the fulfillings and accompliſhments of God's immutable Decrees: Eph. 1. 11. He works all things according to the counſel of his own will. Hence Zech. 6. 1. the inſtruments by which God executed his wrath, are called Chariots coming from betwixt two mountains of Braſs, i. e. the firm and immutable Decrees of God. When the Jews put Chriſt to death, they did but do what the hand and counſel of God hath before determined to be done, Acts 4. 28. ſo that none can oppoſe or reſiſt Providence. I will work, and who ſhall let it? Iſa. 43. 13.

Firmiſſima & inſcrutabilia Dei conſilia. Druſius.

6. The Providences of Chriſt are harmonious. There are ſecret chains, and inviſible connections betwixt the works of Chriſt. We know not how to reconcile Promiſes and Providences together, nor yet Providences one with another: but certainly they all work together, Rom. 8. 28. as adjuvant cauſes, or con-cauſes ſtanding under, and working by the influence of the firſt Cauſe. He doth not do, and undo; deſtroy by one Providence what he built by another. But look, as all Seaſons of the year, the nipping Froſts, as well as Halcion days of Summer, do all conſpire and conduce to the Harveſt; ſo it is in Providence.

7. And Laſtly, The Providences of Chriſt work in a ſpecial and peculiar way, for the good of the Saints. His providential is ſubordinate to his ſpiritual Kingdom. He is the Saviour of all Men, eſpecially of them that believe, 1 Tim. 4. 10. Theſe only have the bleſſing of Providence. Things are ſo laid and ordered, as that their eternal good ſhall be promoted and ſecured by all that Chriſt doth.

Inference 1. If ſo, See then in the firſt place, to whom you are beholden for your lives, liberties, comforts, and all that you enjoy in this world. Is it not Chriſt that takes order for you? He is indeed in Heaven, out of your ſight; but tho' you ſee him not, he ſees you, and takes care of all your concerns. When one told Silentiarius of a plot laid to take away his life, he anſwered, Si Deus mei curam non habet, quid vivo? If God take no care of me, how do I live? how have I eſcaped hitherto? In all thy ways acknowledge him, Prov. 3. 6. It's he that hath eſpied out that ſtate thou art in, as moſt proper for thee. It's Chriſt that doth all for you that is done. He looks down from Heaven upon all that fear him; he ſees when you are in danger by Temptation, and caſt into a Providence you know not how, to hinder it. He ſees when you are ſad, and orders reviving Providences to refreſh you. He ſees when Corruptions prevail, and orders humbling Providences to purge them. Whatever Mercies you have received all along the way you have gone hitherto, are the orderings of Chriſt for you. And you ſhould carefully obſerve how the Promiſes and Providences have kept equal pace with one another, and both gone ſtep by ſtep with you until now.

Inference 2. Hath God left the government of the whole World in the hands of Chriſt, and truſted him over all? Then do you alſo leave all your particular concerns in the hands of Chriſt too, and know that the infinite Wiſdom and Love which rules the World, manages every thing that relates to you. It is in a good hand, and infinitely better than if it were in your own. I remember when Melanchton was under ſome deſpondencies of ſpirit about the eſtate of God's people in Germany, Luther chides him thus for it, Deſinat Philippus eſſe rector mundi, let Philip ceaſe to rule the World. It's none of our work to ſteer the courſe of Providence, or direct its motions, but to ſubmit quietly to him that doth. There is an itch in Men, yea, in the beſt of Men, to be diſputing with God: Let me talk with thee of thy Judgments, ſaith Jeremy, ch. 12. 1, 2. Yea, how apt are we to regret at Providences, as if they had no conducency at all to the glory of God, or to our good, Exod. 5. 22. yea, to limit Providence to our way and time? Thus the Iſraelites tempted God, and limited the Holy One, Pſal. 68. 18, 41. How often alſo do we unbelievingly diſtruſt Providence, as tho' it could never accompliſh what we profeſs to expect and believe? Ezek. 37. 11. Our bones are dry, our hope is loſt; we are cut off for our part. So Gen. 18. 13, 14. Iſa. 40. 17. There are but few Abrahams among Believers, who againſt hope, believed in hope, giving glory to God, Rom. 4. 20. And it is but too common for good Men to repine and fret at Providence, when their Wills, Luſts, or Humours are croſſed by it: This was the great Sin of Jonah. Brethren, theſe things ought not to be ſo. Did you but ſeriouſly conſider, either the deſign of Providence, which is to bring about the gracious Deſigns and Purpoſes of God upon you, which were laid before this World was, Epheſ. 1. 11. or that it is a lifting up of thy Wiſdom againſt his, as if thou couldſt better order thine Affairs, if thou hadſt but the conduct and management of them; or that you have to do herein with a great and dreadful God, in whoſe hands you are as the Clay in the Potter's hand, that may do what he will with you, and all that is yours, without giving you an account of any of his matters, Job 33. 13. or whether Providence hath caſt others, as good by Nature as your ſelves, tumbled them down from the top of Health, Wealth, Honours and Pleaſures, to the bottom of Hell: Or, laſtly, did you but conſider how often it hath formerly baffled and befool'd your ſelves; made you retract with ſhame, your raſh headlong cenſures of it; and enforced you, by the ſight of its Births and Iſſues, to confeſs your folly and ignorance, as Aſaph did, Pſal. 73. 22. I ſay, if ſuch conſiderations as theſe could but have place with you in your Troubles and Temptations, they would quickly mould your hearts into a better and more quiet frame.

O that I could but perſwade you to reſign all to Chriſt. He is a cunning Workman, as he is called, Prov. 8. 30. and can effect what he pleaſeth. It's a good Rule; Da operibus Dei non eſt judicandum, ante quintum actum. Let God work out all that he intends, have but patience till he hath put the laſt hand to his work, and then find fault with it if you can: You have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord, Jam. 5. 11.

Inference 3. If Chriſt be Lord and King over the providential Kingdom, and that for the good of his People, let none that are Chriſt's henceforth ſtand in a ſlaviſh fear of Creatures. It's a good Note that Grotius hath upon my Text; it's a marvellous Conſolation, (ſaith he) that Chriſt hath ſo great an Empire, and that he governs it for the good of his People, as a Head conſulting the good of the Body. Our Head and Husband is Lord-General of all the Hoſts of Heaven and Earth; no Creature can move hand or tongue without his leave or order; the Power they have is given them from above, Joh. 19. 11, 12. The ſerious conſideration of this Truth will make the feebleſt Spirit ceaſe trembling, and fall a ſinging; Pſal. 47. 7. The Lord is King of all the Earth, ſing ye praiſes with underſtanding: That is, (as ſome well paraphraſe it) every one that hath underſtanding of this comfortable Truth. Hath he not given you abundant ſecurity in many expreſs Promiſes, that all ſhall iſſue well for you that fear him? Rom. 8. 28. All things ſhall work together for good, to them that love God. And Eccleſ. 8. 12. verily it ſhall be well with them that fear God, even with them that fear before him. And ſuppoſe he had not, yet the very underſtanding of our relation to ſuch a King, ſhould in it ſelf be ſufficient ſecurity: For he is the (a) univerſal, (b) ſupream, (c) abſolute, (d) meek and merciful, (e) victorious, and (f) immortal King.

Duo habet ſignificata, artificem probatum, & artificem in arte ſua excellentem. Glaſ. Magna conſolatio, quod tantum imperium habet is, quid exercet Eccleſiæ bono, ſicut caput conſulit corpori. Grotius.

He ſits in glory at the Father's right hand; and to make his Seat the eaſier, his Enemies are a footſtool for him. His love to his People is unſpeakably tender and fervent; he that touches them, touches the apple of his Eye, Zech. 2. And it's hardly imaginable that Jeſus Chriſt will ſit ſtill, and ſuffer his Enemies to thruſt out his eyes. Till this be forgotten, the wrath of Man is not feared; Iſa. 51. 12, 13. He that fears a Man that ſhall die, forgets the Lord his Maker. He loves you too well to ſign any Order to your prejudice, and without his order none can touch you.

See my Saint indeed. p. 70. &c.

Inference 4. If the Government of the World be in the hands of Chriſt, then our engaging and entitling of Chriſt to all our Affairs and Buſineſs, is the true and ready way to their ſucceſs and proſperity. If all depend upon his Pleaſure, then ſure it's your wiſdom to take him along with you to every action and buſineſs; it's no loſt time that's ſpent in Prayer, wherein we ask his leave, and beg his preſence with us: And take it for a clear Truth, that which is not prefaced with Prayer, will be followed with Trouble. How eaſily can Jeſus Chriſt daſh all your deſigns when they are at the very birth and article of execution, and break off in a moment all the purpoſes of your hearts? It's a Proverb among the Papiſts, that Maſs and Meat hinder no Man. The Turks will pray five times a day, how urgent ſoever their buſineſs be. Bluſh you that enterprize your Affairs without God: I reckon that buſineſs as good as done, to which we have gotten Chriſt's leave, and engaged his Preſence to accompany us to it.

Inference 5. Laſtly, Eye Chriſt in all the events of Providence; ſee his hand in all that befals you, whether it be evil or good. The Works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all them that have Pleaſure therein, Pſal. 111.

2. How much good might we get, by obſervation of the good or evil that befals us throughout our courſe!

1. In all the Evils of trouble and afflictions that befal you, eye Jeſus Chriſt in all; and ſet your hearts to the ſtudy of theſe four things in affliction.

(1.) Study his Sovereignty and Dominion; for he creates and forms them: They riſe not out of the Duſt, nor do they befal you cauſually; but he raiſes them up, and gives them their Commiſſion, Jer. 18. 11. Behold, I create evil, and deviſe device againſt you. He elects the Inſtrument of your trouble; he makes the Rod as afflictive as he pleaſeth; he orders the continuance and end of your troubles; and they will not ceaſe to be afflictive to you, till Chriſt ſay, Leave off, it is enough. The Centurion wiſely conſidered this, when he told him, Luke 7. 8. I have Soldiers under me, and I ſay to one, Go, and he goeth, to another, Come, and he cometh: Meaning, that as his Soldiers were at his beck and command, ſo Diſeaſes were at Chriſt's beck, to come and go as he ordered them.

(2.) Study the Wiſdom of Chriſt in the contrivance of your Troubles. And his Wiſdom ſhines out many ways in them; It's evident in chuſing ſuch kinds of troubles for you; this, and not that, becauſe this is more apt to work upon, and purge out the corruption that moſt predominates in you: In the degrees of your troubles, ſuffering them to work to ſuch a height, elſe not reach their end; but no higher, leſt they overwhelm you.

(3.) Study the tenderneſs and compaſſions of Chriſt over his afflicted. O think if the Devil had but the mixing of my Cup, how much more bitter would he make it! There would not be one drop of Mercy, no, not of ſparing Mercy in it, which is the loweſt of all ſorts of Mercy: But here is much Mercy mixed with my Troubles; there is Mercy in this, that it is no worſe. Am I afflicted? It's the Lord's Mercy I am not conſumed, Lam. 3. 22. It might have been Hell as well as this; there is Mercy in his ſupports under it. Others have, and I might have been left to ſink and periſh under my burdens. Mercy, in deliverance out of it; this might have been everlaſting darkneſs, that ſhould never have had a morning. O the tenderneſs of Chriſt over his afflicted!

(4.) Study the Love of Chriſt to thy Soul in affliction. Did he not love thee, he would not ſanctifie a Rod to humble or reduce thee, but let thee alone to rot and periſh in thy Sin. Rev. 3. 19. Whom I love, I rebuke and chaſten. This is the device of Love, to recover thee to thy God, and prevent thy ruin. O what an advantage would it be thus to ſtudy Chriſt, in all your Evils that befal you!

2. Eye and ſtudy Chriſt in all the Good you receive from the hand of Providence. Turn both ſides of your Mercies, and view them in all their lovely Circumſtances.

(1.) Eye them in their ſuitableneſs; how conveniently Providence hath ordered all things for thee. Thou haſt a narrow heart, and a ſmall eſtate ſuitable to it: Hadſt thou more of the World, it would be like a large Sail to a little Boat, which would quickly pull thee under water: Thou haſt that which is moſt ſuitable to thee of all conditions.

(2.) Eye the ſeaſonableneſs of thy Mercies, how they are timed to an hour. Providence brings forth all its Fruits in due ſeaſon.

(3.) Eye the peculiar Nature of thy Mercies. Others have common, thou ſpecial ones; others have but a ſingle, thou a double ſweetneſs in thy enjoyments, one natural from the matter of it, another ſpiritual from the way in which, and end for which it comes.

(4.) Obſerve the Order in which Providence ſends your Mercies. See how one is linked ſtrangely to another, and is a door to let in many. Sometimes one Mercy is introductive to a thouſand.

(5.) And Laſtly, Obſerve the conſtancy of them, they are new every morning, Lam. 3. 23. How aſſiduouſly doth God viſit thy Soul and Body! Think with thy ſelf, if there be but a ſuſpenſion of the Care of Chriſt for one hour, that hour would be thy ruin. Thouſand of Evils ſtand round about thee, watching when Chriſt will but remove his eye from thee, that they may ruſh in, and devour thee.

Could we thus ſtudy the Providence of Chriſt in all the good and evil that befals us in the World, then in every ſtate we ſhould be content, Phil. 4. 11. Then we ſhould never be ſtopt, but furthered in our way by all that falls out; then would our Experiences ſwell to great Volumes, which we might carry to Heaven with us; and then ſhould we anſwer all Chriſt's Ends in every ſtate he brings us into. Do this, and ſay, Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SERMON XVIII.

PHIL. II. 8.

And being found in faſhion as a Man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient to Death, even the Death of the Croſs.

Ser. 18. Opens he neceſſity of Chriſt's Humiliation, n order o the execution of all heſe his leſſed Offices or us; nd particularly f his Humiliation y Incarnation.

YOU have heard how Chriſt was inveſted with the Offices of Prophet, Prieſt, and King, for the carrying on the bleſſed Deſign of our Redemption; the execution of theſe Offices neceſſarily required that he ſhould be both deeply abaſed, and highly exalted. He cannot as our Prieſt offer up himſelf a Sacrifice to God for us, except he be humbled, and humbled to death. He cannot as a King powerfully apply the virtue of that his Sacrifice, except he be exalted, yea, highly exalted. Had he not ſtooped to the low eſtate of a Man, he had not as a Prieſt had a Sacrifice of his own to offer; as a Prophet, he had not been fit to teach us the Will of God, ſo as that we ſhould be able to bear it; as a King, he had not been a ſuitable Head to the Church: And had he not been highly exalted, that Sacrifice had not been carried within the Vail before the Lord. Thoſe diſcoveries of God could not have been univerſal, effectual and abiding. The Government of Chriſt could not have ſecured, protected and defended the Subjects of his Kingdom.

The infinite Wiſdom proſpecting all this, ordered that Chriſt ſhould firſt be deeply humbled, then highly exalted: Both which ſtates of Chriſt are preſented to us by the Apoſtle in this Context.

He that intends to build high, lays the foundation deep and low. Chriſt muſt have a diſtinct glory in Heaven, tranſcending that of Angels and Men, (for the Saints will know him from all others by his Glory, as the Sun is known from the leſſer Stars) And as he muſt be exalted infinitely above them, ſo he muſt firſt, in order thereunto, be humbled and abaſed as much below them: His form was marr'd more than any Man's, and his viſage more than the Sons of Men. The ground-colours are a deep Sable, which afterward are laid on with all the ſplendor and glory of Heaven.

Method requires that we firſt ſpeak to this ſtate of Humiliation.

And to that purpoſe I have read this Scripture to you which preſents you the Sun under an (almoſt) total Eclipſe. He that was beautiful and glorious, Iſa. 4. 2. yea, glorious as the only begotten of the Father, John 1. 14. yea, the glory, James 2. 1. yea, the ſplendor and brightneſs of the Father's glory, Heb. 1. 3. was ſo vail'd, clouded, and debaſed, that he looked not like himſelf, a God, no, nor ſcarce as a Man, for with reference to this humbled ſtate it is ſaid, Pſal. 22. 6. I am a Worm, and no Man; q. d. rather write me Worm, than Man: I am become an object among Men, as that word Iſa. 53. 3. ſignifies. This Humiliation of Chriſt we have here expreſſed, in the nature, degrees, and duration or continuance of it.

Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τῆς δόξης, ἀπαύγασμα τῆς δόξης
Deriſio virorum, abjectus inter viros. Montanus.

1. The nature of it, ἐταπείνωσεν ἑαυτὸν, he humbled himſelf. The word imports both a real and voluntary abaſement. Real, he did not perſonate a humbled Man, nor act the part of one in a debaſed ſtate, but was really and indeed humbled; and that not only before Men, but God. As Man he was humbled really, as God in reſpect of his manifeſtive Glory. And as it was real, ſo alſo voluntary: It is not ſaid he was humbled, but he humbled himſelf; he was willing to ſtoop to this low and abject ſtate for us. And indeed the voluntarineſs of his Humiliation made it moſt acceptable to God, and ſingularly commends the love of Chriſt to us, that he would chuſe to ſtoop to all this ignominy, ſufferings and abaſement for us.

Loquitur autem non de ſimulata & hypocritica humiliatione, ſed de vera & ſincera. Zanch. in loc.
Non ab alio fuit humiliatus, ſicut angeli mali à Deo præcipitati in barathrum infernale; ſed humiliavit ſeipſum. Ib.

2. The degrees of his Humiliation; it was not only ſo low as to become a Man, a Man under Law; but he humbled himſelf to become obedient to Death, even the Death of the Croſs. Here you ſee the depth of Chriſt's Humiliation, both ſpecified, it was unto death; and agravated, even the death of the Croſs: Not only to become a Man, but a dead Corps, and that too hanging on a Tree, dying the death of a Malefactor.

3. The duration, or continuance of this his Humiliation: It continued from the firſt moment of his Incarnation, to the very moment of his vivification and quickning in the Grave. So the terms of it are fixed here by the Apoſtle; from the time he was found in faſhion as a Man, that is, from his Incarnation unto his death on the Croſs, which alſo comprehends the time of his abode in the Grave; ſo long his Humiliation laſted. Hence the Obſervation is,

Doct. That the ſtate of Chriſt, from his Conception to his Reſurrection, was a ſtate of a deep Abaſement and Humiliation.

We are now entring upon Chriſt's humbled ſtate, which I ſhall caſt under three general Heads, viz. his Humiliation in his Incarnation, in his Life, and in his Death. My preſent work is to open Chriſt's Humiliation in his Incarnation, imported in theſe words, He was found in faſhion as a Man. By which you are not to conceive that he only aſſumed a Body, as an aſſiſting form to appear tranſiently to us in it, and ſo lay it down again. It is not ſuch an apparition of Chriſt in the ſhape of a Man, that is here intended; but his true and real aſſumption of our Nature, which was a ſpecial part of his Humiliation; as will appear by the following Particulars.

His paucis verbis confirmat quæ ante dixerat, de vera hominis natura (quam μορφὴν δούλου vocavit) à Filio Dei in unitatem perſonæ aſſumpta; qua ſimilis per omnia, excepto peccato, factus eſt hominibus. Zanch.

1. The Incarnation of Chriſt was moſt a wonderful Humiliation of him, inaſmuch as thereby He is brought into the Rank and Order of Creatures, who is over all, God bleſſed for ever, Rom. 9. 5. This is the aſtoniſhing Myſtery, 1 Tim. 3. 16. That God ſhould be manifeſt in the Fleſh; that the eternal God ſhould truly and properly be called the MAN Chriſt Jeſus, 1 Tim. 2. 5. It was a wonder to Solomon that God would dwell in that ſtately and magnificent Temple at Jeruſalem, 2 Chron. 6. 18. But will God in very deed dwell with Men on the Earth! Behold the Heaven, and Heaven of Heavens, cannot contain thee; how much leſs this houſe which I have built? But it's a far greater wonder, that God ſhould dwell in a Body of Fleſh, and pitch his Tabernacle with us, Joh. 1. 14. It would have ſeemed a rude Blaſphemy, had not the Scriptures plainly revealed it, to have thought, or ſpoken of the eternal God, as born in time; the World's Creator, as a Creature; the Antient of Days, as an Infant of Days.

The Heathen Chaldeans told the King of Babel that the dwelling of the gods is not with Fleſh, Dan. 2. 11. But now God not only dwells with Fleſh, but dwells in Fleſh; yea, was made Fleſh, and dwelt among us.

For the Sun to fall from its Sphere, and be degraded into a wandring Atome; for an Angel to be turned out of Heaven, and be converted into a ſilly Fly, or Worm, had been no ſuch great Abaſement; for they were but Creatures before, and ſo they ſhould abide ſtill, tho' in an inferiour Order or Species of Creatures. The diſtance betwixt the higheſt and loweſt Species of Creatures, is but a finite diſtance. The Angel and the Worm dwell not ſo far aſunder. But for the infinite glorious Creator of all things, to become a Creature, is a Myſtery exceeding all human underſtanding. The diſtance betwixt God, and the higheſt order of Creatures, is an infinite diſtance. He is ſaid to humble himſelf, to behold the things that are done in Heaven. What a Humiliation then is it, to behold the things in the lower World! But to be born into it, and become a Man! Great indeed is the Myſtery of Godlineſs. Behold (ſaith the Prophet, Iſa. 40. 15, 18.) The Nations are as the drop of a bucket, and are counted as the ſmall duſt of the ballance; he taketh up the Iſles as a very little thing. All Nations before him are as nothing, and they are accounted to him leſs than nothing, and vanity. If indeed this great and incomprehenſible Majeſty will himſelf ſtoop to the ſtate and condition of a Creature, we may eaſily believe that being once a Creature, he would expoſe himſelf to Hunger, Thirſt, Shame, Spitting, Death, or any thing but Sin. For that once being Man, he ſhould endure any of theſe things, is not ſo wonderful, as that he ſhould become a Man. This was the low ſtoop, a deep abaſement indeed.

2. It was a marvellous Humiliation to the Son of God, not only to become a Creature, but an Inferiour Creature, a Man, and not an Angel. Had he took the Angelical Nature, tho' it had been a wonderful abaſement to him, yet he had ſtaid (if I may ſo ſpeak) nearer his own Home, and been ſomewhat liker to a God, than now he appeared, when he dwelt with us: For Angels are the higheſt, and moſt excellent of all created Beings. For their Nature, they are pure Spirits; for their Wiſdom, Intelligencies; for their Dignity, they are called Principalities and Powers; for their Habitations, they are ſtiled the Heavenly Hoſt; and for their Imployment, it is to behold the Face of God in Heaven. The higheſt pitch, both of our Holineſs and Happineſs in the coming World, is expreſſed by this, we ſhall be ἰσάγγελοι, equal to the Angels, Luk. 20. 36. As Man is nothing to God, ſo he is much inferiour to the Angels; ſo much below them, that he is not able to bear the ſight of an Angel, tho' in a human ſhape, rendring himſelf as familiarly as may be to him, Judg. 13. 22. When the Pſalmiſt had compleated the Heavens, and viewed the Celeſtial Bodies, the glorious Luminaries, the Moon and Stars which God had made; he cries out, Pſal. 8. 5. What is Man, that thou art mindful of him, or the Son of Man, that thou viſiteſt him! Take Man at his beſt, when he came a perfect and pure piece out of his Maker's hand, in the ſtate of Innocency; yet he was inferiour to Angels. They always bare the Image of God in a more eminent degree than Man, as being wholly ſpiritual Subſtances, and ſo more livelily repreſenting God, than Man could do, whoſe noble Soul is immerſt in Matter, and cloſed up in Fleſh and Blood: Yet Chriſt chuſeth this inferior order and ſpecies of Creatures, and paſſeth by the Angelical Nature; Heb. 2. 16. He tock not to him the nature of Angels, but the ſeed of Abraham.

3. Moreover, Jeſus Chriſt did not only neglect the Angelical, and aſſume the Human Nature; but he alſo aſſumed the Human Nature, after Sin had blotted the original Glory of it, and wither'd up the beauty and excellency thereof. For he came not in our Nature before the Fall, whilſt as yet its Glory was freſh in it; but he came, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom. 8. 3. In the likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, i. e. in Fleſh that had the marks, and miſerable effects, and conſequents of Sin upon it. I ſay not that Chriſt aſſumed ſinful Fleſh, or Fleſh really defiled by Sin. That which was born of the Virgin was a holy thing. For by the power of the Higheſt, (whether by way of Manufacture, as ſome; or the energetical Command and Ordination of the Holy Ghoſt, as others; or by his Benediction and Bleſſing, I here diſpute not) that whereof the Body of Chriſt was to be formed, was ſo ſanctified that no taint or ſpot of original Pollution remained in it. But yet tho' it had not intrinſecal native Uncleanneſs in it, it had the effects of Sin upon it; yea, it was attended with the whole Troop of human Infirmities, that Sin at firſt let into our common nature, ſuch as Hunger, Thirſt, Wearineſs, Pain, Mortality, and all thoſe natural weakneſſes and evils that clog our miſerable Natures, and make them groan from day to day under them.

By reaſon whereof, tho' he was not a Sinner, yet he looked like one: And they that ſaw and converſed with him, took him for a Sinner, ſeeing all theſe effects of Sin upon him. In theſe things he came as near to Sin as his Holineſs could admit. O what a ſtoop was this! to be made in the likeneſs of Fleſh, tho' the innocent Fleſh of Adam, had been much; but to be made in the likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, the Fleſh of Sinners, Rebels; Fleſh, tho' not defiled, yet miſerably defaced by Sin; O what is this! and who can declare it! And indeed, if he will be a Mediator of Reconciliation, it was neceſſary it ſhould be ſo. It behoved him to aſſume the ſame nature that ſinned, to make ſatisfaction in it. Yea, theſe ſinleſs Infirmities were neceſſary to be aſſumed with the Nature; for as much as his bearing them was a part of his Humiliation, and went to make up ſatisfaction for us. Moreover, by them our High-Prieſt was qualified from his own experience, and filled with tender compaſſion to us.

But O the admirable condeſcenſions of a Saviour, to take ſuch a Nature! to put on ſuch a Garment when thread-bare and ragged! Did this become the Son of God to wear? O Grace unſearchable!

4. And yet more, by this his Incarnation he was greatly humbled, in as much as this his Incarnation ſo vailed, clouded, and diſguiſed him, that during the time he lived here, he looked not like himſelf, as God; but as a poor, ſorry, contemptible Sinner, in the eyes of the World; they ſcorned him. This fellow ſaid, Mat. 26. 61. Hereby he made himſelf of no reputation, Phil. 2. 6. It blotted his Honour and Reputation. By reaſon hereof he loſt all eſteem and honour from thoſe that ſaw him, Mat. 13. 55. Is not this the Carpenter's Son? To ſee a poor Man travelling up and down the Country, Hunger, Thirſt, Wearineſs, attended with a company of poor Men; one of his company bearing the Bag, and that which was put therein; Joh. 13. 29. Who that had ſeen him, would ever had thought this had been the Creator of the World, the Prince of the Kings of the Earth? He was deſpiſed, and we eſteemed him not. Now which of you is there that would not rather chuſe to endure ſuch Miſery as a Man, than to be degraded into a contemptible Worm, that every body treads upon, and no Man regards it? Chriſt looked ſo unlike a God in this habit, that he was ſcarce allowed the name of a Man; a Worm rather than a Man.

And think with your ſelves now, was not this aſtoniſhing Self-denial? That he who from Eternity had his Father's Smiles and Honours, he that from the Creation was adored, and worſhipped by Angels, as their God, muſt now become a Footſtool for every Miſcreant to tread on; and not to have the reſpects due to a Man; ſure this was a deep Abaſement. It was a black Cloud that for ſo many years darkned, and ſhut up his manifeſtative Glory, that it ſhould not ſhine out to the World; only ſome weak Rays of the Godhead ſhone to ſome few eyes, through the chinks of his Humanity: As the clouded Sun ſometimes opens a little, and caſts ſome faint beams, and is muffled up again. We ſaw his glory, as of the only begotten Son: but the World knew him not, Joh. 1. 14. If a Prince walk up and down in a diſguiſe, he muſt expect no more honour than a mean Subject. This was the caſe of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, this Diſguiſe made him contemptible, and an object of Scorn.

5. Again, Chriſt was greatly humbled by his Incarnation, in as much as thereby he was put at a diſtance from his Father, and that ineffable Joy and Pleaſure he eternally had with him. Think not, Reader, but the Lord Jeſus lived at a high and unimitable rate of Communion with God, while he walked here in the Fleſh: But yet to live by Faith as Chriſt here did, is one thing; and to be in the boſom of God, as he was before, is another thing. To have the ineffable Delights of God perpetuated and continued to him, without one moment's interruption from eternity, is one thing; and to have his Soul ſometimes filled with the Joy of the Lord, and then all overcaſt with clouds of Wrath again, to cry, and God not hear, as he complains, Pſal. 22. 2. nay, to be reduced to ſuch a low ebb of ſpiritual Comforts, as to be forced to cry out ſo bitterly, as he did, Pſal. 22. 1. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? This was a thing Chriſt was very unacquainted with, till he was found in habit as a Man.

6. And laſtly, It was a great ſtoop and condeſcenſion of Chriſt if he would become a Man, to take his Nature from ſuch obſcure Parents, and chuſe ſuch a low and contemptible ſtate in this World as he did. He will be born, but not of the Blood of Nobles, but of a poor Woman in Iſrael, eſpouſed to a Carpenter: yea, and that too, under all the diſadvantages imaginable; not in his Mother's Houſe, but an Inn; yea, in the Stable too. He ſuited all to that abaſed ſtate he was deſigned for; and came among us under all the humbling Circumſtances imaginable: You know the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, (ſaith the Apoſtle) how that tho' he was rich, yet for our ſakes became poor, 2 Cor. 8. 9. And thus I have ſhewn you ſome few particulars of Chriſt's Humiliation in his Incarnation. Next we ſhall infer ſome things from it that are practical.

Inference 1. Hence we gather the fulneſs and compleatneſs of Chriſt's Satisfaction, as the ſweet firſt fruits of his Incarnation. Did Man offend and violate the Law of God? Behold, God himſelf is become Man to repair that breach, and ſatisfie for the wrong done. The higheſt Honour that ever the Law of God received, was to have ſuch a Perſon as the Man Chriſt Jeſus is, to ſtand before its Bar, and make reparation to it. This is more than if it had poured out all our Blood, and built up its Honour upon the Ruins of the whole Creation.

It is not ſo much to ſee all the Stars in Heaven overcaſt, as to ſee one Sun eclipſed. The greater Chriſt was, the greater was his Humiliation; and the greater his Humiliation was, the more full and compleat was his Satisfaction; and the more compleatneſs there is in Chriſt's Satisfaction, the more perfect and ſteady is the Believer's Conſolation. If he had not ſtoopt ſo low, our Joy and Comfort could not be exalted ſo high. The depth of the Foundation, is the ſtrength of the Superſtructure.

Inference 2. Did Chriſt for our ſakes ſtoop from the Majeſty, Glory and Dignity he was poſſeſſed of in Heaven, to the mean and contemptible ſtate of a Man? What a Pattern of Self-denial is here preſented to Chriſtians? What objection againſt, or excuſes to ſhift off this Duty, can remain, after ſuch an Example as is here propounded? Brethren, let me tell you, the Pagan World was never acquainted with ſuch an Argument as this, to preſs them to Self-denial. Did Chriſt ſtoop, and cannot you ſtoop? Did Chriſt ſtoop ſo much, and cannot you ſtoop in the leaſt? Was he content to become any thing, a Worm, a Reproach, a Curſe; and cannot you digeſt any Abaſements? Do the leaſt ſlights and neglects rankle your Hearts, and poiſon them with Diſcontent, Malice and Revenge? O how unlike Chriſt are you! Hear, and bluſh in hearing, what your Lord ſaith in Joh. 13. 14. If I then your Lord and Maſter, waſh your Feet; ye alſo ought to waſh one another's Feet. The Example obliges not (as a learned Man well obſerves) to the ſame individual act, but it obliges us to follow the reaſon of the Example; that is, after Chriſt's Example we muſt be ready to perform the loweſt and meaneſt Offices of Love and Service to one another. And indeed to this it obliges moſt forcibly; for it is as if a Maſter ſeeing a proud ſturdy Servant, that grudges at the work he is employed about, as if it were too mean and baſe, ſhould come and take it out of his hand; and when he has done it, ſhould ſay, Doth not your Lord and Maſter think it beneath him to do it? And is it beneath you? I remember it is an excellent Saying that Bernard hath upon the Nativity of Chriſt; ſaith he, What more deteſtable, what more unworthy, or that deſerves ſeverer puniſhment, than for a poor Man to magnifie himſelf, after he hath ſeen the great and high God ſo humbled, as to become a little Child? It is intolerable impudence for a Worm to ſwell with Pride, after it hath ſeen Majeſty emptying it ſelf; to ſee one ſo infinitely above us, to ſtoop ſo far beneath us. O how convincing and ſhaming ſhould it be! Ah how oppoſite ſhould Pride and Stoutneſs be to the Spirit of a Chriſtian! I am ſure nothing is more ſo to the Spirit of Chriſt. Your Saviour was lowly, meek, ſelf-denying, and of a moſt condeſcending Spirit; he looked not at his own things, but yours, Phil. 2. 4. And doth it become you to be proud, ſelfiſh and ſtout? I remember Jerom in his Epiſtle to Pamachius, a godly young Noble-man, adviſeth him to be Obligas nos ad rationem exempli, magis quam ad individuum actum. Chamier. Tom. 3. l. 19. c. 7.

Quis magis indignum, quid deteſtandum amplius, quid gravius puniendum, quam ut videns Deum parvulum factum, homo ſe magnificet? Intolerabilis eſt impudentia, ut ubi ſeſe exinanivit majeſtas, vermiculus infletur, & intumeſcat. Bern. Serm. 1, de. Nativ.

Eyes to the blind, Feet to the lame; yea, ſaith he, if need be, I would not have you refuſe to cut Wood, and draw Water for the Saints: And what, ſaith he, is this to buffetting and ſpitting, to crowning with Thorns, ſcourging and dying! Chriſt did undergo all this, and that for the ungodly.

Inference 3. Did Chriſt ſtoop ſo low as to become a Man to ſave us? Then thoſe that periſh under the Goſpel muſt needs periſh without apology. What would you have Chriſt do more to ſave you? Lo, he hath laid aſide the Robes of Majeſty and Glory, put on your own Garments of Fleſh, came down from his Throne, and brought Salvation home to your own doors. Surely the lower Chriſt ſtooped to ſave us, the lower we ſhall ſink under wrath that neglect ſo great Salvation. The Lord Jeſus is brought low, but the Unbeliever will lay him yet lower, even under his feet; he will tread the Son of God under foot, Heb. 10. 28. For ſuch (as the Apoſtle there ſpeaks) is reſerved ſomething worſe than dying without Mercy. What Pleas and Excuſes others will make at the Judgment-ſeat, I know not; but once, it's evident, you will be ſpeechleſs. And as one well obſerves, the vileſt Sinners among the Gentiles, nay, the Devils themſelves, will have more to ſay for themſelves than you.

Vide Morning Exerciſe at St. Giles's in the Fields, p. 356.

I muſt be plain with you; I beſeech you conſider, how Jews, Pagans and Devils will riſe up in Judgment againſt you. The Jew may ſay, I had a legal Yoke upon me, which neither I nor my Fathers were able to bear; Chriſt invited me only into the Garden of Nuts, where I might ſooner break my Teeth with the hard Shells of Ceremonies, than get the Kernel of Goſpel-promiſes.——In the beſt of our Sacrifices, the Smoak filled our Temple; Smoak, only to provoke us to weep for a clearer Manifeſtation.——We had but the old Edition of the Covenant of Grace, in a Character very darkly intelligible: You have the laſt Edition, with a Commentary of our rejection, and the World's reception, and the Spirit's effuſion. You had all that Heart could wiſh.—— I periſh eternally, may the poor Pagan ſay, without all poſſibility of Reconciliation, and have only ſinned againſt the Covenant of Works; having never heard of a Goſpel-Covenant, nor of Reconciliation by a Mediator. O had I heard but one Sermon! Had Chriſt but once broke in upon my Soul, to convince me of my undone condition, and to have ſhewn a Righteouſneſs to me! But wo is me, I never had ſo much as one Offer of Chriſt. But ſo have I, muſt you ſay that refuſe the Goſpel: I have, or might have heard thouſands of Sermons: I could ſcarce eſcape hearing one or other ſhewing me the danger of my Sin, and my neceſſity of Chriſt. But notwithſtanding all I heard, I wilfully reſolved I would have nothing to do with him. I could not endure to hear Strictneſs preſt upon me: It was all the Hell I had upon Earth, that I could not ſin in quiet. Nay, may the Devil himſelf ſay, it's true, I was ever ſince my fall maliciouſly ſet againſt God: But alas! As ſoon I had ſinned, God kickt me out of Heaven, and told me he would never have Mercy upon me: And tho' I lived in the time of all manner of gracious Diſpenſations, I ſaw Sacrifices offered, and Chriſt in the Fleſh, and the Goſpel preached; yet how could all this chuſe but enrage me the more, to have God as it were ſay, Look here, Satan, I have provided a Remedy for Sin, but none for thine? This ſet me upon revenge againſt God, as far as I could reach him. But alas! Alas! Had God entred into any Covenant with me at all; had God put me on any terms, tho' never ſo hard, for the obtaining of Mercy; had Chriſt been but once offered to me, What do you think would I not have done? &c.

O poor Sinners! Your Damnation is juſt, if you refuſe Grace brought home by Chriſt himſelf to your very doors. The Lord grant this may not be thy caſe who readeſt theſe Lines.

Inference 4. Moreover, hence it follows, that none doth or can love like Chriſt: His Love to Man is matchleſs. The freeneſs, ſtrength, antiquity, and immutability of it, puts a luſtre on it beyond all Examples. Surely it was a ſtrong Love indeed, that made him lay aſide his Glory, to be found in faſhion as a Man, to become any thing, tho' never ſo much below himſelf, for our Salvation. We read of Jonathan's love to David, which paſſed the love of Women; of Jacob's love to Rachel, who for her ſake endured the heat of Summer, and cold of Winter; of David's love to Abſalom; of the Primitive Chriſtians love to one another, who could die one for another? But neither had they that to deny that Chriſt had, nor had he thoſe inducements from the Object of his Love that they had. His Love, like himſelf, is wonderful.

Inference 5. Did the Lord Jeſus ſo deeply abaſe and humble himſelf for us? What an engagement hath he thereby put on us, to exalt and honour him, who for our ſakes was ſo abuſed! It was a good ſaying of Bernard, By how much the viler he was made for me, by ſo much the dearer he ſhall be to me. And O that all to whom Chriſt is dear, would ſtudy to exalt and honour him theſe four ways.

Quanto pro me vilior, tanto mihi charior. Bern.

1. By frequent and delightful ſpeaking of him, and for him. When Paul had once mentioned his Name, he knows not how to part with it, but repeats it no leſs than ten times in the compaſs of ten Verſes, in 1 Cor. 1. It was Lambert's Motto, None but Chriſt, none but Chriſt. It is ſaid of Johannes Milius, that after his Converſion he was ſeldom or never obſerved to mention the Name Jeſus but his Eyes would drop; ſo dear was Chriſt to him. Mr. Fox never denied any Beggar that asked an Alms in Chriſt's name, or for Jeſus ſake. Julius Palmer, when all concluded he was dead, being turned as black as a Coal in the fire, at laſt moved his ſcorched Lips, and was heard to ſay, ſweet Jeſus, and fell aſleep. Plutarch tells us, that when Titus Flaminius had freed the poor Grecians from the Bondage with which they had been long ground by their Oppreſſors, and the Herauld was to proclaim in their audience the Articles of Peace he hath concluded for them, they ſo preſſed upon him, (not being half of them able to hear) that he was in great danger to have loſt his Life in the preſs; at laſt, reading them a ſecond time, when they came to underſtand diſtinctly how their caſe ſtood, they ſo ſhouted for Joy, crying, σωτὴρ, σωτὴρ, a Savia Saviour, a Saviour, that they made the very Heavens ring again with their Acclamations, and the very Birds fell down aſtoniſhed. And all that night the poor Grecians with Inſtruments of Muſick, and Songs of Praiſe, danced and ſang about his Tent, extolling him as a God that had delivered them. But ſurely you have more reaſon to be exalting the Author of your Salvation, who at a dearer rate hath freed you from a more dreadful Bondage. O ye that have eſcaped the eternal Wrath of God, by the Humiliation of the Son of God, extol your great Redeemer, and for ever celebrate his Praiſes!

2. By acting your Faith on him, for whatſoever lyes in the Promiſes yet unaccompliſht. In this you ſee the great and moſt difficult Promiſe fulfilled, Gen. 3. 15. The Seed of the Woman ſhall break the Serpent's Head; which contained this Mercy of Chriſt's Incarnation for us in it: I ſay, you ſee this fulfilled; and ſeeing that which was moſt improbable and difficult is come to paſs, even Chriſt come in the Fleſh, methinks our Unbelief ſhould be ſtrangled for ever, and all other Promiſes the more eaſily believed. It ſeemed much more improbable and impoſſible to Reaſon, that God ſhould become a Man, and ſtoop to the condition of a Creature, than being a Man, to perform all that good which his Incarnation and Death procured. Unbelief uſually argues from one of theſe two grounds, Can God do this? Or, will God do that? It's queſtioning either his Power or his Will; but after this, let it ceaſe for ever to cavil againſt either. His Power to ſave ſhould never be queſtioned by any, that know what Sufferings and infinite Burdens he ſupported in our Nature: And ſurely his willingneſs to ſave ſhould never be put to a queſtion by any that conſider how low he was content to ſtoop for our ſakes.

3. By drawing nigh to God with delight through the Vail of Chriſt's Fleſh, Heb. 10. 19. God hath made this Fleſh of Chriſt a Vail betwixt the brightneſs of his Glory and us: It ſerves to rebate the unſupportable Glory, and alſo to give admiſſion to it, as the Vail did in the Temple. Through this Body of Fleſh which Chriſt aſſumed, are all out-lets of Grace from God to us, and through it alſo muſt be all our returns to God again. It's made the great medium of our Communion with God.

Decurſus & recurſ gratiarum

4. By applying your ſelves to him under all Temptations, Wants and Troubles, of what kind ſoever, as to one that is tenderly ſenſible of your caſe, and moſt willing and ready to relieve you. O remember this was one of the Inducements that perſwaded and invited him to take your Nature, that he might be furniſhed abundantly with tender Compaſſion for you, from the ſenſe he ſhould have of your Infirmities in his own Body. Heb. 2. 27. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his Brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful High-Prieſt in things pertaining to God, to make Reconciliation for the Sins of the People. You know by this Argument the Lord preſſed the Iſraelites to be kind to Strangers; for (ſaith he) you know the Heart of a Stranger, Exod. 23. 9. Chriſt by being in our Nature, knows experimentally what our Wants, Fears, Temptations and Diſtreſſes are, and ſo is able to have compaſſion. O let your Hearts work upon this admirable Condeſcenſion of Chriſt, till they be filled with it, and your Lips ſay,

Haud ign ra malis, miſeris ſuccurrer diſco.

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SERMON XIX.

Serm. 19. Treats of Chriſt's Humiliation in his Life.

PHIL. II. 8.

And being found in faſhion as a Man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient to death, even the death of the Croſs.

THis Scripture hath been once already under conſideration; and indeed can never be enough conſidered: It holds forth the humbled ſtate of the Lord Jeſus, during the time of his abode on Earth. The ſum of it was delivered you before in this Point;

Doct. That the ſtate of Chriſt, from his Conception to his Reſurrection, was a ſtate of deep Abaſement and Humiliation.

The Humiliation of Chriſt was propoſed to under theſe three general Heads or Branches; of his Humiliation in his Incarnation, his Humiliation in his Life, and his Humiliation in his Death. How he was humbled by Incarnation, hath been opened above in the 18*th Sermon*. How he was humbled in his Life, is the deſign of this Sermon: Yet expect not that I ſhould give you here an exact Hiſtory of the Life of Chriſt. The Scriptures ſpeak but little of the private part of his Life, and it is not my deſign to dilate upon all the memorable Paſſages that the Evangeliſts (thoſe faithful Narrators of the Life of Chriſt) have preſerved for us, but only to obſerve and improve thoſe more obſervable Particulars in his Life, wherein eſpecially he was humbled: And ſuch are theſe that follow.

Firſt, The Lord Jeſus was humbled in his very Infancy, by his Circumciſion according to the Law. For being of the ſtock of Iſrael, he was to undergo the Ceremonies, and ſubmit to the Ordinances belonging to that People, and thereby to put an end to them; for ſo it became him to fulfil all Righteouſneſs. Luke 2. 21. And when eight days were accompliſhed for the circumciſing of the Child, his Name was called Jeſus. Hereby the Son of God was greatly humbled, eſpecially in theſe two reſpects.

1. In that hereby he obliged himſelf to keep the whole Law, tho' he were the Law maker. Gal. 5. 3. For I teſtifie again to every Man that is circumciſed, that he is a Debtor to do the whole Law. The Apoſtle's meaning is, he is a Debtor in regard of Duty, becauſe he that thinks himſelf bound to keep one part of the Ceremonial Law, doth thereby bind himſelf to keep it all; for where all the parts are inſeparably united, (as they are in the Law of God) we pull all upon us by engaging or meddling with any one. And he that is a Debtor in Duty to keep the whole Law, quickly becomes a Debtor in regard of Penalty, not being able to keep any part of it. Chriſt therefore coming as our Surety, to pay both thoſe Debts, the Debt of Duty, and the Debt of Penalty to the Law; he by his Circumciſion obliges himſelf to pay the whole Debt of Duty, by fulfilling all Righteouſneſs: And tho' his Obedience to it was ſo exact and perfect, that he contracted no Debt of Penalty for any Tranſgreſſion of his own; yet he obliges himſelf to pay that Debt of Penalty we had contracted, by ſuffering all the Pains due to Tranſgreſſors. This was that intolerable Yoke that none were able to bear but Chriſt, Acts 15. 10. And it was no ſmall abaſure of Chriſt, to bind himſelf to the Law as a Subject made under it; for he was the Law-giver, above all Law: And herein that Soveraignty of a God (one of the choice Flowers in the Crown of Heaven) was obſcured and vailed by his Subjection.

Circumciſus & oblatus fuit Chriſtus, quia ſubjiciebat ſe legi, non æternæ ſoli, & morali, ſed etiam Ceremoniali & cuilibet divinæ. Ames Med. p. 101.

2. Hereby he was repreſented to the World, not only as a Subject, but alſo as a Sinner: For tho' he was pure and holy, yet this Ordinance paſſing upon him, ſeeming to imply as if Corruption had indeed been in them, which muſt be cut off by Mortification. For this was the Myſtery principally intended by Circumciſion: It ſerved to mind and admoniſh Abraham and his Seed, of the natural guiltineſs, uncleanneſs and corruption of their Hearts and Natures. So Jer. 4. 4. Circumciſe your ſelves unto the Lord, and take away the foreskins of your Hearts, ye Men of Judah; i. e. the ſinfulneſs and corruption of them. Hence the rebellious and unmortified are called ſtiff-necked and uncircumciſed in Heart, as it is, Acts 7. 51. And as it ſerved to convince of natural Uncleanneſs, ſo it ſignified and ſealed the putting off the body of the Sins of the Fleſh, as the Apoſtle phraſeth it, Col. 2. 11. Now this being the End of God in the inſtitution of this Ordinance for Abraham and his ordinary Seed, Chriſt in his Infancy by ſubmitting to it, did not only vail his Soveraignty by Subjection, but was alſo repreſented as a Sinner to the World, the moſt holy and pure in himſelf.

Ceremoniales iſtius modi obſervationes, totidem fuerunt peccati confeſſiones: Chriſtus igitur, qui factus eſt peccatum pro nobis, congruenter etiam illis factus eſt conformis. Ames Med. p. 101.

Secondly, Chriſt was humbled by Perſecution, and that in the very morning of his Life: He was baniſh'd almoſt as ſoon as born. Mat. 2. 13. Flee into Egypt (ſaith the Angel to Joſeph) and be thou there until I bring thee word, for Herod will ſeek the young Child to deſtroy him. Ungrateful Herod! Was this Entertainment for a Saviour? What, raiſe the Country againſt him, as if a Deſtroyer, rather than a Saviour had landed upon the Coaſt? What, deny him the protection of thoſe Laws under which he was born, and that before he had broken the leaſt Punctilio of them? The Child of a Beggar may claim the benefit and protection of Law, as his Birth-right; and muſt the Son of God be denied it! But herein he fulfilled the Scriptures, whilſt venting his own Luſts; for ſo it was foretold, Jer. 31. 15. And this early Perſecution was not obſcurely hinted in the Title of the 22*d Pſalm*, that Pſalm which looks rather like a Hiſtory of the New, than a Prophecy of the Old Teſtament: For as it contains a moſt exact deſcription of Chriſt's Sufferings, ſo it's fitted with a moſt ſuitable Title; To the chief Muſician upon Aijeleth Shabar, which ſignifies the Hind of the Morning, or that Deer which the Hunter rouzes betimes in the morning, and ſingles out to hunt down that day; and ſo they did by him, as the 16*th* verſe will tell you; for (ſaith he) Dogs have compaſſed me, the Aſſembly of the wicked have encloſed me. Upon which Muſculus ſweetly and ingeniouſly deſcants: O what ſweet Veniſon (ſaith he) is the Fleſh of Chriſt! Abundantly ſweeter to the believing Soul, than that which the Nobles of this World eſteem moſt delicate: And leſt it ſhould want the higheſt and richeſt ſavour to a delicate Palat, Chriſt our Hart was not only killed, but hunted to the purpoſe before he was killed; even as great Men uſe by hunting and chaſing, before they cut the Throat of the Deer, to render its Fleſh more ſweet, tender and delicate: Thus was Chriſt hunted betimes out of the Country he was born in. And no doubt but where ſuch Dogs ſcent and wind the Spirit of Chriſt in any, they would purſue them alſo to Deſtruction, did not a gracious Providence rate them off. But to return, how great a Humiliation is this to the Son of God, not only to become an Infant, but in this Infancy to be hurried up and down, and driven out of his own Land as a Vagabond!

O verè cervinam Chriſti carnem, animæ fideli longe ſapidiorem eâ, quam hujus mundi nobilis in deliciis habent. Ac ne quid ſapori ac guſtui delicato deeſſet, non ſimpliciter occiſa eſt noſtra cerva, ſed antea bene agitata: quemadmodum ſolent magnates, venando & agitando, antequam capiant & occidant, carnem cervinam ſuaviorem, molliorem, ac delicatiorem reddere. Muſc. in loc.

Thirdly, Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was yet more humbled in his Life, by that poverty and outward meanneſs which all along attended his condition: He lived poor and low all his days, ſo ſpeaks the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Tho' he was rich, yet for our ſakes he became poor; ſo poor, that he was never owner of a Houſe to dwell in, but lived all his days in other Mens Houſes, or lay in the open Air. His outward Condition was more neglected and deſtitute than that of the Birds of the Air, or Beaſts of the Earth; ſo he told that Scribe, who profeſſed ſuch readineſs and reſolution to follow him, but was ſoon cool'd when Chriſt told him, Mat. 8. 20. The Foxes have holes, and the Birds of the Air have neſts; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his Head. It was a common ſaying among the Jews, When the Meſſiah comes, he will not find a place to ſit down in. Sometimes he feeds upon Barley-bread, and a broiled Fiſh; and ſometimes he was hungry, and had nothi[illegible]eat, Mark 11. 12. As for Money, he wa[illegible]uch a ſtranger to it; when the Tribute-money was demanded of him, he and Peter were not ſo well furniſhed to make half a Crown betwixt them to pay it, but muſt work a Miracle for it, Mat. 17. ult. He came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter, Mat. 20. 28. not to amaſs Earthly Treaſures, but to beſtow Heavenly ones. His great and heavenly Soul neglected and deſpiſed thoſe things, that too many of his own too much admire and proſecute. He ſpent not a careful thought about thoſe things, that eat up thouſands and ten thouſands of our Thoughts. Indeed he came to be humbled, and to teach Men by his Example the Vanity of this World, and pour Contempt upon the enſnaring Glory of it; and therefore went before us in a choſen and voluntary Poverty: Yet he lived not a mendicant Life neither; but was ſometimes fed by ordinary, and ſometimes by miraculous and extraordinary ways. He had wherewith to ſupport that precious Body of his, till the time was come to offer it up to God; but would not indulge and pamper that Fleſh, which he purpoſely aſſumed to be humbled in.

Paupertas Chriſti fruitſine voto ſingulari, & ſine mendicitate. Ames Med. p. 104.

Fourthly, Our dear Jeſus was yet further humbled in his Life, by the horrid Temptations wherewith Satan aſſaulted him, than which nothing could be more grievous to his holy Heart. The Evangeliſt gives us an account of this in Luke 4. from the firſt to the 14*th* Verſe: In which Context you find how the bold and envious Spirit meets the Captain of our Salvation in the Field, comes up with him in the Wilderneſs when he was ſolitary, and had not a Second with him, ver. 1. there he keeps him faſting forty days and forty nights, to prepare him to cloſe with his Temptation: All this while Satan was pointing and edging that Temptation, with which at laſt he reſolves to try the breaſt of Chriſt by a home-thruſt, ver. 2. By this time he ſuppoſes Chriſt was a hungry (as indeed he was) and now he thought it was time to make his aſſault, which he doth in a very ſuitable Temptation at firſt, and with variety of Temptations, trying ſeveral Weapons upon him afterwards. But when he had made a thruſt at him with that firſt Weapon, in which he eſpecially truſted, Command that theſe Stones be made Bread, ver. 3. and ſaw how Chriſt had put it by, ver. 4. then he changes poſtures, and aſſaults him with Temptations to Blaſphemy, even to fall down and worſhip the Devil. But when he ſaw he could faſten nothing on him, that he was as pure Fountain Water in a Chriſtal Vial, how much ſoever agitated and ſhaked, no Dregs, or filthy Sediment would riſe, but he remained pure ſtill: I ſay, ſeeing this, he makes a politick Retreat, quits the Field for a ſeaſon, ver. 13. yet leaves it cum animo revertendi, with a reſolution to return to him again. And thus was our bleſſed Lord Jeſus humbled by the Temptations of Satan; and what can you imagine more burdenſome to him that was brought up from Eternity with God, delighting in the holy Father, to be now ſhut into a Wilderneſs with a Devil, there to be baited ſo many days, and have his Ears filled, tho' not defiled, with horrid Blaſphemy? O how was the caſe [illegible]ed with Chriſt! from what, to what was he now come? A chaſte Woman would account it no common miſery to be dogg'd up and down, and ſollicited by ſome vile Ruffian, tho' there were no danger of Defilement.

Maxima & frequentiſſima tentandi occaſio illi eſt, quum rerum ſecularium appetentes & eſurientes non videt; ſicut Auceps rete ſuum præparat brumali potiſſimum tempore, quando non eſt quod aves comedant. Stapletonis prompt. p. 418.

Quantum mutatus ab illo?

A Man would account it no ſmall unhappineſs to be ſhut up five or ſix weeks together with the Devil, tho' appearing in a humane ſhape, and to hear no language but that of Hell ſpoken all that time: And the more holy the Man is, the more would he be afflicted to hear ſuch Blaſphemies malignantly ſpat upon the holy and reverent Name of God; much more to be ſollicited by the Devil, to join with him in it: This I ſay would be accounted no ſmall miſery for a Man to undergo. How great a Humiliation then muſt it be to the great God, to be humbled to this! to ſee a Slave of his Houſe, ſetting upon himſelf the Lord! His Jailor coming to take him Priſoner, if he can! A baſe Apoſtate Spirit, daring to attempt ſuch things as theſe upon him! Surely this was a deep abaſement to the Son of God.

Fifthly, Our bleſſed Lord Jeſus was yet more humbled in his Life than all this, and that by his own Sympathy with others, under all the burdens that made them groan. For he much more than Paul could ſay, Who is afflicted and I burn not? He lived all his time as it were in an Hoſpital among the ſick and wounded. And ſo tender was his Heart that every groan for Sin, or under the effects of Sin, pierced him ſo, that it was truly ſaid, himſelf bare our Sickneſſes, and took our Infirmities, Mat. 8. 16, 17. It was ſpoken upon the occaſion of ſome poor Creatures that were poſſeſſed by the Devil, and brought to him to be diſpoſſeſſed. It's ſaid of him, John 11. 33. That when he ſaw Mary weeping, and the Jews alſo weeping which came with her, he groaned in the Spirit, and was troubled. And ver. 35. Jeſus wept: yea, his Heart flowed with pity for them that had not one drop of pity for themſelves. Witneſs his tears ſpent upon Jeruſalem, Luke 19. 41, 42. He foreſaw the miſery that was coming, tho' they never foreſaw, nor feared it. O how it pierced him to think of the Calamities hanging over that great City! Yea, he mourned for them that could not mourn for their own Sins. Therefore it's ſaid, Mark 3. 5. He was grieved for the hardneſs of the Peoples Hearts. So that the commendation of a good Phyſician, that he doth as it were die with every Patient, was moſt applicable to our tender-hearted Phyſician. This was one of thoſe things that made him a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with Griefs. For the more holy any is, the more he is grieved and afflicted for the Sins of others; and the more tender any Man is, the more he is pierced with beholding the miſeries that lye upon others. And it is ſure, never any Heart more holy, or more ſenſible, tender and compaſſionate than Chriſt's.

Sixthly, Laſtly, That which yet helped to humble him lower, was the ungrateful, and moſt baſe and unworthy entertainment the World gave him. He was not received or treated like a Saviour, but as the vileſt of Men. One would think that he who came from Heaven, to give his Life a Ranſom for many, Mat. 20. 28. He that was not ſent to condemn the World, but that the World through him might be ſaved, John 3. 17. He that came to diſſolve the Works of the Devil, 1 John 3. 8. knock off the Chains, open the Priſon doors, proclaim liberty to the Captives, Iſa. 61. 1. I ſay, when ſuch a Saviour arrived, O with what acclamations of Joy, and demonſtrations of Thankfulneſs, neſs, ſhould he have been received? One would have thought they ſhould even kiſs the ground he trod upon: But inſtead of this, he was hated, Joh. 25. 18. He was deſpiſed by them, Mat. 13. 55. So reproached, that he became the reproach of Men, as who ſhould ſay, a Corner for every one to ſpit in; a Butt for every baſe Tongue to ſhoot it, Pſal. 22. 6. Accuſed of working his Miracles by the power of the Devil, Mat. 12. 24. He was trod upon as a Worm, Pſal. 22. 6. They buffetted him, Mat. 26. 67. ſmote him on the Head, Mat. 27. 30. array'd him as a Fool, ver. 29. ſpat in his Face, ver. 30. deſpiſed him as the baſeſt of Men, This fellow ſaid, Mat. 26. 61. One of his own Followers ſold him, another forſware him, and all forſook him in his greateſt Troubles. All this was a great abaſement to the Son of God, who was not thus treated for a day, or in one place; but all his days, and in all places. He endured the contradiction of Sinners againſt himſelf. In theſe Particulars I have pointed out to you ſomething of the humble Life Chriſt lived in the World. From all which Particulars ſome uſeful Inferences will be noted.

Inference 1. From the firſt degree of Chriſt's Humiliation in ſubmitting to be circumciſed, and thereby obliging himſelf to fulfil the whole Law, it follows, That Juſtice it ſelf may ſet both hand and ſeal to the acquittances and diſcharges of Believers. Chriſt hereby obliged himſelf to be the Law's Pay-maſter, to pay its utmoſt demand; to bear that yoak of Obedience that never any before him could bear. And as his Circumciſion obliged him to keep the whole Law; ſo he was moſt preciſe and punctual in the obſervation of it: So exact, that the ſharp eye of Divine Juſtice cannot eſpy the leaſt flaw in it; but acknowledges full Payment, and ſtands ready to ſign the Believer a full Acquittance. Rom. 3. 25. That God may be juſt, and the Juſtifier of him that believes in Jeſus. Had not Chriſt been thus obliged, we had never been diſcharged. Had not his Obedience been an intire, compleat and perfect thing, our Juſtification could not have been ſo. He that hath a precious Treaſure, will be loth to adventure it in a leaky Veſſel: Wo to the holieſt Man on Earth, if the ſafety of his precious Soul were to be adventured to the bottom of the beſt Duty that ever he performed. But Chriſt's Obedience and Righteouſneſs is right and ſound; a Bottom that we may ſafely adventure all in.

Inference 2. From the early flight of Chriſt into Egypt, we infer, That the greateſt Innocency and Pity cannot exempt from Perſecution and Injury. Who more innocent than Chriſt? And who more perſecuted? The world is the world ſtill. I have given them thy Word, and the World hath hated them, John 17. 14. The World lyes in wait as a Thief for them that carry this Treaſure; they who are empty of it may ſing before him, he never ſtops them: But Perſecution follows Piety, as the Shadow doth the Body. 2 Tim. 3. 12. All that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, muſt ſuffer Perſecution. Whoſoever reſolves to live holily, muſt never expect to live quietly. It's Godlineſs, and Godlineſs in Chriſt Jeſus, i. e. ſuch as is derived from Chriſt, true Godlineſs; and it's true Godlineſs as it's manifeſted in practice. All that will live godly, that will exert Holineſs in their Lives, which convinces and galls the Conſciences of the ungodly. 'Tis this enrages, for there is an Enmity and Antipathy betwixt them: and this Enmity runs in a blood; and it's tranſmitted with it from generation to generation, Gal. 4. 29. As then, he that was born after the fleſh, perſecuteth him that was born after the Spirit; even ſo it is now. Mark, ſo it was, and ſo ſtill it is. Cain's Club is ſtill carried up and down redded with the Blood of Abel, ſaith Bucholtzer; but thus it muſt be, to conform us unto Chriſt: and O that your Spirits, as well as your Conditions, may better harmonize with Chriſt. He ſuffered meekly, quietly and ſelf-denyingly; be ye like him. Let it not be ſaid of you, as it is of the Hypocrite, whoſe Luſts are only hid, but not mortified by his Duties, that he is like a flint, which ſeems cold; but if you ſtrike him he is all fiery. To do well, and ſuffer ill, is Chriſt-like.

Inference 3. From the third particular of Chriſt's Humiliation, I infer, That ſuch as are full of Grace and Holineſs, may be deſtitute and empty of Creature-comforts. What an over-flowing fulneſs of Grace was there in Chriſt! and yet to what a low ebb did his outward Comforts ſometimes fall: and as it fared with him, ſo with many others now in Glory with him, whilſt they were in the way to that Glory, 1 Cor. 4. 11. Even to this preſent hour, we both hunger, and thirſt, and are naked, and buffetted, and have no certain dwelling-place. Their Souls were richly cloathed with Robes of Righteouſneſs, their Bodies naked or meanly clad. Their Souls fed high, even on hidden Manna, their Bodies hungry. Let us be content (ſaith Luther) with our hard fare; for do we not feaſt with Angels upon that Bread of Life? Remember when wants pinch hard, that theſe fix no marks of God's hatred upon you. He hath dealt no worſe with you than he did with his own Son. Nay, which of you is not better accommodated than Chriſt was? If you be hungry or thirſty, you have ſome Refreſhments; you have Beds to lye on; the Son of Man had not where to lay his head; the Heir of all things had ſometimes nothing to eat. And remember you are going to a plentiful Country where all your wants will be ſupplied; poor in the World, rich in Faith, and Heirs of the Kingdom which God hath promiſed, James 2. 5. The meanneſs of your preſent, will add to the luſtre of your future Condition.

Inference 4. From the fourth Particular of Chriſt's Humiliation in his Life, by Satan's Temptations, we infer, That thoſe in whom Satan hath no intereſt, may have moſt trouble from him in this World, John 14. 30. The Prince of this world cometh, and hath nought in me. Where he knows he cannot be a Conqueror, he will not ceaſe to be a Troubler. This bold and daring Spirit adventures upon Chriſt himſelf; for doubtleſs he was filled with Envy at the ſight of him, and would do what he could, tho' to no purpoſe, to obſtruct the bleſſed deſign in his hand. And it was the Wiſdom and Love of Chriſt to admit him to come as near him as might be, and try all his Darts upon him, him; that by this experience he might be filled with pity to ſuccour them that are tempted. And as he ſet on Chriſt, ſo much more will he adventure upon us; and but too oft comes off a Conqueror. Sometimes he ſhoots the fiery Darts of blaſphemous Injections. Theſe fall as flaſhes of Lightning on the dry Thatch, which inſtantly ſets all in a combuſtion. And juſt ſo is it attended with an after Thunder-clap of inward Horror, that ſhivers the very Heart, and ſtrikes all into confuſion within.

Divers Rules are preſcribed in this caſe to relieve poor diſtreſſed ones. One adviſeth to think ſeriouſly on that which is darted ſuddenly, and to do by your Hearts as Men uſe to do with young Horſes, that are apt to ſtart and boggle at every thing in the way; we bring them cloſe to the things they fright at, make them look on them, and ſmell to them; that time, and better acquaintance with ſuch things, may teach them not to ſtart. Others adviſe to diverſions of the Thoughts, as much as may be, to think quite another way. Theſe Rules are contrary to one another, and I think ſignifie but little to the relief of a poor Soul ſo diſtreſſed.

The beſt Rule doubtleſs is that of the Apoſtle, Eph. 6. 16. Above all taking the ſhield of Faith, wherewith ye ſhall be able to quench all the fiery Darts of the wicked. Act your Faith, my Friends, upon your tempted Saviour, who paſſed through Temptations before you: And particularly exerciſe Faith on three things in Chriſt's Temptations.

1. Believingly conſider how great variety of Temptations were tried upon Chriſt; and of what a horrid blaſphemous nature that was, Fall down and worſhip me.

2. Believingly conſider, that Chriſt came of a perfect Conqueror in the day of his trial, beat Satan out of the field. For he ſaw what he attempted on Chriſt was as impoſſible as to batter the body of the Sun with Snow-balls.

3. Laſtly, Believe that the benefits of thoſe his Victories and Conqueſts are for you; and that for your ſakes he permitted the Tempter to come ſo near him: As you find, Heb. 2. 18.

Object. Heb. 4. 15. If you ſay, true, Chriſt was tempted as well as I; but there's a vaſt difference betwixt his Temptations and mine: For the Prince of this World came, and found nothing in him, John 14. 13. He was not internally defiled, tho' externally aſſaulted; but I am defiled by them as well as troubled.

Sol. This is a different caſe. True, it is ſo, and muſt be ſo, or elſe it had ſignified nothing to your relief. For had Chriſt been internally defiled, he had not been a fit Mediator for you; nor could you have had any benefit either by his Temptations or Sufferings for you. But he being tempted, and yet ſtill holy, bearing the Burden, and ſtill eſcaping the defilement of Sin, hath not only ſatisfied for the Sins you commit when tempted, but alſo got an experimental ſenſe of the miſery of your Condition, which is in him (tho' now in Glory) as a ſpring of Pity and tender Compaſſion to you. Remember, poor tempted Chriſtian, the God of Peace ſhall ſhortly tread Satan under thy feet, Rom. 16. 20. Thou ſhalt ſet thy foot on the Neck of that Enemy: And as ſoon as both thy Feet are over the threſhold of Glory, thou ſhalt caſt back a ſmiling look, and ſay, Now Satan do thy worſt; now I am there where thou canſt not come. Mean while, till thou be out of his reach, let me adviſe thee to go to Jeſus Chriſt, and open the matter to him; tell him how that baſe Spirit falls upon thee, yea, ſets upon thee, even in his preſence: Intreat him to rebuke and command him off: Beg him to conſider thy caſe, and ſay, Lord, doſt not thou remember how thy own Heart was once grieved, tho' not defiled by his Aſſaults? I have Grief and Guilt together upon me. Ah Lord, I expect Pity and Help from thee; thou knoweſt the Heart of a Stranger, the Heart of a poor tempted one. This is ſingular Relief in this caſe. O try it!

Inference 5. Was Chriſt yet more humbled, by his own ſympathy with others in their Diſtreſſes? Hence we learn, that a compaſſionate Spirit towards ſuch as labour under burdens of Sin or Affliction, is Chriſt-like, and truly excellent: Thus was the Spirit of Chriſt: O be ye like him! Put on as the Elect of God, Bowels of Mercy, Col. 3. 12. Weep with them that weep, and rejoice with them that rejoice, Rom. 12. 15. It was Cain that ſaid, Am I my Brother's Keeper? Bleſſed Paul was of a contrary Temper, 2 Cor. 11. 29. Who is weak, and I am not weak? Who is offended, and I burn not? Three things promote Sympathy in Chriſtians, one is the Lord's pity for them; he doth as it were ſuffer with them; In all their Afflictions he was afflicted, Iſa. 63. 9. Another is, the relation we ſuſtain to God's afflicted People: They are Members with us in one Body, and the Members ſhould have the ſame care one of another, 1 Cor. 12. 25. The laſt is, we know not how ſoon our ſelves may need from others, what others now need from us. Reſtore him with the ſpirit of Meekneſs, conſidering thy ſelf, leſt thou alſo be tempted, Gal. 6. 1.

In all the Afflictions, Losses, and Troubles that befal Believers, Christ ſaith, Half mine: Yea, he not only bears half, but all the Burden, and more than all; for he bears us and our Burden too. O that more of his Spirit dwelt in his People.

Inference 6. Did the World help on the Humiliation of Chriſt by their baſe and vile uſage of him? Learn hence, That the Judgment the World gives of Perſons, and their Worth, is little to be regarded. Surely it diſpences its Smiles and Honours very prepoſterouſly and unduly. In this reſpect, among others, the Saints are ſtiled ſuch Perſons of whom the World is not worthy, Heb. 11. 38. i. e. it doth not deſerve to have ſuch choice Spirits as theſe are, left in it, ſince it knows not how to uſe or treat them. It was the Complaint of Salvian above eleven hundred years ago; If any of the Nobility (ſaith he) do but begin to turn to God, preſently he loſeth the Honour of Nobility; O in how little Honour is Chriſt among Chriſtian People, when Religion ſhall make a Man ignoble! So that (as he adds) many are compelled to be evil, leſt they ſhould be eſteemed vile. And indeed, if the world gives us any help to diſcover the true worth and excellency of Men by, it is by the rule of Contraries, for the moſt part. Where it fixes its marks of Hatred, we may uſually find that which invites our Reſpect and Love. It ſhould trouble us the leſs to be under the ſlights ſlights and diſreſpects of a blind World. I could be even proud upon it (ſaith Luther) that I ſee I have an ill name from the World. And Jerom bleſſed God that counted him worthy to be hated of the World. Labour to ſtand right in the Judgment of God, and trouble not thy ſelf for the raſh and headlong Cenſures of Men. Let wicked Men, ſaith one, cut the throat of my Credit, and do as they like beſt with it; when the wind of their Calumnies hath blown away my good Name from me in the way to Heaven, I know Chriſt will take my Name out of the mire, and waſh it, and reſtore it to me again.

Aut ſumus, aut fuimus, & poſſimus eſſe quod hic eſt. Si quis ex nobilitate converti ad Deum cœperit, ſtatim honorem nobilitatis amittit. O quantulus in Chriſtiano populo honor Chriſti eſt, ubi religio ignobilem facit! Salv. Lib. 4. de Gub. Dei. Superbus fio, quod video nomen peſſimum mihi creſcere; gaudeo rebellis dici. Luth. Gratias ago Deo meo, quod dignus ſum, quem mundus oderit. Hieron.

Inference 7. From the whole of Chriſt's Humiliation in his Life, learn you to paſs through all the Troubles of your Life with a contented compoſed Spirit, as Chriſt your Forerunner did. He was perſecuted, and bare it meekly; poor, and never murmured, tempted, and never yielded to the Temptation; reviled, and reviled not again. When ye therefore paſs through any of theſe Trials look to Jeſus, and conſider him. See how he that paſſed through thoſe things before you, managed himſelf in like Circumſtances; yea, not only beat the way by his Pattern and Example for you, but hath in every one of thoſe conditions left a Bleſſing behind him for them that follow in his Steps.

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SERMON XX.

Ser. 20. Opens Chriſt's Humiliation unto Death, in his firſt preparative act for it.

JOHN XVII. 11.

And now I am no more in the World, but theſe are in the World; and I come to thee: Holy Father, keep through thine own Name, thoſe whom thou haſt given me; that they may be one, as we are.

WE now come to the laſt and loweſt ſtep of Chriſt's Humiliation, which was in his ſubmitting to Death, even the Death of the Croſs. Out of this Death of Chriſt the Life of our Souls ſprings up; and in this Blood of the Croſs, all our Mercies ſwim to us. The Blood of Chriſt runs deep to ſome eyes: The Judicious Believer ſees Multitudes, Multitudes of ineſtimable Bleſſings in it. By this Crimſon Fountain I reſolve to ſit down; and concerning the Death of Chriſt, I ſhall take diſtinctly into conſideration the Preparations made for it; the Nature and Quality of it; the Deportment and Carriage of dying Jeſus; the Funeral Solemnities with which he was buried; and laſtly, the Bleſſed Deſigns, and Glorious Ends of his Death.

The Preparatives for his Death were ſix. Three on his own part, and three more by his Enemies. The Preparations made by himſelf for it, were the ſolemn recommendation of his Friends to his Father: The inſtitution of a commemorative ſign, to perpetuate and refreſh the Memory of his Death in the Hearts of his People till he come again. And his pouring out his Soul to God by prayer in the Garden, which was the poſture he choſe to be found in, when they ſhould apprehend him.

This Scripture contains the firſt preparative of Chriſt for Death, whereby he ſets his Houſe in order, prays for his People, and bleſſes them before he dies. The Love of Chriſt was ever tender and ſtrong to his People; but the greateſt Manifeſtations of it were at parting. And this he manifeſted two ways eſpecially; viz. in leaving ſingular Supports, and grounds of Comfort with them in his laſt heavenly Sermon in Chap. 14, 15, 16. and in pouring out his Soul moſt affectionally to the Father for them in this Heavenly Prayer, Chap. 17. In this Prayer he gives them a Specimen or Sample of that his glorious Interceſſion-work, which he was juſt then going to perform in Heaven for them. Here his heart overflowed, for he was now leaving them, and going to the Father. The laſt words of a dying Man are remarkable, how much more of a dying Saviour? I ſhall not launch out into that bleſſed Ocean of precious matter contained in this Chapter, but take immediately into conſiderations the words that I read, wherein I find a weighty Petition, ſtrongly followed and ſet home with many mighty Arguments.

1. We have here Chriſt's Petition, or Requeſt in behalf of his people; not only thoſe on the place, but all others that then did, or afterwards ſhould believe on him. And the ſum of what he here requeſts for them is, that his Father would keep them through his Name. Where you have both the Mercy, and the Means of attaining it. The Mercy is to be kept. Keeping implies danger. And there is a double Danger obviated in this requeſt; danger in reſpect of Sin, and danger in reſpect of Ruin and Deſtruction. To both theſe the People of God lye open in this World.

The Means of their preſervation from both is the Name, i. e. the Power of God. This Name of the Lord is that ſtrong Tower to which the Righteous fly, and are ſafe, Prov. 18. 10. Alas! It is not your own Strength or Wiſdom that keeps you, but ye are kept by the mighty Power of God. This protecting Power of God, doth not however exclude our Care and Diligence, but implies it; therefore 'tis added, Ye are kept by the mighty Power of God through Faith to Salvation, 1 Pet. 1. 5. God keeps his People, and yet they are to keep themſelves in the Love of God, Jude 21. to keep their hearts with all diligence, Prov. 4. 23. This is the ſum of the Petition.

2. The Arguments with which he urgeth and preſſes on this Requeſt, are drawn partly from his own condition, I am no more in the World, i. e. I am going to die; within very few hours I ſhall be ſeparated from them, in regard of my corporal preſence. Partly from their condition; but theſe are in the world; i. e. I muſt leave them in the midſt of danger: And partly from the joint intereſt his Father and himſelf had in them; Keep thoſe that thou haſt given me: With ſeveral other moſt prevalent Pleas, which in their proper places ſhall be anon produced and diſplayed, to illuſtrate and confirm this precious Truth which this Scripture affords us.

Doct. That the fatherly Care, and tender Love of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, was eminently diſcovered in that pleading Prayer he poured out for his People at his parting with them.

It pertained to the Prieſt and Father of the Family, to bleſs the reſt, eſpecially when he were to be ſeparated from them by Death. This was a Rite in Iſrael. When good Jacob was grown old, and the time was come that he ſhould be gathered to his Fathers, then he bleſſed Joſeph, Ephraim, and Manaſſeth, ſaying, God, before whom my Fathers Abraham and Iſaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day, the Angel which redeemed me from all evil, bleſs the Lads, Gen. 48. 15, 16. This was * a Prophetical and Patriarchal Bleſſing: Not that Jacob could bleſs as God bleſſes; he could ſpeak the words of Bleſſing, but he knew the Effect, the real Bleſſing it ſelf depended upon God. And tho' he bleſſed authoritatively, yet not poteſtatively; i. e. he could, as the mouth of God, pronounce Bleſſings, but could not conferr them. Thus he bleſſed his Children, as his Father Iſaac had alſo bleſſed him before he died, Gen. 28. 3. and all theſe Bleſſings were delivered prayerwiſe.

* Volebat Jacob benedicere filiis benedictione non vulgari, ſed Prophetica, & patriarchali. Noverat ſe tantùm verba poſſe proferre, effectum autem ab alio pendere. Petit ergo benedictionem ab eo cujus idem eſt dicere & facere, i.e. a ſolo Deo. Ainſworth in loc. Benedicere eſt vel poteſtatis, i. e. bona temporalia ſolo nutu conferre; vel authoritatis, hoc eſt, bona temporalia vel æterna ex officio precari denunciare, conferenda à Deo. Pareus.

Now when Jeſus Chriſt comes to die, he will bleſs his Children alſo; and therein will diſcover how much dear and tender Love he had for them: Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them to the end, John 13. 1. The laſt Act of Chriſt in this World, was an act of Bleſſing, Luk. 24. 50, 51.

To prepare this point for uſe, I will here open, Firſt, The Mercies which Chriſt requeſted of the Father for them. Secondly, The Arguments uſed by him to obtain the Mercies. Thirdly, Why he thus pleaded for them when he was to die. Fourthly, and laſtly, How all this gives full evidence of Chriſt's tender care and love to his People.

Firſt, We will enquire what thoſe Mercies and ſpecial Favours were, which Chriſt begg'd for his People when he was to die. And we find among others, theſe five ſpecial Mercies deſired for them in this Context.

1. The Mercy of preſervation both from Sin and Danger: So in the Text; Keep through thine own Name thoſe whom thou haſt given me: Which is explained, verſ. 15. I pray not that thou ſhouldſt take them out of the World, but that thou ſhouldſt keep them from the evil. We in ours, and the Saints that are gone, in their reſpective Generations, have reaped the fruit of this Prayer. How elſe comes it to paſs, that our Souls are preſerved amidſt ſuch a world of Temptations, and theſe aſſiſted and advantaged by our own Corruptions? How is it elſe, that our Perſons are not ruined and deſtroyed amidſt ſuch multitudes of potent and malicious Enemies, that are ſet on fire of Hell? Surely the preſervation of the burning Buſh, of the three Children amidſt the Flames, of Daniel in the Den of Lions, are not greater Wonders, than theſe our eyes do daily behold. As the fire would have certainly conſumed, and the Lions without doubt have rended and devoured, had not God by the interpoſition of his own hand ſtopt and hindred the effect; ſo would the Sin that is in us, and the Malice that is in others, quickly ruin our Souls and Bodies, were it not that the ſame Hand guards and keeps us every moment. To that Hand into which this Prayer of Chriſt delivered your Souls and Bodies, do you owe all your Mercies and Salvations, both temporal and ſpiritual.

2. Another Mercy he prays for, is the bleſſing of Union among themſelves. This he joins immediately with the firſt Mercy of preſervation, and prays for it in the ſame breath, verſ. 11. That they may be one, as we are. And well might he join them together in one breath, for this union is not only a choice Mercy in it ſelf, but a ſpecial Means of that Preſervation he had prayed for before: Their union one with another is a ſpecial means to preſerve them all.

3. A third deſirable Mercy that Chriſt earneſtly prayed for, was that his Joy might be fulfilled in them, ver. 13. He would provide for their Joy, even when the hour of his greateſt Sorrow was at hand; yea, he would not only obtain Joy for them, but a full Joy: That my Joy may be fulfilled in them. It is as if he had ſaid, O my Father, I am to leave theſe dear ones in a World of Troubles and Perplexities, I know their Hearts will be ſubject to frequent Deſpondencies; O let me obtain the Cordials of Divine Joy for them before I go: I would not only have them live, but live joyfully; provide for their fainting hours reviving Cordials.

4. And as a continued Spring to maintain all the forementioned Mercies, he prays they all may be ſanctified through the word of Truth, ver. 17. i. e. more abundantly ſanctified than yet they were, by a deeper radication of gracious habits and principles in their Hearts. This is a ſingular Mercy in it ſelf, to have Holineſs ſpreading it ſelf over and through their Souls, as the Light of the Morning. Nothing is for it ſelf more deſirable. And it's alſo a ſingular help to their Perſeverance, Union and ſpiritual Joy, which he had prayed for before, and are all advanced by their increaſing Sanctification.

4. And laſtly, As the complement and perfection of all deſirable Mercies, he prays, that they may be with him, where he is, to behold his Glory, ver. 24. This is the beſt and ultimate Priviledge they are capable of. The end of his coming down from Heaven, and return thither again, all runs into this, to bring many Sons and Daughters unto Glory. You ſee Chriſt asks no trifles, no ſmall things for his People; no Mercies, but the beſt that both Worlds afford, will ſuffice him on their behalf.

Secondly, Let us ſee how he follows his Requeſts, and with what Arguments he pleads with the Father for theſe things: And among others, I ſhall ſingle out ſix choice ones which are urged in this Text, or the immediate Context.

The firſt Argument is drawn from the joint Intereſt that both Himſelf and Father have in the Perſons for whom he prays, All mine art thine, and thine art mine, ver. 10. As if he ſhould ſay, Father, behold and conſider the Perſons I pray for, they are not Aliens, but Chriſtians; yea, they are thy Children as well as mine: The very ſame on whom thou haſt ſet thy eternal Love, and in that Love haſt given them to me; ſo that they are both thine, and mine: great is our Intereſt in them, and Intereſt draws Care and Tenderneſs. Every one cares for his own, provides for, and ſecures his own. Propriety (even amongſt Creatures) is fundamential to our Labour, Care and Watchfulneſs; they would not ſo much prize Life, Health, Eſtates or Children, if they were not their own. Lord, theſe are thine own by many Ties and Titles: O therefore keep, comfort, ſanctifie and ſave them, for they are thine. What a mighty Plea is this? Surely, Chriſtians, your Interceſſor is skilful in his work, your Advocate wants no Eloquence or Ability to plead for you.

The ſecond Argument, and that a powerful one, treads as I may ſay upon the very Heel of the former, in the next words, And I am glorified in them: q. d. my Glory and Honour is infinitely dear to thee; I know thy Heart is intently upon the exalting and glorifying of thy Son. Now what Glory have I in the World, but what comes from my People? Others neither can, nor will glorifie me; nay, I am daily blaſphemed and diſhonoured by them: Theſe are they from whom my active Glory and Praiſe in the World muſt riſe. 'Tis true, both thou and I have Glory from other Creatures objectively; the Works that we have made and impreſt our Power, Wiſdom and Goodneſs upon, do ſo glorifie us: and Honour we have from our very Enemies accidentally; their very Wrath ſhall praiſe us: But for active and voluntary Praiſe, whence comes this but from the People that were formed for that very purpoſe? Should theſe then miſcarry and periſh, where ſhall my manifeſtive and active Glory be? And from whom ſhall I expect it? So that here his Propriety and Glory are pleaded with the Father, to prevail for thoſe Mercies; and they are both great and valuable things with God. What dearer, what nearer to the Heart of God?

Arg. 3. And yet to make all faſt and ſure, he adds in the beginning of this ver. 11. a third Argument, in theſe words, And now I am no more in the World. Where we muſt conſider the ſenſe of it as a Propoſition, and the force of it is an Argument. This Propoſition, I am no more in the World, is not to be taken ſimply and univerſally, as if in no ſenſe Chriſt ſhould be any more in this World: But only reſpectively as to his corporal Preſence; this was in a little time to be removed from his People, which had been a ſweet Spring of Comfort to them in all their Troubles. But now it might have been ſaid to the penſive Diſciples, as the Sons of the Prophets ſaid to Eliſha, a little before Elijah's Tranſlation, Know ye not that your Maſter ſhall be taken from your Heads to day? This comfortable Enjoyment muſt be taken from them; this is the Senſe. And here lyes the Argument; Father, conſider the Sadneſs and Trouble I ſhall leave my poor Children under. Whilſt I was with them, I was a ſweet relief to their Souls; whatever Troubles they met with; in all Doubts, Fears and Dangers, they could repair to me; in all their Straits and Wants I ſtill ſupplied them: They had my Counſels to direct them, my Reproofs to reduce them, my Comforts to ſupport them; yea, the very Sight of me was an unſpeakable Joy and Refreſhment to their Souls: But now the hour is come, and I muſt be gone. All the Comfort and Benefit they had from my Preſence among them is now cut off: And except thou do make up all this to them another way, what will become of theſe Children, when their Father is gone? What will be the caſe of the poor Sheep, and tender Lambs, when the Shepherd is ſmitten? Therefore (O my Father) look thou after them, ſee to them, for they are thine, as well as mine: I am glorified in them, and now leaving them, and removing out of this World from them.

It must [illegible]

Arg. 4. And yet to move and engage the Father's Care and Love for them, he ſubjoins another great Conſideration in the very next words, drawn from the Danger he leaves them in; But theſe are in the World. The World is a ſinful, infecting, and unquiet place; it lyes in Wickedneſs: and a hard thing it will be for ſuch poor, weak, imperfect Creatures to eſcape the Pollutions of it; or if they do, yet the Troubles, Perſecutions, and ſtrong Oppoſitions of it they cannot eſcape. Seeing therefore I muſt leave thine own dear Children, as well as mine, and thoſe from whom the Glory is to riſe, in the midſt of a ſinful, troubleſome, dangerous World, where they can neither move backward nor forward without danger of Sin or Ruin: O ſince the caſe ſtands ſo, look after them, provide for them, and take ſpecial care for them all. Conſider how they are, and where I leave them. They are the Children, to be left in a ſtrange Country; thy Soldiers, in the Enemies Quarters; thy Sheep, in the midſt of Wolves; thy precious Treaſure, among Thieves.

Arg. 5. And yet he hath not done, for he reſolves to tug for the Mercies he had asked, and will not come off with a Denial: and therefore adds another Argument in the next words, And I come to thee. As his leaving them was an Argument, ſo his coming to the Father is a mighty Argument alſo. There is much in theſe words, I come to thee; [I,] thy beloved Son, in which thy Soul delighteth; I, to whom thou never deniedſt any thing. 'Tis not a Stranger, but a Son; not an adopted, but the only begotten Son. 'Tis I that [come.] I am now coming to thee apace, my Father. I come to thee ſwimming through a bloody Ocean. I come treading every ſtep of my way to thee in Blood, and unſpeakable Sufferings; and all this for the ſake of thoſe dear Ones I now pray for: Yea, the deſign and end of my coming to thee, is for them. I am coming to Heaven in the capacity of an Advocate, to plead with thee for them. And I come to [Thee] my Father, and their Father; my God, and their God. Now then, ſince I that am ſo dear, come through ſuch bitter Pangs, to thee, ſo dear, ſo tender-hearted a Father; and all this on their ſcore and account: Since I do but now as it were begin, or give them a little taſte of that Interceſſion-work, which I ſhall live for ever to perform for them in Heaven; Father, hear, Father, grant what I requeſt. O give a comfortable handſel of thoſe good things which I am coming to thee for, and which I know thou wilt not deny me.

Arg. 6. And to cloſe up all, he tells the Father how careful he had been to obſerve and perform that truſt which was committed to him; While I was with them in the World, I kept them in thy Name; thoſe that thou gaveſt me, I have kept, and none of them is loſt, but the Son of Perdition, ver. 12.

And thus lyes the Argument: Thou committed'ſt to me a certain number of elect Souls, to be redeemed by me; I undertook the Truſt, and ſaid, if any of theſe be loſt, at my hand let them be required, I will anſwer them every one to thee. In purſuance of which Truſt, I am now here on the Earth, in a Body of Fleſh. I have been faithful to a point. I have redeemed them (for he ſpeaks of that as finiſhed and done which was now ready to be done) I have kept alſo, and confirmed them hitherto: and now, Father, I commit them to thy Care. Lo, here they are, not one is loſt, but the Son of Perdition, who was never given. With how great care have I been careful for them! O let them not fail now; let not one of them periſh.

Thus you ſee what a nervous, argumentative, pleading Prayer Chriſt poured out to the Father for them at parting.

Thirdly, The next enquiry is, why he thus prayed and pleaded with God for them, when he was to die?

And certainly it was not becauſe the Father was unwilling to grant the Mercies he deſired for them: No, they came not with difficulty, nor were they wreſted by meer Importunity out of the hand of an unwilling and backward Perſon. For he tells us in Joh. 16. 27. The Father himſelf loveth you, i. e. he is propenſe enough of his own accord to do you good. But the Reaſons of this exceeding Importunity, are,

1. He foreſaw a great trial then at hand; yea, and all the after-trials of his people as well as that. He knew how much they would be ſifted, and put to in that hour, and power of darkneſs that was coming. He knew their Faith would be ſhaken, and greatly ſtaggered, by the approaching difficulties, when they ſhould ſee their Shepherd ſmitten, and themſelves ſcattered, the Son of Man delivered into the hands of Sinners, and the Lord of Life hang dead upon the Tree, yea, ſealed up in the Grave. He foreſaw what Straits his poor people would fall into, betwixt a buſie Devil, and a bad Heart; therefore he prays and pleads with ſuch importunity and ardency for them, that they might not miſcarry.

2. He was now entring upon his Interceſſion-work in Heaven, and he was deſirous in this Prayer to give us a Specimen, or Sample of that part of his work before he left us; that by this we might underſtand what he would do for us, when he ſhould be out of our ſight. For this being the laſt on Earth, it ſhews us what Affections and Diſpoſitions he carried hence with him, and ſatisfies us that he who was ſo earneſt with God on our behalf, ſuch a mighty Pleader here, will not forget us, or neglect our concerns in the other world. Yet, Reader, I would have thee always remember, that the Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven is carried at a much higher rate than this; it's performed in a way more ſuitable to that State of Honour to which he is now exalted. Here he uſed Proſtrations of Body, Cries and Tears in his Prayers: There it's carried in a more majeſtick way, and with more State, becoming an exalted Jeſus. But yet in this he hath left us a ſpecial aſſiſtance, to diſcover much of the frame, temper, and working of his Heart now in Heaven towards us.

3. And laſtly, He would leave this as a ſtanding Monument of his father-like Care and Love to his People to the end of the World. And for this it is conceived Chriſt delivered this Prayer ſo publickly, not withdrawing from the Diſciples to be private with God, as he did in the Garden; but he delivers it in their preſence, theſe things I ſpeak in the World: v. 13. this ἐλάλησα with the circumſtances of place [in the World] doth plainly ſpeak it to be a publick Prayer. And not only was it publickly delivered, but it was alſo by a ſingular Providence recorded at large by John, tho' omitted by the other Evangeliſts; that ſo it might ſtand to all Generations, for a teſtimony of Chriſt's tender Care and Love to his People.

Fourthly, If you ask how this gives evidence of Chriſt's tender Care and Love to his People? Which is the laſt Enquiry: I anſwer in few words, for the thing is plain and obvious; it appears in theſe two particulars.

1. His Love and Care were manifeſted in the choice of Mercies for them. He doth not pray for Health, Honour, long Life, Riches, &c. but for their preſervation from Sin, ſpiritual Joy in God, Sanctifications, and eternal Glory. No Mercies but the very beſt in God's treaſure will content him. He was reſolved to get all the beſt Mercies for his People; the reſt he is content ſhould be diſpenſed promiſcuouſly by Providence: But theſe he will ſettle as a Heritage upon his Children. O ſee the Love of Chriſt! Look over all your ſpiritual Inheritance in Chriſt, compare it with the richeſt, faireſt, ſweeteſt Inheritance on Earth; and ſee what poor things theſe are to yours. O the care of a dear Father! O the love of a Saviour!

2. Beſides, what an evidence of his tenderneſs to you, and great care for you, was this, that he ſhould ſo intently, and ſo affectionately, mind and plead your concerns with God, at ſuch a time as this was, even when a World of Sorrow was hemming him in on every ſide; a cup of Wrath mixed, and ready to be delivered into his hand; at that very time when the clouds of Wrath grew black, a Storm coming, and ſuch as he never felt before; when one would have thought, all his Care, Thoughts, and Diligence, ſhould have been imployed on his own account, to mind his own Sufferings? No, he doth as it were forget his own Sorrows, to mind our Peace and Comfort. O Love unſpeakable!

y this, at Obſer- ation is oſſed; Nemo diù tus, pe- iculo oximus. e can long ſafe t dwells ar to anger: r hereby ey are ſafe in the midſt of nger.

Corollary 1. If this be ſo, that Chriſt ſo eminently diſcovered his Care and Love for his People in his parting hour: Then hence we conclude, the Perſeverance of the Saints is unqueſtionable. Do you hear how he pleads, how he begs, how he fills his mouth with Arguments, how he chuſeth his Words, and ſets them in order, how he winds up his Spirit to the very higheſt pin of Zeal and Fervency? And can you doubt of ſucceſs? Can ſuch a Father deny the Importunity, and ſtrong Reaſonings and Pleadings of ſuch a Son? O it can never be. He cannot deny him: Chriſt hath the art and skill of prevailing with God: He hath (as in this appears) the tongue of the Learned. If the heart or hand of God were hard to be opened, yet this would open them; but when the Father himſelf love us, and is inclined to do us good, who can doubt of Chriſt's ſucceſs? that which is in motion, is the more eaſily moved. The cauſe Chriſt manageth in Heaven for us, is juſt and righteous. The manner in which he pleads, is powerful, and therefore the ſucceſs of his Suit is unqueſtionable.

Quicquid eſt in motu, facile movetur.

The Apoſtle profeſſeth, 2 Cor. 1. 3. We can do nothing againſt the Truth. He means it in regard of the bent of his Heart, he could not move againſt Truth and Righteouſneſs. And if a holy Man cannot, much leſs will a holy God. If Chriſt undertake to plead the Cauſe of his People with the Father, and uſe his Oratory with him, there is no doubt but he carries it. Every word in this Prayer is a choſen Shaft drawn to the head by a ſtrong and skilful hand; you need not queſtion but it goes home to the White, and hits the Mark aimed at. Doth he pray, Father keep through thine own Name, thoſe thou haſt given me? Sure they ſhall be kept, if all the Power in Heaven can keep them. O think on this, when Dangers ſurround your Souls or Bodies, when Fears and Doubts are multiplied within: When thou art ready to ſay in thy haſte, all Men are Liars, I ſhall one day periſh by the hand of Sin or Satan: think on that Incouragement Chriſt gave to Peter, Luke 22. 31. I have prayed for thee.

Illud poſſumus, quod jure poſſumus.

Corollary 2. Again, hence we learn, that argumentative Prayer are excellent Prayers. The ſtrength of every thing is in its Joints; there lyes much of the ſtrength of Prayer alſo: How ſtrongly jointed, how nervous and argumentative was this Prayer of Chriſt? Some there are indeed that think we need not argue and plead in Prayer with God, but only preſent the matter of our Prayers to him, and let Chriſt alone (whoſe Office it is) to plead with the Father: As if Chriſt did not preſent our Pleas and Arguments, as well as ſimple Deſires to God; as if the choiceſt part of our Prayers muſt be kept back, becauſe Chriſt preſents our Prayers to God. No, no, Chriſt's pleading is one thing, ours another: His and ours are not oppoſed, but ſubordinate; his pleading doth not deſtroy, but makes us ſucceſsful. God calls us to plead with him, Iſa. 1. 18. Come now let us reaſon together. God (as one obſerves) reaſoneth with us by his Word and Providences outwardly, and by the motions of his Spirit inwardly: But we reaſon with him, by framing (through the help of his Spirit) certain holy Arguments, grounded upon allowed Principles drawn from his Nature, Name, Word, or Works. And it is condemned as a very ſinful defect in Profeſſors, that they did not plead the Church's Cauſe with God; Jer. 30. 13. There is none to plead thy cauſe, that thou mayeſt be bound up. What was Jacob's wreſtling with the Angel, but his holy pleading and importunity with God? And how well it pleaſed God, let the event ſpeak; As a Prince he prevailed, and had Power with God. On which Inſtance a Worthy thus gloſſeth: Let God frown, ſmite or wound, Jacob is at a Point, a Bleſſing he came for, and a Bleſſing he will have; I will not let thee go (ſaith he) unleſs thou bleſs me. His Limbs, his Life might go, but there is no going for Chriſt without a Pawn, without a Bleſſing. This is the Man, now what is his ſpeed? The Lord admires him, and honours him to all Generations. What is thy Name? Saith he; q. d. I never met with ſuch a Man, Titles of Honour are not worthy of thee: Thou ſhalt be called, not Jacob a Shepherd with Men, but Jacob a Prince with God. Nazianzen ſaid of his Siſter Gorgonia, that ſhe was modeſtly impudent with God; there was no putting her off with a denial. The Lord on this account hath honoured his Saints with the Title of his Recorders, Men fit to plead with him, as that word [mazkir] ſignifies: Iſa. 62. 6. Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not ſilence, give him no reſt. It notes the Office of him that recorded all the memorable Matters of the King, and uſed to ſuggeſt ſeaſonable Items and Memorandums of things to be done.

Dr. Harris in his Sermon on Luk. 18. 6, 7, 8.

Rememorantes, vel, qui reminiſci faciles Domini. Mont.

By theſe holy Pleadings, the King is held in his Galleries, as it is Cant. 7: 5. I know we are not heard, either for our much ſpeaking, or our excellent ſpeaking; 'tis Chriſt's pleading in Heaven that makes our pleading on Earth available: But yet ſurely when the Spirit of the Lord ſhall ſuggeſt proper Arguments in prayer, and help the humble Suppliant to preſs them home believingly and affectionately; when he helps us weep and plead, to groan and plead, God is greatly delighted in ſuch Prayers. Thou ſaidſt, I will ſurely do thee good, ſaid Jacob, Gen. 32. 12. It's thine own free Promiſe; I did not go on mine own head but thou bidd'ſt me go, and encourageſt me with this Promiſe. O this is taking with God when by the Spirit of Adoption we can come to God, crying, Abba, Father; Father, hear, forgive, pity and help me. Am I not thy Child, thy Son or Daughter? To whom may a Child be bold to go, with whom may a Child have hope to ſpeed, if not with his Father? Father, hear me. The Fathers of our Fleſh are full of bowels, and pity their Children, and know how to give good things to them when they ask them: When they ask Bread or Cloaths, will they deny them? And is not the Father of Spirits more full of bowels, more full of pity? Father, hear me. This is that kind of Prayer which is melody in the Ears of God.

Plus gemitibus, quam ſermonibus; plus fletu, quam affatu, cor clamat ad Dominum. Aug. Mr. R. A. vind.

Corollary 3. What an excellent Pattern is here, for all that have the charge and government of others committed to them, whether Magiſtrates, Miniſters, or Parents, to teach them how to acquit themſelves towards their Relations when they come to die?

Look upon dying Jeſus, ſee how his care and love to his People flamed out when the time of his departure was at hand. Surely as we are bound to remember our Relations every day, and to lay up a ſtock of Prayers for them in the time of our health, ſo it becomes us to imitate Chriſt in our earneſtneſs with God for them when we die. Tho' we die, our Prayers die not with us: They outlive us, and thoſe we leave behind us in the World, may reap the benefit of them when we are turned to duſt.

Mr. Richard Flavell, a faithful and laborious Preacher of the Goſpel at Haſeler in Warwickſhire, and afterwards at Willerſay in Gloceſterſhire, now with God.

For my own part I muſt profeſs before the World, that I have a high valne for this Mercy; and do from the bottom of my heart, bleſs the Lord, who gave me a religious and tender Father, who often poured out his Soul to God for me: He was one that was inwardly acquainted with God; and being full of bowels to his Children, often carried them before the Lord, prayed and pleaded with God for them, wept and made ſupplications for them. This ſtock of Prayers and Bleſſings left by him before the Lord, I cannot but eſteem above the faireſt Inheritance on Earth. O it is no ſmall Mercy to have thouſands of fervent Prayers lying before the Lord, filed up in Heaven for us. And O that we would all be faithful to this Duty! Surely our love, eſpecially to the Souls of our Relations, ſhould not grow cold when our breath doth. O that we would remember this Duty in our lives; and if God give opportunity and ability, fully diſcharge it when we die; conſidering as Chriſt did, we ſhall be no more, but they are in this World, in the midſt of a defiled, tempting, troubleſome World: It's the laſt office of Love that ever we ſhall do for them. After a little while we ſhall be no longer ſenſible how it is with them; (for, as the Church ſpeaks, Iſa. 63. 16. Abraham is ignorant of us, and Iſrael acknowledgeth us not) what Temptations and Troubles may befal them, we do not know. O imitate Chriſt your Pattern.

Corollary 4. To conclude; Hence ye may ſee what a high eſteem and precious value Chriſt hath of Believers; this was the Treaſure which he could not quit, he could not die till he had ſecured it in a ſafe hand: I come unto thee; holy Father, keep through thine own Name thoſe whom thou haſt given me.

Surely Believers are dear to Jeſus Chriſt; and good reaſon, for he hath paid dear for them: Let his dying Language, this laſt farewel ſpeak for him, how he prized them. The Lord's Portion is his People, Jacob is the Lot of his Inheritance, Deut. 32. 9. They are a peculiar Treaſure to him above all the People of the Earth, Exod. 12. 5. What is much upon our hearts when we die, is dear to us indeed. O how precious, how dear ſhould Jeſus Chriſt be to us, were we firſt and laſt upon his heart! Did he mind us, did he pray for us, did he ſo wreſtle with God about us, when the ſorrows of Death compaſſed him about? How much are we engaged, not only to love him, and eſteem him whilſt we live, but to be in pangs of love for him, when we feel the pangs of Death upon us! To be eying him, when our eye-ſtrings break! To have hot Affections for Chriſt, when our hands and feet grow cold! The very laſt whiſper of our departing Soul ſhould be this,

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SERMON XXI.

Ser. 21. Opens the ſecond preparative Act of Chriſt for his own Death.

1 COR. XI. 23, 24, 25.

——The Lord Jeſus the ſame night in which he was betrayed, took Bread: And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and ſaid, Take, eat; this is my Body, which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me. After the ſame manner alſo he took the Cup, when he had ſupped, ſaying, This Cnp is the New Teſtament in my Blood; this do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

CHRIST had no ſooner recommended his dear Charge to the Father, (but the time of his Death haſting on) he inſtitutes his laſt Supper to be the laſting Memorial of his Death in all the Churches, until the ſecond coming; therein graciouſly providing for the comfort of his People, when he ſhould be removed out of their ſight. And this was the ſecond preparative Act of Chriſt in order to his Death; he will ſet his houſe in order, and then die.

This his ſecond Act manifeſts no leſs love than the former: It's like the plucking off the Ring from his Finger, when ready to lay his Neck upon the Block, and delivering it to his deareſt Friends, to keep that as a Memorial of him: Take this, &c. in remembrance of me.

In the words read, are four things noted by the Apoſtle about this laſt and lovely Act of Chriſt, viz. the Author, Time, Inſtitution, and End of this holy ſolemn Ordinance.

1. The Author of it, The Lord Jeſus: It's an effect of his Lordly Power, and Royal Authority; Mat. 28. 18. And Jeſus came and ſpake unto them, ſaying, All Power is given unto me in Heaven and Earth: Go ye therefore. The Government is upon his ſhoulder, Iſa. 9. 6. He ſhall bear the Glory, Zech. 6. 13. Who but he that came out of the Boſom of the Father, and is acquainted with all the Counſels that are here, knows what will be acceptable of God? And who but he can give Creatures by his Bleſſing, their ſacramental Efficacy and Virtue? Bread and Wine are naturally fit to refreſh and nouriſh our Bodies; but what fitneſs have they to nouriſh Souls? Surely none but what they receive from the Bleſſing of Chriſt that inſtitutes them.

Authori tas præ pientis ratio p cepti.

2. The Time when the Lord Jeſus appointed this Ordinance; In the ſame night in which he was betrayed: it could not be ſooner, becauſe the Paſſover muſt firſt be celebrated; nor later, for that night he was apprehended. It is therefore emphatically expreſſed ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ, in that ſame Night, that Night for ever to be remembred. He gives that Night a cordial Draught to his Diſciples before the Conflict; he ſettles that Night an Ordinance in the Church, for the confirmation and conſolation of his people in all Generations, to the end of the World. By inſtituting it that Night, he gives abundant evidence of his Care for his People, in ſpending ſo much of that little, very little time he had left, on their account.

3. The Inſtitution it ſelf; in which we have the memorative, ſignificative, inſtructive Signs, and they are Bread and Wine: And the glorious Myſteries repreſented and ſhadowed forth by them, viz. Jeſus Chriſt crucified; the proper New-Teſtament nouriſhment of Believers. Bread and Wine are choice Creatures, and do excellently ſhadow forth the Fleſh and Blood of crucified Jeſus; and that both in their natural uſefulneſs, and manner of preparation. Their uſefulneſs is very great; Bread is a Creature neceſſary to uphold and maintain our natural Life; therefore it's called the ſtaff of Bread, Iſa. 3. 1. becauſe as a feeble Man depends and leans upon his Staff, ſo doth our feeble Spirits upon Bread. Wine was made to chear the heart of Man, Judg. 9. 13. They are both uſeful and excellent Creatures; their preparations to become ſo uſeful to us are alſo remarkable. The Corn muſt be ground in the Mill; the Grapes torn and ſqueezed to pieces in the Wine-preſs, before we can either have Bread or Wine. And when all this is done, they muſt be received into the Body, or they nouriſh not. So that theſe were very fit Creatures to be ſet apart for this uſe and end.

If any object, it's true, they are good Creatures, but not precious enough to be the Signs of ſuch profound and glorious Myſteries: It was worth the creating a new Creature, to be the Sign of the new Covenant.

Let him that thus objects, ask himſelf, whether nothing be precious without Pomp? The preciouſneſs of theſe Elements is not ſo much from their own natures, as their uſe and end: and that makes them precious indeed. A Loadſtone at Sea, is much more excellent than a Diamond, becauſe more uſeful. A penyworth of Wax applied to the Label of a Deed, and ſealed, may in a minute have its value raiſed to thouſands of pounds. Theſe Creatures receive their value and eſtimation on a like account. Nor ſhould it at all remain a wonder to thee, why Chriſt ſhould repreſent himſelf by ſuch mean and common things, when thou haſt well conſidered, that the excellency of the Picture is in its ſimilitude and comformity to the Original; and that Chriſt was in a low, ſad, and very abaſed ſtate, when this Picture of him was drawn; he was then a Man of ſorrows. Theſe then, as lively Signs, ſhadow forth a crucified Jeſus, repreſent him to us in his red Garments. This precious Ordinance may, much more than Paul, ſay to us, I always bear about in my Body, the dying of the Lord Jeſus: That's the thing it ſignifies.

4. Laſtly, Take notice of the Uſe, Deſign, and End of this Inſtitution. Εἰς τὴν ἐμὴν ἀνάμνησιν, in remembrance, or for a memorial of me. O there's much in this: Chriſt knew how apt our baſe hearts would be to loſe him, amidſt ſuch a throng of ſenſible Objects as we here converſe with; and how much that forgetfulneſs of him, and of his Sufferings, would turn to our prejudice and loſs; and therefore doth he appoint a Sign to be remembred by: As oft as ye do this, ye ſhew forth the Lord's Death till he come. Hence we obſerve, ſuitable to the deſign of this Diſcourſe,

What! to order his Picture (as it were) to be drawn when he was dying, to be left with his Spouſe! to rend his own Fleſh, and ſet abroach his own Blood to be Meat and Drink for our Souls! O what manner of Love was this! 'Tis true, his Picture in the Sacrament is full of Scars and Wonders; but theſe are honourable Scars, and highly grace and commend it to his Spouſe, for whoſe dear ſake he here ceived them.

Dominus noſter dum vivens, ejus Sacrificii ſimilitudinem celebrandum in ſuæ mortis memoriam commendavit. Aug.

They are Marks of Love and Honour. And he would be ſo drawn, or rather he ſo drew himſelf, that as oft as his People look'd upon that Portraiture of him, they may remember, and be deeply affected with thoſe things he here indured for their ſakes. Theſe are the Wounds my dear Husband Jeſus received for me. Theſe are the Marks of that Love which paſſes the Love of Creatures. O ſee the Love of a Saviour! This is that Heavenly Pelican that feeds his Young with his own Blood. We have read of pitiful and tender Women that hath eaten the Fleſh of their own Children, Lam. 4. 10. But where is that Woman recorded, that gave her own Fleſh and Blood to be Meat and Drink to her Children? Surely the Spouſe may ſay of the Love of Chriſt, what David in his Lamentations ſaid of the Love of Jonathan, Thy Love to me was wonderful, paſſing the Love of Women. But to prepare the Point to be Meat indeed, and Drink indeed to thy Soul, I ſhall diſcuſs briefly theſe Three things, and haſten to the Application.

Hæc ſunt inſignia laudis.

Firſt, What it is to remember the Lord Jeſus in the Sacrament.

Secondly, What Aptitude there is in that Ordinance, ſo to bring him to our remembrance.

Thirdly, How the Care and Love of Chriſt is diſcovered by leaving ſuch a Memorial of himſelf with us.

Firſt, What it is to remember the Lord Jeſus in the Sacrament.

Remembrance properly, is the return of the Mind to an Object, about which it hath been formerly converſant: And it may ſo return to a thing it hath converſed with before two ways; ſpeculatively, and tranſiently; or affectingly, and premanently. A ſpeculative Remembrance, is only to call to mind the Hiſtory

Ortamemoria, eſt vis redintegratrix, ſive recollectrix earum imaginum, quæ antea quidem memoriæ adhæſerunt, poſtea vero evanuerunt: appellatur uno nomine reminiſcentia. Keckerman. Syſt. Phyſ. l. 4. c. 6. p. (mihi) 534

of ſuch a Perſon, and his Sufferings; that Chriſt was once put to death in the Fleſh. An affectionate Remembrance, is when we ſo call Chriſt and his Death to our Minds, as to feel the powerful Impreſſions thereof upon our Hearts. Thus, Mat. 26. 75. Peter remembred the word of the Lord, and went out, and wept bitterly. His very Heart was melted with that remembrance; his Bowels were pained, he could not hold, but went out and wept abundantly. Thus Joſeph, when he ſaw his Brother Benjamin, whoſe ſight refreſhed the memory of former days and endearments, was greatly affected, Gen. 43. 29, 30. And he lift up his eyes, and ſaw his Brother Benjamin, his Mother's Son; and ſaid, Is this your young Brother, of whom you ſpeak to me? and he ſaid, God be gracious unto thee my Son. And Joſeph made haſte, for his Bowels did yern upon his Brother, and he ſought where to weep; and he entred into his Chamber, and wept there. Such a Remembrance of Chriſt is that which is here intended. This is indeed a gracious Remembrance of Chriſt; the former hath nothing of Grace in it. The time ſhall come when Judas that betrayed him, and the Jews that pierced him, ſhall hiſtorically remember what was done: Rev. 1. 7. Behold he cometh with Clouds, and every eye ſhall ſee him; and they alſo which pierced him: and all Kindreds of the Earth ſhall wail becauſe of him. Then, I ſay, Judas ſhall remember, This is he whom I perfidiouſly betrayed. Pilate ſhall remember, This is he whom I ſentenced to be hanged on the Tree, tho' I was convinced of his Innocency. Then the Soldiers ſhall remember, This is that Face we ſpit upon, that Head we crowned with Thorns: Lo this is he whoſe Side we pierced, whoſe Hands and Feet we once nailed to the Croſs. But this Remembrance will be their torment, not their benefit. It is not therefore a bare hiſtorical, ſpeculative, but a gracious, affectionate, impreſſive Remembrance of Chriſt that is here intended: And ſuch a Remembrance of Chriſt ſuppoſes and includes,

1. The ſaving Knowledge of him. We cannot be ſaid to remember what we never knew; nor to remember ſavingly what we never knew ſavingly. There have been many previous, ſweet and gracious tranſactions, dealings and intimacies betwixt Chriſt and his People, from the time of their firſt happy acquaintance with him: much of that ſweetneſs they have had in former Conſiderations of him, and hours of Communion with him, is loſt and gone; and nothing is more volatile, hazardous and inconſtant, than our ſpiritual Comforts: But now at the Table, there our old Acquaintance is renewed, and the remembrance of his Goodneſs and Love refreſhed and revived: We will remember thy Love more than Wine; the upright love thee, Cant. 1. 4.

2. Such a Remembrance of Chriſt includes Faith in it. Without diſcerning Chriſt at a Sacrament there is no remembrance of him, and without Faith no diſcerning Chriſt there. But when the precious eye of Faith hath ſpied Chriſt under that vail, it preſently calls up the Affections, ſaying, Come ſee the Lord. Theſe are the Wounds he received from me. This is he that loved me, and gave himſelf for me. This is his Fleſh, and that his Blood; ſic oculus, ſic ille manus, &c. ſo his Arms were ſtretched down upon the Croſs to embrace me: So his bleſſed Head hung down to kiſs me. Awake my Love, rouze up my Hope, flame out my Deſires; Come forth O all ye Powers and Affections of my Soul; come ſee the Lord. No ſooner doth Chriſt by his Spirit call to the Believer, but Faith hears; and diſcerning the Voice, turns about, like Mary, ſaying, Rabboni, my Lord, my Maſter.

3. This Remembrance of Chriſt includes ſuitable Impreſſions made upon the Affections, by ſuch a Sight and Remembrance of him: And therein lyes the nature of that precious thing which we call Communion with God. Various Repreſentations of Chriſt are made at the Table. Sometimes the Soul there calls to mind the infinite Wiſdom, that ſo contriv'd and laid the glorious and myſterious deſign and project of Redemption: The effect of this is wonder and admiration. O the manifold Wiſdom of God! Eph. 3. 10. O the depths, the heights, the length, the breadth of this Wiſdom! I can as eaſily ſpan the Heavens, as take the juſt dimenſions of it. Sometimes a Repreſentation of the Severity of God is made to the Soul at that Ordinance. O how inflexible and ſevere is the Juſtice of God! What no abatements! No ſparing Mercy! Not to his own Son! This begets a double Impreſſion on the Heart.

(1.) Juſt and deep Indignation againſt Sin. Ah curſed Sin! 'Twas thou uſedſt my dear Lord ſo; for thy ſake he underwent all this. If thy Vileneſs had not been ſo great, his Sufferings had not been ſo many. Curſed Sin! thou waſt the Knife that ſtabb'd him: Thou the Sword that pierced him. Ah what Revenge it works! I remember it's ſtoried of one of the Kings of France, that hearing his Biſhop (as I remember it was Remigius) read the Hiſtory of Chriſt's Trial and Execution, and hearing how barbarouſly they had uſed him, he was moved with ſo tragical and pathetical a Hiſtory, to great Indignation againſt Pilate, the Jews, and the rude and bloody Soldiers, and could not contain himſelf; but cried out as the Biſhop was reading, O that I had been there with my Frenchmen, I would have cut all their Throats, who ſo barbarouſly uſed my Saviour.

Magna amaritudo peccati, quæ tantum amaritudinem perprit. Aug.

To allude to this: When the Believer conſiders and remembers that Sin put Chriſt to all that Shame and Ignominy, that he was wounded for our Tranſgreſſions, he is filled with hatred of Sin, and cries out, O Sin, I will revenge the Blood of Chriſt upon thee! Thou ſhalt never live a quiet hour in my Heart. And,

(2.) It produces an humble Adoration of the Goodneſs and Mercy of God, to exact ſatisfaction for our Sins, by ſuch bloody Stripes, from our Surety. Lord, if this Wrath had ſeized on me, as it did on Chriſt, what had been my condition then! If theſe things were done in the green tree, what had been the caſe of the dry tree?

Sometimes Repreſentations (and not common ones) are made of the Love of Chriſt, who aſſumed a Body and Soul on purpoſe to bear bear the Wrath of God for our Sins. And when that ſurpaſſing Love breaks out in its glory upon the Soul, how is the Soul tranſported and raviſhed with it! Crying out, What manner of Love is this! Here's a Love large enough to go round the Heavens, and the Heaven of Heavens. Who ever loved after this rate, to lay down his life for Enemies! O Love unutterable and unconceiveable! How glorious is my Love in his red Garments! Sometimes the fruits of his Death are there glorioſly diſplayed; even his ſatisfaction for Sin, and the purchaſe his Blood made of the eternal Inheritance: And this begets Thankfulneſs and Confidence in the Soul. Chriſt is Dead, and his Death hath ſatisfied for my Sin. Chriſt is dead, therefore my Soul ſhall never die. Who ſhall ſeparate me from the Love of God? Theſe are the fruits, and and this is the nature of that remembrance of Chriſt here ſpoken of.

m conſpicis Dominum, inter mortales verſari cenſes? non potius è veſtigio in cœlos transferri? Chryſoſt. Hom. lib. 3.

Secondly, What aptitude or conducency is there in this Ordinance, to bring Chriſt ſo to remembrance?

Much every way; for it is a Sign by him appointed to that end, and hath (as Divines well obſerve) a threefold uſe and conſideration, viz. as it is memorative, ſignificative, and inſtructive.

Quoties hæc cœna celebratur, toties Chriſtus moritur; cruce pendentem Dominum videamus. Aug. in Pſal. 21.

1. As it is memorative, and ſo it hath the nature and uſe of a pledge or token of Love, left by a dying, to a dear ſurviving Friend. And ſo the Sacrament, as was ſaid before, is like a Ring pluckt off from Chriſt's Finger, or a Bracelet from his Arm; or rather his Picture from his Breaſt, delivered to us with ſuch words as theſe; As oft as you look to this, remember me: Let this help to keep me alive in your remembrance when I am gone, and out of your ſight. It conduces to it alſo,

2. As it is a ſignificative ſign, moſt aptly ſignifying both his bitter Sufferings for us, and our ſtrict and intimate Union with him: Both which have an excellent uſefulneſs to move the heart, and its deepeſt Affections are the remembrance of it. The breaking of the Bread, and ſhedding forth the Wine, ſignifies the former; our eating, drinking, and incorporating them, is a lively ſignification of the other.

3. Moreover this Ordinance hath an excellent uſe and advantage for this affectionate remembrance of Chriſt, as it is an inſtructive ſign. And it many ways inſtructs us, and enlightens our mind, particularly in the Truths which are very affecting things.

1. That Chriſt is the Bread on which our Souls live, proper meat and drink for Believers, the moſt excellent New Teſtament-food. It's ſaid, Pſal. 78. 25. Man did eat Angels food: He means the Manna that fell from Heaven. Which was ſo excellent, that if Angels, who are the nobleſt Creatures, did live upon material Food, they would chuſe this above all to feed on. And yet this was but a Type and weak Shadow of Chriſt, on whom Believers feed. Chriſt makes a Royal Feaſt of his own Fleſh and Blood, Iſa. 25. 6. all our Delicates are in him.

2. It inſtructs us that the New Teſtament is now in its full force, and no ſubſtantial alteration can be made in it, ſince the Teſtator is dead, and by his Death hath ratified it. So that all the excellent Promiſes and Bleſſings of it are now fully confirmed to the believing Soul, Heb. 9. 16, 17. All theſe, and many more choice Truths, are we inſtructed in by this Sign: And all theſe ways it remembers us of Chriſt, and helps powerfully to raiſe, warm, and affect our Hearts with that remembrance of him.

Thirdly, The laſt Enquiry is, How Chriſt hath hereby left ſuch a ſpecial mark of his Care for, and Love to his People. And that will evidently appear, if you conſider theſe five particulars.

1. This is a ſpecial mark of the Care and Love of Chriſt, in as much as hereby he hath made abundant proviſion for the confirmation and eſtabliſhment of his Peoples Faith to the end of the World. For this being an evident proof that the New Teſtament is in its full force, (Mat. 26. 28. This is the Cup of the New Teſtament in my Blood) it tends as much to our ſatisfaction, as the legal execution of a Deed, by which we hold and enjoy our Eſtate. So that when he ſaith, Take eat, it is as much as if God ſhould ſtand before you at the Table with Chriſt, and all the Promiſes in his hand; and ſay, I deliver this to thee as my Deed. What think you, doth this promote and confirm the Faith of a Believer? If it doth not, what doth?

2. This is a ſpecial mark of Chriſt's Care and Love, in as much as by this he hath made like abundant Proviſion for the enlargement of his peoples Joy and Comfort. Believers are at this Ordinance, as Mary was at the Sepulchre, with Fear, and great Joy, Mat. 28. 8. Come Reader, ſpeak thy Heart, if thou be one that heartily loveſt Jeſus Chriſt, and hath gone many days, poſſibly years, mourning and lamenting becauſe of the inevidence and cloudineſs of thy Intereſt in him; that haſt ſought him ſorrowing, in this Ordinance, and in that; in one duty, and another, if at laſt Chriſt ſhould take off that Mask, that cruel Covering (as one calls it) from his Face, and be known of thee in breaking Bread: Suppoſe he ſhould by his Spirit whiſper thus in thine ear as thou ſitteſt at his Table, Doſt thou indeed ſo prize, eſteem and value me? Will nothing but Chriſt and his Love content and ſatisfie thee? Then, as ſweet, lovely and deſirable as I am, know that I am thine; take thine own Chriſt into the arms of thy Faith this day: Would not this breed in thy Soul a Joy tranſcendent to all the Joys and Pleaſures in this World? What thinkeſt thou of it?

3. Here is a ſignal mark of Chriſt's Care and Love, in as much as this is one of the higheſt and beſt helps for the mortification of the Corruptions of his People. Nothing tends more to the killing of Sin, than this doth. Chriſt's Blood, as it's food to Faith, ſo it's poiſon to our Luſts. O what a Pill is wrapt up in that Bread! What an excellent Potion is in that Cup to purge the Soul? One calls that Table an Altar, on which our Corruptions are ſacrificed and ſlain before the Lord. For how can they that there ſee what Chriſt ſuffered for Sin, live any longer therein?

4. Moreover his Care and Love appear in providing ſuch Bellows as theſe, to excite and blow up his Peoples Love into a lively Flame. When Joſeph made himſelf known to his Brethren, thren, I am Joſeph your Brother, whom ye ſold, be not grieved; O! what a ſhower of Tears and dear Affections was there? How did they fall upon each other Necks! So that the Egyptians wondered at the matter. How doth the Soul (if I may ſo ſpeak) paſſionately love Jeſus Chriſt at ſuch a time? O what a Chriſt is my Chriſt! The faireſt among ten thouſand. What hath he done, what hath he ſuffered for me! What great things hath my Jeſus given, and what great things hath he forgiven me! A World, a thouſand Worlds cannot ſhew ſuch another. Here it's melted down by Love at his feet; it's pain'd with Love.

5. To conclude, Chriſt's Care and Love are farther manifeſted to his People in this Ordinance, as it is of the ſtrongeſt bonds of Union betwixt themſelves that can be: 1 Cor. 10. 17. We being many, are one Bread, and one Body; for we are all partakers of that one Bread. And tho' thro' our Corruptions it falls out, that what was intended for a bond of Union, proves a bond of Contention; yet in as much as by this it appears how dearly Chriſt loved them; for as much alſo as here they are ſealed up to the ſame Inheritance, their dividing Corruptions here ſlain, their Love to Chriſt, and conſequently to each other, here improved; it is certainly one of the ſtrongeſt Ties in the World, to wrap up gracious Hearts in a bundle of Love.

And thus I have diſpatcht the doctrinal part of this Point. The improvement of it is in the following Inference.

Inference 1. Did Chriſt leave this Ordinance with his Church to preſerve his remembrance among his People? Then ſurely Chriſt foreſaw, that notwithſtanding what he is, hath done, ſuffered, and promiſed yet to do for his People, they will for all this be ſtill apt to forget him.

A Man would think that ſuch a Chriſt ſhould never be one whole hour together out of his Peoples Thoughts and Affections: That whereever they go, they ſhould carry him up and down with them, in their Thoughts, Deſires, and Delights: That they ſhould let their Thoughts work towards Chriſt as the longing Thoughts of her that is with Child do work after that ſhe longs for: That they ſhould lye down with Chriſt in their Thoughts at Night, and when they awake be ſtill with him: That their very Dreams in the night ſhould be ſweet Viſions of Chriſt, and all their Words ſavour of Chriſt.

But O the baſeneſs of theſe Hearts! Here we live and converſe in a World of ſenſible Objects, which like a Company of Thieves rob us of our Chriſt, and lay the dead Child in his room. Wo is me, that it ſhould be ſo with me, who am ſo obliged to love him! Tho' he be in the higheſt Glory in Heaven, he doth not forget us; he hath graven us upon the Palms of his Hands; we are continually before him. He thinks on us, when we forget him. The whole Honour and Glory paid him in Heaven by the Angels, cannot divert his Thoughts one moment from us; but every trifle that meets us in the way, is enough to divert our Thoughts from him. Why do we not abhor and loath our ſelves for this? What! Is it a plain, a burden, to carry Chriſt in our Thoughts about the World? As much a Burden if thy Heart be ſpiritual, as a Bird is burdened by carrying his own Wings.

Will ſuch Thoughts intrude unſeaſonably, and thruſt greater things than Chriſt out of our Minds? For ſhame, Chriſtian, for ſhame, let not thy Heart play the wanton, and gad from Chriſt after every Vanity. In Heaven nothing elſe takes up the Thoughts of Saints to eternity; and yet there is no tiring, no ſatiety. O learn to live nearer that heavenly Life. Never leave praying and ſtriving, till thou canſt ſay as it is, Pſal. 63. 5. My Soul ſhall be ſatisfied as with marrow and fatneſs, and my Mouth ſhall praiſe thee with joyful Lips; whilſt I remember thee on my bed, and meditate on thee in the night-watches.

Inference 2. Hence alſo we infer, that Sacrament-ſeaſons are Heart-melting ſeaſons; becauſe therein the moſt affecting and heart-melting Recognitions and Repreſentations of Chriſt are made. As the Goſpel offers him to the ear, in the moſt ſweet affecting ſounds of Grace; ſo the Sacrament to the eye, in the moſt taking Viſions that are on this ſide Heaven.

There, Hearts that will not yeild a Tear under other Ordinances, can pour out Floods: Zech. 12. 10. They ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and mourn. Yet I dare not affirm, that every one whoſe Heart is broken by the believing ſight of Chriſt there, can evidence that it is ſo by a dropping Eye. No, we may ſay of Tears, as it's ſaid of Love, Cant. 8. 7. If ſome Chriſtians would give all the Treaſures of their Houſe for them, they cannot be purchaſed: Yet they are truly humbled for Sin, and ſeriouſly affected with the Grace of Chriſt. For the ſupport of ſuch, I would diſtinguiſh, and have them to do ſo alſo, betwixt what is eſſential to ſpiritual Sorrow, and what is contingent. Deep diſpleaſure with thy ſelf for Sin, hearty reſolutions and deſires of the compleat mortification of it, this is eſſential to all ſpiritual Sorrow; but Tears are accidental, and in ſome Conſtitutions rarely found. If thou have the former, trouble not thy ſelf for want of the latter, tho' 'tis a mercy when they kindly and undiſſembledly flow from a Heart truly broken.

And ſurely, to ſee who it is that thy Sins have pierced, how great, how glorious, how wonderful a Perſon that was, that was ſo humbled, abaſed, and brought to the duſt, for ſuch a wretched thing as thou art, cannot but tenderly affect the conſiderating Soul. If it was for a Lamentation in the Captivity, that Princes were hanged up by the Hands, and the Faces of the Elders not reverenced, Lam. 5. 12. And if at the death of Abner, David could lament, and ſay, a Prince, and a great Man is fallen in Iſrael this day, 2 Sam. 3. 38. If he could pathetically lament the death of Saul and Jonathan, ſaying, Daughters of Iſrael, weep over Saul, who cloathed you in Scarlet; The beauty of Iſrael is ſlain upon the high places: Ah how much more ſhould it affect us, to ſee the Beauty of Heaven fallen, the Prince of Life hang dead upon a Tree! O let the place where you aſſemble to ſee this ſight of your crucified Jeſus, be a Bokin, a place of Lamentation.

Inference 3. Moreover hence it's evident, that the believing and affectionate remembrance of Chriſt, is of ſingular advantage at all times to the People of God. For it's the immediate end of one of the greateſt Ordinances that ever Chriſt appointed to the Church.

To have frequent recognitions of Chriſt will appear to be ſingularly efficacious and uſeful to Believers, if you conſider,

1. If at any time the Heart be dead and hard, this is the likelieſt means in the World to diſſolve, melt and quicken it. Look hithet hard Heart; hard indeed if this Hammer will not break it. Behold the Blood of Jeſus.

2. Art thou eaſily overcome by Temptations to Sin? This is the moſt powerful pull-back in the World from Sin; Rom. 6. 2. How ſhall we that are dead to Sin, live any longer therein? We are crucified with Chriſt, what have we to do with Sin? Have ſuch a thought as this, when thy heart is yeilding to Temptation, How can I do this, and crucifie the Son of God afreſh! Hath he not ſuffered enough already on earth, ſhall I yet make him groan as it were for me in Heaven? Look as David poured the water brought from the Well of Bethlehem on the ground, tho' he was athirſt, for he ſaid, it is the Blood of the men; i. e. they eminently hazarded their Lives to fetch it; much more ſhould a Chriſtian pour out upon the ground, yea, deſpiſe and trample underfoot the greateſt profit or pleaſure of ſin; ſaying, Nay, I will have nothing to do with it, I will on no terms touch it, for it is the Blood of Chriſt: It coſt Blood, infinite precious Blood, to expiate it. If there were a Knife in your Houſe that had been thruſt to the Heart of your Father, you would not take pleaſure to ſee that Knife, much leſs to uſe it.

3. Are you afraid your ſins are not pardoned, but ſtill ſtand upon account before the Lord? what more relieving, what more ſatisfying, than to ſee the Cup in the New Teſtament in the blood of Chriſt, which is ſhed for many for the remiſſion of Sins? Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's Elect? it's Chriſt that died.

4. Are you ſtaggered at your Sufferings, and hard things you muſt endure for Chriſt in this World? doth the Fleſh ſhrink back from theſe things, and cry, ſpare thy ſelf? What is there in the World more likely to ſteel and fortifie thy Spirit with reſolution and courage, than ſuch a ſight as this? Did Chriſt face the Wrath of Men, and the Wrath of God too? Did he ſtand as a Pillar of Braſs, with unbroken Patience, and ſtedfaſt Reſolution, under ſuch Troubles as never met in the like height upon any meer Creature, till Death beat the laſt Breath out of his Noſtrils? And ſhall I ſhrink for a trifle? Ah, he did not ſerve me ſo! I will arm my ſelf with the like mind, 1 Pet. 2. 2.

5. Is thy Faith ſtaggered at the Promiſes? canſt thou not reſt upon a Promiſe? Here's that will help thee againſt hope to believe in hope, giving glory to God. For this is God's Seal added to his Covenant, which ratifies and binds faſt all that God hath ſpoken.

6. Doſt thou idle away precious Time vainly, and live unuſefully to Chriſt in thy Generation? what more apt both to convince and cure thee, than ſuch a remembrance of Chriſt as this? O when thou conſidereſt thou art not thine own, thy Time, thy Talents are not thine own, but Chriſt's; when thou ſhalt ſee thou art bought with a Price (a great Price indeed) and ſo art ſtrictly obliged to glorifie God, with thy Soul and Body, which are his, 2 Cor. 5. 14. This will powerfully awake a dull, ſluggiſh and lazy Spirit. In a word, what Grace is there this remembrance of Chriſt cannot quicken? What Sin cannot it mortifie? What Duty cannot it animate? O it is of ſingular uſe in all caſes to the People of God!

Inference 4. Laſtly, Hence we infer; Tho' all other things do, yet Chriſt neither doth, nor can grow ſtale. Here's an Ordinance to preſerve his remembrance freſh to the end of the World. The Blood of Chriſt doth never dry up. The beauty of this Roſe of Sharon is never loſt or withered. He is the ſame yeſterday, to day, and for ever. As his Body in the Grave ſaw no Corruption, ſo neither can his Love, or any of his Excellencies. When the Saints ſhall have fed their eyes upon him in Heaven thouſands and millions of years, he ſhall be as Freſh, Beautiful, and Orient as at the beginning. Other Beauties have their prime and their fading time; but Chriſt's abides eternally. Our delight in Creatures is often moſt at firſt acquaintance; when we come nearer to them, and ſee more of them, the edge of our Delight is rebated: But the longer you know Chriſt, and the nearer you come to him, ſtill the more do you ſee of his Glory. Every farther proſpect of Chriſt entertains the mind with a freſh Delight. He is as it were a new Chriſt every day, and yet the ſame Chriſt ſtill.

Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

SERMON XXII.

Serm. 22. pens he third repara- ve act f Chriſt r his wn eath.

LUK. XXII. 41, 42, 43, 44.

And he was withdrawn from them about a Stone's caſt, and kneeled down, and prayed; ſaying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this Cup from me: Nevertheleſs, not my Will, but thine be done. And there appeared an Angel unto him from Heaven, ſtrengthning him. And being in an Agony, he prayed more earneſtly; and his Sweat was as it were great drops of Blood falling down to the Ground.

THE hour is now almoſt come, even that hour of Sorrow, which Chriſt had ſo often ſpoken of. Yet a little, a very little while, and the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of Sinners. He hath affectionately recommended his Children to his Father. He hath ſet his houſe in order, and ordained a Memorial of his Death to be left with his People, as you have heard. There is but one thing more to do, and then the Tragedy begins. He recommended us, he muſt alſo recommend himſelf by prayer to the Father; and when that is done, he is ready, let Judas with the black Guard come when they will.

This laſt Act of Chriſt's preparation for his own Death, is contained in this Scripture: Wherein we have an account, 1. Of his Prayer. 2. Of the Agony attending it. 3. His relief in that Agony, by an Angel that came and comforted him.

1. The Prayer of Chriſt; in a praying poſture he will be found when the Enemy comes; he will be taken upon his Knees: He was pleading hard with God in Prayer, for Strength to carry him through this heavy Trial, when they came to take him. And this Prayer was a very remarkable Prayer, both for the ſolitarineſs of it; he withdrew about a ſtone's caſt, verſ. 41. from his deareſt intimates; no ear but his Father's ſhall hear what he had now to ſay. For the vehemency and importunity of it, theſe were thoſe ἱκετηρίας, Heb. 5. 7. ſtrong cries that he poured out to God in the days of his Fleſh. And for the Humility expreſſed in it, he fell upon the ground, he rouled himſelf as it were in the Duſt, at his Father's Feet. And in divers others reſpects it was a very remarkable Prayer, as you will hear anon.

2. This Scripture gives you alſo an account of the Agony of Chriſt, as well as of his Prayer, and that a moſt ſtrange one; ſuch as in all reſpects never was known before in Nature. It was a Sweat as it had been Blood, which [as] is neither an Hyperbole, as ſome would make it; nor yet a meer ſimilitude of Blood, as others fancy, but a real bloody Sweat. For ſo [as] is ſometimes taken for the very thing it ſelf, as Joh. 1. 14. And as a worthy Divine of our own well notes, that if the Holy Ghoſt had only intended it for a ſimilitude or reſemblance, he would rather have expreſſed it, as it were drops of Water, than as it were drops of Blood; for Sweat more reſembles Water than Blood.

Mr. Ambroſe looking to Jeſus.

3. You have here his relief in this his Agony, and that by an Angel diſpatcht Poſt from Heaven to comfort him. The Lord of Angels now needed the comfort of an Angel. It was time to have a little refreſhment, when his Face and Body too ſtood as full of drops of Blood, as the drops of Dew are upon the Graſs. Hence we note, Doct. That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was praying to his Father in an extraordinary Agony, when they came to apprehend him in the Garden.

To open and prepare this laſt Act of preparation on Chriſt's part for our uſe, I ſhall at this time ſpeak to theſe particulars. Firſt, The place where he prayed. Secondly, The time when he prayed. Thirdly, The matter of his Prayer. And laſtly, The manner how he prayed.

Firſt, For the circumſtance of Place, where was this laſt and remarkable Prayer poured out to God? It was in the Garden; St. Matthew tells us it was called Gethſemane, which ſignifies (as Pareus on the place obſerves) the Valley of fatneſs, viz. of Olives, which grew in that Valley or Garden moſt plentifully. This Garden lay very near to the City of Jeruſalem. The City had twelve Gates, five of which were on the Eaſt ſide of it, among which the moſt remarkable were the Fountain-gate, ſo called of the Fountain Siloe. Through this gate Chriſt rode into the City in triumph, when he came from Bethany. The other was the Sheep-gate ſo called from the multitude of ſheep driven in at it for the Sacrifice, for it ſtood cloſe by the Temple; and cloſe by this gate was the Garden called Gethſemane, where they apprehended Chriſt, and led him through this gate, as a ſheep to the Slaughter. Betwixt this Garden and the City, ran the brook Cedron, which roſe from a Hill upon the South, and ran upon the Eaſt part of the City, between Jeruſalem and the Mount of Olives: and over this Brook Chriſt paſſed into the Garden, Joh. 18. 1. to which the Pſalmiſt alludes in Pſal. 110. 7. He ſhall drink of the brook in the way, therefore ſhall he lift up the head. For this Brook running through the Valley of Jehoſaphat, that fertile Soil, together with the filth of the City which it waſht away, gave the Waters a black tincture, and ſo fitly reſembled thoſe grievous ſufferings of Chriſt, in which he taſted both the Wrath of God and Men.

In locum Gethſemane, Gr. χωρίον; reddunt villam, vel prædium, dictum Gethſemane; Heb. גיאשמנים quod ſonat vallem pinguium, nempe olearum, quæ nimirum iſtic uberius proveniebant. Par.

Now Chriſt went not into this Garden to hide or ſhelter himſelf from his Enemies. No, that was not his end; for if ſo, it had been the moſt improper place he could have choſen: it being the accuſtomed place where he was wont to pray, and a place well known to Judas, who was now coming to ſeek him, as you may ſee, Joh. 18. 2. And Judas which betrayed him, knew the place, for Jeſus oft-times reſorted thither with his Diſciples. So that he repairs thither, not to ſhun, but to meet the Enemy, to offer himſelf as a prey to the Wolves, which there found him, and laid hold upon him. He alſo reſorted thither for an hour or two of privacy before they came, that he might there freely pour out his Soul to God. So much for the Circumſtance of Place where he prayed.

Secondly, We ſhall conſider the Time when he entred into this Garden to pray: And it was in the ſhutting in of the Evening; for it was after the Paſſover, and the Supper were ended. Then (as Matthew hath it, chap. 26. 36.) Jeſus went over the Brook into the Garden, betwixt the hours of nine and ten in the Evening, as it is conjectured, and ſo he had betwixt two and three hours time to pour out his Soul to God. For it was about Midnight that Judas and the Soldiers came and apprehended him there. So that it being immediately before his apprehenſion, it ſhews us in what frame and poſture Chriſt deſired to be found: and by it he left us an excellent Pattern, what we ought to do, when imminent Dangers are near us, even at the door. It becomes a Soldier to die fighting, and a Miniſter to die preaching, and a Chriſtian to die praying. If they come, they find Chriſt upon his Knees, wreſtling mightily with God by prayer. He never ſpent one moment ment of the time of this Life idly; but theſe were the laſt moments he had to live in the World, and here you may ſee how they were filled up and imployed.

Thirdly, Next let us conſider the Matter of his Prayer, or the things about which he poured out his Soul to God in the Garden that Evening. And verſ. 42. informs us what that was: He prayed, ſaying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this Cup from me; nevertheleſs not my will, but thine be done. Theſe words are involved in many difficulties, as Chriſt himſelf was when he uttered them. By the Cup, underſtand that portion of Sorrows then to be diſtributed to him by his Father. Great Afflictions and bitter Trials are frequently expreſſed in Scripture under the Metaphor of a Cup. So that dreadful Storm of Wrath upon the Wicked in Pſal. 11. 6. upon the Wicked he ſhall rain ſnares, fire and brimſtone, and a horrible tempeſt; this ſhall be the portion of their Cup, i. e. the Puniſhment allotted to them by God for their Wickedneſs. And an exceeding great Miſery, by a large or deep Cup. So Ezek. 23. 32, 33. Thou ſhalt drink of thy Siſter's Cup deep and large, thou ſhalt be laughed to ſcorn, and had in deriſion; it containeth much. Thou ſhalt be filled with drunkenneſs and ſorrow, with the Cup of aſtoniſhment and deſolation; with the Cup of thy Siſter Samaria. And when an Affliction is compounded of many bitter Ingredients, ſtinging and aggravating Conſiderations and Circumſtances, then it's ſaid to be mixed. In the hand of the Lord there is a Cup, and the Wine is red, (noting a bloody trial) It is full of mixture, and he poureth out the ſame, but the dregs thereof all the Wicked of the earth ſhall wring them out, and drink them: i. e. they ſhall have the worſt part of the Judgment for their ſhare. Thus Afflictions and Calamities are expreſt by the Metaphor of a Cup; great Calamities, by a deep and large Cup; Afflictions compounded of many aggravating circumſtances, by a mixed Cup. And from the effect it hath on them that muſt drink it, it's called a Cup of trembling, Iſa. 57. 17. Thou haſt drunken at the hand of the Lord, the Cup of his fury, the dregs of the Cup of trembling. Such a Cup now was Chriſt's Cup; a Cup of Wrath, a large and deep Cup, that contained more Wrath than ever was drunk by any Creature, even the Wrath of an infinite God. A mixed Cup; mixed with God's Wrath and Man's in the extremity. And all the bitter aggravating circumſtances that ever could be imagined; great conſternation and amazement; this was the portion of his Cup.

By the paſſing of the Cup from him, underſtand his exemption from ſuffering that dreadful and horrid Wrath of God, which he foreſaw to be now at hand. For as the coming of the Cup to a Man, doth in Scripture-phraſe note his bearing and ſuffering of Evil, as you find it, Lam. 4. 21. Rejoice, and be glad, O Daughter of Edom, that dwelleſt in the Land of Uz; the Cup alſo ſhall paſs through unto thee; thou ſhalt be drunken, and make thy ſelf naked; which is an ironical reproof of the Idumeans, the Jews deadly Enemies, who wickedly inſulted over them, when the cup was at their mouths: As if the Lord had ſaid, You have laugh'd and jeer'd at my People, when my hand was on them, you rejoiced to ſee their Calamities: Well, make your ſelves merry ſtill if you can, the Cup ſhall paſs through unto thee; thy turn is coming, then laugh if thou canſt. So on the contrary, the paſſing away of the Cup, notes freedom from, or our eſcaping of thoſe Miſeries. And ſo Chriſt's meaning in this conditional requeſt is, Father, if it be thy will, excuſe me from this dreadful Wrath, my Soul is amazed at it. Is there no way to ſhun it? Cannot I be excuſed? O if it be poſſible, ſpare me. This is the meaning of it. But then here's the difficulty, how Chriſt who knew God had from everlaſting determined he ſhould drink it, who had compacted and agreed with him in the Covenant of Redemption ſo to do, who came as (himſelf acknowledges) for that end into the World, John 18. 37. who foreſaw this Hour all along, and profeſſed when he ſpake of this Blood-Baptiſm with which he was to be baptized, that he was ſtraitned till it was accompliſh'd, Luk. 12. 50. How (I ſay) to reconcile all this with ſuch a Petition, that now when the Cup was delivered to him, it might paſs, or he be excuſed from ſuffering; this is the Knot, this is the Difficulty.

What! Did he now repent of the Bargain? Was all he ſaid before but a flouriſh, before he ſaw the Enemy? Doth he now begin to wiſh his Bargain dry, and that he had never undertaken ſuch a work? Is that the meaning of it? Nothing leſs; No, no, Chriſt never repented of his Engagement to the Father, never was willing to let the Burden lye on us, rather than on himſelf; there was not ſuch a thought in his holy and faithful Heart: But the reſolution of this Doubt depends upon another diſtinction, which will clear his meaning in it.

1*ſt*. You muſt diſtinguiſh of Prayers. Some are abſolute and peremptory; and ſo to have prayed that the Cup might paſs, would have been chargeable with ſuch abſurdities as were but now mentioned: Others are conditional and ſubmiſſive Prayers, If it may be, if the Lord pleaſe. And ſuch was this, if thou be willing; if not I'll drink it. But you will ſay, Chriſt knew what was the Mind of God in that caſe; he knew what Tranſactions had of old been betwixt his Father and him; and therefore tho' he did not pray abſolutely, yet it's ſtrange he would pray conditionally, it might paſs. Therefore in the

2*d*. Place, you muſt diſtinguiſh of the Natures according to which Chriſt acted. He acted ſometimes as God, and ſometimes as Man. Here he acted according to his human Nature; ſimply expreſſing, and manifeſting in this Requeſt the reluctency it had at ſuch ſufferings; Wherein he ſhewed himſelf a true Man, in ſhuning that which is deſtructive to his Nature.

As Chriſt had two diſtinct Natures, ſo two diſtinct Wills. And (as one well obſerves) in the Life of Chriſt there was an intermixture of Power and Weakneſs, of the Divine Glory, and human Frailty. At his Birth a Star ſhone, but he was laid in a Manger. The Devil tempted him in the Wilderneſs, but there Angels miniſtred to him. As Man he was deceived in the Fig-tree, but as God he blaſted it. He was caught by the Soldiers in the Garden, but firſt made them fall back. So here, as Man he feared and ſhunned Death; but as God man he willingly ſubmitted to it.

Deodati Annot. in Matth. 26. 39.

"It was (as Deodati well expreſſes it) a "purely natural deſire, meer Man, by which for "a ſhort moment he apprehended and ſhunned "Death and Torments; but quickly recalled "himſelf to Obedience, by a deliberate Will, "to ſubmit himſelf to God. And beſides that, "this deſire was but conditional, under the "Will of God, accepted by Chriſt; but from "the contemplation of which he was a while "diverted by the extremity of Horrors: There-"fore there was no Sin in it, but only a ſhort "conflict of Nature, preſently overcome by Rea-"ſon, and a firm Will; or a ſmall Suſpenſion, "quickly overcome by a moſt ſtrong Reſolution. "Finally, this ſacred deliberation in Jeſus was "not made ſimply, or in an inſtant, but "with a ſhort time, and with a counter-"poiſe, which is the natural property of the "Soul in its Motions and voluntary Actions.

In a word, as there was nothing of Sin in it, it being a pure and ſinleſs affection of Nature: ſo there was much good in it, and that both as it was a part of his Satisfaction for our Sin, to ſuffer inwardly ſuch Fears, Tremblings, and Conſternations: And as it was a clear evidence that he was in all things made like unto his Brethren, except Sin. And laſtly, as it ſerves notably to expreſs the grievouſneſs and extremity of Chriſt's Sufferings, whoſe very proſpect and appearance at ſome diſtance was ſo dreadful to him.

Parker de deſcenſu, lib. 3. p. 192, &c.

If the Learned Reader deſire to ſee what is farther ſaid on this Point, let him read what the judicious and learned Parker, in his excellent Book de deſcenſu, hath collected upon that caſe.

Fourthly, Let us conſider the Manner how he prayed, and that was,

1. Solitarily. He doth not here pray in the audience of his Diſciples, as he had done before, but went at a diſtance from them. He had now private buſineſs to tranſact with God. He left ſome of them at the entring into the Garden; and for Peter, James and John, that went farther with him than the reſt, he bids them remain there while he went and prayed. He did not deſire them to pray with him, or for him; no, he muſt tread the Wine-preſs alone. Nor will he have them with him, poſſibly leſt it ſhould diſcourage them to ſee and hear how he groaned, ſweat, trembled, and cried, as one in an Agony, to his Father.

Triſtitiæ medelem quærit in precibus; quibus ut liberius vacare poſſit, modicum ſecedit.

Reader, there are Times and Caſes, when a Chriſtian would not be willing the deareſt and moſt intimate Friend he hath in the World, ſhould be privy to what paſſes betwixt him and his God.

2. It was an humble Prayer, that's evident by the poſtures into which he caſt himſelf: Sometimes kneeling, and ſometimes proſtrate upon his Face. He creeps in the very Duſt, lower he cannot fall; and his Heart was as low as his Body. He is meek and lowly indeed.

3. It was a reiterated Prayer; he prays, and then returns to the Diſciples, as a Man in extremity turns every way for comfort: So Chriſt prays, Father, let this Cup paſs, but in that the Father hears him not; tho' as to ſupport he was heard. Being denied deliverance by his Father, he goes and bemoans himſelf to his penſive Friends; and complains bitterly to them, My Soul is exceeding ſorrowful, even unto Death. He would eaſe himſelf a little, by opening his condition to them; but alas, they rather encreaſe than eaſe his burden. For he finds them aſleep, which occaſioned that gentle reprehenſion from him, Mat. 26. 40. What could you not watch with me one hour? What, not watch with me? Who may expect it from you more than I? Could you not watch? I am going to die for you, and cannot you watch with me? What! Cannot you watch with me one hour? Alas! What if I had required great matters from you? What! Not an hour, and that the parting hour too! Chriſt finds no eaſe from them, and back again he goes to that ſad place, which he had ſtained and purpled with a bloody ſweat, and prays to the ſame purpoſe again. O how he returns upon God over and over, as if he reſolved to take no denial! But however, conſidering it muſt be ſo, he ſweetly falls in with his Father's will, Thy will be done.

4. And laſtly, It was a Prayer accompanied with a ſtrange and wonderful Agony: So ſaith verſ. 44. And being in an Agony he prayed more earneſtly; and his Sweat was as it were great drops of Blood falling down to the ground. Now he was red indeed in his apparel as one that trod the Wine-preſs: It was not a faint thin dew, but a clotted Sweat θρόμβοι αἵματος, clodders of blood falling upon the ground. It is diſputed whether this Sweat were natural, or preternatural. That ſome in extremity have ſweat a kind of bloody thin dew, is affirmed. I remember Thuanus gives us two inſtances that come neareſt to this, of any thing I ever obſerved or heard of. The one was a Captain, who by a cowardly and unworthy fear of death, was ſo overwhelm'd with anguiſh, that a kind of bloody Dew or Sweat ſtood on all his Body. The other is of a young Man, condemned for a ſmall matter to die by Sixtus the 5th, who poured out Tears of Blood from his Eyes, and ſweat Blood from his whole Body.

Non fuit ſudor diaphoreticus, ſed craſſus & grumoſus. Dux quidem indigno mortis metu adeo concuſſus in animo fuit, ut ſanguineum ſudorem toto corpore fudit. Thuan. Lib. 11.

Juvenis ob levem cauſam, a Sixto 5. ad mortem damnatus, præ doloris vehementia, lacrimas cruentas ſudiſſe, & ſanguinem pro ſudore è toto corpore mittere viſus eſt. Thuan. Lib. 80.

Theſe are ſtrange and rare Inſtances, and the truth of them depends upon the Credit of the Relator: But certainly for Chriſt, whoſe Body had the moſt excellent craſis and temperament, to ſweat clotted Blood, or globs of Blood, as ſome render it; and that in a cold night, when others needed a Fire within doors to keep them warm, Joh. 18. 18. I ſay, for him to ſweat ſuch ſtreams through his Garments, falling to the ground on which he lay, muſt be concluded a preternatural thing. And indeed, it was not wonderful that ſuch a preternatural Sweat ſhould ſtream from all parts of his Body, if you do but conſider what an extraordinary Load preſſed his Soul at that time, even ſuch as no meer Man ever felt, or was able to ſtand under; even the Wrath of a great and terrible God, in the extremity of it. Who (ſaith the Prophet Nahum, ch. 1. 6.) can ſtand before his Indignation? And who can abide in the fierceneſs of his Anger? His Fury is poured out like fire, and the Rocks are thrown down by him.

The effects of this Wrath, as it fell at this time upon the Soul of Chriſt in the Garden, are largely and very emphatically expreſt by the ſeveral Evangeliſts who wrote this Tragedy. Matthew tells us his Soul was exceeding ſorrowful, even unto Death, Matth. 26. 38. The word ſignifies beſet with Grief round about. And it's well expreſt by that phraſe of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 116. 3. The ſorrows of Death compaſſed me about, the pains of Hell got hold upon me. Mark varies the Expreſſion, and gives it us in another word no leſs ſignificant and full, Mark 14. 33. He began to be ſore amazed, and very heavy. Sore amazed, it imports ſo high a degree of Conſternation and Amazement, as when the Hair of the Head ſtands up through fear. Luke hath another Expreſſion for it in the Text; he was in an Agony. An Agony is the labouring and ſtriving of Nature in extremity. And John gives it us in another Expreſſion, Joh. 12. 27. Now is my Soul troubled. The original word is a very full word. And it is conceived the Latins derive that word which ſignifies Hell, from this by which Chriſt's troubles is here expreſſed. This was the Load which oppreſſed his Soul, and ſo ſtraitned it with Fear, and Grief, that his Eyes could not vent or eaſe it ſufficiently by Tears; but the innumerable pores of his Body are ſet open, to give vent by letting out ſtreams of Blood. And yet all this while, no Hand of Man was upon him. This was but a Prelude, as it were, to the Conflict that was at hand. This bloody Sweat in which he prayed, was but as the giving or ſweating of the Stones before a great Rain. Now he ſtood, as it were, arraigned at God's Bar, and had to do immediately with him. And you know it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. The uſes of this follow in this order.

Inference 1. Did Chriſt pour out his Soul to God ſo ardently in the Garden, when the hour of his Trouble was at hand? Hence we infer, That Prayer is a ſingular preparative for, and relief under the greateſt Troubles.

'Tis ſweet, when Troubles find us in the way of our Duty. The beſt poſture we can wreſtle with Afflictions in, is to engage them upon our Knees. The Naturaliſt tells us, if a Lion find a Man proſtrate, he will do him no harm. Chriſt haſtned to the Garden to pray, when Judas and the Soldiers were haſtning thither to apprehend him. O when we are nigh to Danger, it's good for us to draw nigh to our God. Then ſhould we be urging that ſeaſonable requeſt to God, Pſal. 22. 11. Be not far from me, for trouble is near; for there is none to help. Wo be to him, whom Death or Trouble finds afar off from God. And as Prayer is the beſt preparative for Troubles, ſo the choiceſt relief under them. Griefs are eaſed by Groans. The Heart is cooled and diſburdened by ſpiritual evaporations. You know it is ſome relief if a Man can pour out his Complaint into the Boſom of a faithful Friend, tho' he can but pity him: how much more to pour out our Complaints into the Boſom of a faithful God, who can both pity and help us! Luther was wont to call Prayers the Leeches of his Cares and Sorrows; they ſuck out the bad Blood. It's the Title of Pſal. 102. A prayer for the afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the Lord. It's no ſmall eaſe to open our Hearts to God. When we are as full of grief, as Elihu was of matter, let us ſay as he did, Job 32. 19. Behold, Lord, my heart is as wine which hath no vent, it is ready to burſt as new bottles. I will ſpeak that I may be refreſhed.

To go to God when thou art full of ſorrow, when thy Heart is ready to burſt within thee, as it was with Chriſt in this day of his trouble; and ſay, Father, thus and thus the caſe ſtands with thy poor Child; and ſo and ſo it's with me; I will not go up and down whining from one Creature to another, it's to no purpoſe to do ſo; nor yet will I leave my Complaint upon my ſelf: But I will tell thee, Father, how the caſe ſtands with me; for to whom ſhould Children make their moan, but to their Father? Lord, I am oppreſſed, undertake for me. What thinkeſt thou, Reader, of this? Is it relieving to a ſad Soul? Yes, yes, if thou be a Chriſtian that haſt had any experience this way, thou wilt ſay, there is nothing like it. Thou wilt bleſs God for appointing ſuch an Ordinance as Prayer, and ſay, Bleſſed be God for Prayer: I know not what I ſhould have done, nor how in all the World I ſhould have waded through the Troubles I have paſt, if it had not been for the help of Prayer.

Inference 2. Did Chriſt withdraw from the Diſciples to ſeek God by Prayer? Thence it follows, That the company of the beſt Men is not always ſeaſonable. Peter, James and John, were three excellent Men, and yet Chriſt ſaith to them, Tarry ye here, while I go and pray yonder. The Society of Men is beautiful in its ſeaſon, and no better than a burden out of ſeaſon. I have read of a good Man, that when his ſtated time for Cloſet-prayer was come, he would ſay to the Company that were with him, whatever they were, Friends, I muſt beg your excuſe for a while, there is a Friend waits to ſpeak with me. The Company of a good Man is good, but it ceaſes to be ſo when it hinders the injoyment of better Company. One hour with God is to be preferred to a thouſand days injoyment of the beſt Man on Earth. If thy deareſt Friends in the World intrude unſeaſonably betwixt thee and thy God, it's neither rude nor unmannerly to bid them give place to better Company; I mean, to withdraw from them as Chriſt did from the Diſciples, to enjoy an hour with God alone. In publick and private Duties we may admit of the Company of others to join with us, and if they be ſuch as fear God, the more the better: But in ſecret Duties, Chriſt and thee muſt whiſper it over betwixt your ſelves; and then the company of the Wife of thy Boſom, or thy Friend, that is as thine own Soul, would not be welcome. When thou prayeſt, enter into thy Cloſet; and when thou haſt ſhut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in ſecret, Mat. 6. 6. It is as much as if Chriſt had ſaid, See all clear; be ſure to retire in as great privacy as may be; let no ear but God's hear what thou haſt to ſay to him. This is at once a good note of Sincerity, and a great help to ſpiritual Liberty and Freedom with God.

Inference 3. Did Chriſt go to God thrice upon the ſame account? thence learn, That Chriſtians ſhould not be diſcouraged, tho' they have ſought God once and again, and no anſwer of Peace comes. Chriſt was not heard the firſt time, and he goes a ſecond; he was not anſwered the ſecond, he goes the third and laſt time, yet was not anſwered in the thing he deſired, viz. that the Cup might paſs from him; and yet he hath no hard thoughts of God, but reſolves his will into his Father's. If God deny you in the things you aſk, he deals no otherwiſe with you than he did with Chriſt. O my God, (ſaith he) I cry in the day-time, but thou heareſt not; and in the night, and am not ſilent. Yet he juſtifies God, but thou art holy, Pſal. 22. 2. Chriſt was not heard in the thing he deſired, and yet heard in that he feared, Heb. 5. 7. The Cup did not paſs as he deſired, but God upheld him, and enabled him to drink it. He was heard as to ſupport, he was not heard as to exemption from ſuffering: His Will was expreſt conditionally; and therefore tho' he had not the thing he ſo deſired, yet his Will was not croſſed by the denial. But now when we have a ſuit depending before the Throne of Grace, and cry to God once and again, and no anſwer comes, How do our hands hang down, and our Spirits wax feeble!

Then we complain with the Church, Lam. 3. 8. When I cry and ſhout, he ſhutteth out my Prayer; thou covereſt thy ſelf with a Cloud, that our Prayers cannot paſs through. Then with Jonah we conclude we are caſt out of his ſight. Alas! we judge by ſenſe according to what we ſee and feel; and cannot live by Faith on God, when he ſeems to hide himſelf, put us off, and refuſe our requeſts. It calls for an Abraham's Faith, to believe againſt hope, giving glory to God. If we cry, and no anſwer comes preſently, our carnal Reaſon draws a headlong, haſty Concluſion. Sure I muſt expect no anſwer: God is angry with my Prayers: The Seed of Prayer hath lain ſo long under the clods, and it appears not; ſurely it's loſt, I ſhall hear no more of it.

Our Prayers may be heard, tho' their anſwer be for the preſent ſuſpended. As David acknowledged when he coolly conſidered the matter, Pſal. 31. 22. I ſaid in my haſte, I am cut off from before thine Eyes; nevertheleſs thou heardeſt the voice of my ſupplication, when I cried unto thee. No, no, Chriſtian; a Prayer ſent up in Faith, according to the will of God, cannot be loſt, tho' it be delay'd. We may ſay of it as David ſaid of Paul's Sword, and Jonathan's Bow, that they never return empty.

Inference 4. Was Chriſt ſo earneſt in Prayer, that he prayed himſelf into a very Agony? Let the People of God bluſh to think how unlike their Spirits are to Chriſt, as to their prayer-frames.

O what lively, ſenſible, quick, deep, and tender apprehenſions and ſenſe of thoſe things about which he prayed, had Chriſt? Tho' he ſaw his very Blood ſtarting out from his hands, and his cloaths dyed in it; yet being in an Agony, he prayed the more earneſtly. I do not ſay Chriſt is imitable in this, No, but his fervour in Prayer is a pattern for us, and ſerves ſeverely to rebuke the Lazineſs, Dulneſs, Torpor, Formality, and Stupidity that is in our prayers. How often do we bring the Sacrifice of the dead before the Lord! How often do our Lips move, and our Heart ſtand ſtill! O how unlike Chriſt are we! his Prayers were pleading Prayers, full of mighty arguments, and ferverous affections. O that his People were in this more like him!

Inference 5. Was Chriſt in ſuch an Agony before any hand of Man was upon him, meerly from the apprehenſions of the Wrath of God, with which he now conteſted? Then ſurely it's a dreadful thing to fall into the Hands of the living God, for our God is a conſuming Fire.

Ah what is Divine Wrath! that Chriſt ſo ſtaggered when the Cup came to him. Could not he bear, and doſt thou think to bear it. Did Chriſt ſweat clods of Blood at it, and doſt thou make light of it? Poor wretch, if it ſtaggered him, it will confound thee. If it made him groan, it will make thee howl, and that eternally. Come Sinner, come, doſt thou make light of the threatnings of the Wrath of God againſt Sin? Doſt thou think there's no ſuch matter in it, as theſe zealous Preachers make of? Come look here upon my Text, which ſhews thee the Face of the Son of God ſtanding as full of purple drops, under the ſenſe and apprehenſion of it, as the drops of dew that hang upon the graſs. Hark how he cries, Father, if it be poſſible let this Cup paſs. O any thing of puniſhment rather than this. Hear what he tells the Diſciples; My Soul, ſaith he, is ſorrowful, even to death: Amazed, very heavy. Fools make a mock of Sin, and the Threatnings that lye againſt it.

Inference 6. Did Chriſt meet Death with ſuch a heavy heart? Let the hearts of Chriſtians be the lighter for this when they come to die. The bitterneſs of Death was all ſqueez'd into Chriſt's Cup. He was made to drink up the very dregs of it, that ſo our death might be the ſweeter to us. Alas! there's nothing now left in Death that's frightful or troubleſom, beſide the pain of diſſolution, that natural Evil of it. I remember it's ſtoried of one of the Martyrs, that being obſerved to be exceeding jocund and merry when he came to the Stake, one asked him, what was the reaſon his heart was ſo light when Death (and that in ſuch a terrible form too) was before him? O, ſaid he, my Heart is ſo light at my death, becauſe Chriſt's Heart was ſo heavy at his Death.

Inference 7. To conclude, what Cauſe have all the Saints to love their dear Lord Jeſus with an abounding Love? Chriſtian, open the Eyes of thy Faith, and fix them upon Chriſt, in the poſture he lay in the Garden, drencht in his own Blood: and ſee whether he be not lovely in theſe his dyed Garments. He that ſuffered for us more than any Creature could or did, may well challenge more Love than all the Creatures in the World. O what hath he ſuffered, and ſuffered upon thy account! it was thy Pride, Earthlineſs, Senſuality, Unbelief, Hardneſs of Heart, that laid on more weight in that day that he ſweat Blood.

Ser. 23. Diſcovers the firſt preparation for Chriſt's death on his Enemies part, by the Treaſon of Judas.

SERMON XXIII.

MAT. XXVI. 47, 48, 49.

And while he yet ſpake, lo Judas one of the twelve came, and with him a great multitude with Swords and Staves, from the Chief-Prieſts, and Elders of the People. Now he that betrayed him, gave them a ſign, ſaying, Whomſoever I ſhall kiſs, the ſame is he, hold him faſt. And forthwith he came to Jeſus, and ſaid, Hail Maſter, and kiſſed him.

THE former Sermons gives you an account how Chriſt improved every moment of his time, with buſie diligence, to make himſelf ready for his Death. He hath commended his charge to the Father, inſtituted the bleſſed Memorial of his death, poured out his Soul to God in the Garden, with reſpect to the grievous ſufferings he ſhould undergo. And now he is ready, and waits for the coming of the Enemies, being firſt in the field.

And think you that they were idle on their parts? No, no, their Malice made them reſtleſs. They had agreed with Judas to betray him. Under his conduct a band of Soldiers are ſent to apprehend him. The Hour ſo long expected is come. For while he yet ſpake, ſaith the Text, lo Judas one of the twelve came, and with him a great multitude, with Swords and Staves.

Theſe words contain the firſt preparative act on their part for the death of Chriſt, even to betray him, and that by one of his own Diſciples. Now they execute what they had plotted, verſ. 14, 15. And in this Paragraph you have an account, 1. Of the Traitor, who he was. 2. Of the Treaſon, what he did. 3. Of the Manner of its execution, how it was contrived and effected. Laſtly, Of the Time, when they put this Helliſh Plot in execution.

1. We have here a deſcription of the Traitor: And it is remarkable how carefully the ſeveral Evangeliſts have deſcribed him, both by his Name, Sirname and Office, Judas, Judas Iſcariot, Judas Iſcariot one of the twelve; that he might not be miſtaken for Jude or Judas the Apoſtle. God is tender of the Names and Reputations of his upright hearted Servants. His Office one of the twelve, is added to aggravate the Fact, and ſhew how that Prophecy was accompliſhed in him; Pſal. 41. 9. Tea, mine own familiar Friend, in whom I truſted, which did eat of my Bread, hath lift up his heel againſt me. Lo, this was the Traitor, and this was his Name and Office.

2. You have a deſcription of the Treaſon, or an account what this Man did. He led an armed multitude to the place where Chriſt was, gave them a ſignal to diſcover him, and incouraged them to lay hands on him, and hold him faſt. This was that Helliſh Deſign which the Devil put into his heart, working upon that principle or luſt of Covetouſneſs which was predominant there. What will not a carnal Heart attempt, if the Devil ſuit a temptation to the predominant Luſt, and God withhold reſtraining Grace!

3. You have here the way and manner in which this Helliſh Plot was executed. It was managed both with force and with fraud. He comes with a multitude, armed with Swords and Staves, in caſe he ſhould meet with any reſiſtance. And he comes to him with a kiſs, which was their ſignal, leſt they ſhould miſtake the Man. For they aimed neither at ſmall nor great, ſave only at the King of Iſrael, the King of Glory. Here was much ado, you ſee, to take a harmleſs Lamb, that did not once ſtart from them, but freely offered himſelf to them.

Quid opus eſt armis contra inermem? qui ſi virtutem ſuam exercere voluit, nullis armis erat ſuperabilis: Quorſum ſignum, ne errarent in perſonâ quia nox erat, &c. D. Par. in Loc.

4. And Laſtly, When was this treaſonable Deſign executed upon Chriſt? And it was executed upon him while he ſtood among his Diſciples, exhorting them to Prayer and Watchfulneſs, dropping heavenly and moſt ſeaſonable Counſels upon them. While he yet ſpake, lo Judas, and with him a multitude came with Swords and Staves. Surely 'tis no better than a Judas's trick, to diſturb and afflict the Servants of God in the diſcharge of their Duties. This was the Traitor, and his Treaſon; thus it was executed, and at this Time. Hence we obſerve, Doct. That is was the Lot of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to be betrayed into the hands of his mortal Enemies, by the aſſiſtance of a falſe and diſſembling Friend.

Look as Joſeph was betrayed and ſold by his Brethren; David by Achitophel, his old Friend; Sampſon by Dalilah, that lay in his Boſom: So Chriſt by Judas, one of the twelve; a Man, his Friend, his Familiar, that had been ſo long converſant with him: He that by profeſſion had lifted up his hand to Chriſt, now by Treaſon lifts up his heel againſt him; he bids the Soldiers bind thoſe bleſſed Hands, that not long before had waſht the Traitor's feet.

In the Point before us, we will

Firſt, Conſider Judas, according to that eminent ſtation and place he had under Chriſt.

Secondly, We will conſider his Treaſon, according to the ſeveral aggravations of it.

Thirdly, We will inquire into the Cauſe or motives that put him upon ſuch a dreadful Helliſh deſign as this was.

Fourthly and Laſtly, We will view the Iſſue, and ſee the Event of this Treaſon, both as to Chriſt, and as to himſelf, And then apply it.

Firſt, As for the Perſon that did this, he was very eminent by reaſon of that dignity Chriſt had raiſed him to. For,

1. He was one of the twelve, one retained not in a more general, and common, but the neareſt, and moſt intimate and honourable relation and ſervice to Jeſus Chriſt. There were in Chriſt's time ſeveral ſorts and ranks of Perſons that had relation to him. There were ſecret Diſciples; Men that believed, but kept their ſtations, and abode with their Relations in their callings. There were the Seventy alſo whom Chriſt ſent forth: But none of theſe were ſo much with Chriſt, or ſo eminent in reſpect of their place as the Twelve; they were Chriſt's Family, day and night converſant with him: It was the higheſt Dignity that was conferred upon any: And of this number was Judas. The Ancients have much extolled the Apoſtolical Dignity. Some ſtiled theſe twelve, pedes Chriſti, the feet of Chriſt, becauſe they as it were carried Chriſt up and down the World. Others oculi Dei, the very eyes of God; they were his Watchmen, that took care for the concernments of his Name and Goſpel in the World. Others mammæ Eccleſiæ, the Breaſts of the Church; they fed and nouriſht the Children of God by their Doctrine. Now to be one of this number, one of the Twelve, what a Dignity was this?

2. Yea, he being one of the Twelve, was daily converſant with Chriſt; often joined with him in Prayer, often ſate at his feet hearing the gracious Words that came forth of his mouth. It was one of Auſtin's three wiſhes, that he had ſeen Chriſt in the Fleſh: Judas not only ſaw him, but dwelt with him, travelled with him, eat and drank with him. And during the whole time of his abode with him, all Chriſt's carriages towards him were very obliging and winning; yea, ſuch was the condeſcenſion of Chriſt to this wretched Man, that he waſhed his feet, and that but a little before he betrayed him.

3. He was a Man of unſuſpected integrity among the Apoſtles. When Chriſt told them, one of you ſhall betray me; none thought on him, but every one rather ſuſpected himſelf; Lord, is it I? Saith one, and ſo ſaid they all: But none pointed at Judas, ſaying, thou art he.

4. To conclude, in ſome reſpect he was preferred to the reſt. For he had not only a Joint-Commiſſion with them to preach the Goſpel to others, (tho', poor unhappy Wretch, himſelf became a caſt-away) but he had a peculiar Office, he bare the Bag, i. e. he was Almoner, or the Steward of the Family, to take care to provide for the neceſſary Accommodations of Chriſt and them. Now who could ever have ſuſpected, that ſuch a Man as this ſhould have ſold the Blood of Chriſt for a little Money? That ever he ſhould have proved a perfidious Traitor to his Lord, who had called him, honoured him, and carried himſelf ſo tenderly towards him? And yet ſo it was; Lo Judas one of the twelve came, and with him a multitude: O whither will not a buſie Devil, and a bad Heart, carry a Man!

Secondly, But what did this Man do? And what are the juſt aggravations of his Fact? Why, he moſt baſely and unworthily ſold and delivered Chriſt into his Enemies hands to be butchered and deſtroyed; and all this for thirty pieces of Silver.

Bluſh, O Heavens, and be aſtoniſhed, O Earth, at this! In this Fact, moſt black and horrid Aggravations appear.

1. Judas had ſeen the Majeſty of a God on him whom he betrayed. He had ſeen the Miracles that Chriſt wrought, which none but Chriſt could do. He knew that by the finger of God he had raiſed the Dead, caſt out Devils, healed the Sick. He could not chuſe but obſerve and ſee the Rays and awful Beams of divine Majeſty ſhining in his very Face, in his Doctrine, and in his Life; to betray a Man, to ſell the Blood of the pooreſt Innocent in the World, is horrid; but to ſell the Blood of God, O what's this! Here's a Wickedneſs that no Epithet can match! Yea,

2. This Wickedneſs he committed after perſonal warnings and premonitions given him by Chriſt. He had often told them in general, that one of them ſhould betray him, Mark 14. 20. He had alſo denounced a dreadful Woe upon him that ſhould do it, verſ. 21. The Son of Man goeth indeed, as it is written of him; but Woe to that Man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed; good had it been for that Man if he had never been born. This was ſpoken in Judas his preſence. And one would have thought ſo dreadful a Doom as Chriſt paſſed upon the Man that ſhould attempt this, ſhould have affrighted him far enough from the thoughts of ſuch a Wickedneſs. Nay, Chriſt comes nearer to him than this, and told him he was the Man: For when Judas (who was the laſt that put the queſtion to Chriſt) asked him, Maſter, is it I? Chriſt's anſwer imports as much as a plain affirmation, Thou haſt ſaid, Mat. 26. 25. Moreover,

3. He doth it not out of a blind Zeal againſt Chriſt, as many of his other Enemies did; of whom it's ſaid, 1 Cor. 2. 8. That had they known him, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory: But he did it for Money, to make his market of Chriſt. He ſold Chriſt as a Man would ſell an Ox or a Sheep to the Butcher, for profit. He was fully of the mind of the Pope, whoſe Motto was; The ſmell or ſavour of Gain is ſweet, let it riſe out of what it will. If he can get any thing by Chriſt's Blood, it ſhall be a vendible commodity with him. What will ye give me (ſaith he) and I will betray him? Mat. 26. 15.

Suavis odor lucri ex re qualibet.

4. He ſells him, and he ſells him at a low rate too; which ſhewed how vile an eſteem he had of Chriſt. He is content to part with him for thirty pieces of Silver. If theſe Pieces or Sheckles were the Sheckles of the Sanctuary, they amounted but to three Pounds fifteen Shillings. But it's ſuppoſed they were the common Sheckles, which were moſtly uſed in buying and ſelling; and then his Price that he put upon the Saviour of the World was but one Pound ſeventeen Shillings and ſix Pence. A goodly Price (as the Prophet calls it) that he was valued at! Zech. 11. 12, 13. I confeſs it's a wonder he asked no more, knowing how much they longed for his Blood; and that they offered no more for him: But how then ſhould the Scriptures have been fulfilled? O what a Sale was this! To ſell that Blood, which all the Gold and Silver in the World is not worth one drop of, for a trifle! Still the Wickedneſs of this Fact riſes higher and higher.

Godw. Antiq. lib. 6. p. 295.

Haud dubiè è Bethania abiit ubi Dominum tunc morabitur; & vel clam ſe aliis ſubduxit in urbem, vel ſub pretextu curandi neceſſaria. Par.

5. He left Chriſt in moſt Heavenly and Excellent Employment, when he went to make this Soul-undoing Bargain. For if he went away from the Table, as ſome think, then he left Chriſt inſtituting and adminiſtring thoſe heavenly Signs of his Body and Blood: There he ſaw, or might have ſeen, the bloody work he was going about, acted as in a figure before him. If he ſate out that Ordinance, as others ſuppoſe he did, then he left Chriſt ſinging a Heavenly Hymn, and preparing to go where Judas was preparing to meet him. When the Lord Jeſus was in the moſt ſerious and Heavenly Exerciſe, the Wretch ſlinked away from him into the City, or elſe went under pretence to buy ſome neceſſaries. But his deſign was not to buy, but to ſell, whatever his pretences were. Nay,

6. What he did was not done by the perſwaſions of any. The High-Prieſt ſent not for him, and without doubt was ſurprized when he came to him on ſuch an errand. For it could never enter into any of their Hearts, that any of his own Diſciples could ever be drawn into a confederacy againſt him. No, he went as a Voluntier, offering himſelf to this work: Which ſtill heightens the Sin, and makes it out of meaſure ſinful.

7. The manner in which he executes his treaſonable Deſign adds further malignity to the Fact. He comes to Chriſt with fawning words and carriages, Hail Maſter, and kiſt him. Here's Honey in the Tongue, and Poiſon in the Heart. Here's Hatred hid under lying Lips. This was the Man, and this was his Fact. Let us inquire,

In quantum fuit πρόδοσις, proditio, fecit Judas, Satanà impulſore. In quantum fuit παράδοσις, traditio, illa fuit occultum Dei judicium, ad redemptionem Eccleſiæ ſpectans. Utique totum illud opus Deum non otioſum permiſſorem, ſed & ſapientiſſimum authorem atque directorem habuit. Par.

Thirdly, The cauſe and motives of this Wickedneſs, how he came to attempt and perpetrate ſuch a Villany. Maldonate the Jeſuit criminates the Proteſtant Divines, for affirming that God had a hand in ordering and over-ruling this Fact. But we ſay, that Satan and his own Luſt was the impulſive cauſe of it: That God, as it was a wicked Treaſon, permitted it; and as it was a delivering Chriſt to Death, was not only the Permitter, but the wiſe and holy Director or Orderer of it, and by the Wiſdom of his Providence over-ruled it, to the great good and advantage of the Church; in reſpect of which happy iſſue, Judas his Treaſon is called felix ſcelus, a happy Wickedneſs. Satan inſpired the Motion, Luk. 22. 3, 4. Then entred Satan into Judas ſirnamed Iſcariot, and he went his way, &c. his own Luſts like dry Tinder kindled preſently: His Heart was covetous; there was prediſpoſed matter enough for the Devil to work on, ſo that it was but touch and take. Verſ. 25. They covenanted to give him Money, and he promiſed, &c.

The Holy God diſpoſed and ordered all this to the ſingular benefit and good of his People; Acts 4. 28. they did whatſoever his Hand and Counſel had before determined to be done. And by this determinate Counſel of God was he taken and ſlain, Acts 2. 23. Yet this no way excuſes the wickedneſs of the Inſtruments: For what they did, was done from the power of their own Luſts, moſt wickedly; what he did, was done in the unſearchable depth of his own Wiſdom, moſt holy. God knows how to ſerve his own Ends by the very Sins of Men, and yet have no Communion at all in the Sin he ſo over-rules. If a Man let go a Dog out of his hand in purſuit of a Hare, the Dog hunts meerly for a Prey; but he that let him go, uſes the ſagacity and nimbleneſs of the Dog to ſerve his own ends by it. Judas minded nothing but his own advantage to get Money: God permitted that Luſt to work, but over-ruled the iſſue to his own eternal Glory, and the Salvation of our Souls.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, But what was the end and iſſue of this Fact? As to Chriſt it was his Death; for the Hour being come, he doth not meditate an eſcape, nor put forth the power of his Godhead to deliver himſelf out of their Hands. Indeed he ſhewed what he could do, when he made them go back and ſtagger with a Word. He could obtain more than twelve Legions of Angels to have been his Life-guard; one of whom had been ſufficient to have coped with all the Roman Legions: but how then ſhould the Scriptures be fulfilled, or our Salvation accompliſhed? No, he reſiſts not, but Judas delivering him into their hands at that time, was his Death.

And what got he as a Reward of his Wickedneſs? It ended in the ruin both of his Soul and Body. For immediately a Death-pang of Deſpair ſeized his Conſcience; which was ſo intolerable, that he ran to the Halter for a Remedy; and ſo falling headlong he burſt aſunder, and all his bowels guſhed out, Acts 1. 18. And now he that had no Bowels for Chriſt, hath none for himſelf. As for his Soul, it went to its own place, verſ. 25. even the place appointed for the Son of perdition, as Chriſt calls him, John 17. 12. His Name retains an odious ſtench to this day, and ſhall to all Generations: It's a By-word, a Proverb of Reproach: This was his End. We will next improve it.

Corollary 1. Hence in the firſt place we learn, That the greateſt Profeſſors had need be jealous of their own Hearts, and look well to the grounds and principles of their Profeſſions. One of the Ancients would have had this Epitaph engraven upon Judas his Tombſtone, ἔις ἐμὲ τὶς ὁρῶν, ἐυσεβὴς ἔςω, i. e. Let every one that beholds me, learn to be godly indeed, to be ſincere in his profeſſion, and love Chriſt more unfeignedly than I did. O Profeſſors, look to your Foundation, and build not upon the Sand, as this poor Creature did. That's ſound advice indeed which the Apoſtle gives, 1 Cor. 10. 12. Let him that thinks he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall. O beware of a looſe Foundation. If you begin your profeſſion as Judas did, no wonder if it ſhall end as his did.

Debile fundamentum fallit opus.

1. Beware therefore you hold not the Truth in Unrighteouſneſs: Judas did ſo; he knew much, but lived not up to what he knew, for he was ſtill of a worldly Spirit in the height of his Profeſſion. His Knowledge never had any ſaving influence upon his Heart. He preacht to others, but he himſelf was a Caſt-away. He had much Light, but ſtill walked in Darkneſs. He had no knowledge to do himſelf good.

2. Beware you live not in a courſe of ſecret

Sin. Judas did ſo, and that was his ruin. He made a Profeſſion indeed, and carried it ſmoothly, but he was a Thief, Joh. 12. 6. He made no conſcience of committing the Sin, ſo he could but cover and hide it from Men. This helped on his ruin, and ſo it will thine, Reader, if thou be guilty herein. A ſecret way of ſinning, under a covert of Profeſſion, will either break out at laſt to the Obſervation of Men, or elſe ſlide thee down inſenſibly to Hell, and leave thee only this comfort, that no body ſhall know thou art there.

3. Beware of hypocritical pretences of Religion to accommodate ſelf-ends. Judas was a Man that had notable skill this way. He had a mind to fill his own Purſe by the ſale of that coſtly Ointment which Mary beſtowed upon her Saviour's feet. And what a neat cover had he fitted for it, to do his buſineſs clearly; Why, ſaith he, this might have been ſold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor. Here was Charity to the poor, or rather poor Charity; for this was only a blind to his baſe ſelf-ends. O Chriſtian, be plain-hearted, take heed of craft and cunning in matters of Religion: This ſpoil'd Judas.

4. Beware of ſelf-confidence. Judas was a very confident man of himſelf. Laſt of all Judas ſaid, Maſter, is it I? Matth. 26. 25. But he that was laſt in the Suſpicion was firſt in the Tranſgreſſion. He that truſteth his own Heart is a Fool, ſaith Solomon, Prov. 28. 26. ſuch a Fool was this great Profeſſor. It will be your wiſdom to keep a jealous Eye upon your own Hearts, and ſtill ſuſpect their faireſt Pretences.

5. If you will not do as Judas did, nor come to ſuch an End as he did, take heed you live not unprofitably under the means of Grace. Judas had the beſt means of Grace that ever Man enjoyed. He heard Chriſt himſelf preach, he joined often with him in Prayer, but he was never the better for it all; it was but as the watering of a dead Stick, which will never make it grow, but rot it the ſooner. Never was there a rotten Branch ſo richly watered as he was. O 'tis a ſad Sin, and a ſad Sign too, when Men and Women live under the Goſpel from year to year, and never the better. I warn you to beware of theſe evils, all ye that profeſs Religion. Let theſe Footſteps by which Judas went down to his own place, terrifie you from following him in them.

Maxima violario Conſcientiæ eſt maximum pecatum. Ameſ.

Corollary 2. Learn hence alſo, That eminent Knowledge and Profeſſion puts a ſpecial and eminent Aggravation upon Sin. Judas Iſcariot, one of the twelve. Poor wretch! better had it been for him if he had never been numbred with them, nor enlightned with ſo much Knowledge as he was endued with: For this rent his Conſcience to pieces, when he reflected on what he had done, and preſently run him into the gulf of Deſpair. To ſin againſt clear Light, is to ſin with a high hand. It's that which makes a ſad waſte of the Conſcience. That without doubt which now torments this poor Soul in Hell, is that he ſhould go againſt his Light, againſt his Profeſſion, to gratifie a baſe Luſt to his eternal ruin. Had he known no better, it had been more excuſable. Thoſe that had a hand in the Death of Chriſt through Miſtake and Ignorance, were capable to receive the Pardon of their Sin by that Blood they ſo ſhed, Act. 3. 17, 19. compared. Take heed therefore of abuſing Knowledge, and putting a force upon Conſcience.

Corollary 3. Learn hence in the third place, That unprincipled Profeſſors will ſooner or later become ſhameful Apoſtates. Judas was an unprincipled Profeſſor, and ſee what he came to; Ambition invited Simon Magus to the profeſſion of Chriſt, he would be εἷς μέγας, ſome great one, and how quickly did the rottenneſs of his Principles diſcover themſelves in the ruin of his Profeſſion? That which wants a Root, muſt needs wither, as Chriſt ſpeaks, Matth. 13. 20. 21. that which is the predominant Intereſt, will prevail, and ſway with us in the day of our trial. Hear me, all you that profeſs Religion, and have given your Names to Chriſt; if that Profeſſion be not built upon a ſoild and real work of Grace upon your Hearts, you ſhall never honour Religion, nor ſave your Souls by it. O 'tis your Union with Chriſt, that like a Spring maintains your Profeſſion. So much as you are united to Chriſt, ſo much conſtancy, ſteadineſs, and evenneſs, you will manifeſt in the Duties of Religion, and no more.

Munimur quatenus unimur.

O Brethren, when he that profeſſes Chriſt for Company, ſhall be left alone as Paul was: When he that made Religion a ſtirrup to help him into the Saddle of Preferment and Honour, ſhall ſee that he is ſo advanced to be drawn forth into Chriſt's Camp, and endure the heat of the day, and not to take his pleaſure: In a word, when he ſhall ſee all things about him diſcouraging and threatning, his deareſt Intereſt on Earth expoſed for Religion ſake, and he hath no Faith to ballance his preſent Loſſes with his future Hopes: I ſay, when it comes to this, you ſhall then ſee the rottenneſs of many Hearts diſcovered. And Judas may have many Fellows, who will part with Chriſt for the World as he did. O therefore look well to your Foundation.

Corollary 4. Moreover in this Example of Judas you may read this Truth; That Men and Women are never in more eminent danger, than when they meet with Temptations exactly ſuited to their Maſter-luſts, to their own Inquity. O pray, pray, that ye may be kept from a violent ſuitable Temptation. Satan knows that when a Man is tried here, he falls by the Root. The love of this World was all along Judas his Maſter-ſin; and ſome conjecture he was a married man, and had a great charge; but that is conjectural, it was his predominant Luſt. The Devil found out this, and ſuited it with a Temptation which fully hit his Humour, and it carries him immediately. This is the dangerous Criſis of the Soul. Now you ſhall ſee what it is, and what it will do. Put Money before Judas, and preſently you ſhall ſee what the Man is.

Corollary 5. Hence in like manner we are inſtructed, That no man knows where he ſhall ſtop when he firſt engages himſelf in a way of Sin.

Wickedneſs, as well as Holineſs, is not born in its full ſtrength, but grows up to it by inſenſible degrees. So did the Wickedneſs of Judas. I believe, he himſelf never thought he ſhould have done what he did: And if any ſhould have told him in the firſt beginning of his Profeſſion, Thou ſhalt ſell the Blood of Chriſt for Money, thou ſhalt deliver him moſt perfidiouſly into their hands that ſeek his Life; He would have anſwered as Hazael did to Eliſha, But what is thy Servant a Dog that he ſhould do this great thing? 2 King. 8. 13. His Wickedneſs firſt diſcovered it ſelf in murmuring and diſcontent. taking a pique at ſome ſmall matters againſt Chriſt, as you may find by comparing John 6. from ver. 60, to 70. with John 12. from verſ. 3, to 9. but ſee to what it grows at laſt. That Luſt or Temptation that at firſt is but a little Cloud as big as a Man's hand, may quickly overſpread the whole Heaven. It is in our engaging in Sin, as in the motion of a Stone down the Hill. Vires acquirit eundo, it ſtrengthens it ſelf by going; and the longer it runs, the more violent. Beware of the ſmalleſt beginnings of Temptations. No wiſe Man will neglect or ſlight the ſmalleſt ſpark of fire, eſpecially if he ſee it among many Barrels of Gunpowder. You carry Gunpowder about you, O take heed of ſparks.

Nemo repentè fit turpiſſimus.

Corollary 6. Did Judas ſell Chriſt for Money? What a potent Conqueror is the love of this World! How many hath it caſt down wounded? What great Profeſſors have been dragg'd at its Chariot-wheels as its Captives? Hymeneus and Philetus, Ananias and Saphira, Demas and Judas, with thouſands and ten thouſands ſince their days, led away in triumph. It drowns Men in perdition, 1 Tim. 6. 9. In that Pit of perdition, this Son of perdition fell, and never roſe more. O you that ſo court and proſecute it, that ſo love and admire it, make a ſtand here; pauſe a little upon this Example; conſider to what it brought this poor Wretch whom I have preſented to you dead, eternally dead, by the mortal wound that the love of this World gave him; it deſtroyed both Soul and Body. Pliny tells us, that the Mermaids delight to be in green Meadows, into which they draw Men by their inchanting Voices; but, ſaith he, there always lye heaps of dead Mens bones by them. A lively Emblem of a bewitching World! Good had it been for many Profeſſors of Religion, if they had never known what the Riches, and Honours, and Pleaſures of this World meant.

Corollary 7. Did Judas fancy ſo much Happineſs in a little Money, that he would ſell Chriſt to get it? Learn then, That which Men promiſe themſelves much pleaſure and contentment in, in the way of Sin, may prove the greateſt Curſe and Miſery to them that ever befel them in the World. Judas thought it was a brave thing to get Money! He fancied much happineſs in it: But how ſick was his Conſcience as ſoon as he had ſwallowed it! O take it again, ſaith he! It grip'd him to the Heart. He knows not what to do to rid himſelf of that Money. Give me Children, (ſaith Rachel) or I die: She hath Children, and they prove her death. O mortifie your Fancies to the World; put no neceſſity upon Riches. They that will be rich, fall into Temptations, and many hurtful Luſts, which drown Men in perdition, 1 Tim. 6. 9. You may have your deſires with a curſe. He that brings home a pack of fine Cloaths infected with the Plague, has no ſuch great Bargain of it, how cheap ſoever he bought them.

Corollary 8. Was there one, and but one of the twelve, that proved a Judas, a Traitor to Chriſt? Learn thence, That it is a moſt unreaſonable thing to be prejudiced at Religion, and the ſincere Profeſſors of it, becauſe ſome that profeſs it prove naught and vile.

Should the Eleven ſuffer for one Judas? Alas, they abhorr'd both the Traitor and his Treaſon. As well might the High prieſt and his Servants have condemned Peter, John, and all the reſt, whoſe Souls abhorred the Wickedneſs. If Judas proved a vile Wretch, yet there was eleven to one that remained upright: If Judas proved naught, it was not his Profeſſion made him ſo, but his Hypocriſie; he never learnt it from Chriſt. If Religion muſt be charged with all the miſcarriages of its Profeſſors, then there is no pure Religion in the World. Name that Religion among the Profeſſors whereof there is not one Judas. Take heed, Reader, of prejudices againſt Godlineſs on this account. The deſign of the Devil, without doubt, is to undo thee eternally by them. Woe to the World becauſe of offences, Mat. 18. 7. And what if God do permit theſe things to fall out, that thou may'ſt be hardened in iniquity, confirmed in ſin by ſuch occaſions, and ſo thy deſtruction brought about this way? Bleſſed is he that is not offended at Chriſt.

Corollary 9. Did Judas, one of the twelve, do ſo? Learn thence, That a Drop of Grace is better than a Sea of Gifts. Gifts have ſome excellency in them, but the way of Grace is the more excellent way, 1 Cor. 12. 31. Gifts (as one ſaith) are dead Graces, but Graces are living Gifts. There's many a learned Head in Hell. Theſe are not the things that accompany Salvation. Gifts are the Gold that beautifies the Temple; but Grace is as the Temple which ſanctifies the Gold. One Tear, one Groan, one Breathing of an upright Heart, is more than the Tongues of Angels.

Poor Chriſtian, thou art troubled that thou canſt not ſpeak and pray ſo neatly, ſo handſomly, as ſome others can; but canſt thou go into a corner, and there pour out thy Soul affectionately, tho' not rhetorically, to thy Father? Trouble not thy ſelf. It's better for thee to feel one divine Impreſſion from God upon thy Heart, than to have ten thouſand fine Notions floating in thy Head: Judas was a Man of Parts; but what good did they do him?

Corollary 10. Did the Devil win the conſent of Judas to ſuch a Deſign as this? Could he get no other but the Hand of an Apoſtle to aſſiſt him? Learn hence, That the Policy of Satan lyes much in the choice of his Inſtruments he works. No Bird (ſaith one) like a living Bird to tempt others into the Net. Palagius, Socinus, &c. were fit for that Work the Devil put them upon. Auſtin told an ingenious young Scholar, The Devil coveted him for an Ornament. He knows he hath a foul Cauſe to manage, and therefore will get the faireſt Hand he can to manage it with the leſs ſuſpicion.

Cupit abs te ornari Diabolus.

Corollary 11. Did Judas, one of the twelve, do this? Then certainly Chriſtians may approve and join with ſuch Men on Earth, whoſe Faces they ſhall never ſee in Heaven. The Apoſtles held Communion a long time with this Man, and did not ſuſpect him. O pleaſe not your ſelves therefore, that you have Communion with the Saints here, and that they think and ſpeak charitable of you. All the Churches ſhall know (ſaith the Lord) that I am he that ſearcheth the Heart and Reins, and will give to every Man as his Work ſhall be. In Heaven we ſhall meet many that we never thought to meet there, and miſs many we were confident we ſhould ſee there.

Rev. 2. 23.

Corollary 12. Laſtly, Did Judas, one of the twelve, a Man ſo obliged, raiſed and honoured by Chriſt, do this? Ceaſe then from Men, be not too confident, but beware of Men. Truſt ye not in a Friend, put no confidence in a Guide, keep the Door of thy Lips from her that lyeth in thy Boſom: Not that there is no Sincerity in any Man, but becauſe there is ſo much Hypocriſie in many Men, and ſo much Corruption in the beſt of Men, that we may not be too confident, nor lay too great a ſtreſs upon any Man. Peter's modeſt expreſſion of Sylvanus is a pattern for us; Sylvanus, a faithful Brother unto you (as I ſuppoſe.) The time ſhall come, ſaith Chriſt, that Brother ſhall betray Brother to Death, Mat. 10. 11. Your Charity for others may be your Duty, but your too great Confidence may be your Snare. Fear what others may do, but fear thy ſelf more.

Mic. 7. 5.

1 Pet. 5. 12.

SERMON XXIV.

Serm. 24. Opens the Enemies ſecond and third preparatives for the Death of Chriſt, by their illegal Trial and Condemnation.

LUK. XXIII. 23, 24.

And they were inſtant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified; and the voices of them, and of the Chief-Prieſts, prevailed. And Pilate gave Sentence that it ſhould be as they required.

JUdas has made good his Promiſe to the High-prieſt, and delivered Jeſus a Priſoner into their Hands. Theſe Wolves of the Evening no ſooner ſeize the Lamb of God, but they thirſt and long to be ſucking his precious innocent Blood; their Revenge and Malice admits no delay, as fearing a reſcue by the People.

When Herod had taken Peter, he committed him to Priſon, intending after Eaſter to bring him forth to the People, Acts 12. 4. But theſe Men cannot ſleep till they have his Blood, and therefore the Preparation of the Paſſover being come, they reſolve in all haſte to deſtroy him; yet leſt it ſhould look like a downright Murder, it ſhall be formalized with a Trial. This his Trial and Condemnation are the two laſt Acts by which they prepared for his Death, and are both contained in this Context; in which we may obſerve, 1. The Enditment. 2. The Sentence to which the Judge proceeded.

In tanta hominum colluvie facile erat concitari tumultum, ſi contra jus, & fas tantum Prophetam trucidari viderat populis. Par. in Matth. 26. 5.

1. The Enditment drawn up againſt Chriſt, wherein they accuſe him of many things, but can prove nothing. They charge him with Sedition and Blaſphemy, but falter ſhamefully in the Proof. However, what is wanting in Evidence, ſhall be ſupplied with Clamour and Importunity. For, ſaith the Text, they were inſtant with loud Voices, requiring that he might be crucified; and their Voices prevailed: When they can neither prove the Sedition or Blaſphemy they charged him with, then crucifie him, crucifie him, muſt ſerve the turn, inſtead of all Witneſſes and Proofs.

2. The Sentence pronounced upon him; Pilate gave Sentence that it ſhould be as they required, i. e. He ſentenced Chriſt to be nailed to the Croſs, and there to hang till he was Dead. From both theſe we obſerve theſe two doctrinal Concluſions.

Doct. 1. That the Trial of Chriſt for his Life, was managed moſt maliciouſly and illegally againſt him by his unrighteous Judges.

Doct. 2. Tho' nothing could be proved againſt our Lord Jeſus Chriſt worthy of Death, or of Bonds; yet was he comdemned to be nailed to the Croſs, and there to hang till he died.

I ſhall handle theſe two Points diſtinctly in their order, beginning with the firſt, namely,

Doct. 1. That the Trial of Chriſt for his Life, was managed moſt maliciouſly and illegally againſt him by his unrighteous Judges.

Reader, here thou may'ſt ſee the Judge of all the World ſtanding himſelf to be judged; He that ſhall judge the World in Righteouſneſs, judged moſt unrighteouſly; He that ſhall one day come to the Throne of Judgment, attended with thouſands and ten thouſands of Angels and Saints, ſtanding as a Priſoner at Man's Bar, and there denied the common Right which a Thief or Murderer might claim, and is commonly given them.

To manifeſt the Illegality of Chriſt's Trial, let the following particulars be heedfully weighed.

1. That he was inhumanely abuſed both in Words and Actions before the Court met, or any Examination was taken of the Fact: For as ſoon as they had taken him, they forthwith bound him, and led him away to the High-prieſt's houſe, Luk. 22. 54. And there they that held him, mocked him, ſmote him, blindfolded him, ſtroke him on the face, and bid him propheſie who ſmote him; and many other things blaſphemouſly ſpake they againſt him, ver. 63, 64, 65. How illegal and barbarous a thing was this? When they were but binding Paul with Thongs, he thought himſelf abuſed contrary to Law, and asked the Centurion that ſtood by, Is it lawful for you to ſcourge a Man that is a Roman,

Roman, and uncondemned? q. d. Is this legal? What, puniſh a Man firſt, and judge him afterwards! But Chriſt was not only bound, but horribly abuſed by them all that Night, dealing with him as the Lords of the Philiſtines did with Sampſon, to whom it was a ſport to abuſe him. No Reſt had Jeſus that Night; no more Sleep for him now in this World: O it was a ſad Night to him: And this under Caiaphas's own Roof.

2. As he was inhumanely abuſed before he was tried, ſo he was examined and judged by a Court that had no Authority to try him. Luk. 22. 66. As ſoon as it was Day, the Elders of the People, and the Chief Prieſts, and the Scribes came together, and led him into their Council. This was the Eccleſiaſtical Court, the great Sanhedrim, which, according to its firſt Conſtitution, ſhould conſiſt of ſeventy grave, honourable and learned Men; to whom were to be referred all doubtful Matters, too hard for inferiour Courts to decide. And theſe were to judge impartially and uprightly for God, as Men in whom was the Spirit of God, according to God's Counſel to Moſes, Numb. 11. 16, &c. In this Court the Righteous and Innocent might expect Relief and Protection. And that is conceived to be the meaning of Chriſt's words, Luk. 13. 33. It cannot be that a Prophet periſh out of Jeruſalem; that is, their Righteouſneſs and Innocency may expect protection. But now, contrary to the firſt Conſtitution, it conſiſted of a pack of malicious Scribes and Phariſees, Men full of Revenge, Malice, and all Unrighteouſneſs: And over theſe Caiaphas (a Head fit for ſuch a Body) at this time preſided. And tho' there was ſtill ſome face of a Court among them, yet their Power was ~~not~~ abridged by the Romans, that they could not hear and determine, judge and condemn in Capital matters as formerly. For as Joſephus their own Hiſtorian informs us, Herod in the beginning of his Reign took away this Power from them; and that Scripture ſeems to confirm it, Joh. 18. 31. It is not lawful for us to put any Man to Death; and therefore they bring him to Pilate's Bar. He alſo underſtood him to be a Galilean; and Herod being Tetrarch of Galilee, and at that time in Jeruſalem, he is ſent to them, and by him remitted to Pilate.

Antiq. lib. 14. cap. 17.

3. As he was at firſt heard and judged by a Court that had no Authority to judge him; ſo when he ſtood at Pilate's Bar, he was accuſed of perverting the Nation, and denying Tribute to Ceſar, than which nothing was more notoriouſly falſe. For as all his Doctrine was pure and heavenly, and Malice it ſelf could not find a flaw in it; ſo he was always obſervant of the Laws under which he lived, and ſcrupulous of giving the leaſt juſt offence to the Civil Powers. Yea, he not only paid the Tribute himſelf, tho' he might have pleaded exemption, but charged it upon others as their duty ſo to do, Mat. 22. 24. Give unto Ceſar the things that are Ceſar's. And yet with ſuch palpable Untruths is Chriſt charged.

4. Yea, and what is more abominable and unparallell'd; to compaſs their malicious Deſigns, they induſtriouſly labour to ſubborn falſe Witneſſes to take away his Life, not ſticking at the groſſeſt Perjury, and manifeſt Injuſtice, ſo they might deſtroy him. So you read, Mat. 26. 59. Now the Chief Prieſts and Elders, and all the Council ſought falſe Witneſſes againſt Jeſus, to put him to death. Abominable Wickedneſs! For ſuch Men, and ſo many, to complot to ſhed the Blood of the innocent, by known and ſtudied Perjury! What will not Malice againſt Chriſt tranſport Men to?

5. Moreover, the carriage of the Court was moſt inſolent and baſe towards him during the Trial: For whilſt he ſtood before them as a Priſoner yet uncondemned, ſometimes they are angry at him for his ſilence; and when he ſpeaks, and that pertinently to the point, they ſmite him on the Mouth for ſpeaking, and ſcoff at what he ſpeaks. To ſome of their light, frivolous and enſnaring Queſtions he is ſilent, not for want of an Anſwer, but becauſe he heard nothing worthy of one. And to fulfil what the Prophet Iſaiah had long before predicted of him; he was oppreſſed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his Mouth: He is brought as a Lamb to the ſlaughter, and as a Sheep before the Shearers is dumb, ſo he opened not his Mouth, Iſa. 5. 3, 7. As alſo to leave us a Precedent when to ſpeak, and when to be ſilent, when we for his Name ſake ſhall be brought before Governours: For ſuch Reaſons as theſe he ſometimes anſwers not a Word, and then they are ready to condemn him for a Mute. Anſwereſt thou nothing? (ſaith the High-Prieſt) what is it that theſe witneſs againſt thee? Mat. 26. 62. Heareſt thou not how many things they witneſs againſt thee? ſaith Pilate, Mat. 27. 13.

Quia indignam reſponſo judicat manifeſtam falſitatem; non defenſione deſtitutus, ſed ut impleretur prophetæ oraculum. Par.

And when he makes his Defence in Words of Truth and Soberneſs, they ſmite him for ſpeaking, Joh. 18. 22. And when he had thus ſpoken, one of the Officers which ſtood by, ſtruck Jeſus with the palm of his Hand, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou the High-Prieſt ſo? And what had he ſpoken to exaſperate them? Had he ſpoken impertinently? Not at all: What he ſaid was but this, when they would have had him inſnare himſelf with his own Lips; Jeſus anſwered, I ſpake openly in the World, I ever taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple whither the Jews always reſort, and in ſecret have I ſaid nothing. Why askeſt thou me? Ask them that heard me, behold they know what I ſaid: q. d. I am not obliged to accuſe and enſnare my ſelf, but you ought to proceed ſecundum allegata & probata, according to what is alledged and proved. Did he deſerve a Blow on his Mouth for this? O who but himſelf could have ſo patiently digeſted ſuch Abuſes! Under all this he ſtands in perfect Innocency and Patience, making no other return to that Wretch that ſmote him but this, If I have ſpoken Evil, bear Witneſs of the Evil; but if Well, why ſmiteſt thou me?

6. Laſtly, To inſtance in no more: He is condemned to die by that very Mouth which had once and again profeſſed he found no fault in him. He had heard all that could be alledged againſt him, and ſaw it was a perfect piece of Malice and Envy. When they urge Pilate to proceed to ſentence him; why, ſaith he, What Evil hath he done? Mat. 27. 23. Nay, in the Preface to the very Sentence it ſelf, he acknowledges him to be a juſt Perſon, Mat. 27. 24. When Pilate ſaw he could prevail nothing, but that rather a Tumult was made, he took Water, and waſhed his Hands before the Multitude, and ſaid, I am innocent of the Blood of this juſt Perſon, ſee ye to it. Here the Innocency of Chriſt brake out like the Sun wading out of a Cloud, convincing the Conſcience of his Judge that he was juſt; and yet he muſt give Sentence on him for all that to pleaſe the People.

Inference 1. Was Chriſt thus uſed when he ſtood before the great Council, the Scribes and Elders of Iſrael? Then ſurely great Men are not always wiſe, neither do the Aged underſtand Judgment, Job 32. 9. Here were many great Men, many aged Men, many politick Men in Council; but not one wiſe or good Man among them. In this Council were Men of Parts and Learning, Men of great Abilities, and by ſo much the more pernicious, able to do miſchief. Wickedneſs in a great or learned Man, is like Poiſon given in Wine, the more operative and deadly. Chriſt's greateſt Enemies were ſuch as theſe. Heathen Pilate had more pity for him than ſuperſtitious Caiaphas. Luther tells us, that his greateſt Adverſaries did not riſe out of the Ale-houſes or Brothel-houſes, but out of Monaſteries, Convents, and Religious Houſes.

Inference 2. Hence alſo we learn, That tho' we are not obliged to anſwer every captious, idle, or enſnaring Queſtion; yet we are bound faithfully to own and confeſs the Truth when we are ſolemnly called thereunto.

It's true, Chriſt was ſometimes ſilent, and as a deaf Man that heard not; but when the Queſtion was ſolemnly put, Art thou the Chriſt, the Son of the Bleſſed? Jeſus ſaid, I am, Mark 14. 61, 62. He knew that Anſwer would coſt his Life, and yet he dare not deny it. On this account the Apoſtle ſaith, he witneſſed a good Confeſſion before Pontius Pilate, 1 Tim. 6. 13. Herein Chriſt hath ruled out the way of our Duty, and by his own Example, as well as Precept, obliged us to a ſincere confeſſion of him, and his Truth, when we are required lawfully ſo to do, i. e. when we are before a lawful Magiſtrate, and the Queſtions are not curious or captious; when we cannot hold our peace, but our Silence will be interpretatively a denying of the Truth; finally, when the Glory of God, Honour of his Truth, and Edification of others, is more attainable by our open Confeſſion, than it can be by our Silence: Then muſt we with Chriſt, give direct, plain, and ſincere Anſwers.

It was the old Priſcilian Error, to allow Men to deny or diſſemble their Profeſſion, when an open Confeſſion would infer danger. But you know what Chriſt hath ſaid, Mat. 10. 33. Whoſoever ſhall deny me before Men, him will I deny before my Father which is in Heaven. Chriſt will repay him in his own Coin. It was a noble Saying of courageous Zuinglius, What Deaths would I not chuſe? What Puniſhment would I not undergo? Yea, into what Vault of Hell would I not rather chuſe to be thrown, than to witneſs againſt my Conſcience? Truth can never be bought dear, nor ſold cheap. The Lord Jeſus, you ſee, owns Truth with the eminent and inſtant hazard of his Life. The whole Cloud of Witneſſes have followed him therein, Rev. 14. 1. We our ſelves once openly owned the ways of Sin: And ſhall we not do as much for Chriſt, as we then did for the Devil? Did we then glory in our Shame, and ſhall we now be aſhamed of our Glory? Do not we hope Chriſt will own us at the great Day! Why, if we confeſs him, he alſo will confeſs us. O think on the reaſonableneſs of this Duty.

Quas non oportet mortes præeligere? Quod non ſupplicium potius ferre? Imo in quam profundam inferni abyſſum non intrare, quam contra conſcientiam atteſtare? Zuing.

Inference 3. Once more, hence it follows, That to bear the Revilings, Contradictions and Abuſes of Men, with a meek, compoſed and even Spirit, is excellent and Chriſt-like. He ſtood before them as a Lamb; he rendred not railing for railing; he endured the contradictions of Sinners againſt himſelf. Imitate Chriſt in his Meekneſs. He calls you ſo to do, Mat. 11. 28. This will be convincing to your Enemies, comfortable for your ſelves, and honourable for Religion: And as for your Innocency, God will clear it up as Chriſt's was.

You have heard the illegal Trial of Chriſt, how inſolently it was managed againſt him; well, right or wrong, innocent or guilty, his Blood is reſolved upon: 'Tis bought and ſold beforehand; and if nothing elſe will do it, Menaces and Clamours ſhall conſtrain Pilate to condemn him. Whence our ſecond Note was,

Doct. 2. That tho' nothing could be proved againſt our Lord Jeſus Chriſt worthy of Death, or of Bonds; yet was he condemned to be nailed to the Croſs, and there to hang till he died.

For the Explication of this, I ſhall open the following Particulars. Firſt, Who gave the Sentence. Secondly, Upon whom he gave it. Thirdly, What Sentence was it that was given. Fourthly, In what manner Chriſt received it.

Firſt, Who and what was he that durſt attempt ſuch a thing as this? Why, this was Pilate, who ſucceeded Valerius Gratus in the Preſidentſhip of Judea, (as Joſephus tells us) in which Truſt he continued about ten years. This cruel curſed Act of his againſt Chriſt, was in the eighth year of his Government. Two years after he was removed from his Place and Office by Vitellius Preſident of Syria, for his inhumane murdering of the innocent Samaritans. This neceſſitated him to go to Rome to clear himſelf before Cæſar: but before he came to Rome, Tiberius was dead, and Caius in his room. Under him, ſaith Euſebius, Pilate killed himſelf. He was a Man not very friendly or benevolent to the Jewiſh Nation, but ſtill ſuſpicious of their Rebellions and Inſurrections: This jealous Humour the Prieſts and Scribes obſerved, and wrought upon it to compaſs their Deſign againſt Chriſt. Therefore they tell him ſo often of Chriſt's Sedition, and ſtirring up the People; and that if he let him go, he is none of Cæſar's Friend; which very Conſiderations prevailed with him to do what he did. But how durſt Joſephus lib. 18. Ant. Judææ, quarto ad cap. 7.

Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 2. cap. 7.

Non admodum amicus Judæorum genti propterea quod eam ſuſpectam haberet animo erga Ceſarem; hunc parant ſacerdotes commodum fore ipſorum propoſito, &c. Bucer in Mat. 27.

he attempt ſuch a Wickedneſs as this, tho' he had ſtood in the Opinion of Cæſar? What! give Judgment againſt the Son of God? for 'tis evident, by many Circumſtances in this Trial, that he had many inward Fears and Convictions upon him that he was the Son of God: By theſe he was ſcared, and ſought to releaſe him, John 19. 8, 12. the fear of a Deity fell upon him; his Mind was greatly perplext, and dubious about this Priſoner, whether he was a God or a Man. And yet the fear of Cæſar prevailed more than the fear of a Deity, he proceeds to give Sentence.

Audito Filii Dei nomine, mens ejus Religione tacta fuerat metu numinis perculſus, inter ſacrum (ut aiunt) & ſaxum hærebat. Marlor. in loc.

O Pilate, thou waſt not afraid to judge and ſentence an Innocent, a known Innocent, and one whom thou thy ſelf ſuſpectedſt at leaſt to be more than Man! But ſee in this predominancy of Self-intereſt, what Men will not attempt and perpetrate to ſecure and accommodate Self.

Secondly, Againſt whom doth Pilate give Sentence? againſt a Malefactor? No, his own Mouth once and again acknowledged him innocent. Againſt a common Priſoner? No, but one whoſe Fame no doubt had often reached Pilate's ears, even the wonderful things wrought by him, which none but God could do: One that ſtood before him as the Picture, or rather as the Body, of Innocency and Meekneſs. Ye have condemned and killed the Juſt, and he reſiſteth you not, James 5. 6. now was that Word made good, Pſal. 94. 21. They gather themſelves together againſt the Soul of the Righteous, and condemn the innocent Blood.

Thirdly, But what was the Sentence that Pilate gave? We have it not in the Form in which it was delivered; but the Sum of it was, that it ſhould be as they required. Now what did they require? why, crucifie him, crucifie him. So that in what Formalities ſoever it was delivered, this was the Subſtance and Effect of it, I adjudge Jeſus of Nazareth to be nailed to the Croſs, and there to hang till he be dead. Which Sentence againſt Chriſt was,

1. A moſt unjuſt and unrighteous Sentence, the greateſt perverſion of Judgment and Equity that was ever known to the civilized World, ſince Seats of Judicature were firſt ſet up. What! to condemn him before one Accuſation was proved againſt him? And if what they accuſed him of (that he ſaid he was the Son of God) had been proved, it had been no Crime, for he really was ſo; and therefore no Blaſphemy in him to ſay he was. Pilate ſhould rather have come down from his Seat of Judgment, and adore him, than ſit there to judge him. O it was the higheſt piece of Injuſtice that ever our Ears heard of!

2. As it was an unrighteous, ſo it was a cruel Sentence, delivering up Chriſt to their Wills. This was that Miſery which David ſo earneſtly deprecated, Pſalm 27. 12. O deliver me not over to the will of mine Enemies. But Pilate delivers Chriſt over to the will of his Enemies, Men full of Enmity, Rage, and Malice; whoſe greateſt pleaſure it was to glut themſelves with his Blood, and ſatiate their revengeful Hearts with ſuch a ſpectacle of Miſery. For lo, as ſoon as theſe Wolves had grip'd their Prey, they were not ſatisfied with that curſed, cruel and ignominious Death of the Croſs, to which Pilate had adjudged him, but they are reſolved he ſhall die over and over; they will contrive many Deaths in one: Now they ſay as a Tyrant did once, Moriatur, ut ſentiat ſe mori, let him die, ſo as he may feel himſelf to die, i. e. let him die by inch meal. To this end they preſently ſtrip him naked; ſcourge him cruelly; array him in Scarlet, and mock him; crown him with a Buſh of platted Thorns; faſten that Crown upon his Head by a blow with a Cane, which ſet them deep into his ſacred Temples; ſceptered him with a Reed; ſpat in his Face; ſtript off his Mock-Robes again; put the Croſs upon his back, and compel him to bear it. All this, and much more, they expreſs their cruelty by, as ſoon as they had him delivered over to their Will. So that this was a cruel Sentence.

3. As it was a cruel, ſo it was a raſh and haſty Sentence. The Jews are all in haſte; conſulting all Night, and early up by the break of Day in the Morning, to get him to his Trial. They ſpur on Pilate with all the Arguments they can to give Sentence. His Trial took up but one Morning, and a great part of that was ſpent in ſending him from Caiaphas to Pilate, and from Pilate to Herod, and then back again to Pilate; ſo that it was a haſty and headlong Sentence that Pilate gave. He did not ſift and examine the matter, but handles it very ſlightly. The Trial of many a mean Man hath taken up ten times more Debates and Time, than was ſpent about Chriſt. They that look but ſlightly into the Cauſe, eaſily pronounce and give Sentence. But that which was then done in haſte, they have had time enough to repent for ſince.

Qui ad pauca reſpiciunt, facile pronunciant.

4. As it was a raſh and haſty, ſo it was an extorted forced Sentence. They ſqueeze it out of Pilate by meer Clamour, Importunity, and ſuggeſtions of Danger. In Courts of Judicature ſuch Arguments ſhould ſignifie but little; not Importunity, but Proof ſhould carry it: but timorous Pilate bends like a Willow at this Breath of the People; he had neither ſuch a ſence of Juſtice, nor ſpirit of Courage, as to withſtand it.

Minaciter extorquent ab eo, ut Chriſtum damnet. Calv.

5. As it was an Extorted, ſo it was a Hypocritical Sentence, masking horrid Murder under a pretence and formality of Law. It muſt look like a legal Procedure to palliate the buſineſs. Loth he was to condemn him, leſt innocent Blood ſhould clamour in his Conſcience; but ſince he muſt do it, he will transfer the Guilt upon them, and they take it; His Blood be on us, and on our Children for ever, ſay they. Pilate calls for water, waſhes his hands before them, and tells them, I am free from the Blood of this juſt Perſon. But ſtay, free from his Blood, and yet condemn a known innocent Perſon? Free from his Blood, becauſe he waſht his hands in Water? No, no, he could never be free, except his Soul had been waſhed in that Blood he ſhed. O the Hypocriſie of Pilate! Such juggling as this will not ſerve his turn, when he ſhall ſtand as a Priſoner before him, who now ſtood arraigned at his Bar.

6. And laſtly, As it was a Hypocritical, ſo it was an Unrevoked Sentence: It admitted not of a Reprieve, no, not for a day; nor doth Chriſt appeal to any other Judicature, or once deſire the leaſt delay of the Execution; but away he is hurried in haſte to the Execution. Bluſh, O ye Heavens! And tremble, O Earth, at ſuch a Sentence as this! Now Chriſt is dead in Law; now he knows whether he muſt be carried, and that preſently. His Soul and Body muſt feel that, the very ſight of which put him into an Agony but the Night before.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, In what manner did Chriſt receive this cruel and unrighteous Sentence? He received it like himſelf, with admirable Meekneſs and Patience. He doth as it were wrap himſelf up in his own Innocency, and Obedience to his Father's will; and ſtands at the Bar with invincible Patience, and meek Submiſſion. He doth not once deſire the Judge to defer the Sentence, much leſs fall down and beg for his Life, as other Priſoners uſe to do at ſuch times. No, but as a Sheep he goes to the ſlaughter, not opening his mouth. Some apply that expreſſion to Chriſt, James 5. 6. Ye have condemned and killed the juſt, and he reſiſteth you not. From the time that Pilate gave Sentence, till he was nailed to the Croſs, we do not read that ever he ſaid any thing, ſave only to the Woman that followed him out of the City to Golgotha: And what he ſaid there, rather manifeſted his Pity to them, than any diſcontent at what was now come upon him; Daughters of Jeruſalem, (ſaith he) weep not for me, but weep for your ſelves, and for your Children, Luke 23. 28, &c. O the perfect Patience and Meekneſs of Chriſt! The Inferences from hence are:

Inference 1. Do you ſee what was here done againſt Chriſt under pretence of Law? What cauſe have we to pray for good Laws, and righteous Executioners of them.

O 'tis a ſingular Mercy to live under good Laws, which protect the Innocent from Injury. Laws are Hedges about our Lives, Liberties, Eſtates, and all the Comforts we enjoy in this World. Times will be evil enough, when Iniquity is not diſcountenanced and puniſhed by Law; but how evil are thoſe Times like to prove, when Iniquity is eſtabliſhed by Law! As the Pſalmiſt complains, Pſal. 94. 20. It was the complaint of Pliny to Trajan, that whereas Crimes were wont to be the burden of the Age, now Laws were ſo; and that he feared the Commonwealth which was eſtabliſht, would be ſubverted by Laws. 'Tis not like that Virtue will much flouriſh, when Judgment ſprings up as Hemlock in the furrows of the field, Hoſea. 10. 4. How much therefore is it our concernment to pray, that Judgment may run down as a mighty Stream? Amos 5. 24. That our Officers may be Peace, and our Exactors Righteouſneſs? Iſa. 60. 17. It was not therefore without great reaſon, that the Apoſtle exhorted, that Supplications, Prayers, Interceſſions, and giving of Thanks be made for all Men; for Kings, and all that are in Authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable Life in all Godlineſs and Honeſty, 1 Tim. 2. 1, 2. Great is the Intereſt of the Church of God in them; they are Inſtruments of much Good or Evil.

Olim criminibus, jam legibus laboratur.
Et metuendum eſt me reſpublica legibus fundata, ſit legibus everſa.
Plin. ad Trajan.

Inference 2. Was Chriſt condemned in a Court of Judicature? How evident then is it, that there is a Judgment to come after this Life? Surely things will not be always carried as they are in this World. When you ſee Jeſus condemned, and Barabbas releaſed, conclude, that a time will come when Innocency ſhall be vindicated, and Wickedneſs ſhamed. On this very ground Solomon concludes, and very rationally, that God will call over things hereafter at a more righteous Tribunal; And moreover, I ſaw under the Sun the place of Judgment, that Wickedneſs was there; and the place of Righteouſneſs, that Iniquity was there. I ſaid in my Heart, God ſhall judge the Righteous, and the Wicked: For there is a time there for every purpoſe, and for every work, Eccleſ. 3. 16, 17. Some indeed on this ground have denied the Divine Providence; but Solomon draws a quite contrary Concluſion, God ſhall judge: Surely he will take the matter into his own hand, he will bring forth the Righteouſneſs of his People as the Light, and their juſt Dealing as the Noon-day. It's a Mercy, if we be wronged in one Court, that we can appeal to another, where we ſhall be ſure to be relieved by a juſt impartial Judge. Be patient therefore, my brethren, (ſaith the Apoſtle) until the coming of the Lord, James 5. 6, 7, 8.

Inference 3. Again, here you ſee how Conſcience may be over-born and run down by a fleſhly Intereſt. Pilate's Conſcience bid him beware, and forbear; his Intereſt bid him act: His fear of Cæſar was more than the fear of God. But O! What a dreadful thing is it for Conſcience to be enſnared by the fear of Man! Prov. 29. 25. To guard thy Soul, Reader, againſt this Miſchief, let ſuch Conſiderations as theſe be ever with thee.

1. Conſider how dear thoſe Profits or Pleaſures coſt, which are purchaſed with the loſs of inward Peace! There is nothing in this World good enough to recompence ſuch a Loſs, or ballance the Miſery of a tormenting Conſcience. If you violate it, and proſtitute it for a fleſhly Luſt, it will remember the injury you did in many years after; Gen. 42. 21. Job. 13. 26. It will not only retain the memory of what you did, but it will accuſe you for it; Mat. 27. 4. It will not fear to tell you that plainly which others dare not whiſper. It will not only accuſe, but it will alſo condemn you for what you have done. This condemning Voice of Conſcience is a very terrible Voice.

You may ſee the horrour of it in Cain, the vigour of it in Judas, the doleful effects of it in Spira. It will from all theſe its offices produce Shame, Fear, and Deſpair, if God give not Repentance to Life. The Shame it works will ſo confound you, that you will not be able to look up; Job 31. 14. Pſalm. 1. 5. The Fear it works will make you wiſh for a hole in the Rock to hide you; Iſa. 2. 9, 10, 15, 19. And its Deſpair is a death-pang. The cutting off of Hope is the greateſt Cut in the World. O who can ſtand under ſuch a load as this! Prov. 18. 14.

2. Conſider the nature of your preſent Actions; they are Seed ſown for Eternity, and will ſpring up again in ſuitable Effects, Rewards and Puniſhments, when you that did them are turned to duſt. Gal. 6. 7. What a Man ſows, that ſhall he reap: And as ſure as the Harveſt follows the ſeed-time, ſo ſure ſhall Shame, Fear, and Horror, follow Sin, Dan. 12. 2. What Zeuxis the famous Limner ſaid of his Work, may much more truly be ſaid of ours; Æternitati pingo, I paint for Eternity, ſaid he, when one asked him why he was ſo curious in his Work. Ah, how bitter will thoſe things be in the account and reckoning, which were pleaſant in the acting and committing! 'Tis true, our Actions, phyſically conſidered, are tranſient; how ſoon is a Word or Action ſpoken or done, and there is an end of it? But morally conſidered, they are permanent, being put upon God's Book of account. O therefore take heed what you do: So ſpeak, and ſo act, as they that muſt give an account.

3. Conſider how by theſe things Men do but prepare for their own torment in a dying hour. There's bitterneſs enough in Death, you need not add more Gall and Wormwood to add to the bitterneſs of it. What is the violencing and wounding of Conſcience now, but the ſticking ſo many Pins or Needles in your Death-bed againſt you come to lye down on it? This makes Death bitter indeed. How many have wiſht in a dying hour they had rather lived poor and low all their days, than to have ſtrained their Conſciences for the World? Ah, how is the face and aſpect of things altered in ſuch an hour!

No ſuch Conſiderations as theſe had any place in Pilate's heart; for if ſo, he would never have been courted or ſcared into ſuch an Act as this.

Inference 4. Did Chriſt ſtand arraigned and condemned at Pilate's Bar? Then the Believer ſhall never be arraigned and condemned at God's Bar. This Sentence that Pilate pronounced on Chriſt, gives evidence that God will never pronounce Sentence againſt ſuch: For had he intended to have arraigned them, he would never have ſuffered Chriſt their Surety to be arraigned and condemned for them. Chriſt ſtood at this time before a higher Judge than Pilate; he ſtood at God's Bar as well as his. Pilate did but that which God's own Hand and Counſel had before determined to be done, and what God himſelf at the ſame time did; tho' God did it juſtly and holily, dealing with Chriſt as a Creditor with a Surety; Pilate moſt wickedly and baſely dealing with Chriſt as a corrupt Judge, that ſhed the Blood of a known Innocent to pacifie the people. But certain it is, that out of his Condemnation flows our Juſtification: And had not Sentence been given againſt him, it muſt have been given againſt us.

O what a melting Conſideration is this! That out of his Agony comes our Victory; out of his Condemnation our Juſtification; out of his Pain our Eaſe; out of his Stripes our Healing; out of his Gall and Vinegar our Honey; out of his Curſe our Bleſſing; out of his Crown of Thorns our Crown of Glory; out of his Death our Life: If he could not be releaſed, it was that you might. If Pilate gave Sentence againſt him, it was that the great God might never give Sentence againſt you. If he yeilded that it ſhould be with Chriſt as they required, it was that it might be with our Souls as well as we can deſire. And therefore,

Thanks be to God for his unſpeakable Gift.

Serm. 25. Remarks a memorable Paſſage of Chriſt in his way to the place of his Execution.

SERMON XXV.

LUKE XXIII. 27, 28, &c.

And there followed him a great company of People, and of Women, which alſo bewailed and lamented him. But Jeſus turning unto them, ſaid, Daughters of Jeruſalem, weep not for me, but weep for your ſelves, and for your Children.

THE Sentence of Death once given againſt Chriſt, the Execution quickly follows. Away they lead him from Gabbatha to Golgotha, longing as much to be nailing him to the Croſs, and feeding their Eyes with his Torments, as the Eagle doth to be tearing the Fleſh, and drinking the Blood of that Lamb ſhe hath ſeized in her Talons, and is carrying away to the top of ſome Rock to devour.

The Evangeliſt here obſerves a memorable Paſſage that fell out in their way to the place of Execution; and that is the Lamentations and Wailing of ſome that followed him out of the City, who expreſſed their Pity and Sorrow for him moſt tenderly and compaſſionately: All Hearts were not hard, all Eyes were not dry. There followed him a great company of People, and of Women, which alſo bewailed and lamented him, &c.

In this Paragraph we have two Parts, viz. the Lamentation of the Daughters of Jeruſalem for Chriſt, and Chriſt's Reply to them.

1. The Lamentation of the Daughters of Jeruſalem for Chriſt. Concerning them, we briefly enquire who they were, and why they mourned.

Θυγατέρες Ἱερουσαλὲμ, i. e. mulieres hieroſolymitanæ: Hebraiſmus; ſic filiæ Tſionis. Piſcat. in Loc.

(1.) Who they were? The Text calls them Daughters, i. e. Inhabitants of Jeruſalem; for it is a Hebraiſm; as Daughters of Zion, Daughters of Iſrael. And it's like the greateſt part of them were Women; and they were many of them, a Troop of Mourners that followed Chriſt out of the City towards the place of his Execution, with Lamentations and Wailings.

Mr. Anth. Burgeſs Spiritual refining, p. 120.

(2.) What the principal and ground of theſe their Lamentations was, is not agreed upon by thoſe that have pondred the Story. Some are of Opinion their Tears and Lamentations were but the Effects and Fruits of their more tender and ingenuous Natures, which were moved and melted with ſo tragical and ſad a Spectacle as was now before them. It's well obſerved by a judicious Author, "That the "tragical Story of ſome great and noble Perſonage, full of heroical Vertue and Ingenuity (yet inhumanly and ungratefully uſed) "will thus work upon ingenuous Spirits who "read or heard of it —— which when it "reaches no higher, is ſo far from being Faith, "that it is but a carnal and fleſhly Devotion, "ſpringing from Fancy, which is pleaſed "with ſuch a ſtory, and the principles of Ingenuity ſtirred towards one, who is of a noble Spirit, and yet abuſed. Such Stories uſe "to ſtir up a Principle of Humanity in Men "unto a compaſſionate Love; which Chriſt "himſelf at his ſuffering found fault with, as "being not Spiritual, nor raiſed enough in "thoſe Women that went weeping to ſee the "Meſſiah ſo handled. Weep not for me (ſaith "he) that is, weep not ſo much for this, to "ſee me ſo unworthily handled by thoſe for "whom I die. This is the Principle from which ſome conceive theſe Tears to flow.

Dr. Tho. Goodwin in his Triumph of Faith, p. 38.

But Calvin attributes it to their Faith, looking upon theſe Mourners as a Remnant reſerved by the Lord in that miſerable Diſperſion; and tho' their Faith was but weak, yet he judges it credible that there was a ſecret Seed of Godlineſs in them, which afterwards grew to a maturity, and brought forth Fruit. And to the ſame Senſe others give their Opinion alſo.

Videmus quoſdam non fuiſſe oblitos doctrinæ & miraculorum Chriſti. Sic in miſera illâ diſſipatione exiguas ſibi reliquias ſervavit Deus. Quamvis autem imbecilla fuit iſtarum mulierum fides, credibile tamen eſt, occultum fuiſſe pietatis ſemen, unde poſtea germen prodiit. Calv.

2. Let us conſider Chriſt's Reply to them; Weep not for me ye Daughters of Jeruſalem, &c. Strange, that Chriſt ſhould forbid them to weep for him, yea for him under ſuch unparallel'd Sufferings and Miſeries. If ever there was a heart melting Object in the World, it was here. O who could hold, whoſe Heart was not petrified, and more obdure than the ſenſleſs Rocks! This Reply therefore of Chriſt undergoes a double Senſe and Interpretation, ſuitable to the different conſtruction of their Sorrows. Thoſe that look upon their Sorrows as meerly natural, take Chriſt's Reply in a negative Senſe, prohibiting ſuch Tears as thoſe. They that expound their Sorrows as the fruit of Faith, tell us, tho' the Form of Chriſt's expreſſing be negative, yet the Senſe is comparative, as Matth. 9. 13. I will have Mercy, and not Sacrifice; i. e. Mercy rather than Sacrifice. So here, weep rather upon your own account, than mine; reſerve your Sorrows for the Calamities coming upon your ſelves and your Children. You are greatly affected, I ſee, with the Miſery that is upon me; but mine will be quickly over, yours will lie long. In which he ſhews his merciful and compaſſionate Diſpoſition, who was ſtill more mindful of others Troubles and Burdens than of his own.

And inded the days of Calamity coming upon them and their Children, were doleful days. What direful and unprecedented Miſeries befel them at the breaking up and devaſtation of the City, who hath not read or heard? And who can refrain from Tears that hears to read it?

Now, if we take the words in the firſt Senſe, as a prohibition of their meerly natural and carnal Affections, expreſſed in Tears and Lamentations for him, no otherwiſe than they would have been upon any other like tragical Story; then the Obſervation from it will be this;

Doct. 1. That melting Affections and Sorrows, even from the Senſe and Conſideration of the Sufferings of Chriſt, are no infallible ſigns of Grace.

If you take it in the latter Senſe, as the Fruit of their Faith, as Tears flowing from a gracious Principle; then the Obſervation will be this;

Doct. 2. That the believing Meditation of what Chriſt ſuffered for us, is of great force and efficacy to melt and break the Heart.

I ſhall rather chuſe to proſecute both theſe Branches, than to decide the Controverſie; eſpecially ſince the Notes gathered from either are ſo uſeful to us. And therefore I ſhall begin with the firſt, viz.

Doct. 1. That melting Affections and Sorrows, even from the Senſe of Chriſt's Sufferings, are no infallible Marks of Grace.

In this Point I have two things to do, to prepare it for uſe.

Firſt, To ſhew, what the melting of the Affections by way of Grief and Sorrow is.

Secondly, That they may be ſo melted, even upon the account of Chriſt, and yet the Heart remain unrenewed.

Firſt, What the melting of the Affections by way of Grief and Sorrow is.

Tears are nothing elſe but the Juice of a Mind oppreſſed, and ſqueezed with Grief. Grief compreſſes the Heart; the Heart ſo compreſſed and ſqueezed, vents it ſelf ſometimes in Tears, Sighs, Groans, &c. and this is twofold; gracious, and wholly ſupernatural; or common, and altogether natural. The gracious melting or ſorrow of the Soul, is likewiſe twofold; habitual, or actual. Habitual godly Sorrow is that gracious diſpoſition, inclination or tendency of the renewed Heart to mourn and melt, when any juſt occaſion is preſented to the Soul that calls for ſuch Sorrow. It is expreſſed, Ezek. 36. 26. by taking away the heart of ſtone, and giving a heart of fleſh; that is, a Heart impreſſive, and yielding to ſuch Arguments and Conſiderations as move it to mourning.

Actual Sorrow is the expreſſion and manifeſtation of that its Inclination upon juſt Occaſions; and it's expreſſed two ways, either by the internal effects of it, which are the Heavineſs, Shame, Loathing, Reſolution, and holy Revenge begotten in the Soul upon the account of Sin; or alſo by more external and viſible effects, as Sighs, Groans, Tears, &c. The former is eſſential to godly Sorrow, the latter contingent, and accidental, much depending upon the natural temperature and conſtitution of the Body.

Natural and common meltings are nothing elſe but the effects of a better Temper, the fruit of a more ingenuous Spirit, and eaſier Conſtitution, which ſhews it ſelf on any other, as well as upon ſpiritual Occaſions: As Auſtin ſaid, he could weep plentifully, when he read the ſtory of Dido. The Hiſtory of Chriſt is a very tragical and pathetical Hiſtory, and may melt an ingenuous Nature, where there is no renewed Principle at all. So that,

Secondly, Our Affections may be melted, even upon the ſcore and acccount of Chriſt; and yet that is no infallible evidence of a gracious Heart. And the Reaſons for it are,

1. Becauſe we find all ſorts of Affections acted and vented by ſuch as have been no better than temporary Believers. The ſtony-ground hearers in Matth. 13. 20. received the Word with joy; and ſo did John's hearers alſo, who for a ſeaſon rejoyced in his Light, John 3. 35. Now if the Affections of Joy under the Word may be exerciſed, why not of Sorrow alſo? If the comfortable things revealed in the Goſpel may ſtir up the one, by a parity of Reaſon, the ſad things it reveals may anſwerably work upon the other. Even thoſe Iſraelites whom Moſes told they ſhould fall by the Sword, and not proſper, for the Lord would not be with them, becauſe they were turned away from him; yet when Moſes rehearſed the Meſſage of the Lord in their Ears, they mourned greatly, Numb. 14. 39. I know the Lord pardoned to many of them their Iniquities, tho' he took vengeance on their Inventions; and yet it's as true, that with many of them God was not well pleaſed, 1 Cor. 10. 5. Many Inſtances of their weeping and mourning before the Lord, we find in the ſacred Story; and yet their Hearts were not ſtedfaſt with God.

2. Becauſe tho' the Object, about which our Affections and Paſſions are moved, may be ſpiritual; yet the Motives and Principles that ſet them on work, may be but carnal, and natural ones. When I ſee a Perſon affected in the hearing of the Word, or Prayer, even unto Tears, I cannot preſently conclude, ſurely this is the effect of Grace: For it's poſſible, the pathetical Quality of the Subject-matter, the Rhetorick of the Speaker, the very affecting Tone, and modulation of the Voice, may draw Tears, as well as Faith working upon the Spirituality, and deep concernment the Soul hath in thoſe things.

Whilſt Auſtin was a Manichee, he ſometimes heard Ambroſe; and, ſaith he, I was greatly affected in hearing him, even unto Tears many times; howbeit, it was not the Heavenly nature of the Subject, but the Abilities and rare Parts of the Speaker that ſo affected him. And this was the caſe of Ezekiel's hearers, ch. 33. 32.

Again, 3. Theſe motions of the Affections may rather be a Fit and Mood, than the very Frame and Temper of the Soul. Now there is a vaſt difference betwixt theſe: There are times and ſeaſons when the rougheſt, and moſt obdure Hearts may be penſive and tender; but that is not its temper and frame, but only a fit, a pang, a tranſient paſſion: ſo the Lord complains of them, Hoſ. 6. 4. O Ephraim, what ſhall I do unto thee? O Judah, what ſhall I do unto thee? for your Goodneſs is as a morning-cloud, and as the early dew, it goeth away. And ſo he complains, Pſalm 78. 34, 35, 36. When he ſlew them, then they ſought him, and they returned, and enquired early after God. And they remembred that God was their Rock, and the moſt high God their Redeemer; nevertheleſs they did flatter him with their lips, and lied unto him with their tongues. For had this been the gracious temper of their Souls, it would have continued with them; they would not have been up and down, off and on, hot and cold with God, as they were. Therefore we conclude that we cannot infer a work of Grace upon the Heart, ſimply and meerly from the meltings and thaws that are ſometimes upon it. And hence for your uſe I ſhall infer that,

Illa tantum dicuntur ineſſe animæ quæ inſunt per modum quietis.

Inference 1.

If ſuch as ſometimes feel their Hearts thawed and melted with the conſideration of the Sufferings of Chriſt, may yet be deceived; What cauſe have they to fear and tremble, whoſe Hearts are as unrelenting as the Rocks, yielding to nothing that is propoſed, or urged upon them! How many ſuch are there, of whom we may ſay as Chriſt ſpeaks of the inflexible Jews, We have piped unto you, but ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, but ye have not lamented? Matt. 11. 17. They muſt inevitably come ſhort of Heaven, who come ſo ſhort of thoſe that do come ſhort of Heaven. If thoſe periſh that have rejoyced under the Promiſes, and mourned under the threats of the Word; What ſhall become of them that are as unconcerned and untouched by what they hear, as the Seats they ſit on, or the Dead that lie under their feet; who are given up to ſuch hardneſs of Heart, that nothing can touch or affect them! One would think the conſideration of the ſixth Chapter to the Hebrews ſhould ſtartle ſuch Men and Women, and make them cry out, Lord, what will become of ſuch a ſenſleſs, ſtupid, dead Creature as I am? If they that have been enlightned, and have taſted the heavenly Gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, and have taſted the good Word of God, and the powers of the World to come, may, notwithſtanding ſuch high raiſed Affections as theſe, ſo fall away, that it ſhall be impoſſible to renew them again by Repentance; what ſhall we then ſay or think of his Eſtate, to whom the moſt penetrating and awaking Truths are no more than a Tale that is told? The Fire and Hammer of the Goſpel can neither melt nor break them, they are Iron, and Braſs, Jer. 6. 28, 29.

Inference 2.

If ſuch as theſe may eternally miſcarry; Then let all look carefully to their Foundation, and ſee that they do not bleſs themſelves in a thing of nought. It's manifeſt from 1 Cor. 10. 12. That many Souls ſtand exceeding dangerouſly, who are yet ſtrongly conceited of their own Safety. And if you pleaſe to conſult thoſe Scriptures in the margin, you ſhall find vain Confidence to be a ruling Folly over the greateſt part of Men, and that which is the utter overthrow, and undoing of multitudes of Profeſſors.

Gal.6.3,4. John 8.54. Rom. 2. 18, 19, 21. Mat. 25. 11, 12. Mat.7.22.

Now there is nothing more apt to beget and breed this vain Soul-undoing Confidence, than the ſtirrings and meltings of our Affections about ſpiritual things, whilſt the Heart remains unrenewed all the while. For (as a grave Divine hath well obſerved) ſuch a Man ſeems to have all that is required of a Chriſtian, and herein to have attained the very end of all Knowledge; which is operation and influence upon the Heart and Affections.

Mr. An. Burg.

Indeed (thinks ſuch a poor deluded Soul) if I did hear, read, or pray without any inward Affections, with a dead, cold, and unconcerned Heart; or if I did make ſhew of Zeal and Affection in Duties, and had it not, well might I ſuſpect my ſelf to be a ſelf-cozening Hypocrite: but it's not ſo with me. I feel my Heart really melted many times, when I read the Sufferings of Chriſt; I feel my Heart raiſed, and raviſhed with ſtrange Joys and Comforts, when I hear the Glory of Heaven opened in the Goſpel: Indeed if it were not ſo with me, I might doubt the root of the matter is wanting; but if to my Knowledge Affections be added, a melting Heart match't with a knowing Head, now I may be confident all is well. I have often heard Miniſters cautioning and warning their People not to reſt ſatisfied with idle and unpractical Notions in their Underſtandings, but to labour for Impreſſions upon their Hearts; this I have attained, and therefore what danger of me? I have often heard it given as a mark of a Hypocrite, that he hath Light in his Head, but it ſheds not down its influence upon the Heart; whereas in thoſe that are ſincere, it works on their Heart and Affections: So I find it with me, therefore I am in a moſt ſafe Eſtate. O Soul! of all the falſe Signs of Grace, none more dangerous than thoſe that moſt reſemble true ones; and never doth the Devil more ſurely and incurably deſtroy, than when transformed into an Angel of Light. What if theſe meltings of thy Heart be but a flower of Nature? What if thou art more beholden to a good temper of Body, than a gracious change of Spirit for theſe things? Well, ſo it may be. Therefore be not ſecure, but fear and watch. Poſſibly if thou wouldſt but ſearch thine own Heart in this matter, thou mayeſt find, that any other pathetical moving Story will have the like effects upon thee. Poſſibly too, thou mayſt find that notwithſtanding all thy Raptures and Joys at the hearing of Heaven, and it's Glory, yet after that pang is over, thy Heart is habitually earthly, and thy Converſation is not there. For all thou canſt mourn at the relations of Chriſt's Sufferings, thou art not ſo affected with Sin, that was the meritorious Cauſe of the Sufferings of Chriſt, as to crucify one Corruption, or deny the next Temptation, or part with any way of Sin that is gainful, or pleaſurable to thee for his ſake.

Why now, Reader, if it be ſo with thee, what art thou the better for the fluency of thy Affections? Doſt thou think in earneſt, that Chriſt hath the better thoughts of thee, becauſe thou canſt ſhed Tears for him, when notwithſtanding thou every day pierceſt and woundeſt him? O be not deceived. Nay for ought I know, thou mayſt find upon a narrow ſearch, that thou putteſt thy Tears in the room of Chriſt's Blood, and giveſt the confidence and dependance of thy Soul to them; and if ſo, they ſhall never do thee any good.

O therefore ſearch thy Heart, Reader, be not too confident; take not up too eaſily upon ſuch poor weak grounds as theſe, a Soul-undoing Confidence. Always remember, the Wheat and Tares reſemble each other in their firſt ſpringing up; that an Egg is not liker to an Egg, than Hypocriſie, in ſome ſhapes and forms into which it can caſt it ſelf, is like a genuine work of Grace. O remember that among the ten Virgins, that is, the reformed Profeſſors of Religion, that have caſt off and ſeparated themſelves from the Worſhip and Defilements of Antichriſt, five of them were fooliſh.

There be firſt, that ſhall be laſt; and laſt, that ſhall be firſt, Mat. 19. 30. Great is the deceitfulneſs of our Hearts, Jer. 17. 9. And many are the Subtleties and Devices of Satan, 2 Cor. 11. 3. Many alſo are the aſtoniſhing Examples of ſelf-deceiving Souls, recorded in the World. Remember that you lately read of Judas. Great alſo will be the exactneſs of the laſt Judgment. And how confident ſoever you be, that you ſhall ſpeed well in that day, yet ſtill remember that Trial is not yet paſt. Your final Sentence is not yet come from the mouth of your Judge. This I ſpeak, not to afright and trouble, but excite and warn you. The loſs of a Soul is no ſmall Loſs, and upon ſuch grounds as theſe they are every day caſt away.

This may ſuffice to be ſpoken to the firſt Obſervation, built on this Suppoſition, that it was but a Pang of meer natural Affection in them. But if it were the effect of a better Principle, the Fruit of their Faith as ſome judge; then I told you the Obſervation from it would be this,

Doct. 2. That the believing meditation of what Chriſt ſuffered for us, is of great force and efficacy to melt and break the Heart.

It is the Promiſe, Zech. 12. 10. They ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only Son, and ſhall be in bitterneſs for him, as one that is in bitterneſs for his firſt-born. Ponder ſeriouſly here the Spring and Motive, They ſhall look upon me; it's the Eye of Faith that melts and breaks the Heart. The Effect of ſuch a ſight of Chriſt; they ſhall look and mourn; be in bitterneſs and ſorrow. True Repentance is a drop out of the Eye of Faith. And the meaſure or degree of that ſorrow, cauſed by a believing view of Chriſt. To expreſs which, two of the fulleſt inſtances of Grief we read of, are borrowed; that of a tender Father, mourning over a dear and only Son; that of the People of Iſrael, mourning over Joſiah that peerleſs Prince, in the Valley of Megiddo.

Now to ſhew you how the believing meditation of Chriſt, and his Sufferings, come kindly and ſavingly to break and melt down the gracious Heart, I ſhall propound theſe Four Conſiderations of the heart-breaking efficacy of Faith, eying a Crucified Jeſus.

Firſt, The very realizing of Chriſt and his Sufferings by Faith, is a moſt effecting and melting thing. Faith is a true Glaſs that repreſents all thoſe his Sufferings and Agonies to the Life. It preſents them not as a fiction, or idle tale, but as a true and faithful Narrative. This (ſaith Faith) is a true and faithful ſaying, that Chriſt was not only cloathed in our fleſh: he that is over all, God bleſſed for ever, the only Lord, the Prince of the Kings of the Earth, become a Man; but it is alſo moſt certain, that in this body of his Fleſh, he grapled with the infinite Wrath of God, which fill'd his Soul with horror and amazement; that the Lord of Life did hang dead upon the Tree; that he went as a Lamb to the Slaughter, and was as a Sheep dumb before the Shearer; that he endured all this, and more than any finite Underſtanding can comprehend, in my room and ſtead; for my ſake he there groaned and bled; for my Pride, Earthlineſs, Luſt, Unbelief, hardneſs of Heart, he indureth all this. I ſay, to realize the Sufferings of Chriſt thus, is of great power to affect the coldeſt, dulleſt Heart. You cannot imagine the difference there is in preſenting things as Realities, with convincing and ſatisfying Evidences, and our looking on them as a Fiction or Uncertainty.

Secondly, But Faith can apply, as well as realize; and if it do ſo, it muſt needs overcome the Heart.

Ah, Chriſtian, canſt thou look upon Jeſus as ſtanding in thy room, to bear the Wrath of a Deity for thee? Canſt thou think on it, and not melt? That when thou, like Iſaac, waſt bound to the Altar, to be offered up to Juſtice, Chriſt, like the Ram, was caught in the Thicket, and offered in thy room. When thy Sins had raiſed a fearful Tempeſt, that threatned every moment to entomb thee in a Sea of wrath; Jeſus Chriſt was thrown over to appeaſe that Storm! Say, Reader, can thy Heart dwell one hour upon ſuch as Subject as this? Canſt thou with Faith preſent Chriſt to thy ſelf,

ſelf, as he was taken down from the Croſs, drencht from his own Blood, and ſay, Theſe were the Wounds that he received for me; this is he that loved me, and gave himſelf for me; out of theſe Wounds comes that Balm that heals my Soul; out of theſe Stripes, my Peace: When he hang'd upon the Croſs, he bore my Name upon his Breaſt, like the high Prieſt. It was Love, pure Love, ſtrong Love to my poor Soul, to the Soul of an Enemy, that drew him down from Heaven, and all the Glory he had there, to endure theſe Sorrows in Soul and Body for me.

O you cannot hold up your hearts long to the piercing thoughts of this, but your Bowels will be pained, and like Joſeph, you will ſeek a place to vent your Hearts in.

Thirdly, Faith cannot only realize and apply Chriſt and his Death, but it can reaſon and conclude ſuch things from his Death, as will fill the Soul with affection to him, and break the Heart in pieces in his preſence. When it views Chriſt as dead, it infers, Is Chriſt dead for me? then was I dead in Law, ſentenced and condemned to die eternally: 2 Cor. 5. 14. If one die for all, then were all dead. How woful was my caſe, when the Law had paſt Sentence on me? I could not be ſure when I lay down, but that it might be executed before I roſe; nothing but a puff of Breath betwixt my Soul and Hell.

Again, Is Chriſt dead for me? then I ſhall never die. If he be condemned, I am acquited. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's Elect? It's God that juſtifieth, it's Chriſt that died. Rom. 8. 34. My Soul is eſcaped as a Bird out of the ſnare of the Fowler: I was condemned, but am now cleared; I was dead, but am now alive; O the unſearchable Riches of Grace! O Love paſt finding out!

Qui miſit filium, immiſit ſpiritum, promiſit vultum; quid tantum denegabit? Proſp.

Again, did God give Chriſt to ſuch Miſeries and Sufferings for me? How ſhall he withhold any thing now from me? He that ſpared not his own Son, will doubtleſs with him freely give me all things, Rom. 8 32. Now I may reſt on him for Pardon, Peace, Acceptance, and Glory for my Soul. Now I may rely upon him ſafely for Proviſion, Protection, and all Supplies for my Body. Chriſt is the Root of all theſe Mercies; he is more than all theſe, he is nearer and dearer to God than any other Gift. O what a bleſſed, happy, comfortable ſtate hath he now brought my Soul into!

To conclude, Did Chriſt indure all theſe things for me? then it's paſt doubt he will never leave, nor forſake me: It cannot be that after he has endured all this, he will caſt off the Souls for whom he endured it. Here the Soul is evangelically broken by conſidering the Mercies that immerge and flow to it out of the Sea of Chriſt's Blood.

Fourthly, and laſtly, Faith cannot only realize, apply, and infer, but it can alſo compare the Love of Chriſt in all this, both with his dealings with others, and with the Soul's dealing with Chriſt, who ſo loved it. To compare Chriſt's dealings with others, is moſt affecting: He hath not dealt with every one, as with me; nay, few there are that can ſpeak of ſuch Mercies as I have from him: How many are there that have no part nor portion in his Blood? that muſt bear that Wrath in their own Perſons, that he bare himſelf for me! He that kiſſed me over other mens ſhoulders; he hath reached a Pardon to me over other mens heads; he eſpied me out, and ſingled me forth to be the Object of his Love, leaving thouſands and millions ſtill unreconcil'd; not that I was better than they, for I was the greateſt of Sinners, far from Righteouſneſs, as unlikely as any to be the Object of ſuch Grace and Love: My Companions in Sin are left, and I taken. Now the Soul is full, the Heart grows big, too big to contain it ſelf.

Yea, Faith helps the Soul to compare the Love of Chriſt to it, with the returns it hath made to him for that Love. And what, my Soul! hath thy carriage to Chriſt been, ſince this Grace that wants a Name, appeared to thee? Haſt thou returned Love for Love? Love ſutable to ſuch Love? Haſt thou prized, valued and eſteemed this Chriſt, according to his own Worth in himſelf, or his kindneſs to thee? Ah no, I have grieved, pierced, wounded his Heart a thouſand times ſince that, by my Ingratitude; I have ſuffered every trifle to juſtle him out of my Heart; I have neglected him a thouſand times, and made him ſay, Is this thy kindneſs to thy Friend? Is this the Reward I ſhall have for all that I have done, and ſuffered for thee? Wretch that I am, how have I requited the Lord! This ſhames, humbles, and breaks the Heart.

And when from ſuch ſights of Faith, and conſiderations as theſe the Heart is thus affected it affords a good Argument indeed, that thou art gone beyond all the Attainments of temporary Believers; Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed this.

Inference 1.

Have the believing Meditations of Chriſt and his Sufferings ſuch heart-melting Influences? Then ſure there is but little Faith among Men. Our dry Eyes and hard Hearts are evidences againſt us, that we are ſtrangers to the Sights of Faith.

God be merciful to the hardneſs of your Hearts. How is Chriſt and his Love ſlighted among Men! How ſhallow doth his Blood run to ſome Eyes! O that my Head were Waters, and mine Eyes Fountains of tears for this! What Monſters are carnal Hearts! VVe are as if God had made us without Affections, as if all ingenuity and tenderneſs were dried up. Our Ears are ſo accuſtomed to the ſounds of Chriſt, and his Blood, that now they are become as common things. If a Child die, we can mourn over our dead; but who mourns for Chriſt as for an only Son? VVe may ſay of Faith, when Men and Women ſit ſo unaffected under the Goſpel, as Martha ſaid of Chriſt concerning her Brother Lazarus, If thou (precious Faith) hadſt been here, ſo many Hearts had not been dead this day, and in this duty. Faith is that burning-glaſs which contracts the beams of the Grace, and Love, and Wiſdom, and Power of Jeſus Chriſt together, reflects theſe on the Heart, and makes it burn; but without it we feel nothing ſavingly.

Inſer-

Inference 2.

Have the believing Meditations of Chriſt and his Sufferings ſuch heart-melting Influences? Then ſurely, the proper order of raiſing the Affections, is to begin at the exerciſe of Faith. It grieves me to ſee how many poor Chriſtians tug at their own dead Hearts, endeavouring to raiſe and affect them, but cannot: they complain and ſtrive, ſtrive and complain, pump and draw, but no Love to the Lord comes, no brokenneſs of Heart comes; they go to this Ordinance and that, to one Duty and another, hoping that now the Lord will affect it, and fill the Sails; but come back diſappointed, and aſhamed, like the Troops of Tema. Poor Chriſtian, hear me one word; poſſibly it may do thy Buſineſs, and ſtand thee in more ſtead than all the Methods thou haſt yet uſed. If thou wouldſt indeed get a Heart evangelically melted for Sin, and broken with the kindly ſenſe of the Grace and Love of Chriſt, thy way is not to force thy Affections, nor to vex thy ſelf, and go about complaining of a hard Heart, but ſet thy ſelf to believe, realize, apply, infer, and compare by Faith as you have been directed; and ſee what this will do: They ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and mourn. This is the way, and proper method to raiſe the Heart, and break it.

Inference 3.

Is this the way to get a truly broken Heart? Then let thoſe that have attained brokenneſs of Heart this way, bleſs the Lord whilſt they live, for ſo choice a Mercy; and that upon a double account.

1. For as much as a Heart ſo affected and melted, is not attainable by any natural or unrenewed Perſon. If they would give all they have in the World, it cannot purchaſe one ſuch Tear, or Groan over Chriſt. Mark what Characters of ſpecial Grace it bears in the deſcription that's made of it, in that forementioned place, Zech. 12. 10. Such a Frame as this is not born with us, or to be acquired by us; for it's there ſaid to be poured out by the Lord upon us, I will pour on them, &c. There's no hypocriſie or diſſimulation in theſe Mournings, they being compared to the mourning of a Man for his only Son; and ſure Parents Hearts are not untouched when they behold ſuch Sights.

Nature is not the principle of it, but Faith; for it's there ſaid, they ſhall look on me; i. e. believe and mourn. Self is not the End and Centre of theſe Sorrows; it is not ſo much for damning our ſelves, as for piercing Chriſt: They ſhall look on me whom they have pierced, and ſhall mourn; ſo that this is Sorrow after God, and not a flaſh of Nature, as diſcourſed in the former Point. Therefore you have cauſe to bleſs the Lord wilſt you live for ſuch a ſpecial Mercy as this is. And,

2. As it's the right, ſo it is the choiceſt and moſt precious Gift that can be given you; for it's ranked among the prime Mercies of the new Covenant, Ezek. 36. 26. This ſhall be the Covenant; A new Heart alſo will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the ſtony Heart out of your fleſh, and I will give you a Heart of fleſh. What wouldſt thou have given ſometimes for ſuch a Heart as now thou haſt, tho' it be not yet as thou wouldſt have it? And however you value and eſteem it, God himſelf ſets no common value on it: For mark what he ſaith of it, Pſalm 15. 17. The Sacrifices of God are a broken heart: A broken and a contrite Spirit, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe; i. e. God is more delighted with ſuch a Heart than all the Sacrifices in the World; one Groan, one Tear, flowing from Faith, and the Spirit of Adoption, is more to him, than the Cattle upon a thouſand Hills. And to the ſame Senſe he ſpeaks again, Iſai. 66. 1, 2. Thus ſaith the Lord, The Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footſtool: Where is the Houſe that ye build to me? And where is the place of Reſt? — but to this Man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite Spirit, and trembleth at my Word; q. d. all the magnificent Temples, and glorious Structures in the World, give me no Pleaſure in compariſon of ſuch a broken Heart as this.

O then, for ever bleſs the Lord, that hath done that for you, which none elſe could do, and which he has done but for few beſides you.

Serm. 26. Opens the nature and quality of the death Chriſt died upon the Croſs.

SERMON XXVI.

ACTS II. 23.

Him being delivered by the determinate counſel, and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and ſlain.

Mors Chriſti ultimus humiliationis actus, ſubiit extremas, horribiles, & maximas pro hominum peccatis, pœnas. Ameſ.

HAving conſidered in order the preparative Acts for the Death of Chriſt, both on his own part, and on his Enemies part; we now come to conſider the Death of Chriſt it ſelf, which was the principal Part of his Humiliation, and the chief Pillar of our Conſolation. Here we ſhall in order conſider, Firſt, The kind and nature of the Death he died.

Secondly, The manner in which he bare it, viz. patiently, ſolitarily, and inſtructively; dropping divers holy and inſtructive Leſſons upon all that were about him, in his ſeven laſt Words upon the Croſs.

Thirdly, The Funeral Solemnities at his Burial.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, The weighty Ends, and great Deſigns of his Death. In all which Particulars, as we proceed to diſcuſs and open them; you will have an account of the deep Abaſement and Humiliation of the Son of God.

In this Text, we have an account of the kind and nature of that Death which Chriſt died: As alſo of the cauſes of it, both principal and inſtrumental.

Firſt, The kind and nature of the Death Chriſt died, which is here deſcribed more generally, as a violent Death. Ye have ſlain him: And more particularly, as a moſt ignominious, curſed, diſhonourable Death; ye have crucified him.

Secondly, The Cauſes of it are here likewiſe expreſſed: And that both principal and inſtrumental. The principal Cauſe, permitting, ordering, and diſpoſing all things about it, was the determinate Counſel and Foreknowledge of God. There was not an Action or Circumſtance, but came under this moſt wiſe and holy Counſel, and Determination of God.

Non excuſantur Judæi quia huic occulto juſſui non obtemperant, ſed odio & affectibus impulſi; Chriſtum percuſſerunt innocentem: contra leges, Pareus.

The Inſtruments effecting it, were their wicked Hands. This Foreknowledge and Counſel of God, as it did no way neceſſitate or enforce them to it; ſo neither doth it excuſe their Fact from the leaſt aggravation of its ſinfulneſs. It did no more compel or force their wicked Hands to do what they did, than the Mariner's hoiſing up his Sails, to take the Wind to ſerve his Deſign, compels the Wind. And it cannot excuſe their Action from one Circumſtance of ſin: Becauſe God's end and manner of acting was one thing; their end and manner of acting another. His moſt pure and holy; theirs moſt malicious, and daringly wicked. Idem quod duo faciunt, non eſt idem. To this purpoſe a grave Divine well expreſſes it.

Morning Exerciſe at Giles's. p. 289.

In reſpect of God, Chriſt's Death was Juſtice and Mercy. In reſpect of Man, it was Murder and Cruelty. In reſpect of himſelf, it was Obedience and Humility. Hence our Note is,

Doct. That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was not only put to death, but to the worſt of deaths, even the death of the Croſs.

To this the Apoſtle gives a plain Teſtimony, Phil. 2. 8. He became obedient to death, even the death of the Croſs; where his Humiliation is both ſpecified; he was humbled to Death; and aggravated by a moſt emphatical reduplication, even the death of the Croſs. So Acts 5. 30. Jeſus whom ye ſlew, and hanged upon a tree; q. d. it did not ſuffice you to put him to a violent, but you alſo put him to the moſt baſe, vile, and ignominious death: you hanged him on a tree.

In this Point we will diſcuſs theſe three Particulars, viz. the nature or kind, the manner, and reaſons of Chriſt's death upon the Tree.

1. Firſt, I ſhall open the kind or nature of his death, by ſhewing you that it was a violent, painful, ſhameful, curſed, ſlow, and ſuccourleſs death.

Firſt, It was a violent death, that Chriſt died. Violent in it ſelf, though voluntary on his part. He was cut off out of the land of the living, Iſa. 53. 8. And yet he laid down his life of himſelf; no man took it from him, John 10. 17. I call his death violent, becauſe he died not a natural death, (i. e.) he lived not till Nature was conſumed with Age, as it is in many who live till their balſamum radicale, radical moiſture, like the Oil in the Lamp, be quite conſumed, and then go out like an expiring Lamp. It was not ſo with Chriſt. For he was but in the flower and prime of his time when he died. And indeed he muſt either die a violent death, or not die at all; partly becauſe there was no ſin in him, to open a door to natural death; as it doth in all others. Partly becauſe elſe his death had not been a Sacrifice acceptable and ſatisfactory to God for us. That which died of it ſelf, was never offered up to God; but that which was ſlain when it was in its full ſtrength and health. The Temple was a Type of the body of Chriſt. Now, when the Temple was deſtroyed, it did not drop down as an ancient ſtructure decayed by time; but was pulled down by violence, when it was ſtanding in its full ſtrength. Therefore he is ſaid to ſuffer death, and to be put to death for us in the fleſh, 1 Pet. 3. 18. That's the firſt thing. It was a violent, though a voluntary death. For violent is not oppoſed to voluntary, but to natural.

John 2. 19

Secondly, The death of the Croſs was a moſt painful death. Indeed in this death were many deaths contrived in one. The Croſs was a Rack, as well as a Gibbet. The pains Chriſt ſuffered upon the Croſs, are by the Apoſtle emphatically ſtil'd τὰς ὠδῖνας τȣ͂ θανάτȣ, Acts 2. 24. the pains of death: but properly they ſignifie the pangs of Travail: yea, the birth pangs, the moſt acute ſorrows of a travailing Woman. His Soul was in travail, Iſa. 53. His body in bitter pangs; and being as Aquinas ſpeaks, optime complectionatus, of the moſt excellent Craſis, exact and juſt temperament; his Senſes were more acute and delicate than ordinary: and all the time of his ſuffering ſo they continued; not in the leaſt blunted, dulled or rebated by the pains he ſuffered.

The death of Chriſt doubtleſs contained the greateſt, and acuteſt pains imaginable. Becauſe theſe pains of Chriſt alone, were intended to equalize all that miſery, which the ſin of man deſerved, all that pain which the Damned ſhall, and the Elect deſerved to feel. Now to have pains meeting at once upon one perſon, equivalent to all the pains of the damned: Judge you what a plight Chriſt was in.

Continebat pœnas maximas, quia miſeriam illam totam æquabat, qua hominum peccata merebantur, Ames. med.

Thirdly, The death of the Croſs, was a ſhameful death. Not only becauſe the crucified were ſtripped quite naked, and ſo expoſed as ſpectacles of ſhame: but mainly, becauſe it was that kind of death which was appointed for the baſeſt, and vileſt of men.

The Free-men when they committed capital Crimes, were not condemned to the Croſs. No, that was looked upon as the death appointed for Slaves. Tacitus calls it ſervile ſupplicium, the puniſhment of a Slave: and to the ſame ſenſe Juvenal ſpeaks, pone crucem ſervo, put the croſs upon the back of a ſlave. As they had a great eſteem of a Free-man, ſo they manifeſted it, even when they had forfeited their lives, in cutting them off by more honourable kinds of death. This by hanging on the tree, was always accounted moſt ignominious. To this day we ſay of him that's hanged, he dies the death of a Dog: And yet it's ſaid of our Lord Jeſus, Heb. 12. 2. he not only endur'd the Croſs, but alſo deſpiſed the ſhame. Obedience to his Father's Will, and Zeal for your Salvation, made him digeſt the ſhame of it, and deſpiſe the baſeneſs that was in it.

Vide Lyſium de cruce. Lib. 1. chap 11. Ingenui hominis nulla eſt æſtimatio. Mortem hanc Homerus. Odyſ. χ vocat μὴ καθαρὸν impuram. Et Euſtathius μιαρὸν fœdam.

Fourthly, The death of the Croſs, was a curſed death. Upon that account he is ſaid to be made κατάρα, a curſe for us; For it is written, curſed is every one that hangeth on a Tree, Gal. 3. 13. This refers to Deut. 21. 23. His body ſhall not remain all night upon the Tree, but thou ſhalt in any wiſe bury him that day; for he that is hanged, is accurſed of God. The very ſymbol of lifting them up betwixt heaven and earth, carried much ſhame in it. For it implieth this in it, that the perſon ſo uſed, was ſo execrable, baſe and vile, that he deſerved not to tread upon the earth, or touch the ſurface of the ground any more. And the command for burying them that day, doth not at all mitigate, but rather aggravates this curſe: ſpeaking the perſon to be ſo abominable, that as he is lifted up into the air, and hanging between heaven and earth, as unworthy ever to ſet foot more upon the earth; ſo when dead, they were to haſten to bury him, that ſuch an abominable ſight might be removed aſſoon as might be, from before the eyes of men; and that the earth might not be defiled, by his lying on the ſurface of it, when taken down.

Non ſtatuitur hoc pro honore cadaveris ſepeliendi, ſed quod cadaver illud maledictum cito à ſuperficie terræ tollatur, & terra non quinetur. Sic Bonfrerius.

However, as the learned Junius hath judiciouſly obſerved, that this curſe is only a Ceremonial Curſe: For otherwiſe it's neither in it ſelf, nor by the Law of nature, or by civil Law, more execrable than any other death. And the main reaſon why the Ceremonial Law affixed the curſe to this rather than to any other death, was principally with reſpect to the death Chriſt was to die. And therefore, Reader, ſee and admire the Providence of God, that Chriſt ſhould die by a Roman and not by a Judaick Law. For crucifying, or hanging on the Tree, was a Roman puniſhment, and not in uſe among the Jews. But the Scriptures cannot be broken.

Fifthly, The death of the Croſs was a very ſlow, and lingering death. They died leiſurably. Which ſtill encreaſeth, and aggravateth the miſery of it. If a man muſt die a violent death, it's a favour to be diſpatcht; as they that are preſſed to death, beg for more weight. And it's a favour to thoſe that are hanged, to be ſmitten on the breaſt, or plucked by the heels by their Friends. On the contrary, to hang long in the midſt of tortures, to have death coming upon us with a ſlow pace, that we may feel every tread of it, as it comes on, is a miſery.

The Tyrant that heard the poor Martyr was dead under his firſt torments, ſaid as one diſappointed, Evaſit. He hath eſcaped me. For he intended to have kept him much longer under torments. And it was the cruel counſel of another to his Executioner; Let him die ſo, as he may feel himſelf how he dies. And ſurely in this reſpect it was worſe for Chriſt, than any other that was ever nailed to the Tree. For all the while he hang'd there, he remained full of life and acute ſenſe. His life departed not gradually, but was whole in him to the laſt. Other men die gradually, and towards their end their ſenſe of pain is much blunted. They faulter, fumble and expire by degrees; but Chriſt ſtood under the pains of death in his full ſtrength. His life was whole in him. This was evident by the mighty out-cry he made, when he gave up the Ghoſt. Which argued him then to be full of ſtrength, contrary to the experience of all other men. Which made the Centurion when he heard it, to conclude; clude; Surely this was the Son of God, Mark 15. 37, 39.

Moriatur, ut ſentiat ſe mori.

Sixthly, It was a ſuccourleſs and helpleſs death to Chriſt. Sometimes they gave to Malefactors amidſt their torments, Vinegar and Myrh, to blunt, dull and ſtupifie their Senſes. And if they hanged long, would break their bones, to diſpatch them out of their pains. Chriſt had none of this favour. Inſtead of Vinegar and Myrh, they gave him Vinegar and Gall to drink, to aggravate his torments. And for the breaking of his bones, he prevented it, by dying before they came to break his legs. For the Scriptures muſt be fulfilled, which ſay, not a bone of him ſhall be broken.

Sozom. lib. 1. chap. 8.

This now was the kind and nature of that death he died. Even the violent, painful, ſhameful, curſed, ſlow and ſuccourleſs death of the Croſs. An ancient puniſhment both among the Romans and Carthaginians. But in honour of Chriſt, who died this death, Conſtantine the Great, abrogated it by Law, ordaining that none ſhould ever be Crucified any more, becauſe Chriſt died that Death.

Godwins Antiq. lib. 3. Sect. 3. p. 192.

Secondly, As to the manner of the execution. They that were condemned to the death of the Croſs, (ſaith a Learned Antiquary of of our own) bare their Croſs upon their own ſhoulders, to the place of Execution. Then were ſtript of all their cloaths, for they ſuffered naked. And then were faſtned to the Croſs with nails.

Herles Contempla. of Chriſt's Paſſion.

The manner how that was done, one gives us in theſe words, They ſtretch him out (meaning Chriſt) like another Iſaac upon his own burden, the Croſs; that ſo they might take meaſure of the holes. And though the Print of his blood upon it, gave them the true length of his body; yet how ſtrictly do they take it longer than the truth. Thereby at once to Crucifie, and rack him. Then being nailed, like as Moſes lifted up the Serpent, ſo was the Son of Man lifted up. And when the Croſs, with the Lord faſtned on it, fell into its ſocket, or baſis, it jerked the whole, and every part of his ſacred body. And the whole weight hanging on his nailed hands, the wounds by degrees grew wider and wider: till at laſt he expired in the midſt of thoſe tortures.

And that the equity of their proceedings might the better appear, to the People; the cauſe of the puniſhment was written in Capital Letters, and fixed to the Tree over the head of the Malefactor. Of this appendant to this kind of death, I ſhall ſpeak diſtinctly in the next Sermon, before I come to handle the manner of his Death: there being ſo much of providence in that circumſtance, as invites us to ſpend more than a few tranſient thoughts upon it. Mean while in the next place, Thirdly, We will enquire briefly into the reaſons why Chriſt died this, rather than any other kind of death. And amongſt others, theſe three are obvious.

Firſt, Becauſe Chriſt muſt bear the curſe in his death, and a curſe by Law was affixed to no other kind of death, as it was to this. The Learned Maſius upon Joſhua 2. 29. Commenting upon the death of the King of Ai, who was hanged on the Tree, until evening, tells us that the principal reaſon of the malediction and execrableneſs of his death was, becauſe the death of Chriſt was prefigured in that myſtery. Chriſt came to take away the curſe from us, by this death; and ſo muſt be made a curſe. On him muſt all the curſes of the Moral Law lie, which were due to us. And that nothing might be wanting to make it a full curſe; the very death he died, muſt alſo have a Ceremonial curſe upon it.

Potiſſima cauſa maledictionis hujus eſt quia Chriſtus in myſterio præſignabatur. Maſius.

Secondly, Chriſt died this, rather than any other kind of death; to fulfil the Types, and Prefigurations that of old were made with reſpect to it. All the Sacrifices were lifted up from the earth, upon the Altar. But eſpecially the braſen Serpent prefigured this death, Num. 21. 9. Moſes made a Serpent of Braſs and put it upon a Pole. And, ſaith Chriſt, Joh. 3. 14. As Moſes lifted up the Serpent in the wilderneſs ſo muſt the Son of man be lifted up, that ſo he might correſpond with that lively Type, made of him in the Wilderneſs.

Thirdly, Chriſt died, this rather than any other death, becauſe it was predicted of him, and in him muſt all the Predictions, as well as Types be fully accompliſhed. The Pſalmiſt ſpake in the perſon of Chriſt, of this death, as plainly as if he had rather been writing the Hiſtory of what was done, than a Prophecy of what was to be done, ſo many years afterwards, Pſalm 22. 16, 17. For dogs have compaſſed me about, the aſſembly of the wicked have incloſed me; they pierced my hands and my feet. I may tell all my bones, they look and ſtare upon me. Which hath a manifeſt reference to the diſtinction of all his members upon the Tree, which was as a rack to him. So Zech. 12. 10. They ſhall look upon me, whom they have pierced. Yea, Chriſt himſelf had foretold the death he ſhould die, in the forecited, Joh. 3. 14. Saying he muſt be lifted up, (i. e.) hanged between heaven and earth. And the Scriptures muſt be fulfilled.

Thus you have a brief account both of the kind, manner, and reaſons of this death of Chriſt. The improvement of it, you have in the following Inferences of truth, deducible from it.

A demonſtration of pardon for the greateſt of ſinners.

Inference 1. Is Chriſt dead? And did he die the violent, painful, ſhameful, curſed, ſlow, and ſuccourleſs death of the Croſs? Then ſurely there is forgiveneſs with God, and plenteous redemption for the greateſt of Sinners, that by Faith apply the blood of the Croſs, to their poor guilty Souls. So ſpeaks the Apoſtle, Col. 1. 14. In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveneſs of ſins, And 1 Joh. 1. 7. The blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſin. Two things will make this demonſtrable.

Firſt, That there is ſufficient efficacy in this blood of the Croſs, to expiate the greateſt Sins.

Secondly, That the efficacy of it is deſigned and intended by God for believing ſinners. How clearly do both theſe propoſitions lie in the Word.

First, That there is ſufficient efficacy in the blood of the Croſs, to expiate and waſh away the greateſt ſins. This is manifeſt, for it is precious blood, as it's called, 1 Pet. 1. 18. Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as Silver and Gold; but with the precious blood of the Son of God. This preciouſneſs of the blood of Chriſt riſes from the union it hath with that perſon, who is over all, God bleſſed for ever. And on that account is ſtiled the blood of God, Acts 20. 28. And ſo it becomes Royal, Princely blood. Yea, ſuch for the dignity,and efficacy of it,as never was created,or ſhall ever run in any other veins,but his. The blood of all the Creatures in the world, even a Sea of humane blood,bears no more proportion to the precious and excellent blood of Chriſt, than a diſh of common-water, to a River of liquid Gold. On the account of it's invaluable preciouſneſs, it becomes ſatisfying and reconciling blood to God. So the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Col. 1. 20. And (having made peace through the Blood of his Croſs) by him to reconcile all things to himſelf; by him I ſay, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven. The ſame blood which is Redemption to them that dwell on earth, is Confirmation to them that dwell in Heaven. Before the efficacy of this Blood Guilt vaniſhes; and ſhrinks away; as the ſhadows before the glorious Son. Every drop of it hath a voice, and ſpeaks to the Soul that ſits trembling under its guilt, better things than the blood of Abel, Heb. 12. 24. It ſprinkles us from an evil, (i. e.) an unquiet, and accuſing conſcience, Heb. 10. 22. For having enough in it to ſatisfie God, it muſt needs have enough in it to ſatisfie Conſcienc.

Conſcience can demand no more for its ſatisfaction, nor will it take leſs, than God demands for his ſatisfaction. And in this blood is enough to give both ſatisfaction.

Secondly, As there is ſufficient Efficacy in this blood, to expiate the greateſt guilt; ſo it's as manifeſt, that the vertue and efficacy of it, is intended and deſigned by God for the Uſe of believing ſinners. Such blood as this was ſhed without doubt for ſome weighty end, that ſome might be the better for it. Who they are for whom it is intended, is plain enough from Acts 13. 39. And by him all that believe, are juſtified from all things; from which they could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes.

That the remiſſion of the ſins of believers was the great thing deſigned in the pouring out of this precious blood of Chriſt, appears from all the Sacrifices that figured it to the ancient Church. The ſhedding of that Typical blood, ſpake a deſign of pardon. And the putting of their hands upon the head of the Sacrifice, ſpake the way and method of believing, by which that blood was then applied to them in that way: and is ſtill applied to us in a more excellent way. Had no pardon been intended,no Sacrifices had been appointed.

Moreover, let it be conſidered; this blood of the Croſs is the blood of a Surety; that came under the ſame obligations with us, and in our name or ſtead ſhed it: and ſo of courſe frees and diſcharges the principal offender, or debtor,Heb. 7. 22. Can God exact ſatisfaction from the blood and death of his own Son, the ſurety of Believers; and yet ſtill demand it from Believers? It cannot be. Who (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſhall lay any thing to the charge of of God's elect? It is God that Juſtifieth. Who ſhall condemn? It is Chriſt that died, Rom. 8. 33, 34. And why are Faith and Repentance, preſcribed as the means of pardon? Why doth God every where in his Word, call upon ſinners to repent, and believe in this blood? Encouraging them ſo to do, by ſo many precious promiſes of remiſſion; and declaring the inevitable and eternal ruine of all impenitent and unbelieving ones, who deſpiſe and reject this blood? What,I ſay, doth all this ſpeak, but the poſſibility of a pardon for the greateſt of ſinners; and the certainty of a free, full, and final pardon, for all believing ſinners? O what a joyful ſound is this? What raviſhing voices of peace, pardon, grace, and acceptance come to our ears, from the blood of the Croſs!

The greateſt guilt that ever was contracted upon a trembling ſhaking Conſcience, can ſtand before the efficacy of the blood of Chriſt no more, than the ſinner himſelf can ſtand before the juſtice of the Lord, with all the guilt upon him.

Reader, The Word aſſures thee, what ever thou haſt been, or art, that ſins of as deep a die as thine, have been waſht away in this blood. I was a blaſphemer, a perſecutor, injurious; but I obtained mercy, ſaith Paul, 1 Tim. 1. 13. but it may be thou wilt object: this was a rare and ſingular inſtance, and it's a great queſtion whether any other ſinner ſhall find the like grace, that he did. No queſtion of it at all, if you believe in Chriſt, as he did: for he tells us verſ. 16. For this cauſe I obtained mercy, that in me firſt, Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all long-ſuffering, for a pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe on him, to life everlaſting. So that upon the ſame grounds he obtained mercy, you may obtain it alſo.

Thoſe very men who had a hand in the ſhedding of Chriſt's blood, had the benefit of that blood afterwards pardoning them, Acts 2. 36. There is nothing but unbelief and impenitency of heart, bars thy Soul from the bleſſings of this blood.

Inference. 2. Did Chriſt die the curſed death of the Croſs for believers, then though there be much of pain, there is nothing of curſe in the death of the Saints. It ſtill wears its dart, by which it ſtrikes; but hath loſt its ſting by which it hurts and deſtroys. A Serpent that hath no ſting, may hiſs and affright; but we may take him in our hand without danger. Death poured out all its poiſon, and loſt its ſting in Chriſt's ſide,when he became a curſe for us.

But what ſpeak I of the innocency and harmleſneſs of death to believers? It is certainly their friend, and great benefactor. As there is no curſe, ſo there are many bleſſings in it. Death is yours, 1 Cor. 3. 22. Yours as a ſpecial priviledge and favour. Chriſt hath not only conquered it, but is more than a conqueror; for he hath made it beneficial, and very ſerviceable to the Saints. When Chriſt was nailed to the tree, then he ſaid as it were to death which came to grapple with him there; O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy deſtruction; And ſo he was: for he ſwallowed up death in victory, ſpoiled it of its power. So that it drives but a poor trade now among believers, frighting ſome weak ones among them, though it cannot hurt them at all.

Omnis Chriſtianus eſt crucianus.

Inference 3. If Chriſt died the curſed death of the Croſs for us, how cheerfully ſhould we ſubmit to, and bear any Croſs for Jeſus Chriſt! He had his Croſs, and we have ours; but what feathers are ours, compared with his? His Croſs was a heavy croſs indeed, yet how patiently and meekly did he ſupport it! He endured his Croſs, we cannot endure or bear ours, though they be not to be named with his. Three things would marvellouſly ſtrengthen us to bear the Croſs of Chriſt, and bring up a good report upon it in the World.

Firſt, That we ſhall carry it but a little way. Secondly, Chriſt bears the havieſt end of it. Thirdly, Innumerable bleſſings and mercies grow upon the Croſs of Chriſt.

If twenty croſſes be written for you in God's book, they will come at laſt to nineteen, and after that to nothing. Put your head betwixt Chriſt's breaſts for evermore, and his own ſoft hand to dry your face, and wipe away your fears.

Firſt, We ſhall bear it but a little way. It ſhould be enough to me (ſaith a holy one) that Chriſt will have joy and ſorrow halfers of the life of the Saints. And that each of them ſhould have a ſhare of our days, as the night and day are kindly partners of time, and take it up betwixt them. But if ſorrow be the greedieſt halfer of our days here, I know joys day ſhall dawn, and do more than recompence all our ſad hours.

Let my Lord Jeſus (ſince he will do ſo) weave my bit-and-ſpan length of time with white and black; well and wo. —— Let the roſe be neighbour with the thorn. —— ‘When we are over the water Chriſt ſhall cry; Down Croſſes and up Heaven for evermore. Down Hell, and down Death, and down Sin, and down Sorrow: and up Glory, up Life, up Joy for evermore. 'Tis true, Chriſt and his Croſs are not ſeparable in this life; howbeit, Chriſt and his Croſs part at Heavens door. For there is no houſe-room for croſſes in Heaven. One tear, one ſigh, one ſad heart, one fear, one loſs, one thought of trouble cannot find Lodging there. —— Sorrow and the Saints are not married together; or ſuppoſe it were ſo, Heaven ſhall make a divorce. Life is but ſhort, and therefore Croſſes cannot be long. Our Sufferings are but for a while, 1 Pet. 5. 10. They are but the Sufferings of the preſent time, Rom. 8. 18.

Secondly, As we ſhall carry the Croſs of Chriſt but a little way, ſo Chriſt himſelf bears the heavieſt end of it. And as one happily expreſſes, he ſaith of their Croſſes, half mine. He divideth Sufferings with them, and takes the largeſt ſhare to himſelf. ‘O how ſweet a ſight (ſaith one ſweetly) is it to ſee a Croſs betwixt Chriſt and us. To hear our Redeemer ſay, at every ſigh, at every blow, and every loſs of a Believer, half mine. For they are called the Sufferings of Chriſt, and the reproach of Chriſt, Col. 2. 24. Heb. 11. 26. As when two are partners and owners of a Ship, half of the gain and half of the Loſs belongeth to either of the two. So Chriſt in our Sufferings, is half gainer and half loſer with us: yea, the heavieſt end of the black tree lyeth on your Lord. It falleth firſt upon him, and but rebounds from him upon you: the reproaches of them that reproached thee, are fallen upon me, Pſalm. 69. 9. Nay, to ſpeak as the thing is, Chriſt doth not only bear half, or the better part; but the whole of our croſs and burden. Yea, he bears all, and more than all; for he bears us, and our burden too; or elſe we ſhould quickly ſink, and faint under it.

Thirdly, As we have not far to carry it, and Chriſt carries the heavieſt part; yea, all the burden for us: yea, us, and our burden too: So in the laſt place it's reviving to think what an innumerable multitude of bleſſings and mercies are the fruit and off-ſpring of a ſanctified Croſs. Since that tree was ſo richly watered with the blood of Chriſt; what ſtore of choice, and rich fruits doth it bear to believers?

Our Sufferings (ſaith one) are waſhed in the blood of Chriſt, as well as our Souls. ‘For Chriſt's merits bought a bleſſing to the Croſſes of the Sons of God. Our troubles owe us a free paſſage through him. Devils, and men, and croſſes are our debtors; and death, and all ſtorms are our debtors, to blow our poor toſſed bark over the water fraight-free: and to ſet the Travellers in their own known ground. Therefore we ſhall die, and yet live. —— I know no man hath a velvet Croſs, but the Croſs is made of what God will have it; but verily, howbeit, it be no warrantable market to buy a Croſs, yet I dare not ſay, O that I had liberty to ſell Chriſt's Croſs, leſt therewith alſo I ſhould ſell joy, comfort, ſenſe of love, patience, and the kind viſits of a Bridegroom. ———— I have but ſmall experience of Sufferings for Chriſt, but let my Judge and Witneſs in Heaven, lay my Soul in the ballance of Juſtice; If I find not a young Heaven, and a little Paradiſe of glorious comforts, and ſoul delighting love kiſſes of Chriſt, in ſuffering for him and his truth. ———— My priſon is my palace, my ſorrow is with child of Joy. My loſſes are rich loſſes, my pain eaſie pain, my heavy days are holy days, and happy days. I may tell a new tale of Chriſt to my friends. —— O what owe I to the file, and to the hammer, and to the furnace of my Lord Jeſus! who hath now let me ſee how good the wheat of Chriſt is, that goes through his mill, and his oven, to be made Bread for his own Table. Grace tried, is better than grace, and more than grace. It's glory in the Infancy.

‘Who knows the truth of Grace without a trial? —— O how little getteth Chriſt of us but what he winneth (to ſpeak ſo) with much toil and pains? And how ſoon would Faith freeze without a Croſs! bear your Croſs therefore with joy.

Inference 4. Did Chriſt die the death, yea, the worſt of deaths for us? Then it follows, that our mercies are brought forth with great difficulties; and that which is ſweet to us in the fruition, was coſtly and hard to Chriſt in the acquiſition. Surely upon every Mercy we have, this Motto written, The price of Blood, Col. 1. 14. In whom we have redemption through his blood: Upon which a late neat Writer delivers himſelf thus. ‘ The way of Grace is here conſiderable; Life comes thro' Death; God comes in Chriſt; and Chriſt comes in Blood: the choiceſt Mercies come through the greateſt Miſeries; prime Favours come ſwiming in Blood to us. Through a red Sea, Iſrael came to Canaan. Many a Man loſt his Life, and much Blood ſhed; the very Land flowing with Milk and Honey, was firſt made to flow with Blood, e're Iſrael could inherit the Promiſe. Seven Nations were deſtroyed e're the Land of Canaan was divided to the Iſraelites, Acts 13. 19. —— Sin makes Mercy ſo deadly hard to bring forth. To Chriſten every precious Child, every Benjamin Benoni, every Son of God's right-hand, a Son of ſorrow and death to her that brings him forth. Adam's ſweets had no bitter till he tranſgreſſed God's Will: One Mercy did not die to bring forth another, till he died. But oh! how ſhould this raiſe the value of our Mercies! What, the price of Blood, the price of precious Blood, the Blood of the Croſs! O what an eſteem ſhould this raiſe!

Lock in Coll.

‘ Things (as the ſame ingenious Author adds) are prized rather as they come, than as they are. Far fetch'd and dear bought makes all the Price, and gives all the worth with us weak Creatures. Upon this ground the Scripture, when it ſpeaks of our great fortune, tells the great price it coſt, as eying our weakneſs, who look more at what things coſt, than at what they are. And as knowing if any thing will take with us, this will. To him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſin, in his own blood, Rev. 1. 5.

‘ Man is a legal Creature, and looks much at what is given for a thing. What did this coſt? Why, it coſt Chriſt's own Blood. Colour is more than the Cloth with us, and Scarlet colour is a general taking colour with us: And therefore is Chriſt's Garment dipt in Blood, and he admired in this habit. Who is this that cometh from Edom? with garments died red from Bozra?

Beware then you abuſe not any of the Mercies that Chriſt brought forth with ſo many bitter pangs and throws. And let all this endear Chriſt more than ever to you, and make you in a deep ſenſe of his Grace and love, to ſay,

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 27.

Opens and improves that ſignal Providence which directed and ordered the Title affixed to the Croſs of Chriſt.

SERMON XXVII.

LUKE XXIII. 38.

And a ſuperſcription alſo was written over him, in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew; This is the King of the Jews.

BEfore I paſs on to the manner of Chriſt's death, I ſhall conſider the Title affixed to the Croſs; in which very much of the Wiſdom of Providence was diſcovered. It was the manner of the Romans, that the Equity of their Proceedings might the more clearly appear to the People, when they crucified any Man, to publiſh the cauſe of his death in a Table written in Capital Letters, and placed over the Head of the crucified. And that there might be at leaſt a ſhew and face of Juſtice in Chriſt's death, he alſo ſhall have his Title or Superſcription.

The worſt and moſt unrighteous Actions labour to cover and ſhroud themſelves under pretenſions of Equity. Sin is ſo ſhameful a thing, that it cares not to own its name. Chriſt ſhall have a Table written for him alſo. This Writing one Evangeliſt calls the Accuſation, Matth. 27. 37. Another calls it the Title, John 19. 19. Another the Inſcription or Superſcription, ſo the Text. And another the Superſcription of his Accuſation, Mark 15. 26. In ſhort, it was a fair legible Writing, intended to expreſs the Fact or Crime, for which the Perſon died.

This was their uſual manner, though ſometimes we find it was publiſhed by the Voice of the Common Cryer. As in the Caſe of Attalus the Martyr, who was led about the Amphitheater, one proclaiming before him, This is Attalus the Chriſtian. But it was cuſtomary and uſual to expreſs the Crime in a written Table, as the Text expreſſes it. Wherein theſe three things offer themſelves to your Conſideration.

Euſeb. Ec cleſ. Hiſt. lib. 5. c.

1. Firſt, The Character or Deſcription of Chriſt contained in that Writing. And he is deſcribed by his Kingly Dignity: This is the King of eger ti- s fuit, eſt Je- Naza- s, Rex aeorum.

of the Jews. That very office which but a little before they had reproached and derided, bowing the Knee to him in mockery, ſaying, Hail King of the Jews; the Providence of God ſo orders it, that therein he ſhall be vindicated and honoured. This is the King of the Jews: Or as the other Evangeliſts compleat it, This is Jeſus of Nazareth the King of the Jews.

2. Secondly, The Perſon that drew his Character or Title. It was Pilate; he that but now condemned him: He that was his Judge, ſhall be his Herald, to proclaim his Glory. For the Title is honourable. Surely this was not from himſelf, for he was Chriſt's Enemy; but rather than Chriſt ſhould want a Tongue to clear him, the Tongue of an Enemy ſhall do it.

3. Thirdly, The time when this honour was done him: It was when he was at the loweſt ebb of his Glory; when ſhame and reproach were heaped on him by all hands. When all the Diſciples had forſaken him, and were fled. Not one left to proclaim his Innocency or ſpeak a word in his Vindication. Then doth the Providence of God as ſtrangely as powerfully overrule the Heart and Pen of Pilate, to draw this Title for him, and affix it to his Croſs. Surely we muſt look higher than Pilate in this thing, and ſee how Providence ſerves it ſelf by the hands of Chriſt's Adverſaries. Pilate writes in honour of Chriſt, and ſtifly defends it too. Hence our Obſervation is;

ulus pro ore for- fuit poſitus, altius urgen- m eſt; Dei con- ilium, qui imonio c publi- o, Chri- m re- m Eccle- procla- ri Pilati iptura voluit. Par.

Doct. 1. That the Dignity of Chriſt was openly proclaimed, and defended by an Enemy; and that in the time of his greateſt Reproaches and Sufferings.

To open this Myſtery of Providence to you, that you may not ſtand idly gazing upon Chriſt's Title, as many then did: We muſt Firſt conſider the nature and quality of this Title. Secondly, What hand the Providence of God had in this Matter. Thirdly, And then draw forth the proper Uſes and Improvements of it.

1. Firſt, To open the nature and quality of Chriſt's Title or Inſcription; let it be throughly conſidered and we ſhall find,

Firſt, That it was an extraordinary Title, varying from all Examples of that kind; and directly croſſing the main Deſign and End of their own Cuſtom. For, as I hinted before, the End of it was to clear the Equity of their Proceedings, and ſhew the People how juſtly they ſuffered thoſe Puniſhments inflicted on them for ſuch Crimes. But lo, here is a Title expreſſing no Crime at all, and ſo vindicating Chriſt's Innocency. This ſome of them perceived, and moved Pilate to change it, not this is, but this is he that ſaid, I am the King of the Jews. In that as they conceived lay his Crime. O how ſtrange and wonderful a thing was this! But what ſhall we ſay! It was a day of Wonders and extraordinary Things. As there was never ſuch a Perſon crucified before, ſo there never was ſuch a Title affixed to the Croſs before.

c extra- mari- eſt, d fine ominia lus ap- itur. v.

Secondly, As it was an extraordinary, ſo it was a publick Title, both written and publiſhed with the greateſt advantages of ſpreading it ſelf far and near, among all People that could be. For it was written in three Languages, and thoſe moſt known in the World at that time. The Greek Tongue was then known in moſt parts of the World. The Hebrew was the Jews native Language. And the Latin the Language of the Gentiles. So that it being written both in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, it was eaſie to be underſtood, both by Jews and Gentiles.

Tribus linguis toto orbe tunc vulgatiſſimis; ſcribi voluit; ut ab omnibus legi, & intelligi potuit. Pareus.

And indeed unto this the Providence of God had a ſpecial Eye, to make it notorious and evident to all the World. For even ſo all things deſign'd, for publick view, and knowledge were written. Joſephus tells us of certain Pillars, on which was engraven in Letters of Greek and Latin, It is a wickedneſs for ſtrangers to enter into the holy Place. So the Soldiers of Gordian, the third Emperor, when he was ſlain upon the Borders of Perſia, they raiſed a Monument for him, and engraved his Memorial upon it, in Greek, Latin, Perſick, Judaick, and Egyptick Letters, that all People might read the ſame. And as it was written in three learned Languages, ſo it was expoſed to view in a publick Place; and at that time, when multitudes of Strangers, as well as Jews were at Jeruſalem: It was at the time of the Paſſover. So that all things concurred to ſpread and divulge the Innocency of Chriſt, vindicated in this Title.

In locum ſanctum ingredi alieniginis nefas eſt.

Thirdly, As it was a publick, ſo it was an honourable Title. Such was the nature of it, ſaith Bucer; that in the midſt of death Chriſt began to triumph by it. And by reaſon thereof the Croſs began to change its own nature, and inſtead of a Rack, or Engine of Torture, it became a Throne of Majeſty. Yea, it might be called now as the Church it ſelf is, the Pillar and Ground of Truth; for it held out much of the Goſpel, much of the Glory of Chriſt; as that Pillar doth, to which a Royal Proclamation is affixed.

Bucer. in Loc.

Fourthly, It was a vindicating Title: It clear'd up the Honour, Dignity, and Innocency of Chriſt, againſt all the falſe Imputations, Calumnies, and Blaſphemies, which were caſt upon him before, by the wicked Tongues, both of Jews and Gentiles.

They had called him a Deceiver, an Uſurper, a Blaſphemer, they rent their Cloaths in token of their deteſtation of his Blaſphemy; becauſe he made himſelf the Son of God, and King of Iſrael. But know in this they acknowledged him to be both Lord and Saviour. Not a mock King, as they had made him before. So that herein the honour of Chriſt was fully vindicated.

Fifthly, Moreover it was a predicting and preſaging Title. Evidently foreſhewing, the propagation of Chriſt's Kingdom; and the ſpreading of his Name and Glory, among all Kindreds, Nations, Tongues, and Languages. As Chriſt hath right to enter into all the Kingdoms of the Earth by his Goſpel, and ſet up the Throne in every Nation: So it was preſaged by this Title, that he ſhould do ſo.

Tribus linguis ſcribi voluit ut præſagium hoc eſſet, futuræ vocationis omnium non modo Hebræorum, ſed & Græcorum & Latinorum ad Chriſti regnum. Par.

And that both Hebrews, Greeks, and Latins, ſhould be called to the knowledge of him. Nor is it a wonder that this ſhould be predicted by wicked Pilate, when Caiaphas himſelf, a man every way as wicked as he, had Propheſied to the ſame purpoſe, Joh. 11. 51, 52. For being High Prieſt that year, he propheſied, that Jeſus ſhould die for that Nation, and not for that Nation only, but that alſo he ſhould gather together in one, the children of God, that were ſcattered abroad. Yea, many have propheſied in Chriſt's Name, who for all that ſhall never be owned by him, Matth. 7. 22.

Sixthly, And Laſtly, it was an immutable Title. The Jews endeavoured, but could not perſuade Pilate to alter it. To all their importunities he returns this reſolute anſwer, What I have written I have written; as if he ſhould ſay, urge me no more, I have written his Title, I cannot, I will not alter a Letter, a Point thereof. Surely the conſtancy of Pilate, at this time, can be attributed to nothing, but divine ſpecial Providence. Moſt wonderful, that he, who before was as unconſtant, as a Reed ſhaken by the wind, is now as fixed as a Pillar of Braſs.

And yet more wonderful that he ſhould write down that very particular in the Title of Chriſt, This is the King of the Jews, which was the very thing, that ſo ſcared him but a little before, and was the very conſideration that moved him to give Sentence. What was now become of the fear of Cæſar? that Pilate dares to be Chriſt's Herald, and publickly to proclaim him The King of the Jews. This was the Title.

Secondly, We ſhall next enquire what hand the divine providence had in this buſineſs.

And indeed, the Providence of God in this hour acted glorioſly, and wonderfully theſe five ways.

Firſt, In over-ruling the heart and hand of Pilate, in the draught and ſtile of it, and that contrary to his own inclination. I doubt not but Pilate himſelf was ignorant of, and far enough from deſigning that which the wiſdom of Providence aimed at, in this matter. He was a wicked man, he had no love to Chriſt. He had given Sentence of death againſt him. Yet this is he that proclaimed him to be, Jeſus, King of the Jews. It ſo over-ruled his Pen, that he could not write what was in his own heart and intention, but the quite contrary; even a fair and publick Teſtimony to the Kingly office of the Son of God, This is the King of the Jews.

Longe altius proſpexit Dei providentia, quæ Pilati ſtylum gubernavit. Calv.

Secondly, Herein the wiſdom of providence was glorioſly diſplayed, in applying a preſent, proper, publick remedy, to the reproaches and blaſphemies which Chriſt had then newly received in his name and honour. The ſuperſtitious Jews wound him, and heathen Pilate prepares a plaiſter to heal him. They reproach, he vindicates. They throw the dirt, he waſhes it off. O, the profound and inſcrutable wiſdom of Providence!

Thirdly, Moreover Providence eminently appear'd at this time, in keeping ſo timerous a Perſon, a man of ſo baſe a Spirit, that would not ſtick at any thing to pleaſe the People, from receding, or giving ground in the leaſt to their importunities. Is Pilate become a man of ſuch reſolution and conſtancy? Whence is this? But from the God of the Spirits of all fleſh. Who now flowed in ſo powerfully upon his Spirit, that he could not chuſe but write: and when he had written, had no more power to alter what he had written, than he had to refuſe to write it.

Fourthly, Herein alſo much of the wiſdom of Providence appear'd, in caſting the ignominy of the death of Chriſt upon thoſe very men who ought to bear it. Pilate was moved by divine inſtinct, at once to clear Chriſt, and accuſe them. For it is, as if he had ſaid, you have moved me to Crucifie your King, I have Crucified him, and now let the ignominy of his death reſt upon your heads, who have extorted this from me. He is righteous, the Crime is not his but yours.

Fifthly, And laſtly, the Providence of God wonderfully diſcover'd it ſelf, (as before was noted) in fixing this Title to the Croſs of Chriſt, when there was ſo great a confluence of all ſorts of People, to take notice of it. So that it could never have been more advantagiouſly publiſhed, than it was at this time. So that we may ſay, how wonderful are the works of God! His ways are in the Sea, his paths in the great deeps; his footſteps are not known. His Providence hath a proſpect beyond the underſtandings of all Creatures.

Inference 1. Hence it follows that the Providence of our God can, and often doth overrule the Counſels and Actions of the worſt of men to his own Glory.

It can ſerve it ſelf by them that oppoſe it, and bring about the glory and honour of Chriſt, by thoſe very men, and means, which are deſign'd to lay it in the duſt. Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee, Pſalm 76. 10. The Jews thought when they Crowned Chriſt with Thorns, bowed the knee, and mocked him, led him to Golgotha and crucified him; that now they had utterly deſpoiled him of all his Kingly Dignities: and yet even there, he is proclaimed a King. Thus the diſperſion of the Jews upon the death of Stephen, ſpread the Goſpel far and near, For they went every where preaching the Word, Acts 8. 4. Thus Paul's bonds for the Goſpel, fell out to the furtherance of the Goſpel, Phil. 1. 12. O, the depth of divine wiſdom to propagate, and eſtabliſh the intereſt of Jeſus Chriſt, by thoſe very means that ſeem to import its deſtruction: that extracts a Medicine out of Poiſon! How great a ſupport ſhould this be to the faith of God's People! When all things ſeem to run croſs to their hopes and happineſs! Let Iſrael therefore hope in the Lord, for with the Lord there is mercy, and with him is plenteous Redemption, Pſalm 130. 7. (i. e.) He is never at a loſs for means, to promote and ſerve his own ends.

Inference 2. Hence likewiſe it follows, That the greateſt ſervices performed to Chriſt accidentally, and undeſignedly; ſhall never be accepted nor rewarded of God. Pilate did Chriſt an eminent piece of ſervice. He did that for Chriſt that not one of his own Diſciples at that time durſt do; and yet this ſervice was not accepted of God, becauſe he did it not deſignedly for his glory, but from the meer over-rulings of Providence.

If there be firſt a willing mind, it is accepted, according to what a man hath, ſaith the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 8. 12. The eye of God is firſt and mainly upon the Will; if that be ſincere and right for God, ſmall things will be accepted; and if not, the greateſt ſhall be abhorred. So 1 Cor. 9. 17. If I do this thing, (i. e.) (Preach the Goſpel) willingly, I have a reward; but if againſt my will, a diſpenſation is committed to me, q. d. If I upon pure principles of Faith and Love, from my heart, deſigning the Glory of God, and delighting to promote it by my miniſtry, do chearfully and willingly apply my ſelf to the Preaching of the Goſpel, I ſhall have acceptance and reward with God: but if my work be a burden to me, and the ſervice of God eſteemed as a Bondage, why then Providence may uſe me for the diſpenſing of the Goſpel to others, but I my ſelf ſhall loſe both reward and comfort. As it doth not excuſe my ſin, that God can bring glory to himſelf out of it: ſo neither doth it juſtifie an action that God hath praiſe and honour accidentally by it. Paul knew that even the ſtrife & envy in which ſome Preached Chriſt, ſhould turn to his Salvation; and yet he was not at all beholding to them for promoting his Salvation that way. So Pilate here promotes the honour of Jeſus Chriſt to whom he had no Love, and whoſe glory he did not at all deſign in this thing; and therefore hath neither acceptance nor reward with God.

O, therefore whatever you do for Chriſt, do it heartily, deſignedly, for his glory. Of a ready and willing mind. With pure and ſincere aims at his glory. For this is that the Lord more reſpects, than the greateſt ſervices by accident.

Inference 3. Would not Pilate recede from what he had written on Chriſt's behalf. How ſhameful a thing is it for Chriſtians to retract what they have ſaid or done on Chriſt's behalf! When Pilate had aſſerted him to be King of the Jews, he maintains his aſſertion and all the importunity of Chriſt's enemies ſhall not move him an hairs breadth from it. What I have written, I have written, q. d. I have ſaid it, and I will not revoke it. Did Pilate ſay, What I have written, I have written? And ſhall not we ſay, What we have believed, we have believed? And what we have profeſſed, we have profeſſed. What we have engaged to Chriſt we have engaged. We will ſtand to what we have done for him; we will never recant our former ownings of, and appearances for Chriſt.

As God's Election, ſo your profeſſion muſt be irrevocable. O let him that is holy be holy ſtill. That Counſel given by a Reverend Divine in this caſe, is both ſafe and good. 'Be ſure (ſaith he) you ſtand on good ground, 'and then reſolve to ſtand your ground againſt 'all the world. Follow God, and fear not 'men. Art thou godly? repent not whatſoever thy Religion coſt thee. Let ſinners repent, but let not Saints repent. Let Saints 'repent of their faults, but not of their 'faith: Of their iniquities, but not of their 'righteouſneſs. Repent not of your righteouſneſs, leſt you afterward repent of your 'repentance. ——— Repent not of your 'Zeal, or your forwardneſs, or activity in 'the holy ways of the Lord. ——— Wiſh 'not your ſelves a ſtep farther back, or a cubit 'lower in your ſtature, in the Grace of God. 'Wiſh not any thing undone, concerning which 'God will ſay, well done.

In Gallen's time it was a proverbial expreſſion, when any one would ſhew the impoſſibility of a thing; You may as ſoon turn a Chriſtian from Chriſt as do it.

A true heart-choice of Chriſt is without reſerves, and what is without reſerves, will be without repentance. There is a ſtiffneſs and ſtoutneſs of ſpirit, which is our ſin. But this is our glory, in the matters of God, ſaid Luther, I aſſume this Title, cedo nulli, I yield to none: if ye be hot & cold, off and on; profeſs, and retract your profeſſion. He that condemned Chriſt with his lips, will condemn you by his example. Reſolute Pilate ſhall be your Judge.

Inference 4. Did Pilate affix ſuch an honourable vindicating Title to the Croſs? Then the Croſs of Chriſt is a dignified Croſs. Then the Croſs and Sufferings of Chriſt are attended with glory and honour. Remember when your hearts begin to ſtartle at the ſufferings and reproaches of Chriſt, there is an honourable Title upon the Croſs of Chriſt. And as it was upon his, ſo it will be upon your Croſs alſo, if ye ſuffer for Chriſt. Moſes ſaw it, which made him eſteem the very reproaches of Chriſt, above all the Treaſures of Egypt, Heb. 11. 26. How did the Martyrs glory in their ſuffering for Chriſt! calling their chains of Iron, chains of Gold, and their Manacles, Bracelets?

I remember it's ſtoried of Ludovicus Marſacus a Knight of France, that when he with divers other Chriſtians of an inferior rank and degree in the world, being condemned to die for Religion, and the Jaylor had bound them with chains, but did not bind him, being a more honourable perſon than the reſt: He was offended greatly by that omiſſion, and ſaid, why do not you honour me with a Chain for Chriſt alſo, and create me a Knight of that illuſtrious Order?

Cur me non quoque torq; donas, & illuſtris illius ordinis militem non creas? Thuan Hiſt.

To you (ſaith the Apoſtle) it's given in the behalf of Chriſt, not only to believe, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake, Phil. 1. 29. There is a twofold honour attending the Croſs of Chriſt: One in the very ſufferings themſelves; another, as the reward and fruit of them. To be called out to ſuffer for Chriſt, is a great honour. Yea, an honour peculiar to the Saints. The damned ſuffer from Chriſt, the wicked ſuffer for their ſins. The Angels glorifie Chriſt by their active, but not by their paſſive obedience. This is reſerved as a ſpecial honour for Saints.

And as there is a great deal of honour in being called forth to ſuffer on Chriſt's account; ſo Chriſt will confer ſpecial honour upon his ſuffering Saints, in the day of their reward, Matth. 10. 32. He that confeſſes me before men, him will I confeſs alſo before my Father which is in Heaven. O Sirs, one of theſe days the Lord will break out of Heaven, with a ſhout, accompanied with Myriads of Angels, and ten thouſands of his Saints, thoſe gliſtering Courtiers, tiers of Heaven. The Heavens and Earth ſhall flame and melt before him. And it ſhall be very tempeſtuous round about him; the graves ſhall open; the ſea and earth yield up their dead. You ſhall ſee him aſcending the awful throne of Judgment, and all fleſh gathered before his face; even multitudes, multitudes that no man can number. And then to be brought forth by Chriſt before that great aſſembly of Angels and Saints; and there to have an honourable mention and remembrance made of your labours, and ſufferings, your pains, patience, and ſelf-denial, of all your ſufferings, and loſſes for Chriſt; and to hear from his mouth, Well done good and faithful ſervant: O what honour is this! Yet this ſhall be done to the man, that now chuſes ſufferings for Chriſt, rather than ſin: that eſteems his reproaches greater riches, than the traſures of Ægypt.

I tell you, it's an honour the Angels have not. I make no doubt but they would be glad, (had they bodies of fleſh as we have) to lay their necks on the block for Chriſt. But this is the Saints peculiar priviledge. The Apoles went away from the council rejoycing that they were honoured to be diſhonoured for Chriſt: or as we tranſlate, counted worthy to ſuffer ſhame for him, Acts 5. verſe 41. Surely, if there be any ſtigmata laudis, marks of honour, they are ſuch as we receive for Chriſt's ſake. If there be any ſhame that hath glory in it, it is the reproach of Chriſt, and the ſhame you ſuffer for his Name.

Inference 3. Did Pilate ſo ſtiffly aſſert and defend the honour of Chriſt, what doubt can then be made of the ſucceſs of Chriſt's intereſt, and the proſperity of his cauſe; when the very enemies thereof are made to ſerve it?

Rather than Chriſt ſhall want honour, Pilate the man that condemned him, ſhall do him honour. And as it fared with his perſon, juſt ſo with his intereſt alſo. How often have the people of God received choice mercies, from the hands of their enemies? Rev. 12. 16. The earth helped the woman, (i. e.) wicked men did the Church ſervice. So that this may ſingularly relieve us againſt all our deſpondencies and fears of the miſcarriage of the intereſt of Chriſt.

That People can never be ruined, who thrive by their loſſes; conquer by being conquered; multiply by being diminiſhed. Whoſe worſt enemies are made to do that for them, which friends cannot or dare not do. See you a heathen Pilate proclaiming the honour and innocency of Chriſt; God will not want inſtruments to honour Chriſt by. If others cannot, his very enemies ſhall.

Inference 6. Did Pilate vindicate Chriſt in drawing up ſuch a Title to be affixed to his Croſs, then hence it follows, that God will ſooner or later, clear up the innocency and integrity of his people, who commit their cauſe to him. Chriſt's name was clouded with many reproaches. Wounded through and through by the blaſphemous tongues of his malicious enemies. He committed himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly, 1 Pet. 2. 23. and ſee how ſoon God vindicates him. That's ſweet and ſeaſonable counſel for us, when our Names are concluded with unjuſt cenſures, Pſalm 37. 5, 6. Commit thy way unto the Lord; truſt alſo in him, and he ſhall bring it to paſs. He ſhall bring forth thy righteouſneſs as the light, and thy Judgment as the noon-day. Joſeph was accuſed of incontinency; David of treaſon; Daniel of diſobedience; Elijah of troubling Iſrael; Jeremiah of revolting; Amos of preaching againſt the King; the Apoſtles of ſedition, rebellion and alteration of Laws; Chriſt himſelf of gluttony, ſorcery, blaſphemy, ſedition: But how did all theſe honourable Names wade out of their reproaches, as the Sun out of a Cloud! God clear'd up their honour for them even in this World. Slanders, ſaith one, are but as ſoap, which though it ſoils and daubs for the preſent, yet it helps to make the garment more clean and ſhining. When Hair is ſhaven, it comes the thicker, and with a new increaſe. So when the Razor of cenſure hath (ſaith one) made your heads bare, and brought on the baldneſs of reproach, be not diſcouraged, God hath a time to bring forth your righteouſneſs as the light, by an apparent conviction to dazle and diſcourage your adverſaries.

Mant. in Jam. p.a

The World was well changed, when Conſtantine kiſſed the hollow of Paphnutius Eye, which was ere while put out for Chriſt. Scorn and reproach is but a little cloud, that is ſoon blown over. But ſuppoſe ye ſhould not be vindicated in this World; but die under a Cloud upon your Names: Be ſure God will clear it up, and that to purpoſe in that great Day. Then ſhall the righteous (even in this reſpect) ſhine forth as the Sun, in the Kingdom of their Father. Then every detracting mouth ſhall be ſtopped, and no more cruel arrows of reproach ſhot at the white of your reputation.

Be patient therefore, my Brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. The Lord comes with ten thouſands of his Saints, to execute Judgment upon all; and to convince all that are ungodly, of all their ungodly deeds, which they have ungodlily committed. And of all their hard ſpeeches which ungodly Sinners have ſpoken againſt him, Jude 15. Then they ſhall retract their Cenſures, and alter their opinions of the Saints. If Chriſt will be our Compurgator, we need not fear who are our Accuſers. If your Names for his ſake be caſt out as evil, and ſpurned in the dirt; Chriſt will deliver it you again in that day whiter than the ſnow in Salmon.

Inference 7. Did Pilate give this Title to caſt the reproach of his death upon the Jews, and clear himſelf of it? How natural is it to Men to transfer the fault of their own Actions from themſelves to others? For when he writes this is the King of the Jews, he wholly charges them with the crime of crucifying their King: and it is as if he had ſaid, hereafter let the blame and fault of this action lie wholly upon your own heads, who have brought the guilt of his blood upon your ſelves and children.

I am clear, you have extorted it from me. O where ſhall we find a Spirit ſo ingenuous, to take home to it ſelf the ſhame of its own actions, and charge it ſelf freely with its own guilt? Indeed it's the property of renewed gracious Hearts to remember, confeſs, and freely bewail their own evils, to the glory of God: and that's a gracious Heart indeed, which in this caſe judgeth that the glory which by Confeſſion goeth to the name of his God, is not ſo much glory loſt to his own name, but it's the power of grace moulding our proud natures into another thing, that muſt bring them to this.

Serm. 28.

Opens the manner of Chriſt's death in reſpect of the ſolitarineſs thereof.

SERMON XXVIII.

ZECH. XIII. 7.

Awake, O ſword, againſt my ſhepherd, and againſt the man that is my fellow, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts; ſmite the ſhepherd, and the ſheep ſhall be ſcattered; and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones.

IN the former Sermons, we have opened the nature and kind of the Death Chriſt died; even the curſed death of the Croſs. Wherein, nevertheleſs his innocency was vindicated, by that honourable Title providentially affixed to his Croſs. Method now requires that we take into conſideration the manner in which he endured the Croſs, and that was ſolitarily, meekly, and inſtructively.

His ſolitude in ſuffering is plainly expreſſed in this Scripture now before us, it cannot be doubted, but the Prophet in this place ſpeaks of Chriſt, if you conſider, Matth. 26. 31. Where you ſhall find theſe words applied to Chriſt by his own accommodation of them. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, all ye ſhall be offended becauſe of me this night, for it is written, I will ſmite the Shepherd, and the ſheep ſhall be ſcattered. Beſides the Title here given [God's Fellow] is too big for any creature in Heaven or Earth beſide Chriſt.

In theſe words we have four things particularly to conſider. Firſt, The Commiſſion given to the Sword by the Lord of Hoſts. Secondly, The Perſon againſt whom it is Commiſſionated. Thirdly, The diſmal effect of that ſtroke. Fourthly, and laſtly, The gracious mitigation of it.

Firſt, The Commiſſion given to the Sword by the Lord of Hoſts, Awake, O Sword and ſmite, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. The Lord of Hoſts, at whoſe beck and command all the Creatures are. Who with a word of his Mouth can open all the Armories in the World, and command what weapons, and inſtruments of death he pleaſeth. Calls here for the Sword. Not the Rod, gently to chaſten; But the Sword to deſtroy. The Rod breaks no bones, but the Sword opens the door to death and deſtruction. The Strokes and thruſts of the Sword are mortal. And he bids it awake It ſignifies both to rouze up as one that awakes out of ſleep, and to rouſe or awake with triumph and rejoycing. So the ſame word is rendred, Job 31. 29. Yea, he commands it to awake and ſmite. And it is as if the Lord had ſaid, come forth of thy Scabbard oh Sword of Juſtice, thou haſt been hid there a long time, thou haſt as it were been aſleep in thy Scabbard, now awake and glitter, thou ſhalt Drink Royal Blood, ſuch as thou never ſhedſt before.

Secondly, The Perſon againſt whom it is commiſſionated, My Shepherd, and the man that is my fellow. This Shepherd can be no other than Chriſt, who is often in Scripture ſtiled a Shepherd, yea, the chief Shepherd, the Prince of Paſtors. Who redeemed, feeds, guides, and preſerves the flock of God's Elect, 1 Pet. 5. 4. John 10. 11. This is he whom he alſo ſtiles the Man his fellow. Or his neighbour, as ſome render it. And ſo Chriſt is in reſpect of his equality and unity with the Father both in eſſence and will. His next neighbour. His other ſelf. You have the ſenſe of it in Phil. 2. 6. He was in the form of God, and thought it no robbery to be equal with God.

Paſtorum vocat Chriſtum, ἀρχιποίμενα animarum noſtrarum. D. Pareus.

Againſt Chriſt his Fellow, his next neighbour, the delight of his Soul, the Sword here receives its Commiſſion.

Thirdly, You have here the diſmal conſequent of this deadly ſtroke upon the Shepherd. And that is the ſcattering of the Sheep. By the Sheep underſtand here that little flock the Diſciples which followed this Shepherd till he was ſmitten, (i. e.) apprehended by his Enemies, and then they were ſcattered, (i. e.) diſperſed, they all forſook him and fled. And ſo Chriſt was left alone amidſt his Enemies. Not one durſt make a ſtand for him, or own him in that hour of his danger.

Fourthly, And laſtly, here is a gracious mitigation of this ſad diſperſion, I will turn my hand upon the little ones. By little ones he means the ſame that before he called Sheep;

but the expreſſion is deſignedly varied to ſhew their feebleneſs and weakneſs, which appeared in their relapſe from Chriſt. And by turning his hand upon them, underſtand God's gracious reduction and gathering of them again after their ſad diſperſion, ſo that they ſhall not be loſt, though ſcattered for the preſent. For after the Lord was riſen, he went before them into Galilee, as he promiſed, Matth. 26. 31. And gather'd them again by a gracious hand, ſo that not one of them was loſt but the Son of Perdition.

The words thus opened I ſhall obſerve ſuitably to the Method I have propoſed.

Doct. That Chriſt's deareſt Friends forſook and left him alone, in the time of his greateſt Diſtreſs and Danger.

This Doctrine containing only matter of Fact, and that alſo ſo plainly deliver'd by the Pens of the ſeveral faithful Evangeliſts. I need ſpend no longer time in the Proof of it, than to refer you to the ſeveral Teſtimonies they have given to it. But I ſhall rather chuſe to fit and prepare it for Uſe, by explaining theſe four Queſtions.

Firſt, Who were the Sheep that were ſcattered from their Shepherd, and left him alone?

Secondly, What Evil was there in this their ſcattering?

Thirdly, What were the Grounds and Cauſes of it?

Fourthly, And laſtly, what was the Iſſue and Event of it?

Firſt, Who were theſe Sheep, that were diſperſed and ſcattered from their Shepherd when he was ſmitten. It's evident they were thoſe precious elect Souls that he had gathered to himſelf, who had long followed him, and dearly loved him, and were dearly beloved of him. They were Perſons that had left all and followed him, and till that time faithfully continued with him in his Temptations, Luke 22. 28. And were all reſolved ſo to do, though they ſhould die with him, Mat. 26. 35. Theſe were the Perſons.

Secondly, But were they as good as their word, did they indeed ſtick faithfully to him? No, they all forſook him and fled. Theſe Sheep were ſcattered. This was not indeed a total and final Apoſtacy, that's the fall proper to the Hypocrite, the temporary Believer, who like a Comet expires when that earthly Matter is ſpent that maintain'd the blaze for a time.

Theſe were Stars fixed in their Orb, though clouded and overcaſt for a time. This was but a Miſt or Fog which overſpreads the Earth in the morning till the Sun be riſen, and then it clears up and proves a fair day. But though it was not a total and final Apoſtacy; yet it was a very ſinful and ſad relapſe from Jeſus Chriſt, as will appear by conſidering the following Aggravations and Circumſtances of it. For,

Firſt, This relapſe of theirs was againſt the very Articles of Agreement which they had ſealed to Chriſt at their firſt admiſſion into his Service, he had told them in the beginning what they muſt reſolve upon, Luke 14. 26, 27. If any man come to me, and hate not his Father, and Mother, and Wife, and Children, and Brethren, and Siſters, yea, and his own life alſo, he cannot be my Diſciple. And whoſoever doth not bear his Croſs and come after me, cannot be my Diſciple. Accordingly, they ſubmitted to theſe terms, and told him, they had left all and followed him, Mark 10. 28. Againſt this Engagement made to Chriſt they now ſin. Here was unfaithfulneſs.

Secondly, As it was againſt the very Terms of their Admiſſion, ſo it was againſt the very Principles of Grace implanted by Chriſt in their Hearts. They were holy ſanctified Perſons in whom dwelt the love and fear of God. By theſe they were ſtrongly inclined to adhere to Chriſt in the time of his Sufferings, as appears by thoſe honeſt reſolves they had made in the caſe. Their Grace ſtrongly inclined them to their Duty, their Corruptions ſway'd them the contrary way. Grace bid them ſtand, Corruption bid them fly. Grace told them it was their Duty to ſhare in the Sufferings as well as in the Glory of Chriſt. Corruption repreſented theſe Sufferings as intolerable, and bid them ſhift for themſelves whilſt they might. So that here muſt needs be a force and violence offer'd to their Light, and the loving Conſtraints thereof; which is no ſmall Evil.

For though I grant it was a ſudden ſurprizing Temptation, yet it cannot be imagined that this Fact was wholly indeliberate, nor that for ſo long time they were without any Debates or Reaſonings about their Duty.

Thirdly, As it was againſt their own Principles, ſo it was much againſt the Honour of their Lord and Maſter. By this their ſinful flight they expoſed the Lord Jeſus to the contempt and ſcorn of his Enemies. This ſome conceive is imported in that Queſtion which the High Prieſt asked him, John 18. 19. The High Prieſt then asked Jeſus of his Diſciples, and of his Doctrine. He asked him of his Diſciples, how many he had, and what was become of them now? And what was the reaſon they forſook their Maſter, and left him to ſhift for himſelf when Danger appeared? But to thoſe Queſtions Chriſt made no Reply. He would not accuſe them to their Enemies, though they had deſerted him. But, doubtleſs, it did not a little reflect upon Chriſt, that there was not one of all his Friends that durſt own their Relation to him, in a time of Danger. Lord help me to confess thee at all times

Fourthly, As it was againſt Chriſt's Honour, ſo it was againſt their own ſolemn Promiſe made to him before his apprehenſion, to live and die with him. They had paſt their Word, and given their Promiſe that they would not flinch from him, Matth. 26. 35. Peter ſaid to him, though I ſhould die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewiſe alſo ſaid all the Diſciples. This made it a perfidious Relapſe. Here they brake Promiſe with Chriſt, who never did ſo with them. He might have told them when he met them afterwards in Galilee, as the Roman Soldier told his General when he refuſed his Petition after the War was ended, I did not ſerve you ſo at the Battle of Acteum.

Fifthly, As it was againſt their ſolemn Promiſe to Chriſt, ſo it was againſt Chriſt's heart-melting Expoſtulations with them; which ſhould have aboad upon their Hearts while they lived. For when others that followed him went back, and walked no more with him, Jeſus ſaid to theſe very Men that now forſook him at laſt, Will ye alſo go away? There is an Emphaſis in [Ye] q. d. What, Ye that from Eternity were given to me! Ye whom I have called, loved and honoured above others, for whoſe ſakes I am ready and reſolved to die. Will ye alſo forſake me? John 6. 67. Whatever others do, I expect other things from you.

Sixthly, As it was againſt Chriſt's Heart-melting expoſtulations with them, ſo it was againſt a late direful example preſented to them in the fall of Judas. In him as in a Glaſs they might ſee how fearful a thing it is to apoſtatize from Chriſt. They had heard Chriſt's dreadful threats againſt him. They were preſent when he call'd him the Son of Perdition, John 17. 11. They had heard Chriſt to ſay of him, Good had it been if he had never been born. An expreſſion able to ſcare the deadeſt Heart. They ſaw he had left Chriſt the Evening before. And that very day in which they fled, he hang'd himſelf. And yet they fly. For all this they forſake Chriſt.

Seventhly, As it was againſt the dreadful warning given them in the fall of Judas, ſo it was againſt the Law of Love, which ſhould have knit them cloſer to Chriſt and one another.

If to avoid the preſent ſhock of Perſecution they had fled, yet ſurely they ſhould have kept together praying, watching, encouraging, and ſtrengthning one another. This had made it a leſſer evil: but as they all forſook Chriſt, ſo they forſook one another alſo; For it's ſaid, John 16. 32. They ſhall go every man to his own, and leave Chriſt alone, (i. e.) ſaith Beza, every man to his own houſe, and to his own buſineſs. They forſook each other, as well as Chriſt. O what an hour of temptation was this!

Eightly, And laſtly, this their departure from Chriſt was accompanied with ſome offence at Chriſt. For ſo he tells them, Mat. 26. 31. All ye ſhall be offended, becauſe of me this Night. The word is σκανδαλισθήσεσθε, you ſhall be ſcandalized, at me or in me. Some think the ſcandal they took at Chriſt was this, that when they ſaw he was fallen into his enemies hands, and could no longer defend himſelf; they then began to queſtion whether he were the Chriſt or no, ſince he could not defend himſelf from his enemies. Others more rightly underſtand it of their ſhameful flight from Chriſt, ſeeing it was not now ſafe to abide longer with him. That ſeeing he gave himſelf into their hands, they thought it adviſable to provide as well as they could for themſelves, and ſome where or other to take refuge from the preſent ſtorm, which had overtaken him. This was the nature and quality of the fact. We enquire.

Cogitant vel eum non eſſe Chriſtum, quem hactenus eſſe crediderant; cum ſe defendere ab hoſtibus non poſſit, vel non eſſe conſultum ejus cauſa, mortis periculum adire. Par.

Thirdly, Into the grounds and reaſons of it. Which were three.

Firſt, God's ſuſpending wonted Influences and Aids of Grace from them. They were not wont to do ſo. They never did ſo afterwards. They would not have done ſo now, had there been Influences of Power, Zeal, and Love from Heaven upon them. But how then ſhould Chriſt have born the Heat and Burden of the Day? How ſhould he tread the Wine-Preſs alone? How ſhould his Sorrows have been extream, unmixed and ſuccourleſs (as it behoved them to be) if they had ſtuck faithfully to him in his Troubles? No, no, it muſt not be; Chriſt muſt not have the leaſt Relief or Comfort from any Creature; and therefore, that he might be left alone, to grapple hand to hand with the Wrath of God, and of Men; the Lord for a time with-holds his encouraging, ſtrengthening Influences from them; and then, like Sampſon, when he had loſt his Locks, they were weak as other Men.

Be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, ſaith the Apoſtle, Eph. 6. 10. If that be with-held, our Reſolutions and Purpoſes melt away before a Temptation, as Snow before the Sun.

Secondly, As God permitted it, and with-held uſual Aid from them; ſo the Efficacy of that Temptation was great, yea, much greater than ordinary. As they were weaker than they were uſed to be, ſo the Temptation was ſtronger than any they had yet met withal. It's call'd, Luke 22. 53. Their hour, and the power of darkneſs. A ſifting winnowing hour, verſe 46. O it was a black and cloudy day. Never had the Diſciples met with ſuch a Whirlwind, ſuch a furious Storm before. The Devil deſired but to have the winnowing of them in that day, and ſo would have ſifted and winnowed them, that their Faith had utterly failed, had not Chriſt ſecured it by his Prayer for them. So that it was an extraordinary Tryal that was upon them.

Thirdly, and Laſtly, That which concurred to their ſhameful Relapſe, as a ſpecial Cauſe of it, was the remaining Corruptions that were in their Hearts yet unmortified. Their Knowledge was but little. And their Faith not much. Upon the account of their Weakneſs in Grace, they were called little Ones in the Text. And as their Graces were weak, ſo their Corruptions were ſtrong. Their Unbelief and carnal Fears grew powerfully upon them.

Do not cenſure them, Reader, in thy Thoughts, nor deſpiſe them for this their Weakneſs. Neither ſay in thy Heart, Had I been there as they were, I would never have done as they did. They thought as little of doing what they did, as you or any of the Saints do; and as much did their Souls deteſt and abhor it: But here thou may'ſt ſee whither a Soul that fears God may be carried, if his Corruptions be irritated by ſtrong Temptations, and God with-holds uſual Influences.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, Let us view the Iſſue of this ſad Apoſtacy of theirs. And you ſhall find it ended far better than it began. Though theſe Sheep were ſcattered for a time, yet the Lord made good his Promiſe, in turning his Hand upon theſe little Ones to gather them. The Morning was over-caſt, but the Evening was clear.

Peter repents of his perfidious denial of Chriſt, and never denied him more. All the reſt likewiſe returned to Chriſt, and never forſook him any more. He that was afraid at the Voice of a Damſel, afterwards feared not the Frowns of the Mighty. And they that durſt not own Chriſt now, afterward confeſſed him openly before Councils, and rejoyced that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for his ſake, Acts 5. 41. They that were now as timerous as Hares, ſtarted at every ſound, afterwards became as bold as Lyons, and feared not any danger, but ſealed their Confeſſion of Chriſt with their Blood. For though at this time they forſook him, it was not voluntarily, but by ſuprizal. Though they forſook him, they ſtill loved him; though they fled from him, there ſtill remain'd a gracious Principle in them; the Root of the Matter was ſtill in them, which recovered them again.

To conclude: Though they forſook Chriſt, yet Chriſt never forſook them; he loved them ſtill: Go tell the Diſciples, and tell Peter that he goeth before into Galilee, Mark 16. 7. q. d. let them not think that I ſo remember their Unkindneſs, as to own them no more: No, I love them ſtill.

The uſe of this is contained in the following Inferences.

Inference 1. Did the Diſciples forſake Chriſt though they had ſuch ſtrong Perſuaſions and Reſolutions never to do it? then we ſee, That ſelf-confidence is a Sin too incident to the beſt of Men. They little thought their Hearts would have proved ſo baſe and deceitful, as they found them to be when they were tried. Tho' all Men forſake thee (ſaith Peter) yet will not I. Good Man, he reſolved honeſtly, but he knew not what a Feather he ſhould be in the Wind of Temptation, if God once left him to his own Fears.

Little reaſon have the beſt of Saints to depend upon their inherent Grace, let their ſtock be as large as it will. The Angels left to themſelves, quickly left their own Habitations, Jude 6. Upon which one well obſerves, that the beſt of created Perfections are of themſelves defectible. Every Excellency without the Prop of Divine Preſervation, is but a weight which tends to a fall. The Angels in their Innocency were but frail, without God's Suſtentation; even Grace it ſelf is but a Creature, and therefore purely dependent. 'Tis not from its Being and Nature, but from the aſſiſtance of ſomething without it, that it's kept from annihilation. What becomes of the Stream, if the Fountain ſupply it not? What continuance hath the reflection in the Glaſs, if the Man that looks into it turn away his Face? The conſtant Supplies of the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, are the Food, and Fewel of all our Graces. The beſt Men, will ſhew themſelves but Men, if God leave them. He who hath ſet them up, muſt alſo keep them. It's ſafer to be humble with one Talent, than proud with ten. Yea, better to be a humble Worm, than a proud Angel. Adam had more advantage to maintain his Station than any of you. For tho' he were left to the liberty of his own mutable and ſelf-determining Will, yet he was created upright, and had no inherent Corruption to endanger him, yet fell.

Mr. Jenkin, in Loc.

And ſhall we be ſelf-confident after ſuch Inſtances of human Frailty! Alas, Chriſtian! What Match art thou for Principalities and Powers, and ſpiritual Wickedneſs! Be not high minded, but fear. When you have conſider'd well the Example of Noah, Lot, David, and Hezekiah, Men famous and renowned in their Generations, who all fell by Temptations; yea, and that when one would think they had never been better provided to cope with them. Lot fell after, yea preſently after the Lord had thruſt him out of Sodom, and his Eyes had ſeen the direful Puniſhment of Sin. Hell as it were rained upon them out of Heaven. Noah in like manner, immediately after God's wonderful, and aſtoniſhing Preſervation of him in the Ark; when he ſaw a World of Men and Women periſhing in the Floods, for their Sins. David after the Lord had ſettled the Kingdom on him, which for Sin he rent from Saul, and given him reſt in his Houſe. Hezekiah was but juſt up from a great ſickneſs, wherein the Lord wrought a wonderful Salvation for him. Did ſuch Men, and at ſuch times when one would think no Temptations ſhould have prevailed, fall; and that ſo foully? Then let him that thinks he ſtandeth take heed leſt he fall. O be not high minded, but fear.

Gen. 9. 21. 22.
Gen. 19. 36.
2 Sam. 11. 2.
2 Kings 20. 12.

Inference 2. Did Chriſt ſtand his Ground and go through with his ſuffering Work, when all that had follow'd him forſook him? Then a reſolved adherence to God and Duty, though left alone, without Company or Encouragement, is Chriſt-like, and truly excellent. You ſhall not want better Company than that which hath forſaken you in the way of God. Elijah complains, 1 Kings 19. 10. They have forſaken thy Covenant, thrown down thine Altars, and ſlain thy Prophets with the Sword; and I, even I only am left, and they ſeek my Life, to take it away. And yet all this did not damp, or diſcourage him in following the Lord; for ſtill he was very jealous for the Lord God of Hoſts.

Paul complains, 2 Tim. 4. 16. At my firſt anſwer no Man ſtood by me, all Men forſook me: Nevertheleſs the Lord ſtood with me. And as the Lord ſtood by him, ſo he ſtood by his God alone, without any Aids or Support from Men. How great an Argument of Integrity is this! He that profeſſes Chriſt for Company, will alſo leave him for Company. But to be faithful to God, when forſaken of Men; to be a Lot in Sodom, a Noah in a corrupted Generation; oh how excellent is it! 'Tis ſweet to travel over this Earth to Heaven, in the Company of the Saints that are bound thither with us, if we can; but if we can meet no Company, we muſt not be diſcouraged to go on. It's not unlike but before you have gone many Steps farther you may have cauſe to ſay as one did once, Never leſs alone, than when alone. May I experience this Inference 3. Did the Diſciples thus forſake Chriſt, and yet were all recovered at laſt? Then though Believers are not priviledged from backſlidings, yet they are ſecured from final Apoſtacy and Ruin. The new Creature may be ſick, it cannot die. Saints may fall, but they ſhall riſe again, Mica. 7. 8. The higheſt Flood of natural Zeal and Reſolution may ebb, and be wholly dried up; but ſaving Grace is a Well of Water, ſtill ſpringing up into everlaſting Life, John 4. 14. God's unchangeable Election, the Frame and Conſtitution of the New Covenant, the meritorious and prevalent Interceſſion of Jeſus Chriſt does give the Believer abundant ſecurity againſt the danger of a total, final Apoſtacy. My Father which gave them me (ſaith Chriſt) is greater than all: And none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand, John 10. 29.

And again, The Foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this Seal; the Lord knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Every Perſon committed to Chriſt by the Father, ſhall be brought by him to the Father, and not one wanting.

God hath alſo ſo framed and ordered the New Covenant, that none of thoſe Souls who are within the bleſſed Claſp and Bond of it can poſſibly be loſt. It's ſettled upon immutable Things: And we know all Things are as their Foundations be, Heb. 6. 18, 19. Among the many glorious Promiſes contained in the Bundle of Promiſes, this is one, I will make an everlaſting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good: But I will put my Fear in their Hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me.

And as the fear of God in our Hearts pleads in us againſt Sin, ſo our potent Interceſſor in the Heavens pleads for us with the Father; and by reaſon thereof we cannot finally miſcarry, Rom. 8. 34, 35. Upon theſe Grounds we may (as the Apoſtle in the Place laſt cited doth) triumph in that full ſecurity which God hath given us; and ſay, What ſhall ſeparate us from the Love of God? Underſtand it either of God's to us, as Calvin, Beza, and Martyr do; or of our Love to God, as Ambroſe and Auguſtine do: It's true in both ſenſes, and a moſt comfortable Truth.

Inference 4. Did the Sheep fly when the Shepherd was ſmitten; ſuch Men, and ſo many forſake Chriſt in the Tryal? Then learn how ſad a thing it is for the beſt of Men to be left to their own carnal Fears in a day of Temptation: This was it that made thoſe good Men ſhrink away ſo ſhamefully from Chriſt in that Tryal: The fear of Man brings a Snare, Prov. 29. 25. In that Snare theſe good Souls were taken, and for a time held faſt.

Oh what work will this unruly Paſſion make, if the fear of God do not over-rule it! Is it not a ſhame to a Chriſtian, a Man of Faith, to ſee himſelf out-done by an Heathen? Shall natural Conſcience and Courage make them ſtand, and keep their Places in times of danger; when we ſhamefully turn our Backs upon Duty, becauſe we ſee Duty and Danger together?

When the Emperor Veſpaſian had commanded Eluidius Priſcus not to come to the Senate; or if he did, to ſpeak nothing but what he would have him? The Senator return'd this brave and noble anſwer, 'That as he was a 'Senator, it was fit he ſhould be at the Senate; and if being there, he were required 'to give his Advice, he would ſpeak freely, 'that which his Conſcience commanded him. The Emperor threatning, that then he ſhould die; he returned thus, 'Did I ever tell you 'that I was Immortal? Do you what 'you will, and I will do what I ought. It 'is in your Power to put me to death unjuſtly, and in me to die conſtantly. O think, what Miſchiefs your Fear may do your ſelves, and the diſcovery of them to others. O learn to truſt God with your Lives, Liberties, and Comforts in the way of your Duty; and at what time you are afraid truſt in him: And do not magnifie poor Duſt and Aſhes, as to be ſcared by their Threats from your God and Duty. The politick Deſign of Satan herein is to affright you out of your Coverts where you are ſafe, into the Net. I will enlarge this no farther; I have elſewhere laid down fourteen Rules for the Cure of this, in what of mine is publick.

Char. of Wiſdom, p. 358.

A Saint indeed, p. 72. &c.

Inference 5. Learn hence, how much a Man may differ from himſelf, according as the Lord is with him, or withdrawn from him. Chriſtians do not only always differ from other Men, but ſometimes from themſelves alſo. Yea, ſo great is the difference betwixt himſelf and himſelf, as if he were not the ſame Man. And where is he that doth not ſo experience it? Sometimes bold and couragious, deſpiſing Dangers, bearing down all Diſcouragements in the ſtrength of Zeal and Love to God: At another time faint, feeble and diſcouraged at every petty Thing. Whence is this but from the different Adminiſtrations of the Spirit, who ſometimes gives forth more, and ſometimes leſs of his gracious Influence. Theſe very Men that flinch'd now, when the Spirit was more abundantly ſhed forth upon them, could boldly own Chriſt before the Council, and deſpiſed all Dangers for his ſake.

This is true: where indeed.

'A little Dog, if his Maſter be by, and encourage him, will venture upon a greater Beaſt than himſelf. Peter ſtood at the Door without, when the other Diſciple, or one of the other Diſciples, (as the Syriack turns it, and Grotius approves it as the beſt) that is, one of the private Diſciples that lived in Jeruſalem, went in ſo boldly, John 18. 16, 17. We are ſtrong or weak, according to the Degrees of aſſiſting Grace. So that as you cannot take the juſt meaſure of a Chriſtian by one act, ſo neither muſt they judge of themſelves, by what they ſometimes feel in themſelves.

Unus ex Diſcipulis aliis, non aliquem ex duodecim. Sed alium quendam Hieroſolymitanum non æquè manifeſtum fautorem Jeſu. Grotius.

But when their Spirits are low, and their Hearts diſcouraged, they ſhould rather ſay to their Souls, Hope in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him: It's low with me now, but it will be better.

Inference 6. Was the Sword drawn againſt the Shepherd, and he left alone to receive the mortal Strokes of it? How ſhould all adore both the Juſtice, and Mercy of God, ſo illuſtriouſly diſplayed herein! Here is the Triumph of Divine Juſtice, and the higheſt Triumph that ever it had, to ſingle forth the chief Shepherd, the Man that is God's Fellow, and ſheath its Sword in its Breaſt for Satisfaction. No wonder its drawn and brandiſh'd with ſuch a Triumph; awake rejoicingly, O Sword, againſt my Shepherd, &c. For in this Blood ſhed by it, it hath more glory than if the Blood of all the Men and Women in the World had been ſhed.

And no leſs is the Mercy and Goodneſs of God, herein ſignalized, in giving the Sword a Commiſſion againſt the Man, his Fellow, rather than againſt us. Why had he not rather ſaid, Awake, O Sword, againſt the Men that are my Enemies; ſhed the Blood of them that have ſinned againſt me, than ſmite the Shepherd, and only ſcatter the Sheep. Bleſſed be God the dreadful Sword was not drawn and brandiſh'd againſt our Souls; that God did not ſet it to our Breaſts; that he had not made it fat with our Fleſh, and bathed it in our Blood: That his Fellow was ſmitten that his Enemies might be ſpared. O what manner of Love was this! Bleſſed be God therefore for Jeſus Chriſt, who received the fatal Stroke himſelf; and hath now ſo ſheathed that Sword in its Scabbard, that it ſhall never be drawn any more againſt any that believe in him.

Inference 7. Were the Sheep ſcattered, when the Shepherd was ſmitten? Learn hence that the beſt of Men know not their own Strength, 'till they come to the trial. Little did theſe holy Men imagine ſuch a cowardly Spirit had been in them, 'till Temptation put it to the Proof. Let this therefore be a Caution for ever to the People of God. You reſolve never to forſake Chriſt, you do well; but ſo did theſe, and yet were ſcattered from him. You can never take a juſt Meaſure of your own Strength, 'till Temptation have tried it. 'Tis ſaid, Deut. 18. 2, 3. That God led the People ſo many Years in the Wilderneſs, to prove them; and to know (i. e.) (to make them know) what was in their Hearts. Little did they think ſuch Unbelief, Murmurings, Diſcontents, and a Spirit bent to Backſlidings, had been in them; 'till their Straights in the Wilderneſs gave them the ſad Experience of theſe Things.

Inference 8. Did the dreadful Sword of Divine Juſtice ſmite the Shepherd, God's own Fellow; and at the ſame time the Flock, from whom all his outward Comforts aroſe, were ſcattered from him? Then learn, that the holieſt of Men have no reaſon, either to repine, or deſpond; though God at once ſhould ſtrip them of all their outward and inward Comforts together. He that did this by the Man his Fellow, may much rather do it by the Man his Friend. Smite my Shepherd; there's all Comfort gone from the inward Man. Scatter the Sheep; there's all Comfort gone from the outward Man. What Refreſhments had Chriſt in this World, but ſuch as came immediately from his Father, or thoſe holy Ones now ſcattered from him? In one Day he loſeth both heavenly and earthly Comforts. Now as God dealt by Chriſt, he may at one time or other deal with his People. You have your Comforts from Heaven; ſo had Chriſt, in a fuller meaſure than ever you had, or can have. He had Comforts from his little Flock; you have your Comforts from the Society of the Saints, the Ordinances of God, comfortable Relations, &c. Yet none of theſe are ſo firmly ſettled upon you, but you may be left deſtitute of them all in one day. God did take all Comfort from Chriſt, both outward, and inward; and are you greater than he? God ſometimes takes outward, and leaves inward Comfort, ſometimes he takes inward, and leaves outward Comfort: But time may come when God may ſtrip you of both.

This was the caſe of Job, a Favourite of God, who was bleſſed with outward and inward Comforts. Yet a time came when God ſtrip'd him of all, and made him poor to a Proverb, as to all outward Comfort; and the Venom of his Arrows drank up his Spirit, and the inward Comforts thereof.

Should the Lord deal thus with any of you, how ſeaſonable and relieving will the following Conſiderations be?

Firſt, Though the Lord deal thus with you, yet this is no new thing; he hath dealt ſo with others, yea with Jeſus Chriſt that was his Fellow. If theſe things were done in the green Tree; in him that never deſerved it for any Sin of his own; how little reaſon have we to complain? Nay,

Secondly, Therefore did this befal Jeſus Chriſt before you, that the like Condition might be ſanctified to you, when you ſhall be brought into it. For therefore did Jeſus Chriſt paſs thro' ſuch Varieties of Conditions, on purpoſe that he might take away the Curſe, and leave a Bleſſing in thoſe Conditions, againſt the time that you ſhould come into them. Moreover,

Thirdly, Though inward Comforts and outward Comforts were both removed from Chriſt in one day, yet he wanted not Support in the abſence of both. How relieving a Conſideration is this! John 16. 32. Behold (ſaith he) the hour cometh, yea is now come, that ye ſhall be ſcattered every man to his own, and ſhall leave me alone; and yet I am not alone, becauſe the Father is with me. With me by way of Support, when not by way of Comfort. Thy God (Chriſtian) can in like manner ſupport thee, when all ſenſible Comforts ſhrink away together from thy Soul and Body in one day.

Laſtly, It deſerves a Remark, that this comfortleſs forſaken Condition of Chriſt, immediately preceeded the day of his greateſt Glory and Comfort. Naturaliſts obſerve, the greateſt Darkneſs is a little before the dawning of the Morning. 'Twas ſo with Chriſt, it may be ſo with Thee. It was but a little while and he had better Company than theirs that forſook him. Act therefore your Faith upon this, that the moſt glorious Light uſually follows the thickeſt Darkneſs. The louder your Groans are now, the louder your Triumphs hereafter will be. The Horror of your preſent, will but add to the Luſtre of your future State.

SERMON XXIX.

Serm. 29. Opens the manner of Chriſt's death, in reſpect of the Patience thereof

ISAI. LIII. 7.

He was oppreſſed, and he was afflicted; yet he opened not his mouth. He is brought as a Lamb to the ſlaughter, and as a Sheep before her Shearers is dumb; ſo he opened not his mouth.

HOW our Lord Jeſus Chriſt carried on the Work of our Redemption in his humbled State, both in his Incarnation, Life and Death, hath in part been diſcovered in the former Sermons. I have ſhewed you the Kind or Nature of that Death he died; and am now ingaged by the Method propoſed, to open the manner of his Death. The Solitarineſs or Lonelineſs of Chriſt in his Sufferings, was the Subject of the laſt Sermon. The Patience and Meekneſs of Chriſt in his Sufferings comes in order to be opened in this.

This Chapter treats wholly of the Sufferings of Chriſt, and the bleſſed Fruits thereof. Hornebeck tells us of a learned Jew that ingenuouſly confeſſed this very Chapter converted him to the Chriſtian Faith. And ſuch delight he had in it, that he read it more than a thouſand times over. Such is the clearneſs of this Prophecy, that he who pen'd it, is deſervedly ſtiled the Evangelical Prophet. I cannot allow time to analize the Chapter; but my Work lying in the ſeventh Verſe, I ſhall ſpeak to theſe two Branches or Parts of it, viz. The grievous Sufferings of Chriſt, and the glorious Ornament he put upon them.

Ingenuè profiteor illud ipſum caput ad fidem Chriſtianam me adduxiſſe, nam plus millies illud caput perlegi. Hornbeck contra Jud. lib. 6. c. 1. p. 408.

Firſt, Chriſt's grievous Sufferings; he was afflicted, and he was oppreſſed, brought to the Slaughter, and ſhorn as a Sheep, (i. e.) he loſt both Fleece and Blood. Life and the Comforts of Life. He was oppreſſed; the word ſignifies both to anſwer and oppreſs, humble or depreſs. The other word rendred afflicted, ſignifies to act and afflict, and ſo implies Chriſt to ſtand before God, as a Surety before the Creditor; who exacts the utmoſt Satisfaction from him, by cauſing him to ſuffer according to the utmoſt Rigor and Severity of the Law. It did not ſuffice that he was ſhorn as a Sheep, (i. e.) that he was ſtrip'd and depriv'd of his Riches, Ornaments, and Comforts; but his Blood and Life muſt go for it alſo. He is brought to the Slaughter. Theſe were his grievous Sufferings.

ענה Reſpondit. Humanavit. Demiſit. Depreſſit.

נגשׂ Exegit. Afflixit. Rect.

Secondly, Here is the glorious Ornament he put upon thoſe grievous Sufferings, even the Ornament of a meek and patient Spirit. He opened not his Mouth. But went as a Sheep to be ſhorn, or a Lamb to the Slaughter. The Lamb goes as quiet to the Slaughter-houſe, as to the Fold. By this lively and lovely ſimilitude, the Patience of Chriſt is here expreſſed to us. Yet Chriſt's Dumbneſs and Silence is not to be underſtood Simply, and univerſally; as though he ſpake nothing at all when he ſuffer'd; for he utter'd many excellent and weighty Words upon the Croſs, as you ſhall hear in the following Diſcourſes; but it muſt be underſtood reſpectively, (i. e.) he never opened his Mouth repiningly, paſſionately, or revengefully under his greateſt Tortures and higheſt Provocations. Whence the note is,

Ut patientiam & manſuetudinem Chriſti melius commendat tanquam inſigne ipſius ornamentum comparat eum agno & ovi. Marl. in Loc.

Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt ſupported the Burden of his Sufferings, with admirable Patience, and meekneſs of Spirit.

It is a true Obſervation, that Meekneſs inviteth Injury, but always to its own coſt. And it was evidently verified in the Sufferings of Chriſt. Chriſt's Meekneſs triumphed over the Affronts and Injuries of his Enemies, much more than they triumphed over him. Patience never had a more glorious triumph, than it had upon the Croſs.

The Meekneſs and Patience of his Spirit amidſt Injuries and Provocations, is excellently ſet forth in 1 Pet. 2. 22, 23. Who did no ſin, neither was guile found in his mouth: Who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he ſuffered he threatned not, but committed himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly.

In this Point we have theſe three things to open Doctrinally.

1. The Burden of Sufferings, and Provocations that Jeſus Chriſt was oppreſſed with.

2. The Meekneſs and admirable Patience with which he ſupported that Burden.

3. The Cauſes and Grounds of that perfect Patience which he then exerciſed.

Firſt, The Burden of Suffering and Provocations which Chriſt ſupported, was very great. For on him met all ſorts and kinds of Trouble at once, and thoſe in their higheſt degrees and fulleſt ſtrength. Troubles in his Soul, and theſe were the Soul of his Troubles. His Soul was laden with ſpiritual Horrors and Troubles, as deep as it could ſwim, Mark 14. 33. He began to be ſore amazed and very heavy. The Wrath of an infinite dreadful God beat him down to the Duſt. His Body full of Pain and exquiſite Tortures in every Part. Not a Member or Senſe but was the Seat and Subject of Torment.

His Name and Honour ſuffered the vileſt Indignities, Blaſphemies, and horrid Reproaches that the malignity of Satan, and wicked Men could belch out againſt it. He was call'd a Blaſphemer, Seditious, one that had a Devil, a Glutton, a Wine-bibber, a Friend of Publicans and Harlots. The Carpenter's Son, this Fellow. He that was God's fellow, as you heard lately, now this fellow. Contempt was poured upon all his Offices. Upon his Kingly Office, when they crowned him with Thorns, arrayed him in Purple, bowed the Knee in mockery to him, and cry'd, Hail King of the Jews. His Prophetical Office, when they blinded him, and then bid him Propheſie who ſmote him. His Prieſtly Office, when they reviled him upon the Croſs, ſaying, He ſaved others, himſelf he cannot ſave. They ſcourged him. Spit in his Face. Smote him on the Head and Face. Beſides the very kind of death they put him to, was reproachful and ignominious; as you heard before.

Now all this, and much more than this, meeting at once upon an innocent and dignified Perſon. One that was greater than all. That lay in the Boſom of God. And from Eternity had his Smiles and Honours. Upon one that could have cruſhed all his Enemies as a Moth: I ſay for him to bear all this without the leaſt diſcompoſure of Spirit, or breach of Patience, is the higheſt triumph of Patience that ever was in the World. It was one of the greateſt Wonders of that wonderful Day.

Secondly, And that is the next thing we have to conſider, even this almighty Patience and unpattern'd Meekneſs of Christ, ſupporting ſuch a burden with ſuch evenneſs and ſteadineſs of Spirit. Chriſtian Patience, or the Grace Patience, is an ability of power to ſuffer hard and heavy things, according to the Will of God.

It is a power, and a glorious power that ſtrengthens the ſuffering Soul to bear. It is our paſſive fortitude, Col. 1. 11. Strengthned with all might, according to the glorious power, unto all patience, and long-ſuffering with joyfulneſs; (i. e.) ſtrengthned with a might or power of God himſelf. Or ſuch as might appear to be the proper Impreſs and Image of that divine power, which is both its principle and pattern. For the patience which God exerciſes towards ſinners that daily wrong and load him, is call'd Power, and great Power, Numb. 14. 17. Let the power of my Lord be great, as thou haſt ſpoken, ſaying, the Lord is long-ſuffering, forgiving, &c. Hence it's obſerved, Prov. 24. 10. That the loſs or breaking of our Patience under Adverſity, argues a decay of ſtrength in the Soul. If thou faint in the day of adverſity, thy ſtrength is ſmall.

Hæ duæ virtutes, ſcilicet ὑπομονὴ & μακροθυμία ſunt illius roboris, & fortitudinis quam ſpiritus nobis largitur individuæ comites. Dav.

It's a power or ability in the Soul, to bear hard, heavy and difficult things. Such only are the Objects of Patience. God hath ſeveral ſorts of burdens to impoſe upon his People. Some heavier, others lighter. Some to be carried but a few hours, others many days. Others all our days. Some more ſpiritual bearing upon the Soul. Some more external, touching or puniſhing the Fleſh immediately; and the Spirit by way of ſympathy. And ſometimes both ſorts are laid on together. So they were at this time on Chriſt. His Soul burdened as deep as it could ſwim. Full of the ſenſe, the bitter ſenſe and apprehenſion of the wrath of God. His Body fill'd with tortures. In every Member, and Senſe, Grief took up his lodging. Here was the higher exerciſe of Patience.

It's a power to bear hard and heavy things according to the will of God. The involving of that reſpect differs Patience the Chriſtian Grace, from Patience the Moral Vertue. So the Apoſtle deſcribes it, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Let them that ſuffer according to the will of God,&c. (i.e.) who exerciſe Patience gracioſly, as God would have them.

And then our Patience is, (as Chriſt moſt exactly was) according to the Will of God; when it is as extenſive, as intenſive, and as protenſive as God requires it to be.

Firſt, When it is as extenſive as God would have it. So was Chriſt's Patience. It was a Patience that ſtretched, and extended it ſelf to all and every trouble and affliction, that came upon him. Troubles came upon him in Troops, in Multitudes. It's ſaid, Pſalm 40. 12. Innumerable evils have compaſſed me about. Yet he found Patience enough to receive them all. It is not ſo with us. Our Patience is often worn out. And, like ſick People, we fancy if we were in another Chamber, or Bed, it would be better. If it were any other trouble than this, we could bear it. Chriſt had no exceptions at any burden his Father would lay on. His Patience was as large as his Trouble, and that was large indeed.

Secondly, It's then according to the Will of God, when it is as intenſive as God requires it to be, (i. e.) in the Apoſtle's Phraſe, Jam. 1. 4. When it hath its perfect work, or exerciſe; when its not only extended to all kinds of troubles; but when it works in the higheſt and moſt perfect degree. And then may Patience be ſaid to be perfect (as it was in Chriſt) when it is plenum ſui, & prohibens alieni, full of it ſelf, and excluſive of its oppoſites. Chriſt's Patience was full of its ſelf, (i. e.) it included all that belonged to it. It was full of ſubmiſſion, Peace and ſerenity; full of obedience and complacency in his Father's Will. He was in a perfect calm. As a Lamb or Sheep (ſaith the Text) that howls not, oppoſes not, but is dumb and quiet. And as his external behaviour, ſo his internal frame and temper of Soul was moſt ſerene and calm. Not one repining Thought againſt God. Not one revengeful Thought againſt Man, once ruffled his Spirit. Father forgive them, for they know not what they do, was all the hurt he wiſh'd his worſt Enemies. And as it included all that belonged to it, ſo his perfect Patience excluded all its oppoſites. No diſcontents, murmurings, deſpondencies had place in his Heart. So that his Patience was a moſt intenſive, perfect Patience. And as it was as extenſive, and as intenſive, ſo it was Thirdly, As Protenſive as God required it to be, (i. e.) it held out to the end of his Trial. He did not faint at laſt. His Troubles did not out-live his Patience. He indeed was ſtrengthned with all might unto all patience, and long-ſuffering. This was the patience of Chriſt our perfect Pattern. He had not only Patience, but Longanimity.

Thirdly, In the laſt place let us inquire into the grounds and reaſons of this his moſt perfect Patience. And if you do ſo, you ſhall find perfect Holineſs, Wiſdom, Fore-knowledge, Faith, Heavenly-mindedneſs, and Obedience at the Root of this his perfect Patience.

Firſt, This admirable patience and meekneſs of Chriſt, was the fruit and off-ſpring of his perfect Holineſs. His nature was free from thoſe corruptions, that ours groan and labour under; otherwiſe he could never have carried it at this rate. Take the meek Moſes, who excell'd all others in that Grace; and let him be tried in that very Grace, wherein he excels, and ſee how unadviſedly he may ſpeak with his Lips, Pſalm 106. 33. Take a Job, whoſe famous Patience is trumpeted, and reſounded over all the World; ye have heard of the patience of Job. And let him be tried by outward, and inward troubles meeting upon him in one day; and even a Job may curſe the day when he was born. Envy, revenge, diſcontent, deſpondencies, are Weeds naturally ſpringing up in the corrupt Soil of our ſinful Natures. I ſaw a little Child grow pale with Envy, ſaid Auſtin. And the Spirit that is in us luſteth unto Envy, (ſaith the Apoſtle) Jam. 4. 5. The Principles of all theſe Evils being in our Natures, they will ſhew themſelves in time of Trial. The old Man is fretful and paſſionate. But it was otherwiſe with Chriſt. His Nature was like a pure Criſtal Glaſs full of pure Fountain Water; which though ſhaken and agitated never ſo much, cannot ſhew, becauſe it hath no dregs. The Prince of this world cometh, and hath nought in me, John 14. 30. No principle of corruption, for a handle of temptation. Our High-Prieſt was holy, harmleſs, undefil'd, ſeparate from Sinners, Heb. 7. 26.

Vidi Zelantem parvulum. Aug.

Secondly, The Meekneſs and Patience of Chriſt proceeded from the infinite wiſdom with which he was filled. The wiſer any Man is, the more patient he is. Hence meekneſs the fruit, is denominated from patience, the root that bears it, James 3. 13. The meekneſs of wiſdom. And anger is lodged in folly, as its proper cauſe, Eccleſ. 7. 9. Anger reſteth in the boſom of fools. Seneca would allow no place for paſſion in a wiſe Man's breaſt. Wiſe Men uſe to ponder, conſider and weigh things deliberately in their Judgments, before they ſuffer their affections and paſſions to be ſtirred and engaged. Hence comes the conſtancy and ſerenity of their Spirits. As wiſe Solomon hath obſerved, Prov. 17. 27. A man of underſtanding is of an excellent (or as the Hebrew is) a cool Spirit.

Si nec magnam iram nec frequentem in animo ſapientis locum habere credimus; quid eſt quare non ex toto hoc affectu illum liberemus. Seneca de Ira.

Now Wiſdom filled the Soul of Chriſt. He is wiſdom in the abſtract, Prov. 8. In him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom, Col. 2. 3. Hence it was that he was no otherwiſe moved with the revilings and abuſes of his Enemies, than a wiſe Phyſician is with the impertinencies of his diſtempered and craſie Patient.

Thirdly, And as his patience flowed from that his perfect wiſdom and knowledge, ſo alſo from his foreknowledge. He had a perfect proſpect of all thoſe things from Eternity, which befel him afterwards. They came not upon him by way of ſurprizal. And therefore he wondered not at them when they came, as if ſome ſtrange thing had happened. He foreſaw all theſe things long before, Mark 8. 31. And he began to teach them that the Son of man muſt ſuffer many things, and be rejected of the Elders, and chief Prieſts, and Scribes, and be killed. Yea, he had compacted and agreed with his Father to endure all this for our ſakes, before he aſſum'd our Fleſh. Hence, Iſa. 50. 6. I gave my back to the ſmiters, and my cheeks to them that pulled off the hair. I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting.

Now look as Chriſt in Joh. 16. 4. obviates all future offences his Diſciples might take at ſuffering for his ſake, by telling them beforehand, what they muſt expect. Theſe things (ſaith he) I told you, that when the time ſhall come ye may remember that I told you of them. So he fore-knowing what himſelf muſt ſuffer, and had agreed ſo to do, he bare thoſe ſufferings with ſingular Patience. Jeſus therefore knowing all things that ſhould come upon him, went forth and ſaid unto them, Whom ſeek ye? John 18. 4.

Fourthly, As his patience ſprang from his fore-knowledge of his ſufferings; ſo from his Faith which he exerciſed under all that he ſuffer'd in this World. His Faith looked through all thoſe black and diſmal Clouds, to the Joy propoſed, Heb. 22. 2. He knew that though Pilate condemned, God would juſtifie him, Iſa. 50. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. And he ſet one over againſt the other. He balanced the Glory into which he was to enter, with the Sufferings through which he was to enter into it. He acted Faith upon God for divine ſupport and aſſiſtance under ſuffering; as well as for glory, the fruit and reward of them, Pſalm 16. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. I have ſet (or as the Apoſtle varies it) I foreſaw the Lord always before me, becauſe he is at my right hand I ſhall not be moved. Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoyceth. There's Faith acted by Chriſt for ſtrength to carry him through. And then it follows, My fleſh alſo ſhall reſt in hope, for thou wilt not leave my ſoul in hell, neither wilt thou ſuffer thine holy one to ſee corruption. Thou wilt ſhew me the path of life. In thy preſence is fulneſs of joy, at thy right hand there are pleaſures for evermore. There's his Faith acting upon the Glory into which he was to enter, after he had ſuffered theſe things. This fill'd him with Peace.

Fifthly, As his Faith eyeing the Glory into which he was paſſing, made him endure all things; ſo the heavenlineſs of his Spirit alſo fill'd him with a heavenly tranquillity, and calmneſs of Spirit under all his Abuſes and Injuries. It's a certain Truth, that the more heavenly any Man's Spirit is, the more ſedate, compoſed and peaceful. As the higher Heavens (ſaith Seneca) are more ordinate and tranquil. There are neither Clouds, nor Winds, Storms, nor Tempeſts, they are the inferior Heavens that lighten and thunder. The nearer the Earth the more tempeſtuous, and unquiet. Even ſo the ſublime and heavenly mind, is placed in a calm and quiet ſtation.

Certainly that Heart which is ſweetned frequently with heavenly delightful communion with God, is not very apt to be imbittered with wrath, or ſoured with revenge againſt Men. The Peace of God doth βραβευέτω, appeaſe and end all Strifes and Differences as an Umpire. So much that word, Col. 3. 15. imports. The heavenly Spirit marvellouſly affects a ſedate and quiet Breaſt.

Now, never was there ſuch a heavenly Soul on Earth, ſince Man inhabited it, as Chriſt was. He had moſt ſweet and wonderful communion with God. He had Meat to eat, which others, yea, and thoſe his greateſt intimates, knew not of. The Son of Man was in Heaven upon Earth, John 3. 13. Even in reſpect of that bleſſed heavenly communion he had with God, as well as in reſpect of his immenſe Deity. And that his Heart was in Heaven, when he ſo patiently endured and digeſted the pain and ſhame of the Croſs; is evident from Heb. 12. 2. For the joy ſet before him, he endured the Croſs, deſpiſed the ſhame. See where his Eye and Heart was, when he went as a Lamb to the ſlaughter.

Sixthly, and laſtly, As his meekneſs and patience ſprang from the heavenlineſs and ſublimity of his Spirit: So, from the compleat and abſolute Obedience of it to his Father's Will and Pleaſure. He could moſt quietly ſubmit to all the Will of God, and never regret at any part of the Work aſſign'd him by his Father. For you muſt know that Chriſt's death in him was an act of Obedience, he all along eyeing his Father's Command and Counſel in what he ſuffered, Phil. 2. 7, 8. Joh. 18. 11. Pſal. 40. 6, 7, 8. Now look as the eyeing and conſidering of the Hand of God in an affliction, preſently becalms and quiets a gracious Soul; as you ſee in David, 2 Sam. 16. 11. Let him alone, it may be God hath bid him curſe David: So much more it quieted Jeſus Chriſt, who was privy to the Deſign and End of his Father, with whoſe Will he all along complied; looking on Jews and Gentiles but as the Inſtruments ignorantly fulfilling God's Pleaſure, and ſerving that great Deſign of his Father. This was his patience, and theſe the grounds of it.

Uſe. I might variouſly improve this Point, but the direct and main uſe of it is to preſs us to a Chriſt-like Patience in all our Sufferings, and Troubles. And ſeeing in nothing we are more generally defective; and that defects of Chriſtians herein, are ſo prejudicial to Religion, and uncomfortable to themſelves: I reſolve to wave all other Uſes, and ſpend the remaining time wholly upon this Branch. Even a perſuaſive to Chriſtians unto all Patience, in Tribulations. To imitate their Lamb-like Saviour. Unto this (Chriſtians) you are expreſly call'd, 1 Pet. 2. 21, 22. Becauſe Chriſt alſo ſuffered for us, leaving us an example; that we ſhould follow his ſteps. Who did no ſin, neither was guile found in his mouth; who when he was reviled, reviled not again, when he ſuffered, he threatned not; but committed himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly. Here's your Pattern. A perfect Pattern. A lovely and excellent Pattern. Will you be perſuaded to the imitation of Chriſt herein? Methinks I ſhould perſuade you to it. Yea, every thing about you perſuades to patience in your ſufferings, as well as I. Look which way you will, upward or downward, inward or outward, backward or forward, to the right hand or to the left; you ſhall find all things perſuading and urging the Doctrine of Patience upon you.

Firſt, Look upward, when Tribulations come upon you. Look to that Sovereign Lord, that commiſſionates and ſinds them upon you. You know troubles do not riſe out of the duſt, nor ſpring out of the ground, but are framed in Heaven, Jer. 18. v. 11. Behold I frame evil, and deviſe a device againſt you. Troubles and afflictions are of the Lord's framing, and deviſing, to reduce his wandring People to himſelf. Much like that device of Abſalom in ſetting Joab's field of Corn on fire to bring Joab to him, 2 Sam. 14. 30. In the frame of your afflictions you may obſerve much of divine Wiſdom in the choice, meaſure and ſeaſon of your Troubles. Sovereignty in electing the Inſtruments of your affliction. In making them as afflictive as he pleaſeth. And in making them obedient both to his call in coming and going, when he pleaſeth. Now could you in times of trouble look up to his Sovereign Hand, in which your Souls, Bodies, and all their Comforts and Mercies are; how quiet would your Hearts be! Pſalm 39. 9. I was dumb, and opened not my mouth, becauſe it is thy doing. 1 Sam. 3. 18. It is the Lord, let him do what ſeemeth him good. O, when we have to do with Men, and look no higher; how do our Spirits ſwell and riſe with revenge, and impatiency! But if you once come to ſee that Man as a Rod in your Father's hand, you will be quiet, Pſalm 46. 10. Be ſtill, and know that I am God; q. d. conſider with whom you have to do. Not with your fellow, but with your God, who can puff you to deſtruction, with one blaſt of his Mouth. In whoſe Hand you are, as the Clay in the Potter's hand. It is for want of looking up to God in our Troubles, that we fret, murmur, and deſpond at the rate we do.

Secondly, Look downward, and ſee what is below you, as well as up to that which is above you. You are afflicted, and you cannot bear it. O! no trouble like your trouble! Never Man in ſuch a caſe as you are. Well, well, caſt the eye of your Mind downward, and ſee who lie much lower than you. Can you ſee none on Earth in a more miſerable ſtate than your ſelves? Are you at the very bottom, and not a Man below you? Sure there be thouſands in a ſadder caſe than you on Earth. What is your affliction? Have you loſt a Relation? Others have loſt all. Have you loſt an Eſtate, and are become poor? Well, but there be ſome you read of, Job 30. 4, 5, 6, 7. Who cut up mallows by the buſhes, and Juniper roots for their meat. They are driven forth from among men, they cryed after them as after a thief. They dwell in the cliffs of the Vallies, in caves of the Earth, and in the Rocks. Among the buſhes they brayed, under the nettles they were gathered together. What difference as to manner of Life, do you find between the Perſons here deſcribed, and the wild Beaſts, that herd together in a deſolate Place? Are you perſecuted and afflicted for Chriſt's ſake? What think you of their Sufferings, Heb. 11. 36, 37. Who had trial of cruel mockings, yea, moreover of Bonds and Impriſonments; they were ſtoned, they were ſawn aſunder, were tempted, were ſlain with the Sword, they wandred about in ſheep-skins and goat-skins, being deſtitute, afflicted, tormented. And are you better than they? I know not what you are, but I am ſure theſe were ſuch of whom the world was not worthy, verſe 38.

Or are your Afflictions more ſpiritual and inward? Say not, the Lord never dealt more bitterly with the Soul of any, than he hath with yours. What think you of the caſe of David, Heman, Job, Aſaph, whoſe doleful Cries, by reaſon of the Terrors of the Almighty, are able to melt the ſtonieſt Heart that reads their Stories? The Almighty was a Terror to them. The Arrows of God were within them. They roared by reaſon of the diſquietneſs of their Hearts.

Or are your Afflictions outward and inward together? An afflicted Soul, in an afflicted Body. Are you fallen like the Ship in which Paul ſailed, into a Place where two Seas meet? Well, ſo it was with Paul, Job, and many other of thoſe Worthies gone before you. Sure you may ſee many on Earth, who have been, or are in far lower and ſadder States than your ſelves.

Or if not on Earth, doubtleſs you will yield there are many in Hell, who would be glad to exchange Conditions with you, as bad as you think yours to be. And were not all theſe moulded out of the ſame Lump with you? Surely if you can ſee any Creature below you, eſpecially any reaſonable Being, you have no reaſon to return ſo ungratefully upon your God, and accuſe your Maker of Severity; or charge God fooliſhly. Look down and you ſhall ſee Grounds enough to be quiet.

Thirdly, Look inward, you diſcontented Spirits, and ſee if you can find nothing there to quiet you. Caſt your Eye into your own Hearts. Conſider either the Corruptions, or the Graces that are there. Cannot you find Weeds enough there, that need ſuch winter weather as this to rot them? Hath not that proud Heart need enough of all this to humble it? That carnal Heart need of ſuch things as theſe to mortifie it? That backſliding wandering Heart, need of all this, to reduce, and recover it to its God? If need be, ye are in heavineſs, 1 Pet. 1. 6. O Chriſtian, did'ſt thou not ſee need of this before thou cameſt into Trouble? Or hath not God ſhewn thee the need of it ſince thou waſt under the Rod? It's much thou ſhould'ſt not ſee it; but be aſſured, if thou do'ſt not, thy God doth. He knows thou would'ſt be ruined for ever, if he ſhould not take this courſe with thee.

Thy Corruptions require all this to kill them. Thy Luſts will take all this, it may be more than this; and all little enough. And as your Corruptions call for it, ſo do your Graces too. Wherefore think ye the Lord planted the Principles of Faith, Humility, Patience, &c. in your Souls? What, were they put there for nothing? Did the Lord intend they ſhould lie ſleeping in their drowſie Habits? Or were they not planted there in order to exerciſe? And how ſhall they be exerciſed without Tribulations? can you tell? Doth not tribulations work patience, and patience experience, and experience hope? Rom. 5. 3, 4. Is not the trial of your faith much more precious, than of Gold that periſhes, 1 Pet. 1. 7. O look inward, and you will be quiet.

Fourthly, Look outward, and ſee who ſtands by, and obſerves your Carriage under Trouble. Are there not many Eyes upon you; Yea, many envious Obſervers round about you? It was David's Requeſt, Pſal. 5. 8. Lead me, O Lord in thy righteouſneſs, becauſe of mine Enemies; or, as the Hebrew word there might be rendred, becauſe of mine Obſervers or Watchers. There's many an envious Eye upon you. To the Wicked there can ſcarcely be an higher Gratification and Pleaſure, than to ſee your Carriage under Trouble, ſo like their own. For thereby they are confirm'd in their Prejudices againſt Religion; and in their good Opinion of themſelves. Theſe may talk and profeſs more than we, but when they are tried and put to it, it appears plainly enough, their Religion enables 'em to do no more than we do. They talk of Heaven's Glory, and their future Expectances; but it is but talk, for it's apparent enough their Hopes cannot ballance a ſmall Affliction, with all the Happineſs they talk of. Oh, how do you diſhonour Chriſt before his Enemies! when you make them think all your Religion lies in talking of it. Conſider who looks on.

Fifthly, Look backward, and ſee if there be nothing behind you that may huſh and quiet your impatient Spirits. Conſult the multitude of Experiences paſt and gone. Both your own and others. Is this the firſt ſtraight that ever you were in? If ſo, you have reaſon to be quiet, yea, to bleſs God that hath ſpared you ſo long, when others have had their days fill'd up with Sorrow. But if you have been in Troubles formerly, and the Lord hath helped you; if you have paſt through the Fire, and not been burnt; Through the Waters and not drowned. If God hath ſtood by you, and hitherto helped you. O what cauſe have you to be quiet now, and patiently wait for the Salvation of God? Did he help you then, and cannot he do ſo now? Did he give Waters, and cannot he give Bread alſo? Is he the God of the Hills only, and not the God of the Vallies alſo? O call to mind the days of old, the years of the right hand of the moſt high, Theſe things I recal to my mind, therefore have I hope, Lam. 3. 21. Have you kept no Records of paſt Experiences? How ungrateful then have you been to your God, and how injurious to your ſelves, if you have not read them over in ſuch a day as this, for to that end they were given you?

O when you ſhall conſider what a God he hath been to you, at a pinch. How faithfully Jehovahjereth hath ſtood by you. That this is not the firſt time your Hearts and Hopes have been low, as well as your Condition; and yet God hath raiſed you again; ſurely you will find your preſent Troubles made light, by a glance back upon your paſt Experiences.

Sixthly, Look forward, to the end of your Troubles; yea, look to a double end of them, the end of their duration, and the end of their operation. Look ye to the end of their duration, and that's faſt by you. They ſhall not be everlaſting Troubles, if you be ſuch as fear the Lord. The God of all grace, who hath call'd us unto his eternal glory, by Jeſus Chriſt, after that ye have [ſuffered a while] make you perfect, 1 Pet. 5. 10. Theſe light afflictions are but for a moment, 2 Cor. 4. 18. It is no more comparatively with that vaſt Eternity that is before you. Alas, what are a few days and nights of Sorrows, when they are paſt? Are they not ſwallow'd up as a ſpoonful of Water in the vaſt Ocean? But more eſpecially look to the end of their operation. What do all theſe Afflictions tend to, and effect? Do they not work out an exceeding weight of Glory? Are you not by them made partakers of his Holineſs? Heb. 12. Is not this all the Fruit to take away your Sins? What, and be impatient at this! Fret and repine becauſe God is this way perfecting your Happineſs? O ungrateful Soul! Is this a due requital of that Love, that diſdains not to ſtoop to ſo low an Imployment, as to ſcour and cleanſe your Souls, that they might be ſhining Veſſels of honour to all Eternity!

O look forward to the end of your Troubles. The end of their duration and operation.

Seventhly, Look to the right hand, and ſee how you are ſhamed, convinced, and ſilenced by other Chriſtians; and it may be ſuch too as never made that profeſſion you have done; and yet cannot only patiently bear the afflicting hand of God; but are bleſſing, praiſing, and admiring God under their Troubles; whil'ſt you are ſinning againſt, and diſhonouring him under ſmaller ones. It may be you will find ſome poor Chriſtians that know not where to have their next Bread, and yet are ſpeaking of the Bounty of their God; while you are repining in the midſt of Plenty. Ah, if there be any ingenuity in you, let this ſhame you. If this will not, then Eighthly, Look to your left hand, and there you will ſee a ſad ſight, and what one would think ſhould quiet you. There you may ſee a Company of wicked graceleſs Wretches, carrying themſelves under their Troubles, but too like your ſelves. What do they more, than fret and murmur, deſpond and ſink; mix Sin with their Afflictions, when the Rod of God is upon them?

It's time for thee to leave off, when thou ſeeſt how near thou art come to them, whom thou hopeſt thou ſhalt never be ranked and numbred with. Reader, ſuch Conſiderations as theſe, I am perſuaded, would be of ſingular uſe to thy Soul at ſuch a time, but above all, thine eying the great pattern of patience, Jeſus Chriſt; whoſe Lamb-like Carriage, under a Trial, with which thine is not to be named the ſame day, is here recommended to thee. O how ſhould this transform thee into a Lamb, for Meekneſs alſo?

SERMON XXX.

Serm. 30. Opens the inſtructiveneſs of the death of Chriſt in his ſeven laſt words; the firſt of which is here opened.

LUKE XXIII. 34.

Then ſaid Jeſus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do.

THE manner in which Chriſt died hath already been opened in the Solitude and Patience in which he died. The third, to wit, the Inſtructiveneſs of his Death, now follows, in theſe ſeven excellent and weighty Sayings, which dropt from his bleſſed Lips upon the Tree; whil'ſt his ſacred Blood dropt on the Earth from his wounded Hands and Feet; ſo that on the Croſs he exerciſed both his Prieſtly and Prophetical Office together, redeeming us by his Blood, and inſtructing us by his Words.

Theſe ſeven Words of Chriſt upon the Croſs are his laſt Words, with which he breathed out his Soul. The laſt Words of a dying Man are remarkable, the Scripture puts a remark upon them, 2 Sam. 23. 1. Now theſe be the laſt words of David. How remarkable then are the laſt Words of Chriſt?

Theſe words are ſeven in number; three directed to his Father, and four more to thoſe about him. Of the former ſort this is one, Father, forgive them, &c. In which we have, Firſt, The Mercy deſired by Chriſt, and that is Forgiveneſs. Secondly, The Perſons for whom it is deſired, [Them] that is, thoſe cruel and wicked Perſons that were now imbrewing their hands in his Blood. And Thirdly, The motive or argument urged to procure that Mercy from his Father, for they know not what they do.

Firſt, The Mercy prayed for, that is, Forgiveneſs, Father forgive. Forgiveneſs is not only a Mercy, a ſpiritual Mercy, but one of the greateſt Mercies a Soul can obtain from God. It is ſuch a Mercy that without it whatever elſe we have from God, is no Mercy to us. So great a Mercy is Forgiveneſs, that David calls him bleſſed, or rather admires the bleſſedneſs of him whoſe Tranſgreſſion is forgiven, whoſe ſin is covered. This Mercy, this beſt of Mercies he requeſts for them, Father forgive them.

Felicitates hominis. Mont.

Secondly, The Perſons for whom he requeſts Forgiveneſs, are the ſame that with wicked hands crucified him. Their Fact was the moſt horrid that ever was committed by Men. They not only ſhed innocent Blood, but the Blood of God; the beſt of Mercies, is by him deſired for the worſt of Sinners.

Thirdly, The Motive or Argument urged to procure this Mercy for them, is this, for they know not what they do. As if he ſhould ſay, Lord, what theſe poor Creatures do, is not ſo much out of Malice to me, as the Son of God; but it is from their Ignorance. Did they know who, and what I am, they would rather be nailed to the Croſs themſelves, than do it. To the ſame purpoſe the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 2. 8. Whom none of the Princes of this world knew, for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. Yet this is not to be extended to all that had an hand in the death of Chriſt, but to the ignorant Multitude; among whom, ſome of God's Elect were, who afterwards believed in him, whoſe Blood they ſpilt, Acts 3. 17. And now brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it. For them this Prayer of Chriſt was heard. Hence the Notes are,

Doct. 1. That Ignorance is the uſual cauſe of Enmity to Chriſt.

Doct. 2. That there is Forgiveneſs with God, for ſuch as oppoſe Chriſt out of Ignorance.

Doct. 3. That to forgive Enemies, and beg Forgiveneſs for them, is the true Character and Property of the Chriſtian Spirit.

Theſe Obſervations contain ſo much practical Truth, that it will be worth our time to open and apply them diſtinctly.

Doct. 1. That Ignorance is the uſual cauſe of Enmity to Chriſt.

Theſe things (ſaith the Lord) will they do, becauſe they have not known the Father, nor me, John 16. 3. What thing doth he mean? Why, kill and deſtroy the People of God, and therein ſuppoſe they do God good Service, (i. e.) think to oblige and gratifie the Father, by their butchering his Children. So Jer. 9. 3. They proceed from evil, to evil; and have not known me, ſaith the Lord, q. d. Had they the Knowledge of God, they would check and ſtop them in their ways of Wickedneſs, and ſo Pſal. 74. 20. The dark places of the Earth, are full of the habitations of cruelty.

Three things muſt be inquired into, ſc. what their Ignorance of Chriſt was. Whence it was. And how it diſpoſed them to ſuch Enmity againſt him.

Firſt, What was their Ignorance, who crucified Chriſt? Ignorance is two-fold, ſimple, or reſpective. Simple Ignorance is not ſuppoſable in theſe Perſons, for in many things they were a knowing People. But it was a reſpective particular Ignorance, Rom. 11. 25. Blindneſs in part, is happened to Iſrael. They knew many other Truths, but did not know Jeſus Chriſt. In that their Eyes were held. Natural Light they had. Yea, and Scripture Light they had. But in this particular, that this was the Son of God, the Saviour of the World; therein they were blind and ignorant.

But how could that be? Had they not heard at leaſt of his miraculous Works? Did they not ſee how his Birth, Life and Death ſquar'd with the Prophecies both in time, place and manner? Whence ſhould this their Ignorance be, when they ſaw, or at leaſt might have ſeen the Scriptures fulfill'd in him, and that he came among them in a time when they were big with Expectations of the Meſſiah.

'Tis true indeed, they knew the Scriptures, and it cannot but be ſuppos'd the Fame of his mighty Works had reach'd their Ears; but yet, Firſt, Though they had the Scriptures among them, they miſunderſtood them; and did not rightly meaſure Chriſt by that right Rule. You find, John 7. 52. how they reaſon with Nicodemus againſt Chriſt, Art thou alſo of Galilee? Search, and ſee; for out of Galilee ariſeth no Prophet. Here is a double miſtake. Firſt, They ſuppoſed Chriſt to ariſe out of Galilee, whereas he was of Bethlehem, tho' much Converſant in the parts of Galilee. And Secondly, They thought becauſe they could find no Prophet had ariſen out of Galilee, therefore none ſhould.

Another miſtake that blinded them about Chriſt, was from their conceit that Chriſt ſhould not die, but live for ever, John 12. 34. We have heard out of the Law, that Chriſt abideth for ever; and how ſayeſt thou the Son of Man muſt be lifted up? Who is the Son of Man? That Scripture which probably they urge againſt the Mortality of Chriſt, is Iſa. 9. 7. Of the increaſe of his government and peace there ſhall be no end, upon the throne of David, &c. In like manner, John 7. 17. we find them in another miſtake, We know this man whence he is, but when Chriſt cometh, no man knoweth whence he is. This likely proceeded from their miſunderſtanding of Mica. 5. 2. His goings forth have been from of old, from everlaſting. Thus were they blinded about the Perſon of Chriſt by miſinterpretations of Scripture Propheſies.

Secondly, Another thing occaſioning their miſtake of Chriſt was the outward meanneſs and deſpiſableneſs of his Condition. They expected a pompous Meſſiah, one that ſhould come with State and Glory, becoming the King of Iſrael. But when they ſaw him in the Form of a Servant, coming in Poverty, not to be miniſtred unto, but to Miniſter:

They utterly rejected him, We hid as it it were our Faces from him, he was deſpiſed, and we eſteemed him not, Iſa. 53. 3. Nor is it any great wonder theſe ſhould be ſcandalized at his Poverty. When the Diſciples themſelves, had ſuch carnal Apprehenſions of his Kingdom, Mark 10. 37, 38.

Thirdly, Add to this, their implicit Faith in the learned Rabbies and Doctors, who utterly miſled them in this matter, and greatly prejudiced them againſt Chriſt. Lo (ſay they) he ſpeaketh boldly, and they ſay nothing to him. Do the Rulers know indeed that this is the very Chriſt? They pinn'd their Faith upon the Rulers Sleeves, and ſuffer'd them to carry it whither they would. This was their Ignorance; and theſe its Cauſes.

Thirdly, Let us ſee in the next place, how this diſpoſed them to ſuch Enmity againſt Chriſt. And this it doth three ways;

Firſt, Ignorance diſpoſes Men to Enmity and Oppoſition to Chriſt, by removing thoſe Hindrances that would otherwiſe keep them from it: As Checks and Rebukes of Conſcience, by which they are reſtrain'd from Evil; but Conſcience binding and reproving in the Authority and Vertue of the Law of God; where that Law is not known, there can be no Reproofs, and therefore we truly ſay, That Ignorance is virtually every Sin.

Secondly, Ignorance enſlaves and ſubjects the Soul to the Luſts of Satan; he is the ruler of the darkneſs of this world, Eph. 6. 13. There is no work ſo baſe and vile, but an ignorant man will undertake it.

Thirdly, Nay, which is more, if a Man be ignorant of Chriſt, his Truths, or People; he will not only oppoſe and perſecute, but he will alſo do it conſcienciouſly, (i. e.) he will look upon it as his duty ſo to do, John 16. 3. Before the Lord open'd Paul's Eyes, he verily thought that he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Chriſt. Thus you have a brief account what, and whence their Ignorance was, and how it diſpoſed and prepared them for this dreadful work. Hence we learn,

Inference 1. How falſly is the Goſpel charged as the cauſe of Diſcord and Trouble in the World. 'Tis not light, but darkneſs that makes Men fierce and cruel. As light encreaſes, ſo doth Peace, Iſa. 14. 6, 9. The Wolf alſo ſhall dwell with the Lamb, and the Leopard lie down with the Kid; and the Calf and the young Lion, and the Fatling together; and a little Child ſhall lead them; they ſhall not hurt, nor deſtroy in all my holy mountain; for the Earth ſhall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the Waters cover the Sea. What a ſad condition would the World be in without Goſpel-light! All places would be Dens of Rapine and Mountains of Prey. Certainly we owe much of our Civil Liberty, and outward Tranquility to Goſpel-light. If a Sword and Variance at any time follow the Goſpel, it's but an accidental, not a direct and proper effect of it.

Inference 2. How dreadful is it to oppoſe Chriſt and his Truths knowingly, and with open Eyes? Chriſt pleads their Ignorance as an Argument to procure their Pardon. Paul himſelf was once fill'd with Rage and Madneſs, againſt Chriſt and his Truths. It was well for him he did it ignorantly. Had he gone againſt his light and knowledge, there had been little hope of him, 1 Tim. 1. v. 13. I was a blaſphemer, a perſecutor, and injurious; but I obtained mercy, becauſe I did it ignorantly, and in unbelief. I do not ſay it's ſimply impoſſible for one that knowingly, and maliciouſly oppoſes and perſecutes Chriſt and his People, to be forgiven, but it is not uſual, Heb. 6. 4, 5. There are few Inſtances of it.

Inference 3. What an awful Majeſty ſits upon the Brow of Holineſs, that few dare to oppoſe it that ſee it! There are few or none ſo daringly wicked, to fight againſt it with open Eyes, 1 Pet. 3. 13. Who will harm you whileſt ye are followers of that which is good, q. d. who dare be ſo hardy to ſet upon known godlineſs, or afflict and wrong the known Friends of it? The true reaſon why many Chriſtians ſpeed ſo bad, is not becauſe they are godly, but becauſe they do not manifeſt the power of godlineſs more than they do. Their lives are ſo like the lives of others, that they are often miſtaken for others. Cyprian brings in the Wicked of his time thus ſcoffing at Profeſſors. Behold they that boaſt themſelves to be redeemed from the Tyranny of Satan, and to be dead to the World, how are they overcome by the Luſts of it, as well as other Men? Look as the Poverty and Meanneſs of Chriſt's outward Condition was a ground of their miſtake of him then, ſo the Poverty and Meanneſs of our Love to God, heavenly Mindedneſs, and Mortification to this World, is a diſguiſe to Profeſſors, and a cauſe why they are no more owned, and honoured in the Conſciences of Men at this day. For Holineſs, manifeſted in its Power, is ſo awfully glorious, that the Conſciences of the Vileſt cannot but honour it, and do obeyſance to it, Mark 6. 20. Herod feared John, for he was a juſt man.

Inference 4. The Enemies of Chriſt are Objects of Pity. Alas they are blind, and know not what they do. It's pity that any other affection than Pity, ſhould ſtir in our Hearts towards them. Were their Eyes but open, they would never do as they do. We ſhould look upon them as the Phyſician doth upon his ſick diſtempered Patient. Did they but ſee with the ſame Light you do, they would be as far from hating Chriſt or his Ways as you are, Simul ac deſinunt ignorare, deſinunt odiſſe, as ſoon as they ceaſe to be ignorant, they ceaſe to hate, ſaith Tertullian.

Inference 5. How needful is it before we engage our ſelves againſt any perſon or way, to be well ſatisfied and reſolved that it is a wicked perſon or practice that we oppoſe? You ſee the World generally runs upon a miſtake in this matter. O beware of doing you know not what! For though you do, you know not what, Satan knows what he is doing by you. He blinds your Eyes, and then ſets you to work, knowing that if you ſhould but ſee what you are doing, you would rather die than do it. You may now do you know not what; but you may afterward have time enough to reflect on, and lament what you have done. You may now do you know not what, and hereafter you may not know what to do. O beware what you do.

Doct. 2. That there is forgiveneſs with God, for ſuch as oppoſe Chriſt out of ignorance.

If all manner of Sin and Blaſphemy ſhall be forgiven to Men, then this as well as others, Matth. 12. 31. We are not with Theophilact to underſtand that place of the certainty of Pardon: Much leſs with Origen of the deſert of it: Nor yet with Janſenius of the facility of it, but rather of the poſſibility of forgiveneſs. It ſhall be ſo to ſome, it may be ſo to you: Even thoſe whoſe wicked Hands had crucified Chriſt, receive remiſſion by that Blood they ſhed, Acts 2. 23, 38. compared.

I have two things here to do; Firſt, to open the nature of the forgiveneſs, and ſhew you what it is. Secondly, To evince the poſſibility of it, for ſuch as miſtakingly oppoſe Chriſt.

For the Firſt, Forgiveneſs of God's gracious diſcharge of a believing penitent ſinner, from the guilt of all his ſin, for Chriſt's ſake.

It's God's diſcharge: There is indeed fraternal forgiveneſs, by which one Man forgives another; ſo far as he is intereſſed in the wrong, Luke 6. 37. There is alſo a miniſterial forgiveneſs, whereby the Miniſter of Chriſt as his Mouth, and in his Name declares the pardon, or miniſterially applies the promiſes of pardon to penitent offenders, John 20. 23. But none can abſolutely, and properly forgive ſin, but God only, Mark 2. 7. The primary and principal wrong is done to them, Pſalm 51. 4. Againſt thee, thee only (i.e.) thee mainly or eſpecially, have I ſinned. Hence ſins are metonymically called debts, debts to God, Mat. 6. 12. Not that we owe them to God, or ought to ſin againſt him; but as a pecuniary debt obliges him that owes it, to the penalty, if he ſatisfie not for it; ſo do our ſins. And who can diſcharge the Debtor, but the Creditor?

It's a gracious act or diſcharge. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſion for mine own name ſake, Iſai. 43. 25. And yet ſin is not ſo forgiven, as that God expects no ſatisfaction at all; but as expecting none from us, becauſe God hath provided a ſurety for us, from whom he is ſatisfied. Eph. 1. 7. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveneſs of ſins, according to the riches of his grace.

It's a gracious diſcharge from the guilt of ſin. Guilt is that which pardon properly deals with. Guilt is an obligation to puniſhment. Pardon is the diſſolving that Obligation. Guilt is a Chain with which ſinners are bound and fettered by the Law. Pardon is that Aqua-fortis that eats it aſunder, and makes the Priſoner a Free-man. The pardoned Soul is a diſcharged Soul, Rom. 8. 33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that juſtifieth, who ſhall condemn? It's Chriſt that died.

It's God's diſcharge of a believing penitent ſinner. Infidelity and impenitency are not only ſins in themſelves, but ſuch ſins as bind faſt all other ſins upon the Soul. By him all that believe are juſtified from all things, Acts 10. 43. So Acts 3. 19. Repent therefore, that your ſins may be blotted out. This is the method in which God diſpenſeth pardon to ſinners. Laſtly,

It is for Chriſt's ſake we are diſcharged; he is the meritorious, cauſe of our remiſſion. As God for Chriſt's ſake hath forgiven you, Eph. 4. 32. It's his Blood alone that meritoriouſly procures our diſcharge.

This is a brief, and true account of the nature of forgiveneſs.

Secondly, Now to evince the poſſibility of forgiveneſs, for ſuch as ignorantly oppoſe Chriſt. Let theſe things be weigh'd.

Firſt, Why ſhould any poor Soul that is now humbled for its enmity to Chriſt in the days of ignorance, queſtion the poſſibility of forgiveneſs: When this effect doth not exceed the power of the cauſe; nay, when there is more efficacy in the Blood of Chriſt the meritorious cauſe, than is in this effect of it? There's power enough in that Blood not only to pardon thy ſins, but the ſins of the whole world, were it actually applied, 1 John 2. 2. There is not only a ſufficiency, but alſo a redundancy of merit, in that precious Blood. Surely then thy Enmity to Chriſt, eſpecially before thou kneweſt him, may not look like an unpardonable Iniquity in thine Eyes.

Secondly, And as this Sin exceeds not the Power of the meritorious cauſe of Forgiveneſs; ſo neither is it any where excluded from pardon, by any word of God. Nay, ſuch is the extenſiveneſs of the promiſe to believing Penitents, that this caſe is manifeſtly included, and Forgiveneſs tendred to thee in the promiſes, Iſai. 55. 7. Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy on him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. Many ſuch extenſive Promiſes there are in the Scriptures. And there is not one Parentheſis in all thoſe bleſſed Pages, in which this caſe is excepted.

Thirdly, And it's yet more ſatisfactory that God hath already actually forgiven ſuch ſinners; and that which he hath done, he may again do. Yea, therefore he hath done it to ſome, and thoſe eminent for their enmity to Chriſt, that others may be incouraged to hope for the ſame Mercy when they alſo ſhall be in the ſame manner humbled for it. Take one famous Inſtance of many; it's that of Paul in 1 Tim. 1. 13. 16. Who was before a blaſphemer, a perſecutor, and injurious: But I obtained mercy, becauſe I did it ignorantly in unbelief —— howbeit, for this cauſe I obtained mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all long-ſuffering, for a pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe on him to everlaſting life. It's no ſmall incouragement to a ſick Man, to hear of ſome that have been recover'd out of the ſame Diſeaſe, and that prevailing in an higher degree, than in himſelf.

Fourthly, Moreover, it is encouraging to conſider, that when God hath cut off others in the way of their ſin, he hath hitherto ſpared thee. What ſpeaks this but a purpoſe of mercy to thy Soul? Thou ſhouldſt account the long-ſuffering of God thy Salvation, 2 Pet. 3. 15. Had he ſmitten thee in the way of thy ſin and enmity to Chriſt, what hope had remained? But in that he hath not only ſpared thee, but alſo given thee a heart ingenuouſly aſhamed, and humbled for thy evils; doth not this ſpeak mercy for thee? ſurely it looks like a gracious deſign of love to thy Soul.

Inference 1. And is there forgiveneſs with God for ſuch as have been Enemies to Chriſt, his Truths, and People? Then certainly there is pardon and mercy for the friends of God, who involuntarily fall into ſin, by the ſurprizals of temptation, and are broken for it as ingenuous Children for offending a good Father. Can any doubt, if God have pardon for ſuch Enemies, he hath none for Children? If he have forgiveneſs for ſuch as ſhed the Blood of Chriſt with wicked hands; hath he not much more mercy and forgiveneſs for ſuch as love Chriſt, and are more afflicted for their ſin againſt him, than all the other troubles they have in the World? Doubt it not, but he that receives Enemies into his Boſom, will much more receive and embrace Children tho' offending ones.

How penſive do the dear Children of God ſometimes ſit, after their lapſes into ſin? Will God ever pardon this? Will he be reconciled again! May I hope his Face ſhall be to me as in former times? Penſive Soul, if thou didſt but know the largeneſs, tenderneſs, freeneſs of that Grace which yearns over Enemies; and hath given forth thouſands, and ten thouſands of Pardons to the worſt of ſinners; thou wouldſt not ſink at that rate.

Inference 2. Is there pardon with God for Enemies; how inexcuſable then are all they that perſiſt and periſh in their Enmity to Chriſt! Sure their deſtruction is of themſelves. Mercy is offered to them if they will receive it. Proclamation is made in the Goſpel, That if there (Iſa. 55. 7.) be any among the Enemies of Chriſt, who repent of what they have been, and done againſt him; and are now unfeignedly willing to be reconciled upon the word of a King, he ſhall find Mercy. But God ſhall wound the Head of his Enemies, and the hairy ſcalp of ſuch a one as goeth on ſtill in his treſpaſſes, Pſal. 68. 21. If he turn not, he will whet his ſword, he hath bent his bow and made it ready; he hath alſo prepared for him the inſtruments of death; he ordaineth his arrows againſt the perſecutors, Pſalm 7. 12.

This lays the Blood of every Man that periſhes in his enmity to Chriſt, at his own door. And vindicates the righteouſneſs of God in the ſevereſt ſtrokes of wrath upon them. This alſo will be a cutting thought to their hearts eternally. I might once have had pardon, and I refuſed it. The Goſpel-Trumpet ſounded a Parly. Fair and gracious Terms were offered, but I rejected them.

Eſt vindicta bonum vitâ jucundius ipsâ.

Inference 3. Is there mercy with God and forgiveneſs even for his worſt Enemies upon their ſubmiſſion, how unlike to God then are all implacable Spirits! Some there are that cannot bring their hearts to forgive an Enemy: To whom revenge is ſweeter than life, 1 Sam. 24. 16. If a man find his enemy, will he let him go? This is Hell-fire, a fire that never goeth out; how little do ſuch poor Creatures conſider, if God ſhould deal by them, as they do by others; what words could expreſs the miſery of their Condition! It's a ſad ſin, and a ſad ſign, a Character of a wretched ſtate, where ever it appears. Thoſe that have found mercy, ſhould be ready to ſhew mercy: and they that expect mercy themſelves, ſhould not deny it others.

This brings us upon the third and laſt Obſervation, viz.

Doct. 3. That to forgive Enemies, and beg forgiveneſs for them, is the true Character and Property of the Chriſtian Spirit.

Thus did Chriſt; Father, forgive them. And thus did Stephen in imitation of Chriſt, Acts 7. 59, 60. And they ſtoned Stephen, calling upon God, and ſaying, Lord Jeſus, receive my ſpirit: and he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this ſin to their charge. This ſuits with the rule of Chriſt, Matth. 5. 44, 45. But I ſay unto you, love your enemies, bleſs them that curſe you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you and perſecute you: That ye may be the children of God your Father which is in Heaven.

Here I ſhall firſt open the nature of this Duty, and ſhew you what a forgiving Spirit is; and then the excellency of it: How well it becomes all that call themſelves Chriſtians.

Firſt, Let us inquire what this Chriſtian forgiveneſs is. And that the nature of it may the better appear, I ſhall ſhew you both what it is not, and what it is.

Firſt, It conſiſts not in a ſtoical inſenſibility of wrongs and injuries. God hath not made Men as inſenſible ſtupid Blocks, that have no ſenſe or feeling of what is done to them. Nor hath he made a Law inconſiſtent with their very natures that are to be governed by it. But allows us a tender ſenſe of natural evils, though he will not allow us to revenge them by moral evils. Nay, the more deep and tender our reſentments of Wrongs and Injuries are, the more excellent is our forgiveneſs of them: So that a forgiving Spirit doth not exclude ſenſe of Injuries, but the ſenſe of Injuries graces the forgiveneſs of them.

Secondly, Chriſtian forgiveneſs is not a politick concealment of our wrath and revenge, becauſe it will be a reproach to diſcover it; or becauſe we want opportunity to vent it. This is carnal policy, not Chriſtian meekneſs. So far from being the mark of a gracious Spirit, that it's apparently the ſign of a vile nature. It is not Chriſtianity to repoſe, but depoſe Injuries.

Manet
poſtum.

Thirdly, Nor is it that moral Vertue, for which we are beholding to an eaſier and better Nature, and the help of moral Rules and Documents. There are certain Vertues attainable without the change of Nature, which they call Homilitical Vertues, becauſe they greatly adorn and beautifie Nature; ſuch as Temperance, Patience, Juſtice, &c. theſe are of ſingular uſe to conſerve Peace and Order in the World. And without them (as one aptly ſpeaks) the World would ſoon break up, and its civil Societies disband. But yet though theſe are the Ornaments of Nature, they do not argue the change of Nature. All Graces in the exerciſes of them, involve a reſpect to God. And for the being of them, they are not by natural acquiſition, but ſupernatural infuſion.

Fourthly, and laſtly, Chriſtian forgiveneſs is not an injurious giving up of our Rights and Properties, to the Luſts of every one that hath a mind to invade them. No; theſe we may lawfully defend and preſerve, and are bound ſo to do; though if we cannot defend them legally, we muſt not avenge our Wrongs unchriſtianly. This is not Chriſtian forgiveneſs. But then poſitively;

It is a Chriſtian lenity, or gentleneſs of mind; not retaining, but freely paſſing by the Injuries done to us; in Obedience to the Command of God.

It is a lenity, or gentleneſs of mind. The Grace of God demulces the angry Stomach; calms the tumultuous Paſſions; new moulds our ſowre Spirits, and makes them benign, gentle and eaſie to be intreated, Gal. 5. 22. The fruit of the ſpirit is love, joy, peace, long-ſuffering, gentleneſs, &c.

This gracious lenity inclines the Chriſtian to paſs by Injuries: So to paſs them by, as neither to retain them revengefully in the mind, or requite them when we have opportunity with the hand. Yea, and that freely, not by conſtraint, becauſe we cannot avenge our ſelves, but willingly. We abhor to do it when we can. So that as a carnal heart thinks revenge its glory, the gracious heart is content that forgiveneſs ſhould be his glory. I will be even with him, ſaith Nature. I will be above him, ſaith Grace. It is his glory to paſs over Tranſgreſſion, Prov. 19. 11.

And this it doth in Obedience to the command of God: Their own nature inclines them another way. The ſpirit that is in us luſteth to envy, but he giveth more grace, James 4. 5. It luſteth to revenge, but the fear of God repreſſes thoſe motions. Such Conſiderations as theſe, God hath forbidden me. Yea, and God hath forgiven me, as well as forbidden me; they prevail upon him, when nature urges to revenge the wrong. Be kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Chriſt's ſake, hath forgiven you, Eph. 4. 32. This is forgiveneſs in a Chriſtian ſenſe.

Secondly, And that this is excellent, and ſingularly becoming the Profeſſion of Chriſt, is evident. In as much as,

This ſpeaks your Religion excellent, that can mould your Hearts into that heavenly frame to which they are ſo averſe, yea contrarily diſpoſed by nature. It is the glory of Pagan Morality that it can abſcondere vitia, hide and cover Mens Luſts and Paſſions. But the glory of Chriſtianity lies in this, that it can abſcindere vitia, not hide, but deſtroy, and really mortifie the Luſts of Nature. Would Chriſtians but live up to the excellent Principles of their Religion, Chriſtianity ſhall be no more outvied by heatheniſh Morality. The greateſt Chriſtian ſhall be no more challenged to imitate Socrates, if he can. We ſhall utterly ſpoil that proud boaſt, That the Faith of Chriſtians is outdone by the Infidelity of Heathens. O Chriſtians, yield not the day to Heathens. Let all the World ſee the true greatneſs, heavenlineſs, and excellency of your repreſented Pattern; and by true mortification of your corrupt Natures, enforce an acknowledgment from the World, that a greater than Socrates is here. He that is really a meek, humble, patient, heavenly Chriſtian wins this glory to his Religion, that it can do more than all other Principles, and rules in the World. In nothing were the moſt accompliſhed Heathens more defective than this forgiving of Injuries. It was a thing they could not underſtand, or if they did, could never bring their Hearts to it; witneſs that Rule of their great Tully. It's the firſt Office of Juſtice (ſaith he) to hurt no Man, except firſt provoked by an Injury. The addition of that exception, ſpoiled his excellent Rule.

Non præſtat fides, quod præſtitit infidelitas. Cecilius in Minucius.

Veritas Chriſtianorum pulchrior eſt Helenâ Græcorum.

On which Rule Lactantius thus ſpeaks. O quam ſimplicem veramque ſententiam duorum verborum adjectione corrupit!

But now Chriſtianity teaches, and ſome Chriſtians have attained it, to receive evil, and return good, 1 Cor. 4. 12, 13. Being reviled, we bleſs; being perſecuted, we ſuffer it; being defamed, we intreat. This certainly is that Meekneſs wrought in us by the Wiſdom that is from above, Jam. 3. 17.

This makes a Man ſit ſure in the Conſciences of others, who with Saul muſt acknowledge, when they ſee themſelves ſo outdone, thou art more righteous than I, 1 Sam. 24. 16, 17. had we been ſo injured, and had ſuch opportunities to revenge them, we ſhould never have paſſed them by, as theſe Men did.

This impreſſes and ſtamps the very Image of God upon the Creature, and makes us like our heavenly Father who doth good to his Enemies, and ſends down ſhowers of outward Bleſſings upon them, that pour out floods of Wickedneſs daily to provoke him, Matth. 5. 44, 45. In a word, this Chriſtian temper of Spirit gives a Man the true poſſeſſion and enjoyment of himſelf. So that our Breaſts ſhall be as the pacifick Sea, ſmooth and pleaſant, when others are as the raging Sea, foaming, and caſting up mire and dirt.

Inference 1. Hence we clearly infer, That Chriſtian Religion exalted in its power, is the greateſt Friend to the Peace and Tranquillity of States and Kingdoms. Nothing is more oppoſite to the true Chriſtian Spirit, than implacable fierceneſs, ſtrife, revenge, tumults and uproars. It teaches Men to do good, and receive evil; to receive evil, and return good. The wiſdom that is from above, is firſt pure, then peaceable; gentle, and eaſie to be intreated: full of mercy, and good fruits; without partiality, and without hypocriſie: and the fruit of righteouſneſs is ſown in peace, of them that make peace, James 3. 17, 18.

The Church is a Dove for meekneſs, Cant. 6. 9. When the World grows full of ſtrife, Chriſtians then grow weary of the World; and ſigh out the Pſalmiſt's requeſt, O that I had the wings of a Dove, that I might fly away and be at reſt. Strigelius deſired to die, that he might be freed ab implacabilibus odiis theologorum, from the implacable ſtrifes of contending Divines.

The Rule by which they are to walk is, if it be poſſible as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Dearly beloved avenge not your ſelves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, vengeance is mine, I will repay it, ſaith the Lord, Rom. 12. 18, 19. It is not Religion, but Luſts that make the World ſo unquiet, Jam. 4. 1, 2. Not Godlineſs, but Wickedneſs that makes Men bite and devour one another. One of the firſt effects of the Goſpel is to civilize thoſe Places where it comes, and ſettle Order and Peace among Men. How great a miſtake and evil then is it to cry out, when Atheiſm and Irreligion have broken the civil Peace; this is the fruit of Religion; this is the effect of the Goſpel. Happy would it be, if Religion did more obtain in all Nations. It is the greateſt Friend in the World to their Tranquillity and Proſperity.

Inference 2. How dangerous a thing is it to abuſe and wrong meek and forgiving Chriſtians? Their patience and eaſineſs to forgive, often invites Injury, and incourages vile Spirits to inſult and trample upon them; but if Men would ſeriouſly conſider it, there's nothing in the World ſhould more ſcare and affright them from ſuch Practices than this. You may abuſe and wrong them, they muſt not avenge themſelves, nor repay evil for evil; true, but becauſe they do not, the Lord will; even the Lord to whom they commit the Matter; and he will do it to purpoſe, except ye repent. Be patient therefore, Brethren, unto the coming of the Lord, Jam. 5. 7. Will ye ſtand to that Iſſue? Had you rather indeed have to do with God than with Men? When the Jews put Chriſt to death, he committed himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly, 1 Pet. 2. 22, 23. And did that People get any thing by that? Did not the Lord ſeverely avenge the Blood of Chriſt on them and their Children? Yea, do not they, and their Children groan under the doleful effects of it to this day? If God undertakes (as he always doth) the cauſe of his abuſed, meek and peaceable People; he will be ſure to avenge it ſeven fold more than they could. His little Finger will be heavier than their Loins. You will get nothing by that.

Infer. 3. Laſtly, Let us all imitate our pattern Chriſt, and labour for meek forgiving Spirits. I ſhall only propoſe two inducements to it. The Honour of Chriſt, and your own Peace. Two dear things indeed, to a Chriſtian. His Glory is more than your Life, and all that you enjoy in this World. O do not expoſe it to the ſcorn and deriſion of his Enemies. Let them not ſay, how is Chriſt a Lamb, when his followers are Lions? How is the Church a Dove, that ſmites and ſcratches like a Bird of prey? Conſult alſo the quiet of your own Spirits. What is Life worth, without the comfort of Life? What comfort can you have in all that you do poſſeſs in the World, as long as you have not the poſſeſſion of your own Souls? If your Spirits be full of tumult and revenge, the Spirit of Chriſt will grow a ſtranger to you. That Dove delights in clean and quiet Breaſts. O then imitate Chriſt in this excellency alſo.

SERMON XXXI.

Serm. 31.

Opens the ſecond excellent word of Chriſt upon th Croſs

JOHN XIX. 27.

Then ſaith he to the Diſciple, Behold thy Mother.

WE now paſs to the Conſideration of the ſecond memorable and inſtructive Word of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs, contain'd in this Scripture. Wherein he hath left us an excellent Pattern for the diſcharge of our relative Duties. It may be well ſaid, the Goſpel makes the beſt Husbands and Wives, the beſt Parents and Children, the beſt Maſters and Servants in the World; ſeeing it furniſhes them with the moſt excellent Precepts, and propoſes the beſt Patterns. Here we have the Pattern of Jeſus Chriſt preſented to all gracious Children for their imitation, teaching them how to acquit themſelves towards their Parents, according to the Laws of Nature and Grace. Chriſt was not only ſubject and obedient to his Parents whilſt he lived, but manifeſted his tender Care even whilſt he hanged in the torments of death upon the Croſs. Then ſaith he to the Diſciple, Behold thy Mother.

The words contain an affectionate Recommendation of his diſtreſſed Mother, to the Care of a dear Diſciple, a boſom Friend; wherein let us conſider the Deſign, Manner, and Seaſon of this Recommendation.

Firſt, The Deſign and End of it, which doubtleſs was to manifeſt his tender Reſpects and Care for his Mother, who was now in a moſt diſtreſſed comfortleſs ſtate. For now was Simeon's Prophecy, Luke 2. 35. fulfilled, in the trouble and anguiſh that fill'd her Soul. Yea, a Sword alſo ſhall pierce through thine own Soul, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed. Her Soul was pierced for him, both as ſhe was his Mother, and as ſhe was a myſtical Member of him, her Head, her Lord. And therefore he commends her to the beloved Diſciple that lay in his Boſom, ſaying, Behold thy Mother, (i. e.) let her be to thee as thine own Mother. Let thy Love to me be now manifeſted in thy tender Care for her.

Secondly, The manner of his recommending her is both affectionate and mutual. It's very affectionate and moving, Behold thy Mother, q. d. John, I am now dying; leaving all humane Society and Relations; and entring into a new State, where neither the Duties of natural Relations are exerciſed, nor the Pleaſures and Comforts of them injoyed. It's a ſtate of Dominion over Angels and Men, not of ſubjection and obedience; this I now leave to thee. Upon thee do I devolve both the Honour and Duty of being in my ſtead and room to her, as to all dear and tender Care over her.

John, Behold thy Mother; and as its affectinate, ſo its mutual, verſe 26. And to his Mother he ſaid, Woman, behold thy Son; not Mother, but Woman, intimating not only the change of ſtate and conditions with him, but alſo the bequeſt he was making of her to the Diſciple with whom ſhe was to live as a Mother with a Son.

And all this he deſigns as a Pattern to others.

Thirdly, The ſeaſon or time when his Care for his Mother ſo eminently manifeſted it ſelf; was when his departure was at hand, and he could no longer be a comfort to her by his bodily preſence; yea, his Love and Care then manifeſted themſelves, when he was full of anguiſh to the very brim, both in his Soul and Body, yet all this makes him not in the leaſt unmindful of ſo dear a Relation. Hence the Doctrinal Note is,

Doct. That Chriſt's tender Care of his Mother, even in the time of his greateſt diſtreſs; is an excellent Pattern for all gracious Children to the end of the World.

There are three great Foundations or Bonds of relation on which all Family-government depends. Husbands and Wives, Parents and Children, Maſters and Servants. The Lord hath planted in the Souls of Men, Affections ſuitable to theſe Relations, and to his People, he hath given Grace to regulate thoſe Affections appointed, Duties to exerciſe thoſe Graces, and Seaſons to diſcharge thoſe Duties. So that as in the motion of a Wheel every Spoke takes its turn, and bears a ſtreſs; in like manner in the whole round of a Chriſtian's Converſation, every Affection, Grace, and Duty at one Seaſon or other comes to be exerciſed.

But yet Grace hath not ſo far prevailed in the ſanctification of any Man's Affections, but that there will be exceſſes or defects in the exerciſe of them towards our Relations, yea, and in this the moſt eminent Saints have been eminently defective. But the Pattern I ſet before you this day, is a perfect Pattern. As the Church finds him the beſt of Husbands, ſo to his Parents he was the beſt of Sons; and being the beſt and moſt perfect, is therefore the Rule and Meaſure of all others. Chriſt knew how thoſe Corruptions we draw from our Parents, are returned in their bitter Fruits upon them again to the wounding of their very Hearts, and therefore it pleaſed him to commend Obedience and Love to Parents in his own Example to us.

Optimus in unoquoque genere eſt regula & menſura cæterorum.

It was anciently a Proverb among the Heathen, in ſola Sparta, expedit ſeneſcere, It's good to be an old Man or Woman only in Sparta. The ground of it was the ſtrict Laws that were among the Spartans to puniſh the rebellions and diſobedience of Children to their aged Parents. And ſhall it not be good to be an old Father or Mother in England, where the Goſpel of Chriſt is preached, and ſuch an Argument as this now ſet before you urged; an Argument which the Heathen World was never acquainted with? Shall Parents here be forced to complain with the Eagle in the Fable, that they are ſmitten to the Heart, by an Arrow winged with their own Feathers. Or as a Tree rived in pieces by the Wedges that were made of its own Body? God forbid.

To prevent ſuch ſad occaſions of Complaints as theſe, I deſire all that ſuſtain the relation of Children, into whoſe hands Providence ſhall caſt this Diſcourſe, ſeriouſly to ponder this Example of Chriſt, propoſed for their imitation in this Point. Wherein we ſhall firſt conſider what Duties belong to the relation of Children: Secondly, how Chriſt's Example enforces thoſe Duties, and then ſuitably apply it.

Firſt, Let us examine what Duties pertain to the relation of Children. And they are as truly as commonly branched out into the following Particulars.

Firſt, Fear and Reverence are due from Children to their Parents, by the expreſs Command of God, Lev. 19. 3. Ye ſhall fear every Man his Mother and his Father. The Holy Ghoſt purpoſely inverts the Order, and puts the Mother firſt, becauſe ſhe by reaſon of her blandiſhments, and fond indulgence is moſt ſubject to the irreverence and contempt of Children. God hath cloathed Parents with his Authority. They are intruſted by God with them, and are accountable to him for the Souls and Bodies of their Children. And he expects that you reverence them, although in reſpect of outward Eſtate, or Honour, you be never ſo much above them. Joſeph, though Lord of Egypt, bowed down before his aged Father, with his Face to the Earth, Gen. 48. 12. Solomon, the moſt magnificent and glorious King that ever ſway'd a Scepter, when his Mother came to ſpeak with him for Adonijah, he roſe up to meet her, and bowed himſelf to her, and cauſed a Seat to be ſet for the King's Mother, and ſet her upon his right hand, 2 Kings 2. 19.

Secondly, Dear and tender Love is due from Children to their Parents. And to ſhew how ſtrong and dear that Love ought to be, it's joined with the Love you have for your own Lives. As appears in that Injunction to deny both for Chriſt's ſake, Math. 10. 37. The Bonds of Nature are ſtrong and direct betwixt Parents and Children. What is a Child but a Piece of the Parent wrapt up in another Skin? O the Care, the Coſt, the Pity, the Tenderneſs, the Pains, the Fears they have expreſt for you. It's worſe than Heatheniſh Ingratitude, not to return Love for Love. This filial Love is not only in it ſelf a Duty, but to be the Root or Spring of all your Duties to them.

Thirdly, Obedience to their Commands is due to them, by the Lord's ſtrict and ſpecial Command, Eph. 6. 1. Children obey your Parents in the Lord, for this is right; Honour thy Father and thy Mother, which is the firſt Commandment with promiſe. Filial Obedience is not only founded upon the poſitive Law of God, but alſo upon the Law of Nature. For though the Subjection of Servants to Maſters came in by Sin, yet the Subjection of Children to Parents is due to them by natural Right, therefore ſaith the Apoſtle, This is right, (i. e.) right both according to natural and poſitive Law. However, this Subjection and Obedience is not abſolute and univerſal. God hath not diveſted himſelf of his own Authority, to cloath a Parent with it. Your Obedience to them muſt be in the Lord, (i. e.) in ſuch things as they require you to do in the Lord's Authority. In things conſonant to that divine and holy Will, to which they, as well as you, muſt be ſubject; and therein you muſt obey them. Yea, even the Wickedneſs of a Parent exempts not from Obedience, where his command is not ſo. Nor on the other ſide, muſt the Holineſs of a Parent ſway you, where his Commands and God's are oppoſite. In the former caſe, the Canoniſts have determined, that the Command muſt be diſtinguiſh'd from the Perſon. In the latter, it's a good Rule. My Parents muſt be loved, but my God muſt be preferred.

Officium à perſona diſcernendum. Amandus genitor, ſed præponendus Creator.

Yield your ſelves therefore chearfully to obey all that which they lawfully enjoin, and take heed that black Character, fixed on the Heathens, who know not God, be not found upon you, diſobedience to Parents, Rom. 1. 30. Remember, your Diſobedience to their juſt Commands riſes higher, much higher, than an Affront to their Perſons and Authority; it's Diſobedience to God himſelf whoſe Commands ſecond, and ſtrengthen theirs upon you.

Fourthly, Submiſſion to their Diſcipline, and rebukes, is alſo your Duty, Heb. 12. 9. We had Fathers of our own fleſh that corrected us, and we gave them reverence. Parents ought not to abuſe their Authority. Cruelty in them is a great Sin, but Wrath and Rebellion in a Child, againſt his Parents, is monſtrous. It's ſtoried of Ælian, that having been abroad, at his return, his Father asked him what he had learned ſince he went from him; he anſwer'd, you will know ſhortly. I have learned to bear your Anger quietly, and ſubmit to what you pleaſe to inflict. Two Conſiderations ſhould eſpecially mould others into the like Frame, eſpecially to their godly Parents. The end for which, and the manner in which they manifeſt their Anger to their Children. Their end is to ſave your Souls from Hell. They judge it better for you to hear the Voice of their Anger, than the terrible Voice of the Wrath of God. To feel their Hand than his. They know if you fall into the Hands of the living God, you will be handled in another manner.

Sævitia patris in filios grave peccatum, ſed ira filii in patrem, grave monſtrum.

And for the manner, in which they rebuke and chaſten, it is with Grief in their Hearts, and Tears in their Eyes. Alas, it's no delight to them to croſs, vex, or afflict you. Were it not meer Conſcience of their Duty to God, and tender Love to your Souls, they would neither chide nor ſmite. And when they do, how do they afflict themſelves, in afflicting you! When their Faces are full of Anger, their Bowels are full of Compaſſion for you; and you have no more reaſon to blame them for what they do, than if they cry out, and violently ſnatch at you, when they ſee you ready to fall from the top of a Rock.

Fifthly, Faithfulneſs to all their Intereſts due to them by the natural and poſitive Law of God. What in you lies, you are bound to promote, not to waſte and ſcatter their Subſtance. To aſſiſt, not to defraud them. Whoſo robbeth his Father or Mother, and ſaith, it is no Tranſgreſſion, the ſame is a Companion of a Deſtroyer, Pro. 28. 24. This, ſaith one, as far excels your wronging another as Parricide is a greater Crime than Man-ſlaughter, or as Reuben's Inceſt, was beyond common Fornication. God never meant you ſhould grow up about your Parents as Suckers about a Tree to impoveriſh the Root. But for a Child, out of a covetouſneſs after what his Parents have, ſecretly to wiſh their death, is a Sin ſo monſtrous, as ſhould not be once named, much leſs found, among Perſons profeſſing Chriſtianity. To deſire their death, from whom you had your life, is unnatural Wickedneſs, to diſpoſe of their Goods, much more of your ſelves without their Conſent is (ordinarily) the greateſt injuſtice to them. Children are obliged to defend the Eſtates and Perſons of their Parents with the hazard of their own. As Arrows are in the hand of a mighty Man, ſo are Children of the youth. Happy is the Man that hath his Quiver full of them. They ſhall not be aſhamed, but they ſhall ſpeak with the Enemy in the Gates, Pſal. 127. 5.

Filius ante diem patrios inquirit in annos.

Sixthly, And more eſpecially, requital of all that Love, Care, and Pains they have been at for you, is your Duty ſo far as God inables you, and thoſe things are requitable, 1 Tim. 5. 4. Let them learn to ſhew piety at home, and to requite their parents. The word is ἀντιπελαργεῖν and ſignifies to play the Stork, to Imitate that Creature of whom it's ſaid, that the young do tenderly feed the old ones, when they are no longer able to fly abroad and provide for themſelves. Hence thoſe that want Bowels of natural Affection to their Relations, are ſaid to be ἄστοργοι, Rom. 1. 30. worſe than Storks. O 'tis a ſhame that Birds and Beaſts ſhould ſhew more Tenderneſs to their Dams, than Children to their Parents.

It's a ſaying frequent among the Jews, A Child ſhould rather labour at the Mili than ſuffer his Parents to want. And to the ſame ſenſe is that other ſaying, Your Parents muſt be ſupplied by you, if you have it; if not, you ought to beg for them, rather than ſee them periſh. It was both the comfort and honour of Joſeph, that God made him an Inſtrument of ſo much ſuccour and comfort to his aged Father, and diſtreſſed Family, Gen. 47. 13. And you are alſo to know, that what you do for them, is not in the way of an Alms, or common Charity. For the Apoſtle ſaith, it is but your requiting them, and that's Juſtice, not Charity. And it can never be a full requital. Indeed the Apoſtle tells us, 2 Cor. 12. 14. That Parents lay up for their Children, and not Children for the Parents, and ſo they ought, but ſure, if Providence blaſt them, and bleſs you, an honourable Maintenance is their due. Even Chriſt himſelf took care for his Mother.

Secondly, You have had a brief Account of the Duties of this Relation, next let us conſider how Chriſt's Example, who was ſo ſubject to them in his Life, Luke 2. 51. and ſo careful to provide at his death, enforces all thoſe Duties upon Children, eſpecially upon gracious Children. And this it doth two ways, both as it hath the obliging Power of a Law; and as he himſelf will one day ſit in Judgment to take an account how we have imitated him in theſe Things.

Firſt, Chriſt's Example in this hath the Force and Power of a Law, yea, a Law of Love, or a Law lovingly conſtraining you to an imitation of him. If Chriſt himſelf will be your Pattern. If God will be pleaſed to take Relations like yours, and go before you in the diſcharge of your relative Duties; oh how much are you obliged to imitate him and tread in all his Footſteeps! This was by him intended as a Preſident or Pattern to facilitate and direct your Duties.

Secondly, He will come to take an account how you have anſwered the Pattern of Obedience, and tender Care he ſet before you in the days of his Fleſh. What will the Diſobedient plead in that day? He that heard the Groans of an afflicted Father or Mother, will now come to reckon with the Diſobedient Child for them. And the glorious Example of Chriſt's own Obedience and Tenderneſs of his Relations, will in that day condemn and aggravate, ſilence and ſhame ſuch wretched Children, as ſhall ſtand guilty before his Bar.

Inference 1. Hath Jeſus Chriſt given ſuch a famous Pattern of Obedience and Tenderneſs to Parents. Then there can be nothing of Chriſt in ſtubborn, rebellious, and careleſs Children, that regard not the good or comfort of their Parents. The Children of Diſobedience cannot be the Children of God. If Providence direct this to the Hand of any that are ſo, my Heart's Deſire and Prayer for them is, that the Lord would ſearch their Souls by it, and diſcover their Evils to them; whileſt they ſhall read the following Queries.

Firſt Query, Have you not been guilty of ſlighting your Parents by irreverent Words or Carriages; the old Man or Woman. To ſuch I commend the Conſideration of that Scripture, Prov. 30. 17. which methinks ſhould be to them as the Hand-writing that appear'd upon the Plaiſter of the Wall, to Belteſhazar. The eye that mocketh at his Father, and deſpiſeth to obey his Mother: The Ravens of the Valley ſhall pick it out, and the young Eagles ſhall eat it. That is, they ſhall be brought to an untimely end, and the Birds of the Air ſhall eat that Eye, that had never ſeen but for that Parent that was deſpiſed by it.

It may be you are vigorous and young, they decayed, and wrinkled with Age. But ſaith the Holy Ghoſt, Deſpiſe not thy Mother when ſhe is old, Prov. 23. 22. Or when ſhe is wrinkled, as the Hebrew ſignifies. It may be you are rich, they poor; own and honour them in their Poverty, and deſpiſe them not. God will requite it with his hand if you do.

Second Query, Have you not been Diſobedient to the Commands of Parents? A Son of Belial is a Son of Wrath, if God give not Repentance to Life. Is not this the black Brand ſet upon the Heathens, Rom. 1. 30. Have not many repented this upon a Ladder, with an Halter about their Necks? Wo to him that makes a Father or Mother, complain as the Tree in the Fable, that they are cloven aſunder with the Wedges that are cut out of their own Bodies.

Third Query, Have you not riſen up rebelliouſly againſt, and hated your Parents for chaſtening your Bodies, to ſave your Souls from Hell? Some Children (ſaith one) will not take that from a Parent, which Beaſts, yea, and Salvage Beaſts too; Bears and Lyons will take from their Keepers. What is this but to reſiſt an Ordinance of God for your Good? And in rebelling againſt them to rebel againſt the Lord? Well if they do not, God will take the Rod into his own Hand; and him you ſhall not reſiſt.

Fourth Query, Have you not been unjuſt to your Parents, and defrauded them? Firſt help to make them poor, and then depiſe them becauſe they are poor. O horrid Wickedneſs! What a complicated Evil is this! Thou art in the Language of the Scripture a Companion with Deſtroyers, Prov. 28. 24. This is the worſt of Theft in God's Account. You think you may make bold with them, but how bold do you make with Conſcience, and the Command of God?

Fifth Query, Are you not, or have you not been ungrateful to Parents? Leaving them to ſhift for themſelves in thoſe Straights you have help'd to bring them into. O conſider it, Children, this is an Evil which God will ſurely avenge, except ye repent. What! to be hardned againſt thine own Fleſh! To be cruel to thine own Parents, that with ſo much Tenderneſs fed thee, when elſe thou had'ſt periſhed! I remember Luther gives us a Story of one (and oh that it might be a warning to all that hear it) who having made over all he had to his Son, reſerving only a maintenance for himſelf; at laſt his Son deſpiſed him, and grudg'd him the very Meat he eat; and one day the Father coming in when the Son and his Wife were at Dinner upon a Gooſe, they ſhuffled the Meat under the Table: But ſee the remarkable Vengeance of God, upon this ungracious, unnatural Son; the Gooſe was turn'd into a monſtrous Toad which ſeiz'd upon this vile Wretch and kill'd him. If any of you be guilty of theſe Evils, to humble you for them, and reclaim them from you, I deſire theſe ſix Conſiderations may be laid to heart.

Firſt, That the Effects of your Obedience, or Diſobedience will ſtick upon you and yours to many Generations. If you be obedient Children in the Lord, both you and yours may reap the Fruits of that your Obedience in multitudes of ſweet Mercies for many Generations. So runs the Promiſe, Eph. 6. 23. Honour thy Father and Mother, which is the firſt commandment with promiſe, that it may be well with thee, and thou mayeſt live long on the earth. You know what an Eye of Favour God caſt upon the Recabites for this, Jer. 35. 8. from the 14th to the 20th Verſe: And as his Bleſſings are by promiſe entailed on the Obedient, ſo his Curſe upon the Diſobedient, Prov. 20. 20. Whoſo curſeth his Father or his Mother; his Lamp ſhall be put out in obſcure darkneſs; (i. e.) the Lamp of his Life quench'd by Death, yea, ſay others, and his Soul alſo by the blackneſs of darkneſs in Hell.

Secondly, Though other Sins do, this Sin ſeldom eſcapes exemplary Puniſhment, even in this World. Our Engliſh Hiſtory tells us of a Yeoman of Leiceſterſhire, who had made over all he had to his Son, to prefer him in Marriage, reſerving only a bare maintenance at his Son's Table. Afterward upon ſome diſcontent, the Son bid his Father get out of his Houſe. The next day Mr. Goodman the Miniſter of the Pariſh, meeting the young Man, walking about his Ground, asked him how he did, he anſwered, very well; but before the Miniſter was gone far from him, his Bowels fell out, which he carried in his Hands, got to his Houſe, ſent for Mr. Goodman, bitterly bewailed his Sin againſt his Father, and ſo died. And Dr. Taylor in his great Exemplar tells us of another, that upon diſcontent with his Father, wiſh'd the Houſe might be on fire, if ever he came any more into his Father's Houſe. Afterwards coming in, it was fired indeed, and the wicked Son only conſumed. I could multiply Inſtances of this nature. (for indeed the righteous Judgment of God hath multiplied them) But this only for a taſte.

Thirdly, Heathens will riſe up in Judgment againſt you, and condemn you. They never had ſuch Precepts, nor Preſidents as you, and yet ſome of the better natured Heathens would have rather choſen death, than to do as you do. You remember the Story of Cræſus his dumb Son, whoſe dear Affections could make him ſpeak when he ſaw Cræſus in danger; though he never ſpake before, yet then he could cry out, O do not kill my Father! But what ſpeak I of Heathens, the Stork in the Heavens, yea, the Beaſts of the Earth will condemn the Diſobedience of Children.

Fourthly, Theſe are Sins inconſiſtent with the true fear of God, in whomſoever they are found. That a Man is indeed, which he is in his Family, and among his Relations. He that is a bad Child, can never be a good Chriſtian. Either bring Teſtimonials of your Godlineſs from your Relations, or it may be well ſuſpected to be no better than Counterfeit. Never talk of your Obedience to God, whil'ſt your Diſobedience to the juſt Commands of Parents gives you the lie.

Fifthly, A parting time is coming, when Death will break up the Family; and when that time comes, oh how bitter will the remembrance of theſe Things be! When you ſhall ſee a Father or a Mother lying by the Wall, what a cut will it be to remember your Miſcarriages and Evils? They are gone out of your reach, you cannot now if you would give them any Satisfaction for what you have done againſt them; but oh how bitter will the remembrance of theſe Things be, at ſuch a time! ſurely this will be more inſupportable to you than their death, if the Lord open your Eyes and give you Repentance; and if not, then, How true

Sixthly, What a terrible thing will it be to have a Father or Mother come in as Witneſſes againſt you at Chriſt's Bar? As well as they loved you, and as dear as you were to them in this World, they muſt give evidence againſt you then. Now what a fearful thing is it for you but to imagine your Parents to come before the Lord, and ſay, Lord I have given this Child many hundred Reproofs for Sin; I have counſelled, perſuaded, and uſed all means to reclaim him, but in vain; he was a Child of Diſobedience, nothing could work upon him! What think you of this?

Inference 2. Have you ſuch a Pattern of Obedience and tender Love to Parents, then Children imitate your pattern, as it becomes Chriſtians; and take Chriſt for your example. Whatſoever your Parents be, ſee that you carry it towards them becoming ſuch as profeſs Chriſt.

Firſt, If your Parents be godly, O beware of grieving them by any unbecoming Carriage. Art thou a Chriſtian indeed, thou wilt then reckon thy ſelf obliged in a double Bond, both of Grace and Nature to them. O what a mercy would ſome Children eſteem it, if they had Parents that feared the Lord, as you have!

Secondly, If they be carnal, walk circumſpectly, in the moſt preciſe and punctual diſcharge of your Duties; for how know'ſt thou, O Child, but hereby thou may'ſt win thy Parents? would'ſt thou but humbly and ſeriouſly intreat, and perſuade them to mind the ways of Holineſs; ſpeaking to them at fit Seaſons, with all imaginable Humility and Reverence; inſinuating your Device to Duties, or Trouble for their Evils rather by relating ſome pertinent Hiſtory, or propoſing ſome excellent example; ample; leaving their own Conſcience to draw the Concluſion, and make Application, than to do it your ſelves: It's poſſible they may ponder your words in their Hearts, as Mary did Chriſt, Luke 2. 49, 51. And would you but back all this with your earneſt Cries to Heaven for them, and your own daily example, that they may have nothing from your ſelves to retort upon you; and thus wait with patience for the deſired effect: O what bleſſed Inſtruments might you be of their everlaſting good!

Inference 3. To conclude, Let thoſe that have ſuch Children as fear the Lord, and endeavour to imitate Chriſt in thoſe Duties, account them a ſingular Treaſure and Heritage from the Lord, and give them all due encouragement to their Duties.

How many have no Children at all, but are as a dry Tree! And how many have ſuch as are worſe than none? The very reproaches, and break-hearts of their Parents; that bring down their hoary Heads with ſorrow to the Grave.

If God have given you the Bleſſing of godly Children, you can never be ſufficiently ſenſible of, or thankful for ſuch a favour. O that ever God ſhould honour you to bring forth Children for Heaven! What a comfort muſt this be to you, what ever other Troubles you meet with abroad; when you come home among godly Relations, that are careful to ſweeten your own Family to you by their Obedience? Eſpecially what a comfort is it when you come to die, that you leave them within the Covenant! Entitled to Chriſt, and ſo need not be anxious how it ſhall be with them when you are gone. Take heed of diſcouraging, or damping ſuch Children from whom ſo much glory is like to riſe to God, and ſo much comfort to your ſelves. Thus let Chriſt's Pattern be improved, who went before you in ſuch eminent Holineſs in all his Relations, and left you an example that you ſhould follow in his ſteps.

Serm. 32. Opens the third of Chriſt's laſt words upon the Croſs.

SERMON XXXII.

LUKE XXIII. 43.

And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Verily I ſay unto thee, to day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe.

IN this Scripture you have the third excellent Saying of Chriſt upon the Croſs, expreſſing the riches of free Grace to the penitent Thief. A Man that had ſpent his Life in wickedneſs, and for his Wickedneſs was now to loſe his Life. His practice had been vile and profane; but now his Heart was broken for it; he proves a Convert, yea, the firſt Fruits of the Blood of the Croſs. In the former Verſe he manifeſts his Faith, Lord remember me when thou comeſt into thy Kingdom. In this Chriſt manifeſts his Pardon and gracious Acceptance of him; Verily I ſay unto thee, to day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe. In which Promiſe are conſiderable, the Matter of it, the Perſon to whom it is made, the Time ſet for its performance, and the Confirmation of it for his full ſatiſfaction.

Firſt, The Matter or Subſtance of the Promiſe made by Chriſt, viz. That he ſhall be with him in Paradiſe. By Paradiſe he means Heaven it ſelf, which is here ſhadowed to us by a place of Delight and Pleaſure. This is the Receptacle of gracious Souls when ſeparated from their Bodies. And that Paradiſe ſignifies Heaven it ſelf, and not a third place, as ſome of the Fathers fondly imagine, is evident from, 2 Cor. 12. 2, 4. where the Apoſtle calls the ſame place by the names of the third Heaven, and the Paradiſe. This is the place of Bleſſedneſs, deſigned for the People of God: So you find, Rev. 2. 7. To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midſt of the paradiſe of God; (i. e.) to have the fulleſt and moſt intimate Communion with Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven. And this is the Subſtance of Chriſt's Promiſe to the Thief. Thou (i. e.) thou in Spirit, or thou in thy nobleſt part, thy Soul; which here bears the name of the whole Perſon; Thou ſhalt be with me in Paradiſe.

Secondly, The Perſon to whom Chriſt makes this excellent and glorious Promiſe. It was to one that had lived lewdly and profanely; a very vile and wretched Man in all the former part of his Time, and for his Wickedneſs now juſtly under Condemnation. Yea, to one that had reviled Chriſt, after that Sentence was executed on him. However, now at laſt the Lord gave him a penitent believing Heart. Now, almoſt at laſt gaſp, he is ſoundly in an extraordinary way converted, and being converted, he owns and profeſſes Chriſt amidſt all the ſhame and reproach of his death. Vindicates his Innocency, and humbly ſupplicates for Mercy; Lord, remember me when thou comeſt into thy Kingdom.

Thirdly, The ſet Time for the performance of this gracious Promiſe to him. To day; this very day ſhalt thou be with me in Glory.

Not after the Reſurrection, but immediately from the time of thy Diſſolution thou ſhalt enjoy Bleſſedneſs. And here I cannot but detect the Cheat of thoſe that deny an immediate ſtate of Glory to Believers after death. Who (to the end this Scripture might not ſtand in full oppoſition to their as uncomfortable, as unſound Opinion) looſe the whole frame of it, by drawing one Pin; yea, by tranſpoſing but a Comma, putting it at the word day, which ſhould be at the word thee, and ſo reading it thus, Verily I ſay unto thee to day, referring the word day to the time that Chriſt made the Promiſe, and not to the time of its performance. But if ſuch a liberty as this be yielded, what may not Men make the Scriptures ſpeak? There can be no doubt, but Chriſt in this Expreſſion, fixes the Time for his Happineſs: To day ſhalt thou be with me.

Thirdly, and laſtly, You have here the Confirmation and Seal of his moſt comfortable Promiſe to him, with Chriſt's ſolemn Aſſeveration: Verily I ſay unto thee. Higher Security cannot be given. I that am able to perform what I promiſe, and have not out-promiſed my ſelf; for Heaven and the Glory thereof are mine. I that am faithful and true to my Promiſes, and never crack'd or ſtrained my Credit with any; I ſay it, I ſolemnly confirm it; Verily I ſay unto thee, to day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe. Hence we have three plain obvious Truths, for our Inſtruction and Conſolation.

Doct. 1. That there is a future eternal ſtate, into which Souls paſs at death.

Doct. 2. That all Believers are at their death immediately received into a ſtate of Glory, and eternal Happineſs.

Doct. 3. That God may, though he ſeldom doth, prepare Men for this Glory, immediately before their diſſolution by Death.

Theſe are the uſeful Truths reſulting from this remarkable Word of Chriſt, to the penitent Thief. We will conſider and improve them in the Order propoſed.

Doct. 1. That there is a future eternal State, into which Souls paſs at death.

This is a principal Foundation-ſtone to the hopes and happineſs of Souls. And ſeeing our hopes muſt needs be as their foundation and ground-work is; I ſhall briefly eſtabliſh this Truth by theſe five Arguments. The Being of a God evinces it; the Scriptures of Truth plainly reveal it; the Conſciences of all Men have reſentments of it; the Incarnation and death of Chriſt is but a vanity without it; and the Immortality of humane Souls plainly diſcovers it.

Arg. 1. The Being of a God undeniably evinces a future State for humane Souls after this Life. For, if there be a God who rules the World which he hath made, he muſt rule it by Rewards and Puniſhments, equally and righteouſly diſtributed to good and bad. Putting a difference betwixt the obedient and diſobedient; the righteous and the wicked. To make a Species of Creatures capable of moral Government, and not to rule them at all; is to make them in vain, and inconſiſtent with his Glory who is the laſt End of all Things. To rule them, but not ſuitable to their Natures, conſiſts not with that infinite Wiſdom from which their Beings proceeded, and by which their Workings are ruled and ordered. To rule them, in a way ſuitably to their Natures, viz. by Rewards and Puniſhments, and not to perform, or execute them at all, is utterly incongruous with the Veracity and Truth of him that cannot Lye. This were to impoſe the greateſt Cheat in the World upon Men; and can never proceed from the Holy and True God. So then, as he hath made a rational ſort of Creatures, capable of moral Government by Rewards and Puniſhments; ſo he rules them in that way which is ſuitable to their Natures, promiſing it ſhall be well with the righteous, and ill with the wicked. Theſe Promiſes and Threatnings can be no cheat, meerly intended to ſcare and fright, where there is no danger; or encourage, where there is no real benefit: but what he promiſes, or threatens, muſt be accompliſhed, and every Word of God take place, and be fulfilled. But it's evident that no ſuch diſtinction is made by the Providence of God, (at leaſt ordinarily and generally) in this life: but all things come alike to all: and as with the righteous, ſo with the wicked. Yea, here it goes ill with them that fear God, they are oppreſſed. They receive their evil things, and wicked Men their good. Therefore we conclude, the righteous Judge of the whole Earth, will in another World, recompence to every one according as his Work ſhall be.

Arg. 2. Secondly, And as the very Being of God evinces it, ſo the Scriptures of truth plainly reveal it. Theſe Scriptures are the Pandect, or Syſtem of the Laws, for the government of Men; which the wiſe and holy Ruler of the World, hath enacted and ordained for that purpoſe. And in them we find Promiſes made to the Righteous, of a full Reward for all their obedience, patience and ſufferings in the next Life, or coming World. And threatnings made againſt the wicked, of eternal wrath and anguiſh, as the juſt recompence of their ſin, in Hell for ever, Rom. 2. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. Thou treaſureſt up to thy ſelf wrath, againſt the day of wrath; and revelation of the righteous Judgment of God. Who ſhall render to every man according to his deeds. To them who by patient continuance in well doing, ſeek for glory, and honour, and immortality, eternal life: but unto them that are contentious, and obey not the truth, but obey unrighteouſneſs; indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguiſh upon every ſoul of Man that doth evil, &c. So 2 Theſſ. 1. 4, 5, 6, 7. So that we our ſelves glory in you, in the Churches of God, for your patience, and faith in all your perſecutions and tribulations, that ye endure. Which is [a manifeſt token] of the righteous Judgment of God. That ye may be counted worthy of the Kingdom of God, for which ye alſo ſuffer. Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompence tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled reſt with us, when the Lord Jeſus ſhall be revealed from Heaven in flaming fire, &c. To theſe plain Teſtimonies, multitudes more might be added, if it were needful. Heaven and Earth ſhall paſs away, but theſe words ſhall never paſs away.

Arg. 3. Thirdly, As the Scriptures reveal it, ſo the Conſciences of all men, have ſome reſentments of it. Where is the Man whoſe Conſcience never felt any impreſſions of hope, or fear from a future World? If it be ſaid theſe may be but the effects and force of diſcourſe, or education; we have read ſuch things in the Scriptures, or have heard it by Preachers; and ſo raiſe up to our ſelves hopes, and fears about it. I demand, how the Conſciences of the Heathens, who have neither Scriptures nor Preachers, came to be impreſt with theſe things. Doth not the Apoſtle tell us, Rom. 2. 15. That their Conſciences in the mean while work upon theſe things? Their thoughts with reference to a future ſtate accuſe, or elſe excuſe, (i. e.) their hearts are cheared and encouraged by the good they do, and terrified with fears about the evils they commit. Whereas, if there were no ſuch things, Conſcience would neither accuſe, nor excuſe for good, or evil done in this World.

Arg. 4. Fourthly, The incarnation and death of Chriſt, is but a vanity without it. What did he propoſe to himſelf, or what benefit have we by his coming; if there be no ſuch future ſtate? Did he take our nature, and ſuffer ſuch terrible things in it for nothing? If you ſay Chriſtians have much comfort from it in this Life. I anſwer, the comforts they have are raiſed by faith and expectation of the happineſs to be enjoyed as the purchaſe of his blood in Heaven. And if there be no ſuch Heaven to which they are appointed; no Hell from which they are redeemed, they do but comfort themſelves with a Fable, and bleſs themſelves with a thing of nought. Their comfort is no greater than the comfort of a Beggar, that dreams he is a King, and when he awakes, finds himſelf a Beggar ſtill. Surely the ends of Chriſt's death were to deliver us from the wrath to come, 1 Theſ. 1. 10. Not from an imaginary, but a real Hell, to bring us to God, 1 Pet. 3. 18. To be the Author of eternal Salvation to them that obey him, Heb. 5. 9.

Arg. 5. Fifthly, and laſtly, The immortality of humane Souls puts it beyond all doubt. The Soul of a Man, vaſtly differs from that of a Beaſt; which is but a material form, and ſo wholly depending on, muſt needs periſh with the Matter. But it is not ſo with us. Ours are reaſonable Spirits, that can live and act in a ſeparated ſtate from the Body, Eccleſ. 3. 21. Who knoweth the ſpirit of man that goeth upward, and the ſpirit of a beaſt that goeth downward to the earth. So that look as if a Man diſpute whether Man be rational, that his very diſputing it, proves him to be ſo; ſo our diſputes, hopes, fears, and apprehenſions of eternity, prove our Souls immortal, and capable of that ſtate.

Inference 1. Is there an Eternal State into which Souls paſs after this Life. How precious then is preſent time, upon the improvement whereof that State depends! O what a huge weight hath God hanged upon a ſmall wier! God hath ſet us here in a State of Trial; according as we improve theſe few hours, ſo will it fare with us to all Eternity. Every day, every hour, nay every moment of your preſent time hath an influence into your Eternity. Do ye believe this? What, and yet ſquander away precious time ſo careleſly, ſo vainly? How do theſe things conſiſt? When Seneca heard one promiſe to ſpend a Week with a Friend that invited him, to recreate himſelf with him; he told him, he admired he ſhould make ſuch a raſh promiſe; what (ſaid he) caſt away ſo conſiderable a part of your Life? How can you do it! Surely our Prodigality in the expence of time, argues we have but little ſenſe of great Eternity.

Ab hoc momento pendet æternitas.

Infer. 2. How rational are all the difficulties and ſeverities of Religion, which ſerve to promote and ſecure a future eternal Happineſs? So vaſt is the diſproportion betwixt Time and Eternity, things ſeen, and not ſeen as yet, the preſent vaniſhing, and future permanent ſtate, that he can never be juſtly reputed a wiſe Man, that will not let go the beſt enjoyment he hath on Earth, if it ſtand in the way of his eternal Happineſs. Nor can that Man ever eſcape the juſt Cenſure of notorious Folly, who for the gratifying of his Appetite, and preſent accommodation of his Fleſh, lets go an eternal Glory in Heaven. Darius repented heartily that he loſt a Kingdom for a draught of Water. O, ſaid he, for how ſhort a Pleaſure have I ſold a Kingdom! It was Moſes's Choice, and his Choice argued his Wiſdom; he choſe rather to ſuffer afflictions with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleaſures of ſin, which are but for a ſeaſon, Heb. 11. 25. Men do not account him a Fool, that will adventure a Penny, upon a probability to gain ten thouſand pounds. But ſure the diſproportion betwixt Time and Eternity is much greater.

Inference 3. If there certainly be ſuch an Eternal State, into which Souls paſs immediately after Death; How great a change then doth Death make upon every Man and Woman! O what a ſerious thing is it to die! It's your paſſage out of the ſwift River of Time, into the boundleſs and bottomleſs Ocean of Eternity. You that now converſe with ſenſible Objects, with Men and Women like your ſelves, enter then into the World of Spirits. You that now ſee the continual Revolutions of Days and Nights, paſſing away one after another, will then be fix'd in a perpetual NOW. O what a ſerious thing is Death! You throw a Caſt for Eternity, when you die. If you were to caſt a Dye for your natural Life, oh how would your hand ſhake with fear, how it would fall? but what is that to this?

Serious indeed

The Souls of Men are as it were aſleep now in their Bodies; at Death they awake, and find themſelves in the World of Realities. Let this teach you both how to carry your ſelves toward dying Perſons when you viſit them; and to make every day ſome Proviſion for that hour your ſelves. Be ſerious, be plain, be faithful with others that are ſtepping into Eternity; be ſo with your own Souls every day. O remember what a long word, what an amazing thing Eternity is. Eſpecially conſidering, Doct. 2. That all Believers are at their death, immediately received into a State of Glory and eternal Happineſs.

This day ſhalt thou be with me.

This the Atheiſt denies; he thinks he ſhall die, and therefore reſolves to live as the Beaſts that periſh. Beryllus and ſome others after him, taught, that there was indeed a future State of Happineſs and Miſery for Souls, but that they paſs not into it immediately upon Death and Separation from the Body, but ſhall ſleep 'till the Reſurrection, and then awake and enter into it. But is not that Soul aſleep, or worſe, that dreams of a ſleeping Soul 'till the Reſurrection? Are Souls ſo wounded and prejudiced by their ſeparation from the Body, that they cannot ſubſiſt or act ſeparate from it? Or have they found any ſuch conceit in the Scriptures? Not at all. The Scripture take notice of no ſuch Interval; but plainly enough denies it, 2 Cor. 5. 8. We are confident, I ſay, and willing rather to be abſent from the body, and preſent with the Lord. Mark it, no ſooner parted from the Body, but preſent with the Lord. So Phil. 1. 23. I deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt, which is far better. If his Soul was to ſleep 'till the Reſurrection, how was it far better to be diſſolved, than to live? Sure Paul's ſtate in the Body had been far better, than his ſtate after Death, if this were ſo; fore here he enjoyed much ſweet Communion with God by Faith, but then he ſhould enjoy nothing.

To confirm this Dream, they urge, John 14. 3. If I go away, I will come again and receive you to my ſelf. As if the time of Chriſt's receiving his People to himſelf ſhould not come, until his ſecond coming at the end of the World. But though he will then collect all Believers into one Body, and preſent them ſolemnly to his Father: Yet that hinders not, but he may, as indeed he doth receive every particular believing Soul to himſelf at Death, by the Miniſtry of Angels. And if not, how is it that when Chriſt comes to Judgment, he is attended with ten thouſands of his Saints, that ſhall follow him when he comes from Heaven? Jude 14. You ſee then the Scripture puts no Interval betwixt the diſſolution of a Saint, and his glorification. It ſpeaks of the Saints that are dead, as already with the Lord. And the Wicked that are dead, as already in Hell, calling them Spirits in Priſon, 1 Pet. 3. 19, 20. aſſuring us that Judas went preſently to his own Place, Acts 1. 25. and to that ſenſe is the Parable of Dives and Lazarus, Luke 16. 22.

But let us weigh theſe four Things more particularly, for our full ſatisfaction in this Point.

Arg. 1. Firſt, Why ſhould the Happineſs of Believers be deferred, ſince they are immediately capable of enjoying it, as ſoon as ſeparated from the Body? Alas, the Soul is ſo far from being aſſiſted by the Body, (as it is now) for the enjoyment of God; that it's either clog'd or hindred by it; ſo ſpeaks the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 5. 6, 8. Whileſt we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord, (i. e.) our Bodies prejudice our Souls, obſtruct and hinder the fulneſs and freedom of their Communion. When we part from the Body, we go home to the Lord. Then the Soul is eſcaped as a Bird out of a Cage or Snare. Here I am prevented by an excellent Pen, which hath judiciouſly opened this Point. To whoſe excellent Obſervations I only add this, That if the Intanglements, Snares, and Prejudices of the Soul are ſo great and many in its embodied Eſtate, that it cannot ſo freely dilate it ſelf and take in the Comforts of God, by communion with him, then ſurely the laying aſide of that Clog, or the freeing of the Soul from that Burden, can be no barr to its greater Happineſs, which it enjoys in its ſeparated ſtate.

Mr. Shaw in his Farewel to Life.

Arg. 2. Secondly, Why ſhould the Happineſs and Glory of the Soul be deferred, unleſs God had ſome farther preparative Work to do upon it; before it be fit to be admitted into Glory? But ſurely there is no ſuch Work wrought upon it after its ſeparation by death. All that is done of that kind, is done here. When the Compoſitum is diſſolved, all means, duties, and ordinances are ceaſed. The working day is then ended, and night come, when no Man can work, John 9. 3. To that purpoſe are thoſe Words of Solomon, Eccleſ. 9. 10. Whatſoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might; for there is no wiſdom, nor knowledge, nor device in the Grave whither thou goeſt. So that our Glorification is not deferred, in order to our fuller preparation for Glory. If we are not fit when we die, we can never be fit. All is done upon us that ever was intended to be done. For they are called, Heb. 12. 23. The Spirits of the juſt made perfect.

Arg. 3. Thirdly, Again, why ſhould our Salvation ſlumber, when the Damnation of the Wicked doth not ſlumber? God defers not their Miſery, and ſurely he will not defer our Glory. If he be quick with his Enemies, he will not be ſlow and dilatory with his Friends. It cannot be imagined but he is as much inclined to Acts of Favour to his Children, as to Acts of Juſtice to his Enemies, theſe are preſently damned, Jude 7. Acts 1. 25. 1 Pet. 3. 19, 20. and what reaſon why Believers, all Believers as well as this in the Text, ſhould not be that very day in which they die, with Chriſt in Glory.

Arg. 4. Fourthly, And Laſtly, How do ſuch delays conſiſt with Chriſt's ardent deſires to have his People with him where he is? And with the vehement Longings of their Souls to be with Chriſt? You may ſee thoſe reflected Flames of Love and deſire of mutual Enjoyment betwixt the Bridegroom and his Spouſe in Rev. 22. 17, 20. Delays make their Hearts ſick. The Expectation and Faith in which the Saints die, is to be ſatisfied then; and ſurely God will not deceive them. I deny not but their Glory will be more compleat when the Body, their abſent Friend is reunited, and made to ſhare with them in their Happineſs. Yet that hinders not, but mean while the Soul may enjoy its Glory, whileſt the Body takes its Reſt, and ſleeps in the Duſt.

Inference 1. Are Believers immediately with God after their Diſſolution, then how ſurprizingly glorious will Heaven be to Believers! Not that they are in it before they think of it, or are fitted for it, no they have ſpent many Thoughts upon it before, and been long preparing for it; but the ſuddenneſs and greatneſs of the change is amazing to our Thoughts. For a Soul to be now here in the Body, converſing with Men, living among ſenſible Objects, and within a few moments to be with the Lord. This hour on Earth, the next in the third Heavens. Now viewing this World, and anon ſtanding among an innumerable Company of Angels, and the Spirits of the Juſt made perfect. O what a change is this! What! but wink and ſee God! Commend thy Soul to Chriſt, and be transferred in the Arms of Angels into the inviſible World, the World of Spirits! To live as the Angels of God! To live without eating, drinking, ſleeping! To be lifted up from a Bed of Sickneſs to a Throne of Glory! To leave a ſinful troubleſome World, a ſick and pained Body, and be in a moment perfectly cured, and feel thy ſelf perfectly well, and free from all Troubles and Diſtempers! You cannot think what this will be. Who can tell what Sights, what Apprehenſions, what Thoughts, what Frames believing Souls have before the Bodies they left, are removed from the Eyes of their dear ſurviving Friends.

Inference 2. Are Believers immediately with God after their Diſſolution? Where then ſhall Unbelievers be, and in what State will they find themſelves immediately after Death hath cloſed their Eyes! Ah, what will the caſe of them be that go the other way?

To be pluck'd out of Houſe and Body, from among Friends and Comforts, and thruſt into endleſs Miſeries into the dark Vault of Hell; never to ſee the Light of this World any more. Never to ſee a comfortable Sight. Never to hear a joyful Sound. Never to know the meaning of Reſt, Peace, or Delight any more. O what a change is here! To exchange the Smiles and Honours of Men, for the Frowns and Fury of God. To be cloathed with Flames, and drink the pure unmixed Wrath of God, who was but a few days ſince cloathed in Silks, and fill'd with the Sweet of the Creature, how is the ſtate of things altered with thee! It was the lamentable Cry of poor Adrian when he felt Death approaching. O my poor wandering Soul, alas, whither art thou now going! Where muſt thou lodge this night! Thou ſhalt never jeſt more, never be merry more!

Your term in your Houſes and Bodies is out, and there is another Habitation provided for you; but 'tis a diſmal one! When a Saint dies, Heaven above is as it were moved to receive and entertain him; at his coming he is received into everlaſting Habitations. Into the Inheritance of the Saints in Light. When an Unbeliever dies, we may ſay of him, alluding to Iſa. 14. 9. Hell from beneath is moved for him to meet him at his coming, it ſtirreth up the dead for him. No more Sports nor Plays, no Cups of Wine, nor Beds of Pleaſure. The more of theſe you enjoy'd here, the more intolerable will this change be to you. If Saints are immediately with God, others muſt be immediately with Satan.

Inference 3. How little cauſe have they to fear Death, who ſhall be with God ſo ſoon after their Death? Some there are that tremble at the Thoughts of Death. That cannot endure to hear its Name mentioned, That would rather ſtoop to any Miſery here, yea, to any Sin, than die, becauſe they are afraid of the exchange: But you that are intereſſed in Chriſt, need not do ſo. You can loſe nothing by the exchange. The words, Death, Grave, and Eternity, ſhould have another kind of Sound in your Ears. And make contrary Impreſſions upon your Hearts. If your earthly Tabernacles caſt you out, you ſhall not be found naked. You have a building of God, an houſe not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens. And it is but a ſtep out of this into that. O what fair, ſweet, and lovely Thoughts ſhould you have of that great and laſt change! But what ſpeak I of your fearleſneſs of Death? Your Duty lies much higher than that far.

+ This it is that makes the Differ

Inference 4. If Believers are immediately with God, after their Diſſolution, then it's their Duty to long for their Diſſolution. And caſt many a longing look towards their Graves. So did Paul, I deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt, which is far better. The Advantages of this exchange are unſpeakable. You have Gold for Braſs; Wine for Water; Subſtance for Shadow; ſolid Glory for very Vanity. O if the Duſt of this Earth were but once blown out of your Eyes, that you might ſee the Divine Glory; how weary would you be to live? How willing to die? But then be ſure your Title be ſound and good. Leave not ſo great a Concernment to the laſt. For though it is confeſſed God may do that in an hour, that never was done all your days, yet it is not common. Which brings us to our third and laſt Obſervation.

Doct. 3. That God may, though he ſeldome doth, prepare Men for Glory, immediately before their Diſſolution by Death.

There is one Parable, and no more, that ſpeaks of ſome that were called at the laſt hour, Matth. 20. 9, 10. And therefore is this one Inſtance in the Text, and no more; that gives us an account of a Perſon ſo call'd. We acknowledge God may do it, his Grace is his own, He may diſpenſe it how, and where he pleaſeth. We muſt always ſalve Divine Prerogative. Who ſhall fix Bounds, or put Limits to free Grace, but God himſelf, whoſe it is? If he do not ordinarily ſhew ſuch Mercies to dying Sinners (as indeed he doth not) yet it is not becauſe he cannot, but becauſe he will not. Not becauſe their Hearts are ſo hardned by long cuſtom in Sin, that his Grace cannot break them, but becauſe he moſt juſtly with-holds that Grace from them. When bleſſed Mr. Bilney the Martyr, heard a Miniſter preaching thus. O thou old Sinner, that haſt lain theſe fifty Years rotting in thy Sin, do'ſt thou think now to be ſaved? That the Blood of Chriſt ſhall ſave thee? O, ſaid Mr. Bilney, what preaching of Chriſt is this! If I had heard no other preaching than this, what had become of me? No, no old Sinners, or young Sinners, great, or ſmall Sinners are not to be beaten off from Chriſt, but encouraged to Repentance, and Faith. For who knows but the Bowels of Mercy may yearn at laſt upon one that hath all along rejected it? This Thief was as unlikely ever to receive Mercy but a few hours before he died, as any Perſon in the World could be.

But ſurely this is no encouragement to neglect the preſent Seaſons of Mercy, becauſe God may ſhew Mercy hereafter. To neglect the ordinary, becauſe God ſometimes manifeſts his Grace in ways extraordinary. Many I know have hardened themſelves in ways of Sin by this Example of Mercy. But what God did at this Time, for this Man, cannot be expected to be done ordinarily for us. And the Reaſons thereof are,

Reaſon 1. Firſt, Becauſe God hath vouchſafed us the ordinary and ſtanding means of Grace, which he had not; and therefore we cannot expect ſuch extraordinary and unuſual Converſions as he had. This poor Creature never heard in all likelihood one Sermon preached by Chriſt, or any of the Apoſtles. He lived the Life of a High-way-Man, and concerned not himſelf about Religion; but we have Chriſt preached freely and conſtantly in our Aſſemblies. We have Line upon Line, Precept upon Precept. And when God affords the ordinary Preaching of the Goſpel, he doth not uſe to work Wonders. When Iſrael was in the Wilderneſs, then God baked their Bread in Heaven, and clave the Rocks to give them Drink; but when they came to Canaan, where they had the ordinary means of Subſiſtence, the Manna ceaſed.

Reaſon 2. Secondly, Such a Converſion as this may not be ordinarily expected by any Man, becauſe ſuch a time as that will never come again. It's poſſible if Chriſt were to die again, and thou to be Crucified with him, thou mighteſt receive thy Converſion in ſuch a miraculous and extraordinary way: But Chriſt dies no more. Such a day as that will never come again.

Mr. Fenner in his excellent Diſcourſe upon this Point, tells us, That as this was an extraordinary Time, Chriſt being now to be inſtalled in his Kingdom, and crowned with Glory and Honours; ſo extraordinary Things were now done; as when Kings are crowned; the Streets are richly hanged; the Conduits run with Wine; great Malefactors are then pardoned; for then they ſhew their Munificence and Bounty; it is the day of the gladneſs of their Hearts. But let a Man come at another time to the Conduits, he ſhall find no Wine, but ordinary Water there. Let a Man be in the Goal at another time, and he may be hang'd; yea, and hath no reaſon but to expect and prepare for it. What Chriſt did now for this Man, was at an extraordinary Time.

Reaſon 3. Thirdly, Such a Converſion as this may not ordinarily be expected, for as ſuch a Time will never come again, ſo there will never be the like Reaſon for ſuch a Converſion any more. Chriſt converted him upon the Croſs, to give an Inſtance of his Divine Power at that time when it was almoſt wholly clouded. Look as in that Day the Divinity of Chriſt brake forth in ſeveral Miracles, as the preternatural Eclipſe of the Sun. The great Earthquake, the rending of the Rocks, and Vail of the Temple. So in the Converſion of this Man in ſuch an extraordinary way; and all to give evidence of the Divinity of Chriſt, and prove him to be the Son of God whom they crucified. But that is now ſufficiently confirmed, and there will be no more occaſion for Miracles to evidence it.

Reaſon 4. Fourthly, None hath Reaſon to expect the like Converſion, that enjoys the ordinary means; becauſe though in this Convert we have a Pattern of what free Grace can do, yet as Divines pertinently obſerve, it is a Pattern without a Promiſe. God hath not added any Promiſe to it, that ever he will do ſo for any other. And where we have not a Promiſe to encourage our Hope, our Hope can ſignifie but little to us.

Inference 1. Let thoſe that have found Mercy in the Evening of their Life, admire the extraordinary Grace that therein hath appeared to them. O that ever God ſhould accept the Bran, when Satan hath had the Flour of thy days! The forementioned reverend Author tells us of one Marcus Cajus Victorius, a very aged Man in the Primitive Times, who was converted from Heatheniſm to Chriſtianity in his old Age. This Man came to Simplicianus a Miniſter, and told him he heartily owned and embraced the Chriſtian Faith. But neither he nor the Church would truſt him for a long time. And the Reaſon was the unuſualneſs of a Converſion at ſuch an Age. But after he had given them good Evidence of the reality thereof, there were Acclamations and ſinging of Pſalms, the People every where crying, Marcus Cajus Victorius is become a Chriſtian. This was written for a wonder. Oh, if God have wrought ſuch wondrous Salvations for any of you, what cauſe have you to do more for him than others! What, to pluck you out of Hell when one Foot was in! To appear to you at laſt when ſo hardned by long cuſtom in Sin, that one might ſay, Can the Ethiopian change his hue, or the Leopard his ſpots? O what riches of Mercy have appeared to you!

Inference 2. Let this convince and ſtartle ſuch as even to their gray Hairs remain in an unconverted State, who are where they were when they firſt came into the World, yea, rather farther off by much.

Bethink your ſelves, ye that are full of days, and full of Sin; whoſe time is almoſt done, and your great Work not yet begun. Who have but a few Sands more in the upper part of the Glaſs to run down, and then your Converſion will be impoſſible. Your Sun is ſetting, your Night is coming; the Shadows of the Evening are ſtretched out upon you; you have one Foot in the Grave, and the other in Hell. O think if all Senſe and Tenderneſs be not withered up, as well as natural Verdure; think with your ſelves, how ſad a caſe you are in. God may do Wonders, but they are not ſeen every day; then they would ceaſe to be wondred at. O ſtrive, ſtrive while you have a little Time, and a few Helps and Means more. Strive to get that Work accompliſhed now that was never done yet. Defer it no longer, you have done ſo, too much already.

Semper victuri.

It may be (to uſe Seneca's Expreſſion) you have been theſe ſixty, ſeventy, or eighty Years beginning to live, about to change your Practice; but hitherto you ſtill continue the ſame. Do not you ſee how Satan hath gulled and cheated you with vain Purpoſes 'till he hath brought you to the very brinks of the Grave and Hell? O 'tis time now to make a ſtand, and pauſe a little where you are, and to what he hath brought you. The Lord at laſt give you an Eye to ſee, and an Heart to conſider.

Inference 3. Laſtly, Let this be a call and caution to all young ones to begin with God betimes and take heed of delays 'till the laſt, ſo as many thouſands have done before them to their eternal ruin. Now is your time, if you deſire to be in Chriſt; if you have any ſenſe of the weight and worth of eternal Things upon your Hearts. I know your Age is voluptuous, and delights not in the ſerious thoughts of Death and Eternity. You are more inclined to mind your Pleaſures, and leave theſe grave and ſerious matters to old Age. But let me perſuade you againſt that, by theſe Conſiderations.

Firſt, Oh ſet to the Buſineſs of Religion now, becauſe this is the moulding Age. Now your Hearts are tender, and your Affections flowing. Now is the Time when you are moſt likely to be wrought upon.

Secondly, Now, becauſe this is the freeſt Part of your Time. It is in the Morning of your Life, as in the Morning of the Day. If a Man have any Buſineſs to be done, let him take the Morning for it. For in the after part of the day a hurry of Buſineſs comes on, ſo that you either forget it, or want opportunity for it.

Thirdly, Now, becauſe your Life is immediately uncertain. You are not certain that ever you ſhall attain the Years of your Fathers. There are Graves in the Church-yard juſt of your length. And Skulls of all ſorts and ſizes in Golgotha, as the Jews Proverb is.

Fourthly, Now, becauſe God will not ſpare you becauſe you are but young Sinners, little Sinners, if you die Chriſtleſs. If you are not as you think old enough to mind Chriſt, ſurely if you die Chriſtleſs, you are old enough to be damned. There's the ſmall ſpray, as well as great logs in the fire of Hell.

Fifthly, Now, becauſe your Life will be the more eminently uſeful, and ſerviceable to God, when you know him betimes and begin with him early. Auſtin repented, and ſo have many thouſands ſince him, that he began ſo late, and knew God no ſooner.

Sixthly, Now, becauſe your Life will be the ſweeter to you, when the morning of it is dedicated to the Lord. The firſt Fruits ſanctifie the whole Harveſt. This will have a ſweet Influence into all your days. Whatever Changes, Straights, or Troubles you may afterwards meet with.

Serm. 33. Opens the fourth excellent ſaying of Chriſt upon the Croſs.

SERMON XXXIII.

MATTH. XXVII. 46.

And about the ninth hour Jeſus cried with a loud voice, ſaying,* Eli, Eli, lama ſabachtani? *that is to ſay, my God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

Non ignoro quidem verba hæc ἀγωνίζοντος & ſumma animi angustia verſantis eſſe. [illegible]ſius in [illegible]

THIS Verſe contains the fourth memorable ſaying of Chriſt upon the Croſs. Words able to rend the hardeſt Heart in the World. It is the Voice of the Son of God in an Agony. His Sufferings were great, very great before, but never in that Extremity as now; when this heaven-rending and heart-melting out-cry brake from him upon the Croſs, Eli, Eli, lama ſabachtani? In which words are conſiderable, the time, matter and manner of this his ſad Complaint.

Firſt, The time when it was uttered; about the ninth hour, (i. e.) about three of the Clock after Noon. For as the Jews divided the Night into four Quarters, or Watches: So they divided the Day in like manner into four Quarters, or greater Hours. Which had their Names from that Hour of the Day that cloſed the Quarter. So that beginning their account of their leſſer Hours from ſix in the Morning, which with them was the firſt, their ninth Hour anſwer'd to our third after Noon. And this is heedfully mark'd by the Evangeliſts on purpoſe to ſhew us how long Chriſt hanged in diſtreſs upon the Croſs, both in Soul and Body, which at leaſt was full three Hours. Towards the end whereof his Soul was ſo filled, diſtreſſed, and overwhelmed; that this doleful Cry brake from his Soul, in bitter Anguiſh, My God, my God, &c.

Secondly, The matter of the Complaint. It is not of the cruel Tortures he felt in his Body, nor of the Scoffs and Reproaches of his Name; he mentions not a word of theſe, they were are all ſwallowed up in the Sufferings within, as the River is ſwallowed up in the Sea, or the leſſer Flame in the greater. He ſeems to neglect all theſe, and only complains of what was more burdenſome than ten thouſand Croſſes. Even his Father's deſerting him, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? It is a more inward Trouble that burdens him, Darkneſs upon his Spirit, the hidings of God's Face from him, an Affliction he was totally a Stranger to, 'till now. Here he lays his Hand in this Complaint. This was the pained Place, to which he points in this dolorous Out-cry.

Thirdly, The manner in which he utters his ſad Complaint, and that was with a remarkable Vehemency, he cried with a loud Voice, not like a dying Man, in whom Nature was ſpent, but as one full of Vigour, Life, and Senſe. He gathered all his Spirits together, ſtirred up the whole Power of Nature when he made this grievous Out-cry. There is in it alſo an emphatical Reduplication, which ſhews with what vehemency it was uttered. Not ſingly, my God, but he doubles it, my God, my God, as diſtreſſed Perſons uſe to do. So Eliſha, when Elijah was ſeparated from him by the Chariots and Horſes of Fire, cries out, my Father, my Father.

Nay, moreover, to encreaſe the force and vehemency of this Complaint, here is an affectionate Interrogation: Why haſt thou forſaken me? Queſtions, eſpecially ſuch as this, are full of Spirits. It is as if he were ſurpriſed by the ſtrangeneſs of this Affliction: And rouzing up himſelf with an unuſual vehemency, turns himſelf to the Father, and cries, why ſo, my Father; O what do'ſt thou mean by this? What, hide that Face from me that was never hid before! What, and hide it from me now, in the depth of my Torments and Troubles! O what new, what ſtrange things are theſe! Laſtly, Here is an obſervable Variation of the Language in which this aſtoniſhing Complaint was uttered. For he ſpeaks both Hebrew and Syriack in one Breath, Eli, Eli, lama, are all Hebrew, Sabachtani is a Syriack word, uſed here for emphaſis ſake. Hence we obſerve, Doct. That God in deſign to heighten the Sufferings of Chriſt to the uttermoſt, forſook him in the time of his greateſt Diſtreſs; to the unſpeakable Affliction and Anguiſh of his Soul.

This Propoſition ſhall be conſidered in three Parts. The Deſertion it ſelf. The Deſign or end of it. The Effect and influence it had on Chriſt.

Firſt, The Deſertion it ſelf. Divine Deſertion generally conſidered is God's withdrawing himſelf from any, not as to his Eſſence, that fills Heaven and Earth, and conſtantly remains the ſame. But it's the withdrawment of his Favour, Grace, and Love. When theſe are gone, God is ſaid to be gone. And this is done two ways, either abſolutely, and wholly, or reſpectively, and only as to manifeſtation. In the firſt ſenſe, Devils are forſaken of God. They once were in his Favour and Love, but they have utterly and finally loſt it. God is ſo withdrawn from them, as that he will never take them into Favour any more. In the other ſenſe he ſometimes forſakes his deareſt Children, (i. e.) he removes all ſweet Manifeſtations of his Favour and Love for a time, and carries it to them as a Stranger, though his Love be ſtill the ſame.

And this kind of Deſertion which is reſpective, temporary, and only in regard of Manifeſtation, is juſtly diſtinguiſhed from the various ends and deſigns of it, into Probational, Cautional, Caſtigatory, and Penal. Probational Deſertions are only for the proof and trial of Grace. Cautional Deſertions are deſigned to prevent Sin. Caſtigatory Deſertions are God's Rods to chaſtize his People for Sin. Penal Deſertions are ſuch as are inflicted as the juſt reward of Sin, for the Reparation of that wrong Sinners have done by their Sins. Of this ſort was Chriſt's Deſertion. A part of the Curſe, and a ſpecial part. And his bearing it was no ſmall part of the Reparation, or Satisfaction he made for our Sins.

More particularly, to open the Nature of this Deſertion of Chriſt by his Father, there being much of intricacy and difficulty in it. I ſhall proceed in the Explication of it Negatively and Poſitively.

Firſt, Negatively, when Chriſt cries out of God's forſaking him, he doth mean that he had diſſolved the perſonal Union of the two Natures. Not as if the marriage Knot which united our Nature to the Perſon of Chriſt was looſed, or a Divorce made betwixt them. No, for when he was forkaken of God, he was ſtill true and real God-man in one Perſon.

Secondly, When Chriſt bewails the Father's forſaking him, he doth not mean that he pulled away the Prop of divine Support from him, by which he had 'till then endured the Tortures and Sufferings that oppreſſed him. No, though the Father deſerted, yet he ſtill ſupported him. And ſo much is intimated in theſe Words of Chriſt, Eli, Eli, which ſignifies my ſtrong one, my ſtrong one. God was with him by way of Support, when withdrawn as to Manifeſtations of Love and Favour. In reſpect of God's ſupporting Preſence which was with Chriſt at this time; it's ſaid, Iſa. 42. 1. Behold my Servant whom I uphold, and John 16. 32. I am not alone, but my Father is with me. So that this cannot be the meaning of it.

Thirdly, Much leſs is it his meaning that God had left him, as to inherent Grace and Sanctification. Recalling that Spirit of Holineſs which had anointed him above his Fellows. No, no: When he was forſaken he remained as holy as ever. He had indeed leſs comfort, but not leſs holineſs than before. Such a Deſertion had irritated and made void the very end of his Death. And his Sacrifice could never have yielded ſuch a fragrant Odor to God as it did, Eph. 5. 2.

Fourthly, The Love of God was not ſo withdrawn from Chriſt, as that the Father had now no Love for him, nor Delight in him. That's impoſſible; he can no more ceaſe to love Chriſt, than to love himſelf. His Love was not turned into Wrath. Though his Wrath only was now manifeſted to him as our Surety; and hid his Love from him, as his beloved Son.

Fifthly, Nor was Chriſt forſaken by his Father finally, upon what account ſoever it was that he was forſaken. No, it was but for a few Hours that the dark Cloud dwelt over his Soul: It ſoon paſs'd away. And the bright and glorious Face of God ſhone forth again, as bright as ever, Pſalm 22. 1, 24. Compared.

Sixthly, And Laſtly, It was not a mutual Deſertion or a Deſertion on both Parts; the Father forſook him, but he forſook not his Father. When God withdrew, he followed him, crying, My God, my God.

Yet to ſpeak poſitively of it; though it did not diſſolve the Perſonal Union, nor cut off Divine Supports, nor remove his Inherent Grace, nor turn his Father's Love into Hatred, nor continue for ever, nor yet was it on both Parts, Chriſt's forſaking God, as well as God forſaking Chriſt; yet I ſay it was,

Firſt, A very ſad Deſertion, the like unto which in all reſpects never was experienced by any, nor can be to the end of the World. All his other Things were but ſmall Things to this; they bare upon his Body, theſe upon his Soul. They came from the Hands of vile Men, this from the Hand of a dear Father. He ſuffered both in Body and Soul; but the Sufferings of his Soul, were the very Soul of his Sufferings. Under all his other Sufferings he opened not his Mouth, but this touch'd the Quick, that he could not but cry out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

Secondly, As it was ſad, ſo it was a Penal Deſertion, inflicted on him for ſatisfaction for thoſe Sins of ours, which deſerved that God ſhould forſake us for ever, as the damned are forſaken by him. So that this Cry (as one obſerves) was like the perpetual Shriek of them that are caſt away for ever. This was that Hell, and the Torments of it which Chriſt our Surety ſuffered for us. For look as there lies a twofold Miſery upon the damned in Hell, viz. Pain of Senſe, and Pain of Loſs. So upon Chriſt anſwerably there was not only an Impreſſion of Wrath, but alſo a Subſtraction of withdrawment of all ſenſible Favour and Love. Hence it's ſaid by himſelf, John 12. 27. And now my Soul τετάρακται is troubled. The word ſignifies troubled as they that are in Hell are troubled. Though God did not leave his Soul in Hell, as others are; he having enough to pay the Debt which they have not, yet in the Torments thereof at this time he was. Yea, in Sufferings at this time in his Soul, equivalent to all that which our Souls ſhould have ſuffered there, to all Eternity.

Thirdly, It was a Deſertion that was real, and not fictitious. He doth not perſonate a deſerted Soul, and ſpeak as if God had withdrawn the comfortable ſenſe and influence of his Love from him; but the thing was ſo indeed. The God-head reſtrained and kept back for this time, all its Joys, Comforts, and Senſe of Love from the Man-hood; yielding it nothing but ſupport. This bitter doleful Out-cry of Chriſt gives evidence enough of the reality of it. He did not feign but feel the burdenſomeneſs of it.

Nec ficte nec theatrice conqueritur ſe à patre derelictum. Et quod nonnulli ex vulgi opinione ſic locatum obtendunt, inſipidum eſt Cavillum. Calv.

Fourthly, This Deſertion fell out in the time of Chriſt's greateſt need of Comfort that ever he had in all the time of his Life on Earth. His Father forſook him at that time, when all earthly Comforts had forſaken him; and all outward Evils had broken in together upon him. When Men, yea, the beſt of Men, ſtood afar off, and none but barbarous Enemies were about him. When Pains and Shame, and all Miſeries even weighed him down, then even then to compleat and fill up his Sufferings, God ſtands afar off too.

Fifthly, And Laſtly, It was ſuch a Deſertion as left him only to the Supports of his Faith. He had nothing elſe now but his Father's Covenant and Promiſe to hang upon. And indeed as a judicious Author pertinently obſerves; the Faith of Chriſt did ſeveral ways act and manifeſt it ſelf, in theſe very words of Complaint in the Text.

Mr. Caſe's Correction Inſtruction, p. 51, 52.

For though all comfortable Sights of God, and Senſe of Love were obſtructed, yet you ſee his Soul cleaves fiducially to God for all that. My God, &c. Though Senſe and Feeling ſpeak as well as Faith; yet Faith ſpeaks firſt, My God, before Senſe ſpeaks a word of his forſaking. His Faith prevented the Complaint and Senſe, and though Senſe comes in afterward with a word of Complaint, yet here are two words of Faith, to one of Senſe. It is, My God, my God, and but one word of forſaking. As his Faith ſpake firſt, ſo it ſpake twice when Senſe and Feeling ſpake but once. Yea, and as Faith ſpake firſt, and twice as much as Senſe, ſo it ſpake more confidently than Senſe did. He lays a confident Claim to God as his God; My God, my God, and only Queries about his forſaking of him; Why haſt thou forſaken me? This is ſpoken more dubiouſly, the former moſt confidently.

To be ſhort, his Faith laid hold on God, under a moſt ſuitable Title, or Attribute, Eli, Eli, my ſtrong one, my ſtrong one, q. d. O thou with whom is infinite and everlaſting Strength, thou that haſt hitherto ſupported my Man-hood, and according to thy Promiſe upheld thy Servant; what, wilt thou now forſake me? My ſtrong one, I lean upon thee. To theſe Supports and Refuges of Faith this Deſertion ſhut up Chriſt. By theſe Things he ſtood when all other viſible and ſenſible Comforts ſhrunk away both from his Soul and Body. This is the true, though brief Account of the Nature and Quality of Chriſt's Deſertion.

Secondly, In the next place let us conſider the Deſigns and Ends of it; which were principally Satiſfaction and Sanctification. Satiſfaction for thoſe Sins of ours which deſerved that we ſhould be totally and everlaſtingly forſaken of God. This is the deſert of every Sin, and the damned do feel it, and ſhall to all Eternity. God is gone from them for ever, not eſſentially; the juſt God is with them ſtill, the God of Power is ſtill with them, the avenging God is ever with them; but the merciful God is gone, and gone for ever. And thus would he have withdrawn himſelf from every Soul that ſinned, had not Chriſt born that Puniſhment for us, in his own Soul; if he had not cryed, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? We muſt have howled out this hideous Complaint in the loweſt Hell for ever, O righteous God, O dreadful God, O terrible God, thou haſt for ever forſaken me.

And as Satiſfaction was deſign'd in this Deſertion of Chriſt, ſo alſo was the Sanctification of all the Deſertions of the Saints deſigned in it. For he having been forſaken before us, and for us; when ever God forſakes us, that very forſaking of his is ſanctified, and thereby turned into a Mercy to Believers. Hence are all the precious Fruits and Effects of our Deſertions. Such are the earneſt Excitations of the Soul to Prayer, Pſal. 77. 2. Pſal. 88. 1, 9. The antidoting the tempted Soul againſt Sin. The reviving of ancient Experiences, *Pſal.*77.5. Enhaunſing the value of the Divine Preſence with the Soul, and teaching it to hold Chriſt faſter than ever before, Cant. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Theſe and many more are the precious Effects of ſanctified Deſertion; but how many or how good ſoever theſe Effects are, they do all owe themſelves to Jeſus Chriſt, as to the Author of them. Who for our ſakes would paſs through this ſad and dark State, that we might find thoſe Bleſſings in it. So then, the God-head's ſuſpending of all the Effects of Joy and Comfort from the Humanity of Chriſt at this time, which had not ceaſed to flow into it an ineffable meaſure and manner 'till now, muſt needs be both a ſpecial part of Chriſt's Satiſfaction for us, and conſequently that which makes all our temporary Deſertions rather Mercies and Bleſſings than Curſes to us.

Thirdly, Let us in the next place conſider the Effect and Influence this Deſertion had upon the Spirit of Chriſt.

And though it did not drive him to deſpair as the Papiſts falſly charge Mr. Calvin to have affirmed; yet it even amazed him, and almoſt ſwallowed up his Soul in the Deeps of Trouble and Conſternation. This Cry is a Cry from the Deeps; from a Soul oppreſſed even to Death. Never was the Lord Jeſus ſo put to it before. It is a moſt aſtoniſhing Outcry.

Let but five Particulars be weighed, and you will ſay, Never was there any Darkneſs like this. No Sorrow like Chriſt's Sorrow in his deſerted State. For,

Firſt, Apprehend, Reader, this was a new thing to Chriſt and that which he was never acquainted with before. From all Eternity until now, there had been conſtant and wonderful Out-lets of Love, Delight, and Joy, from the Boſom of the Father, into his Boſom. He never miſſed his Father before. Never ſaw a Frown, or a Vail upon that bleſſed Face before. This made it an heavy Burden indeed, the words are words of wonderment and admiration; My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me! Thou that never did'ſt ſo before, haſt forſaken me now.

Secondly, As it was a new thing to Chriſt, and therefore the more amazing; ſo it was a great thing to Chriſt, ſo great that he ſcarce knew how to ſupport it. Had it not been a great Tryal indeed, ſo great a Spirit as Chriſt's was would never have ſo droop'd under it, and made ſo ſad a Complaint of it. It was ſo ſharp, ſo heavy an Affliction to his Soul; that it cauſed him who was meek under all other Sufferings as a Lamb, to roar under this like a Lion. For ſo much thoſe Words of Chriſt ſignifie, Pſal. 22. 1. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Why art thou ſo far from the voice of my roaring? It comes from a Root that ſignifies to howl or roar as a Lion. And rather ſignifies the noiſe made by a wild Beaſt, than the Voice of a Man.

Id quod rugitum vocat, no humanam, ſed leoninam voce ſignificat. Bucer. i Loc.

And it is as much as if Chriſt had ſaid, O my God, no words can expreſs my anguiſh. I will not ſpeak, but roar, howl out my Complaint. Pour it out in Vollies of Groans. I roar as a Lion. It's no ſmall matter will make that majeſtick Creature to roar. And ſure ſo great a Spirit as Chriſt's, would not have roared under a ſlight Burden.

Thirdly, As it was a great Burden to Chriſt, ſo it was a Burden laid on in time of his greateſt diſtreſs. When his Body was in Tortures, and all about him was black, diſmal, and full of Horror, and Darkneſs. He fell into this Deſertion at a time when he never had the like need of Divine Supports and Comforts, and that aggravated it.

Fourthly, It was a Burden that lay upon him long, even from the time his Soul began to be ſorrowful and ſore amazed in the Garden, 'till his very death. If you were but to hold your Finger in the Fire for two Minutes, you would not be able to bear it. But what is the Finger of a Man, to the Soul of Chriſt? Or what is material Fire, to the Wrath of the great God!

Fifthly, So heavy was this preſſure upon Chriſt's Soul, that in all probability it haſtened his death; for it was not uſual for crucified Perſons to expire ſo ſoon; and thoſe that were crucified with him, were both alive after Chriſt was gone. Some have hanged more than a day and night, ſome two full days and nights in thoſe Torments alive; but never did any feel inwardly, what Chriſt felt. He bare it 'till the ninth hour, and then makes a fearful Out-cry, and dies. The Uſes follow.

Inference 1. Did God forſake Chriſt upon the Croſs, as a puniſhment to him for our Sins? Then it follows, that as often as we have ſinned, ſo oft have we deſerved to be forſaken of God. This is the juſt recompence and demerit of Sin. And indeed here lies the principal evil of ſin, that it ſeparates betwixt God and the Soul. This ſeparation is both the moral Evil that is in it, and the penal Evil inflicted by the righteous God for it. By Sin we depart from God, and as a due puniſhment of it, God departs from us. This will be the diſmal Sentence in the laſt day, Matthew 25. Depart from me, ye curſed. Thenceforth there will be a Gulph fixed betwixt God and them, Luke 19. 20. No more friendly intercourſes with the bleſſed God for ever. The eternal ſhriek of the damned is, Woe, and alas, God hath forſaken us for ever more. Ten thouſand Worlds can no ways recompence the Loſs of one God. Beware ſinners how you ſay to God now, Depart from us, we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways, leſt he ſay, Depart from me, you ſhall never ſee my Face.

Inference 2. Did Chriſt never make ſuch a ſad Complaint and Out-cry 'till God hid his Face from him? Then the hiding of God's Face, is certainly the greateſt Miſery that can poſſibly befal a gracious Soul in this World. When they ſcourged, buffetted, and ſmote Chriſt, yea, when they nailed him to the Tree, he opened not his Mouth; but when his Father hid his Face from him, then he cried out; yea, his Voice was the Voice of roaring; this was more to him than a thouſand Crucifyings. And ſurely as it was to Chriſt, ſo it is to all gracious Souls the ſaddeſt ſtroke, the heavieſt Burden that ever they felt. When David forbad Abſolom to come to Jeruſalem to ſee his Father, he complains in 2 Sam. 14. 32. Wherefore (ſaid he) am I come from Geſhur, if I may not ſee the King's face? So doth the gracious Soul bemoan it ſelf, wherefore am I redeemed, called, and reconciled; If I may not ſee the Face of my God?

It's ſaid of Tully, when he was baniſhed from Italy, and of Demoſthenes, when he was baniſhed from Athens, that they wept every time they looked towards their own Country. And is it ſtrange that a poor deſerted Believer ſhould mourn every time he looks Heavenward? Say, Chriſtian, did the Tears never trickle down thy Cheeks when thou looked'ſt toward Heaven, and could'ſt not ſee the Face of thy God as at other times? If two dear Friends cannot part, though it be but for a Seaſon, but that parting muſt be in a ſhower: Blame not the Saints if they ſigh and mourn bitterly when the Lord, who is the Life of their Life, departs; though but for a ſeaſon from them; for if God depart, their ſweeteſt Enjoyment on Earth, the very Crown of all their Comforts is gone, and what will a King take in exchange for his Crown? What can recompence to a Saint, the loſs of his God! Indeed, if they had never ſeen the Lord, or taſted the incomparable Sweetneſs of his Preſence, it were another matter; but the Darkneſs which follows the ſweeteſt Light of his Countenance is double Darkneſs.

And that which doth not a little increaſe the horror of this darkneſs is, that when their Souls are thus benighted, and the Sun of their comfort is ſet; then doth Satan, like the wild Beaſts of the Deſert, creep out of his Den, and roars upon them with hideous Temptations. Surely this is a ſad ſtate, and deſerves tender pity. Pity is a due debt to the diſtreſſed, and the World ſhews not a greater diſtreſs than this. If ever you have been in Troubles of this kind your ſelves, you will never ſlight others in the ſame caſe! Nay, one end of God's exerciſing you with Troubles of this Nature, is to teach you Compaſſion towards others in the ſame caſe. Do they not cry to you, as Job 19. 21. Have pity, have pity upon me, O ye my Friends, for the hand of God hath touched me. Draw forth Bowels of Mercy and tender Compaſſion to them, for either you have been, or are, or may be in the ſame caſe your ſelves; however, if Men do not, to be ſure Chriſt that hath felt it before them, and for them, will pity them.

Inference 3. Did God really forſake Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs? Then from the Deſertion of Chriſt's, ſingular Conſolation ſprings up to the People of God; yea, manifold Conſolation. Principally it's a ſupport in theſe two Reſpects, As it is preventive of your final Deſertion, and a comfortable pattern to you in your preſent ſad Deſertions.

Read this carefully & to the end of the Sermon

Firſt, Chriſt's Deſertion is preventive of your final Deſertion. Becauſe he was forſaken for a time, you ſhall not be forſaken for ever. For he was forſaken for you. And God's forſaking him, though but for a few hours, is equivalent to his forſaking you for ever. It is every way as much for the dear Son of God, the darling delight of his Soul, to be forſaken of God for a time; as if ſuch a poor inconſiderable Thing as thou art, ſhould'ſt be caſt off to Eternity. Now this being equivalent, and born in thy room, muſt needs give thee the higheſt ſecurity in the World, that God will never finally with-draw from thee. Had he intended to have done ſo, Chriſt had never made ſuch a ſad Out-cry as you hear this day, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

Secondly, Moreover, this ſad Deſertion of Chriſt becomes a comfortable pattern to poor deſerted Souls in divers reſpects: And the proper Buſineſs of ſuch Souls at ſuch times, is to eye it believingly, in theſe ſix Reſpects.

Firſt, Though God deſerted Chriſt, yet at the ſame time he powerfully ſupported him. His omnipotent Arms were under him, though his pleaſed Face was hid from him. He had not indeed his Smiles, but he had his Supportations. So (Chriſtian) juſt ſo ſhall it be with thee. Thy God may turn away his Face, he will not pluck away his Arm. When one asked of holy Mr. Baines how the caſe ſtood with his Soul, he anſwered; Supports I have, though Suavities I want. Our Father in this deals with us, as we our ſelves ſometimes do with a Child that is ſtubborn and rebellious. We turn him out of doors, and bid him be gone out of our ſight; and there he ſighs and weeps; but however, for the humbling of him we will not preſently take him into Houſe and Favour; yet we order, at leaſt permit the Servants to carry him Meat and Drink. Here is fatherly care, and ſupport; though no former ſmiles, or manifeſted delights.

Secondly, Though God deſerted Chriſt, yet he deſerted not God. His Father forſook him, but he could not forſake his Father, but followed him with this Cry, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

And is it not even ſo with you? God goes off from your Souls, but you cannot go off from him. No, your Hearts are mourning after the Lord. Seeking him carefully with Tears. Complaining of his abſence as the greateſt Evil in this World. This is Chriſt-like. So it was with the Spouſe, Cant. 3. 1, 2. Her beloved had withdrawn himſelf, and was gone; but was ſhe content to part with him ſo? No ſuch thing. By night on my bed, I ſought him whom my ſoul loveth; I ſought him but I found him not; I will ariſe now, and go about the City, &c.

Thirdly, Though God forſook Chriſt, yet he returned to him again. It was but for a time, not for ever. In this alſo doth his Deſertion parallel yours. God may for ſeveral wiſe and holy Reaſons hide his Face from you, but not ſo as it's hid from the damned; who ſhall never ſee it again. This Cloud will paſs away. This Night ſhall have a bright Morning. For (ſaith thy God) I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wrath; for the Spirit ſhall fail before me, and the ſouls which I have made. As if he ſhould ſay, I may contend with him for a time, to humble him; but not for ever, leſt inſtead of a ſad Child, I ſhould have a dead Child. Oh the Tenderneſs even of a diſpleaſed Father!

Fourthly, Though God forſook Chriſt, yet at that time he could juſtifie God. So you read, Pſal. 22. 2, 3. O my God (ſaith he) I cry in the day time; but thou heareſt not, and in the night ſeaſon, and am not ſilent; but thou art holy. Is not thy Spirit according to thy Meaſure, framed like Chriſt's in this; canſt thou not ſay even when he writes bitter Things againſt thee, he is a holy, faithful, and good God for all this? I am deſerted, but not wronged. There is not one drop of Injuſtice, in all the Sea of my Sorrows. Tho' he condemn me, I muſt and will juſtifie him, this alſo is Chriſt-like.

Fifthly, Though God took from Chriſt all viſible and ſenſible Comforts, inward as well as outward; yet Chriſt ſubſiſted by Faith in the abſence of them all. His Deſertion put him upon the acting of his Faith. My God, my God, are words of Faith. The words of one that rolls upon his God. And is it not ſo with you too? Senſe of Love is gone, ſweet ſights of God ſhut up in a dark Cloud; well, what then? Muſt thy hands preſently hang down, and thy Soul give up all its hopes? What! is there no Faith to relieve in this caſe? Yes, Yes, and bleſſed be God for Faith. Who is among you that feareth the Lord, and obeyeth the voice of his ſervants, that walketh in darkneſs and hath no light; let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay himſelf upon his God, Iſa. 50. 10. To conclude,

Sixthly, Chriſt was deſerted, a little before the glorious morning of Light and Joy dawned upon him. It was a little, a very little while, after this ſad cry, before he triumphed glorioully. And ſo it may be with you. Heavineſs may endure for a night, but Joy and Gladneſs will come in the morning. You know how Mr. Glover was tranſported with Joy, and cried out, as a Man in a Rapture, O Auſtin, he is come, he is come, he is come, meaning the Comforter, who for ſome time had been abſent from his Soul.

But I fear I am abſolutely and finally forſaken.

Why ſo? Do you find the Characters of ſuch a Deſertion upon your Soul? Be righteous Judges, and tell me, whether you find an Heart willing to forſake God? Is it indifferent now to you whether God ever return again or no? Are there no mournings, meltings, hankerings after the Lord? Indeed, if you forſake him, he will caſt you off for ever. But can you do ſo? Oh no, let him do what he will, I am reſolved to wait for him, cleave to him, mourn after him, though I have no preſent comfort from him, no aſſurance of my intereſt in him; yet will I not exchange my poor weak hopes, for all the good in this World.

Again, You ſay God hath forſaken you, but hath he let looſe the bridle before you? To allude to Job 30. 11. Hath he taken away from your Souls, all conſcientious Tenderneſs of ſin, ſo that now you can ſin freely, and without any regret? If ſo, it's a ſad token indeed. Tell me, Soul, if thou judgeſt indeed God will never return in loving kindneſs to thee any more; why do'ſt thou not then give thy ſelf over to the Pleaſures of ſin, and fetch thy Comforts that way from the Creatures ſince thou can'ſt have no Comfort from thy God? Oh no, I cannot do ſo. If I die in darkneſs and ſorrow, I will never do ſo. My Soul is as full of fear and hatred of ſin, as ever, tho' empty of joy and comfort. Surely theſe are no tokens of a Soul finally abandoned by its God.

Inference 4. Did God forſake his own Son upon the Croſs? Then the deareſt of God's People may for a time be forſaken of their God. Think it not ſtrange when you that are the Children of Light, meet with Darkneſs, yea, and walk in it. Neither charge God fooliſhly. Say not he deals hardly with you. You ſee what befel Jeſus Chriſt, whom his Soul delighted in. It's doubtleſs your concernment to expect, and prepare for days of Darkneſs. You have heard the doleful Cry of Chriſt, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? You know how it was with Job, David, Heman, Aſaph, and many others the dear Servants of God. What heart-melting Lamentations they have made upon this account. And are you better than they? Oh prepare for ſpiritual Troubles. I am ſure you do enough every day to involve you in Darkneſs. Now if at any time this Trial befal you, mind theſe two ſeaſonable Admonitions, and lay them up for ſuch a time.

Admonition 1. Firſt, Exerciſe the Faith of adherence, when you have loſt the Faith of Evidence. When God takes away that, he leaves this. That is neceſſary to the comfort, this to the life of his People. It's ſweet to live in views of your intereſt, but if they be gone, believe and roll on God for an intereſt. Stay your ſelves on your God, when you have no Light, Iſa. 50. 10. Drop this Anchor in the dark, and do not reckon all gone, when Evidence is gone. Never reckon your ſelves undone, whil'ſt you can adhere to your God. Direct acts are noble acts of Faith, as well as reflexive ones. Yea, and in ſome reſpects to be preferred to them. For,

Firſt, As your comfort depends on the Evidencing Acts of Faith, ſo your Salvation upon the adhering Act of Faith. Evidence comforts, affiance ſaves you. And ſure Salvation is more than Comfort.

Secondly, Your faith of Evidence hath more ſenſible Sweetneſs, but your faith of adherence is of more Conſtancy, and Continuance. The former is as a flower in its Month, the latter ſticks by you all the year.

Thirdly, Faith of evidence brings more joy to you, but Faith of adherence, brings more glory to God. For thereby you truſt him when you cannot ſee him. Yea, you believe not only without, but againſt ſenſe and feeling. And doubtleſs that which brings glory to God, is better than that which brings comfort to you. O then, exerciſe this, when you have loſt that.

Admonition 2. Secondly, Take the right method to recover the ſweet Light which you have ſinned away from your Souls. Do not go about from one to another complaining; nor yet ſet down deſponding under your Burden. But.

Firſt, Search diligently after the cauſe of God's withdrawment. Urge him hard by Prayer to tell thee whereof he contends with thee, Job 10. 2. Say, Lord, what have I done that ſo offends thy Spirit? what Evil is it which thou ſo rebukeſt? I beſeech thee ſhew me the cauſe of thine Anger; have I grieved thy Spirit in this thing, or in that? was it my neglect of duty, or my formality in duties? was I not thankful for the ſenſe of thy Love, when it was ſhed abroad in my Heart? O Lord, why is it thus with me?

Secondly, Humble your Souls before the Lord for every Evil you ſhall be convinced of. Tell him it pierces your Hearts that you have ſo diſpleaſed him. And that it ſhall be a caution to you whil'ſt you live, never to return again to folly. Invite him again to your Souls, and mourn after the Lord 'till you have found him. If you ſeek him, he will be found of you, 2 Cor. 15. 2. It may be you ſhall have a thouſand Comforters come about your ſad Souls in ſuch a time to comfort them. This will be to you inſtead of God, and that will repair your loſs of Chriſt. Deſpiſe them all, and ſay, I am reſolved to ſit as a Widow 'till Chriſt return; he or none ſhall have my Love.

Thirdly, Wait on the uſe of Means 'till Chriſt return. O be not diſcouraged. Tho' he tarry, wait you for him, for bleſſed are all they that wait for him.

SERMON XXXIV.

Serm. 34. Opens the fifth excellent ſaying of Chriſt upon the Croſs.

JOHN XIX. 28.

After this, Jeſus knowing that all things were accompliſhed, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, ſaith, I Thirſt.

IT is as truly as commonly ſaid, Death is dry: Chriſt found it ſo, when he died. When his Spirits laboured in the Agonies of death, then he ſaid, I thirſt.

This is the fifth word of Chriſt upon the Croſs, ſpoken a little before he bowed the Head and yielded up the Ghoſt. It is only recorded by this Evangeliſt, and there are four Things remarkable in this Complaint of Chriſt, viz. The Perſon complaining. The Complaint he made. The Time when. And the Reaſon why he ſo complained.

Firſt, The Perſon complaining. Jeſus ſaid, I thirſt. This is a clear Evidence that it was no common ſuffering. Great and reſolute Spirits will not complain for ſmall Matters. The Spirit of a common Man will endure much, before it utters any Complaint. Let uſt herefore ſee,

Secondly, The Affliction or Suffering he complains of; and that is Thirſt. There are two ſorts of Thirſt. One natural and proper, another ſpiritual and figurative. Chriſt felt both at this time. His Soul thirſted in vehement deſires and longings to accompliſh and finiſh that great and difficult work he was now about. And his Body thirſted by reaſon of thoſe unparellel'd Agonies it laboured under, for the accompliſhing thereof. But it was the proper natural thirſt he here intends, when he ſaid, I thirſt. No this natural Thirſt of which he complains, is the raging of the Appetite for humid nouriſhment, ariſing from ſcorching up of the parts of the Body for want of moiſture. And amongſt all the pains and afflictions of the Body, there can ſcarcely be named a greater, and more intollerable one than extream Thirſt. The moſt mighty and valiant have ſtooped under it. Mighty Samſon after all his Conqueſts and Victories, complains thus, Jud. 15. 18. And he was ſore athirſt, and called on the Lord, and ſaid, Thou haſt given this great deliverance into the hand of thy ſervant, and now ſhall I die for thirſt, and fall into the hands of the uncircumciſed? Great Darius drank filthy Water, defiled with the Bodies of the Slain, to relieve his Thirſt; and proteſted, never any drink was more pleaſant to him. Hence, Iſa. 41. 17. Thirſt is put to expreſs the moſt afflicted ſtate. When the poor and needy ſeek water and there is none; and their tongue faileth for thirſt: I the Lord will hear them, (i. e.) when my People are in extream neceſſities under any extraordinary preſſures and diſtreſſes; I will be with them, to ſupply and relieve them. Thirſt cauſes a moſt painful compreſſion of the Heart, when the Body like a Spunge ſucks and draws forth moiſture, and there is none. And this may be occaſioned either by long abſtinence from drink, or by the labouring and expence of the Spirits under grievous Agonies, and extream Tortures; which like a fire within ſoon ſcorch up the very radical moiſture.

Cujuſmodi voluptatis hactenus inexpertus fui? Plut.

Now though we find not, that Chriſt taſted a drop of Liquor ſince he ſate with the Diſciples at the Table, after that no more refreſhments for him in this World: Yet that was not the cauſe of this raging Thirſt; but it is to be aſcribed to the extream Sufferings which he ſo long had conflicted with, both in his Soul and Body. Theſe preyed upon him and drank up his very Spirits. Hence came this ſad complaint, I thirſt.

Thirdly, Let us conſider the time when he thus complained. When all things were now accompliſhed, ſaith the Text, (i e.) when all things were even ready to be accompliſhed in his death. A little, a very little while before his expiration. When the travailing throws of death began to be ſtrong upon him. And ſo it was both a ſign of death at hand, and of his love to us which was ſtronger than death, that would not complain ſooner, becauſe he would admit of no relief, nor take the leaſt refreſhment till he had done his work.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, Take notice of the deſign and end of his complaint. That the Scriptures might be fulfilled, he ſaith, I thirſt, (i. e.) that it might appear for the Satisfaction of our Faith, that whatſoever had been predicted by the Prophets, was exactly accompliſhed, even to a circumſtance in him. Now it was foretold of him, Pſalm 69. 21. They gave me Gall for my meat, and in my thirſt, they gave me vinegar to drink; and herein it was verified. Hence the Note is,

Doct. That ſuch were the Agonies and extream Sufferings of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs, as drank up his very Spirits, and made him cry, I thirſt.

If I (ſaid one) ſhould live a thouſand Years, and every Day die a thouſand times, the ſame death for Chriſt, that he once died for me, yet all this would be nothing to the ſorrows Chriſt endured in his death. At this time the Bridegroom Chriſt, might have borrowed the word of his Spouſe, the Church, Lam. 1. 12. Is it nothing to you, all ye that paſs by? See, and behold, if there be any ſorrow like unto my ſorrow which is done unto me; wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the days of his fierce anger.

Si poſſem vivere mille annos, & qualibet die millies mori pro eo, eadem morte quâ ille pro me mortuus eſt ſemel: nihil eſſet ad dolorem quem habuit in ſe. Edmund de ſpeculo. Eccleſ. c. 23.

Here we are to enquire into and conſider the Extremities and Agonies Chriſt laboured under upon the Croſs, which occaſioned this ſad complaint of Thirſt. And then make Application of it in the ſeveral Inferences of Truth deducible from it.

Now the ſufferings of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs were twofold, viz. His Corporeal and Spiritual Sufferings. We ſhall open them diſtinctly, and then ſhew how both theſe meeting together upon him in their fulneſs and extremity muſt needs conſume his very radical Moiſture, and make him cry, I thirſt. To begin with the firſt, Firſt, His Corporeal and more external Sufferings were exceeding great, acute and extream Sufferings: For they were ſharp, univerſal, continual and unrelieved by any inward Comfort.

Firſt, They were ſharp Sufferings. For his body was racked or digged, in thoſe parts where Senſe more eminently dwells. In the hands and feet the veins and ſinews meet, and there pain and anguiſh meet with them, Pſal. 22. 16. They digged my hands and my feet. Now Chriſt by reaſon of his exact and excellent temper of Body had doubtleſs more quick, tender and delicate Senſes than other Men. His body was ſo formed that it might be a capacious Veſſel to take in more ſufferings than any other body can. Senſe is in ſome more delicate and tender, and in others dull, and blunt according to the temperament, and vivacity of the body and ſpirits. But in none as it was in Chriſt, whoſe body was miraculouſly formed on purpoſe to ſuffer unparallelled Miſeries and Sorrows in. A body haſt thou fitted me, Heb. 10. 5. Neither ſin, or ſickneſs had any way enfeebled or dulled it.

Corpus ejus fuit optime complexionatum, cum formatum fuit miraculoſe. Aquin. pars tertia. Art. 6.

Secondly, As his pains were ſharp, ſo they were univerſal, not affecting one, but every part. They ſeized every member. From head to foot, no member was free from torture. For as his head was wounded with thorns, his back with bloody laſhes, his ſide with a ſpear, his hands and feet with nails; ſo every other part was ſtretched and diſtended beyond its natural length, by hanging upon that cruel Engine of torment, the Croſs. And as every member, ſo every particular Senſe was afflicted, his ſight with vile wretches, cruel murderers that ſtood about him. His hearing with horrid blaſphemies, belcht out againſt him. His taſte with Vinegar and Gall, which they gave to aggravate his Miſery: His ſmell with that filthy Golgotha where he was crucified, and his feeling with exquiſite pains in every part. So that he was not only ſharply, but univerſally tormented.

Thirdly, Theſe univerſal pains were continual, not by fits, but without any intermiſſion. He had not a moment's eaſe by the ceſſation of pains. Wave came upon wave, one grief driving on another, till all God's waves and billows had gone over him. To be in extremity of pain, and that without a moment's intermiſſion, miſſion, will quickly pull down the ſtouteſt Nature in the World.

Fourthly, And Laſtly, As his Pains were ſharp, univerſal, and continual; ſo they were altogether unrelieved by his underſtanding Part. If a Man have ſweet Comforts flowing into his Soul from God, they will ſweetly demulce and allay the Pains of the Body. This made the Martyrs ſhout amidſt the Flames. Yes, even inferior Comforts and Delights of the Mind will greatly relieve the oppreſſed Body.

It's ſaid of Poſſidonius, that in a great Fit of the Stone he ſolaced himſelf, with Diſcourſes of Moral Vertue, and when the Pain twinged him, he would ſay, O Pain, thou do'ſt nothing, though thou art a little troubleſome, I will never confeſs thee to be Evil. And Epicurus in the Fits of the Cholick refreſhed himſelf, ob memoriam inventorum, (i. e.) by his Invention in Philoſophy.

Nihil agis dolor, quamvis ſis moleſtus, nunquam confitebor te eſſe malum

But now Chriſt had no Relief this way in the leaſt. Not a drop of Comfort came from Heaven into his Soul to relieve it, and the Body by it. But on the contrary, his Soul was filled up with Grief, and had an heavier Burden of its own to bear than that of the Body. So that inſtead of relieving, it increaſed unſpeakably the Burden of its outward Man. For,

Secondly, Let us conſider theſe inward Sufferings of his Soul, how great they were, and how quickly they ſpent his natural ſtrength, and turned his moiſture into the drought of Summer. And,

Firſt, His Soul felt the Wrath of an angry God, which was terribly impreſt upon it. The Wrath of a King is as the roaring of a Lyon; but what is that to the Wrath of a Deity? See what a Deſcription is given of it in Nahum 1. 6. Who can ſtand before his indignation? And who can abide in the fierceneſs of his anger? His fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him. Had not the ſtrength that ſupported Chriſt been greater than that of Rocks, this Wrath had certainly over-whelmed, and ground him to Powder.

Secondly, As it was the Wrath of God that lay upon his Soul, ſo it was the pure Wrath of God, without any allay or mixture. Not one drop of Comfort came from Heaven or Earth. All the Ingredients in his Cup were bitter ones. There was Wrath without Mercy; yea, Wrath without the leaſt degree of ſparing Mercy; for God ſpared not his own Son, Rom. 8. 32. Had Chriſt been abated or ſpared, we had not. If our Mercies muſt be pure Mercies, and our Glory in Heaven, pure and unmixed Glory; then the Wrath which he ſuffered, muſt be pure unmixed Wrath. Yea, Thirdly, As the Wrath, the pure unmixed Wrath of God lay upon his Soul, ſo all the Wrath of God was poured out upon him; even to the laſt drop. So that there is not one drop reſerved, for the Elect to feel. Chriſt's Cup was deep and large, it contained all the Fury and Wrath of an infinite God in it. And yet he drank it up. He bare it all; ſo that to believing Souls, who come to make Peace with God through Chriſt; he ſaith, Iſa. 27. 4. Fury is not in me. In all the Chaſtiſements God inflicts upon his People, there is no vindictive Wrath. Chriſt bare it all in his own Soul and Body on the Tree.

Fourthly, As it was all the Wrath of God that lay upon Chriſt, ſo it was Wrath aggravated in divers Reſpects, beyond that which the damned themſelves do ſuffer. That's ſtrange you will ſay, can there be any Sufferings worſe than thoſe the damned ſuffer, upon whom the Wrath of an infinite God is immediately tranſacted! Who holds them up with the Arm of his Power, while the Arm of his Juſtice lies on eternally. Can any Sorrows be greater than theſe? Yes, Chriſt's Sufferings were beyond theirs in divers particulars.

Firſt, None of the damned were ever ſo near and dear to God, as Chriſt was. They were eſtranged from the Womb; but Chriſt lay in his Boſom. When he ſmote Chriſt, he ſmote the man that was his fellow, Zach. 13. 7. But in ſmiting them, he ſmites his Enemies. When he had to do in a way of Satisfaction with Chriſt, he is ſaid not to ſpare his own Son, Rom. 8. 32. Never was the fury of God poured out upon ſuch a Perſon before.

Secondly, None of the damned had ever ſo large a Capacity to take in the full ſenſe of the Wrath of God, as Chriſt had. The larger any ones Capacity is, to underſtand and weigh his Troubles fully, the more grievous and heavy is his Burden. If a Man caſts Veſſels of greater and leſſer Quantity into the Sea, though all will be full, yet the greater the Veſſel is, the more Water it contains. Now Chriſt had a Capacity beyond all meer Creatures, to take in the Wrath of his Father. And what deep and large Apprehenſions he had of it, may be judged by the bloody Sweat in the Garden, which was the Effect of his meer Apprehenſions of the Wrath of God. Chriſt was a large Veſſel indeed. As he is capable of more Glory, ſo of more Senſe and Miſery than any other Perſon in the World.

Thirdly, The damned ſuffer not ſo innocently as Chriſt ſuffered, they ſuffer the juſt Demerit, and Recompence of their Sin. They have deſerved all that Wrath of God which they feel, and muſt feel for ever. It is but that Recompence which was meet. But Chriſt was altogether innocent. He had done no Iniquity, neither was Guile found in his Mouth, yet it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him. When Chriſt ſuffered, he ſuffered not for what he had done; but his Sufferings were the Sufferings of a Surety, paying the Debts of others. The Meſſiah was cut off, but not for himſelf, Dan. 9. 26. Thus you ſee what his external Sufferings in his Body, and his internal Sufferings in his Soul were.

Thirdly, In the laſt place it is evident that ſuch extream Sufferings as theſe, meeting together upon him, muſt needs exhauſt his very Spirits, and make him cry, I thirſt. For let us conſider, Firſt, What meer external Pains, and outward Afflictions can do. Theſe prey upon, and conſume our Spirits. So David complains, Pſalm 39. 11. When thou with rebukes, correcteſt man for iniquity; thou makeſt his beauty to conſume away as a moth, (i. e.) look as a Moth frets and conſumes the moſt ſtrong and well-wrought Garment, and makes it ſeary and rotten without any noiſe; ſo afflictions waſte and wear out the ſtrongeſt bodies. They make bodies of the firmeſt Conſtitution, like an old rotten garment. They ſhrivel and dry up the moſt vigorous and flouriſhing body, and make it like a bottle in the ſmoke, Pſalm 119. 83.

Sicut enim uter fumo maceratur, & torrefit; ita animus affiduis doloribus & continuo malorum æſtu exhauritur & conſumitur. Moller. in Loc.

Secondly, Conſider what meer internal troubles of the ſoul, can do upon the ſtrongeſt body. Theſe quickly ſpend its ſtrength, and devour the ſpirits. So Solomon ſpeaks, Prov. 17. 22. A broken ſpirit drieth the bones, (i. e.) it conſumes the very marrow with which they are moiſtned. So Pſalm 32. 3, 4. My bones waxed old, through my roaring all the day long. For day and night thy hand was heavy on me; my moiſture (or chief ſap) is turned into the drought of ſummer. What a ſpectacle of pity was Francis Spira become, meerly through the anguiſh of his ſpirit? A ſpirit ſharpen'd with ſuch troubles, like a keen Knife, cuts through the ſheath. Certainly who ever hath had any acquaintance with troubles of ſoul, knows by ſad experience, how like an internal flame it feeds and preys upon the very ſpirits; ſo that the ſtrongeſt ſtoop, ~~and quail~~ under it. But,

Thirdly, When outward bodily pains ſhall meet with inward ſpiritual troubles, and both in extremity ſhall come in one day; how ſoon muſt the firmeſt body fail and waſt away like a candle lighted at both ends! Now ſtrength fails a-pace, and nature muſt fall flat under this load. When the Ship in which Paul ſailed, fell into a place where two Seas met, it was quickly wrackt, and ſo will the beſt conſtituted body in the world, if it fall under both theſe troubles together. The ſoul and body ſympathize with each other under trouble, and mutually relieve each other.

If the Body be ſick and full of Pain, the Spirit ſupports, chears, and relieves it by reaſon, and reſolution all that it can. And if the ſpirit be afflicted, the body ſympathizes, and helps to bear up the ſpirit. But now, if the one be over-laid with ſtrong pains, more than it can bear, and calls for aid from the other, and the other be oppreſſed with intolerable anguiſh, and cries out under a burden greater than it can bear, ſo that it can contribute no help, but inſtead thereof adds to its burden which before was above ſtrength to bear. Now nature muſt needs fail, and the friendly union betwixt ſoul and body ſuffer a diſſolution by ſuch an over-whelming preſſure as this. So it was with Chriſt, when outward and inward ſorrows met in one day in their extremity upon him. Hence the bitter Cry, I thirſt.

Inference 1. How horrid a thing is Sin! How great is that Evil of Evils! Which deſerves that all theſe ſhould be inflicted and ſuffered for the expiation of it!

The ſufferings of Chriſt for ſin, gives us the true account, and fulleſt repreſentation of its Evil. "The Law (ſaith one) is a bright "Glaſs wherein we may ſee the evil of ſin; "but there is the red Glaſs of the ſuffering "of Chriſt; and in that we may ſee more "of the evil of ſin; than if God ſhould let "us down to Hell, and there we ſhould ſee "all the tortures, and torments of the damned. "If we ſhould ſee them, how they lie "ſweltering under God's wrath there, it were "not ſo much as the beholding of ſin, thro' "this red Glaſs of the ſufferings of Chriſt.

Mr. J. B. in his Evil of Evils, p. 124.

Suppoſe the bars of the bottomleſs Pit were broken up, and damned ſpirits ſhould aſcend from thence, and come up among us; with the chains of darkneſs ratling at their heels, and we ſhould hear the groans, and ſee the gaſtly paleneſs, and tremblings of thoſe poor creatures, upon whom the righteous God hath impreſt his fury and indignation; if we could hear how their conſciences are laſhed by the fearful ſcourge of guilt, and how they ſhriek at every laſh the arm of Juſtice gives them.

If we ſhould ſee and hear all this, it is not ſo much as what we may ſee in this Text; where the Son of God under his ſufferings for it, cries out, I thirſt. For as I ſhewed you before, Chriſt's ſufferings in divers reſpects were beyond theirs. O then, let not thy vain heart ſlight ſin; as if it were but a ſmall thing. If ever God ſhew thee the face of ſin in this Glaſs, thou wilt ſay, there is not ſuch another horrid repreſentation to be made to a Man in all the world. Fools make a mock at ſin, but wiſe Men tremble at it.

Inference 2. How afflictive and intolerable are inward troubles. Did Chriſt complain ſo ſadly under them, and cry, I thirſt? Surely then they are no ſuch light matters as many are apt to make of them. If they ſo ſcorch'd the very heart of Chriſt, dried up the green tree, preyed upon his very ſpirits, and turned his moiſture into the drought of Summer; they deſerve not to be ſlighted, as they are by ſome. The Lord Jeſus was fitted to bear and ſuffer as ſtrong troubles as ever befel the nature of Man, and he did bear all other troubles with admirable patience; but when it came to this, when the flames of God's wrath ſcorched his Soul; then he cries, I thirſt.

David's heart was for courage as the heart of a Lion; but when God exerciſed him with inward troubles for ſin, then he roars out under the anguiſh of it. I am feeble, and ſore broken; I have roared by reaſon of the diſquietneſs of my heart. My heart panteth, my ſtrength faileth me; as for the light of mine eyes, it is alſo gone from me, Pſal. 38. 8, 10. A wounded Spirit who can bear? Many have profeſſed that all the torments in the world are but toys to it. The racking fits of the Gout, the grinding tortures of the Stone, are nothing to the wrath of God, ſet on upon the conſcience. What is the Worm that never dies, but the efficacy of a guilty conſcience? This Worm feeds and nibbles upon the very inwards, upon the tender and moſt ſenſible part of Man; and is the principal part of Hell's horror. In bodily pains, a Man may be relieved by proper medicines, here nothing but the blood of ſprinkling relieves; in outward pains the body may be ſupported by the reſolution and courage of the mind, here the mind it ſelf is wounded. O let none deſpiſe theſe troubles, they are dreadful things.

Inference 3. How dreadful a place in Hell! Where this cry is heard for ever, I thirſt. There the Wrath of the great and terrible God flames upon the damned for ever, in which they thirſt and none relieve them. If Chriſt complained, I thirſt, when he had conflicted but a few hours with the Wrath of God; what is their ſtate then, that are to grapple with it for ever! When Millions of Years are paſt and gone, ten thouſand Millions more are coming on. There's an everlaſting Thirſt in Hell, and it admits of no Relief. There are no full Cups in Hell, but an eternal unrelieved Thirſt. Think on this ye that now add Drunkenneſs to Thirſt, who tumble in all ſenſual Pleaſures, and drown Nature in an exceſs of Luxury. Remember what Dives ſaid in Luke 16. 24. And he cried and ſaid, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and ſend Lazarus that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, for I am tormented in this flame. No Cups of Water, no Bowls of Wine in Hell. There that Throat will be parched with Thirſt, which is now drowned with exceſs. The Songs of the Drunkard turned into Howlings. If Thirſt in the extremity of it be now ſo unſufferable, what is that Thirſt which is infinitely beyond this in meaſure, and never ſhall be relieved? Say not it's hard that God ſhould deal thus with his poor Creatures. You will not think it ſo if you conſider what he expoſed his own dear Son to, when Sin was but imputed to him. And what that Man deſerves to feel, that hath not only merited Hell, but by refuſing Chriſt the Remedy, the hotteſt place in Hell.

Tunc edax flamma comburet, quos nunc carnalis delectatio polluit. Tunc infinitum patens inferni barathrum, &c. Greg.

An English Merchant living at Dantzick, related this ſtory to a godly Miniſter, that a Friend of his (a Merchant alſo) went to a Convent, and dined with the Fryers there, their Entertainment was very noble; after he had dined and ſeen all, the Merchant fell to commending their pleaſant Lives; yea, ſaid one of the Fryers to him, we live gallantly indeed, had we any Body to go to Hell for us when we die. Mr. Firmin's Real Chriſtian.

In this thirſt of Chriſt we have the livelieſt emblem of the ſtate of the damned, that ever was preſented to Men in this World. Here you ſee a Perſon labouring in extremity under the infinite Wrath of the great and terrible God lying upon his Soul and Body at once, and cauſing him to utter this doleful Cry, I thirſt. Only Chriſt endured this but a little while, the damned muſt endure it for ever. In that they differ. As alſo in the innocency and ability of the Perſon's ſuffering. And in the end for which they ſuffer. But ſurely ſuch as this, will the cry of thoſe Souls be that are caſt away for ever. O terrible Thirſt!

Inference 4. How much do nice and wanton Appetites deſerve to be reproved! The Son of God wanted a draught of cold water to relieve him, and could not have it. God hath given us variety of refreſhing Creatures to relieve us, and we deſpiſe them. We have better things than a cup of Water to refreſh and delight us when we are thirſty, and yet are not pleaſed. O that this complaint of Chriſt on the Croſs, I thirſt, were but believingly conſidered, it would make you bleſs God, for what you now deſpiſe. And beget contentment in you, for the meaneſt mercies and moſt common favours in this World. Did the Lord of all things cry, I thirſt, and had nothing in his extremity to comfort him? and doſt thou who haſt a thouſand times over forfeited all temporal, as well as ſpiritual mercies, contemn and ſlight the good Creatures of God! What deſpiſe a Cup of Water, who deſerveſt nothing but a Cup of Wrath, from the hand of the Lord! O lay it to heart, and hence learn Contenment with any thing.

Inference 5. Did Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs cry, I thirſt? Then Believers ſhall never thirſt eternally. Their thirſt ſhall be certainly ſatisfied.

There is a threefold thirſt, gracious, natural and penal. The gracious thirſt is the vehement deſire of a ſpiritual Heart after God. Of this David ſpeaks, Pſalm 42. 1, 2. As the hart panteth after the water brooks, ſo panteth my ſoul after thee, O God. My ſoul thirſteth for God, for the living God; when ſhall I come and appear before God? And this is indeed a vehement thirſt, it makes the Soul break with the longings it hath after God, Pſalm 119. It's a thirſt proper to believers, who have taſted that the Lord is gracious.

Natural thirſt is (as before was noted) a deſire of refreſhment by humid nouriſhment, and it's common both to believers and unbelievers in this World. God's dear Saints have been driven to ſuch extremities in this Life, that their Tongues have even failed for thirſt. VVhen the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, Iſa. 41. 17. And of the people of God in their Captivity it's ſaid, Lam. 4. 4. The tongue of the ſucking child cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirſt. The young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them. They that feed delicately are deſolate in the ſtreets, they that were brought up in ſcarlet, embrace dunghils. To this many that fear the Lord have been reduced.

A Penal thirſt is God's juſt denying of all refreſhment, or relief to ſinners in their extremities, and that as a due puniſhment for their ſin. This believers ſhall never feel, becauſe when Chriſt thirſted upon the Croſs, he made full ſatisfaction to God in their room. Theſe ſufferings of Chriſt, as they were ordained for them, ſo the benefits of them are truly imputed to them. And for the natural thirſt, that ſhall be ſatisfied. For in Heaven we ſhall live without theſe neceſſities, and dependencies upon the Creature. We ſhall be equal with the Angels in the way and manner of living and ſubſiſting, Luke 20. 36. And for the gracious thirſting of their Souls for God, it ſhall be fully ſatisfied. So it's promiſed, Matth. 5. 6. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs, for they ſhall be filled. They ſhall then depend no more upon the ſtream, but drink from the ever-flowing fountain it ſelf, Pſalm 36. 8. They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy Houſe, and thou ſhalt make them drink of the river of thy pleaſures. For with thee is the fountain of life, and in thy light ſhall we ſee light. There they ſhall drink and praiſe, and praiſe and drink for evermore. All their thirſty deſires ſhall be filled with compleat ſatisfaction. O how deſirable a ſtate is heaven upon this account! and how ſhould we be reſtleſs till we come thither; as the thirſty Traveller is until he meet that cool refreſhing ſpring he wants, and ſeeks for. This preſent ſtate is a ſtate of thirſting, that to come of refreſhment and ſatisfaction. Some drops indeed come from that fountain by faith, but they quench not the Believer's thirſt. Rather like water ſprinkled on fire, they make it burn the more; but there the thirſty Soul hath enough.

O bleſs God that Jeſus Chriſt thirſted under the heat of his wrath once, that you might not be ſcorched with it for ever. If he had not cry'd, I thirſt, you muſt have cry'd out of thirſt eternally, and never be ſatisfied.

Inference 6. Laſtly, Did Chriſt in the extremity of his Sufferings, cry, I thirſt? Then how great beyond all compare is the love of God to ſinners; who for their ſakes expoſed the Son of his Love to ſuch extream ſufferings?

Three Conſiderations marvelouſly heighten that Love of the Father.

Firſt, His putting the Lord Jeſus into ſuch a condition. There is none of us would endure to ſee a Child of his own lie panting, and thirſting in the extremity of Torments, for the faireſt inheritance on Earth: Much leſs to have the Soul of a Child conflicting with the wrath of God, and making ſuch heart-rending complaints as Chriſt made upon the Croſs, if we might have the largeſt Empire in the World for it: Yet ſuch was the ſtrength of the Love of God to us, that he willingly gave Jeſus Chriſt to all this miſery and torture for us. What ſhall we call this Love! O the heighth, length, depth and breadth of that love which paſſeth knowledge! The love of God to Jeſus Chriſt was infinitely beyond all the love we have to our Children, as the Sea is more than a Spoonful of Water; and yet, as dearly as he loved him, he was content to expoſe him to all this, rather than we ſhould periſh eternally.

Secondly, As God the Father was content to expoſe Chriſt to this extremity; ſo in that extremity to hear his bitter cries, and dolorous complaints; and yet not relieve him with the leaſt refreſhment till he fainted, and died under it. He heard the cries of his Son. That Voice, I thirſt, pierced Heaven, and reach'd the Father's Ear; but yet he will not refreſh him in his Agonies, nor abate him any thing of the debt he was now paying, and all this for the love he had to poor ſinners. Had Chriſt been relieved in his ſufferings and ſpared, then God could not have pitied or ſpared us. The extremity of Chriſt's ſufferings was an act of Juſtice to him; and the greateſt Mercy to us that ever could be manifeſted. Nor indeed (though Chriſt ſo bitterly complains of his thirſt) was he willing to be relieved, till he had finiſhed his work. O love unſpeakable! He doth not complain, that he might be relieved, but to manifeſt how great that ſorrow was, which his Soul now felt upon our account.

Thirdly, And it ſhould never be forgotten, that Jeſus Chriſt was expoſed to theſe extremities of ſorrow, for ſinners, the greateſt of ſinners, who deſerved not one drop of Mercy from God. This commends the love of God ſingularly to us, in that whilſt we were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for us, Rom. 5. 8. Thus the love of God in Jeſus Chriſt ſtill riſes higher and higher in every diſcovery of it. Admire, adore and be raviſhed with the thoughts of this love.

Thanks be to God for his unſpeakable Gift.

SER-

SERMON XXXV.

erm. 35. pens the xth excel- ent ſaying Chriſt up- the Croſs.

JOHN XIX. 30.

When Jeſus therefore had received the Vinegar, he ſaid, [It is finiſhed,] and he bowed his Head, and gave up the ghoſt.

IT is finiſhed. This is the ſixth remarkable Word of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs, uttered as a triumphant ſhout when he ſaw the glorious iſſue of all his Sufferings now at hand.

It is but one Word in the Original, but in that one word is contained the ſum of all Joy. The very ſpirits of all divine conſolation. The ancient Greeks reckoned it their excellency to ſpeak much in a little. To give a ſea of matter, in a drop of Language. What they only ſought, is here found. I find ſome variety (and indeed variety, rather than contrariety) among Expoſitors about the Relation of theſe Words.

Docet in ejus morte to- um ſalutis noſtræ comple- ntum, & ſingulas partes ntineri. Huic doctrinæ nexa eſt omnium legis ituum abrogatio. Calv.

Some are of opinion, that the Antecedent is the legal Types and Ceremonies; and ſo make this to be the meaning. It is finiſhed: That is, all the Types and Prefigurations that ſhadowed forth the Redemption of Souls by the blood of Chriſt, are now fulfilled & accompliſhed. And doubtleſs as this is in it ſelf a truth, ſo it's ſuch a truth as may not be excluded, as alien to the true ſcope and ſenſe of this Place. And tho' it be objected, that many Types and Prefigurations remained at this time unſatisfied, even all that looked to the actual death of Chriſt, his continuance in the ſtate of the dead, and his reſurrection; yet it's eaſily removed, by conſidering that they are ſaid to be finiſhed, becauſe they were juſt finiſhing, or ready to be finiſhed. And it is as if Chriſt had ſaid, I am now putting the laſt hand to it. A few moments of time more will compleat and finiſh it; I have the ſum now in my hand, which will fully ſatisfie and pay God the whole Debt.

Factum di- cit, quod Jam in eo fuit, & pœ- ne factum eſſet. Cam.

'Tis now but bow the Head, and the work is done, and all the Types therein fulfilled. So that this cannot exclude the fulfilling of the Types in the Death of Chriſt from their juſt claim to the Senſe of this Place. But yet though we cannot here exclude this Senſe, we cannot allow it to be the whole or principal Senſe. For lo! a far greater Truth is contained herein, even the finiſhing or compleatment of the whole deſign and project of our Redemption, and therein of all the Types that prefigured it. Both theſe judicious Calvin conjoyns; making the compleating of Redemption the Principal, and the fulfilling of all the Types, the Collateral and leſs principal Senſe of it.

Yet it muſt be obſerved, when we ſay Chriſt finiſhed Redemption-work by his Death; the meaning is not that his Death alone did finiſh it: For his abode in the Grave, Reſurrection and Aſcention, had all of them their joint influence into it: But theſe being ſhortly to follow, are all included in the ſcope of this Place. According then to the principal Scope of the Place we obſerve, Doct. That Jeſus Chriſt hath perfected, and compleatly finiſhed the great work of Redemption committed to him by God the Father.

To this great Truth the Apoſtle gives a full Teſtimony, Heb. 10. 14. By one offering he hath perfected for ever, them that are ſanctified. And to the ſame purpoſe ſpeaks, John 17. 4. I have glorified thee on earth; I have finiſhed the work thou gaveſt me to do. Concerning this work and the finiſhing thereof by Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs, we ſhall enquire, What this Work was; How Chriſt finiſhed it; and, What evidence can be produced for the finiſhing of it.

Firſt, What was the Work which Chriſt finiſhed by his Death?

It was the fulfilling the whole Law of God in our room, and for our Redemption as a Sponſor, or ſurety for us. The Law is a glorious thing. The holineſs of God, that fiery Attribute, is engraven or ſtampt upon every part of it. Deut. 33. 2. From his right hand went a fiery Law. The jealouſie of the Lord watched over every point and tittle of it, for his dreadful and glorious Name was upon it. It curſed every one that continued not in all things contained therein, Gal. 3. 10. Two things therefore were neceſſarily required in him that ſhould perfectly fulfil it, and both found in our Surety, and in him only; viz. a ſubjective and effective perfection.

Firſt, A ſubjective Perfection. He that wanted this, could never ſay, It is finiſhed. Perfect working always follows a perfect being. That he might therefore finiſh this great Work of Obedience, and therein the glorious deſign of our Redemption; lo! in what ſhining and perfect Holineſs was he produced? Luke 1. 35. That holy thing that ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God: And indeed, ſuch an High-prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, Heb. 7. 26. So that the Law could have no exception againſt his Perſon. Nay, it was never ſo honoured ſince its firſt promulgation, as it was by having ſuch a perfect and excellent Perſon as Chriſt, to ſtand at its Bar; and give it due reparation.

Secondly, There muſt be alſo an effective Perfection, or a perfection of working, and obeying, before it could be ſaid, it is finiſhed. This Chriſt had; for he continued in all things, written in the Law, to do them. He fulfilled all righteouſneſs, as it behoved him to do. Matth. 3. 15. He did all that was required to be done. And ſuffered all that was requiſite to be ſuffered all that was commanded, or threatned; in ſuch perfection of Obedience, both active and paſſive, that the pure eye of Divine Juſtice could not find a flaw in it. And ſo finiſhed the VVork his Father gave him to do. And this work finiſhed by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, was both a neceſſary, difficult, and precious VVork.

Firſt, It was a neceſſary work, which Chriſt finiſhed upon the Croſs. Neceſſary upon a threefold account.

Opus neceſſarium ex parte Patris.

It was neceſſary on the Father's account. I do not mean, that God was under any neceſſity from his Nature of redeeming us this, or any other way. For our Redemdption is opus liberi conſilii, an affect of the free Counſel of God; but when God had once decreed and determined to redeem and ſave poor Sinners by Jeſus Chriſt; then it became neceſſary that the Counſel of God ſhould be fulfilled. Acts 4. 28. To do whatſoever thy hand, and counſel had before determined to be done.

Ex parte Filii.

Secondly, It was neceſſary with reſpect to Chriſt. Upon the account of that previous compact that was betwixt the Father and him about it. Therefore it's ſaid by Chriſt himſelf, Luke 22. 22. Truly the Son of Man goeth as it was determined, (i. e.) as it was fore-agreed, and covenanted under the neceſſity of fulfilling his engagement to the Father, he came into the World; and being come, he ſtill minds his engagement, John 9. 3. I muſt work the works of him that ſent me.

Ex parte noſtri.

Thirdly, Yea, and it was no leſs neceſſary upon our account that this work ſhould be finiſhed. For had not Chriſt finiſhed this Work, Sin had quickly finiſhed all our Lives, Comforts and Hopes. Without the finiſhing this Work, not a Son or Daughter of Adam could ever have ſeen the face of God. Therefore it's ſaid, John 3. 14, 15. As Moſes lifted up the ſerpent in the wilderneſs, ſo [muſt] the Son of man be lifted up; that whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have Everlaſting Life. On all theſe accounts the finiſhing of this Work was neceſſary.

Secondly, As it was neceſſary this work ſhould be finiſhed, ſo the finiſhing of it, was exceeding difficult. It coſt many a cry, many a groan, many a tear, many a hard tug, before Chriſt could ſay, it is finiſhed. All the Angels in Heaven were not able by their united ſtrength to lift that Burden one inch from the ground, which Chriſt bare upon his Shoulders, yea, and bare it away. But how heavy a Burden this was, may in part appear, by his propaſſion in the Garden, and the bitter out-cries he made upon the Croſs, which in their proper places have been opened.

Thirdly, and Laſtly, It was a moſt precious Work which Chriſt finiſhed by his Death. That Work was diſpatched, and finiſhed in few hours, which will be the matter of everlaſting Songs and Triumphs to the Angels and Saints to all Eternity. O it was a precious VVork. The Mercies that now flow out of this Fountain, viz. Juſtification, Sanctification, Adoption, &c. are not to be valued. Beſides the endleſs Happineſs and Glory of the Coming-world, which cannot enter into the Heart of Man to conceive. If the Angels ſang when the foundation Stone was laid, what ſhouts, what triumphs, ſhould there be among the Saints when this Voice is heard, It is finiſhed?

Secondly, Let us next inform our ſelves how, and in what manner Jeſus Chriſt finiſhed this glorious VVork. And if you ſearch the Scriptures upon that account, you will find, that he finiſhed it, obedientially, freely, diligently and fully.

Obedienti ſervi, no ſervilis.

Firſt, This bleſſed VVork was finiſhed by Jeſus Chriſt moſt obediently, Phil. 2. 8. He became obedient to death, even the death of the Croſs. His obedience was the obedience of a Servant, though not ſervile Obedience. So it was foretold of him, before he touched this VVork. Iſa. 50. 5. The Lord God hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away my back, (i. e.) my Father told me the very worſt of it. He told me what hard and heavy things I muſt undergo, if ever I finiſhed this deſign of Redemption; and I was not rebellious, (i. e.) I heartily ſubmitted to, and accepted all thoſe Difficulties. For there is a Meioſis in the words. I was content to ſtoop to the hardeſt and moſt ignominious part of it, rather than not finiſh it.

Secondly, As Chriſt finiſhed it obediently, ſo he finiſhed it freely. Freedom and Obedience in acting are not at all oppoſite to, or excluſive of each other. Moſes his Mother nurſed him in obedience to the command of Pharaoh's Daughter, yet moſt freely, with reſpect to her own delight, and contentment in that VVork. So it's ſaid of Chriſt, and that by his own Mouth, John 10. 17, 18. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of my ſelf; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again; this commandment have I received of my Father. He liked the VVork for the ends ſake. VVhen he had a proſpect of it from Eternity, then were his delights with the Sons of Men. Then he rejoyced in the habitable parts of the Earth, Prov. 8. 30, 31. And when he came into the VVorld about it, with what a full and free conſent did his Heart eccho to the voice of his Father calling him to it? Juſt as you ſhall ſometimes hear an eccho, anſwering your voice two or three times over, Pſalm 40. Lo, I come; I delight to do thy will; thy Law is within my heart. He finiſhed the Work freely.

Thirdly, As he finiſhed it freely, ſo he finiſhed it diligently. He wrought hard from the morning of his Life to the end of it; he was never idle wherever he was, but went about doing good, Acts 10. 38. Sometimes he was ſo intent upon his Work, that he forgat to eat bread, Joh. 4. 30, 31. As the Life of ſome Men is but a diverſion from one trifle to another, from one Pleaſure to another; ſo the whole Life of Chriſt was ſpent and eaten up betwixt one Work or another. Never was a Life ſo filled up with labour. The very moments of his time, were all imploy'd for God, to finiſh this Work.

Fourthly, and Laſtly, he finiſhed it compleatly and fully. All that was to be done by way of impetration, and meritorious Redemption, is fully done. No hand can come after his. Angels can add nothing to it. That is perfected to which nothing is wanting and to which nothing can be added. Such is the work Chriſt finiſhed. Whatever the Law demanded, is perfectly paid. Whatever a ſinner needs, is perfectly obtained, and purchaſed. Nothing can be added to what Chriſt hath done. He put the laſt hand to it, when he ſaid, it is finiſhed. Thus you ſee what the work was, and how Chriſt finiſhed it.

Perfectum eſt, cui nihil deeſt, & cui nihil addi poteſt.

Thirdly, In the laſt place, let us conſider what aſſurance, or evidence we have that Chriſt hath ſo finiſhed Redemption-work. And if you purſue that inquiry, you will find theſe among other plain evidences of it.

Firſt, When Chriſt died, Redemption-work muſt needs be finiſhed, in as much as the obedience and blood of Chriſt, was of infinite value and efficacy, ſufficiently able to accompliſh all the end for which it was ſhed. And that not by divine acceptation, but upon the account of its proper value. This effect, viz. the finiſhing Redemption-work meritoriouſly by Chriſt, doth not exceed the power of the cauſe to which we aſſign it; viz. the death of Chriſt. And if there be a ſole ſufficient cauſe in act, what hinders but the effect ſhould follow? There was certainly enough in Chriſt's Blood, to ſatisfie the utmoſt demand of Juſtice: when that therefore is actually ſhed Juſtice is fully paid, and conſequently the Souls for whom, and in whoſe names its paid, fully redeemed from the Curſe by the Merit thereof.

Non ex divina acceptatione, ſed ex proprio valore.

Secondly, Its apparent that Chriſt finiſhed the Work, by the diſcharge or acquittance God the Father gave him, when he raiſed him from the dead, and ſet him at his own right hand. If Chriſt the ſinners Surety, be as ſuch diſcharged by God the Creditor; then the debt is fully paid. Now Chriſt was juſtified, and cleared at his Reſurrection, from all charges and demands of Juſtice. Therefore its ſaid, 1 Tim. 3. 16. that he was juſtified in the ſpirit, (i. e.) openly diſcharged, by that very act of the Godhead, his raiſing him from the dead. For when the Grave was opened and Chriſt roſe, it was to him as the opening of the Priſon doors, and ſetting a Surety at liberty, who was clapt up for another Man's debt. To the ſame ſenſe Chriſt ſpeaks of his Aſcenſion, John 16. 10. The ſpirit (ſaith he) ſhall convince the world of righteouſneſs, (i. e.) of a compleat and perfect righteouſneſs in me, imputable to ſinners for their perfect Juſtification. And whereby ſhall he convince and ſatisfie them that it is ſo? Why, by this, becauſe I go to the Father, and ye ſee me no more. There's a great deal of force and weight in thoſe Words, becauſe you ſee me no more. For it amounts to this much, by this you ſhall be ſatisfied I have fully and compleatly performed all righteouſneſs, and that by my active and paſſive obedience I have ſo fully ſatisfied God for you, as that you ſhall never be charged or condemned; becauſe when I go to Heaven, I ſhall abide there in glory with my Father, and not be ſent back again, as I ſhould, if any thing had been omitted by me. And this the Apoſtle gives you alſo in ſo many plain words, Heb. 10. 12, 13, 14. After he had offered one ſacrifice for ſins, for ever ſat down on the right hand of God. And what doth he infer from that but the very truth before us, verſe 14. that by one offering he hath perfected for ever, them that are ſanctified.

Thirdly, Its evident Chriſt hath finiſhed the Work, by the bleſſed Effects of it, upon all that believe in him. For by vertue of the compleatneſs of Chriſt's Work finiſhed by his Death; their Conſciences are now rationally pacified, and their Souls at death actually received into Glory. Neither of which could be, if Chriſt had not in this World finiſhed the Work. If Chriſt had done his Work imperfectly, he could not have given reſt and tranquility to the labouring and burdened Souls that come to him, as now he doth, Matth. 11. 28. Conſcience would ſtill be heſitating, trembling and unſatisfied. And had he not finiſhed his Work, he could not have entrance through the vail of his Fleſh, into Heaven; as all that believe in him have, Heb. 10. 19, 20. If he had but almoſt done that Work, we had been but almoſt ſaved, that is, certainly damned. And thus you ſee briefly the evidences, that the work is finiſhed.

Inference 1. Hath Chriſt perfected and compleatly finiſhed all his Work for us, how ſweet a relief is this to us that believe in him, againſt all the defects and imperfections of all the works of God, that are wrought by us? There's nothing finiſhed that we do. All our duties are imperfect duties, they come off lamely, and defectively from our hands. Its Chriſt's charge againſt the Church of Sardis, Rev. 3. 2. I have not found thy Works πεπληρωμένα perfect, or filled up before God. O there is much emptineſs, and vanity in the beſt of our Duties: But here's the grand relief, and that which anſwers to all the grounds of our Doubts and Fears upon that account, Jeſus Chriſt hath finiſhed all his Work though we can finiſh none of ours. And ſo, though we be defective, poor imperfect Creatures in our ſelves; yet notwithſtanding, we are compleat in him, Col. 2. 9, 10. though we cannot perfectly obey, or fulfil one command of the Law, yet is the righteouſneſs of the Law fulfilled in us that believe, Rom. 8. 4. Chriſt's compleat obedience being imputed to us, makes us compleat, and without fault before God.

It is true, we ought to be humbled for our defects, and troubled for every failing in obedience; but we ſhould not be diſcouraged, though multitudes of weakneſſes be upon us; and many infirmities compaſs us about in every duty we put our hand to. Though we have no righteouſneſs of our own, yet of God, Chriſt is made unto us righteouſneſs; and that righteouſneſs of his, is infinitely better than our own. Inſtead of our own we have his; (i. e.) we have Gold for Dung. O bleſſed be God, for Chriſt's perfect righteouſneſs.

Inference 2. Did Chriſt finiſh his work with his own hand? How dangerous and diſhonourable a thing is it, to join any thing of our own, to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, in point of Juſtification before God! Jeſus Chriſt will never endure this. It reflects upon his work diſhonourably. He doth not (in this caſe) affect ſocial Glory. Not I, and my God; I, and my Chriſt did this: He will be all, or none in your Juſtification. If he have finiſhed the Work, what need of our Additions? And if not, to what purpoſe are they? Can we finiſh that which Chriſt himſelf could not? But we would fain be ſharing with him in this honour, which he will never endure. Did he finiſh the Work by himſelf, and will he ever divide the glory and praiſe of it with us? No, no; Chriſt is no half Saviour. O it's an hard thing to bring theſe proud Hearts to live upon Chriſt for Righteouſneſs. We would fain add our Penny to make up Chriſt's ſumm. But if you will have it ſo, or have nothing to do with Chriſt, you and your Penny muſt periſh together, Iſa. 50. ult. God gives us the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, as he gave Manna to the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſs. It's ſaid, Deut. 8. 16. That he fed them with Manna in the wilderneſs, that he might humble them. The quality of the Food was not humbling, for it was Angels Food; but the manner of giving it was ſo. They muſt live by Faith upon God for it, from day to day. This was not like other Food, produced by their own labour. Certainly God takes the right way to humble proud Nature, in calling ſinners wholly off from their own Righteouſneſs, to Chriſt for their Juſtification.

Inference 3. Did Chriſt finiſh his Work for us? Then there can be no doubt, but he will alſo finiſh his work in us. As he begun the Work of our Redemption, and finiſhed it; ſo he that hath begun the good Work in you will alſo finiſh it upon your ſouls. And of this the Apoſtle ſaith, He is confident, Phil. 1. 6. Jeſus Chriſt is not only called the Author, but alſo the Finiſher of our Faith, Heb. 12. 2. If he begin it, no doubt but he will finiſh it. And indeed the finiſhing of his own Work of Redemption without us, gives full evidence that he will finiſh his Work of Sanctification within us: And that becauſe theſe two Works of Chriſt, have a reſpect and relation to each other: And ſuch a Relation, that the Work he finiſhed by his own Death, Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, would be in vain to us, if the Work of Sanctification in us ſhould not in like manner be finiſhed. Therefore as he preſented a perfect ſacrifice to God, and finiſhed Redemption-work; ſo will he preſent every man perfect and compleat, for whom he here offered up himſelf. For he will not loſe the end of all his ſufferings at laſt. To what purpoſe would his meritorious Impetration be, without compleat and full Application? Be not therefore diſcouraged at the defects and imperfections of your inherent grace. Be humbled for them, but be not dejected by them: This is Chriſt's Work, as well as that. That Work is finiſhed, and ſo will this.

Inference 4. Is Chriſt's Work of Redemption a compleat and finiſhed Work? How excellent and comfortable beyond all compare, is the method and way of Faith! Surely the way of believing is the moſt excellent way in which a poor ſinner can approach God, for it brings before him a compleat, intire, perfect Righteouſneſs; and this muſt needs be moſt honourable to God, moſt comfortable to the Soul that draws nigh to God. O what a compleat, finiſhed perfect thing is the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt! The ſharp eye of the holy and jealous God cannot find the leaſt flaw, or defect in it. Let God or Conſcience look upon it. Turn it every way, view it on every ſide, throughly weigh and examine it; it will appear a pure, a perfect piece, containing in it, whatſoever is neceſſary for the reconciling of an angry God, or pacifying of a diſtreſſed and perplexed Soul. How pleaſing therefore and acceptable to God muſt be that Faith, which preſents ſo compleat and excellent an attonement to him! Hence the acting of our Faith upon Chriſt for Righteouſneſs, the approaches of Faith to God with ſuch an acceptable preſent, is called the work of God: That is, the moſt grateful, acceptable and well-pleaſing work to God, that a Creature can perform, John 6. 29. This is the work of God, that ye believe. One act of faith pleaſes him more, than if you ſhould toil and drudge all your lives at a taſk of obedience to the Law. As it's more for God's Honour, and thy comfort to pay all thou oweſt him at one round payment, in one full Summ, than to make a dribling payment by a Penny a day, and never be able to make full payment, or ſee the Bond cancelled. This perfect Work, only produces perfect Peace.

Inference 5. Did Chriſt work, and work out all that God gave him to do; till he had finiſhed his Work? How neceſſary then is a laborious working Life, to all that call themſelves Chriſtians? The Life of Chriſt you ſee was a laborious Life. Shall he work, and we play? Shall a zealous, active, working Chriſt, be reproached with idle negligent and lazy Followers? O work, and work out your own ſalvation with fear and trembling, Phil. 2. 12.

But if Chriſt wrought ſo hard, we may ſit ſtill. If he finiſhed the Work, nothing remains for us to do.

Nothing of that Work which Chriſt did, remains for you to do. It's your commendation and duty to leave all that to Chriſt; but there's other work for you to do: Yea, ſtore of Work lying upon your hands. You muſt work as well as Chriſt, though not for the ſame ends Chriſt did. He wrought hard to ſatisfie the Law, by fulfilling all Righteouſneſs. He wrought all his life long, to work out a righteouſneſs to juſtifie you before God. This Work falls to no hand but Chriſt's, but you muſt work to obey the commands of Chriſt, into whoſe right ye are come by Redemption. You muſt work to teſtifie your thankfulneſs to Chriſt, for the work finiſhed for you. You muſt work to glorifie God by your Obedience. Let your light ſo ſhine before men. For theſe and divers other ſuch ends and reaſons, your life muſt be a working life. God preſerve all his People from the groſs and vile opinions of Antinomian Libertines, who cry up Grace; and decry Obedience. Who under ſpecious pretences of exalting a naked Chriſt upon the Throne, do indeed ſtrip him naked of a great part of his Glory and vilely dethrone him. My Pen ſhall not Engliſh, what mine eyes have red. Tell it not in Gath.

Da mihi Chriſtum, non quæro dona gratiæ, ſed Chriſtum. Non quæro promiſſiones, ſed Chriſtum. Non quæro ſanctificationem, ſed Chriſtum. Ne mihi narra fabulam de mediatore, & officio; narra mihi de Chriſto. Commentarius de ſtatu Eccleſ. Brit. p. 45.

But for thee, Reader, be thou a follower of Chriſt: Imitate thy Pattern. Yea, let me perſuade thee as ever thou hopeſt to clear up thine intereſt in him, imitate him in ſuch particulars as theſe that follow.

Firſt, Chriſt began early to work for God. He took the morning of his life, the very top of the morning to work for God. How is it (ſaid he to his Parents when he was but a Child of about twelve years) that ye ſought me? Wiſt ye not that I muſt be about my Father's buſineſs? Reader, if the morning of thy Life be not gone, oh devote it to the work of God, as Chriſt did. If it be, ply thy Work the cloſer in the afternoon of thy Life. If a Man have any great and neceſſary buſineſs to do, its good doing it in the morning; afterwards a hurry of buſineſs and diverſion comes on.

Secondly, As Chriſt began betime, ſo he followed his work cloſe. He was early up, and he wrought hard; ſo hard, that he forget to eat bread, John 4. 31, 32. So zealous was he, in his Father's Work, that his Friends thought he had been beſides himſelf, Mark 3. 21. So zealous, that the zeal of God's houſe eat him up. He flew like a Seraphim, in a flame of zeal, about the work of God. O be not ye like Snales. What Auguſtus ſaid of the young Roman, well becomes the true Chriſtian; Whatſoever he doth, he doth it to purpoſe.

Thirdly, Chriſt often thought upon the ſhortneſs of his time, and wrought hard becauſe he knew his working time would be but little. So you find it, John 9. 4. I will work the works of him that ſent me whilſt it is day; the night cometh, when no man can work. O in this be like Chriſt. Rouze your hearts; to diligence with this conſideration. If a Man have much to write, and be almoſt come to the end of his Paper; he will write cloſe, and pack much matter in a little room.

Fourthly, He did much work for God, and made little noiſe. He wrought hard, but did not ſpoil his work when he had wrought it, by vain oſtentation. When he had expreſt his Charity in his acts of Mercy and Bounty to Men, he would humbly ſeal up the glory of it, with this charge; See ye tell no man of it, Matth. 8. 4. He affected not popular air. All the Angels in Heaven could not do what Chriſt did, and yet he called himſelf a worm, for all that, Pſalm 22. 6. O imitate your pattern. Work hard for God, and let not pride blow upon it when you have done. Its hard for a man to do much, and not value himſelf for it too much.

Fifthly, Chriſt carried on his Work for God reſolvedly. No diſcouragements would beat him off, though never any work met with more from firſt to laſt. How did Scribes and Phariſees, Jews, Gentiles, yea Devils, ſet upon him, by Perſecutions, and Reproaches, violent Oppoſitions and ſubtil temptations; but yet, on he goes with his Father's Work for all that. He is deaf to all diſcouragements. So it was foretold of him, Iſa. 42. 4. He ſhall not fail, nor be diſcouraged. O that more of this Spirit of Chriſt were in his People. O that in the ſtrength of love to Chriſt, and zeal for the glory of God, you would pour out your Hearts in ſervice, and like a River ſweep down all diſcouragements before you.

Sævior ab obice ibit.

Sixthly, He continued working, whilſt he continued living. His Life, and labour ended together. He fainted not in his VVork. Nay, the greateſt VVork he did in this VVorld, was his laſt VVork. O be like Chriſt in this, be not weary of well doing. Give not over the work of God, while you can move hand or tongue to promote it. And ſee that your laſt works, be more than your firſt. O let the motions of your Soul after God, be as all natural motions are, ſwifeſt when neareſt the Center. Say not it is enough, whilſt there is any capacity of doing more for God. In theſe things Chriſtians be like your Saviour.

Si dixiſti ſufficit, periiſti.

Inference 6. Did Chriſt finiſh his Work? Look to it Chriſtians, that ye alſo finiſh your work, which God hath given you to do. That you may with comfort ſay when death approaches, as Chriſt ſaid, John 17. 4. I have glorified thee on earth, I have finiſhed the work, thou gaveſt me to do; and now O Father, glorifie thou me with thine own ſelf. Chriſt had a work committed to him, and he finiſhed it; you have a work alſo committed to you. O ſee that you be able to ſay, it's finiſhed, when your time is ſo. O work out your own Salvation with fear and trembling: And that I may perſuade you to it, I beſeech you lay theſe Conſiderations cloſe to Heart.

Firſt, If your work be not done, before you die, it can never be done, when you are dead. There's no work nor knowledge, nor device in the grave, whither thou goeſt, Eccleſ. 9. 5, 10. They that go down to the Pit, cannot celebrate the name of God, Iſa. 38. 18. Death binds up the hand from working any more; ſtrikes dumb the tongue, that it can ſpeak no more: for then the compoſition is diſſolved. The body which is the Soul's tool to work by, is broken, and thrown aſide. The Soul it ſelf preſented immediately before the Lord, to give an account of all its Works. O therefore ſeeing the night cometh, when no Man can work, as Chriſt ſpeaks, John 9. 4. make haſte and finiſh your Work.

Secondly, If you finiſh not your Work, as the ſeaſon of working, ſo the ſeaſon of Mercy, will be over at death. Do not think, you that have neglected Chriſt all your Lives, you that could never be perſwaded to a laborious Holy Life, that ever your cries and entreaties ſhall prevail with God for Mercy, when your ſeaſon is paſt. No, no, it's too late. Will God hear his cry when trouble comes upon him? Job 27. 9. The Seaſon of Mercy is then over; as the tree falls ſo it lies. Then he that is holy ſhall be holy ſtill, and he that is filthy ſhall be filthy ſtill. Alas, poor Souls you come too late. The Maſter of the Houſe is riſen up, and the doors are ſhut, Luke 19. 42. the Seaſon is over. Happy had it been if ye had known the day of your Viſitation.

Laſtly, If your Work be not finiſhed when you come to die, you can never finiſh your lives with comfort. He that hath not finiſhed his work with care, can never finiſh his courſe with joy. Oh what a diſmal caſe is that Soul in, that finds it ſelf ſurprized by death in an unready poſture! To lie ſhivering upon the brink of the Grave, ſaying, Lord, what will become of me! O I cannot, I dare not die! For the poor Soul to ſhrink back into the body, and cry; Oh it were better for me to do any thing than die. Why what's the matter? Oh, I am in a Chriſtleſs ſtate, and dare not go before that awful Judgment-ſeat. If I had in ſeaſon made Chriſt ſure, I could then die with peace. Lord, what ſhall I do? How doſt thou like this, Reader? Will this be a comfortable cloſe? When one asked a Chriſtian that conſtantly ſpent ſix hours every day in Prayer, why he did ſo? He anſwered, O I muſt die, I muſt die. Well then, look to it that you finiſh your work as Chriſt alſo did his.

SERMON XXXVI.

Opens the ſeventh and laſt word which Chriſt breathed out of his Soul.

LUKE XXIII. 46.

And when Jeſus had cried with a loud voice, he ſaid, Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit; and having ſaid thus, he gave up the Ghoſt.

THeſe are the laſt of the laſt words of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs, with which he breatheth out his Soul. They were David's words before him, Pſalm 31. 5. and for ſubſtance Stephen's after him. Acts 7. 57. They are words full both of Faith, and Comfort. Fit to be the laſt breathings of every gracious Soul in this World. They are reſolvable into theſe five particulars.

The Perſon depoſiting, or committing. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who in this as well as in other things acted as a common Perſon, as the Head of the Church. This muſt be remarked carefully, for therein lies no ſmall part of a believers conſolation. When Chriſt commends his Soul to God, he doth as it were bind up all the Souls of the Elect in one bundle with it; and ſolemnly preſents them all with his, to his Father's acceptance. To this purpoſe one aptly renders it.

Non privato ſui reſpectu commendat patri animum, ſed omnium fidelium ſuorum animas quaſi uno faſciculo complexas, ut ſimul cum ſua ſerventur. D. Pareus.

This commendation made by Chriſt turns to the ſingular profit and advantage of our Souls; in as much as Chriſt, by this very Prayer, hath delivered them into his Father's hand, as a precious treaſure, when ever the time comes that they are to be looſed from the bodies which they now inhabit. Jeſus Chriſt neither lived nor dyed for himſelf, but for Believers. VVhat he did in this very Act, refers to them as well as to his own Soul. You muſt look therefore upon Chriſt in this laſt and ſolemn act of his Life, as gathering all the Souls of the Elect together, and making a ſolemn tender of them all, with his own Soul to God.

Hæc Chriſti commendatio, in animarum noſtrarum commodum cedebat. Quippe quas ille a corpore quod inhabitaverant abſolutas, quaſi quoddam depoſitum, in Dei viventis manu, ex oratione tradebat, Vict. Antioch in Mark 9.

Secondly, The depoſitory, or Perſon to whom he commits this precious treaſure, and that was his own Father. Father, into thy hands I commit. Father is a ſweet encouraging aſſuring Title. VVell may a Son commit any concernment, how dear ſoever, into the hands of a Father. Eſpecially ſuch a Son, into the hands of ſuch a Father. By the hands of the Father into which he commits his Soul, we are not to underſtand the naked or meer power, but the Fatherly acceptation and protection of God.

Manus hæc patris alias Dei potentiam ſignificat, hic vero paternum Dei præſidium, &c. Pareus.

Thirdly, The depoſitum, or thing committed into this hand, [my Spirit] (i. e.) my Soul, now inſtantly departing, upon the very point of ſeparation from my body. The Soul is the moſt precious of all treaſures, it's call'd the darling, Pſalm 37. 17. Or the only one, i.e. that which is moſt excellent, and therefore moſt dear and precious. A whole world is but a trifle, if weighed for the price of one Soul, Matt. 16. 26. This ineſtimable treaſure he now commits into his Father's Hands.

Fourthly, The Act by which he puts it into that faithful Hand of the Father, παραθήσομαι I commend. We rightly render it in the preſent Tenſe, though the word be future. For with theſe words he breathed out his Soul. This word is of the ſame import with συνίστημι, I preſent or tender it into thy Hands. It was in Chriſt an Act of Faith. A moſt ſpecial and excellent Act, intended as a Preſident for all his People.

παραθήσομαι, i. e. συνίστημι. Eraſmus commendabo etiam, Pſal. 111. 6. Unde petita ſunt hæc verba Chriſt. Legitur futuro tempore, Bez.

Fifthly, And laſtly, the laſt thing obſervable is, the manner in which he uttered theſe words, And that was with a loud voice. He ſpake it that all might hear it, and that his Enemies who judged him now deſtitute and forſaken of God, might be convinced that he was not ſo. But that he was dear to his Father ſtill; and could put his Soul confidently into his hands; Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit. Taking then theſe words, not only as ſpoken by Chriſt the Head of all Believers; and ſo commending their Souls to God with his own, but alſo as a Pattern, teaching them what they ought to do themſelves, when they come to die. We obſerve, Doct. That dying believers are both warranted, and encouraged by Chriſt's example, believingly, to commend their precious Souls into the hands of God.

Thus the Apoſtle directs the Faith of Chriſtians, to commit their Souls to God's tuition and fatherly protection when they are either going into Priſons, or to the Stake for Chriſt, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Let them (ſaith he) that ſuffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their Souls to him in well-doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

This Propoſition we will conſider in theſe two main Branches of it, ſc. what is implied and carried in the Soul's commending it ſelf to God by Faith, when the time of ſeparation is come. And what warrant or encouragement gracious Souls have for their ſo doing.

Firſt, What is implied in this Act of a Believer, his commending or committing his Soul into the Hands of God at Death?

And if it be throughly weighed, you will find theſe ſix things at leaſt carried in it.

Firſt, It implies this evidently in it, That the Soul ~~that~~ out-lives the Body, and fails not as to its being, when its Body fails. It feels the houſe in which it dwelt, dropping into ruins, and looks out for a new Habitation with God. Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit. The Soul underſtands it ſelf a more noble being than that corruptible Body, to which it was united; and is now to leave in the duſt. It underſtands its relation to the Father of Spirits, and from him it expects protection and proviſion in its unbodied ſtate; and therefore into his hands it puts it ſelf. If it vaniſhed or breathed into air, and did not ſurvive the Body; if it were annihilated at death, it were but a mocking of God to ſay when we die, Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit.

Quiſquis in Chriſtum edet, non efflabit in ae- m animam moriens, ſed fidelem depoſitarium nfugiet, qui tuto conſer- t quicquid ſubitraditum . Calv.

Secondly, It implies the Soul's true Reſt to be in God. See which way its Motions and Tendencies are, not only in Life, but in death alſo. It bends to its God. It rolls, it even puts it ſelf upon its God and Father: Father, into thy hands. God is the Center of all gracious Spirits. While they tabernacle here, they have no reſt but in the boſom of their God. When they go hence, their expectation and earneſt deſires are to be with him. It had been working after God by gracious deſires before, it had caſt many a longing look to Heaven-ward before, but when the gracious Soul comes near it's God (as it doth in a dying hour) then it even throws it ſelf into his arms. As a River that after many turnings and windings, at laſt is arrived to the Ocean; it pours it ſelf with a central force into the boſom of the Ocean, and there finiſhes its weary Courſe. Nothing but God can pleaſe it in this World, and nothing but God can give it Content when it goes hence. It is not the amœnity of the place, whither the gracious Soul is going, but the boſom of the bleſſed God who dwells there, that it ſo vehemently pants after. Not the Father's houſe, but the Father's arms and boſom. Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit. Whom have I in Heaven but thee? And on Earth is none that I deſire in compariſon of thee, Pſalm 73. 24, 25.

Ruere in amplexus.

Locus nequicquam valet neq; cœli amœnitas ipſa, per ſe beatorum ſpirituum beatitudinem auget; niſi quâ Dei habitatio eſt. Parker de deſcenſu, Lib. 2. p. 132.

Thirdly, It alſo implies the great value believers have for their Souls. That's the precious treaſure. And their main ſolicitude and chief Care is to ſee it ſecured in a ſafe hand. Father, into thy hands I commit my Spirit, they are words ſpeaking the believers care for his Soul. That it may be ſafe, whatever becomes of the vile Body. A believer when he comes nigh to death, ſpends but few thoughts about his body; whether it ſhall be laid, or how it ſhall be diſpoſed of: He truſts that in the hands of Friends; but as his great Care all along was for his Soul, ſo he expreſſes it in theſe his very laſt breathings, in which he commends it into the Hands of God. It is not, Lord Jeſus receive my body, take care of my Duſt, but receive my Spirit. Lord, ſecure the Jewel, when the Casket is broken.

Fourthly, Theſe words imply the deep ſenſe that dying believers have of the great change that is coming upon them by death; when all viſible and ſenſible things are ſhrinking away from them, and failing. They feel the world, and the beſt comforts in it failing. Every Creature and Creature-comfort failing. For at Death we are ſaid to fall, Luke 16. 9. Hereupon the Soul claſps the cloſer about its God, clings more cloſe than ever to him. Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit. Not that a meer neceſſity puts the Soul upon God; or that it cleaves to God, becauſe it hath then nothing elſe to take hold on. No, no, it choſe

God for its portion when it was in the midſt of all its outward enjoyments, and had as good ſecurity as other Men have for the long enjoyment of them; but my meaning is, that although gracious Souls have choſen God for their portion, and do truly prefer him to the beſt of their Comforts; yet in this compounded State, it lives not wholly upon its God; but partly by Faith, and partly by Senſe. Partly upon things ſeen, and partly upon things not ſeen. The Creatures had ſome intereſt in their Hearts, alas, too much: But now all theſe are vaniſhing, and it ſees they are ſo. I ſhall ſee Man no more, with the inhabitants of the World, (ſaid ſick Hezekiah;) hereupon it turns its ſelf from them all, and caſts it ſelf upon God for all its ſubſiſtence. Expecting now to live upon it's God intirely, as the bleſſed Angels do. And ſo in Faith they throw themſelves into his Arms. Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit.

Fifthly, It implies the attonement of God, and his full Reconciliation to Believers, by the Blood of the great Sacrifice. Elſe they durſt never commit their Souls into his Hands. For it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, Heb. 12. 29. (i. e.) of an abſolute God, a God unattoned by the offering up of Chriſt. The Soul dare no more caſt it ſelf into the hand of God without ſuch an attoning Sacrifice, than it dares approach to a devouring Fire. And indeed, the Reconciliation of God; for we are made accepted in the beloved. So it's plainly carried in the order or manner of the reconciled Souls committing it ſelf to him; for it firſt caſts it ſelf into the Hands of Chriſt, then into the Hands of God by him. So Stephen, when dying, Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit. And by that hand it would be put into the Father's Hands.

Sixthly, And laſtly, It implies both the efficacy, and excellency of Faith in ſupporting and relieving the Soul at a time when nothing elſe is able to do it. Faith is its conduct, when it is at the greateſt loſs, and diſtreſs that ever it met with. It ſecures the Soul when it is turned out of the Body. When heart and fleſh fail, this leads it to the rock that fails not. It ſticks by that Soul till it ſee it ſafe through all the territories of Satan, and ſafe landed upon the ſhore of Glory; and then is ſwallowed up in viſion. Many a favour it hath ſhewen the Soul while it dwelt in its Body. The great ſervice it did for the Soul was in the time of its eſpouſals to Chriſt. This is the marriage knot. The bleſſed Bond of union betwixt the Soul and Chriſt. Many a relieving ſight, ſecret and ſweet ſupport it hath received from its faith ſince that; but ſurely its firſt and laſt works are its moſt glorious works. By Faith it firſt ventured it ſelf upon Chriſt. Threw it ſelf upon him in the deepeſt ſenſe of its own vileneſs, and utter unworthineſs, when ſenſe, reaſon and multitudes of Temptations ſtood by contradicting and diſcouraging the Soul. By faith it now caſts it ſelf into his Arms, when it's lanching out into vaſt eternity.

They are both noble acts of Faith, but the firſt no doubt is the greateſt and moſt difficult. For when once the Soul is intereſſed in Chriſt, it's no ſuch difficulty to commit it ſelf into his hands, as when it had no intereſt at all in him. It's eaſier for a Child to caſt himſelf into the Arms of its own Father in diſtreſs, than for one that hath been both a ſtranger and enemy to Chriſt, to caſt it ſelf upon him that he may be a Father, and a Friend to it.

And this brings us upon the ſecond enquiry I promiſed to ſatisfie, ſc.

Secondly, What warrant, or incouragment have gracious Souls to commit themſelves at death, into the hands of God? I anſwer, much every way: All things encourage and warrant its ſo doing. For,

Firſt, This God upon whom the Believer rolls himſelf at death, is its Creator. The Father of its Being. He created and inſpired it, and ſo it hath relation of Creature to a Creator, yea, of a Creature now in diſtreſs, to a faithful Creator, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Let them that ſuffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their ſouls to him in well-doing; as to a [faithful Creator.] Its very true, this ſingle relation in its ſelf gives little ground of encouragement; unleſs the Creature had conſerved that intregity in which it was originally created. And they that have no more to plead with God for acceptance, but their relation to him as Creatures, to a Creator; will doubtleſs find that word made good to their little Comfort, Iſa. 27. 11. It is a people of no underſtanding, therefore he that made them, will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them, will ſhew them no favour. But now, grace brings that relation into repute. Holineſs ingratiates us again, and revives the remembrance of this relation. So that Believers only can plead this.

Haſtus ex divino Origine.

Secondly, As the gracious Soul is his Creature, ſo it is his redeemed creature. One that he hath bought, and that with a great price. Even with the precious Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Pet. 1. 18. This greatly encourages the departing Soul, to commit it ſelf into the hands of God; ſo you find Pſalm 31. 5. Into thy hands do I commend my Spirit, thou haſt redeemed it, O Lord God of truth. Surely this is mighty encouragement, to put it ſelf upon God in a dying hour. Lord, I am not only thy Creature, but thy redeemed Creature. One that thou haſt bought with a great price. O I have coſt thee dear. For my ſake Chriſt came from thy Boſom, and is it imaginable that after that thou haſt in ſuch a coſtly way, even by the expence of the precious Blood of Chriſt redeemed me, thou ſhouldſt at laſt exclude me? Shall the ends both of Creation, and Redemption of this Soul be loſt together? Will God form ſuch an excellent creature as my Soul is, in which are ſo many wonders of the Wiſdom and Power of it's Creator? Will he be content when ſin had marr'd the frame, and defaced the glory of it, to recover it to himſelf again by the death of his own dear Son, and after all this caſt it away, as if there were nothing in all this? Father into thy hands, I commend mend my Spirit. I know thou wilt have a reſpect to the work of thy hands. Eſpecially to a redeemed creature, upon which thou haſt been out ſo great ſums of Love; which thou haſt bought at ſo dear a rate.

Thirdly, Nay, that's not all; the gracious Soul may confidently and ſecurely commit it ſelf into the hands of God when it parts with its Body at death; not only becauſe it is his Creature, his redeemed Creature, but becauſe it is his renewed Creature alſo. And this lays a firm ground for the Believer's confidence of acceptance, not that it is the proper Cauſe or Reaſon of its acceptance, but as it is the Soul's beſt Evidence, that it is accepted with God, and ſhall not be refuſed by him, when it comes to him at death. For in ſuch a Soul there is a double workmanſhip of God, both glorious pieces, though the laſt exceeds in Glory. A Natural Workmanſhip, in the excellent Frame of that Noble Creature the Soul. And a Gracious Workmanſhip upon that again. A new Creation upon the old. Glory upon Glory. We are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus, Eph. 2. 10. The Holy Ghoſt came down from Heaven on purpoſe to create this new Workmanſhip. To frame this new Creature. And indeed it is the Top and Glory of all God's works of wonder in this World. And muſt needs give the believer encouragement to commit it ſelf to God, whether at ſuch a time, it ſhall reflect either upon the end of the Work, or upon the end of the Workman; both which meet in the Salvation of the Soul ſo wrought upon, the end of the Work is our Glory. By this we are made meet to be partakers of the inheritauce of the Saints in Light, Col. 1. 12. It is alſo the deſign and end of him that wrought it, 2 Cor. 5. 5. Now he that hath wrought us for the ſelf ſame thing, is God. Had he not deſigned thy ſoul for Glory, the Spirit ſhould never have come upon ſuch a ſanctifying deſign as this. Surely it ſhall not fail of a reception into Glory, when it's caſt out of this Tabernacle. Such a Work was not wrought in vain, neither can it ever periſh. When once Sanctification comes upon a Soul, it ſo roots it ſelf in the Soul, that where the Soul goes, it goes. Gifts indeed, thy die. All natural excellency and beauty, that goes away at death, Job 4. ult. But Grace aſcends with the Soul. It is a ſanctified, when a ſeparate Soul. And can God ſhut the door of Glory upon ſuch a Soul, that by Grace is made meet for the inheritance? O it cannot be!

Fourthly, As the gracious Soul is a renewed Soul, ſo it is alſo a ſealed Soul. God hath ſealed it in this World for that Glory, into which it is now to enter at death. All gracious Souls are ſealed objectively, i. e. they have thoſe Works of Grace wrought on their Souls, which do (as but now was ſaid) aſcertain and evidence their Title to Glory. And many are ſealed formally. That is, the Spirit helps them clearly to diſcern their Intereſt in Chriſt, and all the Promiſes. This both ſecures Heaven to the Soul in it ſelf, and becomes alſo an Earneſt or Pledge of that Glory in the unſpeakable Joys and Comforts that it breeds in the Soul. So you find, 2 Cor. 1. 22. Who hath ſealed us, and given us the earneſt of the Spirit in our Hearts. God's ſealing us gives high Security. His objective Seal makes it ſure in it ſelf, his formal Seal makes it ſo to us. But if over and above all this, he will pleaſe, as a Fruit of that his ſealing, to give us thoſe heavenly unexpreſſible Joys and Comforts which are the Fruit of his formal Sealing-Work, to be an Earneſt, a Foretaſt and Hanſel of that Glory, how can the Soul that hath found all this, doubt in the leaſt of a rejection by its God, when at death it comes to him? Surely if God have ſealed, he will not refuſe you. If he have given his earneſt, he will not ſhut you out. God's Earneſt is not given in jeſt.

Fifthly, Moreover, every gracious Soul may confidently caſt it ſelf into the arms of its God when it goes hence, with Father, into thy hands I commit my Spirit. For as much as every gracious Soul is a Soul in covenant with God, and God ſtands obliged by his Covenant and Promiſe to ſuch not to caſt them out when they come unto him. As ſoon as ever thy Soul became his by Regeneration, that Promiſe became its own, Heb. 13. 5. I will never leave you, nor forſake you. And will he leave the Soul now at a pinch, when it never had more need of a God to ſtand by it than it hath then? Every gracious Soul is entituled to that Promiſe, John 14. 3. I will come again and receive you to my ſelf. And will he fail to make it good, when the time of the Promiſe is come, as at death it is? It cannot be. Multitudes of Promiſes, the whole Covenant of Promiſes give Security to the Soul againſt the fears of rejection, or neglect by God. And the Soul's dependance upon God, and hanging upon a Promiſe, its very rolling its ſelf upon God from the Encouragement the Word gives it, adds to the engagement upon God. When he ſees a poor Soul that he hath made, redeemed, ſanctified, ſealed and by ſolemn Promiſe engaged himſelf to receive, coming to him at Death, rolling it ſelf upon his faithfulneſs that promiſed, ſaying, as David, 2 Sam. 23. 5. Tho' Lord, there be many defects in me, yet thou haſt made a Covenant with me, well ordered in all things, and ſure; and this is all my Salvation, and all my Hope. Lord, I am reſolved to ſend out my Soul in an Act of Faith. I will venture it upon the credit of thy Promiſe. How can God refuſe ſuch a Soul? How can he put it off when it ſo puts it ſelf upon him?

Sixthly, But this is not all, the gracious Soul ſuſtains many intimate and dear relations to that God into whoſe hands it commends it ſelf at death. It's his Spouſe, and the Conſideration of ſuch a day of Eſpouſals, may well encourage it to caſt it ſelf into the boſom of Chriſt, its Head and Husband. It is a Member of his Body, Fleſh and Bones, Eph. 5. 30. It is his Child, and he its everlaſting Father, Iſa. 9. 6. It is his Friend. Henceforth ſaith Chriſt, I call you not ſervants, but Friends, Joh. 15. 15. What confidence may theſe and all other the dear Relations Chriſt owns to the renewed Soul beget in ſuch an hour as this is! What Husband can throw off the dear Wife of his boſom, who in diſtreſſes caſts her ſelf into his Arms! What Father can ſhut the door upon a dear Child that comes to him for Refuge, ſaying, Father, Into thy hands I commit my ſelf!

Seventhly, and Laſtly, The unchangableneſs of God's Love to his People gives confidence they ſhall in no wiſe be caſt out. They know Chriſt is the ſame to them at laſt, he was at firſt. The ſame in the pangs of death, as he was in the comforts of Life. Having loved his own which were in the World, he loved them to the end, Joh. 13. 1. He doth not love as the VVorld loves, only in proſperity. But they are as dear to him when their beauty and ſtrength is gone, as when it was in the greateſt flouriſh. If we live, we live to the Lord; and if we die, we die to the Lord; ſo then, whether we live, or die; we are the Lord's, Rom. 14. 8. Take in all theſe things and weigh them both apart, and together, and ſee whether they amount not to a full evidence of the truth of this point, that dying Believers are both warranted and encouraged to commend their Souls into the hands of God. VVhether they have not every one of them cauſe to ſay as the Apoſtle did, 2 Tim. 1. 12. I know whom I have believed, and am perſwaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him againſt that day. The improvements of all this you have in the following practical Deductions.

Deduction 1. Are dying believers only warranted and encouraged thus to commend their Souls into the hands of God? What a ſad ſtrait then muſt all dying unbelievers be in about their Souls? Such Souls will fall into the hands of God, but that's their Miſery, not their Priviledge. They are not put by Faith into the hands of Mercy, but fall by Sin, into the hands of Juſtice. Not God, but the Devil, is their Father, John 8. 4. VVhither ſhould the child go, but to its own Father? They have not one of thoſe forementioned encouragements to caſt themſelves into the hands of God, except the naked relation they have to God as their Creator, and that's as good as none, without the new Creation. If they have nothing but this to plead for their Salvation, the Devil hath as much to plead as they. It's the new Creature that brings the firſt Creation into repute again with God.

O diſmal! O deplorable caſe! A poor Soul is turning out of houſe and home, and knows not where to go. It departs and immediately falls into the hands of Juſtice. The Devil ſtands by waiting for ſuch a Soul whom God will throw to him, as a Dog for a cruſt. Little, ah little do the friends of ſuch a one think whilſt they are honouring his duſt by a ſplendid and honourable Funeral, what a caſe that poor Soul is in that lately dwelt there; and what fearful ſtraights and extremities it is now expoſed to. They will cry indeed, Lord, Lord, open to us, Matth. 7. 22. But to how little purpoſe are their vain cries? Will God hear him when he cries, Job 27. 9. It's a lamentable caſe.

Deduction 2. Will God graciouſly accept, and faithfully keep what the Saints commit to him at death? how careful then ſhould they be to keep what God commits to them, to be kept from him while they live. You have a great truſt to commit to God when you die, and God hath a great truſt to commit to you whilſt you live; you expect that he ſhould faithfully keep what then you ſhall commit to his keeping; and he expects you ſhould faithfully keep, what he now commits to your keeping. O keep what God commits to you, as you expect he ſhould keep your Souls when you commit them unto him. If you keep his truths, he will keep your Souls. Becauſe thou haſt kept the word of my patience, I alſo will keep thee, &c. Rev. 3. 10. Be faithful to your God, and you ſhall find him faithful to you. None can pluck you out of his hand, ſee that nothing wreſt his truths out of your hands. deny him, he alſo will deny us, 2 Tim. 2. 12. Take heed leſt thoſe eſtates you have gotten as a bleſſing attending the Goſpel, prove a temptation to you to betray the Goſpel. Religion (ſaith one) brings forth Riches, but the Daughter devours the Mother. How can you expect acceptance with God, who have betrayed his truth, and dealt perfidiouſly with him?

Deduction 3. If Believers may ſafely commit their Souls into the hands of God, How confidently may they commit all leſſer intereſts, and lower concernments into the ſame hand. Shall we truſt him with our Souls, and not with our lives, liberties or comforts? Can we commit the treaſure to him, and not a trifle? Whatever you enjoy in this World, is but a trifle to your Souls. Sure if you can truſt him for eternal Life for your Souls, you may much more truſt him, for the daily Bread for your Bodies. I know it is objected, that God hath made over temporal things to his People upon conditional promiſes, and an abſolute faith can never be grounded upon conditional promiſes?

But what means this Objection? Let your Faith be but ſuitable to theſe conditional Promiſes, that is, believe they ſhall be made good to you, ſo far as God ſees them good for you. Do you but labour to come up to thoſe Conditions required in you, and thereby God will have more glory, and you more comfort. If your Prayers for theſe things proceed from pure ends, the glory of God, not the ſatisfaction and gratification of your Luſts. If your deſires after them be moderate as to the meaſure, content with that proportion the infinite wiſdom ſees fitteſt for you. If you take Gods way to obtain them, and dare not ſtrain Conſcience, or commit a Sin, though you ſhould periſh for want. If you can patiently wait God's time for enlargements from your ſtraits, and not make any ſinful haſte; you ſhall be ſurely ſupplied. And he that remembers your Souls, will not forget your Bodies. But we live by Senſe and not by Faith. Preſent things ſtrike our Affections more powerfully than the inviſible things that are to come. The Lord humble his People for this.

Deduction 4. Is the priviledge of believers, that they can commit their Souls to God in a dying hour?

hour? then how precious, how uſeful a Grace is Faith to the People of God both living and dying?

All the Graces have done excellently, but Faith excels them all. Faith is the Phœnix Grace, the Queen of Graces. Deſervedly it is ſtiled precious Faith, 2 Pet. 1. 1. The Benefits and Priviledges of it in this Life are unſpeakable; and as there is no comfortable living, ſo no comfortable dying without it.

Firſt, While we live and converſe here in the world, all our comfort and ſafety is from it; for all our union with Chriſt, the fountain of mercies and bleſſings, is by Faith, Eph. 3. 17. That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by Faith. No Faith, no Chriſt. All our Communion with Chriſt is by it. He that cometh to God muſt believe, Heb. 11. 6. The Soul's Life is wrapt up in this Communion with God; and that Communion in Faith. All Communications from Chriſt depend upon Faith; for look as all Communion is founded in Union, ſo from our Union and Communion, are all our Communications. All Communications of Quicknings, Comforts, Joy, Strength and whatſoever ſerves to the well-being of the Life of Grace, are all through that Faith which firſt knit us to Chriſt, and ſtill maintains our Communion with Chriſt, believing we rejoyce, 1 Pet. 1. 8. The inner Man is renewed whilſt we look to the things that are not ſeen, 2 Cor. 4. 18.

Secondly, And as our Life, and all the Supports and Comforts of it here are dependant on Faith; ſo you ſee our death, as to the ſafety and comfort of our Souls, then depends upon our Faith. He that hath no Faith, cannot commit his Soul to God, but rather ſhrinks from God. Faith can do many ſweet Offices for your Souls upon a death-bed, when the Light of this World is gone, and all Joy ceaſes on Earth. It can give us ſights of things inviſible in the other World, and thoſe ſights will breathe Life into your Souls amidſt the very pangs of death.

Reader, do but think what a comfortable foreſight of God, and the Joys of Salvation, will be to thee, when thine Eye-ſtrings are breaking. Faith cannot only ſee that beyond the Grave, which will comfort, but it can cling about its God, and claſp Chriſt in a promiſe when it feels the ground of all ſenſible comforts trembling and ſinking under thy feet. My heart and my fleſh faileth, but God is the Strength (or Rock) of my heart, and my portion for ever. Reeds fail, but the Rock is firm footing. Yea, and when the Soul can no longer Tabernacle here, it can carry the Soul to God, caſt it upon him, with, Father, into thy hands I commend my Spirit. O precious Faith!

Deduction 5. Do the Souls of dying Believers commend themſelves into the hands of God? Then let not the ſurviving relations of ſuch ſorrow as Men that have no hope. A Husband, a Wife, a Child, is rent by death out of your Arms, well, but conſider into what arms, into what boſom they are commended. Is it not better for them to be in the boſom of God, than in yours? Could they be ſpared ſo long from Heaven, as to come back again to you but an hour, how would they be diſpleaſed to ſee your tears, and hear your cries and ſighs for them! They would ſay to you, as Chriſt ſaid to the Daughters of Jeruſalem, Weep not for me, but weep for your ſelves, and for your Children. I am in a ſafe hand, I am out of the reach of all Storms and Troubles. O did you but know what their ſtate is, who are with God, you would be more than ſatisfied about them.

Deduction 6. Laſtly, I will cloſe all with a Word of Counſel. Is this the priviledge of dying Believers, to commend their Souls into the hands of God? Then as ever you hope for comfort or peace in your laſt hour, ſee that your Souls be ſuch as may be then fit to be commended into the hands of an holy and juſt God. See that they be holy ſouls. God will never accept them, if they be not holy. Without holineſs no man ſhall ſee God, Heb. 12. 24. He that hath this hope (viz. to ſee God) purifieth himſelf even as he is pure, 1 John 3. 3. Endeavours after Holineſs are inſeparably connected with rational expectations of bleſſedneſs. Will you put an unclean filthy defiled thing into the pure hand of the moſt holy God? O ſee they be holy, and already accepted in the beloved, or wo to them when they take their leaves of thoſe tabernacles they now dwell in. The gracious Soul may confidently ſay then, Lord Jeſus, into thy hand I commend my Spirit. O let all that can ſay ſo then, now ſay,

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 37.

Treats of Chriſt's Funeral, opening the manner, reaſons, and excellent ends thereof.

SERMON XXXVII.

JOHN XIX. 40, 41, 42.

Then took they the body of Jeſus, and wound it in linnen cloaths, with the ſpices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury. Now in the place where he was crucified, there was a Garden, and in the Garden a new Sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid. There laid they Jeſus therefore, becauſe of the Jews preparation-day, for the Sepulchre was nigh at hand.

YOU have heard the laſt Words of dying Jeſus, commending his Spirit into his Father's hands: And now the Life of the World hangs dead upon a Tree. The Light of the World for a time muffled up in a diſmal Cloud: The Sun of Righteouſneſs ſet in the Region and Shadow of Death. The Lord is dead, and he that wears the Keys of the Grave at his Girdle, is now himſelf to be lock'd up in the Grave.

All you that are the Friends and Lovers of Jeſus, are this Day invited to his Funeral. Such a Funeral as never was ſince Graves were firſt digged. Come, ſee the place where the Lord lay. There are ſix remarkable particulars about this Funeral in theſe three Verſes.

1. The Preparations that were made for it, and that was mainly in two Particulars, viz. The begging and perfuming of the Body. His Body could not be buried, till by begging, his Friends had obtained it as a favour from his Judge. The dead Body was by Law in the Power of Pilate who adjudged it to death, as the Bodies of thoſe that are hanged, are in the power of the Judge to diſpoſe of them as he pleaſes. And when they had gotten it from Pilate, they wind it in fine Linnen Cloaths with Spices. But what need of Spices to perfume that bleſſed Body? his own Love was Perfume enough, to keep it ſweet in the Remembrance of his People to all generations: However, by this they will manifeſt, as they are able, the dear affection they have for him.

2. The Bearers that carried his Body to its grave, Joſeph of Arimathea and Nichodemus, two ſecret Diſciples. They were both Men of Eſtate and Honour. None could imagine that theſe would have appeared at a time of ſo much danger, with ſuch boldneſs for Chriſt. That ever they would have gon openly and boldly to manifeſt their Love to Chriſt when dead, who were afraid to come to him (except by Night) when he was living. But now a Spirit of Zeal and Courage is come upon them, when thoſe that made greater and more open confeſſions of him are gon.

3. The Attendants who followed the Hearſe, were the Women that followed him out of Galilee. Among whom the two Mary's, and the Mother of Zebedees Children (whom Mark calls Salome) are only named.

4. The Grave or Sepulchre where they laid him. It was in Joſeph's new Tomb, which he had prepared in the Garden near unto Golgotha, where our Lord died. Two things are remarkable about this Tomb. It was anothers Tomb, and it was a new Tomb. It was anothers. For he had not an Houſe of his own, to lay his Body in when dead. As he lived in other Mens Houſes, ſo he lay in another Man's Tomb. And it was a new Tomb, wherein never Man was yet laid. Doubtleſs there was much of Providence in this, for had any other been laid there before him, it might have proved an occaſion both to ſhake the Credit, and ſlur the Glory of his Reſurrection, by pretending it was ſome former Body, and not the Lord's, that roſe out of it. In this alſo divine Providence had a reſpect to that Prophecy, Iſa. 53. 9. which was to be fulfilled at his Funeral: He made his grave with the rich, becauſe he had done no violence, &c.

5. The diſpoſition of the Body in that Tomb. 'Tis true, there is no mention made of the Groans and Tears, with which they laid him in his Sepulchre, yet we may well preſume they were not wanting in plentiful expreſſions of their ſorrow that way. For as they wept, and ſmote their Breaſts when he dyed, Luke 23. 48. So no doubt they laid him with melting Hearts, and flowing eyes in his Tomb, when dead.

6. And laſtly, the laſt remarkable particular in the Text, is the ſolemnity, with which his Funeral Rites were performed, and they were all ſuitable to his humbled State. It was indeed a Funeral as decently order'd as the ſtraights of time and ſtate of things would then permit: But there was nothing of Pomp or outward State at all obſerved. Few Marks of Honour ſet by Men upon it. Only the Heavens adorned it with divers miraculous works, which in their proper place will be ſpoken to. Thus was he laid in his grave, where he continued tinued for three incompleat days and nights in the territories of Death, in the land of darkneſs and forgetfulneſs. Partly to correſpond with Jonah his Type, and partly to aſcertain the world of the reality of his Death. Whence our obſervation is,

Doct. That the dead body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was decently interr'd, by a ſmall number of his own Diſciples; and continued in the ſtate of the Dead for a time.

This Obſervation containing matter of fact, and that ſo plainly and faithfully delivered to us by the Pens of the ſeveral Evangeliſts; we need do no more to prepare it for our uſe, than to ſatisfie theſe two inquiries; Why had Chriſt any funeral at all, ſince his Reſurrection was ſo ſoon to follow his Death? And what manner of funeral Chriſt had.

Firſt, Why had Chriſt any Funeral at all, ſince he was to riſe again from the dead within that ſpace of time that other Men commonly have to lie by the wall before their interment; and had it continued longer unburied, it could ſee no corruption, having never been tainted by ſin? Why, though there was no need of it at all upon that account, that a Funeral is needful for other bodies; yet there were theſe four weighty Ends and Reaſons of it.

Reaſon 1. Firſt, It was neceſſary Chriſt ſhould be buried, to aſcertain his Death, elſe it might have been looked upon as a Cheat. For, as they were ready enough to impoſe ſo groſs a Cheat upon the world at his Reſurrection, That the Diſciples came by night and ſtole him away: much more would they have denied at once the reality both of his Death and Reſurrection, had he not been ſo perfumed and interred: But this cut off all pretentions. For in this kind of embalming, his mouth, ears, noſtrils, were all filled with their Spices and Odours. Bound up in Linnen, and laid long enough in the Tomb to give full aſſurance to the world of the certainty of his Death. So that there could be no latent Principle of Life in him. Now ſince our eternal Life is wrapt up in Chriſt's Death, it can never be too firmly eſtabliſhed. To this therefore we may well ſuppoſe Providence had ſpecial reſpect in his Burial, and the manner of it.

Reaſon 2. Secondly, He muſt be buried to fulfil the Types, and Prophecies that went before. His abode in the Grave was prefigured by Jona's abode three days and nights in the belly of the Whale, Matth. 12. 40. So muſt the Son of Man be three days, and three nights in the heart of the earth. Yea, the Prophet had deſcribed the very manner of his Funeral, and long before he was born foretold in what kind of Tomb his Body ſhould be laid, Iſa. 53. 9. He made his Grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death. Pointing by that expreſſion at this Tomb of Joſeph; who was a rich Man, and the Scriptures cannot be broken.

Reaſon 3. Thirdly, He muſt be buried to compleat his humiliation; this being the loweſt ſtep he could poſſibly deſcend in his abaſed ſtate. They have brought me to the duſt of Death. Lower he could not be laid, and ſo low he muſt lay his bleſſed head, elſe he had not been humbled to the loweſt.

Reaſon 4. Fourthly, But the great end and reaſon of his interment was the conquering of Death in its own dominion and territories; which victory over the Grave furniſheth the Saints with that triumphant ἐπινίκιον ſong of deliverance, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O Death, where is thy Sting! O Grave, where is thy Deſtruction! Our Graves would not be ſo ſweet and comfortable to us, when we come to lie down in them, if Jeſus had not lain there before us, and for us. Death is a Dragon, the Grave its Den; a place of dread and terror: But Chriſt goes into its Den, there grapples with it, and for ever overcomes it. Diſarms it of all its terror, and not only makes it ceaſe to be enemical, but to become exceeding beneficial to the Saints. A Bed of reſt, and a perfumed Bed. They do but go into Chriſt's Bed, where he lay before them. For theſe ends he muſt be buried.

Secondly, Next let us inquire what manner of Funeral Chriſt had.

And if we intently obſerve it, we ſhall find many remarkable properties in it.

Firſt, We ſhall find it to be a very obſcure and private Funeral. Here was no external pomp or gallantry. Chriſt affected it not in his Life, and it was no way ſuitable to the ends and manner of his death. Humiliation was deſigned in his Death. And State is inconſiſtent with ſuch an end. Beſides, he died upon the Tree, and Perſons ſo dying don't uſe to have much ceremony and ſtate at their Funerals. Three things ſhew it to be a very humble and obſcure Funeral, as to what concerned outward glory, with which the great ones of the earth are uſually interred. For,

Firſt, The dead body of the Lord was not brought from his own Houſe, as other Mens commonly are; but from the Tree. They beg'd it of his Judge. As who ſhould ſay, go bring the Corps from Tyburn. Had they not obtained this favour from Pilate, it muſt have been buried in Golgotha. It had been tumbled into a pit, digged under the Croſs.

Secondly, As it was firſt beg'd, then buried; ſo it was attended with a very poor Train. A few ſorrowful Women followed the Bier. Other Men are accompained to their Graves by their Relations, and Friends. The Diſciples were all ſcattered from him. Afraid to own him dying, and dead.

Thirdly, And theſe few that were reſolved to give him a Funeral, are forced, by reaſon of the ſtraights of time, to do it in ſhuffling haſte. Time was ſhort, they take the next Sepulchre they can get, and hurry him away that evening into it. For the preparation for the Paſſover was at hand. This was the obſcure Funeral which the body of the Lord had. Thus was the Prince of the Kings of the Earth, who hath the Keys of Death and Hell, laid into his Grave.

Secondly, Yet though Men could beſtow little honour upon it, the Heavens beſtowed ſeveral Marks of Honour upon it. Adorn'd it with divers Miracles, which wiped off the reproach of his death from him. Theſe Miracles were antecedent to his interment, or concomitants of it.

Firſt, There was that extraordinary and preternatural Eclipſe of the Sun. Such an Eclipſe as was never ſeen ſince it firſt ſhone in Heaven. The Sun fainted at the ſight of ſuch a ruful ſpectacle, and cloathed the whole Heaven in black, The ſight of this cauſed a great Philoſopher, who was then far from the place where this unparellel'd Tragedy was acting, to cry out upon the ſight of it, either the God of nature now ſuffers, or the frame of the world is now diſſolved. The ſame Dionyſius writing to Apollaphanes a Philoſopher, who would not embrace the Chriſtian Faith, thus goes about to convince him. What thinkeſt thou (ſaith he) of the Eclipſe when Chriſt was Crucified? Were we not both of us then at Heliopolis? and ſtanding in the ſame place, did we not ſee the Moon in a new manner following the Sun; and not in the time of Conjunction, but from the ninth hour until the evening, by a reaſon unknown in nature, directly oppoſite to the Sun? Didſt thou not then, being greatly terrified, ſay unto me, O my Dionyſius, what ſtrange commutations of the Heavenly bodies are theſe!

Τὶ λέγεις περὶ τῆς ἐν σωτηρίῳ σταυρῷ ἐκλείψεως. ἀμφότεροι γὰρ τότε κατ' Ἡλιούπολιν ἅμα παρόντες, καὶ συνεστῶτες παραδόξως τὴν σελήνην ἐμπίπτουσαν ἑωράκαμεν, οὐ ἦν συνόδου καιρὸς, &c. Theod. Metochit. Hiſti. Rom. g. 39.

Such a preternatural Eclipſe is remembred in no other Hiſtory. For it was not in time of conjunction, but oppoſition; the Moon being then at full. From the ſixth, to the ninth hour, the Sun and Moon were together in the midſt of Heaven; but in the evening ſhe appeared in the Eaſt, her own place, oppoſite to the Sun. And then miraculouſly returning from Eaſt to Weſt, did not paſs by the Sun and ſet in the Weſt before it; but kept it company for the ſpace of three hours, and then returned to the Eaſt again. And whereas in all other natural Eclipſes, the Eclipſe always begins on the Weſtern part of the body of the Sun, and that part is alſo firſt cleared; it was quite contrary in this; for though the Moon were oppoſite to the Sun, and diſtant from it the whole breadth of Heaven; yet with a miraculous ſwiftneſs it overtook the Sun, and darkned firſt the Eaſtern part of it; and ſoon prevailed over its whole body. Which cauſed darkneſs over all the Land, that is, ſay ſome, over the whole Earth; or as others, over the whole Land of Jewry. Or as others over the whole Horizon, and all places of the ſame altitude, and latitude, which is moſt probable.

Secondly, And as Chriſt's Funeral was adorned with ſuch a miraculous Eclipſe, which put the Heavens and Earth into a mourning; ſo the rocks did rend, the vail of the Temple rent in twain from top to bottom. The Graves opened, and the dead Bodies of many Saints aroſe and went into the holy City and were ſeen of many. The rending of the Rocks was a ſign of God's fierce indignation, Nahum 1. 6. And a diſcovery of the greatneſs of his Power; ſhewing them what they deſerved, and what he could do to them that had committed this horrid fact; though he rather choſe at this time to ſhew the dreadful effects of it upon inanimate Rocks, than Rocky-hearted ſinners. But eſpecially it ſerved to convince the world that it was none other but the Son of God that died. Which was farther manifeſted by theſe concomitant Miracles.

As for the rending in twain of the vail. It was a notable Miracle, plainly ſhewing that all Ceremonies were now accompliſhed, and aboliſhed. No more vails now. As alſo that Believers have now moſt free acceſs into Heaven. At that very inſtant when the vail rent, the High-Prieſt was officiating in the moſt holy place, and the vail which hid him from the People, being rent; they might freely ſee him about his Work in the Holy of Holies. A lively Emblem of our High-Prieſt, whom now we ſee by Faith in the Heavens, there performing his interceſſion-work for us.

The opening of the Graves, plainly ſhew'd the deſign and end of Chriſt's going into it. That it might not have dominion over the Bodies of the Saints, but being vanquiſht and deſtroyed by Chriſt, lets go all that are his, whom he ranſomed from the Grave as a prey out of its paws. A Specimen whereof was given in thoſe holy ones that roſe at that time, and appeared to many in the holy City. Thus was the Funeral of our Lord performed by Men: Thus was it adorned by Miracles from Heaven.

Uſe. And now we have ſeen Jeſus interred. He that wears at his Girdle the Keys of Hell and Death, himſelf locked up in the Grave. What ſhall I ſay of him whom they now laid in the Grave? Shall I undertake to tell you what he was? What he did, ſuffered, and deſerved? Alas! The tongues of Angels muſt pauſe and ſtammer in ſuch a work. I may truly ſay, as Nazianzen ſaid of Baſil, no tongue but his own can ſufficiently commend and praiſe him. He is a Sun of Righteouſneſs, a fountain of Life, a bundle of Love. Of him it might be ſaid in that day, Here lies lovely Jeſus, in whom is treaſured up whatſoever an angry God can require for his Satisfaction, or an empty Creature for his Perfection. Before him was none like him, and after ſhall none ariſe comparable to him. If every leaf, and ſpire of Glaſs (ſaith one) nay all the Stars, Sands, and Atomes were in ſo many Souls and Seraphims, whoſe love ſhould double in them every moment to all eternity; yet would it fall infinitely ſhort of what his worth and excellency exacts. Suppoſe a Creature compos'd of all the choice endowments that ever dwelt in the beſt of Men ſince the Creation of the World, in whom you find a meek Moſes, a ſtrong Sampſon, a faithful Jonathan, a beautiful Abſolom, a rich and wiſe Solomon; nay, and add to this, the underſtanding, ſtrength, agility, ſplendor, and holineſs of all the Angels: It would all amount but to a dark ſhadow, of this incomparable Jeſus.

Mr. Jo

Who ever weighed Chriſt in a pair of Balances (ſaith another) who hath ſeen the foldings and plyes, the heights, and depths of that glory which is in him? O for ſuch a Heaven, as but to ſtand afar off and ſee, and love and long for him, while times thread be cut, and this great work of Creation diſſolved! —— O if I could yoke in among the thick of Angels, and Seraphims, and now glorified Saints, and could raiſe a new Love-ſong of Chriſt, before all the world. I am pained with wondring at new-opened Treaſures in Chriſt. If every finger, member, bone and joint were a torch burning in the hotteſt fire in hell; I would they could all ſend out love-praiſes, high ſongs of praiſe for ever more to that Plant of Renown, to that Royal and high Prince, Jeſus my Lord. But alas, his love ſwelled in me, and finds no vent. —— I mar his praiſes, nay, I know no compariſon of what Chriſt is, and what he is worth. All the Angels, and all the glorified, praiſe him not ſo much as in halves. Who can advance him, or utter all his praiſe? —— O if I could praiſe him, I would reſt content to die of Love for him. O would to God I could ſend in my praiſes to my incomparable well-beloved, or caſt my Love-ſongs of that matchleſs Lord Jeſus over the Walls, that they might light in his lap, before Men and Angels. —— But when I have ſpoken of him till my head rive, I have ſaid juſt nothing. I may begin again. A God-head, a God-head is a World's wonder. Set ten thouſand thouſand new-made Worlds of Angels and Elect Men, and double them in Number ten thouſand thouſand thouſand times, Let their hearts and tongues be ten thouſand times more agile and large than the hearts and tongues of the Seraphims, that ſtand with ſix wings before him; when they have ſaid all for the glorifying and praiſing of the Lord Jeſus; they have ſpoken little or nothing. O if I could wear this Tongue to the ſtump in extolling his highneſs! But it is my daily ſorrow that I am confounded with his incomparable Love.

Thus have his enamoured friends faintly expreſſed his excellencies, and if they have therein done any thing, they have ſhewn the impoſſibility of his due praiſes.

Come and ſee, believing Souls, look upon dead Jeſus in his winding ſheet, by Faith; and ſay, Lo, this is he of whom the Church ſaid, My beloved is white and ruddy; his ruddineſs is now gone, and a death-pale hath prevailed over all his body: but ſtill as lovely as ever, yea, altogether lovely.

If David lamenting the death of Saul and Jonathan, ſaid, Daughters of Jeruſalem weep over Saul, who cloathed you in ſcarlet, with other delights; who put on ornaments of gold upon your apparel; much rather may I ſay, Children of Zion, weep over Jeſus, who cloathed you with righteouſneſs, and garments of ſalvation.

This is he who quitted the Throne of Glory, left the Boſom of unſpeakable Delights, came in a body of Fleſh, produced in perfect holineſs, brake through many and great impediments, (thy great Unworthineſs, the Wrath of God and Man) by the ſtrength of Love; to bring Salvation home to thy Soul. Can he that believingly conſiders this, do leſs than faint at the ſenſe of that Love that brought him to the duſt of death, and cry out with that Father, My Lord was crucified? But I will inſiſt no longer upon generals, but draw down the Particulars of Chriſt's Funeral to your uſe in the following Corollaries.

Corollary 1. Was Chriſt buried in this manner? Then a decent and mournful Funeral (where it can be had) is very laudable among Chriſtians.

I know the Souls of the Saints have no concernment for their Bodies, nor are they ſolicitous how the Body is treated here; yet there is a reſpect due to them, as they are the Temples wherein God hath been ſerved and honoured, by thoſe Holy Souls that once dwelt in them. As alſo upon the account of their relation to Chriſt, even when they lie by the Walls. And the Glory that will be one day put upon them, when they ſhall be changed, and made like unto Chriſt's glorious Body. Upon ſuch ſpecial accounts as theſe, their bodies deſerve an honourable treatment, as well as upon the account of Humanity, which owes this honour to, on the Bodies of all Men.

To have no Funeral, is accounted a Judgment, Eccleſ. 7. 4. Or to be tumbled into a Pit without any to lament us, is lamentable. We read of many ſolemn and * mournful Funerals in Scripture, wherein the People of God have affectionately paid their reſpects and Honours to the Duſt of the Saints; as Men that were deeply ſenſible of their worth, and how great a loſs the World ſuſtains by their remove. Chriſt's Funeral had as much of decency and ſolemnity in it, as the time would permit; though he was a ſtranger to all pomp, both in life and death.

Corol. 2. Did Joſeph and Nichodemus ſo boldly appear, at a time of ſo much danger, to beg the body, and give it a Funeral? Let it be for ever a caution to ſtrong Chriſtians not to deſpiſe, or glory over the weak. You ſee here a couple of poor, low-ſpirited and timerous Perſons; that were afraid to be ſeen in Chriſt's company, when the other Diſciples profeſſed their readineſs to die with him: Yet thoſe flee, and theſe appear for him, when the trial comes indeed. If God deſert the ſtrong, and aſſiſt the weak; the feeble ſhall be as David, and the ſtrong as Tow. I ſpeak not this to diſcourage any Man from ſtriving to improve inherent Grace to the utmoſt. For it's ordinarily found in experience, that the degrees of aſſiſting Grace, are given out according to the meaſures of inherent Grace: But I ſpeak it to prevent a ſin incident to ſtrong Chriſtians, which is to deſpiſe the weak, which God corrects by ſuch inſtances and examples as this before us.

Corol. 3. Hence we may be aſſiſted in diſcerning the depths of Chriſt's Humiliation for us. And ſee from what, to what his Love brought him. It was not enough, that he who was in the form of God, became a Creature; which was an infinite ſtoop, nay, to be made a Man, an inferior Order of Creatures. Nay, to be a poor Man, to ſpend his days in Poverty and Contempt. But alſo to be a dead Corps for our ſake. O what manner of love is this!

Now the deeper the humiliation of the Son of God was, the more ſatisfactory to us it muſt needs be. For as it ſhews us the hainouſneſs of ſin that deſerves all this, ſo the fulneſs of Chriſt's ſatisfacton whereby he makes up that breach. O it was a deep humiliation indeed. How unlike himſelf is he now become! Doth he look like the Son of God? What, the Son of God whom all the Angels adore, to be ſhuffled by three or four Perſons into his Grave in an evening. To be carried from Golgotha to the Grave in this manner! And there lie as a captive to Death for a time! Never was the like change of conditions, never ſuch an abaſement heard of in the world.

Coroll. 4. From this Funeral of Chriſt reſults the pureſt and ſtrongeſt conſolation and incouragement to believers, againſt the fears of Death and the Grave. If this be ſo, that Jeſus hath lain in the Grave before you; let me ſay then to you as the Lord ſpake to Jacob, Gen. 46. 2, 3. Fear not to go down to Ægypt, for I will go down with thee, and will ſurely bring thee up thence. So here, fear not Believer to go down to the Grave, for God will be with thee there, and will ſurely bring thee up thence. This conſideration that Jeſus Chriſt hath layn in the Grave himſelf, gives manifold encouragements to the People of God, againſt the terrors of the Grave.

Firſt, the Grave received, but could not deſtroy Jeſus Chriſt. Death ſwallowed him, as the Whale did Jonah his Type; but could not digeſt him when it had ſwallowed him, but quickly delivered him up again. Now Chriſt lying in the Grave, as the common Head and repreſentative of Believers, what comfort ſhould this inſpire into their Hearts? For as it fared with Chriſt's perſonal, ſo it ſhall with Chriſt's myſtical. It could not retain him, it ſhall not for ever retain them. This Reſurrection of Chriſt out of his, is the very ground of our hope for a Reſurrection out of our Graves. Chriſt is riſen from the dead, and become the firſt fruits of them that ſlept, 1 Cor. 15. 20.

Secondly, As the union betwixt the Body of Chriſt and the divine Nature was not diſſolved; when that Body was laid in the Grave; ſo the union betwixt Chriſt and Believers is not, cannot be diſſolved when their Bodies ſhall be laid in their Graves. It's true, the natural union betwixt his Soul and Body was diſſolved for a time, but the Hypoſtatical union was not diſſolved, no, not for a moment. That Body was the Body of the Son of God when it was in the Sepulchre. In like manner, the natural union betwixt our Souls and Bodies is diſſolved by death, but the myſtical union betwixt us and Chriſt, yea betwixt our very duſt and Chriſt, can never be diſſolved.

Thirdly, As Chriſt's Body when it was in the Grave, did there reſt in hope, and was aſſuredly a partaker of that hope, So it ſhall fare with the dead Bodies of the Saints when they lay them down alſo in the duſt. My fleſh alſo ſhall reſt in hope, ſaith Chriſt, Pſal. 16. 9, 10, 11. In like manner, the Saints commit their Bodies to the duſt in hope. The righteous hath hope in his death, Prov. 14. 32. And as Chriſt's hope was not a vain hope, ſo neither ſhall their hope be in vain.

Fourthly, And laſtly, Chriſt's lying in the Grave before us, hath quite changed and altered the nature of the Grave. So that it is not what it was. It was once a part of the Curſe, Duſt thou art, and unto duſt thou ſhalt return, was a part of the threatning and curſe for Sin. The Grave had the nature and uſe of a Priſon, to keep the Bodies of Sinners againſt the great Aſſizes; and then deliver them up into the hands of a great and terrible God. But now it's no Priſon, but a Bed of reſt. Yea, and a perfumed Bed, where Chriſt lay before us. Which is a ſweet conſideration of the Grave indeed: They ſhall enter into Peace, they ſhall reſt in their Beds, Iſa. 57. 2. O then let not Believers ſtand in fear of the Grave. He that hath one foot in Heaven, need not fear to put the other into the Grave. Though I go down to the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, Pſal. 23.

Indeed, the Grave is a terrible place to them that are out of Chriſt. Death is the Lord's Serjeant to arreſt them. The Grave is the Lord's Priſon to ſecure them. When death draws them into the Grave, it draws them thither as a Lyon doth his prey into the den to devour it. So you read, Pſal. 49. 14. Death ſhall feed (or prey) upon them. Death there reigns over them in its full power, Rom. 5. 14. And tho' at laſt it ſhall render them again to God, yet it were better for them to lie everlaſtingly where they were, than to riſe to ſuch an end. For they are brought out of their Graves, as a condemned Priſoner out of the Priſon, to go to Execution. But the caſe of the Saints is not ſo. The Grave (thanks be to our Lord Jeſus Chriſt) is a priviledged place to them while they ſleep there; and when they awake, it will be with ſinging. When they awake, they ſhall be ſatisfied with his likeneſs.

Coroll. 5. Laſtly, Since Chriſt was laid in the Grave, and his people reap ſuch priviledges by it, as ever you expect reſt or comfort in your Graves, ſee that you get Union with Chriſt now.

It was an ancient cuſtom of the Jews, to put rich treaſures into the Graves, with their Friends, as well as to beſtow much upon their Sepulchres. It's ſaid, Hicarnus opened David's Sepulchre, and took out of it three thouſand Talents of Gold and Silver. And to this ſenſe many interpret that act of the Chaldeans, Jer. 8. 1. At that time, ſaith the Lord, they ſhall bring out the bones of the Kings of Judah, and the bones of his Princes, &c. And they ſhall ſpread them before the Sun and Moon, &c. This is rather conceiv'd to be an act of Covetouſneſs than Cruelty. They ſhall ranſack their Graves for the Treaſure that is hid there among their Bones. It's poſſible the caſe ſo ſtands with many of you, that you have no great matter to beſtow upon your Funerals, nor are they like to be ſplendid; no ſtately Monuments, no hidden Treaſures; but if Chriſt be yours, you carry that with you to your Graves, which is better than all the Gold and Silver in the World. What would you be the better if your Coffin were made of beaten Gold, or your Grave-ſtone ſet thick with glittering Diamonds? But if you die in the Lord, i.e. intereſted in, and united to the Lord; you ſhall carry ſix grounds of Comfort with you to your Graves, the leaſt of which is not to be purchaſed with the wealth of both Indies.

Firſt, The firſt Ground of Comfort which a Believer carries with him to the Grave is, that the Covenant of God holds firmly with his very Duſt, all the days of its appointed time in the Grave. So much Chriſt tells us, Matth. 22. 31, 32. I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob. God is not the God of the dead, but the God of the Living, q. d. Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, are naturally dead, but in as much as God long after their deaths, proclaimed himſelf their God ſtill; therefore they are all alive, fœderally alive to God. They live, that is, their Covenant-relation lives ſtill. Whether we live, or whether we die (ſaith the Apoſtle) we are the Lords, Rom. 14. 7, 8, 9. Now, what an encouragement is here! I am as much the Lord's in the ſtate of the dead, as I was in the ſtate of the living. Death puts an end to all other Relations and bonds, but the bond of the Covenant rots not in the Grave. That duſt is ſtill the Lord's.

Secondly, As God's Covenant with our very Bodies is indiſſolvable; ſo God's Love to our very duſt, is inſeparable. I am the God of Abraham: God looks down from Heaven into the Graves of his Saints with delight, and looks on that pile of duſt with complacency, which thoſe that once loved it, cannot behold without loathing. The Apoſtle is expreſs, Rom. 8. 33. That Death ſeparates not the Believer from the Love of God. As at firſt it was not our natural comlineſs or beauty that drew or engaged his Love to us; ſo neither will he ceaſe to love us when that beauty is gone, and we become objects of loathing to all Fleſh. When a Husband cannot endure to ſee a Wife, or a Wife her Husband; but ſaith of them that were once dear and pleaſant, as Abraham of his beloved Sarah, Bury my dead out of my ſight. Yet then the Lord delights in it as much as ever. The Gold-ſmith doth not value the Duſt of his Gold, as God values the Duſt of his Saints, for all theſe precious Particles are united to Chriſt.

Thirdly, As God's Love will be with you in the Grave, ſo God's Providence ſhall take order about your Graves. When it ſhall be digged for you. And be ſure he will not dig your Graves, till you are fit to be put into them. He will bring you thither in the beſt time, Job 5. 26. Thou ſhalt come to thy Grave as a ſhock of Corn in its Seaſon. You ſhall be ripe and ready before God houſe you there. It's ſaid of David, that after he had ſerved his generation by the will of God, he fell aſleep, Acts 13. 36. O what a holy and wiſe Will is that Will of God, that ſo orders our death! And how equal is it that our Will ſhould be concluded by it?

Fourthly, If you be in Chriſt, as God's Covenant holds with you in the Grave, his love is inſeparable from your Duſt, his Providence ſhall give order when it ſhall be digged for you; ſo in the next Place, his Pardons have looſed all the bonds of guilt from you, before you lie down in the Grave. So that you ſhall not die in your ſins. Ah Friends, what a Comfort is this? That you are the Lord's free-men in the Grave! Sin is a bad Bed-fellow, and a worſe Grave-fellow. It's a grievous threatning, John 8. 24. Ye ſhall die in your ſins. Better be caſt alive into a Pit among Dragons and Serpents, than dead into your Graves among your ſins. O what a terrible word is that, Job 20. 11. His bones are full of the ſins of his youth, which ſhall lie down with him in the duſt. But from the company of ſin in the Grave, all the Saints are delivered. God's full, free and final Pardons have ſhut guilt out of your Graves.

Fifthly, When ever you come to your Graves, you ſhall find the enmity of the Grave ſlain by Chriſt. It is no enemy; nay, you will find it friendly, a priviledged place to you. It will be as ſweet to you that are in Chriſt, as a ſoft Bed in a ſtill quiet Chamber, is to one that's weary and ſleepy. Therefore it's ſaid, 1 Cor. 3. 21, 22. Death is yours: Yours as a Priviledge: Your Friend. There you ſhall find ſweet reſt in Jeſus. Be hurried, pained, troubled no more.

Sixthly, To conclude, if in Chriſt; know this for your comfort, that your own Lord Jeſus Chriſt keeps the Keys of all the Chambers of death; and as he unlocks the door of Death, when he lets you in; ſo he will open it again for you, when you awake to let you out; and from the time he opens to let you in, till he opens to let you out, he himſelf wakes and watches by you while you ſleep there. ——— I (ſaith he) have the Keys of Death. O it's comfortable to hear the Keys gingle in his hand, Rev. 1. 18. O then, as you expect Peace or Reſt in the Chambers of Death, get Union with Chriſt. A Grave with Chriſt is a comfortable Place.

SERMON XXXVIII.

Serm.38.

Wherein four weighty ends of Chriſt's humiliation are opened and particularly applied.

ISAIAH LIII. 2.

He ſhall ſee the Travel of his Soul and be ſatisfied.

We are now arrived at the laſt Particular which we deſign'd to ſpeak to in Chriſt's State of Humiliation, namely, the Deſigns and bleſſed Ends for which he was ſo deeply abaſed. It's inconſiſtent with the Prudence of a common Agent to be at vaſt expences of time Time, Pains and Coſt; and not to propound to himſelf a deſign worthy of all thoſe Expences. And it is much leſs imaginable that Chriſt would ſo ſtupendiouſly abaſe himſelf, by ſtooping from the boſom of his Father to the ſtate of the dead, where our laſt Diſcourſe left him, if there had not been ſome excellent and glorious thing in his Eye, the attainment whereof might give him a content and ſatisfaction equivalent to all the ſorrows and abaſures he endured for it.

And ſo much is plainly carried in this Scripture. He ſhall ſee the Travel of his Soul and be ſatisfied. In which Words three things fall under our Conſideration.

עָמָל, ὠδίνω. Hæc vox & partum ſignificat, & dolorem parturientem Strigel.

Firſt, The travailing Pangs of Chriſt. So the Agonies of his Soul, and Torments of his Body are fitly call'd; not only becauſe of the ſharpneſs, and acuteneſs of them, being in that reſpect like the birth-pangs of a travailing Woman, for ſo this Word ſignifies; But alſo becauſe they forerun and make way for the Birth, which abundantly recompences all thoſe Labours. I ſhall not here inſiſt upon the Pangs and Agonies indured by Chriſt in the Garden, or upon the Croſs, which the Prophet ſtiles the travail of his Soul; having in the former Sermons opened it largely in its particulars; but paſs to the Second Thing conſiderable in theſe Words, and that is the aſſured Fruits, and effects of this his Travail. He ſhall ſee the travail of his Soul. By ſeeing, underſtand the fruition, obtainment, or enjoyment of the ends of his ſufferings. He ſhall not ſhed his Blood upon an Hazard. His Deſign ſhall not miſcarry, but he ſhall certainly ſee the Ends he aimed at accompliſhed.

And Thirdly, This ſhall yield him great Satisfaction, as a VVoman forgets her ſorrow, for joy that a Man is born into the world, John 16. 21. He ſhall ſee it, and be ſatisfied. As God when he had finiſhed the Work of Creation, viewed that his work with pleaſure and ſatisfaction; ſo doth our exalted Redeemer with great contentment, behold the happy iſſues of his hard Sufferings. It affords pleaſure to a Man to ſee great Affairs, by orderly Conduct, brought to happy Iſſues. Much more doth it yield delight to Jeſus Chriſt, to ſee the reſults of that moſt profound Wiſdom and Love wherein he carried on Redemption-work. All runs into this;

Doct. That all the bleſſed deſigns and ends for which the Lord Jeſus Chriſt humbled himſelf to the death of the Croſs, ſhall certainly be attained, to his full content and ſatisfaction.

My preſent buſineſs is not to prove, that Chriſt ſhall certainly obtain what he died for, nor to open the great ſatisfaction and pleaſure which will riſe to him out of thoſe Iſſues of his Death; but to point at the principal ends of his Death, making ſome brief improvements, as we paſs along.

Firſt, Then let us enquire into the deſigns and ends of Chriſt's humiliation, at leaſt, the main and principal ones: And we ſhall find, that as the ſprinkling of the Typical Blood in the Old Teſtament, was done for four weighty Ends or uſes; anſwerably the precious and invaluable Blood of the Teſtator and Surety of the New Teſtament, is ſhed for four weighty Ends alſo.

Firſt, That Blood was ſhed and applied to deliver from danger, Exod. 12. 13. And the blood ſhall be to you for a token upon the houſes where you are, and when I ſee the blood, I will paſs over you. And the Plague ſhall not be upon you, to deſtroy you when I ſmite the Land of Egypt.

Per hunc ritum implicitè profitentur Hebræi, ſe liberandos ab æterna morte per Meſſiæ ſanguinem. Vatab.

Secondly, That Blood was ſhed to make an attonement betwixt God and the People, Levit. 4. 20. And he ſhall do with the Bullock as he did with the Bullock for a Sin offering; ſo ſhall he do with this; and the Prieſt ſhall make an attonement for them, and it ſhall be forgiven them.

Thirdly, That Blood was ſhed to purifie perſons from their ceremonial pollutions, Lev. 14. 6, 7. He ſhall dip the Cedar wood, and Scarlet, and Hyſop with the living bird in the blood of the bird that was kill'd over the running water, and he ſhall ſprinkle upon him that is to be cleanſed from the Leproſie ſeven times; and ſhall pronounce him clean, and ſhall let the living bird looſe in the open field.

Septies ſignificabat perfectam expiationem. Numerus hic perfectioni ſacer. Menoch.

Fourthly, That Blood was ſhed to ratifie and confirm the Teſtament or Covenant of God with the People, Exod. 24. 8. And Moſes took the blood, and ſprinkled it on the people and ſaid, behold the blood of the Covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all theſe words. Theſe were the four main ends of ſhedding and ſprinkling that Typical blood. Suitably, Effuſio & aſperſio ſanguinis ſignificat fœdus ſtabile fore, & firmum etiam cum vitæ diſcrimine. Riv.

Suitably, there are four principal Ends of ſhedding and applying Chriſt's Blood. As that Typical Blood was ſhed to deliver from danger, ſo this was ſhed to deliver from wrath, even the wrath to come. That was ſhed to make an attonement, ſo was this. That was ſhed to purifie Perſons from uncleanneſs, ſo was this. That was ſhed to confirm the Teſtament, ſo was this, As will appear in the particulars more at large.

Firſt, One principal deſign and end of ſhedding the Blood of Chriſt was to deliver his people from danger, the danger of that wrath which burns down to the loweſt Hell. So you find, 1 Theſ. 1. 10. Even Jeſus who delivered us from the wrath to come. Here our miſery is both ſpecified, and aggravated. Specifi'd in calling it wrath, a word of deep and dreadful ſignification. The damned beſt underſtand the importance of that word. And aggravated in calling it wrath to come, or coming wrath. Wrath to come, implies both the futurity, and perpetuity of this Wrath. It's wrath that ſhall certainly and inevitably come upon Sinners. As ſure as the night follows the day. As ſure as the Winter follows the Summer; ſo ſhall wrath follow ſin, and the pleaſures thereof. Yea, it's not only certainly future, but when it comes it will be abiding wrath, or wrath ſtill coming. When millions of Years and Ages are paſt and gone, this will ſtill be wrath to come. Ever-coming, as a River over-flowing.

Now from this wrath to come, hath Jeſus delivered his People by his Death. For that was the price laid down for their Redemption from the wrath of the great and terrible God, Rom. 5. 9. Much more then being juſtified by his blood, we ſhall be ſaved from wrath through him. The Blood of Jeſus was the price that ranſomed Man from this wrath. And it was ſhed not only to deliver them from wrath to come, but to deliver them freely, fully, diſtinguiſhingly, and wonderfully from it.

Firſt, Freely, by his own voluntary interpoſition and ſuſception of the mediatorial office, moved thereunto by his own Bowels of compaſſion; which yearned over his Elect in their miſery. The Saints were once a loſt generation, that had ſold themſelves, and their inheritance alſo; and had not wherewithal to redeem either: But they had a near Kinſman (even their elder Brother by the Mothers ſide) to whom the right of Redemption did belong; who being a mighty Man of wealth, the heir of all things, undertook to be their Goell; and out of his own proper ſubſtance to redeem both them and their inheritance. Them to be his own inheritance, Eph. 1. 10. And Heaven to be theirs, 1 Pet. 1. 4. All this he did moſt freely, when none made ſupplication to him. No ſighing of the Priſoners came before him. He deſign'd it for us before we had a being. And when the purpoſes of his Grace were come to their parturient fulneſs, then did he freely lay out the infinite treaſures of his Blood to purchaſe our deliverance from wrath.

Vide Mr. Caſe his Mount Piſgah, p. 85.

Secondly, Chriſt by death hath delivered his People fully. A full deliverance it is, both in reſpect of Time and Degrees. A full deliverance in reſpect of Time. It was not a Reprieve, but a Deliverance. He thought it not worth the ſhedding of his Blood to reſpite the execution for a while. Nay, in the procurement of their eternal deliverance from wrath, and in the purchaſe of their eternal inheritance, he hath but an even bargain, not a jot more than his Blood was worth. Therefore is he become the Author of [Eternal Salvation] to them that obey him, Heb. 5. 9. And as it is full in reſpect of Time, ſo likewiſe in reſpect of Degrees. He died not to procure a mitigation or abatement of the rigor or ſeverity of the ſentence, but to reſcue his People fully from all degrees of wrath. So that there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt, Rom. 8. 1. All the wrath of God to the laſt drop, was ſqueezed out into that bitter cup which Chriſt drank off, and wrung out the very dregs thereof.

Thirdly, This deliverance obtained for us by the death of Chriſt, is a ſpecial and diſtinguiſhing deliverance. Not common to all, but peculiar to ſome; and they by nature no better than thoſe that are left under wrath. Yea, as to natural diſpoſition, moral qualifications and external endowments oftentimes far inferior to them that periſh. How often do we find a moral righteouſneſs, an harmleſs innocency, a pretty ingenuity, a readineſs to all offices of love; in them that are notwithſtanding left under the dominion of other Luſts, and under the damning ſentence of the Law; whilſt on the other ſide, proud, peeviſh, ſenſual, moroſe, and unpoliſht natures, are choſen to be the ſubjects of this Salvation. You ſee your calling brethren, 1 Cor. 1. 26.

Fourthly, And laſtly, it is a wonderful Salvation. It would weary the arm of an Angel to write down all the wonders that are in this Salvation. That ever ſuch a Deſign ſhould be laid, ſuch a project of Grace contrived in the Heart of God; who might have ſuffered the whole ſpecies to periſh. That it ſhould only concern Man, and not the Angels, by nature more excellent than us; that Chriſt ſhould be pitcht upon to go forth upon this glorious Deſign. That he ſhould effect it in ſuch a way, by taking our nature and ſuffering the penalty of the Law therein. That our deliverance ſhould be wrought out and finiſht when the Redeemer and his deſign ſeem'd both to be loſt and periſhed. Theſe with many more are ſuch wonders as will take up eternity it ſelf to ſearch, admire, and adore them.

Before I part from this firſt end of the Death of Chriſt, give me leave to deduce two uſeful Corollaries from it, and then proceed to a ſecond.

Coroll. 1. Hath Chriſt by Death delivered his People from the wrath to come? How ingrate and diſingenuous a thing muſt it be then for thoſe that have obtain'd ſuch a deliverance as this, to repine and grudge at thoſe light afflictions they ſuffer for a moment upon Chriſt's account in this world!

Sir R. Barkley, in the Felicity of Man, p. 13.

Alas! What are theſe ſufferings, that we ſhould grudge at them? Are they like thoſe which the Redeemer ſuffered for our deliverance? Did ever any of us endure for him, what he endured for us? Or is there any thing you can ſuffer for Chriſt in this world, comparable to this wrath to come, which you muſt have endured, had he not by the price of his own Blood reſcued you from it?

Compare

Reader, wilt thou but make the compariſon in thine own thoughts in the following particulars, and then pronounce when thou haſt duly compared.

The Natures

Firſt, What is the wrath of Man, to the wrath of God? What is the Arm of a Creature, to the anger a Deity? Can Man thunder with an arm like God?

Subjects.

Secondly, What are the ſufferings of the vile body here, to the tortures of a Soul and Body in Hell? The torments of the Soul, are the very Soul of torments.

Duration.

Thirdly, What are the troubles of a moment, to that wrath which after millions of Years are gone, will ſtill be call'd wrath to come? O what compare betwixt a point of haſty time, and the interminable duration of vaſt Eternity?

Continuity.

Fourthly, What compare is there betwixt the intermitting Sorrows and Sufferings of this Life, and the continued uninterrupted wrath to come? Our troubles here are not conſtant, there are gracious relaxations, lucid intervals here; but the wrath to come allows not a moments eaſe, or mitigation.

Deſigns.

Fifthly, What light and eaſie troubles are thoſe which being put into the rank and order of adjuvant cauſes, work under the influence and bleſſing of the firſt cauſe to the everlaſting good of them that love God, compared with that wrath to come, out of which no good effects or iſſues are poſſible to proceed to the Souls on which it lies?

And Companions.

Sixthly, And laſtly, how much more comfortable is it, to ſuffer in fellowſhip with Chriſt and his Saints for righteouſneſs ſake; than to ſuffer with Devils and Reprobates for wickedneſs ſake? Grudge not then O ye that are delivered by Jeſus from wrath to come, at any thing ye do ſuffer or ſhall ſuffer from or for Chriſt, Chriſt in this world.

Coroll. 2. If Jeſus Chriſt hath delivered his People from the wrath to come, how little comfort can any Man take in his preſent enjoyments and accommodations in the world, whilſt it remains a queſtion with him, whether he be deliver'd from the wrath to come? It's well for preſent, but will it be ſo ſtill? Man is a proſpecting Creature, and it will not ſatiſfie him, that his preſent condition is comfortable, except he have ſome hope it ſhall be ſo hereafter. It can afford a Man little content that all is eaſie and pleaſant about him now; whilſt ſuch paſſages and terrible hints of wrath to come are given him by his own conſcience daily. Oh methinks ſuch a thought as this, what if I am reſerved from the wrath to come? Should be to him as the fingers appearing upon the Plaiſter of the Wall were to Belteſhazzer in the height of a Frolick. It's a cuſtom with ſome of the Indians, when they have taken a Priſoner (whom they intend not preſently to eat) to bring him with great Triumph into the Village, where he dwelleth that hath taken him; and placing him in the Houſe of one that was ſlain in the Wars, as it were to re-celebrate his Funerals, they give him his Wives or Siſters to attend on him, and uſe at his Pleaſure. They apparel him gorgeouſly, and feed him with all the dainty Meats that may be had; affording him all the Pleaſure that can be deviſed; when he hath paſt certain Months in all theſe Pleaſures, and like a Capon is made fat with delicate fare, they aſſemble themſelves upon ſome Feſtival Day, and in great Pomp bring him to the place of Execution, where they kill, and eat him.

Sir R. Barkley, in the Felicity of Man, p. 12, 13.

Such are all the Pleaſures and Enjoyments of the wicked, which feed them for the day of Slaughter. How little Stomach can a Man have to thoſe Dainties that underſtands the end and meaning of them! Give not ſleep therefore to thine Eyes, Reader, till thou have got good evidence, that thou art of that number whom Jeſus hath delivered from wrath to come. Till thou canſt ſay, he is a Jeſus to thee. This may be made out to thy ſatisfaction three ways.

Firſt, If Jeſus have delivered thee from ſin, the cauſe of wrath, thou mayeſt conclude he hath delivered thee from wrath, the effect and fruits of ſin. Upon this account the ſweet name of Jeſus was impoſed upon him, Matth. 1. 21. Thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus, for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins. Whilſt a Man lies under the dominion and guilt of ſin, he lies expoſed to wrath to come; and when he is delivered from the guilt and power of ſin, he is certainly delivered from the danger of this coming wrath. Where ſin is not imputed, wrath is not threatned.

Secondly, If thy ſoul do ſet an ineſtimable value on Jeſus Chriſt, and be endeared to him upon the account of that inexpreſſible grace manifeſted in this deliverance, it's a good ſign thy ſoul hath a ſhare in it. Mark what an Epithite the Saints give Chriſt upon this account, Col. 1. 12, 13. Give thanks to the Father, who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and tranſlated us into the Kingdom of his [dear] Son. Chriſt is therefore dear and dear beyond all compare to his ſaved Ones. I remember it's ſtoried of the poor enthralled Grecians, that when Titus Flaminius had reſtored their ancient Liberties, and proclamation was to be made in the Market-place by an Herald; They ſo preſt to hear it, that the Herald was in great danger of being ſtifled and preſt to death among the People; but when the Proclamation was ended, there were heard ſuch ſhouts, and joyful Acclamations, that the very Birds of the Air fell down aſtoniſhed with the noiſe, while they continued to cry, σωτὴρ σωτὴρ, a Saviour, a Saviour: And all the following night they continued dancing and ſinging about his Pavilion.

Plutarch in vita. T. Flamini.

If ſuch a deliverance ſo indeared them to Titus: How ſhould the great deliverance from wrath to come, endear all the redeemed to love their dear Jeſus? This is the native effect of mercy on the Soul that hath felt it.

Thirdly, To conclude, a diſpoſition and readineſs of mind to do, or endure any thing for Chriſt's ſake upon the account of this deliverance ance from the wrath to come; is a good evidence you are ſo delivered, Col. 1. 10, 11. That we may walk worthy of the Lord to all pleaſing, being fruitful in every good work. There's readineſs to do for Chriſt. Strengthned with all might according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long-ſuffering with joyfulneſs. There's a chearful readineſs to endure any thing for Chriſt. And how both theſe flow from the ſenſe of this great deliverance from wrath, the 12. verſe will in inform you, which was but now cited. Oh then be ſerioue and aſſiduous in the reſolution of this grand caſe. Till this be reſolved, nothing can be pleaſant to thy Soul.

End 2. As the Typical Blood was ſhed and ſprinkled to deliver from danger, ſo it was ſhed to make attonement, Levit. 4. 20. He ſhall expiate (we tranſlate attone) the ſin. The Word imports both. And the true meaning is, that by by the Blood of the Bullock, all whoſe efficacy ſtood in its relation to the Blood of Chriſt ſignified and ſhadowed by it; the People for whom it was ſhed, ſhould be reconciled to God by the expiation & remiſſion of their Sins. And what was ſhadowed in this Typical Blood, was really deſigned and accompliſht by Jeſus Chriſt in the ſhedding of his Blood.

Reconciliation of the Elect to God, is therefore another of thoſe beautiful Births which Chriſt travailed for. So you find it expreſly, Rom. 5. 10. If when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son. This [if,] is not a word of doubting, but argumentation. The Apoſtle ſuppoſes it as a known truth, or principle yielded by all Chriſtians; that the death of Chriſt was to reconcile the Elect to God. And again he affirms it with like clearneſs. Col. 1. 20. And having made peace by the blood of his Croſs, by him to reconcile all things. And that this was a main and principal end deſigned both by the Father and Son in the humiliation of Chriſt, is plain from 2 Cor. 5. 18, 19. God was in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf. God filled the humanity with Grace and Authority. The Spirit of God was in him to qualifie him. The Authority of God was in him by Commiſſion, to make all he did valid. The grace and love of God to mankind was in him, and one of the principal effects in which it was manifeſted, was this deſign upon which he came, viz. To reconcile the world to God. Upon which ground Chriſt is called the propitiation for our Sins, 1 John 2. 2. Now, Reconciliation or attonement is nothing elſe but the making up of the ancient friendſhip betwixt God and Men which ſin had diſſolved, and ſo to reduce theſe Enemies into a ſtate of Concord and ſweet Agreement. And the means by which this bleſſed Deſign was effectually compaſſed, was by the death of Chriſt which made compleat ſatisfaction to God for the wrong we had done him. There was a Breach made by Sin betwixt God and Angels, but that Breach is never to be repaired or made up. Since as Chriſt took not on him their nature, ſo he never intended to be a Mediator of Reconciliation betwixt God and them. That will be an eternal Breach. But that which Chriſt deſigned as the end of his death was to reconcile God and Man. Not the whole ſpecies but a certain number whoſe names were given to Chriſt. Here I muſt briefly open. 1. How Chriſt's death Reconciles. 2. VVhy this Reconciliation is brought about by his death, rather than any other way. 3. VVhat are the Articles according to which it's made. And 4. VVhat manner of Reconciliation this is.

Reconciliare nihil aliud eſt quam amicitiam offenſione aliqua gravi diremptam reſarcire; & ſic inimicos in priſtinam concordiam reducere. B. Davenant in Col. 1. 20.

Firſt, How Chriſt reconciles God and Men by his Death. And it muſt needs be by the ſatiſfaction his Death made to the Juſtice of God for our ſins. And ſo, reparation being made, the enmity ceaſes. Hence it's ſaid, Iſa. 53. 5. The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and by his Stripes are we healed. That is (as our Engliſh Annotators well ſenſe it.) He was chaſtized to procure our Peace by removal of our ſins that ſet God and us aſunder, the guilt thereof being diſcharged with the price of his Blood.

Now this Reconciliation is made and continued betwixt God and us, three ways; namely, by the oblation of Chriſt which was the price that procured it, and ſo we were virtually or meritoriouſly reconciled. By the application of Chriſt and his benefits to us through Faith, and ſo we are actually reconciled. And by the virtual continuation of the Sacrifice of Chriſt in Heaven, by his potent and eternal interceſſion, and ſo our ſtate of Reconciliation is confirmed, and all future Breaches prevented. But all depends as you ſee, upon the death of Chriſt. For had not Chriſt died, his death could never be applied to us, nor pleaded in Heaven for us. How the death of Chriſt meritoriouſly procures our Reconciliation, is evident from that fore-cited Scripture, Rom. 5. 10. VVhen we were enemis we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, (i. e.) Chriſt's death did meritoriouſly or virtually reconcile us to God, who as to our ſtate were enemies long after that Reconciliation was made. That the application of Chriſt to us by Faith, makes that virtual Reconciliation to become actual is plain enough from Eph. 2. 16, 17. And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the Croſs, having ſlain the enmity thereby. And came and preached peace to you that were afar off, and to them that were nigh. Now therefore (as it is added, ver. 19.) Ye are no more ſtrangers and foreigners, but fellow-Citizens with the Saints, &c. And that this ſtate of Friendſhip is ſtill continued by Chriſt's interceſſion within the vail ſo that there can be no Breaches made upon the ſtate of our peace notwithſtanding all the daily provocations we give God by our ſins; is the comfortable truth which the Apoſtle plainly aſſerts, after he had given a neceſſary caution to prevent the abuſe of it, in 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. My little children, theſe things I write unto you that ye ſin not; and if any Man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous; and he is the propitiation, &c. Thus Chriſt reconciles us to God, by his Death.

Secondly, And if you enquire why this Reconciliation was made by the death of Chriſt, rather than any other way; ſatisfaction is at hand in theſe two Anſwers.

Firſt, That we can imagine no other way by which it could be compaſſed. And,

Secondly, If God could have Reconciled us as much by another way, yet he could not have obliged us ſo much by doing it in another way, as he hath by doing it this way. Surely none but he that was God manifeſt in our Fleſh, could offer a ſacrifice of ſufficient value to make God amends for the wrong done him by One Sin, much leſs for All the Sins of the Elect. And how God ſhould (eſpecially after a peremptory threatning of Death for Sin) readmit us into favour without full ſatisfaction, cannot be imagined. He is indeed inclin'd to acts of Mercy, but none muſt ſuppoſe him to exerciſe one Attribute, in prejudice to another. That his Juſtice muſt be Eclipſed, whilſt his Mercy ſhines. But allow the infinite Wiſdom could have found out another means of Reconciling us as much, can you imagine, that in any other way he could oblige us as much, as he hath done by Reconciling us to himſelf by the Death of his own Son? It cannot be thought poſſible. This therefore was the moſt effectual, juſt, honourable, and obliging way to make up the peace betwixt him and us.

Thirdly, This Reconciliation purchaſed by the Blood of Chriſt, is offered unto Men by the Goſpel, upon certain Articles and Conditions; upon the Performance whereof, it actually becomes theirs; and without which, notwithſtanding all that Chriſt hath done and ſuffered, the Breach ſtill continues betwixt them and God. And let no Man think this a derogation from the freeneſs and riches of Grace, for theſe things ſerve ſingularly to illuſtrate and commend the Grace of God to ſinners.

Christ

As he conſulted his own Glory, in the terms on which he offers us our peace with him; ſo 'tis his Grace which brings up Souls to thoſe terms of Reconciliation. And ſurely he hath not ſuſpended the Mercy of our Reconciliation upon unreaſonable or impoſſible Conditions. He hath not ſaid, if you will do as much for me, as you have done againſt me, I will be at Peace with you: But the two grand Articles of Peace with God, are Repentance and Faith. In the firſt, we lay down Arms againſt God, and 'tis meet it ſhould be ſo, before he re-admits us into a ſtate of Peace and Favour; in the other, we accept Chriſt and Pardon through him with a thankful Heart, yielding up our ſelves to his Government. Which is equally reaſonable.

Theſe are the terms on which we are actually reconciled to God. Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him turn to the Lord, and he will have mercy on him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. So Rom. 5. 1. Being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God. And ſurely it would not become the Holy God to own as his Friend and Favourite, a Man that goes on perverſly and impenitently in the way of Sin; not ſo much as acknowledging, or once bewailing the wrong he hath done him, purpoſing to do ſo no more; or to receive into amity one that ſlights and rejects the Lord Jeſus, whoſe precious Blood was ſhed to procure, and purchaſe Peace and Pardon for Sinners.

But if there be any poor Soul, that ſaith in his Heart, it repents me for ſinning againſt God, and is ſincerly willing to come to Chriſt upon Goſpel-terms, he ſhall have Peace. And that Peace,

Fourthly, Is no common Peace. The Reconciliation which the Lord Jeſus died to procure for broken-hearted Believers, it is,

Firſt, A firm well-bottom'd Reconciliation, putting the reconciled Soul beyond all poſſibility of coming under God's wrath any more, Iſa. 54. 10. Mountains may depart, and hills be removed, but the Covenant of this peace cannot be removed. Chriſt is a ſurety by way of Caution, to prevent new Breaches, 2 John 1. 2.

Secondly, This Reconciliation with God, is the Fountain out of which all our other Comforts flow to us; this is plainly carried in thoſe words of Eliphaz to Job, Chap. 22. 21. Acquaint now thy ſelf with him, and be at peace, thereby good ſhall come unto thee. As Trade flouriſhes, and Riches come in when Peace is made betwixt States and Kingdoms: So all Spiritual and Temporal Mercies flow into our Boſoms, when once we are reconciled to God. What the Comfort of ſuch a Peace will be in a day of ſtraights and dangers, and what it will be valued at in a dying day, who but he that feels it can tell? And yet ſuch an one cannot fully declare it, for it paſſes all underſtanding, Phil. 4. 7. We ſhall now make ſome improvement of this, and paſs on to the third end of the Death of Chriſt.

Infer. 1. If Chriſt died to Reconcile God and Man: How horrid an evil then is Sin! And how terrible was that breach made betwixt God and the Creature by it, which could no other way be made up but by the death of the Son of God! I remember I have read, that when a great chaſm or breach was made in the earth by an Earthquake, and the Oracle was conſulted how it might be cloſed; this anſwer was returned, That Breach can never be cloſed, except ſomething of great worth to be thrown into it. Such a Breach was that which Sin made, it could never be reconciled but by the Death of Jeſus Chriſt, the moſt excellent thing in all the Creation.

Infer. 2. How ſad is the ſtate of all ſuch as are not comprized in the Articles of Peace with God! The impenitent Unbeliever is excepted. God is not Reconciled to him: And if God be his Enemy, how little avails it, who is his Friend? For, if God be a Man's Enemy, he hath an Almighty Enemy in him, whoſe very frown is deſtruction, Deut. 32. 40, 41, 42. I lift up my hand to Heaven and ſay, I live for ever. If I whet my glittering Sword, and my hand take hold on Judgment; I will render vengeance to my enemies, and I will reward them that hate me. I will make mine Arrows drunk with Blood, (and my Sword ſhall devour fleſh) and that with the blood of the Slain and the Captives, from the beginning of Revenge upon the Enemy.

Yea, he is an unavoidable Enemy. Fly to the utmoſt parts of the Earth, there ſhall his Hand reach thee, as it is, Pſal. 139. 10. The wings of the Morning cannot carry thee out of his reach. If God be your Enemy, you have an immortal Enemy, who lives for ever to avenge himſelf upon his Adverſaries. And what wilt thou do when thou art in Saul's caſe, 1 Sam. 28. 15, 16. Alas, whither wilt thou turn? To whom wilt thou complain? But what wilt thou do when thou ſhalt ſtand at the Bar, and ſee that God, who is thine Enemy, upon the Throne? Sad is their Caſe indeed, who are not comprehended in the Articles of Peace with God.

Infer. 3. If Chriſt died to Reconcile us to God, give diligence to clear up to your own Souls, your intereſt in this Reconciliation. If Chriſt thought it worth his Blood to purchaſe it, it's worth your care and pains to clear it. And what can better evidence it than your conſcientious tenderneſs of Sin, leſt you make new Breaches. Ah, if Reconciled, you will ſay, as Ezra. 9. 14. And now our God, ſeeing thou haſt given us ſuch a deliverance as this; ſhould we again break thy Commandments? If Reconciled to God, his Friends will be your Friends, and his Enemies your Enemies. If God be your Friend, you will be diligent to pleaſe him, Joh. 15. 10, 14. He that makes not Peace with God, is an Enemy to his own Soul. And he that is at Peace, but takes no pains to clear it, is an Enemy to his own Comfort. But I muſt paſs from this to the third End of Chriſt's Death.

End 3. You have ſeen two of thoſe beautiful Births of Chriſt's Travail, and lo, a third cometh, namely, The Sanctification of his People. Typical Blood was ſhed, as you heard, to purifie them that were unclean, and ſo was the Blood of Chriſt ſhed to purge away the Sins of his People; ſo ſpeaks the Apoſtle expreſly, Eph. 5. 25, 26. Chriſt gave himſelf for the Church, that he might ſanctifie and cleanſe it. And ſo he tells us himſelf, Joh. 17. 19. And for their ſakes I ſanctifie my ſelf, (i. e.) conſecrate or devote my ſelf to death, that they alſo might be ſanctified through the truth. Upon the account of this benefit received by the Blood of Chriſt, is that Doxlogy, which in a lower ſtrain is now ſounded in the Churches, but will be matter of the Lambs Song in Heaven, Rev. 1. 5, 6. To him that loved us and waſhed us from our Sins, in his own Blood——be Glory and Honour for ever. Now, there is a two-fold evil in Sin, the guilt of it, and the pollution of it. Juſtification properly cures the former, Sanctification the latter; but both Juſtification and Sanctification flow unto ſinners out of the Death of Chriſt. And though it's proper to ſay the Spirit ſanctifies, yet it is certain it was the Blood of Chriſt that procured for us the Spirit of Sanctification. Had not Chriſt died the Spirit had never come down from Heaven upon any ſuch Deſign.

The pouring forth of Chriſt's Blood for us, obtained the pouring forth of the Spirit of Holineſs upon us. Therefore the Spirit is ſaid to Come in his name, and to take of his and ſhew it unto us. Hence it's ſaid, 1 Joh. 5. 6. He came both by Blood and by Water, by Blood waſhing away the Guilt, by Water purifying from the Filth of Sin. Now this Fruit of Chriſt's Death, even our Sanctification, is a moſt incomparable Mercy. For, do but conſider a few particular Excellencies of Holineſs.

Firſt, Holineſs is the Image and Glory of God. His Image, Col. 3. 10. and his Glory, Exod. 15. 11. Who is like unto thee, O Lord, glorious in Holineſs? Now, when the guilt and filth of Sin is waſht off, and the Beauty of God put upon the Soul in Sanctification, O what a Beautiful Creature is the Soul now. So lovely in the Eyes of Chriſt, even in its imperfect Holineſs, that he ſaith, Cant. 6. 5. Turn away thine Eyes from me, for they have overcome me. So we render it, but the Hebrew word ſignifies, they have made me proud, or puffed me up. It's a Beam of Divine Glory upon the Creature, enamouring the very Heart of Chriſt.

Secondly, As it's the Souls higheſt beauty, ſo it's the Souls beſt evidence for Heaven. Bleſſed are the pure in heart, for they ſhall ſee God, Mat. 5. 8. And without Holineſs no man ſhall ſee God, Heb. 12. 14. No gifts no duties, no natural endowments will evidence a right in Heaven, but the leaſt meaſure of true Holineſs will ſecure Heaven to the Soul.

Thirdly, As Holineſs is the Souls beſt evidence for Heaven, ſo it's a continual ſpring of Comfort to it in the way thither. The pureſt and ſweeteſt Pleaſures in this World, are the reſults of Holineſs. Till we come to live Holily we never live comfortably. Heaven is Epitomized in Holineſs.

Fourthly, And to ſay no more; It is the peculiar mark by which God hath viſibly diſtinguiſhed his own, from other Men, Pſal. 4. 3. The Lord hath ſet apart him that is Godly for himſelf, q. d. this is the Man, and that the Woman, to whom I intend to be good for ever. This is a Man for me. O Holineſs, how ſurpaſſingly glorious art thou!

Infer. 1. Did Chriſt die to Sanctifie his People, how deep then is the pollution of Sin, that nothing but the Blood of Chriſt can cleanſe it! All the Tears of a Penitent Sinner, ſhould he ſhed as many as there have fallen drops of Rain ſince the Creation, to this day, cannot waſh away one ſin. The everlaſting burnings in Hell, cannot purifie the flaming Conſcience from the leaſt ſin. O gueſs at the wound by the largeneſs and length of this Tent that follows the mortal Weapon, Sin.

Infer. 2. Did Chriſt die to ſanctifie his People? Behold then the Love of a Saviour. He loved us, and waſhed us from our Sin in his own Blood. He did not ſhed the Blood of Beaſts, as the Prieſts of old did, but his own Blood, Heb. 9. 12. And that no common, but precious Blood, 1 Pet. 1. 19. The Blood of God; one drop of which out-values the Blood that runs in the veins of all Adams Poſterity. And not ſome of that Blood, but all; to the laſt Drop. He bled every vein dry for us; and what remain'd lodg'd about the Heart of dead Jeſus, was let out by that Bloody Spear which pierced the Pericardium: So that he beſtow'd the whole Treaſure of his Blood upon us. And thus liberal was he of his Blood to us when we were Enemies. This then is that Heavenly Pelican that feeds his young with his own Blood. O what manner of Love is this! But I muſt haſten.

End 4. As Chriſt died to ſanctifie his People: So he dyed alſo to confirm the New Teſtament to all thoſe ſanctified ones. So it was in the Type, Exod. 24. 8. And ſo it is in the Text. This is the New Teſtament in my Blood, Mat. 26. 28. (i. e.) ratified and confirmed by my Blood. For, where a Teſtament is, there muſt alſo of neceſſity be the death of the Teſtator, Heb. 9. 16. ſo that now all the bleſſings and benefits bequeathed to Believers in the laſt Will and Teſtament of Chriſt, are abundantly confirmed and ſecured to them by his Death. Yea, he died on purpoſe to make that Teſtament in force to them. Men make their Wills and Teſtaments, and Chriſt makes his. What they bequeath, and give in their Wills, is a free and voluntary act, they cannot be compelled to do it. And what is bequeathed to us in this Teſtament of Chriſt, is altogether a free and voluntary donation. Other Teſtators uſe to bequeath their Eſtates to their Wives and Children, and near Relations; ſo doth this Teſtator, all is ſettled upon his Spouſe the Church. Upon Believers, his Children. A ſtranger intermeddles not with theſe Mercies. They give all their goods and eſtates that can that way be conveyed to their Friends that ſurvive them. Chriſt giveth to his Church in this New Teſtament three ſorts of Goods.

Nullo præſentis metu periculi, Cooks Inſtit. l.3.cap.10.

Firſt, All Temporal good things, 1 Tim. 6. 1. Mat. 6. 33. (i. e.) the Comfort and Bleſſing of all, though not the poſſeſſion of much. As having nothing, and yet poſſeſſing all things, 2 Cor. 6. 10.

Secondly, All Spiritual good things are bequeathed to them in this Teſtament, as Remiſſion of Sin, and Acceptation with God, which are contained in their Juſtification, Rom. 3. 24, 25, 26. Sanctification of their Natures, both initial and progreſſive, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Adoption into the family of God, Gal. 3. 26. The Miniſtry of Angels, Heb. 1. 14. Intereſt in all the Promiſes, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Thus all ſpiritual good things are in Chriſt's Teſtament conveyed to them. And as all Temporal, and Spiritual, ſo

Thirdly, All eternal good things. Heaven, Glory, and eternal Life, Rom. 8. 10, 11. No ſuch bequeſts as theſe were ever found in the Teſtaments of Princes. That which Kings and Nobles ſettle by Will upon their Heirs, are but trifles to what Chriſt hath conferred in the New Teſtament upon his People. And all this is confirmed and ratified by the death of Chriſt, ſo that the Promiſe is ſure, and the Eſtate indefeaſible to all the Heirs of Promiſe.

How the Death of Chriſt confirmed the New Teſtament is worth our enquiry. The Socinians as they allow no other end of Chriſt's Death, but the confirmation of the New Teſtament, ſo they affirm he did it only by way of Teſtimony, or witneſs-bearing in his death. But this is a vile derogation from the efficacy of Chriſt's Blood, to bring it down into an equality with the Blood of Martyrs. As if there were no more in it, than was in their Blood.

But know, Reader, Chriſt died not only or principally to confirm the Teſtament by his Blood, as witneſs to the Truth of thoſe Things, but his Death ratified it as the death of a Teſtator, which makes the New Teſtament irrevocable. And ſo Chriſt is called in this Text. Look as when a Man hath made his Will, and is Dead, that Will is preſently in force, and can never be recall'd. Beſides, the Will of the Dead is ſacred with Men. They dare not croſs it. It's certain the laſt Will and Teſtament of Chriſt is moſt ſacred, and God will never annul, or make it void. Moreover, it is not with Chriſt as with other Teſtators, who die, and muſt truſt the performance of their Wills with their Executors, but as he died to put it in force, ſo he lives again to be the Executor of his own Teſtament. And all power to fulfil his Will, is now in his own hands, Rev. 1. 18.

Infer. 1. Did Chriſt die to confirm the New Teſtament, in which ſuch Legacies are bequeathed to Believers. How are all Believers concerned then, to prove the Will of dead Jeſus! My meaning is, to clear their Title to the Mercies contained in this bleſſed Teſtament. And this may be done two ways. By clearing to our ſelves our Covenant-Relations to Chriſt. And by diſcovering thoſe ſpecial Covenant-Impreſſions upon our Hearts to which the Promiſes therein contained do belong.

The Probat of Chriſt's laſt Will and Teſtament.

Firſt, Examine your Relations to Chriſt. Are you his Spouſes, have you forſaken all for him, Pſal. 45. 10. Are you ready to take your lot with him as it falls in proſperity or adverſity, Jer. 2. 2. And are you Loyal to Chriſt? Thou ſhalt be for me, and not for another, Hoſ. 3. 3. Do you yield obedience to him as your Head and Husband, Eph. 6. 24. Then you may be confident you are intereſted in the benefits and bleſſings of Chriſt's laſt Will and Teſtament, for can you imagine, Chriſt will make a Teſtament, and forget his Spouſe? It cann't be. If he ſo loved the Church, as to give himſelf for her, much more what he hath is ſettled on her. Again, are you his ſpiritual Seed, his Children be Regeneration? Are you born of the Spirit? John 3. Do you reſemble Chriſt in Holineſs? 1 Pet. 1. 14, 15. Do you find a reverential fear of Chriſt carrying you to obey him in all things? Mal. 1. 6. Are you led by the Spirit of Chriſt, As many as are ſo led, they are the Sons of God, Rom. 8. 14. To conclude, have you, the Spirit of Adoption, inabling you to cry, Abba Father? Gal 4. 6. That is, helping you in a gracious manner, with reverence mixt with filial confidence to open your Hearts ſpiritually to your Father on all occaſions? If ſo, you are children, and if children, doubt not but you have a rich Legacy in Chriſt's laſt Will and Teſtament. He would not Seal up his Teſtament and forget his dear Children.

Secondly, You may diſcern your intereſt in the New Teſtament or Covenant, (for they are ſubſtantially the ſame thing) by the new Covenant-impreſſions that are made on your Hearts, which are ſo many clear evidences of your right to the benefits it contains. Such are ſpiritual Illuminations, Jer. 31. 34. Gracious ſoftneſs and tenderneſs of Heart, Ezek. 11. 19. The awful dread and fear of God, Jer. 32. 40. The Copy or tranſcript of his Laws on your Hearts in gracious correſpondent Principles, Jer. 31. 33. Theſe things ſpeak you the Children of the Covenant, the Perſons on whom all theſe great things are ſettled.

Infer. 2. To conclude, it is the indiſpenſible duty of all on whom Chriſt hath ſettled ſuch Mercies, to admire his Love, and walk anſwerably to it.

Firſt, Admire the Love of Chriſt. O how intenſe and ardent was the love of Jeſus! Who deſigned for you ſuch an inheritance, with ſuch a ſettlement of it upon you! Theſe are the Mercies with which his Love had travailed big from Eternity, and now he ſees the Travail of his Soul, and you alſo have ſeen ſomewhat of it this day. Before, this Love let all the Saints fall down aſtoniſhed, humbly profeſſing, that they owe themſelves and all they are or ſhall be worth to eternity, to this Love.

Secondly, And be ſure you walk becoming Perſons for whom Chriſt hath done ſuch great things. Comfort your ſelves under preſent abaſures with your ſpiritual Priviledges, Jam. 2. 5. And let all your rejoycing be in Chriſt, and what you have in him, whilſt others are bleſſing themſelves in Vanity. Thus we have finiſhed the ſtate of Chriſt's Humiliation, and thence proceed to the ſecond ſtate of his Exaltation.

An Introduction to the State of Exaltation.

HAving finiſhed what I deſigned to ſpeak to about the Work of Redemption, ſo far as it was carried on by Chriſt in his humble State, we ſhall now view that bleſſed Work as it is further advanced and perfected in his ſtate of Exaltation.

The whole of that Work was not to be finiſhed on Earth in a ſtate of ſuffering and abaſure, therefore the Apoſtle makes his Exaltation in order to the finiſhing of the remainder of his Work, ſo neceſſary a part of his Prieſthood, that without it he could not have been a Prieſt, Heb. 8. 4. If he were on earth, he ſhould not be a prieſt, (i. e.) if he ſhould have continued always here, and had not been raiſed again from the dead, and taken up into glory, he could not have been a compleat and perfect Prieſt.

For look as it was not enough for the Sacrifice to be ſlain without, and his Blood left there; but after it was ſhed without, it muſt be carried within the vail into the moſt holy place before the Lord, Heb. 9. 7. So it was not ſufficient that Chriſt ſhed his own Blood on earth, except he carry it before the Lord into Heaven, and there perform his interceſſion work for us.

Moreover, God the Father ſtood engaged in a ſolemn Covenant, to reward him for his deep humiliation, with a moſt glorious and illuſtrious advancement, Iſa. 49. 5, 6. 7. And how God (as it became him) made this good to Chriſt, the Apoſtle very clearly expreſſes it, Phil. 2. 9.

Yea, Juſtice required it ſhould be ſo. For how could our Surety be detained in the Priſon of the Grave, when the debt for which he was impriſoned was by him fully diſcharged, ſo that the Law of God muſt acknowledge it ſelf to be fully ſatisfied in all its claims and demands. His Reſurrection from the Dead was therefore but his diſcharge or acquittance upon full payment. Which could not in Juſtice be denied him.

And indeed God the Father loſt nothing by it, for there never was a more glorious manifeſtation made of the name of God to the World than was made in that Work. Therefore it's ſaid, Phil. 2. 11. Speaking of one of the deſigns of Chriſt's Exaltation, it was (ſaith the Apoſtle) That every tongue ſhould confeſs that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord, to the Glory of God the Father. O how is the Love of God to poor ſinners illuſtriouſly, yea aſtoniſhingly diſplayed in Chriſt's Exaltation. When to ſhew the Complacency and Delight which he took in our recovery, he hath openly declar'd to the World that his exalting Chriſt to all that Glory ſuch as no meer Creature ever was or can be exalted to, was beſtowed upon him as a reward for that Work, that moſt grateful Work of our Redemption, Phil. 2. 9. Wherefore God alſo hath highly exalted him; there is an Emphatical Pleonaſmus in that word, our Engliſh is too flat to deliver out the elegancy of the Original, it is Super-Exaltation. The Syriack renders it, he hath multiplied his Sublimity. The Arabick, he hath heightened him with an height. Juſtin, he hath famouſly exalted him. Higher he cannot raiſe him, a greater Argument of his high ſatisfaction and content in the recovery of poor ſinners cannot be given. For this therefore God the Father ſhall have Glory and Honour aſcribed to him in Heaven to all Eternity.

ὑπερύψωσε, Pleonaſmus Emphaticus, Hierom. Multiplicavit ſublimitatem ejus. Arab. Sublimitate Sublimavit eum, Syr. Inſigniter extulit, Juſtin. Secundum eandem naturam dicitur exaltatus, ſecundum quam humiliatus fuit, Zanch.

Now this ſingular Exaltation of Jeſus Chriſt as it properly reſpects his humane Nature, which alone is capable of advancement, for in reſpect of his divine Nature he never ceaſed to be the moſt high. So it was done to him as a common Perſon, and as the head of all Believers, their repreſentative in this as well as in his other Works. God therein ſhewing what in due time he intends to do with the Perſons of his Elect, after they in Conformity to Chriſt have ſuffered a while. What ever God the Father intendeth to do in us or for us, he hath firſt done it to the Perſon of our repreſentative, Jeſus Chriſt. And this, if you obſerve, the Scriptures carry in very clear and plain Expreſſions through all the degrees and ſteps of Chriſt's Exaltation, viz. his Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, Seſſion at the right hand of God. And turning to Judge the World. Of which I purpoſe to ſpeak diſtinctly in the following Sermons.

He aroſe from the dead as a common Perſon, Col. 3. 1. If ye then be riſen with Chriſt, ſaith the Apoſtle; ſo that the Saints have Communion and Fellowſhip with him in his Reſurrection.

He aſcended into Heaven as a common Perſon, for ſo it's ſaid in Eph. 2. 6. He hath raiſed us up, or exalted us together with Chriſt. He ſits at God's right hand as a common Perſon, for ſo it follows in the next Clauſe, and hath made us ſit together in heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus. We ſit there in our Repreſentative. And when he ſhall come again to judge the World, the Saints ſhall come with him. So 'tis propheſied, Zech. 14. 6. The Lord my God ſhall come, and all the Saints with thee. And as they ſhall come with Chriſt from Heaven, ſo they ſhall ſit on Thrones with him, judging, by way of ſuffrage. They ſhall be Aſſeſſors with the Judge, 1 Cor. 6. 2. This deſerves a ſpecial Remark, that all this honour is given to Chriſt, as our Head and Repreſentative, for thence reſults abundance of comfort to the people of God. Carry it therefore along with you in your Thoughts throughout the whole of Chriſt's advancement. Think when you ſhall hear that Chriſt is riſen from the dead, and is in all that Glory and Authority in Heaven. How ſure the Salvation of his redeemed is. For if when we were Enemies, we were reconciled to God, by the death of his Son, much more being reconciled; we ſhall be ſaved by his Life. Surely it cannot be ſuppoſed but he is able to ſave to the uttermoſt all them that come to God by him: ſeeing he ever lives to make interceſſion, Heb. 7. 25. Think how ſafe the People of God in this World are, whoſe Head is in Heaven. It was a comfortable Expreſſion of one of the Fathers, encouraging himſelf and others with this truth in a dark day. Come (ſaid he) why do we tremble thus, do we not ſee our Head above Water? If he live, believers cannot die, John 14. 19. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo.

And let no Man's Heart ſuggeſt a ſuſpicious Thought to him, that this wonderful Advancement of Chriſt may cauſe him to forget his poor People, groaning here below under Sin and Miſery. For the Temper and Diſpoſition of his faithful and tender heart is not changed with his Condition. He bears the ſame reſpect to us, as when he dwelt among us. For indeed he there lives and acts upon our account, Heb. 7. 25. 1 John 2. 1, 2.

And how ſeaſonable and comfortable will the Meditations of Chriſt's Exaltation be to the Believer, when ſickneſs hath waſted thy Body, withered it's Beauty, and God is bringing thee to the duſt of death. Ah think then, that that vile Body ſhall be confirmed to the glorious Body of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 21. As God hath glorified and highly exalted his Son, whoſe form was marr'd more than any man's, ſo will he exalt thee alſo. I do not ſay to a parity or equality in Glory with Chriſt, for in Heaven he will be diſcerned and diſtinguiſhed by his peculiar Glory, from all the Angels and Saints; as the Sun is known by its excellent Glory from the leſſer Stars. But we ſhall be conformed to this glorious Head, according to the proportion of Members. O whither will Love mount the Believer in that Day!

Having ſpoken this much of Chriſt's exalted ſtate to caſt ſome general light upon it, and engage your Attentions to it, I ſhall now, according to the degrees of this his wonderful Exaltation, briefly open it under the fore-mentioned Heads, viz. His Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, Seſſion at the Father's right Hand, and his Return to judge the World.

Serm. 39.

Wherein the Reſurrection of Chriſt with its influences upon the Saints reſurrection is clearly opened and comfortably applied, being the firſt ſtep of his Exaltation.

SERMON XXXIX.

MATTH. XXVIII. 6.

He is not here, for he is riſen; as he ſaid, come, ſee the place where the Lord lay.

We have finiſhed the Doctrine of Chriſt's Humiliation, wherein the Sun of Righteouſneſs appeared to you as a ſetting Sun, gone out of ſight; but as the Sun when it is gone down to us, begins a new day in another part of the World, ſo Chriſt having finiſhed his courſe and work in this World, riſes again, and that in order to the acting another glorious part of his work in the World above. In his death he was upon the matter totally eclipſed, but in his reſurrection he begins to recover his Light and Glory again. God never intended that the darling of his Soul ſhould be loſt in an obſcure Sepulchre. An Angel deſcends from Heaven to roll away the ſtone, and with it the reproach of his death. And to be the heavenly Herald to proclaim his Reſurrection to the two Marys, whoſe love to Chriſt had at this time drawn them to viſit the Sepulchre, where they lately left him.

At this time (the Lord being newly riſen) the keepers were trembling, and become as dead Men. So great was the terrible Majeſty and awful ſolemnity attending Chriſt's Reſurrection: But to encourage theſe good Souls, the Angel prevents them with theſe good tidings: He is not here, for he is riſen, as he ſaid; come, ſee the place where the lord lay: q. d. Be not troubled, though you have not the end you came for, one ſight more of your dear, tho' dead Jeſus; yet you have not loſt your labour; for, to your eternal comfort, I tell you, he is riſen, as he ſaid. And to put it out of doubt, come hither, and ſatisfie your ſelves, See the place where the Lord lay.

In which Word we have both a Declaration and Confirmation of the Reſurrection of Chriſt from the dead.

Firſt, A Declaration of it by the Angel, both Negatively and Affirmatively. Negatively, He is not here. Here indeed you laid him, here you left him, and here you thought to find him as you left him; but you are happily miſtaken. He is not here. However, this giving them no ſatisfaction, for he might continue dead ſtill, though removed to another Place, as indeed they ſuſpected he was, John 20. 13. Therefore his reſurrection is declared Poſitively and Affirmatively; He is riſen, ἠγέρθε, the word imports the active Power, or ſelf-quickning Principle by which Chriſt raiſed himſelf from the ſtate of the dead. Which Luke takes notice of alſo, Acts 1. 3. Where he ſaith, He ſhewed, or preſented, himſelf alive after his paſſion. It was the divine Nature or God-head of Chriſt which revived and raiſed the Man-hood.

Argumentum quo probatum Chriſtum ſeipſum ſuſcitaſſe vi propria petitur ex ipſa Reſurrectionis activitate, Chriſtus ἠγέρθε ſurrexit, Matth. 28. 6. παρέστησεν ἑαυτὸν ζῶντα, Acts 1. 3. Maccov. loc. Com. p. 874.

Secondly, Here is alſo a plain Confirmation of Chriſt's Reſurrection, and that, Firſt, From Chriſt's own Prediction; He is riſen, as he ſaid. He foretold that which I declare to be now fulfilled. Let it not therefore ſeem incredible to you. Secondly, By their own ſight; Come, ſee the place where the Lord lay. The Grave hath loſt its Gueſt; it's now empty; Death hath loſt its Prey. It received, but could not retain him. Come, ſee the place where the Lord lay. Thus the Reſurrection of Chriſt is declared, and confirmed. Hence our Obſervation is,

Doct. That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by the almighty Power of his own God-head, revived, and roſe from the Dead; to the Terror and Conſternation of his Enemies, and the unſpeakable Conſolation of Believers.

That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, though Laid, was not Loſt in the Grave; but the third Day revived and roſe again, is a Truth confirmed to us by many infallible Proofs, as Luke witneſſeth, Acts 1. 3. We have Teſtimonies of it both from Heaven and Earth, and both infallible. From Heaven, we have the Teſtimony of Angels; and to the Teſtimony of an Angel all Credit is due; for Angels are holy Creatures and cannot deceive us. The Angel tells the two Marys in the Text, He is riſen. We have Teſtimonies of it from Men, holy Men, who were Eye-witneſſes of this Truth, to whom he ſhew'd himſelf alive by the ſpace of forty days after his Reſurrection, by no leſs than * nine ſolemn Apparitions to them. Sometime five hundred Brethren ſaw him at once, 1 Cor. 15. 6. Theſe were holy Perſons who durſt not deceive, and who confirmed their Teſtimony with their Blood. So that no point of religion is of more confeſſed truth, and infallible certainty than this before us.

And bleſſed be God it is ſo. For if it were not, then were the Goſpel in vain, 1 Cor. 15. 14. Seeing it hangs the whole weight of our Faith, Hope and Salvation upon Chriſt as riſen from the dead. If this were not ſo, then would the holy and divinely inſpired Apoſtles be found falſe witneſſes, 1 Cor. 15. 15. For they all with one Mouth conſtantly and to the death affirmed it. If Chriſt be not riſen, then are believers yet in their ſins, 1 Cor. 15. 17. For our Juſtification is truly aſcribed to the Reſurrection of Chriſt, Rom. 4. 25. While Chriſt was dying, and continued in the ſtate of the dead, the price of our Redemption was all that while but in paying, the payment was compleated when he revived and roſe again. Therefore for Chriſt to have continued always in the ſtate of the dead, had been never to have compleatly ſatisfied; hence the whole force and weight of our Juſtification depends upon his Reſurrection. Nay, had not Chriſt riſen, the dead had periſhed, 1 Cor. 15. 17. Even the dead who died in the Faith of Chriſt, and of whoſe Salvation there now remains no ground to doubt. Moreover,

In morte erat ſolutio in motu, aut ut aiunt, in fieri; verum in Reſurrectione completa fuit, unde noſtri juſtificatio ſeu à debito abſolutio, non morti, ſed Reſurrectioni Apoſtolo merito tribuatur, &c. Maccov. loc. Com. p. 869.

Had he not revived, and riſen from the dead, how could all the Types that prefigured it have been ſatisfied? Surely they muſt have ſtood as inſignificant things in the Scriptures, and ſo muſt all the predictions of his Reſurrection, by which it was ſo plainly foretold. See Matth. 12. 40. Luke 24. 46. Pſalm 16. 10. 1 Cor. 15. 4.

To conclude: Had he not riſen from the dead, how could he have been inſtall'd in that glory whereof he is now poſſeſſed in Heaven, and which was promiſed him before the world was upon the account of his death and ſufferings? For to this end Chriſt both dyed, and roſe, and revived that he might be Lord both of the dead, and living, Rom. 14. 9. And that in this ſtate of dominion and glorious advancement, he might powerfully apply the vertues and benefits of his Blood to us which elſe had been as a precious Cordial ſpilt upon the ground.

So then, there remains no doubt at all of the certainty of Chriſt's Reſurrection, it was ſo, and upon all accounts it muſt needs be ſo, for you ſee how great a weight the Scriptures hangs upon this nail. And bleſſed be God it's a nail faſtned in a ſure place. I need ſpend no more words to confirm it, but rather chooſe to explain and open the nature and manner of his Reſurrection, which I ſhall do by ſhewing you four or five properties of it. And the firſt is this.

Firſt, Chriſt roſe from the dead with awful Majeſty. So you find it in Matth. 28. 2, 3, 4. And behold there was a great Earthquake, for the Angel of the Lord deſcended from Heaven, & came and rolled back the ſtone from the door, and ſat upon it, his countenance was like lightning, & raiment as white as ſnow, and for fear of him the keepers did ſhake, and became as dead men. Humane infirmity was not able to bear ſuch Heavenly Majeſty as intended the buſineſs of that morning. Nature ſank under it. This Earthquake was, as one calls it, Triumphale Signum: A ſign of Triumph or token of Victory given by Chriſt, not only to the Keepers and the neighbouring City, but to the whole World, that he had overcome Death in its own Dominions, and like a Conqueror lifted up his head above all his Enemies. So when the Lord fought from Heaven for his People, and gave them a glorious, though but temporal deliverance; ſee how the Propheteſs drives on the triumph in that Rhetorical Song, Judg. 5. 4, 5. Alluding to the moſt awful appearance of God, at the giving of the Law. Lord, when thou wenteſt out of Seir, when thou marchedſt out of the field of Edom, the earth trembled, and the Heavens dropped, the clouds alſo dropped water. The Mountains melted before the Lord, even that Sinai, from before the Lord God of Iſrael. Our Lord Jeſus went out of the Grave in like manner, and marched out of that bloody field with a Pomp and Majeſty becoming ſo great a Conqueror.

Eſt incedere cum pompa & Majeſtate.

Secondly, And to increaſe the ſplendor of that day, and drive on the triumph, his Reſurrection was attended with the Reſurrection of many of the Saints who had ſlept in their Graves till then, and then were awakned and raiſed to attend the Lord at his riſing. So you read, Matth. 27. 52, 53. And the Graves were opened, and many bodies of the Saints which ſlept aroſe, and came out of the Graves, after his Reſurrection; and went into the holy City, and appeared unto many. This wonder was deſigned both to adorn the Reſurrection of Chriſt, and to give a ſpecimen or handſel of our Reſurrection; which alſo is to be in the vertue of his. This indeed was the Reſurrection of Saints, and none but Saints, the Reſurrection of many Saints, yet it was but a ſpecial Reſurrection, intended only to ſhew what God will one day do for all his Saints. And for preſent to give Teſtimony of Chriſt's Reſurrection, from the dead. They were ſeen and known of many in the City, who doubtleſs never thought to have ſeen them any more in this World. To enquire curiouſly as ſome do, who they were, what diſcourſe they had with thoſe to whom they appeared, and what became of them afterwards, is a vain thing. God hath caſt a vail of ſilence and ſecreſie upon theſe things, that we might content our ſelves with the written word, and he that will not believe Moſes and the Prophets, neither will he believe tho' one riſe from the dead, as theſe Saints did.

Thirdly, As Chriſt roſe from the dead with thoſe Satellites, or attendants, who acompanied him at his Reſurrection; ſo it was by the Power of his own God-head that he quickned and raiſed himſelf; and by the vertue of his Reſurrection were they raiſed alſo who accompained him. It was not the Angel who rolled back the ſtone that revived him in the Sepulchre but he reſumed his own life, ſo he tells us, John 10. 18. I lay down my life that I may take it again. Hence 1 Pet. 3. 18. He is ſaid to be put to death in the fleſh, but quickned by the Spirit, (i. e.) by the power of his God-head or Divine Nature, which is oppoſed there to fleſh or his humane nature. By the eternal Spirit he offered himſelf up to God when he died, Heb. 9. 14. (i. e.) by his own God-head, not the third Perſon in the Trinity, for then it could not have been aſcribed to him as his own act, that he offer'd up himſelf. And by the ſame Spirit he was quickned again.

And therefore the Apoſtle well obſerves, Rom. 1. 4. That he was declared to be the Son of God with power, by his Reſurrection from the dead. Now if he had been raiſed by the power of the Father or Spirit only, and not by his own; how could he be declared by his Reſurrection to be the Son of God? What more had appeared in him than in others? For others are raiſed by the power of God, if that were all. So that in this reſpect alſo it was a marvellous Reſurrection. Never any did, or ſhall riſe as Chriſt roſe by a ſelf-quickning Principle. For though many dead Saints roſe at that time alſo; yet it was by the vertue of Chriſt's Reſurrection that their Graves were opened, and their Bodies quickned. In which reſpect he ſaith, John 11. 25. when he raiſed dead Lazarus, I am the Reſurrection and the Life. (i. e.) the principle of Life and quickning, by which the dead Saints are raiſed.

Fourthly, And therefore it may be truly affirmed, that tho' ſome dead Saints were raiſed to life before the Reſurrection of Chriſt, yet that Chriſt is the firſt-born from the dead, as he is call'd, Col. 1. 18. For though Lazarus and others were raiſed, yet not by themſelves, but by Chriſt. It was by his vertue and power, not their own. And though they were raiſed to life, yet they died again. Death recovered them again, but Chriſt dieth no more. Death hath no Dominion over him. He was the firſt that opened the womb of the Earth, the Firſt-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the preheminence.

Fifthly, But laſtly, Chriſt roſe as a publick or common Perſon. As the firſt fruits of them that ſleep, 1 Cor. 15. 20. I deſire this may be well underſtood; for upon this account it is that our Reſurrection is ſecured to us by the Reſurrection of Chriſt; and not a Reſurrection only, but a bleſſed and happy one, for the firſt-fruits, both aſſured and ſanctified the whole Crop or Harveſt.

Now that Chriſt did riſe as a publick Perſon repreſenting and comprehending all the Elect, who are called the children of the Reſurrection, is plain from Eph. 2. 6. Where we are ſaid to be riſen with or in him. So that as we are ſaid to die in Adam, (who alſo was a common Perſon) as the Branches die in the death of the Root; ſo we are ſaid to be raiſed from Death in Chriſt, who is the head, root and repreſentative of all his Elect Seed. And why is he called the firſt-born, and firſt-begotten from the dead, but with reſpect to the whole number of the Elect, that are to be born from the Dead in their time and or-order alſo, and as ſure as the whole harveſt follows the firſt-fruits, ſo ſhall the general Reſurrection of the Saints to life Eternal, follow this Birth, of the firſt-born from the dead.

It ſhall ſurely follow it, I ſay, and that not only as a conſequent follows an antecedent, but as an effect follows its proper cauſe. Now there is a three-fold cauſality or influence that Chriſt's Reſurrection hath upon the Saints Reſurrection, of which it is both the Meritorious, Efficient, and Exemplary cauſe.

Firſt, The Reſurrection of Chriſt, is the Meritorious cauſe of the Saints Reſurrection, as it compleated his Satisfaction, and finiſhed his Payment, and ſo our Juſtification is properly aſſigned to it, as before was noted from Rom. 4. 25. This his Reſurrection was the receiving of the Acquittance, the cancelling of the Bond. And had not this been done, we had ſtill been in our Sins, as he ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 15. 7. And ſo our guilt had been ſtill a Bar to our happy Reſurrection. But now, the price being paid in his Death, which payment was finiſhed when he Revived; and the diſcharge then received for us, now there is nothing lies in Bar againſt our Reſurrection to Eternal Life.

Secondly, As it is the Meritorious cauſe of our Reſurrection, ſo it is the Efficient cauſe of it alſo. For when the time ſhall come, that the Saints ſhall riſe out of the duſt, they ſhall be raiſed by Chriſt, as their Head, in whom the effective principle of their Life is. Your life is hid with Chriſt in God, as it is Col. 3. 3. As when a Man awakes out of his ſleep, the animal Spirits ſeated in the brain, being ſet at liberty by the digeſtion of thoſe Vapours that bound them up, do play freely through every part and member of the Body, ſo Chriſt, the Believers myſtical-head, being quickned; the Spirit of Life, which is in him, ſhall be diffuſed through all his Members to quicken them alſo in the morning of the Reſurrection. Hence the warm animating dew of Chriſt's Reſurrection is ſaid to be to our Bodies, as the dew of the Morning is to the withered languiſhing Plants which revive by it, Iſa. 26. 19. Thy dew is as the dew of Herbs; and then it follows, the earth ſhall caſt forth her dead. So that by the ſame Faith we put Chriſt's Reſurrection into the Premiſes, we may put the Believers Reſurrection into the Concluſion. And therefore the Apoſtle makes them convertibles, reaſoning forward, from Chriſt's to ours; and back again from ours to his, 1 Cor. 15. 12, 13. Which is alſo the ſenſe of that Scripture, Rom. 8. 10, 11. And if Chriſt be in you, the body indeed is dead becauſe of ſin; but the ſpirit is life becauſe of righteouſneſs, (i. e.) though you are really united to Chriſt by the Spirit, yet your Bodies muſt die as well as other Mens; but your Souls ſhall be preſently upon your diſſolution ſwallowed up in Life. And then it follows, verſe 11. But if the ſpirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, dwell in you; he that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortal bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. (i. e.) though your Bodies muſt die, yet they ſhall live again in the Reſurrection; and that by vertue of the Spirit of Chriſt which dwelleth in you; and is the Bond of your myſtical union with him your head. You ſhall not be raiſed as others are, by a meer word of Power, but by the ſpirit of Life dwelling in Chriſt your head, which is a choice prerogative indeed.

Proximum inſtrumentum ſive ſedes ſomni eſt cerebrum, utpote in quo ſpiritus animales frigeſiunt & condenſantur, aut etiam reſolvuntur & diſſipantur proxime, tanquam in propria ſpirituum animalium officina, & in quo etiam radices nervorum obſtruuntur, per vapores, ne ſpiritus animales ſenſui Communi ſervire aut in partes reliquas inferiores corporis propagari libere poſſint, Keckerm. Syſt. Phyſ. p. (mihi) 441.

Thirdly, Chriſt's Reſurrection is not only the meritorious and efficient cauſe, but it is alſo the exemplary cauſe, or pattern of our Reſurrection. He being the firſt and beſt, is therefore the pattern and meaſure of all the reſt. So you read, Phil. 3. 21. Who ſhall change our vile body that it may be faſhioned like unto his glorious body. Now the Conformity of our Reſurrection to Chriſt's, ſtands in the following particulars. Chriſt's Body was raiſed ſubſtantially the ſame, ſo will ours. His Body was raiſed firſt; ſo will ours be raiſed before the reſt of the dead. —— His Body was wonderfully improved by the Reſurrection; ſo will ours. His Body was raiſed to be glorified; and ſo will ours.

Optimum in unoquoque genere eſt regula et menſura cæterorum

Firſt, Chriſt's Body was raiſed ſubſtantially the ſame that it was before; and ſo will ours. Not another, but the ſame Body. Upon this very reaſon the Apoſtle uſes that identical expreſſion, 1 Cor. 15. 53. This corruptible muſt put on incorruptible, and this mortal immortality. Pointing as it were to his own Body when he ſpake it the ſame Body I ſay, and that not only Specifically the ſame, (for indeed no other Species of fleſh is ſo priviledged) but the ſame numerically, that very Body, not a new or another Body in its ſtead. So that it ſhall be both the what it was, and the who it was. And indeed to deny this, is to deny the Reſurrection it ſelf. For ſhould God prepare another Body to be raiſed inſtead of this, it would not be a Reſurrection but a Creation; for non Reſurrectio dici poterit, ubi non reſurgit quod cecidit. That can't be call'd a Reſurrection, where one thing falls and another thing riſes, as Gregory long ſince pertinently obſerved.

Secondly, His Body was raiſed, not by a word of Power from the Father, but by his own Spirit. So will ours. Indeed the power of God ſhall go forth to unburrough ſinners, and fetch them forcibly out of their Graves; but the Reſurrection of the Saints is to be affected another way; as I opened but now to you. Even by his Spirit which now dwelleth in them. That very Spirit of Chriſt which affected their ſpiritual Reſurrection from ſin, ſhall effect their corporal Reſurrection alſo from the Grave.

Thirdly, His Body was raiſed firſt, he had in this as well as in other things the preheminence in the Reſurrection, 1 Theſ. 4. 16. The dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. They are to attend the Lord at his coming, and will be knockt up ſooner than the reſt of the World to attend on that ſervice. As the Sheriff with his Men go forth to meet the Judge, before the Jaylor brings forth his Priſoners.

Fourthly, Chriſt's Body was marvellouſly improved by the Reſurrection, and ſo will ours. It fell in weakneſs, but was raiſed in Power, no more capable of ſorrows, pains, and diſhonours. In like manner our Bodies, are ſown in weakneſs, but raiſed in ſtrength, ſown in diſhonour, raiſed in glory. Sown natural Bodies, raiſed ſpiritual Bodies, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 15. 43, 44. Spiritual Bodies not properly but Analogically. No diſtempers hang about glorified Bodies, nor are they thence-forth ſubject to any of thoſe natural neceſſities, to which they are now tied. There are no flaws, defects, or deformities in the Children of the Reſurrection. What members are now defective, or deformed, will then be reſtored to their perfect being and beauty, for if the univerſal death of all parts be reſcinded by the Reſurrection, how much more the partial death of any ſingle member? As Tertullian ſpeaks, and from thenceforth they are free from the Law of Mortality, they can die no more, Luke 20. 35, 36. Thus ſhall they be improved by their Reſurrection.

Membri detruncatio vel obtuſio nonne mors membri eſt? Si univerſalis mors Reſurrectione reſcinditur, quanto majus portionalis! Tert. de Reſur.

Fifthly, To conclude, Chriſt's Body was raiſed from the Dead to be glorified, and crowned with honour. Oh it was a joyful day to him, and ſo will the Reſurrection of the Saints be to them, the day of the gladneſs of their Hearts. It will be ſaid to them in that morning, awake and ſing ye that dwell in the duſt, as Iſa. 26. 19. O how comfortable will be the meeting betwixt the glorified Soul, and its new raiſed Body. Much more comfortable than that of Jacob's and Joſeph's after twenty years abſence, Gen. 46. 29. Or that of David's with Jonathan when he came out of the Cave to him, 1 Sam. 20. 41. Or that of the Father of the Prodigal with his Son, who was dead, and is alive, was loſt, and is found. As he ſpeaks, Luke 15. And there are three things will make it ſo.

Firſt, The gratifications of the Soul by the ſatisfaction of its natural appetite of union with its own Body. For even glorified Souls in Heaven have ſuch an appetition, and deſire of re-union. Indeed the Angels who are pure Spirits, as they never had union with, ſo they have no inclination to matter; but Souls are otherwiſe tempered & diſpoſed. We are all ſenſible of its affection to the Body now in its compounded ſtate, we feel the tender care it hath for the Body, the ſympathy with it, and loathneſs to be ſeparated from it. It's ſaid, 1 Cor. 5. 6. To be at home in the body. And had not God implanted ſuch an inclination to this its Tabernacle in it, it would not have paid that due reſpect it owes the body while it inhabited in it, nor have regarded what became of it when it left it. This inclination remains ſtill with it in Heaven, it reckons not it ſelf compleatly happy till its old dear Companion and Partner be with it, and to that ſenſe ſome underſtand thoſe Words, Job 14. 14. All the days of my appointed time, (i. e.) of the time appointed for my body to remain in the Grave, will I wait till my change, (viz. that which will be made by the Reſurrection) come, for it's manifeſt enough he ſpeaks there of the Reſurrection. Now, when this its inclination to its own body, its longings and hankerings after it are gratified with a ſight and enjoyment of it again, oh what a comfortable meeting will this make it! Eſpecially if we conſider,

Secondly, The excellent temper and ſtate in which they ſhall meet each other. For as the body ſhall be raiſed with all the improvements and endowments imaginable which may render it amiable and every way deſirable, ſo the Soul comes down immediately from God out of Heaven ſhining in its holineſs and glory. It comes perfumed out of thoſe Ivory Palaces, with a ſtrong ſcent of Heaven upon it. And thus it re-enters its body and animates it again. But,

Thirdly, And principally, that wherein the chief Joy of this meeting conſiſts, is the end for which the glorified Soul comes down to quicken and repoſſeſs it, Namely, to meet the Lord, and ever to be with the Lord. To receive a full reward, for all the labours and ſervices it performed to God in this World. This muſt needs make that day, a day of Triumph and Exaltation. It comes out of the Grave, as Joſeph out of his Priſon to be advanced to higheſt honour. O do but imagine what an extaſie of Joy, and raviſhing Pleaſure it will be for a Soul, thus to reſume its own body, and ſay as it were unto it, come away my dear, my ancient friend, who ſervedſt, and ſufferedſt with me in the World; come along with me to meet the Lord, in whoſe preſence I have been ever ſince I parted with thee. Now thy bountiful Lord hath remembred thee alſo, and the day of thy glorification is come. Surely it will be a joful awaking. For do but imagine what a Joy it is for dear Friends to meet after long ſeparation, how do they uſe to give demonſtrations of their love and delight in each other, by Embraces, Kiſſes, Tears, &c. Or frame but to your ſelves a Notion of perfect Health, when a ſprightly vivacity runs through every part; and the Spirits do, as 'twere, dance before us, when we go about any buſineſs; eſpecially to ſuch a buſineſs as the buſineſs of that Day will be; to receive a Crown and a Kingdom. Do but imagine then what a Sun-ſhine Morning this will be, and how the Pains and Agonies, cold Sweats and bitter Groans at parting will be recompenced by the Joy of ſuch a Meeting?

And thus I have ſhewed you the certainty of Chriſt's Reſurrection the nature and properties of it, the threefold influence it hath on the Saints Reſurrection, and the conformity of ours into his in theſe five reſpects. His body roſe ſubſtantially the ſame, ſo ſhall ours: his body was raiſed by the Spirit, ſo ſhall ours. Not by the God-head of Chriſt as his was, but by the Spirit who is the bond of our union with Chriſt. He was raiſed as the firſt-begotten from the dead, ſo the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. His body was improved by the Reſurrection, ſo ſhall ours. From the conſideration of all which, Infer. 1. We infer, That if Chriſt was thus raiſed from the Dead, then death is fairly overcome, and ſwallowed up in victory. Were it not ſo, it had never let Chriſt eſcape out of the Grave. The Prey of the terrible had never been thus reſcued out of its paws. Death is a dreadful enemy, it defies all the Sons and Daughters of Adam. None durſt cope with this King of Terrors, but Chriſt, and he by dying, went into the very den of this Dragon, fought with it, and foiled it in the Grave, its own territories and dominions, and came off a Conqueror. For as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Acts 2. 24. It was impoſſible it ſhould hold or detain him. Never did death meet with its over-match before it met with Chriſt, and he conquering it for us, and in our Names, riſing as our repreſentative, now every ſingle Saint triumphs over it as a vanquiſht enemy, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O death where is thy ſting? O grave where is thy victory? Thanks be to God, who hath given us the victory through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Thus like Joſhua, they ſet the foot of Faith upon the neck of that King, and with an Holy Scorn deride its power. O death where is thy ſting? If it be objected that its ſaid, 1 Cor. 15. 26. The laſt enemy that is to be deſtroyed is Death. And if ſo, then it ſhould ſeem the Victory is not yet atchieved, and ſo we do but boaſt before the victory. It is at hand to reply, that the Victory over Death, obtained by Chriſt'sReſurrection, is two-fold, either perſonal and incompleat, or general and compleat. He actually overcame it at his Reſurrection in his own Perſon perfectly and vertually for us, as our head; but at the general Reſurrection of the Saints (which his Reſurrection as the firſt-fruits aſſures them of) then its utterly vanquiſht, and deſtroyed. Till then it will exerciſe ſome little power over the Bodies of the Saints, in which reſpect its called the laſt enemy. For ſin, the chief enemy that let it in, that was conquered utterly and eradicated when they died; but Death holds their Bodies in the Grave, till the coming of Chriſt; and then it is utterly to be Vanquiſhed. For after that they can die no more, Luke 20. 35. And then ſhall be brought to paſs, that ſaying that is written, death is ſwallowed up in Victory. Then, and not till then, will that conqueſt be fully compleated in our Perſons though it be already ſo in Chriſt's, incompleatly in ours, and then compleatly and fully for ever. For the ſame word which ſignifies Victory, doth alſo ſignifie Perpetuity, and in this place a final or perpetual conqueſt. And indeed it drives but a poor trade for preſent, ſmiting only with its Dart, not with its Sting, and that but the Believers body alſo, and the body but for a time remains under it neither. So that there is no reaſon why a Believer ſhould ſtand in a ſlaviſh fear of it.

How far ſhort do we come of the primitive Chriſtians whoſe Faith in the Reſurrection, and contempt of Death, Cyprian thus expreſſes, Mente integra fide firma, virtute robuſta, parati ad omnem Dei voluntatem ſimus pavore mortis omni excluſo; immortalitatem quæ ſequitur cogitamus. Et cum accerſitionis propria dies venerit, incunctanter & libenter ad dominum ipſo vocante venimus. Cypr. Sect. 5. de lapſ. Quod interim morimur, ad immortalitatem morte tranſgredimur non eſt exitus, ſed tranſitus, &c. Cypr. ubi ſup. Abſorpta eſt mors εἰς νῖκος in perpetuam ex Hebræo נֶצַח quod & victoriam ſignificat & perpetuitatem. Claſſ. Rhet. ſac. p. 408.

Infer. 2. Is Chriſt, and hath his Reſurrection ſuch a potent and comfortable influence into the Reſurrection of the Saints? Then it is the duty, and will be the wiſdom of the people of God ſo to govern, diſpoſe, and imploy their bodies as becomes Men and Women that underſtand what glory is prepared for them at the Reſurrection of the Juſt. Particularly,

Firſt, Be not fondly tender of them, but imploy and uſe them for God here. How many good duties are loſt and ſpoiled by ſinful indulgence to our bodies? Alas! We are generally more ſolicitous to live long, than to live uſefully. How many Saints have active vigorous bodies, yet God hath little ſervice from them. If your Bodies were animated by ſome other Souls that love God more than you do, and burn with holy zeal to his ſervice, more work would be done for God by your bodies in a day, than is now done in a month. To have an able healthy body,and not uſe it for God for fear of hurting it, is as if one ſhould give you a ſtrong and ſtately Horſe, upon condition you muſt not work,or ride him. Wherein is the mercy of having a body except it be employed for God? Will not its reward at the Reſurrection be ſufficient for all the pains you now put it to in his ſervice?

Secondly, See that you preſerve the due honour of your Bodies. Poſſeſs them in ſantification and honour, 1 Theſſ. 4. 4. O let not theſe eyes be now defiled with ſin, by which you ſhall ſee God. Thoſe ears be in-lets to vanity, which ſhall hear the Alleujahs of the bleſſed. God hath deſigned honour for your bodies, O make them not either the inſtruments, or objects of ſin. There are ſins againſt the body, 1 Cor. 6. 18. Preſerve your bodies from thoſe defilements, for they are the temples of God: If any man defile the Temple of God, him will God deſtroy, 1 Cor. 3. 17.

Thirdly, Let not the contentment and accommodation of your bodies draw your Souls into ſnares, and bring them under the power of Temptations to ſin. This is a very common caſe. O how many thouſands of precious Souls periſh eternally, for the ſatisfaction of a vile body for a moment? Their Souls muſt, becauſe their bodies cannot ſuffer. It is recorded to the Immortal honour of thoſe worthies in Heb. 11. 35. That they accepted not deliverance, that they might obtain a better Reſurrection. They might have had a Temporal Reſurrection from death, to life; from reproach, to honour; from poverty, to riches; from pains, to pleaſure; but upon ſuch terms they judge it not worth acceptance. They would not expoſe their Souls, to ſecure their Bodies. They had the ſame natural affections that other Men have. They were made of as tender fleſh as we are, but ſuch was the care they had of their Souls, and the hope of a better Reſurrection; that they liſtned not to the complaints and whinings of Bodies. O that we were all in the ſame reſolutions with them.

Nemo poteſt in hæc vita & in futura gaudere; neceſſe eſt unam amittat, qui alteram vult poſſidere, Aug.

Fourthly, Withhold not upon the pretence of the wants your own bodies may be in, that which God and Conſcience bids you to communicate for the refreſhment of the Saints; whoſe preſent neceſſities require your aſſiſtance. O be not too indulgent to your own fleſh, and cruel to others. Certainly the conſideration of that reward which ſhall be given you at the Reſurrection, for every act of Chriſtian Charity, is the greateſt ſpur and incentive in the world to it. And to that end it's urged as a motive to Charity, Luke 14. 13, 14. When thou makeſt a feaſt, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou ſhalt be bleſſed; for they cannot recompence thee, for thou ſhalt be recompenſed at the Reſurrection of the Juſt. It was the opinion of an eminent modern Divine, that no Man living fully underſtands and believes that Scripture, Matth. 25. 40. In as much as ye have done it to one of the leaſt of theſe my brethren; ye have done it unto me. How few Saints would be expoſed to daily wants and neceſſities, if that Scripture were but fully underſtood and believed?

Mr. Marſhal.

Infer. 3. Is Chriſt riſen from the dead, and that as a publick Perſon and repreſentative of believers? How are we all concerned then to ſecure our ſelves an intereſt in Chriſt, and conſequently to this bleſſed Reſurrection? What conſolation would be left in this world, if the hope of the Reſurrection were taken away? 'Tis this bleſſed hope that muſt ſupport you under all the Troubles of life, and in the Agonies of Death. The ſecuring of a bleſſed Reſurrection to your ſelves, is therefore the moſt deep concernment you have in this World. And it may be ſecured to your ſelves, if upon ſerious heart-examination you can diſcover the following Evidences.

Evidence 1. Firſt, If you are regenerated Creatures, brought forth in a new nature to God, for we are begotten again to a lively hope, by the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt from the dead. Chriſt's Reſurrection is the ground-work of our hope. And the new birth is our title or evidence of our intereſt in it. So that until our Souls are partakers of the ſpiritual Reſurrection from the death of ſin, we can have no aſſurance our Bodies ſhall be partakers of that bleſſed Reſurrection to life.

Bleſſed and Holy (ſaith the Spirit) is he that hath part in the firſt Reſurrection; on ſuch the ſecond death hath no power, Rev. 20. 6. Never let unregenerated Souls expect a comfortable meeting with their bodies again. Riſe they ſhall by God's terrible Citation, at the ſound of the laſt trump, but not to the ſame end that the Saints ariſe, nor by the ſame Principle. They to whom the Spirit is now a principle of Sanctification, to them he will be the principle of a joyful Reſurrection. See then that you get gracious Souls now, or never expect glorious Bodies then.

Evid. 2. If you be dead with Chriſt, you ſhall live again by the life of Chriſt. If we have been planted together in the likeneſs of his death, we ſhall be alſo in the likeneſs of his Reſurrection, Rom. 6. 5. σύμφυτοι, Planted together; ſome refer it to believers themſelves, Jews, and Gentiles are planted together in Chriſt. So Eraſmus, believers grow together like Branches upon the ſame root; which ſhould powerfully inforce the great Goſpel duty of unity among themſelves. But I would rather underſtand it with reference to Chriſt, and Believers; with whom Believers are in other Scriptures ſaid to ſuffer together, and be glorified together, to die together, and live together, to be Crucified together, and buried together, all noting the Communion they have with Chriſt, both in his death and in his life. Now if the power of Chriſt's death, (i. e.) the mortifying influence of it have been upon our hearts; killing their their Luſts, deading their affections, and flattering their appeties to the Creature; then the power of his life, or Reſurrection ſhall come like the animating due upon our dead withered Bodies to revive and raiſe them up to live with him in glory.

In unum concreſcere vel coaleſcere.

Evid. 3. If your hearts and affections be now with Chriſt in Heaven, your bodies in due time ſhall be there alſo, and conformed to his glorious Body. So you find it, Phil. 3. 20, 21. For our converſation is in Heaven, from whence we look for the Saviour; the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; who ſhall change our vile body, that it may be faſhioned like unto his own glorious Body. The body is here called vile, or the body of our vileneſs. Not as God made it, but as ſin hath marred it. Not abſolutely and in it ſelf, but relatively, and in compariſon of what it will be in its ſecond edition, at the Reſurrection. Then thoſe ſcattered Bones, and diſperſed Duſt, like pieces of old broken battered Silver, will be new caſt, and wrought in the beſt and neweſt faſhion; even like to Chriſt's glorious Body. Whereof we have this evidence, that our converſation is already heavenly. The temper, frame, and diſpoſition of our Souls is already ſo; therefore the frame and temper of our Bodies in due time ſhall be ſo.

Τὸ σῶμα ταπεινώσεώς.

Evid. 4. If you ſtrive now by any means to attain the Reſurrection of the dead, no doubt but you ſhall then attain, what you now ſtrive for. This was Paul's great Ambition, that by any means, he might attain the Reſurrection of the dead, Phil. 3. 11. He means not ſimply a Reſurrection from the dead, for that all Men ſhall attain whether they ſtrive for it, or no. But by a metonymy of the Subject, for the Adjunct; he intends that compleat holineſs and perfection which ſhall attend the ſtate of the Reſurrection, ſo it is expounded, ver. 12. So then, if God have raiſed in your hearts a vehement deſire, and aſſiduous endeavour after a perfect freedom from ſin, and full Conformity to God in the beauties of Holineſs; that very love of Holineſs, your preſent Pantings, and tendencies after Perfection, ſpeaks you to be Perſons deſigned for it.

Evid. 5. If you are ſuch as do good in your Generation. If you be fruitful and uſeful Men and Women in the World, you ſhall have part in this bleſſed Reſurrection, Joh. 5. 29. All that are in the Graves ſhall hear his voice, and ſhall come forth; they that have done good, unto the Reſurrection of Life. Now it is not every act materially good, that entitles a Man to this Priviledge; but the ſame requſites that the School-men aſſign to make a good Prayer, are alſo neceſſary to every good work. The Perſon, Matter, Manner and End muſt be good. Nor is it any ſingle good Act, but a Series and Courſe of Holy Actions, that is here meant. What a Spur ſhould this be to us all, as (indeed the Apoſtle makes it, cloſing up the Doctrine of the Reſurrection with this ſolemn Exhortation, 1 Cor. 15. laſt, with which I alſo cloſe mine) Therefore, my beloved thren, be ye ſtedfaſt, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; for as much as you know, that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

Thanks be to God for his unſpeakable Gift.

SERMON XL.

Serm. 40.

Wherein the Aſcenſion of Chriſt is opened and variouſly improved being the ſecond ſtep of his Exaltation.

JOHN XX. 17.

Jeſus ſaith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet aſcended to my Father: But go to my Brethren, and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.

IN all the former Sermons we have been following Chriſt thro' his Humiliation, from the time that he left the bleſſed boſom of his Father: And now having finiſhed the whole Courſe of his Obedience on Earth, and riſen again from the dead, we muſt in this Diſcourſe follow him back again into Heaven; and lodge him in that boſom of ineffable Delight and Love, which for our ſakes he ſo freely left. For it was not his end in riſing from the dead, to live ſuch a low animal Life as this is; but to live a moſt glorious Life as an enthroned King in Heaven; upon which ſtate he was now ready to enter, as he tells Mary in the Text, and bids her tell it to the Diſciples, Go tell my Brethren, that I aſcend to my Father, &c.

Volebat Maria Chriſtum amplecti, præ nimio ſcilicet amore ejus, & gaudio quod ruſum in carne præſentem vidiſſet. Bucer. in loc.

In the former Verſes you find Mary waiting at Chriſt's Sepulchre in a very penſive frame; exceedingly troubled becauſe ſhe knew not what was become of Chriſt, v. 15. In the next Verſe Chriſt calls her by her Name, Mary; ſhe knowing the Voice, turned her ſelf, and anſwered, Raboni. And as a Soul tranſported with Joy, ruſhes into his Arms, as deſirous to claſp and embrace him. But Jeſus ſaid, Touch me not, &c.

In which words we have Chriſt's Inhibition, Touch me not: Strange that Chriſt who rendred himſelf ſo kind and tender to all, that not only admitted, but commanded Thomas to put his finger into his wounds, ſhould forbid Mary to touch him; but this was not for want of love to Mary; for he gives another reaſon for it preſently, I am not yet aſcended; i. e. ſay ſome, the time for embracing will be when we are in Heaven. Then, and there ſhall be the place and time, we ſhall embrace one another for evermover. So Auguſtin. Or thou doteſt too much upon my preſent ſtate, as if I had now attained the very ἀκμὴ, culminating point of my Exaltation. When as yet I am not aſcended; ſo Camero and Calvin expound it. Or Laſtly, Chriſt would ſignifie hereby, that it was not his Will and Pleaſure in ſo great a juncture of things as this, to ſpend time now in expreſſing (this way) her affections to him; but rather to ſhew it by haſting about his Service. Which is,

The ſecond thing obſervable, viz. his Injunction upon Mary, to carry the Tidings of his Reſurrection to the Diſciples. In which Injunction we have,

Firſt, The Perſons to whom this Meſſage was ſent, my Brethren, ſo he calls the Diſciples. A ſweet Compellation, and full of Love. Much like that of Joſeph to his Brethren, Gen. 45. 4. Save only that there is much more tenderneſs in this than that; for he twits them in the ſame breath with what they had done againſt him; I am Joſeph your Brother, whom ye ſold; but in this it is, Go tell my Brethren, without the leaſt mention of their Cowardize or Unkindneſs. And,

Secondly, The Meſſage it ſelf. Tell my Brethren, I aſcend to my Father, and your Father; to my God, and your God; ἀναβαίνω, I aſcend. It's put in the preſent Tenſe, as if he had been aſcending; though he did not aſcend in ſome Weeks after this; but he ſo expreſſes it, to ſhew what was the next part of his work, which he was to act in Heaven for them; and how much his heart was ſet upon it, and longed to be about it, I aſcend to my father, and your father; to my God and your God: Not our Father, or God in Common: But mine and yours in a different manner. Yours by right of dominion, mine (in reference to my humane Nature) not only by right of Creation, tho' ſo too; but alſo by ſpecial Covenant and Confederation. By Predeſtination of my Manhood to the Grace of perſonal union, by deſignation of me to the glorious Office of Mediator. My Father, as I am God, by eternal generation. As Man, by collation of the Grace of Union. And your Father by ſpiritual Adoption and Regeneration. Thus he is my God and your God; my Father, and your Father. This is the ſubſtance of that comfortable meſſage, ſent by Mary to the penſive Diſciples. Hence the Obſervation is,

Doct. That our Lord Jeſus did not only riſe from the dead, but alſo aſcended into Heaven; there to diſpatch all that remained to be done for the compleating the Salvation of his People.

So much the Apoſtle plainly witneſſeth, Eph. 4. 10. He that deſcended, is the ſame alſo that aſcended up, far above all Heavens (i. e.) all the aſpectable Heavens. A full and faithful account whereof the ſeveral Evangeliſts have given us, Mark 16. 19. Luke 24. 51. This is ſometimes called his going away, as John 16. 7. Sometimes his being exalted, Acts 2. 33. Somtimes his being made higher than the Heavens, Heb. 7. 26. And ſometimes his entring within the vail, Heb. 6. 19, 20. All which are but ſo many Synonymous Phraſes expreſſing his aſcenſion in a very pleaſant variety.

Now for the opening this act of Chriſt, we will bind up the whole in the ſatisfaction of theſe ſix Queſtions. 1. Who aſcended? 2. Whence did he aſcend. 3. Whither? 4. When? 5. How? And laſtly, Why did he aſcend? And theſe will take in what is needful for you to be acquainted with in this point.

Aſcenſio totius fuit perſonæ, naturæ tamen divin non convenit niſi figurate. Sed humanæ nature maxime proprie convenit, &c. Ameſ. Med. p. 114.

Firſt, Who aſcended: This the Apoſtle anſwers, Eph. 4. 10. The ſame that deſcended, viz. Chriſt. And himſelf tells us in the Text, I aſcend. And though the aſcenſion were of Chriſt's whole Perſon, yet it was but a figurative and improper expreſſion with reſpect to his divine Nature, but it agrees moſt properly to the humanity of Chriſt, which really changed places and conditions by it. And hence it is that that it's ſaid, John 16. 28. I came forth from the father, and am come into the world; again, I leave the world, and go to my father. He goes away, and we ſee him no more. As God, he is ſpiritually with us ſtill; even to the end of the world. But as a man, the Heavens muſt contain him till the reſtitution of all things, Acts 3. 21.

Secondly, Whence Chriſt aſcended?

I anſwer, more generally, he is ſaid to aſcend from this world, to leave the world. That is the terminus a quo, John 16. 28. But more particularly, it was from mount Olivet, near unto Jeruſalem. The very place where he began his laſt ſorrowful Tragedy. There where his heart began to be ſadded, there is it now made glad. O what a difference was there betwixt the frame Chriſt was in, in that Mount before his Paſſion, and this he is now in, at his aſcenſion! But,

Thirdly, Whither did he aſcend?

It's manifeſt it was into the third Heavens. The Throne of God, and place of the bleſſed. Where all the Saints ſhall be with him for ever. It's ſaid to be far above all Heavens. That is, the Heavens which we ſee, for they are but the pavement of that ſtately Palace of the great King. He is gone (ſaith the Apoſtle) within the vail (i. e.) into the moſt holy Place. And into his Father's Houſe, John 14. 2. And he is alſo ſaid to go to the place where he was before, John 6. 62. Back again to that ſweet and glorious boſom of delight and love from whence at his incarnation he came.

Fourthly, When did Chriſt aſcend? Was it preſently as ſoon as he roſe from the dead?

No, not ſo, for after his Reſurrection (ſaith Luke) he was ſeen of them forty days, ſpeaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God. And truly the care and love of Chriſt to his People was very manifeſt in this his ſtay with them. He had ineffable glory prepared for him in Heaven, and awaiting his coming; but he will not go to poſſeſs it, till he had ſetled all things for the good of his Church here. For in this time he confirmed the truth of his Reſurrection, gave charge to the Apoſtles concerning the Diſcipline and order of his Houſe, or Kingdom; which was but needful, ſince he intended that their Acts ſhould be rules to future Churches. So long it was neceſſary he ſhould ſtay. And when he had ſet all things in order, he would ſtay no longer, leſt he ſhould ſeem to affect a terrene life. And beſides, he had work of great concernment to do for us in the other world. He deſired to be no longer here, than he had work to do for God, and Souls. A good pattern for the Saints.

Diſcipulorum infirmitas hujus interſtitu [illegible] m poſtu labat. Ameſ.

Ne terrenam vitam videretur meditare Ameſ.

Fifthly, How did Chriſt aſcend into Heaven?

Here it's worthy our Obſervation, that Chriſt aſcended as a publick perſon, or fore-runner in our Names, and upon our accounts. So it's ſaid expreſly, Heb. 6. 20. Speaking of the moſt holy place within the vail; Whither (ſaith he) the fore-runner is for us entred. His entring into Heaven as our fore-runner implies, both his publick capacity, and predecency.

Conſolationem ſummam hoc ingreſſu nobis monſtrat, neque enim ſua, ſed noſtra cauſa, ut de cœlo deſcendit; ita cœlum occupavit; ut nobis ibi locum atque domicilium pararet. Pareus in LA.

Firſt, His publick capacity, as one that went upon our buſineſs to God. So he himſelf ſpeaks, Joh. 14. 2. I go before to prepare a place for you. To take poſſeſſion of Heaven in our Names. The fore-runner hath reſpect to others that were to come to Heaven after him in their ſeveral Gnerations; for whom he hath taken up manſions, which are kept for them againſt their coming.

Secondly, It notes predecency, he is our forerunner, but he himſelf had no fore-runner. Never any entred into Heaven before him, but ſuch as entred in the Name, and through the vertue of his Merits. He was the firſt that ever entred Heaven directly immediately in his own name, and upon his own account. But all the Fathers who died before him, entred in his Name. To the holieſt of them all God would have ſaid as Eliſha to Jehoram, 2 Kings 3. 14. Were it not that I had reſpect to the perſon of my Son, in whoſe name and right you come; I would not look upon you. You muſt back again, Heaven were no place for you. No not for you Abraham, nor for you Moſes.

Secondly, He aſcended Triumphantly into Heaven. To this good Expoſitors refer that which in the Type is ſpoken of David, when he lodged the Ark in its own place, with muſical inſtruments and ſhoutings; but to Chriſt, in the Antitype, when he was received up Triumphantly into Glory, Pſal. 47. 5. God is gone up with a ſhout, the Lord with the ſound of a Trumpet; ſing praiſes to God, ſing praiſes; ſing praiſes unto our King, ſing praiſes.

Molerus in loc. Geirus. Ainsworth.

A Cloud is prepared as a Royal Chariot to carry up the King of Glory to his princely Pavilion,

Mr. Caſe in his Piſgah.

Luk. 24.51. lion. A cloud received him out of their ſight. And then a Royal Guard of mighty Angels ſurround the Chariot, if not for ſupport, yet for greater ſtate and ſolemnity of their Lord's Aſcenſion. And oh what Jubilations of the bleſſed Angels were heard in Heaven! How was the whole City of God moved at his coming! For look as when he brought his firſt-begotten into the world, he ſaid, Let all the Angels of God worſhip him, Heb. 1. 6. So at his return thither again, when he had finiſhed Redemption Work, there were no leſs demonſtrations given by thoſe bleſſed Creatures of their delight and joy in it. The very Heavens ecchoed and reſounded on that account. Yea, the triumph is not ended at this day, nor ever ſhall.

'Tis ſaid, Dan. 7. 13, 14. I ſaw (ſaith the Prophet) in the night viſions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of Heaven; and came to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him, dominion, and glory, and a kingdom; that all people, nations and languages ſhould ſerve him. This Viſion of Daniel's was accompliſht in Chriſt's Aſcenſion, when they, i. e. the Angels brought him to the ancient of days, i. e. to God the Father, who to expreſs his welcome to Chriſt, gave him Glory and a Kingdom. And ſo 'tis and ought to be expounded. The Father received him with open Arms, rejoycing exceedingly to ſee him again in Heaven; therefore God is ſaid to receive him up into Glory, 1 Tim. 3. 16. For that, which with reſpect to Chriſt, is call'd Aſcenſion, is with reſpect to the Father, call'd Aſſumption. He went up, and the Father received him. Yea, received ſo as none ever was received before him, or ſhall be received after him.

Vide Deodate and English Annot. &c.

Thirdly, Chriſt aſcended munificently, ſhedding forth abundantly ineſtimable Gifts upon his Church at his Aſcenſion. As in the Roman Triumphs they did Spargere miſſilia, beſtow their Largeſſes upon the People; ſo did our Lord when he aſcended, wherefore he ſaith, when he aſcended up on high, he led captivity captive; and gave gifts unto men. The Place to which the Apoſtle refers, is Pſalm 68. 17, 18. where you have both the Triumph and Munificence with which Chriſt went up excellently ſet forth together.

Solent principes poſt Victoriam dum Triumphant, magna munera & pecunias in populum ſibi triumphanti gratulantem et Jubilantem, ſpargere. Zanch.

The chariots of God (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) are twenty thouſand, even thouſands of Angels; the Lord is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place. Thou haſt aſcended on high, thou haſt led captivity captive, thou haſt received gifts for men; Yea, for the rebellious alſo, that God might dwell among them. Which words in their literal Senſe are a Celebration of that famous Victory and Triumph of David, over the Enemies of God, recorded, 2 Sam. 8. Theſe conquered Enemies bring him ſeveral ſorts of Preſents, all which he dedicated to the Lord. The Spiritual Senſe is, that juſt ſo our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, when he had overcome by his death on the Croſs, and now triumphed in his Aſcenſion, he takes the Parts and Gifts of his Enemies, and gives them by their converſion to the Church, for its uſe and ſervice. Thus he received Gifts even for the Rebellious, i. e. ſanctifies the natural Gifts, and Faculties of ſuch as hated his People before, dedicating them to the Lord in his Peoples Service. Thus (as one obſerves) Tertullian, Origen, Auſtin and Jerome, came into Canaan, laden with Ægyptian Gold. Meaning, they came into the Church richly laden with Natural Learning and Abilities. Auſtin was a Manichee, Cyprian a Magician, learned Bradwardine, a ſcornful, proud Naturaliſt, who once ſaid, when he read Paul's Epiſtles, Dedignabar eſſe parvulus. He ſcorned ſuch childiſh things, but afterwards became a very uſeful man in the Church of God. And even Paul himſelf, was as fierce an Enemy to the Church, as breathed on Earth; till Chriſt gave him into its boſom by Converſion; and then no meer Man ever did the Lord and his People greater Service than he. Men of all ſorts: Greater and ſmaller Lights, have been given to the Church. Officers of all ſorts were given it by Chriſt. Extraordinary and temporary, as Prophets, Apoſtles, Evangeliſts; ordinary and ſtanding, as Paſtors and Teachers, which remain to this day, Eph. 4. 8, 9. And thoſe ſtars are fixed in the Church-heaven, by a moſt firm Eſtabliſhment, 1 Cor. 12. 28. Thouſands now in Heaven, and thouſands on Earth alſo, are bleſſing Chriſt at this Day for theſe his Aſcenſion Gifts.

citas doctores eccleſia iam inter os qui populum tuum oerunt & perquuntur; & binde mulex hoſtibus is, ad hoc gnum adcis. Mol. loc.

Mr. Caſe in his Piſgah.

Fourthly, Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt aſcended moſt comfortably, for whilſt he was bleſſing his People, he was parted from them, Luke 24. 50, 51. Therein making good to them what is ſaid of him, John 13, 1. Having loved his own, he loved them to the end. There was a great deal of Love manifeſted by Chriſt in this very laſt Act of his, in this world. The laſt ſight they had of him in this world was a moſt ſweet and encouraging one. They heard nothing from his lips but Love, they ſaw nothing in his face but Love; till he mounted his triumphant Chariot, and was taken out of their ſight.

Surely theſe bleſſings at parting were ſweet and rich ones. For the Matter of them, they were the Mercies which his Blood had ſo lately purchaſed for them. And for their Extent, they were not only intended for them, who had the happineſs to be upon the place with him from whence he aſcended; but they reach us, as well as them; and will reach the laſt Saint that ſhall be upon the Earth, till he come again. For they were but Repreſentatives of the future Churches, Matth. 28. 20. And in bleſſing them, he bleſſed us alſo. And by this we may be ſatisfied that Chriſt carried an heart full of Love to his People away with him to Heaven; ſince his Love ſo abounded in the laſt Act that ever he did in this world. And left ſuch a demonſtration of his tenderneſs with them at parting.

Fifthly, He aſcended, as well as roſe again, by his own Power. He was not meerly paſſive, in that his Aſcenſion, but it was his own Act. He went to Heaven. Therefore 'tis ſaid, Acts 1. 10. He went up, viz. by his own divine Power. And this plainly evinceth him to be God, for no meer Creature ever mounted it ſelf from Earth, far above all heavens, as Chriſt did.

Cauſa hujus aſcenſionis fuit virtus Divina .... ſed accedebat inſuper conditio corporis glorificati; quod æque ſurſum fertur atq; deorſum. Ameſ.

Sixthly, And Laſtly, why did Chriſt aſcend? I anſwer: His Aſcenſion was neceſſary upon many and great Accounts. For, Firſt, If Chriſt had not aſcended, he could not have interceded as now he doth in Heaven for us. And do but take away Chriſt's Interceſſion, and you ſtarve the hope of the Saints. For what have we to ſuccour our ſelves with, under the daily ſurprizes of Sin, but this, That if any man ſin, we have an Advocate [with the Father] mark that, with the father. A Friend upon the place: One that abides there, on purpoſe to tranſact all our Affairs, and as a Surety for the peace betwixt God and us.

Secondly, If Chriſt had not aſcended, you could not have entred into Heaven, when you die. For he went to prepare a place for you, John 14. 2. He was (as I ſaid before) the firſt that entred into Heaven directly and in his own Name; and had he not done ſo, we could not have entred (when we die) in his Name. The fore-runner made way for all that are coming on in their ſeveral generations after him. Nor could your Bodies have aſcended after their Reſurrection, but in the vertue of Chriſt's Aſcenſion. For he aſcended (as was ſaid before) in the capacity of our Head, and Repreſentative. To his Father and our Father. For us and himſelf too.

Thirdly, If Chriſt had not aſcended, he could not have been inaugurated and inſtalled in the Glory he now enjoys in Heaven. This world is not the place where perfect Felicity and Glory dwells. And then how had the promiſe of the Father been made good to him? Or our Glory (which conſiſts in being with and conformed to him) where had it been? Ought not Chriſt to ſuffer, and to enter into his glory? Luke 24. 25.

Fourthly, If Chriſt had not aſcended, how could we have been ſatisfied that his payment on the Croſs made full ſatisfaction to God? and that now God hath no more Bills to bring in againſt us? how is it that the Spirit convinceth the world of righteouſneſs, John 16. 9, 10. But from Chriſt's going to the Father, and returning hither no more; which gives Evidence of God's full content and ſatisfaction both with his Perſon and Work.

Fifthly, How ſhould we have enjoyed the great bleſſings of the Spirit and Ordinances, if Chriſt had not aſcended? And ſurely we could not have been without either. If Chriſt had not gone away, the comforter had not come, Joh. 16. 7. He begins where Chriſt finiſhed. For he takes of his, and ſhews it to us, John 16. 14. And therefore it's ſaid, John 7. 39. The Holy Ghoſt was not given becauſe Jeſus was not yet glorified. He was then given as a ſanctifying Spirit, but not given, in that meaſure as afterward he was, to furniſh and qualifie Men with Gifts, for ſervice. And indeed by Chriſt's Aſcenſion both his ſanctifying and his miniſtring Gifts, were ſhed forth more commonly, and more abundantly upon Men. Theſe fell from him when he aſcended, as Elijah's Mantle did from him, ſo that whatſoever good of Converſion, Edification, Support or Comfort you receive from ſpiritual Ordinances he hath ſhed forth that, which you now ſee and feel. 'Tis the fruit of Chriſt's Aſcenſion.

Sixthly, And laſtly, if Chriſt had not aſcended, how had all the Types and Prophecies that figured and foretold it been fulfilled? And the Scriptures cannot be broken, John 10. 35. So that upon all theſe accounts it was expedient that he ſhould go away. It was for his glory, and for our advantage. Though we loſt the comfort of his bodily preſence by it, yet if we loved him, we would rejoyce becauſe he went to the Father, John 14. verſe 28. We ought to have rejoyced in his advancement, tho' it had been to our loſs; but when it is ſo much for our benefit as well as his glory; it's matter of Joy on both ſides that he is aſcended to his Father and our Father; to his God and to our God. From the ſeveral bleſſings flowing to us out of Chriſt's Aſcenſion, it was that he charged his people not to be troubled at his leaving of them, Joh. 14. And hence learn.

Infer. 1. Did Chriſt aſcend into Heaven? Is our Jeſus, our treaſure indeed there? Where then ſhould the hearts of believers be, but in Heaven where their Lord their Life is? Surely Saints, it is not good that your Love and your Lord ſhould be in two ſeveral Countries, ſaid one that is now with him. Up, up, after your Lover, that he and you may be together. Chriſtians you aſcended with him virtually when he aſcended; you ſhall aſcend to him perſonally hereafter, oh that you would aſcend to him ſpiritually in acts of Faith, Love and Deſires daily. Surſum Corda, up with your hearts, was the form uſed by the ancient Church, at the Sacrament. How good were it if we could ſay with the Apoſtle, Phil. 3. 21. Our Converſation is in Heaven from whence we look for a Saviour. An heart aſcendant, is the beſt evidence of your intereſt in Chriſt's aſcenſion.

Infer. 2. Did Chriſt go to Heaven as a fore-runner? What haſte ſhould we make to follow him? He ran to Heaven; he ran thither before us. Did he run to glory, and ſhall we linger? Did he flee as an Eagle towards Heaven, and we creep like Snails? Come Chriſtians, lay aſide every weight, and the ſin that doth ſo eaſily beſet you, and run with patience the race ſet before you, looking unto Jeſus, Heb. 12. 1, 2. The Captain of our Salvation is entred within the gates of the new Jeruſalem, and calls to us out of heaven, to haſten to him; propoſing the greateſt incouragements to them that are following after him, ſaying, he that overcomes ſhall ſit with me in my throne, as I alſo overcame, and am ſet down with my Father in his throne, Rev. 3. 22. How tedious ſhould it ſeem to us to live ſo long at a diſtance from our Lord Jeſus!

Infer. 3. Did Chriſt aſcend ſo triumphantly, leading Captivity Captive? How little reaſon then have believers to fear their conquered enemies. Sin, Satan and every enemy was in that day led away in triumph, dragged at Chriſt's Chariot wheels. Brought after him as it were in Chains. 'Tis a lovely ſight to ſee the necks of thoſe Tyrants under the foot of our Joſhua. He made at that day an open ſhew of them, Col. 2. 15. Their ſtrength is broken for ever In this he ſhewed himſelf more than a conqueror; for he conquered and triumphed too. Satan was then trod under his feet. And he hath promiſed to tread him under our feet alſo, and that ſhortly, Rom. 16. 20. Some power our enemies yet retain, the Serpent may bruiſe our heel, but Chriſt hath cruſht his head.

Infer. 4. Did Chriſt aſcend ſo munificently, ſhedding forth ſo many mercies upon his People? Mercies of ineſtimable value reſerved on purpoſe to adorn that day? O then ſee that you abuſe not thoſe precious aſcenſion gifts of Chriſt, but value and improve them, as the choiceſt mercies. Now the Aſcenſion gifts, as I told you, are either the Ordinances and Officers of the Church (for he then gave them Paſtors and Teachers) or the Spirit that furniſht the Church with all its gifts. Beware you abuſe not nither of theſe.

Firſt, Abuſe not the Ordinances and Officers of Chriſt. This is a ſin that no Nation is plunged deeper into the guilt of, than this Nation And no Age more than this. —— Surely God hath written to us the great things of his Law, and we have accounted them ſmall things. We have been looſe, wanton, ſceptical profeſſors for the moſt part; that have had nice and coy ſtomachs that could not reliſh plain wholeſom truths; except ſo and ſo modified to our humours. For this the Lord hath a Controverſie with the Nation, and by a ſore Judgment he hath begun to rebuke this ſin already. And I doubt before he make an end, plain truths will down with us; and we ſhall bleſs God for them.

Secondly, But in the next place, ſee that you abuſe not the Spirit, whom Chriſt hath ſent from Heaven at his aſcenſion, to ſupply his bodily abſence among us, and is the great pledge of his care for, and tender love to his people. Now take heed that you don't vex him by your diſobedience. Nor grieve him by your unkindneſſes. Nor quench him by your ſinful neglects of duty, or abuſe of light. O deal kindly with the Spirit, and obey his voice. Comply with his Deſigns, and yield up your ſelves to his guidance and conduct. Methinks to be intreated by the Love of the Spirit, Rom. 15. 30. ſhould be as great an Argument as to be intreated for Chriſts ſake. Now to perſwade all the Saints to be tender of grieving the Spirit, by ſin; let me urge a few Conſiderations proper to the point under hand. And Conſid. 1. Firſt, He was the firſt and principal mercy that Chriſt received for you, at his firſt entrance into Heaven. It was the firſt thing he asked of God, when he came to heaven. So he ſpeaks, John 14. 16, 17. I will pray the father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter; that he may abide with you. No ſooner had he ſet foot upon the place, but the firſt thing, the great thing that was upon his heart to ask the Father for us, was, that the Spirit might be forthwith diſpatcht, and ſent down to his People. So that the Spirit is the firſt-born of mercies. And deſerves the firſt place in our hearts, and eſteems.

Conſid. 2. Secondly, The Spirit comes not in his own name to us (tho' if ſo, he deſerves a dear welcome for his own ſake, and for the benefits we receive by him which are ineſtimable) but he comes to us in the name, and in the loves both of the Father, and Son. As one authorized and delegated by them. Bringing his Credentials under both their hands and ſeals, John 15. 26. But when the Comforter is come, whom I will ſend to you from the Father. Mark, I will ſend him from the Father, and in John 14. 26. The Father is ſaid to ſend him in Chriſt's name. So that he is the meſſenger that comes from both theſe great and holy Perſons. And if you have any Love for the God that made you, any kindneſs for Chriſt that he died for you; ſhew it by your obedience to the Spirit that comes from 'em both; and in both their names to us; & who will be both offended and grieved if you grieve him. O therefore give him an entertainment worthy of one that comes to you in the name of the Lord. In the Father's name, and in the Son's name.

Conſid. 3. Thirdly, But that is not the only conſideration that ſhould cauſe you to beware of grieving the Spirit, becauſe he is ſent in the name of ſuch great and dear Perſons to you, but He deſerves better entertainment than any of the Saints give him, for his own ſake, and upon his own account, and that upon a double ſcore, viz. Of his Nature and Office.

Firſt, On the account of his Nature; for he is God, Coequal with the Father and Son in Nature, and dignity, 2 Sam. 23. 23. The Spirit of the Lord ſpake by me, and his word was in my tongue; the God of Iſrael ſaid; the Rock of Iſrael ſpake to me. So that you ſee he is God. The rock of Iſrael. God omnipotent, for he created all things, Gen. 1. 2. God omnipreſent, filling all things, Pſal. 139. 7. God omniſcient, who knows your hearts, Rom. 9. 1. Beware of him therefore, and grieve him not, for in ſo doing, you grieve God.

Secondly, Upon the account of his Office, and the benefits we receive by him. We are obliged even on the ſcore of gratitude and ingenuity to obey him. For he is ſent in the quality of an Advocate, to help us to pray. To indite our requeſts for us. To teach us what, and how to ask of God, Rom. 8. 26. He comes to us as a comforter, John 14. 16. And none like him.

And now, Reader, doſt thou not bluſh to think how unworthy thou haſt treated ſuch a Friend? for which of all theſe his Offices or Benefits doſt thou grieve and quench him? O grieve not the holy Spirit, whom Chriſt ſent as ſoon as ever he came to Heaven, in his Father's Name, and in his own Name, to perform all theſe Offices for you.

Infer. 5. Is Chriſt aſcended to the Father as our Fore-runner? Then the door of Salvation ſtands open to all believers, and by vertue of Chriſt's aſcenſion; they alſo ſhall aſcend after him, far above all viſible Heavens. O my Friends, what place hath Chriſt prepared and taken up for you! What a ſplendid Habitation hath he provided for you! God is not aſhamed to be called your God; for he hath prepared for you a City, Heb. 11. 16. In that City Chriſt hath provided Manſions, and reſting Places for your everlaſting abode, John 14. 2. and keeps them for you till your coming. O how auguſt and glorious a dwelling is that, where Sun Moon and Stars ſhall ſhine as much below your feet as they are now above your heads? Yea, ſuch is the Love Chriſt hath to the Believer, that (as one ſaith) if thou only hadſt been the choſen of God, Chriſt would have built that Houſe for himſelf and thee: Now 'tis for himſelf, for thee and for many more who ſhall inherit with thee. God ſend us a joyful meeting within the vail, with our Fore-runner; and ſweeten our paſſage into it, with many a foreſight and fore-taſte thereof. And mean time, let the Love of a Saviour inflame our Hearts, ſo that when ever we caſt a look towards that place, where our Fore-runner is for us entred; our Souls may ſay with melting affections, Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt; and again, Bleſſed be God for his unſpeakable Gift.

SERMON XLI.

Serm. 41.

Wherein Chriſt's ſitting at Gods right hand is explain'd and apply'd, being the 3d ſtep of his glorious exaltation.

HEB. I. 3. Part of the Verſe.

--- When he had by himſelf, purged our ſins, ſat down at the right hand of the Majeſty on high.

CHriſt being return'd again to his Father, having finiſhed his whole work on Earth, is there bid by the Father to ſit down in the Seat of Honour and Reſt. A Seat prepared for him at God's right hand, that makes it honourable, and all his enemies as a footſtool under his feet, that makes it eaſie. How much is the ſtate and condition of Jeſus Chriſt changed in a few days! Here he groaned, wept, laboured, ſuffered, ſweat, yea, ſweat blood, and found no reſt in this world; but when he comes to Heaven, there he enters into reſt. Sits down for ever in the higheſt, and eaſieſt Throne prepared by the Father for him, when he had done his work. When he had by himſelf purged our ſins, he ſat down, &c.

The ſcope of this Epiſtle is to demonſtrate Chriſt to be the fulneſs of all Legal Types and Ceremonies, and that whatever light glimmered to the world through them, yet it was but as the light of the day-ſtar, to the light of this Sun.

In this Chapter Chriſt, the ſubject of the Epiſtle is deſcribed, and particularly in this 3d Verſe, he is deſcribed three ways.

Firſt, By his eſſential, and primæval glory and dignity he is ἀπαύγασμα, the brightneſs of his Father's glory, the very ſplendor of glory, the very refulgency of that Son of Glory. The primary reaſon of that appellation is with reſpect to his eternal and ineffable generation, light of light, as the Nicene Creed expreſſes it. As a beam of light proceeding from the Sun. And the ſecondary reaſon of it is with reſpect to Men, for look as the Sun communicates its light & influence to us by its beams, which it projects; ſo doth God communicate his goodneſs, and manifeſt himſelf to us by Chriſt. Yea, he is the expreſs Image, or Character of his perſon. Not as the impreſſed Image of the Seal upon the Wax but as the engraving in the Seal it ſelf. Thus he is deſcribed by his eſſential Glory.

Ratio appellationis primaria eſt reſpectu patris cœleſtis a quo ab æterno, per ineffabilem generationem inſtar luminis, de lumine reſplenduit, ſecundaria reſpectu hominum &c. Glaſ. Rhet. p. 174.

χαράττειν inſculpere dicitur, non tam imaginem ex ſigillo ceræ impreſſam, quam ipſum ſigillum denotare. *Glaſ. Rhet. ſac. p*159

Secondly, He is deſcribed by the work he wrought here on earth in his humbled ſtate, and it was a glorious work, and that wrought out by his own ſingle hand, when he had by himſelf purged our ſins. A work that all Angels in Heaven could not do, but Chriſt did it.

Thirdly, And laſtly, He is deſcribed by his glory, the which (as a reward of that work) he now enjoys in Heaven. When he had by himſelf purged our ſins, he ſate down on the right hand of the Majeſty on high, (i. e.) the Lord cloathed him with the greateſt power, and higheſt honour, that Heaven it ſelf could afford; for ſo much this phraſe of ſitting down on the right hand of Majeſty imports, as will appear in the explication of this point, which is the reſult of this clauſe, viz.

Doct. That when our Lord Jeſus Chriſt had finiſhed his work on earth, he was placed in the ſeat of the higheſt honour, and authority; at the right hand of God in Heaven.

This truth is transformingly glorious. Stephen had but a glimpſe of Chriſt at his Father's right hand, and it cauſed his face to ſhine, as it had been the face of an Angel, Acts 7. 56. this his high advancement was foretold and promiſed before the work of redemption was taken in hand, Pſal. 100. 1. The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, ſit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footſtool. And this promiſe was punctually performed to Chriſt after his Reſurrection and aſcenſion, in his ſupream exaltation far above all created beings in Heaven and Earth, Epheſ. 1. 20, 21, 22. We ſhall here open two things in the doctrinal part, viz. what is meant by God's right hand, and what is implied in Chriſt's ſitting there, with his enemies for a footſtool.

Firſt, What are we to underſtand here by God's right hand? Its obvious enough, that the expreſſion is not proper, but figurative and borrowed. God hath no hand, right or left; but its a condeſcending expreſſion, wherein God ſtoops to the Creatures underſtanding, and by it he would have us to underſtand honour, power, and nearneſs.

Firſt, The right hand of honour, the upper hand, where we place thoſe whom we highly eſteem and honour. So Solomon placed his Mother in a ſeat, at his right hand, 1 Kings 2.19. So in token of honour God ſets Chriſt at his right hand; which on that account in the Text is called the right hand of Majeſty. God hath therein expreſt more favour, delight and honour to Jeſus Chriſt, than ever he did to any Creature. To which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, ſit thou on my right hand? Heb. 1.13.

extram Pa- is nomina- us gloriam honorem eitatis, in a, cum fili- Dei ante ecula extite- is, tanquam eus in excel- is; Patri con- ſubſtantialis, oſtremis mporibus ncarnatus, etiam cum corpore conſe- dit. Damaſc. Lib. 4. c. 2. de fide,

Secondly, The right hand is the hand of power: We call it the weapon hand, and the working hand. And the ſetting of Chriſt there, imports his exaltation to the higheſt authority, and moſt ſupream dominion. Not that God the Father hath put himſelf out of his Authority, and advanced Chriſt above himſelf; no, for in that he ſaith he hath put all things under him, it is manifeſt, that he is excepted which did put all things under him, 1 Cor. 15. 27. But to ſit as an enthroned King, at God's right hand, imports power. Yea, the moſt ſovereign and ſupream power; and ſo Chriſt himſelf calls the hand at which he ſits, Mat. 26. 64. Hereafter ye ſhall ſee the Son of Man ſitting on the right hand of power.

Thirdly, And as it ſignifies honour and power, ſo nearneſs in place, as we uſe to ſay at ones elbow, and ſo it is applied to Chriſt, in Pſal. 110. 5. The Lord at thy right hand, ſhall ſtrike through Kings in the day of his Wrath; that is, the Lord who is very near thee, preſent with thee, he ſhall ſubdue thine enemies. This is that then we are to underſtand by God's right hand. Honour, power, and nearneſs.

Secondly, In the next place let us ſee what is implied in Chriſt's ſitting at God's right hand, with his enemies for his footſtool. And if we attently conſider, we ſhall find that it implies and imports divers great and weighty things in it. As.

Firſt, It implies the Complement and Perfection of Chriſt's work, that he came into the world about. After his work was ended, then he ſat down and reſted from thoſe labours, Heb. 10. 11, 12. Every Prieſt ſtandeth daily miniſtring, and offering oftentimes the ſame ſacrifices; which can never take away ſins; but this Man when he had once offered one ſacrifice for ſins; for ever ſate down on the right hand of God. Here he aſſigns a double difference betwixt Chriſt and the Levitical Prieſts; they ſtand, which is the poſture of Servants; he ſits, which is the poſture of a Lord. They ſtand daily, becauſe their ſacrifices cannot take away ſin; he did his work fully, by one offering; and after that ſits, or reſts for ever in Heaven. And this (as accurate and judicious Dr. Reynolds obſerves) was excellently figured to us in the Ark, which was a lively Type of Jeſus Chriſt, and particularly in this, it had rings by which it was carried up and down, till at laſt it reſted in Solomon's Temple, with glorious and triumphal ſolemnity, Pſal. 132. 8, 9. 2 Chron. 5. 13. So Chriſt, while he was here on earth, being anointed with the Holy Ghoſt and Wiſdom, went about doing good, Acts 10. 38. and having ceaſed from his works, did at laſt enter into his reſt, Heb. 5. 10. which is the heavenly Temple, Rev. 11. 19.

Edward olds in 110. p. 6.

Secondly, His ſitting down at God's right hand, notes the high content and ſatisfaction of God the Father in him, and in his work. The Lord ſaid to my Lord, ſit thou at my right hand; the words are brought in as the Words of the Father, welcoming Chriſt to Heaven; and (as it were) congratulating the happy accompliſhment of his moſt difficult work. And it is as if he had ſaid, O my Son, what ſhall be done for thee this day? Thou haſt finiſhed a great work, and in all the parts of it acquitted thy ſelf as an able and faithful ſervant to me; what honours ſhall I now beſtow upon thee? the higheſt glory in Heaven, is not too high for thee; come, ſit at my right hand. O how well is he pleaſed with Chriſt, and what he hath done! He delighted greatly to behold him here at his work on earth, and by a voice from the excellent glory he told him ſo, when he called out of Heaven to him, ſaying, Thou art my beloved Son in whom I am well pleaſed, 2 Pet. 1. 17. and himſelf tells us, Joh. 10. 17. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life, &c. for it was a work that the heart of God had been upon from Eternity. He took infinite delight in it.

Sedent qui à labore quieſcunt, et ab eo recreant ſe, Gen. 18. 1. quo ſenſu quidam accipiunt quod de Chriſto dicitur. Sedere ad dextram Dei, (i. e.) in Cœlis apud Deum in aterna illa beatitudine quieſcere à laboribus ac miſeriis quibus ſeſe ultro pro nobis ſubjecerat. Rev. in verbum. ſedere.

Thirdly, Chriſt's ſitting down at Gods right hand in heaven, notes the advancement of Chriſt's humane nature to the higheſt honour; even the to be the object of adoration to Angels and Men. For it is properly his humane nature that is the ſubject of all this honour and advancement; and being advanced to the right hand of Majeſty, its become an object of worſhip and adoration. Not ſimply as it is fleſh and blood, but as it is perſonally united to the ſecond perſon, and enthroned in the ſupream glory of Heaven. O here's the myſtery, that fleſh and blood, ſhould ever be advanced to the higheſt throne of Majeſty, and being there inſtalled in that glory, we may now direct our Worſhip to him as God-man; and to this end was his humanity ſo advanced, that it might be adored and worſhipped by all. The Father hath committed all Judgment to the Son, that all men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. And the Father will accept of no honour divided from his honour. Therefore it's added in the next clauſe, he that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him, John 5. 22, 23. Hence the Apoſtles in the ſalutations of their Epiſtles, beg for grace, mercy and peace from God the Father, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and in their valedictions, they deſire the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt to the Churches.

Fourthly, It imports the ſovereignty and ſupremacy of Chriſt over all. The inveſtiture of Chriſt with authority over the Empire of both Worlds: For this belongs to him that ſits down upon this throne. When the Father ſaid to him, ſit at my right hand, he did therein deliver to him the diſpenſation and œconomy of the Kingdom

Significat ergo hec ſeſſio Chriſti ad dextram patris, non proprie gloriam illams et regnum naturale, quod filio Dei cum patre ab eterno fuit commune; hoc enim pacto etiam ſpiritus ſanctus ad dextram Dei ſedet; ſed regnum œconomicum et voluntarium, in quo tanquam θεάνθρωπος et mediator noſter, ad eccleſie ſue collectionem ac defenſionem a patre eſt conſtitutus. Synopſ. pur. Theol. Diſp. 28. p. 343.

dom. Put the awful ſcepter of government into his hand, and ſo the Apoſtle interprets and underſtands it, 1 Cor. 15. 25. He muſt reign, till he have put all his enemies under his feet. And to this purpoſe the ſame Apoſtle accommodates, (if not expounds) the words of the Plamiſt, thou madeſt him a little lower than the Angels, (i. e.) in reſpect of his humbled State on earth, thou crownedſt him with glory and honour, and didſt ſet him over the work of thy hands, thou haſt put all things in ſubjection under his feet, Heb. 2. 7, 8. He is over the Spiritual Kingdom, the Church, abſolute Lord there, Matt. 28. 18, 19, 20. He alſo is Lord over the providential Kingdom, the whole world, Pſal. 110. 2. and this providential Kingdom, being ſubordinate to his ſpiritual Kingdom, he orders and rules this, for the advantage and benefit of that, Eph. 1. 22.

Aurel Vict. Qui Conſtantini toties perterurit urbem; ſub Tamberlino ſella Caniſque fuit.

Fifthly, To ſit at Gods right hand with his enemies for a footſtool, implies Chriſt to be a Conqueror over all his enemies. To have ones enemies under his feet, notes perfect conqueſt, and compleat victory. As when Joſhua ſet his foot upon the necks of the Kings: So Tamberlane made proud Bajazet his footſtool. They trampled his name, and his Saints under their feet, and Chriſt will tread them under his feet. 'Tis true indeed, this victory is yet incompleat, and inconſummate; for now we ſee not yet all things put under him, (ſaith the Apoſtle) but we ſee Jeſus Crowned with glory and honour, and that's enough. Enough to ſhew the power of his enemies is now broken; and though they make ſome oppoſition ſtill, yet it is to no purpoſe at all; for he is ſo infinitely above them, that they muſt fall before him. It is not with Chriſt as it was with Abijah, againſt whom Jeroboam prevailed becauſe he was young and tender hearted, and could not withſtand them. His incapacity and weakneſs gave the watchful enemy an advantage over him. I ſay, 'tis not ſo with Chriſt, he is at God's right hand. And all the power of God ſtands ready bent to ſtrike through his enemies, as it is, Pſal. 110. 5.

Mr. T. Caſe his Piſgah, part. 3. p. 21.

Sixthly, Chriſt's ſitting in Heaven notes to us the great and wonderful change that is made upon the ſtate and condition of Chriſt, ſince his aſcenſion into Heaven. Ah, 'tis far otherwiſe with him now, than it was in the days of his humiliation here on earth. Quantum mutatus ab illo! Oh what a wonderful change hath heaven made upon him! It were good (as a Worthy of our ſpeaks) to compare in our thoughts the Abaſement of Chriſt, and his Exaltation together; as it were in Columes, one over againſt the other. He was born in a Stable, but now he reigns in his Royal Palace. Then he had a Manger for his Cradle, but now he ſits on a Chair of State. Then Oxen and Aſſes were his companions, now thouſands of Saints, and ten thouſand of Angels miniſter round about his Throne. Then in contempt they call'd him the Carpenter's Son, now he obtains a more excellent name than Angels. Then he was led away into the Wilderneſs to to be tempted of the Devil, now it is proclaimed before him, Let all the Angels of God worſhip him. Then he had not a place to lay his Head on, now he is exalted to be Heir of all things. In his ſtate of humiliation, he endured the contradiction of ſinners; in his ſtate of Exaltation, he is adored and admired of Saints and Angels. Then he had no form nor comlineſs; and when we ſaw him, there was no Beauty why we ſhould deſire him: Now the beauty of his countenance ſhall ſend forth ſuch glorious beams, that ſhall dazle the Eyes of all the Cœleſtial inhabitants round about him, &c.

O what a change is here! Here he ſweat but there he ſits. Here he groaned, but there he triumphs. Here he lay upon the ground, there he ſits in the throne of glory. When he came to Heaven, his Father did as it were thus beſpeak him.

My dear Son, what an hard travail haſt thou had of it? What a world of woe haſt thou paſt thro', in the ſtrength of thy love to me, and mine Elect? Thou haſt been hungry, thirſty and weary; ſcourged, crucified and reproached: Ah what bad uſage haſt thou had in the ungrateful world! Not a days reſt and comfort ſince thou wenteſt out from me; but now thy ſuffering days are accompliſhed; now thy reſt is come, reſt for evermore. Henceforth ſit at my right hand. Henceforth thou ſhalt groan, weep, or bleed no more. Sit thou at my right hand.

Seventhly, Chriſt's ſitting at God's right hand, implies the advancement of Believers to the higheſt Honour: For this Seſſion of Chriſt's, reſpects them; and there he ſits as our Repreſentative, in which regard we are made to ſit with him in heavenly Places, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Eph. 2. 6. How ſecure may we be (ſaith Tertullian) who do now already poſſeſs the Kingdom? meaning in our Head, Chriſt. This (ſaith another) is all my Hope, and all my Confidence, namely, that we have a Portion in that Fleſh and Blood of Chriſt, which is ſo exalted, and therefore where he reigns, we ſhall reign; where our Fleſh is glorified, we ſhall be glorified. Surely, it's matter of exceeding Joy, to believe that Chriſt our Head, our Fleſh and Blood, is in all this Glory at his Father's right hand. Thus we have open'd the ſenſe & importance of Chriſt's ſitting at his Father's right hand. Hence we infer.

Infer. 1. Is this ſo great an honour to Chriſt, to ſit enthroned at God's right hand? What honour then is reſerved in Heaven for thoſe that are faithful to Chriſt now on the Earth? Chriſt prayed, and his Prayer was heard, John 17. 24. That we may be with him, to behold the glory that God hath given him; and what Heart can conceive the felicity of ſuch a ſight? It made Stephen's Face ſhine as the Face of an Angel, when he had but a glimpſe of Chriſt at his Father's Right-hand. Thine eyes ſhall ſee the King in his beauty, Iſa. 33. 7. which reſpected Hezekiah in the Type, Chriſt in the Truth. But, this is not all, though this be much, to be Spectators of Chriſt in his Throne of Glory; we ſhall not only ſee him in his Throne, but alſo ſit with him enthroned in Glory. To behold him is much, but to ſit with him is more. I remember it was the ſaying of a heavenly Chriſtian, now with Chriſt, I would far rather look but through the hole of Chriſt's Door, to ſee but one half of his faireſt and moſt comely Face, [for he looks like Heaven] ſuppoſe I ſhould never win it, to ſee his Excellency lency and Glory to the full; than to enjoy the Flower, the Bloom and chiefeſt Excellency of the Glory and Riches of ten Worlds. And you know how the Queen of the South fainted at the ſight of Solomon in his Glory. But this ſight you ſhall have of Chriſt, will change you into his likeneſs. We ſhall be like him (ſaith the Apoſtle) for we ſhall ſee him as he is, 1 John 3. 2. He will place us as it were in his own Throne with him. So runs the Promiſe, Rev. 3. 21. To him that overcometh, I will grant to ſit with me in my throne; even as I alſo overcame, and am ſet down with my father in his throne; and ſo 2 T*im.* 2. 12. If we ſuffer with him, we ſhall alſo reign with him. The Father ſet Chriſt on his right hand, and Chriſt will ſet the Saints on his right hand. So you know the Sheep are placed by the Angels, at the great day, Matt. 25. and ſo the Church under the Figure of the Daughter of Ægypt whom Solomon married, is placed on the King's right hand, in Gold of Ophyr, Pſal. 45. This Honour have all the Saints. O amazing Love! What, we ſet on Thrones, while as good as we by nature howl in Flames! O what manner of Love is this! Theſe Expreſſions indeed do not intend, that the Saints ſhall be ſet in higher Glory than Chriſt; or that they ſhall have a Parity of Glory with Chriſt; for in all things he muſt have the preheminence: but they note the great honour that Chriſt will put upon the Saints; as alſo, that his Glory ſhall be their Glory in Heaven. As the Glory of the Husband redounds to the Wife; and again, their Glory will be his Glory, 2 Theſ. 1. 10 And ſo it will be a ſocial Glory. O it's admirable to think, whither free Grace hath already mounted up poor Duſt and Aſhes!

Uxor ſplendeſcit in radiis Mariti.

To think how nearly we are related now to this Royal Princely Jeſus! but how much higher are the deſigns of Grace that are not yet come to their parturient fulneſs, they look beyond all this that we now know! Now are we the Sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we ſhall be, 1 John 3. 2. Ah what Reaſon have you to honour Chriſt on Earth, who is preparing ſuch Honours for you in Heaven!

Infer. 2. Is Jeſus Chriſt thus enthroned in Heaven, then how impoſſible is it, that ever his intereſt ſhould miſcarry or ſink on Earth? The Church hath many ſubtle and potent Enemies. True, but as Haman could not prevail againſt the Jews whilſt Heſter their Friend ſpake for them to the King, no more can they, whilſt our Jeſus ſits at his and our Fathers right hand. Will he ſuffer his Enemies that are under his Feet, to riſe up and pull out his Eyes think you? Surely they that touch his People, touch the very apple of his eye, Zech. 2. 8. He muſt reign till all his enemies are under his feet, 1 Cor. 15. 25. The Enemy under his Feet, ſhall not deſtroy the Children in his Arms. He ſits in Heaven on purpoſe to manage all to the Advantage of his Church, Epheſ. 1. 22. Are our Enemies powerful; lo our King ſits on the right hand of power. Are they ſubtil and deep in their Contrivance; he that ſits on the Throne, over-looks all they do. Heaven overlooks Hell. He that ſits in the Heavens beholds, and derides their attempts, Pſal. 2. 4. He may permit his Enemies to ſtraighten them in one place, but it ſhall be for their enlargement in another. For 'tis with the Church, as it is with the Sea; what it loſes in one place, it gets in another; and ſo really loſes nothing. He may ſuffer them alſo to diſtreſs us in outwards, but that ſhall be recompenced with inward and better Mercies; and ſo we ſhall loſe nothing by that. A Foot-ſtool you know is uſeful to him that treads on it, and ſerves to lift him up the higher; ſo ſhall Chriſt's Enemies be to him, and his; albeit they think not ſo. What ſingular Benefits the Oppoſitions of his Enemies, occaſion to his People; I have * elſewhere diſcovered, to which I refer my Reader, and paſs to the

* A Saint indeed. p. 64, 65, 66.

Infer. 3. Is Chriſt ſet down on the right hand of the Majeſty in Heaven? O with what awful Reverence ſhould we approach him in the Duties of his Worſhip! Away with light and low thoughts of Chriſt. Away with formal, irreverent, and careleſs Frames in praying, hearing, Receiving, yea, in conferring and ſpeaking of Chriſt. Away with all deadneſs, and drowſineſs in Duties; for he is a great King with whom you have to do. A King to whom the Kings of the Earth are but as little bits of Clay. Lo the Angels cover their Faces in his Preſence. He is an adorable Majeſty.

When John had a Viſion of this enthroned King, about ſixty Years after his Aſcenſion; ſuch was the over-powering Glory of Chriſt, as the Sun when it ſhineth in its ſtrength; that when he ſaw him, he fell at his Feet as dead, and died it's like he had, if Chriſt had not laid his hand on him, and ſaid, fear not, I am the firſt and the laſt; I am he that liveth, and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore, Rev. 1. 17, 18. When he appeared to Saul in the way to Damaſcus, it was in Glory above the Glory of the Sun, which over-powered him alſo, and laid him as one dead upon the Ground.

O that you did but know what a glorious Lord you Worſhip and Serve. Who makes the very place of his Feet glorious, where-ever he comes. Surely He is greatly to be feared in the Aſſembly of his Saintt, and to be had in reverence of all that are round about him. There is indeed a ταῤῥησία boldneſs or free Liberty of Speech allowed to the Saints, Eph. 3. 12. But no rudeneſs, or irreverence. We may indeed come as the Children of a King come to the Father, who is both their awful Sovereign, and tender Father; which double Relation cauſes a due mixture of Love and Reverence in their Hearts, when they come before him. You may be Free, but not Rude in his Preſence. Though he be your Father, Brother, Friend; yet the diſtance betwixt him and you is infinite.

Infer. 4. If Chriſt be ſo glorioully advanced in the higheſt Throne, then none need to reckon themſelves diſhonoured, by ſuffering the vileſt for his ſake. The very Chains and Sufferings of Chriſt have a Glory in them. Hence Moſes eſteemed the very reproaches of Chriſt greater riches than the treaſures of Ægypt, Heb. 11. 26. He ſaw an excellency in the very worſt things of Chriſt, his Reproaches and Sufferings, as made him leap out of his Honours and Riches into them. He did not (as one ſaith) only endure the reproaches of Chriſt, but counted them Treaſures. To be reckoned among his Honours, and things of value. So Thuanus reports of Ludovicus Marſacus, a noble Knight of France, when he was led with other Martyrs, that were bound with Cords, to Execution; and he for his Dignity was not bound, he cried, give me my Chain too, let me be a Knight of the ſame Order. Diſgrace it ſelf is honourable, when 'tis endured for the Lord of Glory. And ſurely there is (as one phraſeth it) a little Paradiſe, a young Heaven in ſufferings for Chriſt. If there were nothing elſe in it, but that they are endured on his Account, it would richly reward all we can endure for him; but if we conſider how exceeding kind Chriſt is to them that count it their Glory to be abaſed for him; that though he be always kind to his People, (yet if we may ſo ſpeak) he overcometh himſelf in kindneſs, when they ſuffer for him; it ſhould make Men in Love with his Reproaches.

Non ignominioſum eſt nobis pati quod Chriſtus paſſus eſt; nec vobis glorioſum facere quod fecit Judas, Hierony. Dr. Manton on Jam. p. 228.

Cur et non me quoq; torque donas? Et inſignis hujus ordinis militem creas? Thuan. Hiſt.

Infer. 5. If Chriſt ſate not down to reſt in Heaven, till he had finiſh'd his Work on Earth; then 'tis in vain for us to think of reſt, till we have finiſhed our Work, as Chriſt alſo did his.

How willing are we to find reſt here! To Dream of that which Chriſt never found in this World, nor any ever found before us. O think not of reſting, till you have done working and done ſinning. Your life and your labours muſt end together. Write (ſaith the Spirit) bleſſed are the dead that die in the Lord, for they reſt from their labours, Rev. 14. 13. Here you muſt have the Sweat, and there the Sweet. 'Tis too much to have two Heavens. Here you muſt be content to dwell in the Tents of Kedar hereafter you ſhall be within the curtains of Solomon. Heaven is the place of which it may be truly ſaid, That there the weary be at reſt. O think not of ſitting down on this ſide Heaven. There are four things will keep the Saints from ſitting down on Earth, to reſt, viz. Grace, Corruption, Devils, and wicked Men.

Firſt, Grace will not ſuffer you to reſt here. It's tendencies are beyond this World. It will be looking and longing for the bleſſed Hope. A gracious perſon takes himſelf for a Pilgrim, ſeeking a better Country, and is always ſuſpicious of danger in every place and ſtate. It's ſtill beating up the ſluggiſh heart with ſuch language as that, Mica. 2. 10. Ariſe, depart, this is not thy reſt, for it is polluted. It's farther tendencies and continual Jealouſies will keep you from ſitting long ſtill in this World.

Secondly, Your Corruptions will keep you from reſt here. They will continually exerciſe your Spirits, and keep you upon your watch. Saints have their hands filled with work by their own hearts every day. Sometimes to prevent ſin; & ſometimes to lament it. And always to watch and fear, to mortifie and kill it. Sin will not long ſuffer you to be quiet, Rom. 7. 21, 22, 23, 24. And if a bad heart will not break your reſt here, then Thirdly, There is a buſie Devil will do it. He will find you work enough with his Temptations, and Suggeſtions, and except you can ſleep quietly in his arms, as the wicked do, there's no reſt to be expected. Your adverſary, the Devil, goeth about as a roaring Lion, ſeeking whom he may devour; whom reſiſt, 1 Pet. 5. 8.

Fourthly, Nor will his Servants and Inſtruments let you be quiet on this ſide Heaven. Their very Name ſpeaks their turbulent Diſpoſition. My Soul (ſaith the holy Man) is among Lions, and I lie even among them that are ſet on fire, even the Sons of Men, whoſe Teeth are Spears and Arrows, Pſalm 57. 4. Well then, be content to enter into your reſt, as Chriſt did into his. He ſweat, then ſate, and ſo muſt you.

רָשָׁע Inquietum eſſe. Turbulentus.

SERMON XLII.

Serm. 42. Wherein Chriſt coming to Judgment, being the 4th and laſt degree of his exaltation, is open'd and improved.

ACTS X. 42. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to teſtifie, that it is he which was ordained by God to be the Judge of quick and dead.

CHriſt enthroned in the higheſt glory in Heaven, is there to abide for the effectual and ſucceſsful Government both of the world and of the Church, until the number given him by the Father before the world was, and purchaſed by the blood of the Croſs be gathered in; and then cometh the Judgment of the great day, which will perfectly ſeparate the precious from the vile; put the redeemed in full poſſeſſion of the purchaſe of his blood in Heaven, and then ſhall he deliver up the Kingdom to his Father, that God may be all in all.

This laſt act of Chriſt, namely, his Judging the world, is a ſpecial part of his Exaltation and honour, beſtowed upon him, becauſe he is the Son of Man, John 5. 27. In that day ſhall his glory, as King and abſolute Lord, ſhine forth as the Sun when it ſhineth in its ſtrength. O what an honour will it be to the Man Chriſt Jeſus, who ſtood arraigned and condemned at Pilate's Bar, to ſit upon the great white Throne ſurrounded with thouſands, and ten thouſands of Angels! Men and Devils waiting upon him to receive their final ſentence from his mouth. In this will the glory of Chriſt's Sovereignty and power be eminently and illuſtriouſly diſplayed, before Angels and Men. And this is that great truth, which he commanded to be preached and teſtified to the people; namely, that it is he which is ordained of God, to be the Judge of quick and dead.

Ad regiam dignitatem pertinet illa poteſtas qua, Chriſtus factus eſt judex omnium hominum et angelorum. Ameſ. med. p. 117.

Wherein we have four things to be diſtinctly conſidered, viz. The Subject, Object, Fountain, and Truth of the ſupream Judiciary Authority.

Firſt, The Subject of it, Chriſt; 'tis he that's ordained to be Judge. Judgment is the Act of the whole undivided Trinity. The Father and Spirit judge, as well as Chriſt, in reſpect of authority and conſent, but 'tis the act of Chriſt in reſpect of viſible management, and execution and ſo it's his per proprietatem, by propriety, the Father having conferred it upon him, as the Son of Man; but not his per appropriationem, ſo as to exclude either the Father or Spirit from their Authority, for they judge by him. Se-

Secondly, The Object of Chriſt's Judiciary authority. The quick and dead, (i. e.) all that at his coming do live, or ever had lived. This is the Object perſonal. All the Men and Women that ever ſprang from Adam, all the Apoſtate Spirits that fell from Heaven, and are reſerved in Chains to the Judgment of this great day. And in this perſonal object, is included the Real Object, viz. all the actions, both ſecret, and open, that ever they did, 2 Cor. 5. 5. Rom. 2. 16.

ὡρισμένος. Definitus ſeu conſtitutus.

Thirdly, The Fountain of this delegated authority, which is God the Father; for he hath ordained Chriſt to be the Judge. He is appointed, ſc. as the Son of Man to this Honourable office and work. The word notes, a firm eſtabliſhment of Chriſt in that Office by his Father. He is now by right of Redemption, Lord and King. He enacts Laws for Government, then he comes to judge of mens obedience and diſobedience to his Laws.

Fourthly, And laſtly, here is the infallible Truth, or unqueſtionable certainty of all this. He gave us commandment to preach and teſtifie it to the People. We had it in charge from his own mouth; and dare not hide it. Hence the point of Doctrine is plainly this,

Doct. That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is ordained by God the Father, to be the Judge of quick and dead.

This truth ſtands upon the firm baſis of Scripture-Authority. You have it from his own hand, John 5. 22. The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all Judgment to the Son. viz. in the Senſe before given. And ſo the Apoſtle, Acts 17. 31. He hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteouſneſs, by the Man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given aſſurance, &c. And again, Rom. 2. 16. in the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of Men by Jeſus Chriſt. Three things will be opened here. Firſt, The certainty of a Judgment to come. Secondly, The quality and nature of it. Thirdly, That it's a ſpecial part of Chriſt's Exaltation to be appointed Judge in this day.

The certainty of a Judgment.

Firſt, The certainy of a Judgment. This is a truth of firmer eſtabliſhment than Heaven and Earth. It's no deviſed fable, no cunning artifice to keep the world in awe; but a thing as confeſſedly true, as it is awfully ſolemn. For,

Firſt, As the Scriptures fore-mentioned (with theſe, 2 Cor. 5. 10. Eccleſ. 12. 14. Matt. 12. 36. and many other, the true and faithful ſayings of God) do very plainly reveal it: So the Juſtice and Righteouſneſs of God require it ſhould be ſo. For the Judge of all the Earth will do right, Gen. 18. 25. Now righteouſneſs it ſelf requires that a difference be made betwixt the righteous and the wicked; Say ye to the righteous, it ſhall be well with him; woe to the wicked, it ſhall be ill with him, Iſa. 3. 10. But no ſuch diſtinction is generally and fully made betwixt one another in this world. Yea, rather the wicked proſper, and the righteous periſh, There is a juſt man, that periſheth in his righteouſneſs, and there is a wicked man, that prolongeth his life in his wickedneſs, Eccleſ. 7. 15. Yea, not only in, but for his righteouſneſs, as it may be fairly rendred.

Here the wicked devoureth the Man that is more righteouſs than himſelf, Hab. 1. 14. As the fiſhes of the Sea, where the great and ſtrong ſwallow up the ſmall and weak. And even in Courts of Judicature, where the innocent might expect relief; there they often meet with the worſt oppreſſions. How fairly and juſtly therefore doth a wiſe Man infer a Judgment to come from this conſideration? Eccleſ. 3. 16, 17. I ſaw under the Sun the place of Judgment, that wickedneſs was there, and the place of righteouſneſs, that iniquity was there; I ſaid in my heart, God ſhall judge the righteous and the wicked; for there is a time there for every purpoſe, and for every work, q. d. the Judgment to come is the only relief and ſupport left to poor innocents, to quiet and comfort themſelves withal. To the ſame purpoſe alſo is that, James 5. 6, 7. Ye have condemned, and killed the Juſt; and he doth not reſiſt you; be patient therefore brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. It is confeſt, that ſometimes God vindicates his providence againſt the Atheiſm of the world, by particular ſtrokes upon the wicked; but this is but rare. And as the Father well obſerves, if no ſin were puniſhed here, no providence would be believed; again, if every ſin were openly puniſhed here, no Judgment hereafter could be expected. Beſides,

In tanta injuria confugi ad Dei Judicium in quo pronunciabit qui ſunt juſti, qui ſontes. Druſius. Hoc malo remedium oppoſui. Merc. Contra illam injuſtitiam conſolabar me hac cogatione quod Deus omnes judicaret. Geirus. Si nullum peccatum manifeſta plecteretur pœna; nullum eſſe divinam providentiam crederetur. Rurſum ſi omne peccatum aperte puniretur, nullum fore Judicium crederetur. Aug.

Secondly, Man is a reaſonable being, and every reaſonable being, is an accountable being. He is a capable ſubject of moral Government. His actions have relation to a Law. He is ſwayed by rewards and puniſhments. He acts by counſel, and therefore of his actions he muſt expect to give an account, as it is Rom. 14. 12. So then every one of us, ſhall give an account of himſelf to God. Eſpecially if we add, that all the gifts of body, mind, eſtate, time, &c. are ſo many Talents, concredited and betruſted to him by God, and every one of us hath one Talent at leaſt; therefore a time to render an account for all theſe Talents will come, Mat. 25. 14, 15. We are but Stewards, and Stewards muſt give an account in order whereto, there muſt be a great audit day.

Thirdly, And what need we ſeek evidence of this truth, further than our own conſcience? Lo, it is a truth engraven legibly upon every mans own breaſt. Every one hath a kind of little Tribunal, or privy Seſſions in his own conſcience, which both accuſes, and excuſes for good and evil, which it could never do, were there not a future Judgment of which it is now conſcious to it ſelf. In this Court Records are now kept of all that we do, even of our ſecret actions & thoughts, which never yet took air; but if no Judgment, what need of records? nor let any imagine, that this may be but the fruit of education and diſcourſe. We have heard of ſuch things, and ſo are ſcared by them. For if ſo, how comes it to obtain ſo univerſally? who could be the Author of ſuch a common deception?

Reader, bethink thy ſelf a little; if thou hadſt a mind (as one ſaith) to impoſe a lie upon all the world, what courſe wouldſt thou take? How wouldſt thou lay the deſign? Or why doſt thou in this caſe imagine, what thou knoweſt not how to imagine? 'Tis evident that the very conſciences of the Heathens, have theſe Offices of accuſing and excuſing, Rom. 2. 15. And tis as hard to imagine (as an ingenious Author † ſpeaks) that a general Cheat ſhould bow down the Backs of all Mankind, and induce ſo many many Doubts and Fears, and Troubles amongſt them; and gave an interruption to the whole courſe of their corrupt living, and that there ſhould be no account of it? And therefore it's undoubted that ſuch a day will come. But I ſhall rather chuſe in the

Mr. Howes bleſſedneſs of the right. p. 343.

† Sir Charles Woolſelys Unreaſonableneſs of Atheiſm p. 76.

The quality of the Judgment.

Second place, to open the Nature and manner of this Judgment, than to ſpend more time in proving a truth, that cannot be denied without violence offered to a mans own light. If then the Queſtion be, what manner of Judgment will this be? I anſwer.

Firſt, It will be a great, and awful day. It's called the Judgment of the great day, Jude 6. Three things will make it ſo, the manner of Chriſt's coming. The work he comes about. And the iſſues or events of that work. The manner of Chriſt's coming will be awfully ſolemn, For the Lord himſelf ſhall deſcend from Heaven with a ſhout, with the Trump of God; and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. Then we which are alive and remain, ſhall be caught together with them in the Clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, &c. 1 Theſ. 4. 16, 17. Here Chriſt breaks out of Heaven with the ſhouts of Angels ἐν κελεύματι, it ſignifies ſuch a ſhout (ſaith one) as is to be heard among Seamen, when after a long and dangerous Voyage they firſt deſcry Land; crying a loud with united voices, A ſhore, A ſhore. As the Poet deſcribes the Italians when they ſaw their native Country, lifted up their Voices, and making the Heavens ring again with Italy, Italy; or as Armies ſhout when the ſignal of Battle is given. Above all which (as ſome expound it) ſhall the voice of the Archangel be diſtinctly heard. And after this ſhout, the Trump of God ſhall ſound. By this Tremendous blaſt, ſinners will be affrighted out of their Graves, but to the Saints it will carry no more terrour than the roaring of Cannons, when Armies of Friends approach a beſieged City, for the relief of them that be within. The dead being raiſed, they ſhall be gathered before the great Throne on which Chriſt ſhall ſit in his Glory; and there be divided exactly to the right and left hand of Chriſt, by the Angels. Here will be the greateſt Aſſembly that ever met. Where Adam may ſee his numerous off-ſpring, even as the ſand upon the Sea-ſhore which no Man can number. And never was there ſuch a perfect diviſion made (how many diviſions ſoever have been in the world) none was ever like it. The Saints in this great Oecumenical aſſize (as the Author ſtiles it) ſhall meet the Lord in the Air, and there the Judge ſhall ſit upon the Throne; and all the Saints ſhall be placed upon bright clouds, as on Seats or Scaffolds round about him; the wicked remaining below upon the Earth, there to receive their final Doom and Sentence.

Italiam, Italiam læto clamore ſalutant. Virgil. Æneid.

The Preparatives will make it awful. And much more will the work it ſelf that Chriſt comes about make it ſo. For it is to Judge the ſecrets of Men, Rom. 2. 16. To ſever the Tares from the Wheat. To make every Mans whites and blacks appear. And according as they are found in that Trial, to be ſentenced to their everlaſting and immutable ſtate. O what a ſolemn thing is this!

And no leſs will the Execution of the Sentence on both parts, make it a great and ſolemn Day. The heart of Man cannot conceive what impreſſion the voice of Chriſt from the Throne will make both upon believers, and unbelievers.

Imagine Chriſt upon his glorious Throne, ſurrounded with Myriads and Legions of Angels, his Royal Guard; a poor unbeliever trembling at the Bar. An exact ſcrutiny made into his heart and life. The dreadful Sentence given. And then a cry. And then his delivering them over to the Executioners of eternal Vengeance, never, never to ſee a glimpſe of hope or mercy any more.

Imagine Chriſt, like the General of an Army, mentioning with honour in the head of all the hoſts of Heaven and Earth, all the ſervices that the Saints have done for him in this world. Then ſententially juſtifying them by open Proclamation. Then mounting with him to the third Heaven, and entring the Gates of that City of God, in that noble train of Saints and Angels intermixed. And ſo for ever to be with the Lord. O what a great day muſt this be.

Secondly, As it will be an awful and ſolemn Judgment, ſo it will be, a Critical and Exact Judgment. Every Man will be weighed to his ounces and drams. The name of the Judge is καρδιογνώστης the ſearcher of hearts. The Judge hath eyes as flames of Fire, which pierce to the dividing of the heart and reins. It's ſaid, Matt. 12. 36. That Men ſhall then give an account of every idle word that they ſhall ſpeak. It's a day that will perfectly fan the World. No Hypocrite can eſcape. Juſtice holds the ballances in an even hand. Chriſt will go to work ſo exactly, that ſome Divines of good note, think the day of Judgment will laſt as long as this day of the Goſpel's adminiſtration hath or ſhall laſt.

Thirdly, It will be an Univerſal Judgment, 2 Cor. 5. 10. We muſt all appear before the Judgment Seat of Chriſt. And Rom. 14. 12. Every one of us ſhall give an account of himſelf to God. Thoſe that were under the Law, and thoſe that having no Law, were a Law to themſelves, Rom. 2. 12. Thoſe that had many Talents, and he that had but one Talent, muſt appear at this Bar; thoſe that were carried from the Cradle to the Grave, with him that ſtooped for Age. The rich, and poor; the Father and the Child; the Maſter and the Servant; the Believer, and Unbeliever muſt ſtand forth in that day. I ſaw the dead both ſmall and great ſtand before God, and the Books were opened, Rev. 20. 12.

Fourthly, It will be a Judgment full of convictive clearneſs. All things will be ſo ſifted to bran (as we ſay) that the Sentence of Chriſt both on Saints and Sinners ſhall be applauded. Righteous art thou O Lord, becauſe thou haſt judged thus. His Judgments will be as the light that goeth forth. So that thoſe poor ſinners whom he will condemn, ſhall be firſt αὐτοκατάκριτοι ſelf condemned. Their own conſciencies ſhall be forced to confeſs, that there is not one drop of injuſtice in all that Sea of wrath, into which they are to be caſt.

Fifthly, And laſtly, It will be a ſupream and final Judgment, from which lies no Appeal. For it is the Sentence of the Higheſt, and only Lord. For as the ultimate reſolution of Faith is into the Word, and truth of God, ſo the ultimate ultimate reſolution of Juſtice is into the Judgment of God. This Judgment is ſupream and imperial. For Chriſt is the only potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 5. And therefore the Sentence once paſt, its Execution is infallible. And ſo you find it in that judicious proceſs, Mat. 25. ult. Juſt after the Sentence is pronounced by Chriſt, it is immediately added, thoſe ſhall go away into everlaſting puniſhment, but the righteous into life eternal. This is the Judgment of the great Day.

That this Judgment makes for Chriſt's Honour.

Thirdly, In the laſt place, I muſt inform you, that God in ordaining Chriſt to be the Judge, hath very highly exalted him. This will be very much for his honour. For in this Chriſt's Royal dignity will be illuſtrated beyond what-ever it was ſince he took our Nature, till that Day. Now he will appear in his Glory. For Firſt. This Act of Judging pertaining properly to the kingly Office, Chriſt will be glorified as much in his kingly Office, as he hath been in either of the other. We find but ſome few glimpſes of the kingly Office, breaking forth in this World; as his riding with Hoſannahs into Jeruſalem. His whipping the buyers and ſellers out of the Temple. His Title upon the Croſs, &c. But theſe were but faint Beams: Now that Office will ſhine in its Glory, as the Sun in the midſt of the Heavens. For what were the Hoſannahs of little Children, in the Streets of Jeruſalem, to the Shouts and Acclamations of thouſands of Angels, and ten thouſands of Saints? What was his whipping the prophane out of the Temple, to his turning the wicked into Hell; and ſending his Angels to gather out of his Kingdom every thing that offendeth? What was a Title written by his Judge, and fixed on the ignominious Tree, to the name that ſhall be now ſeen on his Veſture, and on his Thigh; Lord of Lords, and King of Kings?

Secondly, This will be a diſplay of his Glory in the higheſt, before the whole World. For there will be preſent at once and together all the Inhabitants of Heaven and Earth, and Hell. Angels muſt be there to attend and miniſter; thoſe gliſtering Courtiers of Heaven muſt attend his Perſon. So that Heaven will for a time, be left empty of all its Inhabitants. Men and Devils muſt be there to be judged. And before this great Aſſembly, will Chriſt appear in Royal Majeſty that Day. He will (to allude to that Text, Iſa. 24. 23.) reign before his Ancients gloriouſly. For he will come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe, 2 Theſ. 1. 10. The Inhabitants of the three Regions, Heaven, Earth and Hell, ſhall rejoyce or tremble before him that Day. And acknowledge him to be ſupream Lord and King.

Thirdly, This will roll away for ever the Reproach of his Death. For Pilate and the High-Prieſt that judged him at their Bars, ſhall now ſtand quivering at his Bar; with Herod that ſet him at nought, the Souldiers and Officers that traduced and abuſed him. There they that reviled him on the Croſs wagging their Heads, will ſtand with trembling Knees before his Throne. For every eye ſhall ſee him, and they alſo that pierced him, Rev. 1. 7. O what a contemptible Perſon was Chriſt in their Eyes once? As a Worm, and no Man. Every vile Wretch could freely tread and trample on him; but now ſuch will be the brightneſs of his Glory, ſuch the awful Beams of Majeſty, that the wicked ſhall not ſtand in his preſence, or be able to riſe up (as that Word imports, Pſal. 1. 5.) before him. So that this will be a full and univerſal vindication of the Death of Chriſt, from all that contempt and ignominy that attended it. We next improve it.

Infer. 1. Is Jeſus Chriſt ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead; great then is the ſecurity believers have, that they ſhall not be condemned in that day. Who ſhall condemn, when Chriſt is Judge? If Believers be condemned in Judgment, Chriſt muſt give Sentence againſt them. Yea, and they muſt condemn themſelves too. I ſay, Chriſt muſt give Sentence, for that is the proper and peculiar Office of Chriſt. And to be ſure, no Sentence of condemnation ſhall in that Day be given by Chriſt againſt them. For Firſt, He died to ſave them, and he will never croſs and overthrow the deſigns and ends of his own Death. That cannot be imagined; nay,

Secondly, They have been cleared, and abſolved already. And being once abſolved by divine Sentence, they can never be condemned afterward. For one divine Sentence, cannot croſs and reſcind another. He juſtified them here in this World by Faith. Declared in his Word (which ſhall then be the Rule of Judgment, Rom. 2. 16.) That there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt, Rom. 8. 1. And ſurely he will not retract his own Word, and give a Sentence quite croſs to his own Statute-book, out of which he hath told us they ſhall be Judged. Moreover,

Thirdly, The far greateſt part of them will have paſt their particular Judgment long before that Day, and being therein acquitted by God the Judge of all; and admitted into Heaven upon the ſcore and account of their Juſtification; it cannot be imagined that Chriſt ſhould now condemn them with the World. Nay, Fourthly, He that judgeth them is their Head, Husband, Friend, and Brother; who loved them, and gave himſelf for them: O then, with what confidence may they go, even unto his Throne? And ſay with Job, though he try us as fire, we know we ſhall come forth as Gold. We know that we ſhall be juſtified. Eſpecially, if we add, that they themſelves ſhall be the Aſſeſſors with Chriſt in that Day. And (as a judicious Author pertinently obſerves) not a Sentence ſhall paſs without their Votes. "So as that "they may by Faith not only look upon themſelves as already in Heaven, ſitting with Chriſt "as a common Perſon in their right; but they "may look upon themſelves as Judges already. "So that if any Sin ſhould ariſe to accuſe, or "condemn, yet it muſt be with their Votes. "And what greater Security can they have than "this, that they muſt condemn themſelves, if "they be condemned. No, no, it is not the buſineſs of that Day to condemn, but to abſolve and pronounce them pardoned and juſtified, according to the Sentence of Acts 3. 19. and Mat. 12. 32. So that it muſt needs be a time of refreſhing (as all Scriptures call it) to the People of God. You that now believe, ſhall not come into condemnation, John 5. 24. You that now judge your ſelves ſhall not be condemned with the World, 1 Cor. 11. 31. 32.

Goodwin's Triumph. p. 146.

Infer. 2. If Chriſt be ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead, how miſerable a Caſe will Chriſtleſs Souls be in at that Day! They that are Chriſtleſs now, will be Speechleſs, Helpleſs, and Hopeleſs then. How will their Hands hang down, and their Knees knock together! O what pale Faces, quivering Lips, fainting Hearts, and roaring Conſciences will be among them in that Day! O dreadful Day! O aſtoniſhing Sight! to ſee the World in a dreadful Conflagration, the Elements melting, the Stars falling, the Earth trembling, the Judgment ſat, the Priſoners brought forth; O who ſhall endure in this Day, but thoſe that by Union with Chriſt, are ſecured againſt the Danger and Dread of it? Let me demand of poor Chriſtleſs Souls, whom this Day is like to overtake unawares, Firſt, Do ye think it poſſible to avoid appearing after that terrible citation is given to the World by the Trump of God? Alas, how can you imagine it? Is not the ſame Power that revived your Duſt, able to bring you before the Bar? There is a neceſſity that you muſt come forth, 2 Cor. 5. 10. We [muſt] all appear. It is not at the Sinner's Choice, to obey the Summons or not.

Secondly, If you muſt appear, are there no Accuſers, nor Witneſſes that will appear againſt you, and confront you in the Court? What think you, was Satan ſo often a Tempter to you here, and will not he be an Accuſer there? Yes, nothing ſurer; for that was the main deſign of all his Temptations. What think you of your own Conſciences? Are they not privy to your ſecret wickedneſs? Don't they now whiſper ſometimes in your Ears, what you care not to hear of? If they whiſper now, they will thunder then, Rom. 2. 15. 16. Will not the Spirit accuſe you, for reſiſting his Motions, and ſtifling thouſands of his Convictions? Will not your Companions in Sin accuſe you? who drew, or were drawn by you to Sin. Will not your Teachers be your Accuſers? How many times have you made them complain, Lord they are Iron and Braſs, they have made their Faces harder than a Rock; they refuſe to return. Will not your very Relations be your Accuſers; To whom you have failed in all your rational Duties? Yea, and every one whom you have tempted to Sin, abuſed, defrauded, over-reacht; all theſe will be your Accuſers. So that it is without diſpute you will have Accuſers enough to appear againſt you.

Thirdly, Being accuſed before Jeſus Chriſt, what will you plead for your ſelves? Will you confeſs, or will you deny the Charge? If you confeſs, what need more? Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, ſaith Chriſt, Luke 19. 22. If you deny, and plead not guilty; thy Judge is the ſearcher of Hearts, and knows all things. So that it will not at all help thee to make a Lie thy laſt Refuge. This will add to the Guilt, but not cover it.

Fourthly, If no Defence or Plea be left thee, then what canſt thou imagine ſhould retard the Sentence? Why ſhould not Chriſt go on to that dreadful Work? Muſt not the Judge of all the Earth do right? Gen. 18. 25. Muſt he not render to every Man according to his Deeds? 2 Cor. 5. 10. Yes, no queſtion but he will proceed to that Sentence, how terrible ſoever it be to you to think on it now, or hear it then.

Fifthly, To conclude, If Sentence be once given by Chriſt againſt thy Soul, what in all the World canſt thou imagine ſhould hinder the Execution? Will he alter the thing that is gone out of his Mouth? No, Pſal. 89. 34. Doſt thou hope he is more merciful and pitiful than ſo? Thou miſtakeſt, if thou expecteſt Mercy out of that way in which he diſpenſes it. There will be thouſands, and ten thouſands that will rejoyce in, and magnifie his Mercy then; but they are ſuch as obey his Call, repented, believed, and obtained Union with his Perſon here; but for Unbelievers, it's againſt the ſettled Law of Chriſt, and conſtitution of the Goſpel to ſhew Mercy to the deſpiſers of it. But it may be you think your Tears, your Cries, your Pleadings with him, may move him; theſe indeed might have done ſomewhat in time, but they come out of Seaſon now. Alas, too late. What the ſucceſs of ſuch Pleas and Cries will be, you may ſee if you will but conſult two Scriptures, Job 27. 8, 9. What is the hope of the Hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his Soul? Will God hear his Cry when trouble cometh upon him? No, no; And Matth. 7. 22. Many will ſay unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not propheſied in thy name, and in thy name have caſt out Devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profeſs unto them, I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity.

And muſt it come to this diſmal Iſſue with you indeed? God forbid it ſhould. Oh then,

Infer. 3. If Chriſt be appointed of God to be the Judge of all, how are all concerned to ſecure their intereſt in him, and therein an eternity of happineſs to their own Souls, by the work of Regeneration? Of all the buſineſs that Men and Women have in this World, there is none ſo ſolemn, ſo neceſſary, and important as this. O my Brethren, this is a Work, able to drink up your Spirits, while you do but think of the conſequences of it.

Summon in then thy ſelf-reflecting, and conſidering powers: get alone Reader, and forgetting all other things, ponder with thy ſelf this deep, dear and eternal concernment of thine. Examine the State of thy own Soul. Look into the Scriptures, then into thine own Heart, and then to Heaven, ſaying, Lord let me not be deceived in ſo great a concernment to me as this. O let not the trifles of Time wipe off the impreſſions of Death, Judgment, and Eternity from thy Heart. O that long Word [Eternity,] that it might be Night and Day with thee. That the awe of it may be ſtill upon thy Spirit. A Gentlewoman of this Nation having ſpent the whole Afternoon, and a great part of the Evening at Cards, in much mirth and jollity, came home late at Night, and finding her waiting Gentlewoman reading, ſhe lookt over her Shoulder upon the Book, and ſaid, poor melancholy Soul, why doſt thou ſit here poring ſo long upon thy Book? That Night ſhe could not Sleep, but lay ſighing and weeping; Her Servant asked her once and again what ailed her; at laſt ſhe burſt out into Tears, and ſaid, O it was one Word that I caſt my Eye upon in thy Book, that troubles me; there I ſaw that Word Eternity. How happy were I, if I were provided for Eternity! Sure it concerns us, ſeeing we look for ſuch things, to be diligent that we may be found of him in peace. O let not that Day come by ſurprizal upon you. Remember that as Death leaves, ſo Judgment will find you.

Infer. 4. Is Jeſus Chriſt appointed Judge of quick and dead, then look to it, all you that hope to be found of him in peace, that you avoid thoſe ſins, and live in the daily practice of thoſe duties, which the conſideration of that day powerfully perſwades you to avoid or practiſe. For it not only preſſes us to Holineſs in actu primo, in the being of it; but in actu ſecundo, in the daily exerciſe and practice of it. Do you indeed expect ſuch a day? Oh then,

Firſt, See you be meek and patient underall injuries and abuſes for Chriſt's ſake. Avenge not your ſelves, but leave it to the Lord, who will do it. Don't anticipate the Work of God. Be patient my Brethren, to the coming of the Lord, James 5. 7, 8, 9.

Secondly, Be communicative publick-hearted Chriſtians, ſtudying and deviſing liberal things for Chriſt's diſtreſſed Members. And you ſhall have both an honourable remembrance of it, & a full reward of it in that day, Mat. 25. 34, 35.

Thirdly, Be watchful and ſober, keep the golden Bridle of Moderation upon all your Affections; and ſee that you be not over-charged with the cares and love of this preſent Life, Luk. 21. 34, 35. Will you that your Lord come, and find you in ſuch a poſture? O let your moderation be known unto all, the Lord is at hand, Phil. 4. 5.

F*ourthly*, Improve all your Maſter's Talents, diligently and carefully. Take heed of the Napkin, Mat. 25. 14, 18. Then muſt you make up your account for them all.

Fifthly, But above all, be ſincere in your profeſſion. Let your hearts be found in God's Statutes, that you may never be aſhamed; for this day will be the day of manifeſtation of all hidden things: And nothing is ſo ſecret, but that day will reveal it, Luke 12. 1, 2, 3. Beware of hypocriſie, for there is nothing covered which ſhall not be revealed, neither hid, that ſhall not be made known. —— Thus I have finiſhed, thro' Divine Aids, the whole Doctrine of the Imputation of Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt; we ſhall wind up the whole in a General Exhortation, and I have done.

The General USE.

AND now, to cloſe up all, let me perſuade all thoſe for whom the dear Son of God came from the bleſſed boſom of the Father; aſſumed fleſh, brake by the ſtrength of his own Love, through all diſcouragements and impediments, laid down his own life a ranſom for their Souls; for whom he lived, died, roſe, aſcended, and lives for ever in Heaven to intercede; to live wholly to Chriſt, as Chriſt lived, and died wholly for them.

The general Uſe of the whole, preſſing to Holineſs, which is the main ſcope of the Doctrine of Redemption

O Brethren, never was the Heathen World acquainted with ſuch arguments to deter them from Sin, never acquainted with ſuch Motives to urge them to Holineſs, as I ſhall this Day acquaint you with. My requeſt is, to give up both your hearts and lives to glorifie the Father, Son and Spirit, whoſe you are, by the holineſs and heavenlineſs of them. Other things are expected from you, than from other Men. See that you turn not all this Grace that hath ſounded in your Ears, into wantonneſs. Think not becauſe Chriſt hath done ſo much for you, you may ſit ſtill; much leſs indulge your ſelves in ſin, becauſe Chriſt hath offered up ſuch an excellent ſacrifice for the expiation of it. No, no, though Chriſt came to be a Curſe, he did not come to be a Cloak for your Sins. If one died for all, then were all dead; that they that live, ſhould not henceforth live to themſelves; but to him that died for them, 2 Cor. 5. 15. O keep your lives pure and clean. Don't make freſh work for the blood of Chriſt every day. If you live in the Spirit, ſee that you walk in the Spirit, Gal. 5. 25. That is (ſaith Cornelius a Lapide very ſolidly) Let us ſhape and order our lives and actions according to the dictates, inſtinct and impulſes of the Spirit, and of that grace of the Spirit put within us, and planted in our Hearts, which tendeth to practical Holineſs. O let the Grace which is in your hearts, iſſue out into all your religious, civil and natural Actions. Let the Faith that is in your hearts appear in your Prayers; the Obedience of your Hearts in hearing; the Meekneſs of your hearts in ſuffering; the Mercifulneſs of your hearts in diſtributing; the Truth and Righteouſneſs of your hearts, in trading; the Sobriety and Temperance of your hearts in eating and drinking. Theſe be the Fruits of Chriſt's Sufferings indeed, and they are ſweet Fruits. Let Grace refine, enoble and elevate all your Actions; that you may ſay, truly our Converſation is in Heaven. Let Grace have the ordering of your Tongues, and of your Hands; the moulding of your whole Converſation. Let not Humility appear in ſome Actions, and Pride in others. Holy ſerioüſneſs in ſome companies, and vain frothineſs in others. Suffer not the fountain of Corruption to mingle with, or polute the ſtreams of Grace. Write as exactly as you can after your Copy Chriſt. O let there not be (as one ſays) here a Line, and there a Blank; here a Word and there a Blot. One word of God, and two of the World. Now a ſpiritual Rapture, and then a fleſhly Frolick. This Day a fair ſtride to Heaven, and to Morrow a ſlide back again towards Hell. But be you in the fear of the Lord all the day long. Let there be a due proportion betwixt all the parts of your converſation. Approve your ſelves the Servants of Chriſt in all things. By pureneſs, by knowledge, by long-ſuffering, by the Holy Ghoſt, by love unfeigned, by the word of Truth, by the power of God, by the armour of righteouſneſs, on the right hand, and on the left, 2 Cor. 6. 6. See then how accurately you walk. —— Cut off occaſion from them that deſire occaſion; and in well-doing commit your ſelves to God, and commend Religion to the World. That this is your great concernment and duty, I ſhall evidence to your Conſciences, by theſe following Conſiderations. That of all Perſons in the world the redeemed of the Lord, are moſt obliged to be holy; moſt aſſiſted for a life of Holineſs; and that God intends to make great Uſe of their Lives, both for the conviction and converſion of others.

Secundum dictamen inſtinctum, impulſum ſpiritus eo gratiæ immiſſæ, et inditæ nobis a ſpiritu ſancto.

R. A. Vindiciæ Pietatis.

Conſid. Firſt, God hath moſt obliged them to live pure and ſtrict Lives. I know the Command obliges all Men to it, even thoſe that caſt away the Cords of the Commands, and break Chriſt's Bonds aſunder, are yet bound by them; and cannot plead a diſpenſation to live as they do. Yea, and it is not unuſual for them to feel the Obligations of the Command upon their Conſciences, even when their impetuous Luſts hurry them on to the Violation of them; but there are ſpecial Ties upon your Souls, that oblige you to holineſs more than others. Many ſpecial and peculiar Engagements you are under. Firſt, from God. Secondly, from your ſelves. Thirdly, from your Brethren. Fourthly, from your Enemies.

Firſt, God hath peculiarly oblig'd you to purity and ſtrictneſs of Life. Yea, every Perſon in the bleſſed Trinity hath caſt his Cord over your Souls, to bind up your Hearts and Lives to the moſt ſtrict and preciſe Obedience of his Commands. The Father hath obliged you, and that not only by the common Tie of Creation, which is yet of great Efficacy in it ſelf; for is it reaſonable, that God ſhould create and form ſo excellent a piece, and that it ſhould be employed againſt him? That he ſhould plant the Tree, and another eat the Fruit of it? But beſides this common Engagement, he hath obliged you to holineſs of Life.

Firſt, By his wiſe and merciful Deſigns and Counſels for your Recovery and Salvation by Jeſus Chriſt. It was he that laid the corner Stone of your Salvation with his own Hands. The firſt Motion ſprang out of his Breaſt. If God had not deſigned the Redeemer for you, the World had never ſeen him; he had never left that ſweet Boſom for you. It was the Act of the Father to give you to the Son to be redeemed, and then to give the Son to be a Redeemer to you. Both of them ſtupendious and aſtoniſhing acts of Grace. And in both God acted as a moſt free Agent. When he gave you to Chriſt before the beginning of time, there was nothing out of himſelf that could in the leaſt move him to it. When the Father, Son, and Spirit (as I may ſay) at the Counſel Table, contriving and laying the deſign for the ſalvation of a few out of many of Adam's degenerate Off-ſpring, there was none came before them to ſpeak one word for thee; but ſuch was the divine pleaſure to inſert thy name in that Catalogue of the ſaved. Oh how much oweſt thou to the Lord for this! and what an engagement doth it leave upon thy Soul to obey, pleaſe, and glorifie him?

Secondly, By his bountiful remunerations of your obedience, which have been wonderful. What ſervice didſt thou ever perform for him, for which he hath not paid thee a thouſand times more than it was worth? Diſt thou ever ſeek him diligently, and not find him a bountiful rewarder; none ſeek him in vain, unleſs ſuch only as ſeek him vainly, Heb. 11. 6. Didſt thou ever give a cup of cold Water in the name of a Diſciple, and not receive a Diſciples reward? Matth. 10. 42. Haſt thou not found inward peace and comfort flowing into thy Soul, upon every piece of ſincere Obedience? Oh what a good Maſter do Saints ſerve? You that are remiſs and unconſtant in your Obedience, you that are heartleſs and cold in Duties; hear how your God expoſtulates with you, Jer. 2. 31. Have I been a Wilderneſs to Iſrael, or a Land of Darkneſs, q. d. have have I been a hard Maſter to you? Have you any reaſon to complain of me? To whomſoever I have been ſtraight-handed, ſurely I have not been ſo to you. Are the Fruits of Sin like the Fruits of Obedience? Do you know where to find a better Maſter? Why then are you ſo ſhuffling and unconſtant, ſo ſluggiſh and remiſs in my Work? Surely God is not behind-hand with any of you. May you not ſay with David, Pſal. 119. 56. This I had becauſe I kept thy precepts. There are fruits in holineſs, even preſent fruit. It is a high favour to be imployed for God. Reward enough that he will accept any thing thou doſt. But to return every Duty thou preſenteſt to him with ſuch comforts, ſuch quicknings, ſuch inward and outward bleſſings into thy Boſom, ſo that thou mayeſt open the Treaſury of thine own Experiences, view the Varieties of Encouragements and Love-tokens at ſeveral times received in Duties; and ſay, this I had, and that I had, by waiting on God, and ſerving him. Oh what an engagement is this upon thee to be ever abounding in the work of the Lord! Though thou muſt not work for Wages, yet God will not let thy work go unrewarded. For He is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of Love.

Thirdly, Your Father hath further obliged you to this holineſs and purity of Life, by ſignifying to you (as he hath frequently done) the great delight and pleaſure he hath therein. He hath told you, that ſuch as are upright in the way are his delight, Prov. 11. 20. That he would not have you forget to do good, and to communicate, for with ſuch ſacrifices he is well pleaſed, Heb. 13. 16. You know you cannot walk worthy of the Lord to all pleaſing, except ye be fruitful in every good word and work, Col. 1. 10. And oh what a Bond is this upon you to live holy Lives! Can you pleaſe your ſelves in diſpleaſing your Father? if you have the Hearts of Children in you, ſure you cannot. O you cannot grieve his Spirit by looſe and careleſs walking, but you muſt grieve your own Spirits too. How many times hath God pleaſed you, gratified and contented you, and will not you pleaſe and content him? This Mercy you have asked of him, and he gave it, that Mercy and you were not denied; in many things the Lord hath wonderfully condeſcended to pleaſe you, and now there is but one thing that he deſires of you and that moſt reaſonable, yea, beneficial for you, as well as pleaſing to him, 1 Phil. 27. Only let your converſation be as becometh the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt. This is the one thing, the great and main thing he expects from you in this World, and will not you do it? Can you expect he ſhould gratifie your deſires, when you make no more of grieving and diſpleaſing him? Well, if you know what will pleaſe God, and yet reſolve not to do it, but will rather pleaſe your Fleſh, and gratifie the Devil, than him; pray pull off your Vizards, fall into your own rank among Hypocrites; and appear as indeed you are.

Fourthly, The Father hath further obliged you to ſtrictneſs and purity of converſation, by his gracious promiſes made to ſuch as ſo walk. He hath promiſed to do great things for you, if you will but do this one thing for him. If you will order your converſation aright, Pſal. 50. ult. He will be your Sun and Shield, if you walk before him and be upright, Gen. 15. 1. He will give grace and glory, and no good thing will be with-hold from him that walketh uprightly, Pſal. 84. 11. And he promiſes no more to you than he hath made good to others, that have thus walked, and ſtands ready to perform to you alſo. If you look to enjoy the good of the promiſe, you are obliged by all your Expectations, and hopes to order your lives purely and uprightly. This hope will ſet you on work to purge your lives as well as your Hearts from all pollutions, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having theſe Promiſes, let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God.

Fifthly, Yea, He hath yet more obliged you to ſtrict and holy lives by his confidence in you, that you will thus walk, and pleaſe him. He expreſſeth himſelf in Scripture as one that dare truſt you with his Glory, knowing that you will be tender of it, and dare do no otherwiſe. If but a Man repoſe confidence in you and truſt you with his concerns, it greatly obliges you to be faithful. What an engagement was that upon Abraham to walk uprightly, when God ſaid of him, Gen. 18. 19. I know him, that he will command his Children, and his houſehold after him and they ſhall keep the way of the Lord, q. d. as for this wicked generation, whom I will ſpeedily conſume in my wrath, I know they regard not my Laws, they will trample my Commands under their feet, they care not how they provoke me, but I expect other things from Abraham, and I am confident he will not fail me. I know him, he is a man of another ſpirit, and what I promiſe my ſelf from him, he will make good. And to the like purpoſe is that in Iſa. 36. 78. I will mention the loving kindneſs of the Lord, and the praiſes of the Lord; according to all that the Lord hath beſtowed on us, and the great goodneſs towards the houſe of Iſrael, which he hath beſtowed on them; according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving kindneſſes. For he ſaid, ſurely they are my people, Children that will not lie, (or fail me) ſo he was their Saviour. Here you have an ample account of the endearing mercies of God to that People, ver. 7. and the Lords confident expectations of ſuitable returns from them, ver. 8. I ſaid (i. e.) (ſpeaking after the manner of Men in like caſes) I made full account that after all theſe endearments, and favours beſtowed upon them, they would not offer to be diſloyal and falſe to me. I have made them ſure enough to my ſelf, by ſo many bonds of Love. Like to which is that expreſſion, Zeph. 3. 7. I ſaid ſurely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive inſtruction. Oh how great are the expectations of God from ſuch as you! I know Abraham, there's no doubt of him. And again, they are Children that will not lie, (i. e.) they will not fallere fidem datam, Break their Covenant with me. Or they are my People that will not ſhrink, as Mr. Cowerdale well tranſlates, filii non negantes, ſuch as will keep touch with me, and will anſwer their Covenant-engagements And again, ſurely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive inſtruction. And ſhall not all this engage you to God? What! neither the antient and bountiful love of God, in contriving your Redemption from eternity, nor the bounty of God in rewarding all and every piece of Service you have done for him. Nor yet the pleaſure he takes in your obedience and upright walking. Nor the incouraging promiſes he hath made thereto, nor yet his confident expectations of ſuch a life from you whom he hath ſo many ways obliged and endeared to himſelf? Will you forget your ancient Friend, Contemn his rewards, take no delight or care to pleaſe him? Slight his promiſes, and deceive and fail his expectations? Be aſtoniſhed, O ye Heavens, at this! and be horribly afraid. Conſider how God the Father hath faſtned this five fold cord upon your Souls, and ſhew your ſelves Chriſtians; yea, to uſe the Prophet's words, Iſa. 46. 8. Remember this, and ſhew your ſelves Men.

Obligations from the Son.

Secondly, You are yet farther engaged to this preciſe and holy life by what the Son hath done for you, is not this pure and holy life the very aim, and next end of his death? Did he not ſhed his blood to redeem you from your vain converſations? 1 Pet. 1. 18. Was not this the deſign of all his ſufferings? That being delivered out of the hands of your enemies, you might ſerve him in righteouſneſs and holineſs all the daies of your life, Luke 1. 74, 75. And is not the Apoſtle's inference, 2 Cor. 5. 14. highly reaſonable? If one died for all, then were all dead, and that he died for all, that they which live, ſhould not henceforth live to themſelves, but to him that dyed for them. Did Chriſt only buy your perſons, and not your ſervices alſo? No, no, whoever hath thy time, thy ſtrength, or any part of either; I can aſſure thee, Chriſtian, that Chriſt hath paid for it, and thou giveſt away what is none of thine own to give. Every moment of thy time is his. Every Talent, whether of Grace or nature, is his. And doſt thou defraud him him of his own? O how liberal are you of your precious words and hours, as if Chriſt had never made a purchaſe of them! O think of this when thy life runs muddy and foul. When the fountain of corruption flows out at thy tongue, in idle frothy diſcourſes; or at at thy hand, in ſinful unwarrantable actions; Doth this become the redeemed of the Lord? Did Chriſt come from the boſom of his Father for this? Did he groan ſwet, bleed, endure the Croſs, and lay down his life for this? Was he ſo pleaſed with all his ſorrows, and ſufferings, his pangs and agonies upon the account of that ſatisfaction he ſhould have in ſeeing the travail of his Soul? Iſa. 53. 11. as if he had ſaid, Welcome, death, welcome Agonies, welcome the bitter cup, and heavy burthen; I chearfully ſubmit to all this. Theſe are travailing pangs indeed, but I ſhall ſee a beautiful birth at laſt. Theſe throws and agonies, ſhall bring forth many lovely children to God, I ſhall have joy in them, and glory from them to all eternity. This blood of mine theſe ſufferings of mine, ſhall purchaſe to me, the Perſons, duties, ſervices and obedience of many thouſands that will love me, and honour me, ſerve me, and obey me with their Souls and Bodies which are mine. And doth not this engage you to look to your Lives, and keep them pure? Is not every one of Chriſt's wounds, a mouth open to plead for more holineſs, more ſervice, and more fruit from you? Oh what will engage you if this will not? But,

Engagements from the Spirit.

Thirdly, This is not all; as a Man when he weigheth a thing, caſteth in weight after weight, till the ſcales are counterpoiſed: So doth God caſt in engagement after engagement, and argument upon argument, till thy heart (Chriſtian) be weighed up, and won to this heavenly life. And therefore as Elihu ſaid to Job, Cap. 36. 22. Suffer me a little, and I will ſhew thee what I have yet to ſpeak on God's behalf. Some Arguments have already been urged on the behalf of the Father and Son for purity, and cleanneſs of life; and next I have ſomething to plead on the behalf, of the Spirit. I plead now on his behalf, who hath ſo many times helped you to plead for your ſelves with God. He that hath ſo often refreſhed, quickned and comforted you, he will be quenched, grieved, and diſpleaſed, by an impure, looſe, and careleſs converſation; and what will you do then? who ſhall comfort you, when the comforter is departed from you? When he that ſhould relieve your Souls, is far off? O grieve not the holy Spirit of God, by which you are ſealed, to the day of Redemption, Eph. 4. 30. There is nothing grieves him more than impure practices; for he is a Holy Spirit. And look as Water damps and quenches the Fire, ſo doth Sin quench the Spirit, 1 Theſ. 5. 19. Will you quench the warm affections and burning deſires which he hath kindled in your boſoms? If you do, 'tis a queſtion whether ever you may recover them again to your dying day. The Spirit hath a delicate Senſe. It is the moſt tender thing in the whole world. He feels the leaſt touch of ſin, and is grieved when thy corruptions within are ſtirred by temptations, and break out to the defiling of thy Life; then is the holy Spirit of God, as it were, made ſad, and heavy within thee. As that word μὴ λυπεῖτε, Eph. 4. 30. may be rendred. For thereby thou reſiſteſt his motions, whereby in the way of a loving conſtraint, he would lead and guide thee in the way of thy duty; yea, thou not only reſiſteſt his Motions, but croſſeſt his grand deſign, which is to purge and ſanctifie thee wholly and build thee up more and more to the perfection of holineſs. And when thou thus forſakeſt his conduct, and croſſeſt his deſign in thy Soul, then doth he uſually withdraw, as a Man that is grieved by the unkindneſs of his Friend. He draws in the beams of his evidencing and quickning Grace. Packs up all his divine Cordials and ſaith, as 'twere, to his unkind and diſingenuous Soul,

This is the fruit of careleſs and looſe walking. To this ſad iſſue it will bring thee at laſt, & when it is come to this, thou ſhalt go to Ordinances, and Duties, and find no good in them; no life quickning comfort there. When thy heart which was wont to be enlarged, and flowing, ſhall be clung up and dry; when thou ſhalt kneel down before the Lord, and cry as Eliſha when with the mantle of Elijah, he ſmote the Water. Where is the Lord God of Elijah? So thou, where is the God of Prayer? where is the God of Duties? But there is no anſwer: When like Sampſon, thou ſhalt go forth and ſhake thy ſelf as at other times; but thy ſtrength is gone; then tell me, what thou haſt done in reſiſting, quenching, and grieving the holy Spirit of God by impure and offenſive practices? And thus you ſee what engagements lie upon you from the Spirit alſo, to walk uprightly and keep the iſſues of life pure. I could willingly have enlarged my ſelf upon this laſt branch, but that I find a judicious hand hath lately improved this Argument; to which I ſhall refer the Reader. Thus God hath obliged you to circumſpect and holy lives.

Mr. Polewheel's Treatiſe of quenching the Spirit.

Secondly, You are under great engagements to keep your lives pure, even from your ſelves, as well as from your God. As God hath bound you to purity of converſation, ſo you have bound your ſelves. And there are ſeveral things in you, and done by you, which wonderfully increaſe, and ſtrengthen your Obligations to practical holineſs.

Firſt, Your clearer illumination is a ſtrong bond upon your ſouls, Eph. 5. 8. Ye were ſometimes darkneſs, but now ye are light in the Lord; walk as Children of the light. You cannot pretend, or plead ignorance of your duty. You ſtand convinced in your own Conſciences before God, that this is your unqueſtionable Duty. Chriſtians, will you not all yield to this? I know you readily yield it. We live indeed in a contentious diſputing Age. In other things our opinions are different. One Chriſtian is of this Judgment, another of that; but doth he deſerve the name of a Chriſtian that dare once queſtion this Truth? In this we all meet and cloſe in oneneſs of mind and judgment, that it is our indiſputable Duty, to live pure, ſtrict, and clean lives. The grace of God which hath appeared to you, hath taught you this truth clearly and convincingly, Tit. 2. 11, 12. You have received how you ought to walk, and to pleaſe God, 1 Theſ. 4. 1. Well then, this being yielded, the inference is plain and undeniable; that you cannot walk as others, in the vanity of their mind; but you muſt offer violence to your own light.

You cannot ſuffer the Corruptions of your Hearts to break forth into Practice, but you muſt ſlight, and put by the notices and rebukes of your own Conſciences, James 4. 17. He that knoweth to do good, and doth it not; to him it is ſin. Yea ſin with a Witneſs. Aggravated ſin. Sin of a deeper Tincture than that of the ignorant Heathens. Sin that ſadly waſtes and violates Conſcience. Certainly whoever hath, you have no Cloak for your Sin. Light and Luſt ſtruggling together, great Light and ſtrong Luſts: Theſe make the Soul a troubled Sea that cannot reſt. O but when maſterleſs Luſts over-bear Conſcience, this impreſſes horror upon the Soul. This brake David's Heart, Pſal. 51. 6. Thou haſt put knowledge in my inner parts, q. d. Ah, Lord! I went againſt the rebukes of Conſcience, to the Commiſſion of this Sin. I had a watchful Light ſet up with me. I knew it was Sin. My light endeavoured lovingly to reſtrain me, and I thruſt it aſide. Beſides, what pleaſure in Sin can you have? Indeed ſuch as for want of Light know not what they do, or ſuch whoſe Conſciences are ſeared and paſt feeling; they may ſeek a little Pleaſure (ſuch as it is) out of Sin; but what content or pleaſure can you have, ſo long as your Light is ever breaking in upon you, and ſmiting you for what you do? This greatly encreaſes your Obligation to a preciſe holy Life. Again,

Secondly, You are profeſſors of holineſs. You have given in your Names to Chriſt, to be his Diſciples; and by this your Engagement to a life of holineſs are yet further ſtrengthened, 2 Tim. 2. 19. Let every one that nameth the name of Chriſt, depart from iniquity. The name of Chriſt is called upon you, and it's a worthy name, James 2. 7. It's called upon you, as the name of the Husband, is called upon his Wife, Iſa. 4. 1. Let thy name be called upon us. Or as the name of a Father is called upon his Child, Gen. 48. 16. Let thy name be called on them, and the name of my Fathers. Well then, you bear the name of Chriſt as his Spouſes or Children; and will you not live ſuitably to your name? Every place and relation, every title of honour and dignity hath its decorum, and becomingneſs. O how will that worthy name of Chriſt be blaſphemed through you, if you adorn it not with becoming deportments? Better you had never profeſt any thing, than to ſet your ſelves by your Profeſſion in the Eye and Obſervation of the World; and then to pour contempt on Jeſus Chriſt, by your ſcandalous Converſations, before the Chams of the World; who will laugh at it. I remember it was a Memento given to one of his Name by Alexander, Recordare nominis Alexandri. Remember (ſaid he) thy Name Alexander, and do nothing unworthy of that Name. O that's a heavy charge, Rom. 2. 24. Through you is the name of God blaſphemed among the Heathens. Unhappy Man, that ever thou ſhouldeſt be a reproach to Chriſt! The herd of wicked Men, they are ignota capita; Men of no note, or obſervation. They may may Sin, and Sin again; drink, ſwear, and tumble in all uncleanneſs; and it paſſes away ſilently; the World takes little notice of it. Their wicked Actions make but little noiſe in the World; but the miſcarriages of Profeſſors are like a Blazing Comet, or an Eclipſed Sun, which all Men gaze at, and make their obſervations upon; Oh then, what manner of Perſons ought you to be, who bear the worthy Name of Chriſt upon you!

Thirdly, But more than this, You have obliged your ſelves to this life of holineſs by your own Prayers. How many times have you lifted up your Hands to Heaven, and cried with David, Pſal. 119. 5. O that my ways were directed to keep thy Statutes. Order my ſteps in thy Word, and let no iniquity have dominion over me, ver. 133. Were you in earneſt with God, when you thus prayed? Did you mean as you ſaid? Or did you only complement with God? If your Hearts and Tongues agreed in this requeſt, doubtleſs it's as much your Duty to endeavour, as to deſire thoſe Mercies; and if not, yet do all thoſe Prayers ſtand on record before the Lord, and will be produced againſt you as witneſſes to condemn you, for your hypocriſie and vanity. How often alſo have you in your Prayers lamented and bewailed your careleſs and uneven walkings? You have ſaid with Ezra, chap. 9. 6. O my God, I am aſhamed, and even bluſh to look up unto thee. And do not your Confeſſions oblige you to greater circumſpection and care for time to come? Will you confeſs, and Sin? And Sin, and confeſs? Go to God and bewail your Evils, and when you have bewailed them, return again to the commiſſion of them? God forbid, you ſhould thus diſſemble with God, play with Sin, and dye your iniquities with a deeper Tincture.

Fourthly, And laſtly, to add no more, you have often reproved or cenſured others for their miſcarriages and falls, which adds to your own obligation, to walk accurately and evenly. Have you not often reproved your erring Brethren? or at leaſt privately cenſured them, if not duly reproved them, (for to theſe left-handed blows of ſecret cenſurings, we are more apt than to the fair and open ſtrokes of juſt and due reproofs) and will you practiſe the ſame things, you criminate and cenſure others for? Thou that teacheſt another (ſaith the Apoſtle) teacheſt thou not thy ſelf? Rom. 2. 21. So ſay I, thou that cenſureſt or rebukeſt another, condemneſt thou not thy ſelf? Will your rebukes ever do good to others, whilſt you allow in your ſelves what you condemn in them? And as theſe reproofs and cenſures can do them no good, ſo they do you much evil, by reaſon of them you are αὐτοκατάκριτοι ſelf-condemned Perſons; and out of your own Mouths God will judge you. For you need no other Witneſs, than your ſelves in this caſe. Your own Tongues will fall upon you. Your cenſures and reproofs of others, will leave you without Plea, or Apology, if you look not to your lives with greater care. And yet will you be careleſs ſtill? Fear you not the diſpleaſure of God? nor the wounding and diſquieting your own Conſciences? Surely theſe things are of no light value with you, if you be Chriſtians indeed.

Thirdly, You are yet further engaged to practical holineſs upon the account of your Brethren, who are not a little concerned, and intereſted therein. For if through the neglect of your hearts, your lives be defiled and polluted, this will be thrown in their Faces, and many innocent and upright ones, both reproached and grieved upon your Account. This miſchievous effect holy David earneſtly deprecated, Pſal. 69. 5, 6. O God thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs, and my ſins are not hid from thee; let not them that wait on thee, O Lord God of Hoſts, be aſhamed for my ſake. Let not them that ſeek thee, be confounded for my ſake, O God of Iſrael, q. d. Lord thou knoweſt what a weak and fooliſh Creature I am. And how apt to miſcarry, if left to my ſelf, and ſhould I through my fooliſhneſs, act unbecoming a Saint; how would this ſhame the Faces, and ſad the Hearts of thy People! They will be as Men confounded at the report of my fall. The fall of one Chriſtian, is matter of trouble and ſhame to all the reſt. And when they ſhall hear the ſad and unwelcome News of your ſcandalous Miſcarriages, (which will certainly be the effect of a neglected Heart and Life) they will ſay as David concerning Saul & Jonathan. Tell it not in Gath, publiſh it not in the ſtreets of Askelon, &c. Or as Tamar concerning Amnon, And we, whither ſhall we cauſe our ſhame to go? And for them, they ſhall be as Fools in Iſrael. Thy looſe and careleſs life will cauſe them to eſtrange themſelves from thee, and look ſhy upon thee, as being aſhamed to own thee, and canſt thou bear that? Will it not grieve and pierce your very hearts to ſee a cloud of ſtrangeneſs and trouble over the countenances of your Brethren? To ſee your ſelves diſowned and lightly eſteemed by them? This very conſideration ſtruck a great Favourite in the Perſian Court to the very Heart. *'Twas Uſtazanes, who had been Governour to Sapores in his Minority. And this Man for fear, denied the Chriſtian Faith; and complied with the Idolatrous Worſhip of the King. And one Day (ſaith the Hiſtorian) ſitting at the Court-Gate, he ſaw Simon the aged Arch-Biſhop of Silucia, drawing along to Priſon, for his conſtancy in the Chriſtian Faith, and though he durſt not openly own the Chriſtian Faith he had baſely denied, and confeſs himſelf a Chriſtian; yet he could not chuſe but riſe, and expreſs his reverence to this holy Man, in a reſpective and honourable Salutation; but the zealous good Man frowned upon him, and turned away his Face from him; as thinking ſuch an Apoſtate unworthy of the leaſt reſpect from him; this preſently ſtruck Uſtazanes to the Heart, and drew from him many Tears, and Groans; and thus he reaſoned with himſelf, Simon will not own me, and can I think but that God will diſclaim me, when I appear before his Tribunal? Simon will not ſpeak unto me, will not ſo much as look upon me, and can I look for ſo much as a good word or look from Jeſus Chriſt, whom I have ſo ſhamefully betrayed, and denyed? Hereupon he threw off his rich courtly Robes, and put on mourning Apparel, and profeſſed himſelf a Chriſtian; and dyed a Martyr. O 'tis a piercing thing to an honeſt Heart, to be caſt out of the favour of God's People. If you walk looſly, neither God nor his People will look kindly upon you.

Fourthly, And laſtly, Your very enemies engage you to this pure and holy life upon a double ground. You are obliged by them two ways, viz. as they are your bold Cenſurers, and your watchful Obſervers. They cenſure you as Hypocrites, and will you give them them ground and matter for ſuch a charge? They ſay only your Tongues are more holy than other Mens, and ſhall they prove it from your Practice? They alſo obſerve you diligently. Lie at catch, and are highly gratified by your miſcarriages. If your Lives be looſe and defiled, you will not only be a ſhame to your Friends, but the Song of your Enemies. You will make mirth in Hell; and gratifie all the Enemies of God. This is that they watch for. They are curious obſervers of your goings. And that which makes them Triumph at your Falls and Miſcarriages, is not only that deep rooted Enmity betwixt the two Seeds, but becauſe all your Miſcarriages and Evils are ſo many abſolutions to their Conſciences, and juſtifications (as they think) of their Ways and Practices. For look as your ſtrictneſs and holineſs doth as it were caſt, and condemn them, as Noah, Heb. 11. 7. by his Practice, condemned the World, their Conſciences flie in their Faces, when they ſee your holy and pure Converſations. It lays a damp upon them. It works upon their Conſciences, and cauſes many ſmart Reflections. So when you Fall, you as it were, abſolve their Conſciences, looſe the Bonds of Conviction you had made faſt upon them, and now there's matter of joy put before them.

Oh, ſay they, what ever theſe Men talk; we ſee they are no better than we. They can do as we do. They can Cozen and Cheat for Advantage. They can comply with any thing for their own Ends; 'tis not Conſcience, as we once thought, but meer Stomach and Humour that made them ſo preciſe. And oh, what a ſad thing is this! Hereby you ſhed Soul-blood. You faſten the Bonds of Death upon their Souls. You kill thoſe Convictions, which for any thing you know might have made way to their Converſion. When you fall, you may riſe again; but they may fall at your Example, and never riſe more. Never have a good Opinion of the Ways of God, or of his People any more. Upon this conſideration, David begs of God, Pſal. 5. 8. Lead me, O Lord, in thy Righteouſneſs, becauſe of my Enemies; (or as the Hebrew) my Obſervers, make thy way ſtraight before my Face. And thus you ſee how your very Enemies oblige you to this holy and pure Converſation alſo.

Now put all this together, and ſee to what theſe particulars will amount. You have heard how God the Father hath engaged you to this Converſation-purity, by his deſignment of your Salvation. Rewarding your Obedience. His Pleaſure in it. His Promiſes to it. And his great Confidence in you, that you will thus walk before him. The Lord Jeſus hath alſo engaged you thereunto, by his death and ſufferings, whereby you were redeemed from your vain Converſations. The Spirit hath engaged you by telling you plainly how much you will grieve and wrong him, reſiſt and quench him, if you do not keep your ſelves pure. Yea, you are obliged further by your ſelves, your clear Illumination, your high Profeſſion, your many Prayers and Confeſſions, your many cenſures and reprehenſions of others, do all ſtrengthen your obligation to holineſs. Yea, you are obliged further to this holy life, by the ſhame, grief, and trouble your looſe walking will bring upon your Friends. And the mirth it will make for, and miſchief it will do to your Enemies. Who will fall and break their Necks, where it may be you only ſtumbled and brake your Shins. Who are juſtified, and abſolved (as before you heard) by your miſcarriages. And now what think you of all this? Are you obliged or not, to this purity of life? Are all theſe Bonds tied with ſuch ſlip Knots that you can get looſe, and free your ſelves at pleaſure from them? If all theſe things are of no force with you, if none of theſe Bonds can hold you; may it not be queſtioned (notwithſtanding your Profeſſion) whether any ſpiritual Principle, any fear of God, or love to Chriſt, be in your Souls or no? O you could not play faſt and looſe with God; if ſo, you could not as Sampſon, ſnap theſe Bonds aſunder at your Pleaſure.

* Zozomen. lib. 2. cap. 8.

Conſid. 2. Secondly, As you are more obliged to keep the iſſues of life pure than others are, ſo God hath given you greater Aſſiſtances and Advantages for it, than others have. God hath not been wanting to any in helps and means. Even the Heathen who are without the Goſpel, will yet be ſpeechleſs and inexcuſable before God: But how much more will you be ſo! Who beſides the light of Nature, and the general light of the Goſpel, have Firſt, ſuch a Principle put within you. Secondly, ſuch Patterns ſet before you. Thirdly, ſuch an Aſſiſtant ready to help you. Fourthly, ſo many Rods at your Backs to quicken you; and prevent your wandering. If notwithſtanding all theſe helps, your life be ſtill unholy.

Firſt, Shall Men of ſuch Principles walk as others do? Shall we lament for you, as David once did for Saul, ſaying, there the ſhield of the mighty was vilely caſt away, the ſhield of Saul; as though he had not been anointed with oil. There the honour of a Chriſtian was vilely caſt away, as though he had not been anointed with the Spirit? You have received an unction from the holy one, which teacheh you all things, 1 John 2. 20. Another Spirit, far above that which is in other Men, 1 Cor. 2. 12. And as this Spirit which is in you, is fitted for this life of holineſs, (for ye are his workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus to good works Epheſ. 2. 10.) So this holy Spirit, or principle infuſed into your Souls, hath ſuch a natural tendency to this holy Life; that if you live not purely and ſtrictly, you muſt offer Violence to your own Principles, and new Nature. A twofold help this Principle affords you for a life of holineſs.

(1.) Firſt, It pulls you back from Sin, as in Joſeph; How can I do this great wickedneſs and ſin againſt God! And it alſo inclines you powerfully to Obedience. 'Tis a curb to Sin, and a ſpur to Holineſs. It is unpoſſible for all others to live ſpiritually and heavenly, becauſe they have no new Nature to incline them thereunto. And methinks it ſhould be hard for you to live carnally, and ſenſually; and therein croſs the very bent and tendency of the new Creature, which is formed in you. How can you neglect Prayer as others do, whilſt the Spirit by divine Pulſations is awaking and rouſing up your ſluggiſh Hearts with ſuch inward Motions; and whiſpers as that, Pſal. 27. 8. Seek my face. Yea, whilſt you feel (during your omiſſions of Duty) ſomething within that bemoans it ſelf, and as it were, cries for Food, Pains and Gripes you, like an empty Stomach. and will not let you be quiet till it be relieved. How can you let out your Hearts to the World as other Men do; when all that while your Spirit is reſtleſs, and akes like a Bone out of Joint. And you can never be at eaſe till you come back to God, and ſay, as Pſal. 116. Return to thy reſt, O my Soul. Is it not hard, yea, naturally impoſſible to fix a Stone, and make it abide in the fluid Air? Doth not every Creature in a reſtleſs Motion tend to its proper Center, and deſire its own Perfection? So doth this new Creature alſo. You ſee how the Rivers in their courſe will not be checkt, but bear down all Obſtacles in their way, & Sævior ab obice ibit. A ſtop doth but make them rage the more, and run the ſwifter afterwards.

There is a Central force in theſe natural Motions, which cannot be ſtopt. And the like may you obſerve in the motions of a renewed Soul, John 4. 14. It ſhall be in him as a Well of Water ſpringing up. And is it not hard for you to keep it down, or turn its courſe? How hard did Jeremy and David find that work? If you do not live holy Lives, you muſt croſs your own new Nature, and violate the Law that's written in your own Hearts, and engraven upon your own Bowels. To this purpoſe a late Writer ſpeaks; Till you were converted (ſaith he) the Fleſh was predominant, and therefore it was impoſſible for you to live any other than a fleſhy Life; for every thing will act according to its predominant Principle. Should you not therefore live a ſpiritual Life? Should not the Law of God written in your Hearts, be legible in your Lives? O ſhould not your Lives be according to the tendency of your Hearts? Thus he: Doubtleſs this is no ſmall Advantage to practical Holineſs. But,

Mr. T. Malls Exhor. to holy living.

Secondly, Beſides this Principle within, you have no ſmall Aſſiſtance for the purity of Life by theſe excellent Patterns before you. The Path of Holineſs is no untrodden Path to you. Chriſt and his Servants have beaten it before you. The life of Chriſt is your Copy, and it is a fair Copy indeed, without a blot. Oh what an Advantage is this to draw all the Lines of your Actions according to his Example! This glorious grand Example is often preſt upon you for imitation, Heb. 12. 2. Looking to Jeſus, he hath left you an example that ye ſhould tread in his ſteps, 1 Pet. 2. 21. His Life is a living Rule to his People, and beſides Chriſt's Example (for you may ſay, who can live as Chriſt did? His Example is quite above us) you have a cloud of Witneſſes. A cloud for its directive Uſe, and theſe Men of like Paſſions, Temptations, and Conſtitutions with you; who have gone before you in exemplary Holineſs. The Holy Ghoſt (intending therein, your ſpecial help and advantage) hath ſet many induſtrious Pens a work to write the Lives of the Saints, and preſerve for your uſe their holy Sayings, and heavenly Actions. He bids you take them for an example, James 5. 10. Oh what excellent Men are paſt on before you! What renowned Worthies have led the way! Men whoſe Converſations were in Heaven, whilſt they Tabernacled on Earth. Whilſt this lower World had their Bodies, the World above had their Hearts, their Affections; their Actions, their Deſigns were all in Heaven. Men that improved Troubles, and Comforts; Loſſes, and Gains; Smiles, and Frowns; and all for Heaven. Men that did extract Heaven out of Spirituals, out of Temporals out of all things; their Hearts were full of heavenly Meditations, their Mouths of heavenly Communications; and their Practices of heavenly Inclinations: O what ſingular help is this! Where they followed Chriſt, and kept the way, they are propounded for your imitation; and where any of them turned aſide, you have a mark ſet upon that Action, for your caution and prevention. Doth any ſtrange or unuſual Tryal befall you, in which you are ready to ſay with the Church, Lam. 1. 12. Was there ever any ſorrow like unto my ſorrow? Here you may ſee the ſame affliction accompliſht in your brethren, 1*Pet.* 5. 9. Here's ſtore of good Company to encourage you. Doth the World and Devil endeavour to turn you from your Duty, by loading it with ſhameful Scoffs, or Sufferings? In this caſe you may look to Jeſus, who deſpiſed the ſhame; and to your Brethren, who counted it their honour to be diſhonoured for the name of Chriſt, as the Original of the Text, Acts 5. 41. may be tranſlated. Is it a diſhonour to thee to be rankt with Abraham, Moſes, David, and ſuch as were the Glory of they Ages the lived in? Art thou at any time under a faint fit of diſcouragement; and ready to deſpond under any burden? oh how maiſt thou be animated by ſuch examples when ſuch a qualm comes over thy heart? Some ſparks of their holy courage cannot chooſe but ſteal into thy breaſt, whilſt thou conſidereſt them. In them God hath ſet before thee the poſſibility of overcoming all difficulties, thou ſeeſt Men of the ſame mould, who had the ſame tryals, diſcouragements, and fears that now thou haſt, and yet overcame all. How is thy unbelief checkt when thou ſaiſt, Oh I ſhall never reach the end, I ſhall one day utterly periſh! Why doſt thou ſay ſo? Why may not ſuch a poor Creature as thou art, be carried through as well as they? Had not they the ſame temptations and corruptions with you? Were not they all troubled with a naughty heart, an enſnaring World, a buſie Devil as well as you? Alas! when they put on the divine, they did not put off the humane Nature; but complained, and feared as you do; and yet were carried through all.

ὅτι ὑπὲρ τȣ̃ ὀνόματος αὐτȣ̃ κατηξιώθησαν ἀτιμασθῆναι.

O what an advantage have you this way! They that firſt truſted in Chriſt, had not ſuch a help as you. You ſtand upon their Shoulders. You have the benefit of their Experiences. You that are fallen into the laſt times, have certainly the beſt helps to holineſs; and yet will not you live ſtrictly and purely? Will you put on the name and profeſſion of Chriſtians, and yet be lofty in your Spirits, early in the your deſigns; neglective of duty; frothy in your Communions? Pray, from which of all the Saints did you learn to be proud? Did you learn that from Chriſt, or any of his? From which of his Saints did you learn to be earthly and covetous, paſſionate or cenſorious, over-reaching and crafty? If you have read of any ſuch Evils committed by them, have you not alſo read of their ſhame and ſorrow, their repentance and reformations? If you have found any ſuch blots in their lives, it was left there deſignedly to prevent the like in yours. O what an help to holineſs is this!

Thirdly, And this is not all. You have not only a Principle within you, and a Pattern before you, but you have alſo an Omnipotent Aſſiſtant to help and encourage you throughout your way. Are you feeble and infirm? And is every Temptation, even the weakeſt, ſtrong enough to turn you out of the way of your Duty? Lo, God hath ſent his Spirit to help your infirmities, Rom. 8. 26. no matter then how weak you are, how many and mighty your difficulties and temptations are, as long as you have ſuch an Aſſiſtant to help you. Great is your advantage for a holy Life, this way alſo. For.

(1.) Firſt, When a temptation to ſin preſſes ſore upon you, he pleads with your Conſciences within, whilſt Satan is tempting without. How often hath he brought ſuch Scriptures to your remembrance, in the very nick of Opportunity, as have ſaved you out of the temptation? If you attend his Voice, you may hear ſuch a Voice within as that, Jer. 44. 4. O do not this abominable thing which I hate! What mighty ſtrivings were there in the Heart of Spira, as himſelf relates? He heard, as it were, a Voice within him, ſaying, Do not write Spira, do not write. To this purpoſe is that promiſe, Iſa. 30. 20, 21. Thines eyes ſhall behold thy Teachers, and thine ears ſhall hear a word behind thee, ſaying, This is the way, walk ye in it; when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left. Here you have a twofold help to holineſs, the outward teaching of the word, ver. 20. and the inward teachings of the Spirit, ver. 21. He ſhall ſay this is the way, when ye are turning aſide to the right hand or to the left. Alluding to a Shepherd (ſaith one) who driving his Sheep before him; whiſtles them in when he ſees them ready to ſtray.

(2) Secondly, When ye are walking holily and cloſely with God in your Duties, the Spirit encourages you to go on, by thoſe inward Comforts, Sealings, and joys you have from him at ſuch times. How often hath he entertained your Souls in publick Ordinances, in private Duties, with his hidden Manna, with Marrow and Fatneſs, with incomparable and unſpeakable Comforts, and all this to ſtrengthen you in your way, and encourage you to hold on?

(3.) Thirdly, When you are indiſpoſed for Duties, and find your Hearts empty and dry, he is ready to fill them, quicken and raiſe them; ſo that oftentimes the beginnings and end of your Prayers, Hearing, or Meditations are as vaſtly different, as if one Man had begun, and another ended the Duty. O then what aſſiſtances for a holy Life have you! Others indeed are bound to reſiſt Temptations as well as you; but alas! having no ſpecial aſſiſtance from the Spirit, what can they do? It may be they reaſon with the temptation a little while, and in their own ſtrength reſolve againſt it; but how eaſie a conqueſt doth Satan make, where no greater oppoſition is made to him, than this? Others are bound to hear, meditate, and pray as well as you; elſe the neglect of theſe duties would not be their ſin: But alas, what pitiful work do they make of it! Being left to the hardneſs and vanity of their own hearts; when you ſpread your Sails, you have a gale, but they lie wind-bound, heart-bound, and can do nothing Spiritually in a way of duty.

Fourthly, And laſtly, to mention no more, you have a further advantage to this holy life, by all the rods of God that are at any time upon you. I might ſhew you in many particulars the advantages this way alſo, but I ſhall only preſent theſe three to your obſervation at this time.

Firſt, By theſe you are clogged, to prevent your ſtraying and wandering. Others may wander even as far as Hell, and God will not ſpend a ſanctified rod upon them to reduce or ſtop them; but ſaith, let them alone, Hoſ. 4. 17. But if you ſtraggle out of the way of holineſs, he will clog you with one trouble or other to keep you within bounds, 2 Cor. 12. 7. Leſt I ſhould be lifted up, a thorn in the fleſh; a meſſenger of Satan was ſent to buffet me. So David, Pſal. 119. 67. Before I was afflicted I went aſtray; but now I have kept thy Word. Afflictions are uſed by God, as thorns by husbandmen to ſtop the gaps, and keep you from breaking out of God's way, Hoſ. 2. 6. I will hedge up her way with thorns, and build a wall that ſhe ſhall not find her paths. A double alluſion. 1. To Cattle that are apt to ſtray. I will hedge up thy way with thorns. 2. To the Sea which is apt to over-flow the Country; I will build a wall to prevent inundations. Holy Baſil was a long time ſorely afflicted with an inveterate head-ach, he often prayed for the removal of it; at laſt God removed it: But in the room of it, he was ſorely exerciſed with the motions and temptations of Luſt; which, when he perceived, he heartily deſired his head-ach again, to prevent a worſe evil. You little know the ends and uſes of many of your afflictions. Are you exerciſed with bodily weakneſs? It's a mercy you are ſo; and if theſe pains and infirmities were removed, theſe clogs taken off; you may with Baſil, wiſh for them again to prevent worſe evils. Are you poor? Why, with that poverty God hath clogged your pride. Are you reproached? With thoſe reproaches God hath clogged your ambition. Corruptions are prevented by your afflictions. And is not this a marvellous help to holineſs of Life?

Secondly, By your afflictions, your Corruptions are not only, clogged, but purged. By theſe God dries up and conſumes that ſpring of ſin, that defiles your lives, Iſa. 27. 9. By this therefore ſhall the enquiry of Jacob be purged; and this is all the fruit to take away ſin. God orders your wants to kill your wantonneſs. And makes your poverty poiſon to your pride. They are God's Phyſick, to purge ill humours out of your Souls.

Dan. 11. 33, 34, 35. When they fall by the ſword and by famine, and by captivity, and by ſpoil, it is to try them and to purge them and to make them white. They are both purges and lavatories to your Souls. Others have the ſame afflictions that you have, but they do not work on them as on you; they are to you as fire for purging, and water for cleanſing; and yet ſhall not your lives be clean? It's true (as one well obſerves upon that place of Daniel) Chriſt is the only Lavatory, and his blood the only Fountain to waſh away ſin. But in the virtue and efficacy of that Blood, ſanctified afflictions are cleanſers and purgers too.

A Croſs without a Chriſt never made any man better; but with Chriſt, Saints are much the better for the Croſs. Hath God as it were, laid you out ſo many days and nights a whitening, and yet is not the hue of your converſation altered? Hath he put you ſo many times into the Furnace, and yet is not your droſs ſeparated? The more afflictions you have been under, the more aſſiſtances you have had for this life of Holineſs.

Thirdly, By all your troubles God hath been weaning you from the world, the Luſts, Loves, and Pleaſure of it; and drawing out your Souls to a more excellent life and ſtate than this. He makes your Sorrows in this life, give a luſtre to the glory of the next. Whoever hath, beſure you ſhall have no reſt here; and all, that you may long more ardently for that to come. He often makes you groan being burdened, to be cloathed with your houſe from Heaven, 1 Cor. 5. 4. And yet will you be not weaned from the Luſts, Cuſtoms, and evils of it? O what manner of Perſons ſhould you be for heavenly and holy Converſations? You ſtand upon the higher ground. You have, as it were, the wind and tide with you. None are aſſiſted for this life as you are. Put all this together, and ſee what this ſecond Argument contributes towards your further conviction, and perſwaſion to holineſs of life. Have you received a ſupernatural principle fitting you for, and inclining you to holy actions, reſiſting and holding you back from ſin? Hath God alſo ſet before you ſuch eminent patterns to encourage and quicken you in your way? Doth the Spirit himſelf ſtand ready ſo many ways to aſſiſt and help you in all difficulties, and hath God hedged up the way of ſin with the thorns of affliction to prevent your wandering, and yet will you turn aſide? Will you offer violence to your own Principles, and new nature? Refuſe to follow ſuch Leaders as have beaten the way before you? Reſiſt or neglect the gracious aſſiſtances of the bleſſed Spirit, which he offers you in every need, and venture upon ſin, though God have hedg'd up your way with afflictions? O how can you do ſuch great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt ſuch grace as this!

Methinks I need ſay no more to convince you how much you are concerned to keep the iſſues of life pure, none being ſo much obliged to it, or aſſiſted for it as you are. But when I remember that Joaſh loſt the compleat Victory over the Syrians, becauſe he ſmote not his Arrows often enough upon the ground, 2 Kings 13. 8. I ſhall level one Arrow more at this Mark: For indeed that can never be enough preſt, which can never be enough practiſed. And therefore,

Conſid. 3. It will yet further appear to be your high concernment to exalt holineſs in your Converſations, becauſe of the manifold and great uſes which God hath to make of the viſible holineſs and purity of your lives, both in this world, and that to come. The uſes God puts the converſation-holineſs of his People to in this world, are theſe among others.

First, To win over Souls to Chriſt, and bring them in love with Religion. Practical holineſs is a very lovely attractive and obliging thing. If the Heathen then could call Moral Vertue verticordia, turn-heart, from that obliging and winning Power it exerciſes upon the hearts of men. If they could ſay of it, that were it viſible to humane eyes, all men would adore it, and fall in Love with it; how much rather may we ſay ſo of true holineſs made viſible in the lives of Saints! This is the turn-heart indeed. It makes the Souls of Men to cling and cleave to the perſons in whom it is; as it is propheſied, Zach. 8. 23. of the Jews when they ſhall be called (which ſhall be a time of great holineſs) in that day, ten men out of all languages of the Nations ſhall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, ſaying we will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you. So much of God as appears in Men, ſo much drawing excellency there is in them. And this is the Apoſtle's argument, 1 John 1. 3. That ye may have fellowſhip with us. Why, what is there in your fellowſhip to invite men to you! Truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Chriſt Jeſus. Who can chooſe but covet their company, that keep company every day with God? Great is the efficacy of viſible holineſs to work upon the hearts of Men; either as a concauſe, working in fellowſhip with the Word, or as a ſingle inſtrument working ſolitarily without the Word.

Where God is pleaſed to afford the word unto men, there the practical holineſs of Saints is of ſingular uſe to aſſiſt and help it in its operation upon the hearts of Men. When the lives of Chriſtians ſenſibly exhibit that to the Eyes of Men, which the Goſpel doth to their Ears; when ſo we preach, and ſo ye believe and live; when we draw by our Doctrines, and you draw with us by our Examples when we hold forth the Word of Life doctrinally, and you hold it forth practically; as Phil. 2. 16. Where is the heart that can ſtand before us? O when the plain and powerful Goſpel pierces the ears of Men, and at the ſame time the viſible holineſs of profeſſors ſhines ſo full of in their Faces, that they muſt either put out their own Eyes, or elſe be forced to acknowledge that God is in you of a truth; then it will work to purpoſe upon Souls. Then will Chriſt ſee of the travail of his Soul daily.

Yea, if God deny the Word to Men, yet this practical holineſs I am ſpeaking of may be to them an Ordinance for Converſion. This way Souls may be won to Chriſt without the word, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 3. 1. Though Pulpits ſhould be ſilent, and Viſion fail; yet if you would this way turn Preachers, if your lives may but preach the reality, excellency and ſweetneſs of Jeſus Chriſt and his ways; and if you would this way preach down the love of the World, and let Men ſee what poor Vanities theſe are; and preach up the neceſſity and beauty of Holineſs; ſurely you, even you might be honoured to bring many Souls to Chriſt, to turn many to righteouſneſs, and cauſe many to bleſs God on your behalf in the day of viſitation. This is the uſe God hath for the holineſs and purity of your lives, and doth not this engage you ſtrongly to it? What, not when it may prove the means of eternal Life to others? Surely if you have any bowels of mercy in you, you cannot hide from others that whereby they may be ſaved. How can you inſtead of holding forth the Word of life (which is your manifeſt duty) viſibly hold forth the works of death before men? Have you been beholding to others, and ſhall none be beholding to you for help towards Heaven? Dare you ſay, let others ſhift as well as they can, find the way to Heaven by themſelves if they can, they ſhall have no benefit by your light? If you be Chriſtians, you are Chriſtians of a different ſtamp and Spirit from all thoſe we find deſcribed in Scripture. Should not you rather ſay as the Lepers did, 2 King 7. 9. Do we well to hold our peace, whilſt others are periſhing? Shall the lips of Miniſters, and the lives of Chriſtians be both ſilenced together? Shall poor ſinners neither hear any thing from us, nor ſee any thing from you, that may help them to Chriſt? The Lord have mercy then upon the poor World, and pity it, for its caſe is deſperate. O put on as the Elect of God, bowels of mercy. Deſtroy not by the looſneſs of your Converſations ſo many Souls; for your ſcandalous miſcarriages are like a bag of poiſon put into the ſpring, which ſupplies the whole City with Water.

Secondly, Another uſe God hath for it, is to recover and ſalve the Credit of Religion, which by the Apoſtacies of Hypocrites and ſcandalous falls of careleſs Chriſtians is wounded and expoſed to contempt. Much reproach by this means is brought upon Religion, and how ſhall that reproach be rolled away, but by your ſtrictneſs and purity? By this the world muſt be convinced that all are not ſo. Though ſome be a blot to the name of Chriſt, yet others are his Glory. The more others ſlur and diſgrace Religion, the more God expects you to honour and adorn it. I remember Chryſoſtom brings in the perſecutors ſpeaking to two renowned Martyrs after this manner, Nonne videtis alios veſtri ordinis hoc feciſſe? (i. e.) why are you ſo nice and ſcrupulous? See you not that others of your rank and profeſſion have done theſe things? To which they returned this brave anſwer, Nos hac potiſſimum ratione viriliter ſtabimus, (i.e.) have they done it?

For that very reaſon we will ſtand it out like men, and will never yield to it. There is an holy Antiperiſtaſis in the zeal of a Chriſtian, which makes it like fire burn moſt vehemently in the coldeſt weather. If men make void God's Law, therefore will David love his Commandments above Gold, Pſal. 119. 127. If there be many Pendletons among profeſſors, who will betray Chriſt and his truth to ſave their fleſh; God will have ſome Sanders to repair that breach by their conſtancy and courage in appearing for them.

Thirdly, God makes uſe of it for the encouragement of his Miniſters, who labour among you. And indeed it is of no ſmall uſe to refreſh their hearts, and ſtrengthen their hands in their painful work. Now we live (ſaith the Apoſtle) if ye ſtand faſt in the Lord, 1 Theſ. 3. 8. He ſpeaks as if their very life lay at the mercy of the People, becauſe ſo much of the Joy and Comfort of it is wrapt up in their Regularity and ſteadfaſtneſs. God knows what an hard Province his poor Miniſters have, and how many diſcouragements attend them in their work. Hear how one of them expreſſes it. "Every drop that hath fallen from our heart and head, "from our eye-lids, and eye-brows, ſhall be all gathered "up, and put as Marginal Notes by all our Labours, "and put into one Volume together, and this Volume "put into your hands at the great day, and opened "leaf after leaf, and read diſtinctly and exactly "to you. Miniſters would not be gray-headed ſo "ſoon, nor die ſo faſt, notwithſtanding their great "labours; if they were but ſucceſful: But this "cuts the heart, and makes us bleed in ſecret; that "tho' we do much, yet it comes to nothing. "Our work dies, therefore we die: Not ſo much that "we labour, but that we labour in vain. We can "ſend none out of the Hoſpital where we are Phyſitians, upon two Legs. When our Miniſtry petrifies, turns hearts into Stones, and theſe taken up and "thrown at us, theſe kill us. The recoyling of our "pains kill us. When our peace returns to us, when "we ſpend our ſtrength to make men more nought "than they were, this wounds our hearts, which "ſhould be conſidered by ſinners, to kill ones ſelf, "and ones Miniſters too, who would ſave them; what "a blooy Condition is this?

Lockier upon the Coloſſ. p. 551.

Chriſtians, you hear our caſe, you ſee our work, now a little to cheer our Spirits in the midſt of our hard and killing Labours, God ſends us to you for a little refreſhment, that by beholding your holy and heavenly converſation, your chearful Obedience, and ſweet agreement in the ways of God; we may be comforted over all theſe troubles, 2 Theſ. 1. 3, 4. And will you wound and kill our hearts too? Oh! what a cut will this be!

Fourthly, God hath further uſe for the holineſs of your lives, this ſerves to daunt the hearts, and over-aw the conſciences of his and your enemies. And ſometimes it hath had a ſtrange influence, and effect upon them. There is a great deal of awful Majeſty in holineſs, and when it ſhines upon the conſcience of a wicked Man, it makes him ſtoop, and do obeyſance to it. Which turns to a Teſtimony for Chriſt and his ways before the world. Thus Herod was over-awed by the ſtrict and holy life of John, he feared him, knowing that he was a juſt Man and holy, and obſerved (or preſerved and ſaved) him.

That bloody Tyrant was convinced in his conſcience of the worth and excellency of that Servant of God, and was forced to reverence him for his Holineſs. So Darius, Dan. 6. 14, 18, 19, 20. What conflicts had he himſelf about Daniel whom he had condemned; his Conſcience condemned him, for condemning ſo holy and righteous a Perſon. Then the King went to his Palace, and paſſed the night in faſtings; neither were inſtruments of Muſick brought before him, and his ſleep went from him. He goes early in the morning to the Den, and cries with a lamentable voice, O Daniel Servant of the living God. How much is this for the honour of holineſs, that it conquers the very perſecutors of it; and makes them ſtoop to the meaneſt Servant of God! 'Tis ſaid of Henry the ſecond of France, that he was ſo daunted by the heavenly Majeſty of a poor Taylor that was burnt before him, that he went home ſad, and vowed that he would never be preſent at the death of ſuch Men, any more. When Valence the Emperor came in perſon to apprehend Baſil, he ſaw ſuch Majeſty in his very countenance, that he reel'd at the very ſight of him; and had fallen backward to the ground, had not his Servants ſtept in to ſupport him. O holineſs, holineſs, thou art a Conqueror. So much as you ſhew of it in your lives, ſo much you preſerve your intereſt in the Conſciences of your enemies. Let down this, and they deſpiſe you preſently.

Fifthly, And laſtly, God will uſe the purity of your converſations to Judge and convince the world in the great day. 'Tis, the world ſhall be judged by the Goſpel, but your lives ſhall alſo be produced as a Commentary upon it, and God will not only ſhew them by the Word how they ought to have lived, but bring forth your lives and ways to ſtop their mouths, by ſhewing how others did live. And this I ſuppoſe is intended in that Text, 1 Cor. 6. 2. The Saints ſhall judge the world, yea, we ſhall judge Angels, that is, our examples are to condemn their lives and practices, as Noah, Heb. 11. 7. is ſaid to condemn the world by building the Ark, (i. e.) his Faith in the threatning, and obedience to the command, condemned their ſupineneſs, infidelity, and diſobedience. They ſaw him every day about that work, diligently preparing for a deluge, and yet were not moved with the like fear that he was; this left them inexcuſable: So when God ſhall ſay in that day to the careleſs world, did you not ſee the care, and diligence, the holy zeal, watchfulneſs, and ſelf-denial of my People, who lived among you? How many times have they been watching and praying when you have been drinking, or ſleeping! Was it not eaſie to reflect when you ſaw their pains and diligence; have not I a Soul to look after as well as they, a Heaven to win or loſe, as well as they? O how ſpeechleſs and inexcuſable will this render wicked men, yea, it ſhall not be only uſed to judge them, but Angels alſo. How many ſhocks of Temptations have poor Saints ſtood; when as they fell without a Tempter? They ſtood not in their intregity, though created in ſuch excellent Natures; how much then are you concerned on this very account alſo, to walk exactly! if not, inſtead of judging them, you ſhall be condemned with them.

Cum ergo fideles ſeſſuri dicuntur cum Chriſto, id intelligi debet non de autoritate vel poteſtate judicandi in ipſis, ſed (1.) de eo quod, facturi ſunt in Chriſto capite ſuo (2.) De approbatione ſententie a Chriſto late. Apoc. 19. v. 1. (3) De eorum teſtificatione ratione Miniſterii et converſationis Et comparatione vitæ eorum cum vita injuſtorum, qua judicis juſtitia manifeſtabitur, Synopſ. purior Theol. p. 798.

And thus you ſee what uſe your lives and actions ſhall be put to, and are theſe inconſiderable uſes? Is the winning over Souls to God a ſmall matter? Is the ſalving the honour and reputation of godlineſs a ſmall matter? Is the encouraging the hearts, and ſtrengthening the hands of God's poor Miniſters amidſt their ſpending killing labours a ſmall matter? Is the awing of the conſciences of your enemies, and judging them in the laſt day a light thing? Which of theſe can you call ſo?

O then ſince you are thus obliged to holineſs of life. Thus ſingularly aſſiſted for it; and ſince there are ſuch great dependencies upon it, and uſes for it both now and in the world to come; ſee that ye be holy in all manner of converſation. See that as ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo ye walk in him. Always remembring that for this very end Chriſt hath redeemed or delivered you of the hands of your enemies, that you might ſerve him without fear in righteouſneſs and holineſs all the days of your lives, Luk. 1. 74, 75. And to how little purpoſe will be all that I have preacht, and you have heard of Chriſt, if it be not converted into practical Godlineſs? This is the Scope and deſign of it all.

And now Reader, thou art come to the laſt leaf of this Treatiſe of Chriſt, it will be but a little while and thou ſhalt come to the laſt Page or Day of thy Life; and thy laſt moment in that day. Wo, to thee, wo and alas for ever, if intereſt in this bleſſed Redeemer be then to get. The world affords not a ſadder ſight, than a poor Chriſtleſs Soul ſhivering upon the brink of Eternity. To ſee the poor Soul that now begins to awake out of its long dream, at its entrance into the world of realities, to ſhrink back into the body, and cry, O I cannot, I dare not die. And then the tears run down. Lord, what will become of me? O what ſhall be my eternal Lot? This I ſay, is as ſad a ſight as the world affords. That this may not be thy caſe, reflect upon what thou haſt read in theſe Sermons; Judge thy ſelf in the light of them. Obey the calls of the Spirit in them. Let not thy ſlight and formal Spirit float upon the ſurface of theſe truths, like a feather upon the water; but get them deeply infixed upon thy Spirit, by the Spirit of the Lord; turning them into life and power upon thee. And ſo animating the whole courſe and tenour of thy Converſation by them, that it may proclaim to all that know thee, that thou art one who eſteemeſt all to be but droſs, that thou mayſt win Chriſt.

AND THE

Moſt Accompliſhed and Vertuous Lady his dear* CONSORT:

The Author wiſhes Grace, Mercy and Peace.

Honoured and Worthy Friends,

IT was a comfortable Expreſſion which Ambroſe uſed in his Funeral Oration at the Death of Theodoſius; (a) that tho' he were gone, yet he was not wholly gone; for he had left Honorius, with others of his Children, behind him, in whom Theodoſius ſtill lived. Your renowned and worthy Anceſtors are gone, yet bleſſed be God, they are not wholly gone; whilſt the Prudence, Piety and Publickneſs of their Spirits, ſtill lives and flouriſhes in you, the top-branch of a renowned and religious Family. 'Tis a great Truth which Philo Judæus recommends to the Obſervation of all Poſterity, (b) that it is not a natural Deſcent from the moſt honourable and illuſtrious Progenitors, nor the greateſt affluence of Riches and Pleaſures that makes a Man either honourable or happy; but the Inhabitation of God in his Soul, as in his Temple, tho' (ſaith he) thoſe that never taſted Religion, nor have ſeen its Glory, will not credit this Aſſertion. The Soul which is filled with God (ſaith (c) Plotinus, and brings forth the beautiful Fruits of Righteouſneſs, this is the truly noble Soul: Our new Birth makes us more honourable than our natural Birth, let our Birth-right Dignities be what they will. The Children of Nobles are by Nature the Children of Wrath, even as others: Omnis ſanguis concolor, all Blood is of one Colour; it is all tainted in Adam, and mingled together in his Poſterity: There is no King, ſaith (d) Seneca, which roſe not from a Servant: There is no Servant which roſe not from a King: Theſe Things have been blended and toſſed to and fro, by a long variety.

But though the Priviledges of natural Birth ſignifie nothing as to Eternal Salvation, yet in Civil and Political Reſpects and Conſiderations, thoſe that by Birth, Education or Eſtate, poſſeſs an higher Station in the World, differ from the vulgar as Stars of greater magnitude and luſtre: Their Intereſt and Influence is great in theſe Things, and the welfare of Kingdoms (e) greatly depends upon them.

It is therefore a great deſign of the Enemy of Mankind, to corrupt Perſons of eminent Rank and Quality both in Religion and Morality; and by their Influence and Example to infect and poyſon the whole Body Politick: And his ſucceſs herein deſerves to be greatly lamented and bewailed. Perſons of eminency are more eſpecially (f) obliged to ſhun baſe and ſordid Actions. Hierom profeſſed (g) he ſaw nothing deſirable in Nobility except this, that ſuch Perſons are bound by a certain kind of Neceſſity not to degenerate from the Probity, or ſtain the Glory of their Anceſtors. But alas! how many in our Times have not only expoſed Chriſtianity to contempt, but obſcured (h) the Glory of their own Families, and the Kingdom in which they had their Birth and Breeding; ſo that if you will will take right Marks of your Way to Heaven, you will have little Direction from thoſe of your own Rank, but as (i) Mariners take their Direction at Sea, by looking up to the Heavens, ſo muſt you. In this general Corruption it is very hard to eſcape Infection: Many (as Salvian complained) (k) are compelled to be evil, leſt they ſhould be accounted vile: And incur the Offence of God, to avoid the Slights and Cenſures of Men. Although there is no more Reaſon why they ſhould be offended at the rational and religious Pleaſures, you and other pious Gentlemen take in the ways of Godlineſs, than there is that you ſhould Envy the ſinful Pleaſures they take in the ways of Wickedneſs. It was an excellent Apology that Tertullian made for the Chriſtians of his Time againſt the Gentiles, (l) Wherein (ſaith he) do we offend you, if we believe there are other Pleaſures? If we will not partake with you in your Delights, it is only your own Injury: We reject your Pleaſures, and you are not delighted with ours.

But by how much the Infection ſpreads and prevails among thoſe of your Order, by ſo much the more we have Reaſon to value you, and all thoſe that remain ſound and untainted both in Religion and Morality, as Perſons worthy of ſingular Reſpect and Honour; and bleſſed be God, there is yet a number of ſuch left.

Sir, It was a ſpecial happineſs which Chryſoſtome earneſtly recommended to Perſons of Quality, that they would ſo order their Converſations, that their Parents might rather Glory in them, than they in their Parents; (m) otherwiſe (ſaith he) it is better to riſe to Honour from a contemptible Parent, than to be contemptible from an honourable Parent: But bleſſed be God, you and your worthy Anceſtors mutually reflect Honour upon each other.

Had God ſuffered you to degenerate, as many do, it would have been but a poor Conſolation to have ſaid, my Progenitors were Men of Honour, the love and delight of their Countrey. This as (n) one excellently expreſſeth it, would be the ſame Thing, as if one that is blind himſelf, ſhould boaſt what a ſharp and piercing ſight his Father had, or one that is Lame himſelf, ſhould glory in thoſe Feats of Activity his Grandfather performed: But God (to whoſe Bounty therefore you are doubly obliged) hath made you the Inheritor of their Vertues, as well as of their Lands, and therein fulfilled many thouſand Prayers which have been poured out to God upon your account. But I muſt forbear, leſt I provoke others to Envy, and draw upon my ſelf the Suſpicion of Flattery: What hath been already ſaid, may ſerve for a ſufficient Reaſon of this Dedication. I know the (o) agreeableneſs of ſuch Diſcourſes to the pious Diſpoſitions of your Souls, is of it ſelf ſufficient to make it welcome to you. It is a Treatiſe of Chriſt, yea, of the Method of Grace in the Application of Chriſt; than which no Subject can be more neceſſary to Study, or ſweet to Experience. (p) All goodneſs is attractive, how powerfully attractive then muſt Jeſus Chriſt be, who is the Ocean of all Goodneſs, from whom all ſtreams of goodneſs are derived, and into whom they all empty themſelves? (q) If Pindarus could ſay of the lovely Theoxenus, that whoſoever ſaw that auguſt and comely Face of his, and was not ſurprized with Amazement and inflamed with Love, muſt have an Heart of Adamant or Braſs, what then ſhall we reſemble that Mans Heart unto that hath no ferverous Affections kindled in it by the incomparable Beauty of Chriſt! A Beauty which excels in Luſtre and Brightneſs that viſible Light which ſo dazles our Eyes (r) as that Light doth Darkneſs it ſelf, as Plato ſpeaks of the Divine Light. Chriſt is ὑπερβαλλόντως καλὸς an inexpreſſible Beauty, and all other Beauties are but εἰκὼν ϗ σκιά, an Image, nay a Shadow of his Beauty. How was Holy Ignatius raviſhed with Deſires after Chriſt when (s) he cried out, O how I long to be thrown into the Jaws of thoſe Lions which I hear roaring for me! And if they will not diſpatch me the ſooner, ϗ προσβιάσομαι, I will enforce them to it by Violence, that I may enjoy the ſight of my bleſſed Jeſus. (t) O my Heart (ſaith another) how is it thou art not drawn up by the very Root by thy deſires after Chriſt? The Neceſſity and the Trial of our Union with, and Intereſt in this lovely Lord Jeſus, is the main Subject of this Diſcourſe: Without the perſonal Application of Chriſt by Faith, our Hopes of Heaven are but deluding Dreams, Heb. 3. 11. I ſware in my Wrath εἰ εἰσελεύσονται, if they ſhall enter into my Reſt: What then? Nay, there is all: But it is a dreadful Apoſiopeſis (as one calls it) ſuch a Pauſe, as may juſtly ſhake every Vein of the Unbelievers Heart: If they ſhall enter, as if he had ſaid, if ever they come into my Glory, then ſay, I am no God, for I have ſworn the contrary.

I will not be tireſome, but conclude all in few Requeſts to you, and to God for you both. That which I Requeſt of you is,

(1.) That you will ſearch and try your own Hearts by theſe Truths, eſpecially now, when ſo great Trials are like to be made of every Mans Root and Foundation in Religion. Account that your firſt Work, which Bellarmine calls the firſt Error of Proteſtants, to make ſure your Intereſt in Chriſt; (u) every thing is as its Foundation is: A true Diamond will endure the ſmarteſt ſtroke of the Hammer, but a falſe one will fly.

(2.) That you be humble under all that Dignity and Honour which God hath put upon you; be ye cloathed with Humility. It was the Glory of the Primitive Chriſtians, that they * did not ſpeak but live great Things, Humility will be the Luſtre of your other Excellencies: Eſtates and Honours are but Appendants and fine

Trappings which add not any real worth, yet (x) how are ſome vain Minds puffed up with theſe Things! But ye have not ſo learned Chriſt.

(3.) That you ſteadily perſevere in thoſe good Ways of God in which you have walked, and beware of Heart or Life Apoſtaſie. You expect Happineſs whilſt God is in Heaven, and God expects Holineſs from you whilſt you are on Earth. It was an excellent Truth which Toſſanus (y) recommended to his Poſterity in his laſt Will and Teſtament from his own Experience. I beſeech you, ſaith he, my dear Children and Kindred, that you never be aſhamed of the Truths of the Goſpel, either by Reaſons of Scandals in the Church or Perſecutions upon it; Truth may labour for a Time but cannot be Conquered, and I have often found God to be wonderfully preſent with them that walk before him in Truth, though for a Time they may be oppreſt with Troubles and Calumnies.

(4.) Laſtly, That you keep a ſtrict and conſtant Watch over your own Hearts, leſt they be enſnared by the tempting, charming and dangerous Snares attending a full and eaſie Condition in the World. There are Temptations ſuited to all Conditions: Thoſe that are poor and low in Eſtate and Reputation, are tempted to cozen, cheat, lye and flatter, and all to get up to the Mount of Riches and Honours; but thoſe that were born upon that Mount, though they be more free from thoſe Temptations, yet lie expoſed to others no leſs dangerous, and therefore we find, Not many mighty, not many noble are called, 1 Cor. 1. 26. Many great and ſtately Ships, which ſpread much Sail, and draw much Water, periſh in the Storms, when ſmall Barks creep along the Shore under the Wind, and get ſafe into their Port. Never aim at an higher Station in this World than that you are in: (z) Some have wiſht in their dying Hour they had been lower, but no wiſe Man ever wiſht himſelf at the Top of Honour at the brink of Eternity.

I will conclude all with this hearty Wiſh for you, that as God hath ſet you in a capacity of much Service for him in your Generation, ſo your Hearts may be enlarged for God accordingly; that you may be very Inſtrumental for his Glory on Earth, and may go ſafe, but late to Heaven. That the Bleſſings of Heaven may be multiplied upon you both, and your hopeful ſpringing Branches; and that you may live to ſee your Childrens Children, and Peace upon Iſrael. In a Word, that God will follow theſe Truths in your Hands with the Bleſſing of his Spirit; and that the manifold Infirmities of him that Miniſters them, may be no Prejudice or Bar to their Succeſs with you, or any into whoſe Hands they ſhall come; which is the hearty Deſire of,

Your moſt faithful Friend and

Servant in Chriſt,

John Flavell.

THE EPISTLE.

Chriſtian Reader,

E*Very Creature* by the inſtinct of Nature, or by the light of Reaſon, ſtrives to avoid danger, and get out of harms way. The Cattle in the Fields preſaging a Storm at Hand, fly to the Hedges and Thickets for ſhelter. The Fowls of Heaven, by the ſame natural Inſtinct, perceiving the approach of Winter, take their timely flight to a warmer Climate. This * Naturaliſts have obſerved of them, and their obſervation is confirmed by Scripture Teſtimony: Of the Cattle it is ſaid, Job 37. 6, 7, 8. He ſaith to the Snow, be thou on the Earth, likewiſe the ſmall Rain, and the great Rain of his Strength; then the Beaſts go into Dens, and remain in their Places: And of the Fowls of the Air it is ſaid, Jer. 8. 7. The Stork in the Heavens knoweth her appointed times, and the Turtle and the Crane and the Swallow obſerve the time of their coming.

* Plin. l. 18. c. 35. Virg. Georg. l. 1.

But Man being a prudent and proſpecting Creature, hath the advantage of all other Creatures in his foreſeeing faculty? For God hath taught him more than the Beaſts of the Earth, and made him wiſer than the Fowls of Heaven, Job. 35. 11. And a wiſe Mans Heart diſcerneth both Time and Judgment, Eccleſ. 8. 5. For as there are natural Signs of the change of Weather, Mat. 16. 3. So there are moral Signs of the changes of Time and Providences: Yet ſuch is the ſupineneſs and inexcuſable regardleſneſs of moſt Men, that they will not fear till they feel; nor think any danger very conſiderable, till it become inevitable.

We of this Nation have long enjoyed the light of the glorious Goſpel among us: It hath ſhone in much clearneſs upon this ſinful Iſland, for more than a whole Century of happy Years: But the longeſt day hath an end, and we have cauſe to fear our bright Sun is going down upon us; for the ſhadows in England are grown greater than the ſubſtance, which is one ſign of approaching Night, Jer. 6. 4. The Beaſts of prey creep out of their Dens and Coverts, which is another ſign of Night at Hand, Pſal. 104. 20. And the Workmen come home apace from their Labours, and go to reſt; which is as ſad a ſign as any of the reſt, Job 7. 1, 2. Iſa. 57. 1, 2. Happy were it if in ſuch a juncture as this, every Man would make it his Work and Buſineſs to ſecure himſelf in Chriſt, from the Storm of Gods indignation, which is ready to fall upon theſe ſinful Nations. It is ſaid of the Egyptians, when the Storm of Hail was coming upon the Land, Exod. 9 20. He that feared the Word of the Lord, made his Servants and Cattle flee into the Houſes. 'Tis but an odd ſight to ſee the Prudence of an Egyptian outvying the Wiſdom and Circumſpection of a Chriſtian.

God who provides natural Shelter and Refuge for all Creatures, hath not left his People unprovided and deſtitute of defence and ſecurity in the moſt tempeſtuous times of national Judgments. It is ſaid, Mic. 5. 5. This Man (meaning the Man Chriſt Jeſus) ſhall be the peace, when the Aſſyrian ſhall come into our Land, and when he ſhall tread in our Palaces: And Iſa. 26. 20. Come my People, enter thou into thy Chambers, and ſhut thy Doors about thee; hide they ſelf as it were for a little moment, until the Indignation be overpaſt.

My Friends, let me ſpeak as freely as I am ſure I ſpeak ſeaſonably. A Sound of Judgment is in our Ears; the Lords Voice crieth unto the City, and the Man of Wiſdom ſhall ſee thy Name: Hear ye the Rod, and who hath appointed it, Mica. 6. 9. All things round about us ſeem to poſture themſelves for trouble and diſtreſs. Where is the Man of Wiſdom that doth not foreſee a ſhower of wrath and indignation coming? We have heard of a Voice of trembling, of fear and not of peace. Ask ye now and ſee whether a Man doth Travel with Child? Wherefore do I ſee every Man with his Hand on his Loins, as a Woman in Travail, and all Faces are turned into paleneſs. Alas, for that Day is great, ſo that none is like it; it is even the Day of Jacobs trouble, but he ſhall be delivered out of it, Jer. 30. 5, 6, 7.

Many Eyes are now opened to ſee the common danger, but ſome foreſaw it long ago; when they ſaw the general decay of Godlineſs every where, the notorious Prophanity and Atheiſm that overſpread the Nations; the Spirit of enmity and bitterneſs agaiaſt the Power of godlineſs where-ever it appeared: And tho' there ſeemed to be a preſent calm and general quietneſs, yet thoſe that were Wiſe in Heart, could not but diſcern diſtreſs of Nations with great perplexity in theſe Seeds of Judgment and Calamity: But as the Epha fills more and more, ſo the determined Wrath grows more and more viſible to every Eye: And 'tis a fond thing to Dream of tranquility in the midſt of ſo much iniquity. Indeed, if theſe Nations were once ſwept with the Beſom of Reformation, we might hope God would not ſweep them with the Beſom of Deſtruction: But what Peace can be expected, whilſt the higheſt Provocations are continued?

It is therefore the great and preſent concernment of all, to provide themſelves of a Refuge before the Storm overtake them: For as Auguſtin well obſerves, non facile inveniuntur præſidia in adverſitate, quæ non fuerint in pace quæſita, O take up your Lodgings in the Attributes and Promiſes of God, before the Night overtake you: View them often by Faith, and clear up your Intereſt in them, that you may be able to go to them in the Dark, when the Miniſters and Ordinances of Chriſt have taken their leave of you, and bid you good Night.

Whilſt many are haſting on the Wrath of God by Prophaneneſs, and many by ſmiting their fellow Servants; and Multitudes reſolve, if trouble come, to Fiſh in the troubled Waters for ſafety and preferment; not doubting whenſoever the overflowing Flood comes, but they ſhall ſtand dry: O that you would be mourning for their Sins, and providing better for your own Safety.

Reader,

The Epiſtle to the Reader.

Reader, it is thy one thing neceſſary to get a cleared Intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt : Which being once obtained, thou maiſt face the Storm with boldneſs, and ſay, Come troubles and diſtreſſes, loſſes and trials, priſons and death, I am provided for you ; do your worſt, you can do me no harm : Let the Winds roar, the Lightnings flaſh, the Rains and Hail fall never ſo furiouſly, I have a good Roof over my Head, a comfortable Lodging provided for me : My Place of defence is the Munition of Rocks, where Bread ſhall be given me, and my Waters ſhall be ſure, Iſa. 33. 16.

The deſign of the enſuing Treatiſe, is to aſſiſt thee in this great Work : And tho' it was promiſed to the World man, Years paſt, yet Providence hath reſerved it for the fitteſt Seaſon, and brought it to thy Hand in a time of need.

It contains the Method of Grace in the application of the great Redemption to the Souls of Men, as the former Part contains the Method of Grace in the impetration thereof by Jeſus Chriſt. The acceptation God hath given the former Part, ſignified by the deſires of many for the Publication of this, hath at laſt prevailed with me, (notwithſtanding the ſecret conſciouſneſs of my inequality to ſo great an undertakement) to adventure this Second Part alſo upon the ingenuity and candour of the Reader.

And I conſent the more willingly to the Publication of this, becauſe the deſign I firſt aimed at could not be intire and compleat without it ; but eſpecially the quality of the ſubject matter, which through the bleſſing and concurrence of the Spirit, may be uſeful both to rouze the drouſie Conſciences of this ſleepy Generation, and to aſſiſt the upright in clearing the Work of the Spirit upon their own Souls. Theſe conſiderations have prevailed with me againſt all diſcouragments.

And now, Reader, it is impoſſible for me to ſpeak particularly and diſtinctly to the Caſe of thy Soul, which I am ignorant of, except the Lord ſhall direct my Diſcourſe to it in ſome of the following ſuppoſitions.

If thou be one that haſt ſincerely applied and received Jeſus Chriſt by Faith, this Diſcourſe, thro' the bleſſing of the Spirit, may be uſeful to thee, to clear and confirm thy Evidences, to melt thy Heart in the Senſe of thy Mercies, and to ingage and quicken thee in the way of thy Duties. Here thou wilt ſee what great things the Lord hath done for thy Soul, and how theſe Dignities, as thou art his Son or Daughter, by the double Title of regeneration and adoption, do oblige thee to yield up thy ſelf to God intirely, and to ſay from thy Heart, Lord, whatever I am, I am for thee, whatever I can do, I will do for thee, and whatever I can ſuffer, I will ſuffer for thee ; and all that I am or have, all that I can do or ſuffer, is nothing to what thou haſt done for my Soul.

If thou be a Stranger to Regeneration and Faith ; a Perſon that makeſt a powerleſs Profeſſion of Chriſt ; that haſt a Name to live but art dead : Here it's poſſible thou maiſt meet ſomething that will convince thee, how dangerous a thing it is to be an old Creature in the new Creatures Dreſs and Habit : And what it is that blinds thy Judgment, and is likelieſt to prove thy ruin : A ſeaſonable and full Conviction whereof will be the greateſt Mercy that can befall thee in this World ; if thereby at laſt God may help thee to put on Chriſt as well as the Name of Chriſt.

If thou be in darkneſs about the State of thy own Soul, and willing to have it faithfully and impartially tried by the Rule of the Word, which will not warp to any Mans Humour or Intereſt : Here thou wilt find ſome weak aſſiſtance offered thee, to clear and diſintangle thy doubting Thoughts, which thro' thy Prayer: and the ſupply of the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, may lead thee to a comfortable ſettlement, and inward peace.

If thou be a proud, conceited, preſumptuous Soul, who haſt too little Knowledge, and too much Pride and ſelf-love, to admit any doubts or ſcruples of thy State towards God ; there are many things in this Treatiſe proper for thy Conviction and better Information ; for woe to thee, if thou ſhouldeſt not fear, till thou begin to feel thy miſery ; if thy troubles do not come on, till all thy hopes are gone off.

I know all theſe things are performed by me with much infirmity ; and that the whole management is quite below the Dignity of the Subject. But when I conſider the ſucceſs of Sermons and Books in the World, hath but little relation to the elegancy of Language or accuracy of Method ; and that many may be uſeful, who cannot be excellent ; I am wiling in all humility and ſincerity to commit it to the direction of Providence, and the bleſſing of the Spirit.

One thing I ſhall earneſtly requeſt of all the People of God, into whoſe Hands this ſhall fall ; that now at laſt, they will be perſwaded to end all their unbrotherly quarrels and ſtriefs among themſelves, which have waſted ſo much precious time, and decayed the vital ſpirits of Religion, hindred the Converſion of multitudes, and increaſed and confirmed the Atheiſm of the times, and now at laſt opened a breach, at which the common enemy is ready to enter, and end the quarrel to our coſt. O put on, as the elect of God, Bowels of Mercy, and a Spirit of Charity and forbearance ; if not for your own ſakes, yet for the Churches ſake ; Si non vis tibi parcere, parce Carthagini.

I remember it is noted in our Engliſh Hiſtory, as a very remarkable thing, that when the Severn overflowed part of Somerſetſhire, it was obſerved that Dogs and Hares, Cats and Rats, to avoid the common deſtruction, would ſwim to the next riſing Ground, and abide quietly together in that common danger, without the leaſt diſcovery of their natural antipathy.

The ſtory applies it ſelf, and O that Chriſtians would every where depoſe their animoſities ; that the Hearts of the Fathers might be turned to the Children, and the Children to the Fathers ; leſt God come and ſmite the Earth with a Curſe.

O that you would dwell more in your Cloſets, and be more frequently and fervently upon your Knees. O that you would ſearch your Hearts more narrowly, and ſift them more throughly than ever, before the Day paſs as the Chaff, and the Lords fierce anger come upon you : Look into your Bibles, then into your Hearts, and then to Heaven, for a true diſcovery of your Conditions ; and if this poor Mite may contribute any thing to that end, it will be a great reward of the unworthy Labours of,

Thy Servant in Chriſt,

John Flavell.

The Firſt SERMON.

I. COR. I. xxx.

But of him are ye in Chriſt, who of God is made unto us, Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption.

Opening the general nature of Effectual Application.

HE that enquires what is the juſt Value and Worth of Chriſt, asks a queſtion which puts all the Men on Earth, and Angels in Heaven, to an everlaſting Non-plus.

The higheſt attainment of our Knowledge in this Life, is to know that Himſelf and his Love do paſs knowledge, Eph. 3. 19.

But how Excellent ſoever Chriſt is in himſelf, what Treaſures of Righteouſneſs ſoever lie in his Blood, and whatever Joy, Peace, and raviſhing Comforts ſpring up to Men out of his Incarnation, Humiliation, and Exaltation, they all give down their diſtinct Benefits and Comforts to them in the way of effectual application.

For never was any Wound healed by a prepared, but unapplied Plaiſter. Never any Body warmed by the moſt coſtly Garment made, but not put on: Never any Heart refreſhed and comforted by the richeſt Cordial compounded, but not received: Nor from the beginning of the World was it ever known that a poor deceived, condemned, polluted miſerable Sinner, was actually delivered out of that woful State, until of God, Chriſt was made unto him, Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption.

For look * as the Condemnation of the Firſt Adam paſſeth not to us, except (as by Generation) we are his; ſo Grace and Remiſſion paſs not from the Second Adam to us, except as (by regeneration) we are his. Adam's Sin hurts none but thoſe that are in him: And Chriſt's Blood profits none but thoſe that are in him: How great a weight therefore doth there hang upon the effectual application of Chriſt to the Souls of Men! And what is there in the whole World ſo awfully ſolemn, ſo greatly important as this is! Such is the ſtrong conſolation reſulting from it, that the Apoſtle in this context offers it to the believing Corinthians, as a ſuperabundant Recompence for the deſpicable meanneſs and baſeneſs of their outward Condition in this World, of which he had juſt before ſpoken in ver. 27, 28. telling them, Tho' the World contemned them as vile, fooliſh and weak, yet of God, Chriſt is made unto them Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption.

* Parienſis de cauſis, cur deus homo, cap. 9. Quemadmodum non tranſit Adæ damnatio, niſi per generationem in carnaliter ex eo generatos: Sic non tranſit Chriſti gratia, & peccatorum remiſſio, niſi per regenerationem ad ſpiritualiter per ipſum regeneratos. Si- deli- m Adæ nocet, ſuis, in quod ſui : Sic gratia riſti deſt, ni- is, in eo d ſui

In which Words we have an Enumeration of the chief Priviledges of Believers, and an Account of the Method whereby they come to be inveſted with them.

Firſt, Their Priviledges are enumerated, namely, Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption, Mercies of ineſtimable value in themſelves; and ſuch as reſpect a fourfold Miſery lying upon ſinful Man, viz. Ignorance, Guilt, Pollution, and the whole train of miſerable Conſequences and Effects let in upon the Nature of Men, yea, the beſt and holieſt of Men by Sin.

1. atuor iſto e- a hic

Lapſed Man is not only in deep Miſery, but groſly Ignorant both that he is ſo, and how to recover himſelf from it: Sin hath left him at once ſenſeleſs of his State, and at perfect Loſs about the true Remedy.

To cure this, Chriſt is made to him Wiſdom, not only by improvement of thoſe Treaſures of Wiſdom that are in himſelf for the Benefit of ſuch Souls as are united to him, as an Head conſulting the good of his own Members; but alſo by imparting his Wiſdom to them by the Spirit of Illumination, whereby they come to diſcern both their Sin and Danger; as alſo the true way of their Recovery from both, through the application of Chriſt to their Souls by Faith.

adſcribit, quæ totam ejus virtutem, & quicquid ab ipſo bonorum recipimus complectuntur. Calv. in loc.

But alas! Simple Illumination doth but increaſe our Burden, and exaſperate our Miſery, as long as Sin in the Guilt of it is either imputed to our Perſons unto Condemnation, or reflected by our Conſciences in a way of Accuſation.

With deſign therefore to remedy and heal this ſore Evil, Chriſt is made of God unto us Righteouſneſs, compleat and perfect Righteouſneſs, whereby our obligation to Puniſhment is diſſolved, and thereby a ſolid Foundation for a well ſettled Peace of Conſcience firmly eſtabliſhed.

Yea, but although the removing of Guilt from our Perſons and Conſciences be an ineſtimable Mercy, yet alone it cannot make us compleatly happy: For tho' a Man ſhould never be damned for Sin, yet what is it leſs than an Hell upon Earth to be under the Dominion and Pollution of every baſe Luſt? It's Miſery enough to be daily defiled by Sin, tho' a Man ſhould never be damned for it.

To compleat therefore the happineſs of the redeemed; Chriſt is not only made of God unto them Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, the one curing our Ignorance, the other our Guilt; but he is made Sanctification alſo, to relieve us againſt the Dominion and Pollutions of our Corruptions: He comes both by Water and by Blood, not by Blood only, but by Water alſo, 1 Joh. 5. 6. purging as well as pardoning: How compleat and perfect a Cure is Chriſt!

But yet ſomething is required beyond all this to make our happineſs perfect and entire wanting nothing; and that is the removal of thoſe doleful Effects and Conſequences of Sin, which notwithſtanding all the forementioned Priviledges and Mercies ſtill lie upon the Souls and Bodies of illuminated, juſtified and ſanctified Perſons. For even upon the beſt and holieſt of Men, what ſwarms of vanity, loads of deadneſs, and fits of unbelief, do daily appear in and oppreſs their Souls! To the imbittering of all the comforts of Life to them. And how many Diſeaſes, Deformities, Pains oppreſs their Bodies, which daily moulders away by them, till they fall into the Grave by Death, even as the Bodies of other Men do, who never received ſuch Priviledges from Chriſt as they do. For if Chriſt be in us (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom. 8. 10.) the Body is dead becauſe of Sin: Sanctification exempts us not from Mortality.

But from all theſe, and whatſoever elſe the Fruits and Conſequences of Sin, Chriſt is Redemption to his People alſo: This ſeals up the ſum of Mercies: This ſo compleats the happineſs of the Saints, that it leaves nothing to deſire.

Theſe Four, Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption, take up amongſt them all that is neceſſary or deſirable to make a Soul truly and perfectly Bleſſed.

Secondly, We have here the Method and Way by which the Elect come to be inveſted with theſe excellent Priviledges: The account whereof the Apoſtle gives us in theſe Words, [Who of God is made unto us] in which Expreſſion four Things are remarkable.

Firſt, That Chriſt and his Benefits go inſeparably and undividedly together: 'Tis Chriſt himſelf is made all this unto us: We have no ſaving Benefit ſeperate and apart from the Perſon of Chriſt: Many would willingly receive his Priviledges, who will not receive his Perſon; but it cannot be; if we will have one, we muſt take the other too; Yea, we muſt accept his Perſon firſt, and then his Benefits: As it is in the marriage Covenant, ſo 'its here.

Secondly, That Chriſt with his Benefits muſt be perſonally and particularly applied to us, before we can receive any actual ſaving Priviledge by him: He muſt be [made unto us] (i. e.) particularly applied to us, As a Sum of Money becomes or is made the Ranſom and Liberty of a Captive, when it is not only promiſed, but paid down in his Name, and legally applied for that uſe and end: When Chriſt died, the Ranſom was prepared, the Sum laid down; but yet the Elect continue ſtill in Sin and Miſery notwithſtanding, till by effectual calling it be actually applied to their Perſons, and then they are made free, Rom. 5. 10, 11. reconciled by Chriſt's death, by whom we have now received the attonement.

Thirdly, That this application of Chriſt is the Work of God, and not of Man: Of God he is made unto us: The ſame Hand that prepared it, muſt alſo apply it, or elſe we periſh notwithſtanding all that the Father hath done in contriving and appointing, and all that the Son hath done in executing and accompliſhing the deſign thus far. And this actual application is the Work of the Spirit by a ſingular appropriation.

Fourthly and laſtly, This Expreſſion imports the ſuitableneſs of Chriſt to the neceſſities of Sinners: What they want, he is made to them: And indeed as Money anſwers all things, and is convertible into Meat, Drink, Raiment, Phyſick, or what elſe our bodily neceſſities do require; ſo Chriſt is virtually and eminently all that the neceſſities of our Souls require: Bread to the hungry Soul, and Cloathing to the naked Soul. In a Word, God prepared and furniſhed him on purpoſe to anſwer all our wants, which fully hits the Apoſtles Senſe, when he ſaith, Who of God is made unto us Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption. The ſum of all is,

Doct. That the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with all his precious Benefits, becomes ours by God's ſpecial and effectual Application.

There is a twofold Application of our Redemption, one Primary, the other Secondary: The former is the Act of God the Father, applying it to Chriſt our Surety, and virtually to us in him; the latter is the Act of the holy Spirit, perſonally and actually applying it to us in the Work of Converſion: The former hath the reſpect and relation of an Example, Model, or Pattern to this, and this is produced and wrought by the Vertue of that. What was done upon the Perſon of Chriſt, was not only virtually done upon us, conſidered in him as a common publick repreſentative Perſon, in which Senſe we are ſaid to die with him and live with him, to be crucified with him and buried with him: But it was alſo intended for a Platform, or Idea of what is to be done by the Spirit actually upon our Souls and Bodies in our ſingle Perſons. As he died for Sin, ſo the Spirit applying his Death to us in the Work of mortification, cauſes us to die to Sin, by the vertue of his Death: And he was quickned by the Spirit and raiſed unto Life, ſo the Spirit applying unto us the Life of Chriſt, cauſeth us to live, by ſpiritual vivification. Now this Perſonal, ſecondary and actual application of Redemption to us by the Spirit in his ſanctifying Work, is that which I am engaged here to diſcuſs and open; Which I ſhall do in theſe following Propoſitions.

Prop. 1. The Application of Chriſt to us is not only Comprehenſive of our Juſtification, but of all thoſe Works of the Spirit which are known to us in Scripture by the Names of Regeneration, Vocation, Sanctification and Converſion.

Though all theſe Terms have ſome ſmall reſpective differences among themſelves; yet they are all included in this general, the applying, and putting on of Chriſt, Rom. 13, 14. Put ye on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Regeneration expreſſes thoſe Supernatural, Divine, new Qualities, infuſed by the Spirit into the Soul, which are the Principles of all Holy Actions.

Vocation expreſſes the Terms from which, and to which the Soul moves, when the Spirit works ſavingly upon it under the Goſpel Call.

Sanctification notes that Holy Dedication of Heart and Life to God; Our becoming the Temples of the living God, ſeparate from all prophane, ſinful Practices, to the Lords only Uſe and Service.

Converſion denotes the great change it ſelf which the Spirit cauſeth upon the Soul, turning it by a ſweet irreſiſtible Efficacy from the Pow-of Sin and Satan, to God in Chriſt.

Now all theſe are imported in, and done by the Application of Chriſt to our Souls: For when once the Efficacy of Chriſts Death, and the Vertue of his Reſurrection, come to take Place upon the Heart of any Man, he cannot but turn from Sin to God, and become a new Creature, living and acting by new Principles and Rules. So the Apoſtle obſerves, 1 Theſ. 5. 6. ſpeaking of the effect of this Work of the Spirit upon that People, Our Goſpel (ſaith he) came not to you in Word only, but in Power; and in the Holy Ghoſt: There was the effectual Application of Chriſt to them. And you became followers of us, and of the Lord, ver. 6. there was their effectual Call. And ye turned from dumb Idols to ſerve the living and true God, ver. 9. there was their Converſion. So that ye were enſamples to all that believe, ver. 7. there was their Life of Sanctification or Dedication to God. So that all theſe are comprehended in effectual Application.

Propoſ. 2. The Application of Chriſt to the Souls of Men, is that great Project and Deſign of God in this World, for the Accompliſhment whereof all the Ordinances, and all the Officers of the Goſpel, are appointed and continued in the World.

This the Goſpel expreſly declared to be its direct and great End, and the great buſineſs of all its Officers, Eph. 4. 11, 12. And he gave ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and ſome Evangeliſts, and ſome Paſtors and Teachers: Till we all come in the Unity of the Faith, and the Knowledge of the Son of God; to a perfect Man, unto the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt, (i. e.) the great aim and ſcope of all Chriſt's Ordinances and Officers, is to bring Men into Union with Chriſt, and ſo build them up to Perfection in him: Or to Unite them to, and confirm them in Chriſt: And when it ſhall have finiſhed this Deſign, then ſhall the whole Frame of Goſpel Ordinances be taken down, and all its Officers disbanded. The Kingdom (i. e. this preſent œconomy, Manner and Form of Government) ſhall be delivered up, 1 Cor. 15. 24. What are Miniſters, but the Bridegrooms Friends, Ambaſſadors for God to beſeech Men to be reconciled? When therefore all the Elect are brought home in a reconciled State to Chriſt, when the Marriage of the Lamb is come, our Work and Office expire together.

Propoſ. 3. Such is the Importance and great Concernment of the Perſonal Application of Chriſt to us by the Spirit, that whatſoever the Father hath done in the Contrivement, or the Son hath done in the Accompliſhment of our Redemption, is all inavailable and ineffectual to our Salvation without this.

It is confeſſedly true, that God's good Pleaſure appointing us from Eternity to Salvation, is in its kind a moſt full and ſufficient Impulſive Cauſe of our Salvattion, and every way able (for ſo much as it is concerned) to produce its Effect. And Chriſt's Humiliation and Sufferings are a moſt compleat and ſufficient meritorious Cauſe of our Salvation, to which nothing can be added to make it more apt and able to procure our Salvation, than it already is: Yet neither the one or other can actually ſave any Soul without the Spirits Application of Chriſt to it: For where there are divers ſocial cauſes or concauſes, neceſſary to produce one Effect, there the Effect cannot be produced until the laſt Cauſe have wrought: Thus it is here, The Father hath elected, and the Son hath redeemed; but until the Spirit (who is the laſt Cauſe) have wrought his Part alſo, we cannot be ſaved. For he comes in the Fathers and in the Sons Name and Authority, to put the laſt hand to our Salvation work, by bringing all the Fruits of Election and Redemption home to our Souls in this Work of Effectual Vocation: Hence the Apoſtle, 1 Pet. 1. 2. noting the Order of Cauſes in their Operations, for the bringing about of our Salvation, thus States it: Elect according to the fore-knowledge of God the Father, through Sanctification of the Spirit unto Obedience, and ſprinkling of the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt: Here you find God's Election and Chriſt's Blood, the two great Cauſes of Salvation, and yet neither of theſe alone, nor both together can ſave us; there muſt be added the Sanctification of the Spirit, by which God's Decree is executed; and the ſprinkling (i. e.) the Perſonal Application of Chriſt's Blood) as well as the ſhedding of it, before we can have the ſaving Benefit of either of the former Cauſes.

Propoſ. 4. The Application of Chriſt with his ſaving Benefits, is exactly of the ſame extent and latitude with the Fathers Election, and the Sons Intention in Dying, and cannot poſſibly be extended to one Soul farther.

This is the doctrine that causes so much [illegible] to the [illegible] Soul

Whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called, Rom. 8. 30. And Acts 13. 48. As many as were ordained to Eternal Life, believed; 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath ſaved and called us with an holy Calling, not according to our Works; but according to his own Purpoſe and Grace which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus before the Foundation of the World.

The Father, Son and Spirit (betwixt whom was the Council of Peace) work out their Deſign in a perfect Harmony and Conſent: As there was no Jarr in their Council, ſo there can be none in the Execution of it: Thoſe whom the Father before all Time did chuſe; they, and they only are the Perſons whom the Son, when the fulneſs of Time for the Execution of that Decree was come, Died for, John 17. 6. I have manifeſted thy Name unto the Men which thou gaveſt me out of the World; thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me: And ver. 19. For their ſakes I ſanctifie my ſelf: (i. e.) conſecrate, devote, or ſet my ſelf apart for a Sacrifice for them. And thoſe for whom Chriſt died, are the Perſons to whom the Spirit effectually applies the Benefits and Purchaſes of his Blood: He comes in the Name of the Father and Son; but the World cannot receive him, for it neither ſees, nor knows him, John 14. 17. They that are not of Chriſts ſheep, believe not, John 10. 26.

Chriſt hath indeed a fulneſs of Saving Power, but the Diſpenſation thereof is limited by the Fathers Will: Therefore he tells us, Matt. 20. 23. It is not mine to give, but it ſhall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father: In which Words he no Way denies his Authority, to give Glory as well as Grace; only ſhews that in the Diſpenſation proper to him as Mediator, he was limited by his Fathers Will and Counſel.

And thus alſo are the Diſpenſations of Grace by the Spirit in like manner limited, both by the Counſel and Will of the Father and Son. For as he proceeds from them, ſo he Acts in the Adminiſtration proper to him, by Commiſſion from both. John 14. 26. The Holy Ghoſt whom the Father will ſend in my Name: And as he comes forth into the World by this joint Commiſſion, ſo his Diſpenſations are limited in his Commiſſion: For it's ſaid, John 16. 13. He ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf, but whatſoever he ſhall hear, that ſhall he ſpeak: (i. e.) He ſhall in all Things Act according to his Commiſſion which the Father and I have given him.

The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do, Joh. 5. 19. And the Spirit can do nothing of himſelf, but what he hears from the Father and Son: And it's impoſſible it ſhould be otherwiſe, conſidering not only the Unity of their Nature, but alſo of their Will and Deſign. So that you ſee the Applications of Chriſt, and Benefits by the Spirit, are commenſurable with the Fathers ſecret Counſel, and the Sons deſign in Dying, which are the Rule, Model and Pattern of the Spirits working.

Propoſ. 5. The Application of Chriſt to Souls, by the regenerating work of the Spirit, is that which makes the firſt internal Difference and Diſtinction among Men.

It is very true, that in reſpect of God's foreknowledge and purpoſe, there was a Diſtinction betwixt one Man and another, before any Man had a Being, one was taken, another left: And with reſpect to the Death of Chriſt, there is a great Difference betwixt one and another: He laid down his Life for the Sheep, he prayed for them, and not for the World; but all this while, as to any relative Change of State, or real Change of Temper, they are upon a level with the reſt of the miſerable World. The Elect themſelves are by Nature Children of Wrath even as others, Eph. 2. 3. And to the ſame Purpoſe the Apoſtle tells the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 6. 11. (when he had given in that black Bill, deſcribing the moſt lewd, profligate, abominable Wretches in the World, Men whoſe Practices did ſtink in the very Noſtrils of Nature, and were able to make the more ſober Heathens bluſh; after this he tells the Corinthians) And ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, &c. q. d. look, theſe were your Companions once: As they are, you lately were.

The Work of the Spirit doth not only evidence and manifeſt that Difference which God's Election hath made between Man and Man, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Theſ. 1. 4, 5. But it alſo makes a twofold Difference it ſelf, namely in State and Temper; whereby they viſibly differ not only from other Men, but alſo from themſelves: After this Work, though a Man be the who, yet not the what he was. This Work of the Spirit makes us new Creatures, namely for Quality and Temper, 2 Cor. 5. 17. If any Man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature: Old things are paſt away, behold all things are become new.

Propoſ. 6. The Application of Chriſt by the work of Regeneration, is that which yields unto Men all the ſenſible ſweetneſs and refreſhing Comforts that they have in Chriſt, and in all that he hath done, ſuffered, or purchaſed for Sinners.

An unſanctified Perſon may reliſh the natural ſweetneſs of the Creature, as well as he that is ſanctified; he may alſo ſeem to reliſh and taſte ſome ſweetneſs in the delicious Promiſes and Diſcoveries of the Goſpel by a Miſapplication of them to himſelf: But this is like the Joy of a Beggar dreaming he is a King; but he awakes and finds himſelf a Beggar ſtill: But for the rational, ſolid and genuine Delights and Comforts of Religion, no Man taſtes it, till this work of the Spirit have firſt paſt upon his Soul: It is an encloſed Pleaſure, a ſtranger intermeddles not with it. The white Stone and the new Name, (denoting the pleaſant reſults and fruits of Juſtification and Adoption) no Man knows but he that receives it, Revel. 2. 7. There are all thoſe Things wanting in the unſanctiſied (tho' Elect) Soul, that ſhould capacitate and enable it to reliſh the ſweetneſs of Chriſt and Religion, namely, Propriety, Evidence, and Suitableneſs of Spirit.

Propriety is the ſweeteſt Part of any Excellency, therefore Luther was wont to ſay, That the ſweetneſs of the Goſpel lay moſtly in Pronouns, as me, my, thy, &c. who loved [me] and gave himſelf for me, Gal. 2. 20. Chriſt Jeſus [my] Lord, Phil. 3. 18. So Mat. 9. 2. Son be of good cheer [thy] Sins are forgiven: Take away Propriety, and you deflower the very Goſpel of its Beauty and Delicioufneſs: And as Propriety, ſo

Evidence is requiſite to Joy and Comfort, yea, ſo neceſſary, that even Intereſt and Propriety afford no ſenſible ſweetneſs without it. For as to Comfort, it's all one not to appear, and not to be. If I be before Regiſtred in the Book of Life, and know it not, what Comfort can my Name there afford me? Beſides, to capacitate a Soul for the Sweetneſs and Comfort of Chriſt, there is alſo an agreeable Temper of Spirit required; for how can Chriſt be ſweet to that Mans Soul, whoſe Thoughts reluctate, decline, or nauſeate ſo Holy and Pure an Object? Now, all theſe Requiſites being the proper Effects and Fruits of the Spirits ſanctifying Operations upon us, it is beyond Controverſie that the Conſolations of Chriſt cannot be taſted, until the Application of Chriſt be firſt made.

Propoſ. 7. The Application of Chriſt to the Soul effectually, though it be ſo far wrought in the firſt ſaving work of the Spirit, as truly to entitle the Soul to Chriſt, and ſave it from the danger of periſhing; yet is it a work gradually advancing in the Believers Soul, whilſt it abides on this ſide Heaven and Glory.

It's true indeed, that Chriſt is perfectly and compleatly applied to the Soul in the firſt Act for Righteouſneſs. Juſtification being a relative Change, properly admits no Degrees, but is perfected together, and at once, in one only Act; though as to its Manifeſtation and Senſe, it hath various Degrees: But the Application of Chriſt to us for Wiſdom and Sanctification, is not perfected in one ſingle Act, but riſes by many and ſlow Degrees to its juſt Perfection.

Nullos propriè dictos gradus admittit, ſed unico actu ſimul ac ſemel exiſtit perfecta, quamvis quoad manifeſtationem, ſenſum, & effecta; varios habet gradus. Ames.

And though we are truly ſaid to be come to Chriſt when we firſt believe, John 6. 35. yet the Soul after that is ſtill coming to him by farther Acts of Faith: 1 Pet. 2. 4. To whom [comeing] as unto a living Stone: The Particle notes a continued Motion, by which the Soul gains Ground, and ſtill gets nearer and nearer to Chriſt: Growing ſtill more inwardly acquainted with him, the Knowledge of Chriſt grows upon the Soul as the Morning-light, from its firſt ſpring, to the perfect Day: Prov. 4. 18. every Grace of the Spirit grows, if not ſenſibly, yet really, for it is in diſcerning the growth of Sanctification, as it is in diſcerning the growth of Plants; which we perceive rather creviſſe, quam creſſere: To have grown, than to grow. And as it thrives in the Soul, by deeper Radications of the Habits, and more promptitude and ſpirituality in the Actings; ſo Chriſt and the Soul proportionably cloſe more and more inwardly and efficacionſly, till at laſt it be wholly ſwallow'd up in Chriſts full and perfect Enjoyment.

Propoſ. 8. Laſtly, Although the ſeveral Priviledges and Benefits forementioned be all truly and really beſtowed with Chriſt upon Believers, yet they are not communicated to them in one and the ſame way and manner; but differently and diverſly, as their reſpective Natures do require.

Theſe four illuſtrious Benefits are convey'd from Chriſt to us in three different Ways and Methods: His Righteouſneſs is made ours by Imputation: His Wiſdom and Sanctification by Renovation: His Redemption, by our Glorification.

I know the Communication of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs to us by Imputation, is not only denied, but * ſcoffed at by Papiſts; who own no Righteouſneſs, but what is (at leaſt) confounded with that which is inherent in us: And for imputative (blaſphemouſly ſtiled by them putative) Righteouſneſs; they flatly deny it, and look upon it as a moſt abſurd Doctrine, every where endeavouring to load it with theſe and ſuch like Abſurdities. That if God impute Chriſt's Righteouſneſs to the Believer, and accepts what Chriſt hath performed for him; as if he had performed it himſelf: Then, we may be accounted as Righteous as Chriſt. Then we may be the Redeemers of the World. Falſe and groundleſs Conſequences: As if a Man ſhould ſay, my Debt is paid by my Surety, therefore I am as Rich as he: When we ſay the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt is made ours by Imputation, we think not it's made ours according to it's univerſal Value, but according to our particular Neceſſity: Not to make others Righteous, but to make us ſo: Not that we have the formal intrinſecal Righteouſneſs of Chriſt in us, as it is in him, but a relative Righteouſneſs, which makes us Righteous even as he is Righteous, not as to the Quantity, but as to the Truth of it: Nor is it imputed to us, as though Chriſt deſigned to make us the Cauſes of Salvation to others, but the Subjects of Salvation our ſelves; it is inheſively in him, communicatively it becomes ours: By Imputation the Sin of the firſt Adam became ours, and the ſame Way the Righteouſneſs of the ſecond Adam becomes ours, Rom. 5. 17. This way the Redeemer became Sin for us, and this way we are made the Righteouſneſs of God in him, 2 Cor. 5. 21. This way Abraham the Father of Believers was juſtified, therefore this Way all Believers, the Children of Abraham muſt be juſtified alſo, Rom. 4. 22, 23. And thus is Chriſt's Righteouſneſs made ours.

* Spectrum cerebri Lutherani. Stapleton.

John 3. 17.

Non formali & intrinſeca juſtitiâ, ſed relativâ: non quoad quantitatem: ſed veritatem fit enim finita applicatio infinitæ juſtitiæ; ſi aliter, æquè juſti eſſemus ut Chriſtus, at non: juſtitia Chriſti fit noſtra, non quoad univerſalem valorem, ſed particularem neceſſitatem; & imputatus nobis, non ut cauſis ſalvationis, ſed ut ſubjectis ſalvandis. Bradſh. de Juſtificat.

But in conveying and communicating his Wiſdom and Sanctification, he takes another Method, for this is not imputed, but really imparted to us, by the illuminating, and regenerating Work of the Spirit: Theſe are Graces really inherent in us: Our Righteouſneſs comes from Chriſt as a Surety, but our Holineſs comes from him as a quickening Head, ſending vital Influences into all his Members.

Now theſe gracious Habits being ſubjected and ſeated in the Souls of poor imperfect Creatures, whoſe Corruptions abide and work in the very ſame Faculties where Grace hath its reſidence, it cannot be, that our Sanctification ſhould be ſo perfect and compleat, as our Juſtification is, which inheres only in Chriſt. See Gal. 5. 17. Thus are Righteouſneſs and Sanctification communicated and made ours: But then,

For Redemption, that is to ſay, Abſolute and Plenary Deliverance from all the ſad remains, effects and conſequents of Sin, both upon Soul and Body: This is made ours, (or to keep to the Terms) Chriſt is made Redemption to us by Glorification; then, and not before, are theſe miſerable Effects removed; we put off theſe together with the Body. So that look, as Juſtification cures the guilt of Sin, and Sanctification the Dominion and Power of Sin, ſo Glorification removes together with its Exiſtence and Being, all thoſe Miſeries which it let in (as at a floodgate) upon our whole Man, Eph. 5. 26, 27.

And thus of God, Chriſt is made unto us Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification, and Redemption; namely, by Imputation, Regeneration, and Glorification.

I ſhall next improve the Point in ſome uſeful Inferences.

Inference 1. Learn from hence what a naked, deſtitute, and empty Thing a poor Sinner is, in his Natural and Unregenerate State.

He is one that naturally and inherently hath neither Wiſdom, nor Righteouſneſs, Sanctification, nor Redemption; all theſe muſt come from without himſelf, even from Chriſt; who is made all this to a Sinner, or elſe he muſt Eternally Periſh.

As no Creature (in reſpect of external Abilities) comes under more natural weakneſs into the World than Man, naked and empty, and more ſhiftleſs and helpleſs than any other Creature; ſo it is with his Soul, yea, much more than ſo: All our Excellencies are borrowed Excellencies, no Reaſon therefore to be proud of any of them; 1 Cor. 4. 7. What haſt thou, that thou haſt not received? Now if thou didſt receive it, why doſt thou Glory, as if thou hadſt not received it? q. d. What intolerable inſolence, and vanity, would it be for a Man that wears the rich and coſtly Robe of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, in which there is not one Thred of his own ſpinning; but all made by free Grace, and not by free Will; to jett proudly up and down the World in it, as if himſelf had made it; and he were beholding to none for it? O Man! thine Excellencies, whatever they are, are borrowed from Chriſt, they oblige thee to him, but he can be no more obliged to thee, who weareſt them, than the Sun is obliged to him that borrows its Light, or the Fountain to him that draws its Water for his Uſe and Benefit.

Quin dicitur eum factum eſſe nobis ſapientiam, ſanctitatem & redemptionem, rurſus & noſtra dignitas & meritum excluduntur: ex hoc etiam conſequitur, ante perceptionem ejus, nos fuiſſe ſtultos, injuſtos, profanos & diaboli mancipia Muſcul. in loc.

And it hath ever been the Care of Holy Men, when they have viewed their own gracious Principles, or beſt Performances; ſtill to diſclaim themſelves, and own Free Grace as the ſole Author of all. Thus Holy Paul viewing the Principles of Divine Life in himſelf, (the richeſt Gift beſtowed upon Man in this World by Jeſus Chriſt) how doth he renounce himſelf, and deny the leaſt Part of the Praiſe and Glory as belonging to him, Gal. 2. 20. Now I live, yet not I; but Chriſt liveth in me: And ſo for the beſt Duties that ever he performed for God (and what meer Man ever did more for God?) yet when in a juſt and neceſſary Defence he was conſtrain'd to mention them, 1 Cor. 15. 10. how carefully is the, like [Yet not I] preſently added? I laboured more abundantly than they all, yet not I, but the Grace of God which was with me.

Well then, let the Senſe of your own emptineſs by Nature humble and oblige you the more to Chriſt, from whom you receive all you have.

Inference 2. Hence we are informed, that none can claim Benefit by imputed Righteouſneſs, but thoſe only that live in the Power of inherent holineſs: To whomſoever Chriſt is made righteouſneſs, to him he alſo is made ſanctification.

The true doctrine of the ever bleſsed Goſpel

The Goſpel hath not the leaſt Favour for licentiouſneſs: It is every way as careful to preſs Men to their Duties, as to inſtruct them in their Priviledges, Titus 3. 8. This is a faithful ſaying; and theſe things I will that thou affirm conſtantly; That they which have believed in God, might be careful to maintain good Works: It is a looſe Principle, divulged by Libertines, to the reproach of Chriſt and his Goſpel, that Sanctification is not the Evidence of our Juſtification: And Chriſt is as much wronged by them who ſeparate Holineſs from Righteouſneſs (as if a ſenſual vile Life were conſiſtent with a juſtified State) as he is the contrary extream by thoſe who confound Chriſt's Righteouſneſs with Mans Holineſs, in the Point of Juſtification: Or that own no other Righteouſneſs but what is inherent in themſelves: The former Opinion makes him a Cloak for Sin, the latter a needleſs Sacrifice for Sin.

It's true, our Sanctification can't juſtifie us before God; but what then, can't it Evidence our Juſtification before Men? Is there no neceſſity or uſe for Holineſs, becauſe it hath no hand in our Juſtification? Is the preparation of the Soul for Heaven, by altering its Frame and Temper, nothing? Is the glorifying of our Redeemer, by the exerciſes of Grace in this World, nothing? Doth the Work of Chriſt render the Work of the Spirit needleſs? God forbid: He came not by Blood only, but by Water alſo, 1 Joh. 5, 6. And when the Apoſtle ſaith, in Rom. 4. 5. But unto him that worketh not, but believeth on him that juſtifieth the ungodly; his Faith is counted for Righteouſneſs: The Scope of it is, neither to characterize and deſcribe the juſtified Perſon, as one that is lazy and ſlothful, and hath no mind to Work, or rebellious and refactory, refuſing Obedience to the Commands of God; but to repreſent him as a nimble ſinner, who is convinced of his inability to Work out his own Righteouſneſs by the Law, and ſees all his endeavours to obey the Law fall ſhort of Righteouſneſs, and therefore is ſaid in a Law ſenſe not to Work, becauſe he doth not Work ſo as to anſwer the purpoſe and end of the Law, which accepts of nothing beneath perfect Obedience.

And when (in the ſame Text) the ungodly are ſaid to be juſtified, that Character deſcribes not the Temper and Frame of their Hearts and Lives after their juſtification, but what it was before, not as it leaves, but as it found them.

Deus juſtificat impium antecedenter, non conſequenter. Pareus.

Infer. 3. How unreaſonable and worſe than bruitiſh is the Sin of Infidelity, by which the Sinner rejects Chriſt, and with him all thoſe Mercies and Benefits which alone can relieve and cure his miſery!

He is by Nature blind and ignorant, and yet refuſes Chriſt, who comes to him with heavenly Light and Wiſdom: He is condemned by the terrible ſentence of the Law to eternal wrath, and yet rejects Chriſt who tenders to him compleat and perfect Righteouſneſs: He is wholly polluted and plunged into Original and actual Pollutions of Nature and Practice, yet will have none of Chriſt, who would become Sanctification to him: He is oppreſſed in Soul and Body with the deplorable effects and miſeries Sin hath brought upon him, and yet is ſo in love with his Bondage, that he will neither accept Chriſt, nor the Redemption he brings with him to Sinners.

Oh what Monſters; ~~What Beaſts~~ hath Sin turned its Subjects into! You will not come unto me that you may have Life, Joh. 5. 40. Sin hath ſtabb'd the ſinner to the Heart, the Wounds are all mortal, eternal Death is in his Face; Chriſt hath prepared the only Plaiſter that can cure his Wounds, but he will not ſuffer him to apply it: He acts like one in love with Death, and that judges it ſweet to periſh. So Chriſt tells us, Prov. 8. 36. All they that hate me love Death: Not in it ſelf, but in its cauſes; with which it is inſeparably connected: They are loth to burn, yet willing to Sin; tho' Sin kindle thoſe everlaſting Flames. So that in two things the unbeliever ſhews himſelf worſe than bruitiſh, he can't think of Damnation the effect of Sin, without horror, and yet cannot think of Sin the cauſe of Damnation, without pleaſure: he is loth to periſh to all Eternity without remedy, and yet refuſes and declines Chriſt as if he were an Enemy, who only can and would deliver him from that eternal Perdition.

Non quod quiſque ita inſaniat, ut ſciens & volens diligat mortem; quam omnes natura exhorreſcimus: ſed quia iſta eſt fructus ſpretæ ſapientiæ Dei, ut mortem tandem afferat. Lavat in loc.

How do Men act therefore as if they were in love with their own ruin? Many poor wretches, now in the way to Hell, what an hard ſhift do they make to caſt themſelves away! Chriſt meets them many times in the Ordinances; where they ſtudiouſly ſhun him: Many times checks them in their way by Convictions, which they make an hard ſhift to overcome and conquer: Oh how willing are they to accept a Cure, a benefit, a remedy, for any thing but their Souls! You ſee then that Sinners cannot, (ſhould they Study all their Days to do themſelves a miſchief) take a readier courſe to undo themſelves, than by rejecting Chriſt in his gracious offers.

Surely the Sin of Sodom and Gomorrha is leſs than this Sin, Mercy it ſelf is exaſperated by it, and the Damnation of ſuch as reject Chriſt (ſo prepared for them, with whatever they need, and ſo ſeriouſly and frequently offer'd to them upon the Knee of Goſpel intreaty) is juſt, inevitable, and more intolerable than any in the World beſide them. It is juſt, for the Sinner hath but his own option, or choice: He is but come to the end which he was often told his way would bring him to. It is inevitable, for there is no other way to Salvation but that which is rejected: And it will be more intolerable than the Damnation of others, becauſe neither Heathens nor Devil ever aggravated their Sins by ſuch an horrid circumſtance, as the wilful refuſing of ſuch an apt, offered, and only remedy.

Infer. 4. What a tremendous ſymptom of Wrath, and ſad Character of Death, appears upon that Mans Soul to which no effectual application of Chriſt can be made by the Goſpel!

Chriſt with his Benefits is frequently tendered to them in the Goſpel, they have been beſeeched once and again upon the Knee of Importunity to accept him, thoſe entreaties and perſwaſions have been urged by the greateſt Arguments, the Command of God, the Love of Chriſt, the inconceiveable happineſs or miſery which unavoidably follows the accepting or rejecting of thoſe offers, and yet nothing will ſtick: All their Pleas for Infidelity have been over and over confuted, their Reaſons and Conſciences have ſtood convinced, they have been Speechleſs as well as Chriſtleſs: Not one ſound Argument is found with them to defend their Infidelity : They confeſs in general, that ſuch courſes as theirs is, lead to Deſtruction : They will yield them to be happy Souls that are in Chriſt : And yet when it comes to the point, their own cloſing with him, nothing will ſtick : All Arguments, all Entreaties, return to us without ſucceſs.

Lord ! What is the reaſon of this unaccountable obſtinacy ! In other things it is not ſo : If they be ſick, they are ſo far from rejecting a Phyſician that offers himſelf, that they will ſend and pray, and pay him too. If they be Arreſted for Debt, and any one will be a Surety, and pay their Debts for them, words can hardly expreſs the ſenſe they have of ſuch a kindneſs ; but tho' Chriſt would be a Phyſician and Surety, and whatever elſe their needs require, they will rather periſh to Eternity than accept him : What may we fear to be the reaſon of this, but becauſe they are not of Chriſts Sheep, Joh. 10. 26. The Lord open the Eyes of poor Sinners, to apprehend not only how great a Sin, but how dreadful a ſign this is.

Infer. 5. If Chriſt with all his Benefits be made ours by Gods ſpecial application ; what a Day of Mercies then is the Day of Converſion ! What multitudes of choice bleſſings viſit the converted Soul in that Day !

This day (ſaith Chriſt to Zacheus, Luk. 19. 9.) is Salvation come to this Houſe : In this Day Chriſt cometh into the Soul, and he comes not empty, but brings with him all his Treaſures of Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption. Troops of Mercies, yea, of the beſt of Mercies, come with him. It is a Day of ſingular gladneſs and joy to the Heart of Chriſt when he is Eſpouſed to, and received by the believing Soul : It is as a Coronation-day to a King. So you read, Cant. 3. 11. Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, and behold King Solomon with the Crown wherewith his Mother crowned him in the Day of his Eſpouſals, and in the Day of the gladneſs of his Heart.

Where under the Type of Solomon in his greateſt Magnificence and Glory, when the Royal Diadem was ſet upon his Head, and the People ſhouted for joy, ſo that the Earth did ring again, is ſhadowed out the joy of Chriſts Heart, when poor Souls by their high Eſtimation of him, and conſent to his Government, do, as it were, Crown him with Glory and Honour, and make his Heart glad.

Now if the Day of our Eſpouſals to Chriſt, be the Day of the gladneſs of his Heart, and he reckons himſelf thus honoured and glorified by us, what a Day of joy and gladneſs ſhould it be to our Hearts, and how ſhould we be tranſported with joy, to ſee a King from Heaven with all his Treaſures of Grace and Glory beſtowing himſelf freely and everlaſtingly upon us, as our Portion ! No wonder Zacheus came down joyfully, Luke 19. 6. That the Eunuch went home rejoycing, Acts 8. 39. That the Jaylor rejoyced, believing in God with all his Houſhold, Acts 16. 34. That they that were converted, did eat their Meat with gladneſs, praiſing God, Acts 2. 41, 46. That there was great joy among them of Samaria, when Chriſt came among them in the preaching of the Goſpel, Acts 8. 5, 8. I ſay, it's no wonder, we read of joy accompanying Chriſt into the Soul, when we conſider that in one Day ſo many Bleſſings meet together in it, the leaſt of which is not to be exchanged for all the Kingdoms of this World, and the Glory of them. Eternity it ſelf will but ſuffice to bleſs God for the Mercies of this one Day.

Infer. 6. If Chriſt be made all this to every Soul unto whom he is effectually applied, what cauſe then have thoſe Souls, that are under the preparatory Work of the Spirit, and are come nigh to Chriſt and all his Benefits, to ſtretch out their Hands with vehement deſire to Chriſt, and give him the moſt importunate invitation into their Souls !

The whole World is diſtinguiſhable into three Claſſes, or ſorts of Perſons, ſuch as are far from Chriſt, ſuch as are not far from Chriſt, and ſuch as are in Chriſt : They that are in Chriſt have heartily received him : Such as are far from Chriſt will not open to him ; their Hearts are faſt barred by Ignorance, Prejudice and Unbelief againſt him ; but thoſe that are come under the prepatory workings of the Spirit nigh to Chriſt, who ſee their own indiſpenſable neceſſity of him, and his ſuitableneſs to their neceſſities, in whom alſo encouraging hopes begin to dawn, and their Souls are waiting at the Foot of God for power to receive him, for an Heart to cloſe ſincerely and univerſally with him ; oh what vehemenet Deſires ! What ſtrong Pleas ! What moving Arguments ſhould ſuch Perſons urge and plead to win Chriſt, and get Poſſeſſion of him ! They are in ſight of their only Remedy : Chriſt and Salvation are come to their very Doors : There wants but a few things to make them bleſſed for ever : This is the Day in which their Souls are exerciſed greatly betwixt hopes and fears : Now they are much alone, and deep in thoughtfulneſs, they weep and make ſupplication for an Heart to believe, and that againſt the great diſcouragments with which they encounter.

Reader, if this be the caſe of thy Soul, it will not be the leaſt piece of Service I can do for thee, to ſuggeſt Pleas as in this caſe are proper to be urged for the attainment of thy deſires, and the cloſing of the Match betwixt Chriſt and thee.

Firſt, Plead the abſolute neceſſity which now drives thee to Chriſt : Tell him thy hope is utterly periſhed in all other refuges : Thou art come like a ſtarving Beggar to the laſt Door of Hope : Tell him thou now beginneſt to ſee the abſolute neceſſity of Chriſt : Thy Body hath not ſo much need of Bread, Water, or Air, as thy Soul hath of Chriſt, and that Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption that are in him.

Secondly, Plead the Fathers gracious deſign in furniſhing and ſending him into the World, and his own deſign in accepting the Fathers call. Lord Jeſus, waſt thou not anointed to Preach good tidings to the meek, to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the Captives, and the opening of the Priſon to them that are bound ? Iſa. 16. 1, 3. Behold an Object ſuitable to thine Office : Whileſt I was ignorant of my Condition, I had a proud rebellious Heart, but conviction and ſelf-acquaintance have now meekned it : My Heart was harder than the nether Milſtone, and it was as eaſie to diſſolve the obdurate Rocks into Syrup, as to thaw and melt my Heart for Sin ; but now God hath made my Heart ſoft, I ſenſibly feel the Miſery of my Condition. I once Thought my ſelf at perfect Liberty, but now I ſee what I conceited to be perfect Liberty, is perfect Bondage; and never did a poor Priſoner ſigh for deliverance more than I. Since then thou haſt given me a Soul thus qualified (though ſtill unworthy) for the Exerciſe of thine Office, and Execution of thy Commiſſion: Lord Jeſus, be according to thy Name a Jeſus unto me.

Thirdly, Plead the unlimited and general Invitations made to ſuch Souls as you are, to come to Chriſt freely. Lord, thou haſt made open Proclamation; Ho every one that thirſteth come ye to the Waters, Iſa. 55. 1. and Revel. 22. 17. Him that is athirſt come: In Obedience to thy call, lo I come, had I not been invited, my coming to the (dear Lord Jeſus) had been an Act of Preſumption, but this makes it an Act of Duty and Obedience.

Fourthly, Plead the unprofitableneſs of thy Blood to God. Lord there is no Profit in my Blood, it will turn to no more Advantage to thee to deſtroy, than it will to ſave me; if thou ſend me to Hell (as the Merit of my Sin calls upon thy Juſtice to do) I ſhall be there diſhonouring thee to all Eternity, and the Debt I owe thee never paid: But if thou apply thy Chriſt to me for Righteouſneſs, Satisfaction for all that I have done will be laid down in one full round Sum; indeed, if the Honour of thy Juſtice lay as a Bar to my Pardon, it would ſtop my Mouth; but when thy Juſtice, as well as Mercy, ſhall both rejoyce together, and be glorified and pleaſed in the ſame Act, what hinders but that Chriſt be apply'd to my Soul; ſince in ſo doing, God can be no loſer by it?

Fifthly; Laſtly, Plead thy Compliance with the Terms of the Goſpel: Tell him, Lord, my Will complies fully and heartily to all thy gracious Terms. I can now ſubſcribe a Blank: Let God offer his Chriſt on what Terms he will, my Heart is ready to comply. I have no Exception againſt any Article of the Goſpel; and now, Lord, I wholly refer my ſelf to thy Pleaſure; do with me what ſeemeth good in thine Eyes, only give me an Intereſt Jeſus Chriſt: As to all other concerns I lie at thy Feet, in full Reſignation of all to thy Pleaſure. Never yet did any periſh in that poſture and frame; and I hope I ſhall not be made the firſt Inſtance and Example.

Infer. 7. Laſtly, If Chriſt with all his Benefits, be made ours by ſpecial Application; how contented, thankful, comfortable and hopeful, ſhould Believers be in every Condition which God caſts them into in this World!

After ſuch a Mercy as this, let them never open their Mouths any more to repine and grudge at the outward Inconveniencies of their Condition in this World: What are the Things you want, compared with the Things you enjoy? What is a little Money, Health or Liberty, to Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption? All the Crowns and Scepters in the World, ſold to their full Value, are no Price for the leaſt of theſe Mercies: But I will not inſiſt here, your Duty lies much higher than Contentment.

Be Thankful as well as Content in every State: Bleſſed be God (ſaith the Apoſtle) the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all [ſpiritual Bleſſings] in heavenly Places in Chriſt: O think what are Men to Angels, that Chriſt ſhould paſs by them to become a Saviour to Men! And what art thou among Men, that thou ſhouldſt be taken, and others left! And among all the Mercies of God, what Mercies are comparable to theſe conferr'd upon thee? O bleſs God in the loweſt Ebb of outward Comforts, for ſuch Priviledges as theſe.

And yet you will not come up to your Duty in all this, except you be joyful in the Lord, and rejoyce evermore after the Receipt of ſuch Mercies as theſe, Philip. 4. 4. Rejoice in the Lord ye Righteous, and again I ſay Rejoyce: For hath not the poor Captive reaſon to rejoyce, when he hath recovered his Liberty? The Debtor to rejoyce, when all ſcores are cleared and he owes nothing? The weary Traveller to rejoice, though he be not owner of a Shilling, when he he is come almoſt home where all his wants ſhall be ſupplied? Why this is your Caſe, when Chriſt once becomes yours; you are the Lords Freemen, your Debts to Juſtice are all ſatisfied by Chriſt: And you are within a little of compleat Redemption, from all the Troubles and Inconveniencies of your preſent State.

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 2.

The Second SERMON.

JOHN XVII. xxiii.

I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one.

Wherein the Believers Union with Chriſt is ſtated, and opened as a principal part of Goſpel Application.

THE Deſign and End of the Application of Chriſt to Sinners, is the Communication of his Benefits to them: But ſeeing all Communications of Benefits neceſſarily imply Communion, and all Communion as neceſſarily pre-ſuppoſes Union with his Perſon: I ſhall therefore in this Place, and from this Scripture, treat of the Myſtical Union betwixt Chriſt and Believers: This Union being the principal Act wherein the Spirits Application of Chriſt conſiſts; of which I ſpake (as to its general Nature) in the former Sermon.

In this Verſe (omitting the Contexture) we find a Threefold Union: One betwixt the Father and Chriſt, a ſecond betwixt Chriſt and Believers; a third betwixt Believers themſelves.

Firſt, Thou in me: This is a glorious ineffable Union, and is fundamental to the other two:

The Father is not only in Chriſt, in reſpect of dear Affection, as one Friend is in another, who is as his own Soul: Nor only eſſentially, in reſpect of the identity and ſameneſs of Nature and Attributes, in which reſpect Chriſt is the expreſs Image of his Perſon, Heb. 1. 3. But he is in Chriſt alſo as Mediator, by communicating the fulneſs of the Godhead which dwells in him as God-Man, in a tranſcendant and ſingular Manner; ſo as it never dwelt, nor can dwell in any other, Col. 2. 9.

Secondly, I in them: Here is the Myſtical Union betwixt Chriſt and the Saints, q. d. Thou and I are one eſſentially, they and I are one myſtically: Thou and I are one by the Communication of the Godhead, and ſingular fulneſs of the Spirit to me as Mediator; and they and I are one, by my Communication of the Spirit to them in meaſure.

Thirdly, From hence reſults a Third Union betwixt Believers themſelves: That they may be made perfect in one: The ſame Spirit dwelling in them all, and equally uniting them all to me, as living Members to their Head of Influence, there muſt needs be a dear and intimate Union betwixt themſelves as Fellow-Members of the ſame Body.

Now, my Buſineſs at this Time lying in the ſecond Branch, namely, the Union betwixt Chriſt and Believers, I ſhall gather up the Subſtance of it into this Doctrinal Propoſition, to which I ſhall apply this Diſcourſe.

Doct. That there is a ſtrict and dear Union betwixt Chriſt, and all true Believers.

The Scriptures have borrowed from the Book of Nature four elegant and lively Metaphors to help the Nature of this Myſtical Union with Chriſt into our Underſtandings; namely, That of two Pieces of Timber, united by Glew: That of a Graff taking hold of its Stock, and making one Tree: That of the Husband and Wife, by the Marriage Covenant becoming one Fleſh: And that of the Members and Head animated by one Soul, and ſo becoming one Natural Body. Every one of theſe is more lively and full than the other, and what is defective in one, is ſupplied in the other; but yet, neither any of theſe ſingly, or all of them jointly, can give us a full and compleat Account of this Myſtery.

Not that of two Pieces united by Glew, 1 Cor. 6. 17. He that is joyned to the Lord is one Spirit, κολλώμενος, glewed to the Lord. For though this cementeth, and ſtrongly joyns them in one, yet this is but a faint and imperfect ſhadow of our Union with Chriſt; for though this Union by glew be intimate, yet it is not vital, but ſo is that of the Soul with Chriſt.

Nor that of the Graff and Stock mentioned Rom. 6. 5. for though it be there ſaid that Believers are σύμφυτοι, implanted, or ingraffed by way of Inciſion, and this Union betwixt it and the Stock be vital, for it partakes of the vital Sap and Juice of it; yet here alſo is a remarkable defect, for the graff is of a more excellent Kind and Nature than the Stock, and upon that Account the Tree receives its Denomination from it, as from the more noble and excellent Part; but Chriſt, into whom Believers are ingraffed, is infinitely more excellent than they, and they are denominated from him.

Nor yet that Conjugal Union by Marriage-Covenant betwixt a Man and his Wife; for though this be exceeding dear and intimate, ſo, that a Man leaves Father and Mother, and cleaves to his Wife, and they two become one Fleſh: Yet this Union is not indiſſolvable, but may and muſt be broken by Death; and then the Relict lives alone without any Communion with, or Relation to the Perſon that was once ſo dear: But this betwixt Chriſt and the Soul can never be diſſolved by Death, it abides to Eternity.

Nor laſtly, That of the Head and Members united by one Vital Spirit, and ſo making one Phyſical Body, mentioned Eph. 4. 15, 16. for though one Soul actuates every Member, yet it doth not knit every Member alike near to the Head, but ſome are nearer, and others removed farther from it; but here every Member is alike nearly United with Chriſt the Head, the weak are as near to him as the ſtrong.

Two Things are neceſſary to be opened in the Doctrinal Part of this Point. 1. The Reality. 2. The Quality of this Union.

Firſt, For the Reality of it, I ſhall make it appear that there is ſuch a Union betwixt Chriſt and Believers: It is no Ens rationis, empty Notion, or cunningly deviſed Fable; but a moſt certain demonſtrable Truth, which appears,

Firſt, From the Communion which is betwixt Chriſt and Believers: In this the Apoſtle is expreſs, 1 John 1. 3. Truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt: κοινωνία. It ſignifies ſuch Fellowſhip or Copartnerſhip, as Perſons have by a Joynt Intereſt in one and the ſame Enjoyment, which is in common betwixt them. So Heb. 3. 14. we are μέτοχοι, partakers of Chriſt. And Pſalm 45. 7. מחבריך here the Saints are called the Companions, Conſorts, or Fellows of Chriſt: And that not only in reſpect of his Aſſumption of our Mortality, and inveſting us with his Immortality, but it hath a ſpecial Reference and Reſpect to the Unction of the Holy Ghoſt, or Graces of the Spirit of which Believers are partakers with him and through him. Now this Communion of the Saints with Chriſt, is entirely and neceſſarily Dependant upon their Union with him, even as much as the Branches Participation of the Sap and Juice, depends upon its Union and Coalition with the Stock: Take away Union, and there can be no Communion, or Communications, which is clear from 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. All is yours, and ye are Chriſts, and Chriſt is Gods: Where you ſee how all our Participation of Chriſt's Benefits, is built upon our Union with Chriſt's Perſon.

Ipſe venit in ſortem noſtræ mortalitatis, ut in ſortem nos adduceret ſuæ immortalitatis: clarum autem eſt, hic agi de conſortibus unctionis: quales ſunt omnes fideles qui unctionis participes fiunt. Rivet.

Secondly, The Reality of the Believers Union with Chriſt, is evident from the Imputation of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs to him for his Juſtification. That a Believer is juſtified before God by a Righteouſneſs without himſelf is undeniable from Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Chriſt Jeſus: And that Chriſt's Righteouſneſs becomes ours by Imputation, is as clear from Rom. 4. 23, 24. but it can never be imputed puted to us, except we be united to him, and become one with him: Which is alſo plainly aſſerted in 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye (in Chriſt Jeſus) who of God is made unto us Wiſdom, and Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption: He communicates his Merits unto none but thoſe that are in him: Hence all thoſe vain Cavils of the Papiſts diſputing againſt our Juſtification by the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and aſſerting it to be by inherent Righteouſneſs, are ſolidly anſwered,

When they demand, how can we be juſtified by the Righteouſneſs of another? Can I be rich with another Mans Money, or preferr'd by anothers Honours? Our Anſwer is, Yes, if that other be my Surety or Husband: Indeed Peter cannot be juſtified by the Righteouſneſs of Paul; but both may be juſtified by the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to them; they being Members jointly knit to one common Head: Principal and Surety are one in Obligation, and Conſtruction of Law: Head and Members are one Body, Branch, and Stock are one Tree, and it's no ſtrange thing to ſee a Graff live by the ſap of another Stock, when once it is ingraffed into it.

Thirdly, The Sympathy that is betwixt Chriſt and Believers proves a Union betwixt them: Chriſt and the Saints ſmile and ſigh together. St. Paul, in Coloſ. 1. 2, 4. tells us, that he did fill up that which is behind, τὰ ὑστερήματα —— the Remainders of the Sufferings of Chriſt in his Fleſh: Not as if Chriſt's Sufferings were imperfect, (for by one Offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified, Heb. 10. 14.) but in theſe Two Scriptures Chriſt is conſider'd in a Twofold Capacity: He ſuffer'd once in Corpore proprio, in his own Perſon as Mediator; theſe Sufferings are compleat and full, and in that Senſe he ſuffers no more: He ſuffers alſo in Corpore Myſtico, in his Church and Members; thus he ſtill ſuffers in the Sufferings of every Saint for his ſake: And tho' theſe Sufferings in his Myſtical Body, are not equal to the other, either pondere & menſura, in their Weight and Value, nor yet deſigned ex Officio, for the ſame Uſe and Purpoſe, to ſatisfie by their proper Merit offended Juſtice; nevertheleſs they are truly reckoned the Sufferings of Chriſt, becauſe the Head ſuffers when the Members do: And without this Suppoſition, that Place, Acts 9. 5. is never to be underſtood, when Chriſt the Head in Heaven cries out, Saul, Saul, why Perſecuteſt thou me? When the Toe was trod upon on Earth: How doth Chriſt ſenſibly feel our Sufferings or we his, if there be not a Myſtical Union betwixt him and us.

Fourthly and Laſtly, The Way and Manner in which the Saints ſhall be raiſed at the laſt Day, proves this Myſtical Union betwixt Chriſt and them; for they are not to be raiſed as others, by the naked Power of God without them, but by the Vertue of Chriſt's Reſurrection as their Head, ſending forth vital quickening Influences into their dead Bodies, which are united to him as well as their Souls. For ſo we find it, Rom. 8. 11. But if the Spirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the Dead, dwell in you: He that raiſed up Chriſt from the Dead ſhall alſo quicken your Mortal Bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you: Even as it is in our awakening out of natural Sleep, firſt the Animal Spirits in the Head begin to rouze and play there, and then the Senſes and Members are looſed throughout the whole Body.

Now it's impoſſible the Saints ſhould be raiſed in the laſt Reſurrection, by the Spirit of Chriſt dwelling in them; if that Spirit did not knit and unite them to him, as Members to their Head. So then, by all this it is proved there is a real Union of the Saints with Chriſt.

Next I ſhall endeavour to open the Quality and Nature of this Union; and ſhew you what it is according to the weak Apprehenſions we have of ſo ſublime a Myſtery; and this I ſhall do in a General } and } Account of it.

Particular }

Firſt, More Generally, it is an intimate Conjunction of Believers to Chriſt, by the imparting of his Spirit to them, whereby they are enabled to believe and live in him.

All Divine Spiritual Life is originally in the Father, and cometh not to us but by, and through the Son, John 5. 26. to him hath the Father given to have an ἀυτοζῶιν —— a quickening, enlivening Power in himſelf: But the Son communicates this Life which is in him, to none but by and through the Spirit, Rom. 1. 2. The Spirit of Life, which is in Chriſt Jeſus, hath made me Free from the Law of Sin and Death.

The Spirit muſt therefore firſt take hold of us, before we can live in Chriſt; and when he doth ſo, then we are enabled to exert that vital Act of Faith, whereby we receive Chriſt: All this lies plain in that one Scripture, John 6. 57. As the living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father; ſo he that eateth me (that is by Faith applies me) even he ſhall live by me. So that theſe two, namely, the Spirit on Chriſt's Part, and Faith his Work, on our Part, are the two Ligaments by which we are knit to Chriſt.

So that the Spirts Work in uniting or engraffing a Soul into Chriſt, is like the cutting off the graff from its native Stock (which he doth by his Illuminations and Convictions) and cloſing it with the living when it is thus prepared, and ſo enabling it (by the Infuſion of Faith) to ſuck and draw the vital Sap, and thus it becomes one with him. Or as the many Members in the natural Body, being all quickened and animated by the ſame vital Spirit, become one Body with the Head which is the principal Member, Epheſ. 4. 4. There is one Body, and one Spirit.

More Particularly, we ſhall conſider the Properties of this Union, that ſo we may the better underſtand the Nature of it. And here I ſhall open the Nature of it both Negatively, and Affirmatively.

Firſt, Negatively, by removing all falſe Notions and miſapprehenſions of it. And we ſay, Firſt, The Saints Union with Chriſt is not a meer mental Union, only in Conceit and Notion, but really exiſts extra mentem, whether we conceit it or not. I know the Atheiſtical World cenſures all theſe things as Fancies, and idle imaginations, but Believers know the reality of them. Joh. 14. 20. At that Day you ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. This Doctrine is not Phantaſtical, but Scientifical.

Secondly, the Saints Union with Chriſt is not a Phyſical Union, ſuch as is betwixt the Members of a Natural Body and the Head: Our Nature indeed is aſſumed into Union with the Perſon of Chriſt, but it is the ſingular Honour of that Bleſſed and Holy Fleſh of Chriſt, to be ſo united, as to make one Perſon with him: That Union is Hypoſtatical, this only Myſtical.

Thirdly, Nor is it an Eſſential Union, or Union with the Divine Nature, ſo as our Beings are thereby ſwallowed up and loſt in the Divine Being.

Some there be indeed that talk at that wild rate, of being Godded into God, and Chriſted into Chriſt: And thoſe unwary Expreſſions of Greg. Nez. Θεοποιεῖν, and χριστοποιεῖν, do but too much countenance thoſe daring Spirits: But oh there is an infinite diſtance betwixt us and Chriſt in reſpect of Nature and Excellency, notwithſtanding this Union.

Fourthly, The Union I here ſpeak of, is not a fœderal Union; or an Union by Covenant only: Such a Union indeed there is betwixt Chriſt and Believers, but that is conſequential to, and wholly dependent upon this.

Fifthly, and Laſtly, It is not a meer Moral Union by Love and Affection: Thus we ſay, one Soul is in two Bodies, a Friend is another Self: The Lover is in the Perſon loved: Such a Union of Hears and Affections there is alſo betwixt Chriſt and the Saints, but this is of another Nature: That we call a Moral, this a Myſtical Union: That only knits our Affections, but this our Perſons to Chriſt.

Secondly, Poſitively, and Firſt, Tho' this Union neither makes us one Perſon, or Eſſence with Chriſt, yet it knits our Perſons moſt intimately and nearly to the Perſon of Chriſt: The Church is Chriſts Body, Coloſ. 1. 24. not his Natural, but his Myſtical Body. That is to ſay, his Body is a Myſtery, becauſe it is to him as his Natural Body. The Saints ſtand to Chriſt, in the ſame Relation that the Natural Members of the Body ſtand to the Head, and he ſtands in the ſame Relation to them, that the Head ſtands in to the Natural Members: And conſequently, They ſtand related to one another, as the Members of a Natural Body do to each other.

Chriſt and the Saints are not one as the Oak and the Ivy that Claſps it are one; but as the Graff and Stock are one: It is not a Union by adheſion, but incorporation. Husband and Wife are not ſo near, Soul and Body are not ſo near as Chriſt and the believing Soul are near to each other.

Secondly, The Myſtical Union is wholly Supernatural: Wrought by the alone Power of God. So it's ſaid, 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus: We can no more Unite our ſelves to Chriſt, than a Branch can incorporate it ſelf into another Stock: It is of him (i. e.) of God, his proper and alone Work.

There are only two Ligaments, or Bands of Union, betwixt Chriſt and the Soul, viz. The Spirit on his part, and Faith on ours: But when we ſay Faith is the Band of Union on our part, the meaning is not, that it's ſo our own act, as that it ſprings naturally from us, or is educed from the power of our own wills; no, for the Apoſtle expreſly contradicts it, Eph. 2. 8. It is not of your ſelves, it is the gift of God: But we are the Subjects of it, and tho' the act on that account be ours, yet the Power enabling us to believe is God's, Eph. 1. 19, 20.

Thirdly, The Myſtical Union is an Immediate Union: Immediate I ſay, not as excluding Means and Inſtruments, for ſeveral Means, and many Inſtruments, are employ'd for the effecting of it: But Immediate as excluding Degrees of nearneſs among the Members of Chriſt's Myſtical Body.

Every Member in the Natural Body ſtands not as near to the Head as another; but ſo do all the Myſtical Members of Chriſt's Body to him: Every Member, the ſmalleſt, as well as the greateſt, hath an immediate coalition with Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 2. To the Church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are ſanctified in Chriſt Jeſus; called to be Saints: with all that in every place call upon the Name of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, both theirs, and ours.

Among the factious in this Church at Corinth, thoſe that ſaid I am of Chriſt; as arrogating Chriſt to themſelves; were as much a Faction, as thoſe that ſaid I am of Paul, 1 Cor. 1. 30. To cure this he tells them, he is both theirs and ours. Such Incloſures are againſt Law.

Fourthly, The Saints Myſtical Union with Chriſt is a fundamental Union: It's fundamental by way of Suſtentation: All our Fruits of Obedience depend upon it, Joh. 15. 4. As the Branch cannot bear Fruit except it abide in the Vine, no more can ye except abide in me. It's fundamental to all our Privileges and comfortable claims, 1 Cor. 3. ult. All is yours, for ye are Chriſts. And it is fundamental to all our hopes, and expectations of Glory; for it is Chriſt in you the hope of Glory, Col. 1. 27. So then deſtroy this Union, and with it you deſtroy all your Fruits, Priviledges, and Eternal Hopes, at one ſtroke.

Fifthly, The Myſtical Union is a moſt Effica-Union, for through this Union the Divine Power flows into our Souls, both to quicken us with the Life of Chriſt, and to conſerve and ſecure that Life in us, after it is ſo infuſed.

Without the Unition of the Soul to Chriſt, which is to be conceived efficiently as the Spirits act, there can be no Union formally conſidered; and without theſe, no communications of Life from Chriſt to us, Eph 4. 16. Anſ there is that ἐνέργεια, or effectal Working of the Spirit of Life in every part, which he there ſpeaks of, (as who ſhould ſay, the firſt Buildings of a new Life, a Spiritual vitality diffuſed through the Soul, which ere while was dead in Sin) yet ſtill this Union with Chriſt is as neceſſary to the maintaining, as before it was to the producing of it.

For why is it that this Life is not agan diſtinguiſhed and wholly ſuffocated in us, by ſo many deadly Wounds as are given it by Temptations and Corruptions? Surely no reaſon can be aſſigned more ſatisfying than that which Chriſt himſelf gives us in, John 14. 19. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo. q. d. Whilſt there is vital Sap in me the Root, you that are Branches in me, cannot wither and die.

Sixthly, The Myſtical Union is an indiſſoluble Union: There is an everlaſting tie betwixt Chriſt and the Believer: And herein alſo it is beyond all other Unions in the World: Death diſſolves the dear Union betwixt the Husband and Wife, Friend and Friend, yea betwixt Soul and Body; but not betwixt Chriſt and the Soul: The Bands of this Union rot not in the Grave: What ſhall ſeparate us from the Love of Chriſt? Saith the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 35, 38, 39. He bids Defiance to all his Enemies, and Triumphs in the firmneſs of this Union, over all Hazards that ſeem to threaten it. It is with Chriſt and us, in reſpect of the Myſtical Union, as it was with Chriſt himſelf, in reſpect of the Hypoſtatical Union: That was not diſſolved by his Death when the Natural Union betwixt his Soul and Body was; nor can this Myſtical Union of our Souls and Bodies with Chriſt be diſſolved, when the Unions betwixt us and our deareſt Relations, yea betwixt the Soul and Body, are diſſolved by Death. God calls himſelf the God of Abraham, long after his Body was turned into Duſt.

Seventhly, It is an honourable Union *, yea the higheſt Honour that can be done unto Men: The greateſt Honour that was ever done to our common Nature, was by its aſſumption into Union with the Second Perſon Hypoſtatically, and the higheſt Honour that was ever done to our ſingle Perſons, was their Union with Chriſt Myſtically. To be a Servant of Chriſt, is a Dignity tranſcendent to the higheſt Advancement among Men; but to be a Member of Chriſt, how matchleſs and ſingular is the Glory thereof! And yet ſuch Honour have all the Saints, Eph. 5. 30. We are Members of his Body, of his Fleſh, and of his Bones.

* Apex, caput, & vertex nobilitatis eſt Chriſtus, ſine quo nihil eſt in toto hoc ſublunari orbe terrarum nobile, cujus ſolium eſt cœlum, & cujus ſcabellum eſt terra; terra inquam, in qua horum omnis cognatio & nobilitas ſita eſt & collocata, divinis illius pedibus ſubſternitur. Laurent. Humfredus de nobilitate, lib. 2. p. 176.

Eighthly, It is a moſt Comfortable Union: Yea, the Ground of all ſolid Comfort both in Life and Death: Whatever Troubles, Wants, or Diſtreſſes befall ſuch, in this is abundant Relief and Support. Chriſt is mine, and I am his; what may not a good Soul make out of that! If I am Chriſts, then let him take Care for me, and indeed in ſo doing, he doth but Care for his own: He is my Head, and to him it belongs to Conſult the Safety and Welfare of his own Members, Eph. 1. 22, 23. He is not only an Head to his own by way of Influence, but to all things elſe by way of Dominion, for their good: How comfortable may we repoſe our ſeves under that cheering Conſideration upon him at all times, and in all difficult Caſes!

Ninthly, It is a fruitful Union: The immediate end of it is Fruit, Rom. 7. 4. We are married to Chriſt, that we ſhould bring forth Fruit to God: All the Fruit we bear before our ingrafture into Chriſt, is worſe than none: Till the Perſon be in Chriſt, the Work cannot be Evangelically good, and acceptable to God: We are made accepted in the beloved, Eph. 1. 6. Chriſt is a fruitful Root, and makes all the Branches that live in him ſo too, Joh. 15. 8.

Tenthly and Laſtly, It is an enriching Union: For by our Union with his Perſon, we are immediately intereſted in all his Riches, 1 Cor. 1. 30. How Rich and Great a Perſon do the little Arms of Faith claſp and embrace! All is yours, 1 Cor. 3. 22. All that Chriſt hath, becomes ours, either by Communication to us, or Improvement for us: His Father, Joh. 20. 17. His Promiſes, 2 Cor. 1. 20. His Providences, Rom. 8. 28. His Glory, Joh. 17. 24. It's all ours by Vertue of our Union with him.

Thus you ſee briefly what the Myſtical Union is. Next we ſhall improve it.

Infer. 1. If there be ſuch a Union betwixt Chriſt and Believers, oh then what tranſcendent Dignity hath God put upon Believers!

Well might Conſtantine prefer the Honour of being a Member of the Church, before that of being Head of the Empire, for it is not only above all Earthly Dignities and Honours, but in ſome reſpect above that Honour which God hath put upon the Angels of Glory.

Si vis vir virtutis appellari, indue te Chriſtum, qui eſt Dei virtus & ſapientia; & in omnibus adjunge te domino, ita ut unus cum eo ſpiritus fias, & tunc vir virtutis efficieris. Orig. Hom. in Numb. 31.

Great is the Dignity of the Angelical Nature, they are the higheſt and moſt honourable Species of Creatures: They alſo have the Honour continually to behold the Face of God in Heaven, and yet in this one Reſpect, the Saints are preferr'd to them, they have a Myſtical Union with Chriſt as their Head of Influence, by whom they are quickned with Spiritual Life, which the Angels have not.

It is true, there is an ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, or gathering together of all in Heaven and Earth under Chriſt as a common Head: He is the Head of Angels, as well as Saints, but in different Reſpects: To Angels he is an Head of Dominion and Government, but to Saints he is both an Head of Dominion and Vital Influence too: They are his chief and moſt honourable Subiects, but not his Myſtical Members: They are as the Barons and Nobles in his Kingdom, but the Saints as the dear Spouſe and Wife of his Boſom: This dignifies the Believer above the greateſt Angel. And as the Nobles of the Kingdom think it a Preferment and Honour to ſerve the Queen, ſo the glorious Angels think it no degradation or diſhonour to them to ſerve the Saints: For to this honourable Office they are appointed, Heb. 1. 14. to be miniſtring or ſerviceable Spirits for for the good of them that ſhall be Heirs of Salvation: The chiefeſt Servant diſdains not to Honour, and Serve the Heir.

Eph. 1. 10.

Some imperious Grandees would frown, ſhould ſome of theſe Perſons but preſume to Approach their Preſence, but God ſets them before his Face with delight, and Angels delight to ſerve them.

Infer. 2. If there be ſuch a ſtrict and inſeparable Union betwixt Chriſt and Believers, then the Graces of Believers can never totally fail: Immortality is the Priviledge of Grace, becauſe ſanctified Perſons are inſeparably united to Chriſt the Fountain of Life: Your Life is hid with Chriſt in God, Col. 3. 3. Whilſt the Sap of Life is in the Root, the Branches live by it: Thus it is betwixt Chriſt and Believers, Joh. 14. 19. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo. See how Chriſt binds up their Life in one Bundle with his own, plainly intimating it is as impoſſible for them to die, as it is for himſelf, he cannot live without them.

True it is, the Spiritual Life of Believers is encountred by many ſtrong and fierce Oppoſitions: It is alſo brought to a low Ebb in ſome, but we are always to remember there are ſome things which pertain to the Eſſence of that Life, in which the very Being of it lies, and ſome things that pertain only to its well-being: All thoſe things which belong to the well-being of the new Creature, as Manifeſtations, Joys, ſpiritual Comforts, &c. May for a time fail, yea, and Grace it ſelf may ſuffer great loſſes and remiſſions in its Degrees notwithſtanding our Union with Chriſt; but ſtill the Eſſence of it is immortal, which is no ſmall relief to gracious Souls: When the means of Grace fail, as it is threatned, Amos 8. 11. When temporary formal Profeſſors drop away from Chriſt like withered Leaves in a Windy-Day, 2 Tim. 2. 18. And when the natural Union of their Souls and Bodies are ſuffering a diſſolution from each other by Death, when that Silver Cord is looſed, this Golden Chain holds firm, 1 Cor. 3. 23.

Infer. 3. Is the Unoin ſo intimate betwixt Chriſt and Believers? How great and powerful a Motive then is this, to make us open-handed and liberal in releiving the neceſſities and wants of every gracious Perſon! For in relieving them we relieve Chriſt himſelf.

Chriſt Perſonal is not the Object of our Pity and Charity, he is at the Fountain Head of all the Riches in Glory, Eph. 4. ver. 10. But Chriſt Myſtical is expoſed to Neceſſities and Wants, he feels Hunger and Thirſt, Colds and Pains in his Body the Church: And he is refreſhed, relieved and comforted in their Refreſhments and Comforts: Chriſt the Lord of Heaven and Earth, in this conſideration is ſometimes in need of a Penny; he tells us his Wants and Poverty, and how he is relieved, Mat. 25. 35, 40. A Text believed and underſtood by very few, I was an hungred, and ye gave me Meat. I was thirſty, and ye gave me Drink. I was a Stranger, and ye took me in: Then ſhall the Righteous anſwer, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hungred, &c. And the King ſhall anſwer and ſay unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, in as much as ye have done it unto one of the leaſt of theſe my Brethren, ye have done it to me.

Qui reſpectu fratris in Eccleſia non movetur, vel Chriſti contemplatione movetur; & qui non cogitat in labore & egeſtate conſervum, uti dominum cogitet in ipſo illum quam deſpicit, conſtitutum. Cyprian de opere & eleemoſynis.

It was the ſaying of a great Divine, that he thought ſcarce any Man on Earth did fully underſtand and believe this Truth, and he conceives ſo much hinted in the very Text where the Righteous themſelves reply, Lord, when ſaw we thee Sick, &c. Intimating in the Queſtion, that they did not throughly underſtand the nearneſs, yea, oneneſs of thoſe Perſons with Chriſt, for whom they did theſe things. And indeed, it is incredible that a Chriſtian can be hard hearted, and cloſe handed, to that neceſſitous Chriſtian, in refreſhing and relieving of whom he verily believes that he Miniſters refreſhment to Chriſt himſelf.

O think again and again upon this Scripture, conſider what forcible and mighty Arguments are here laid together to engage relief to the wants of Chriſtians.

Here you ſee their near Relation to Chriſt: They are Myſtically one Perſon: What you did to them, you did to me. Here you ſee alſo how kindly Chriſt takes it at our Hands: Acknowledging all thoſe kindneſſes that were beſtowed upon him, even to a bit of Bread: He is you ſee content to take it as a Courteſie, who might demand it by Authority, and bereave you of all immediately upon refuſal.

Yea, here you ſee this one ſingle Branch or Act of Obedience, (our charity to the Saints) is ſingled out from among all the Duties of Obedience, and made the Teſt and Evidence of our ſincerity in that great Day, and Men bleſſed or curſed according to the love they have manifeſted this way to the Saints.

O then henceforth let none, that underſtand the Relation the Saints have to Chriſt, as the Members to the Head, or the Relation they have to each other thereby as fellow Members of the ſame Body, from henceforth ſuffer Chriſt to hunger, if they have Bread to relieve him, or Chriſt to be thirſty, if they have to refreſh him; this Union betwixt Chriſt and the Saints, affords an Argument beyond all other Arguments in the World to prevail with us: Methinks a little Rhetorick might perſwade a Chriſtian to part with any thing he hath to Chriſt, who parted with the Glory of Heaven, yea, and his Hearts Blood to boot, for his ſake.

Infer. 4. Do Chriſt and Believers make but one Myſtical Perſon? How unnatural and abſurd then are all thoſe acts of unkindneſs, whereby Believers wound and grieve Jeſus Chriſt! This is as if the Hand ſhould wound his own Head, from which it receives Life, Senſe, Motion, and Strength.

When Satan ſmites Chriſt by a wicked Man, he then wounds him with the Hand of an Enemy; but when his Temptations prevail upon the Saints to Sin, he wounds him as it were with his own Hand: As the Eagle and Tree in the Fable complain'd, the one he was wounded by an Arrow winged with his own Feathers, the other, that it was rived a ſunder by a Wedge hewen out of his own Limbs.

Now the Evil and diſingenuity of ſuch Sins, is to be meaſured not only by the near Relation Chriſt ſuſtains to Believers as their Head, but more particularly, from the ſeveral Benefits they receive from him as ſuch: For in wounding Chriſt by their Sins, Firſt, They wound their head of influence, through whom they live, and without whom they had ſtill remain'd in the State of Sin and Death, Eph. 4. 16. Shall Chriſt ſend Life to us, and we return that which is as Death to him? O how abſurd, how diſingenious is this!

Secondly, They wound their head of Government. Chriſt is a guiding, as well as a quickening head, Col. 1. 18. he is your Wiſdom, he guides you by his Counſels to Glory; but muſt he be thus requited for all his faithful Conduct! What do you when you Sin, but rebel againſt his Government, refuſing to follow his Counſels, and obeying in the mean time a Deceiver rather than him.

refuſing

Thirdly, They wound their Conſulting Head, who cares, provides, and projects for the Welfare and Safety of the Body. Chriſtians, You know your Affairs below have not been ſteered and managed by your own Wiſdom, but that Orders have been given from Heaven for your Security and Supply from Day to Day. I know, O Lord (ſaith the Prophet) that the way of man is not in himſelf, neither is it in him that walks to direct his own ſteps, Jer. 10. 23.

It's true, Chriſt is out of your ſight, and you ſee him not; but he ſees you, and orders every thing that concerns you. And is this a due Requital of all that Care he hath taken for you? Do ye thus requite the Lord for all his Benefits? What? recompence Evil for Good! O let ſhame cover you.

Fourthly and Laſtly, They wound their Head of Honour. Chriſt your Head, is the Fountain of Honour to you: This is your Glory, that you relate to him as your Head: You are on this account (as before noted) exalted above Angels.

Now then Conſider, how vile a thing it is to reflect the leaſt diſhonour upon him, from whom you derive all your Glory. O conſider and bewail it.

Infer. 5. Is there ſo ſtrict and intimate a relation and union betwixt Chriſt and the Saints? Then ſurely they can never want what is good for their Souls or Bodies.

Every one naturally cares and provides for his own, eſpecially for his own Body; yet we can more eaſily violate the Law of Nature, and be cruel to our own Fleſh, than Chriſt can be ſo to his Myſtical Body. I know it's hard to reſt upon and rejoyce in a Promiſe, when Neceſſities pinch, and we ſee not from whence Relief ſhould ariſe; but Oh! what ſweet Satisfaction and Comfort might a neceſſitous Believer find in theſe Conſiderations, would he but keep them upon his Heart in ſuch a day of ſtrait.

Qui miſit filium, immiſit ſpiritum, promiſit vultum, quid tandem denegabit?

Firſt, Whatever my diſtreſſes are for quality, number, or degree, they are all known even to the leaſt Circumſtance, by Chriſt my Head: He looks down from Heaven upon all my afflictions, and underſtands them more fully than I that feel them, Pſalm 38. 9. Lord all my deſire is before thee, and my groaning is not hid from thee.

Secondly, He not only knows them, but feels them, as well as knows them, We have not an High Prieſt that cannot be touched with the feeling of our Infirmities, Heb. 4. 15. In all your Afflictions he is afflicted; tender Sympathy cannot but flow from ſuch intimate Union; therefore in Mat. 25. 35. he ſaith, I was an hungred, and I was athirſt, and I was naked. For indeed his Sympathy and tender Compaſſion gave him as quick a Reſentment, and as tender a Senſe of their Wants, as if they they had been his own: Yea, Thirdly, He not only knows and feels my Wants, but hath enough in his Hand, and much more than enough to ſupply them all; for all Things are delivered to him by the Father, Luke 10. 22. all the Store-houſes in Heaven and Earth are his, Phil. 4. 19.

Fourthly, He beſtows all earthly good things even to ſuperfluity and redundance upon his very Enemies, They have more than Heart can wiſh, Pſal. 73. 7. He is bountiful to ſtrangers, he loads his very Enemies with theſe things, and can it be ſuppoſed he will in the mean while ſtarve his own, and neglect thoſe whom he loves as his own fleſh? It cannot be. Moreover,

Fifthly, Hitherto he hath not ſuffered me to periſh in any former ſtraits; when and were was it that he forſook me? this is not the firſt plunge of Trouble I have been in; Have I not found him a God at a pinch? How oft have I ſeen him in the Mount of Difficulties!

Sixthly and Laſtly, I have his Promiſe and Engagement that he will never leave me nor forſake me, Heb. 13. 5. and John 14. 18. a Promiſe never crackt ſince the Hour it was firſt made. If then, the Lord Jeſus knows and feels all my wants, hath enough and more than enough to ſupply them, if he gives even to redundance unto his Enemies, hath not hitherto forſaken me, and hath promiſed he never will; why then is my Soul thus diſquieted in me? Surely there is no cauſe it ſhould be ſo.

Infer. 6. If the Saints are ſo nearly united to Chriſt, as the members to the head; O then how great a ſin, and full of danger is it for any to wrong and perſecute the Saints! For in ſo doing, they muſt needs perſecute Chriſt himſelf.

Saul, Saul (ſaith Chriſt) why perſecuteſt thou me? Acts 9. 4. The righteous God holds himſelf obliged to vindicate oppreſſed innocency, tho' it be in the Perſon of a wicked Man, how much more when it is in a Member of Chriſt? He that toucheth you, toucheth the Apple of mine Eye, Zech. 2. 8. And is it to be imagined, that Chriſt will ſit ſtill, and ſuffer his enemies to thruſt out the very Apples of his Eyes? No, no, He hath ordained his arrows againſt the perſecutors, Pſal. 7. 13.

O it were better thy Hand ſhould wither, and thine Arm fall from thy ſhoulder, than ever it ſhould be lifted up againſt Chriſt in the pooreſt of his Members. Believe it, Sirs, not only your violent Actions, but your hard Speeches are all ſet down upon your Dooms-day Book; and you ſhall be brought to an Account for them in the great Day, Jude 15. Beware what Arrows you ſhoot, and be ſure of your Mark before you ſhoot them.

Ageſilaus dicere ſolitus eſt, ſe vehementer admirari, eos non haberi in ſacrilegorum numero qui læderant eos qui Deo ſupplicarent vel Deum venerantur; quo innuit, eos non tantum ſacrilegos eſſe qui deos ipſos, aut templorum ornatum ſpoliarent; ſed eos maxime qui deorum miniſtros, & precationes contumeliis afficiunt. Æmyl. Prob.

Infer. 7. If there be ſuch a Union betwixt Chriſt and the Saints as hath been deſcribed, upon what comfortable Terms then, may Believers part with their Bodies at Death!

Chriſt your head is above water, therefore you cannot be loſt: Nay, he is not only riſen from the dead himſelf, but is alſo become the firſt fruits of them that ſleep, 1 Cor. 15. 20. Believers are his Members, his Fulneſs, he cannot therefore be compleat without you: A part of Chriſt cannot periſh in the Grave, much leſs burn in Hell: Remember when you feel the Natural Union diſſolving, that this Myſtical Union can never be diſſolved: The pangs of Death cannot break this Tie: As there is a peculiar Excellency in the Believers Life, ſo there is a ſingular Support and peculiar Comfort in his Death; To me to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain, Phil. 1. 21.

Templum Dei in quo ſpiritus habitat patris & membra Chriſti non participare ſalutem, ſed in perditionem redigi dicere; quomodo non magna eſt blaſphemia? Iren. lib.

Infer. 8. If there be ſuch a Union betwixt Chriſt and Believers, How doth it concern every man to try and examine his Eſtate, whether he is really united with Chriſt or not; by the natural and proper Effects which always flow from this Union? As,

Firſt, The real Communication of Chriſt's holineſs to the Soul: We cannot be united with this root, and not partake of the vital ſap of Sanctification from him; all that are planted into him, are planted into the likeneſs of his Death, and of his Reſurrection, Rom. 6. 5, 6. viz. by Mortification and Vivification.

Secondly, They that are ſo nearly united to him as Members to the Head, cannot but love him and value him above their own Lives; as we ſee in Nature, the Hand and Arm will interpoſe to ſave the Head; the nearer the Union, the ſtronger always is the Affection.

Thirdly, The Members are ſubject to the Head: Dominion in the Head muſt needs infer ſubjection in the Members, Eph. 5. 24. in vain do we claim Union with Chriſt as our Head, whilſt we are governed by our own Wills, and our Luſts give us Law.

Fourthly, All that are united to Chriſt, do bear fruit to God, Rom. 7. 4. Fruitfulneſs is the next End of our Union: There are no barren Branches growing upon this fruitful Root.

Infer. 9. Laſtly, How much are Believers engaged to walk as the Members of Chriſt, in the viſible exerciſes of all thoſe Graces and Duties, which the Conſideration of their near relation to him exacts from them! As,

Firſt, How contented and well-pleaſed ſhould we be with our outward Lot, however Providence hath caſt it for us in this World. O do not repine, God hath dealt bountifully with you; upon others he hath beſtowed the good things of this World, upon you himſelf in Chriſt.

Secondly, How humble and lowly in ſpirit ſhould you be under your great Advancement! It's true, God hath magnified you greatly by this Union, but yet don't ſwell, You bear not the root, but the root you, Rom. 11. 18. You ſhine, but it is as the Sars, with a borrowed Light.

Thirdly, How zealous ſhould you be to honour Chriſt, who hath put ſo much honour upon you! Be willing to give Glory to Chriſt, tho' his Glory ſhould riſe out of your Shame. Never reckon that Glory that goes to Chriſt to be loſt to you; when you lie at his feet in the moſt particular heart-breaking Confeſſions of ſin, yet let this pleaſe you, that therein you have given him glory.

Fourthly, How exact and circumſpect ſhould you be in all your Ways, remembring whoſe you are, and whom you repreſent! Shall it be ſaid that a Member of Chriſt was convicted of unrighteous and unholy Actions! God forbid: If we ſay we have fellowſhip with him, and walk in darkneſs, we lye, 1 Joh. 1. 6. And he that ſaith he abideth in him, ought alſo himſelf to walk even as he walked, 1 Joh. 2. 6.

Fifthly, How ſtudious ſhould you be of Peace among your ſelves, who are all ſo nearly united to ſuch a Head, and thereby are made fellow Members in the ſame Body! The Heathen World was never acquainted with ſuch an Argument as the Apoſtle urges for Unity, in Eph. 4. 3, 4.

Sixthly and Laſtly, How joyful and comfortable ſhould you be, to whom Chriſt with all his Treaſures and Benefits is effectually applied in this bleſſed Union of your Souls with him! This brings him into your poſſeſſion: Oh how great! how glorious a Perſon do the little weak arms of your Faith embrace!

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 3.

The Third SERMON.

Opening the nature and uſe of the Goſpel Miniſtry, as an external means of applying Chriſt.

2 Cor. V. 20.

Now then, we are Ambaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you, we pray you in Chriſt's ſtead; be ye reconciled to God.

THE Effectual Application of Chriſt principally conſiſts in our Union with him, but (ordinarily) there can be no Union without a Goſpel Tender and Overture of him to our Souls; for How ſhall they believe in him, of whom they have not heard? and how ſhall they hear withou a Preaher; and how ſhall he preach except he be ſent? Rom. 10. 14.

If God be upon a Deſign of marrying poor Sinners to his Son, there muſt be a Treaty in order to it; that Treaty requires Interlocution betwixt both the Parties concerned in it; but ſuch is our frailty, that ſhould God ſpeak immediately to us himſelf, it would confound and overwhelm us: God therefore graciouſly condeſcends and accommodates himſelf to our Infirmity, in treating with us in order to our Union with Chriſt by his Ambaſſadors, and theſe not Angels, whoſe Converſes we cannot bear, but Men like our ſelves, commiſſionated for the effecting of this great Buſineſs betwixt Chriſt and us. Now then we are Ambaſſadors for God, &c. In which Words you have,

Firſt, Chriſt's Ambaſſors Commiſſionated.
Secondly, Their Commiſſion opened.

Firſt, Chriſt's Ambaſſadors Commiſſionated. Now then we are Ambaſſadors for Chriſt. The Lord Jeſus thought it not ſufficient to print the Law of Grace and Bleſſed Terms of our Union with him in the Scriptures, where Men may read his willingneſs to receive them, and ſee the juſt and gracious Terms and Conditions upon which he offers to become theirs; but hath alſo ſet up and eſtabliſhed a ſtanding-Office in the Church to expound that Law, inculcate the Precepts, and urge the Promiſes thereof; to woo and eſpouſe Souls to Chriſt, I have eſpouſed you to one Husband, that I may preſent you as a chaſte virgin to Chriſt, 2 Cor. 11. 20. and this not ſimply from their own affections and compaſſions to miſerable Sinners, but alſo by vertue of their Office and Commiſſion, whereby they are authorized and appointed to that Work. We then are Ambaſſadors for Chriſt.

Secondly, Their Commiſſion opened: Wherein we find,

1. Their Work appointed.
2. Their Capacity deſcribed.
3. And the Manner of their Acting in that Capacity deſcribed.

Firſt, The Work whereunto the Miniſters of the Goſpel are appointed, is to reconcile the World to God; to work theſe ſinful, vain, rebellious hearts which have a ſtrong Averſation from God naturally in them; to cloſe with him according to the Articles of Peace contained in the Goſpel, that thereby they may be capable to receive the Mercies and Benefits purchaſed by the Death of Chriſt, which they cannot receive in the ſtate of Enmity and Alienation.

Secondly, Their Capacity deſcribed, they act in Chriſt's ſtead as his Vicegerents. He is no more in this World to treat perſonally with ſinners, as once he did in the Days of his fleſh; but yet he ſtill continues the Treaty with this lower World by his Officers, requiring Men to look upon them, and obey them as he would himſelf if he were Corporally preſent, Luke 10. 16. He that heareth you, heareth me, and he that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me.

Thirdly, The Manner of their acting in that Capacity preſcribed; and that is by humble, ſweet, and condeſcending Entreaties and Beſeechings: This beſt ſuits that meek and Lamb-like Saviour whom they repreſent. Thus he dealt with poor Sinners himſelf, when he converſed among them; he would not break a bruiſed Reed, nor quench the ſmoaking Flax, Iſa. 42. 3. This is the way to allure and win the Souls of Sinners to Chriſt.

From hence the Note is:

Doct. That the preaching of the Goſpel by Chriſt's Ambaſſadors, is the means appointed for the reconciling and bringing home of Sinners to Chriſt.

This is clear from Rom. 10. 14. 1 Cor. 1. 21. and many other Scriptures.

Here we ſhall take into Conſideration theſe three Things.

Firſt, What is implied in Chriſt's treating with Sinners by his Ambaſſadors or Miniſters.

Secondly, What the great Concernment they are to treat with Sinners about is.

Thirdly, What and when is the Efficacy of preaching to bring Sinners to Chriſt.

Firſt, We will open what is implied and imported in Chriſt's Treaty with Sinners by his Ambaſſadors or Miniſters.

And here we find theſe ſix Things implied.

Firſt, It neceſſarily implies the defection and fall of Man from his Eſtate of favour and friendſhip with God; if no War with Heaven, what need of Ambaſſadors of Peace? The very Office of the Miniſtry, is an Argument of the Fall. Goſpel Ordinances and Officers came in upon the Fall, and expire with the Mediators diſpenſatory Kingdom, 1 Cor. 15. 24, 25. Then ſhall be deliver up the Kingdom to God even the Father: Thenceforth no more Ordinances, no more Miniſters; what uſe can there be of them, when the Treaty is ended? They have done and accompliſhed all they were ever intended and deſigned for, when they ſhall have reconciled to God all the number of his Elect, that lay diſperſed among the loſt and miſerable Poſterity of Adam, and have brought them home to Chriſt in a perfect ſtate, Eph. 4. 12, &c.

Secondly, It implies the ſingular Grace and admirable Condeſcention of God to ſinful Man. That God will admit any Treaty with him at all is wonderful Mercy, it's more than he would do for the Angels that fell, Jude 6. They are reſerved in everlaſting Chains under Darkneſs unto the judgment of the great Day. Chriſt took not on him their Nature, but ſuffered Myriads of them to periſh, and fills up their vacant Places in Glory, with a number of ſinful Men and Women, to whom the Law awarded the ſame puniſhment.

But that God will not only treat, but entreat and beſeech ſinful Men to be reconciled, is yet more wonderful. Barely to propound the Terms of Peace, had been an aſtoniſhing Mercy, but to wooe and beſeech ſtubborn Enemies to be at Peace, and accept their Pardon, Oh how unparallel'd was this Condeſcenſion!

Thirdly, It implies the great Dignity and Honour of the Goſpel Miniſtry. We are Ambaſſadors for Chriſt, Ambaſſadors repreſent and perſonate the Prince that ſends them; and the Honours or Contempts done to them reflect upon, and are reckon'd to the Perſon of their Maſter, Luke 10. 16. He that heareth you, heareth me; and he that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me.

Inter illos qui regi regum inſerviunt, Legati ſumus; Dei Chriſtique perſonam gerimus, nullus unquam nos impune deſpicatui habuit, quin in Deum Chriſtumque idem injurius. Bowles præfat. ad paſt. Evang.

Neither their Perſons, nor Parts, are the proper ground and reaſon of our reſpects to them; but their Office and Commiſſion from Jeſus Chriſt.

We are fallen into the Dreggs of Time, wherein a vile Contempt is poured not only upon the Perſons, but the very Office of the Miniſtry; and I could heartily wiſh that Scripture, Mal. 2. 7, 8, 9. were throughly conſidered by us, poſſibly it might inform us of the true Cauſe and Reaſon of this ſore Judgment; but ſurely Chriſt's faithful Miniſters deſerve a better Entertainment than they ordinarily find in the World; and if we did but ſeriouſly bethink our ſelves, in whoſe Name they come, and in whoſe ſtead they ſtand, we ſhould receive them as the Galatians did Paul, Gal. 4. 14. as Angels of God, even as Jeſus Chriſt.

Fourthly, Chriſt's treating with Sinners by his Miniſters who are his Ambaſſadors, implies the ſtrict Obligation they are under to be faithful in their Miniſterial Imployment. Chriſt counts upon their faithfulneſs whom he puts into the Miniſtry, 1 Tim. 1. 12. They are accountable to him for all Acts of their Office, Heb. 13. 17. If they be ſilent, they cannot be innocent: Neceſſity is laid upon them, and woe to them if they preach not the Goſpel, 1 Cor. 9. 16.

Yea, Neceſſity is not only laid upon them to preach, but to keep cloſe to their Commiſſion in preaching the Goſpel, 1 Theſ. 2. 3, 4, 5. Our Exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanneſs, nor in guile, but as we were allowed of God to be put in truſt with the Goſpel, even ſo we ſpeak, not as pleaſing Men, but God, which trieth our hearts: The Word is not to be corrupted to pleaſe Men, 2 Cor. 2. 17. their Buſineſs is not to make them their Diſciples, but Chriſt's, not to ſeek theirs but them, 2 Cor. 12. 14. to keep cloſe to their Inſtructions, both in the matter, manner, and end of their Miniſtry. So did Chriſt himſelf the Treaſure of Wiſdom and Knowledge, yet being ſent by God, he ſaith, John 7. 16. My Doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. And ſo he expects and requires that his Ambaſſadors keep cloſe to the Commiſſion he hath given them, and be (according to their meaſure) faithful to their truſt, as he was to his. Paul is to deliver to the People, that which he alſo received from the Lord, 1 Cor. 11. And Timothy muſt keep that which was committed to him, 2 Tim. 1. 14.

Fifthly, It implies the removal of the Goſpel Miniſtry to be a very great judgment to the People. The remanding of Ambaſſadors, preſages an enſuing War. If the reconciling of Souls to God be the greateſt Work, then the removal of the means and inſtruments thereof muſt be the ſoreſt Judgment. Some account the falling of the Salt upon the Table ominous, but ſurely the falling of them, whom Chriſt calls the Salt of the Earth, is ſo indeed.

What are thoſe once famous and renowned Places from whence Chriſt (as he threatned) hath removed the Candle-ſtick, but magna latrocinia, Dens of Robbers, and Mountains of Prey?

Sixthly and Laſtly, It implies both the Wiſdom and Condeſcenſion of God to ſinful Men, in carrying on a Treaty of Peace with them by ſuch Ambaſſadors, negotiating betwixt him and them: Without a Treaty there will be no Reconciliation; and no Method to carry on ſuch a Treaty like this: For had the Lord treated with Sinners perſonally and immediately, they had been overwhelmed with ſuch an awful Majeſty. The Appearances of God confound the Creature, Let me not hear again the voice of the Lord my God (ſaith Iſrael) neither let me ſee this great fire any more, that I die not: Yea, ſo terrible was that ſight, that Moſes ſaid, I exceedingly fear and quake, Deut. 18. 16. Heb. 12. 21.

Or had he commiſſionated Angels for this Imployment, though they ſtand at ſuch an infinite diſtance from us as God doth, yet ſuch is the excellence of their Glory (being the higheſt ſpecies and order of Creatures) that their appearances would be more apt to aſtoniſh than perſwade us: Beſides, they being Creatures of another rank and kind, and not partaking with us either in the miſery of the Fall, or Benefit of the Recovery by Chriſt; 'tis not to be ſuppoſed they ſhould ſpeak to us ſo feelingly and experimentally, as theſe his Miniſters do; they can open to you the Myſteries of Sin, feeling the workings thereof daily in their own Hearts; they can diſcover to you the Conflicts of the Fleſh and Spirit, as being daily exerciſed in that Warfare; and then being Men of the ſame mould and temper, they can ſay to you as Elihu did to Job, Chap. 33. 6, 7. Behold, I am according to thy wiſh, in God's ſtead, I alſo am formed out of the Clay; behold, my Terror ſhall not make thee afraid, neither ſhall my Hand be heavy upon thee.

So that in this Appointment much of the Divine Wiſdom and Condeſcenſion to Sinners is manifeſted: We have this Treaſure in earthen Veſſels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us, 2 Cor. 4. 7. God's Glory and Man's advantage are both promoted in this diſpenſation.

Secondly, Next we are to conſider that great Concernment, about which theſe Ambaſſadors of Chriſt are to treat with ſinners; and that (as the Text informs us) is their Reconciliation to God.

Now Reconciliation with God, is the reſtoring of Men to that former Friendſhip they had with God, which was broken by the Fall, and is ſtill continued by our Enmity and Averſation, whilſt we continue in our Natural and Unregenerate Eſtate. Now this is the greateſt and moſt bleſſed Deſign that ever God had in the World; an aſtoniſhing and invaluable Mercy to Men, as will clearly appear by conſidering theſe Particulars following.

Firſt, That God ſhould be reconciled after ſuch a dreadful Breach as the Fall of Man made, is wonderful: No ſin, all things conſidered, was ever like to this Sin: Other ſins, like a ſingle Bullet, kill particular Perſons, but this, like a Chain-ſhot, cuts off multitudes, multitudes as the ſand upon the Sea-ſhore, which no Man can number.

If all the Poſterity of Adam in their ſeveral Generations, ſhould do nothing elſe but bewail and lament this Sin of his, whilſt this World continues, yet would it not be enough lamented; for a Man ſo newly created out of nothing, and admitted the firſt moment into the higheſt Order, Crowned a King over the Works of God's Hands, Pſal. 8. 5. a Man perfect and upright, without the leaſt inordinate Motion, or ſinful Inclination: A Man whoſe Mind was moſt clear, bright and apprehenſive of the Will of God, whoſe Will was free, and able to have eaſily put by the ſtrongeſt Temptation: A Man in a Paradiſe of Delights, where nothing was left to deſire for the advancing the happineſs of Soul or Body: A Man underſtanding himſelf to be a publick, complexive Perſon, carrying not only his own, but the happineſs of the whole World in his Hand; ſo ſoon, upon ſo ſlight a Temptation, to violate the Law of his God, and involve himſelf and all his Poſterity with him, in ſuch a Gulph of Guilt and Miſery; all which he might ſo eaſily have prevented! O wonderful amazing Mercy, that ever God ſhould think of being reconciled, or have any purpoſes of Peace towards ſo vile an Apoſtate Creature as Man.

Secondly, That God ſhould be reconciled to Men, and not to Angels, a more high and excellent Order of Creatures, is yet more aſtoniſhing: When the Angels fell they were loſt irrecoverably: No Hand of Mercy was ſtretched out to ſave one of thoſe Myriads of excellent Beings, but Chains of Darkneſs were immediately clapt on them, to reſerve them to the Judgment of the great Day, Jude ver. 6.

That the milder Attribute ſhould be exerciſed to the inferior, and the ſeverer Attribute to the more excellent Creature, is juſt matter for Eternal Admiration: Who would caſt away Veſſels of Gold, and ſave earthen Potſherds! Some indeed undertake to ſhew us the Reaſons, why the Wiſdom of God made no proviſion for the Recovery of Angels by a Mediator of Reconcilation; partly from the high Degree of the malignity of their Sin, who ſinned in the Light of Heaven, partly becauſe it was decent that the firſt Breach of the Divine Law ſhould be puniſhed, to ſecure Obedience for the future. And beſides, the Angelical Nature was not entirely loſt, Myriads of Angels ſtill continuing in their Innocency and Glory; when as all Mankind was loſt in Adam.

But we muſt remember ſtill the Law made no diſtinction, but awarded the ſame puniſhment, and therefore it was Mercy alone that made the difference, and Mercy for ever to be admired by Men; how aſtoniſhing is the Grace of God, that moves in a way of Reconciliation to us, out of Deſign to fill up the vacant places in Heaven from which Angels fell, with ſuch poor Worms as we are*!* Angels excluded, and Men received. O ſtupendious Mercy!

Thirdly, That God ſhould be wholly and throughly reconciled to Men, ſo that no Fury remains in him againſt us; according to that Scripture, Iſa. 27. 4. is ſtill matter of farther wonder.

The Deſign he ſends his Ambaſſadors to you about is not the allaying, and mitigating of his Wrath (which yet would be matter of great joy to the damned) but throughly to quench all his Wrath, ſo that no degree thereof ſhall ever be felt by you. O Bleſſed Embaſſy! Beautiful upon the Mountains are the feet of them that bring ſuch Tidings. God offers you a full Reconciliation, a plenary Remiſſion.

Fourthly, That God ſhould be freely reconciled to Sinners, and diſcharge them without any the leaſt ſatisfaction to his Juſtice from them, is, and for ever will be marvelous in their Eyes.

Oh what Mercy would the Damned account it, if after a thouſand years Torments in Hell, God would at laſt be reconciled to them, and put an End to their Miſery! But Believers are diſcharged without bearing any part of the Curſe, not one Farthing of that Debt is levied upon them.

If you ſay, How can this be, when God ſtands upon full ſatisfaction to his Juſtice, before any Soul be diſcharged, and reſtored to favour? freely reconciled, and yet fully ſatisfied, how can this be?

Very well, for this Mercy comes freely to your Hands, how coſtly ſoever it proved to Chriſt; and that free Remiſſion and full Satisfaction, are not contradictory and inconſiſtent things, is plain enough from that Scripture, Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt; freely, and yet in the way of Redemption.

For tho' Chriſt your Surety have made ſatisfaction in your name and ſtead, yet it was his Life, his Blood, and not yours, that went for it, and this Surety was of God's own Appointment and Providing without your Contrivement or Thoughts. O bleſſed Reconciliation, happy is the People that hear the joyful Sound of it.

Fifthly and Laſtly, That God ſhould be finally reconciled to Sinners, ſo that never any new Breach ſhall happen betwixt him and them any more, ſo as to diſſolve the League of Friendſhip, is a moſt raviſhing and tranſporting Meſſage.

Two Things give Confirmation and full Security to reconciled Ones, viz. The Terms of the Covenant, and the Interceſſion of the Mediator.

The Covenant of Grace gives great Security to Believers againſt new Breaches betwixt God and them. It's ſaid, Jer. 32. 40. And I will make an Everlaſting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good, but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me. The Fear of the Lord is a choice Preſervative againſt ſecond Revolts, and therefore taken into the Covenant. It is no hindrance but a ſpecial guard to Aſſurance.

There is no doubt of God's Faithfulneſs, that part of the Promiſe is eaſily believed, that he will not turn away from us to do us good, all the doubt is of the Inconſtancy of our Hearts with God, and againſt that danger this Promiſe makes Proviſion.

Moreover the Interceſſion of Chriſt in Heaven ſecures the Saints in their reconciled ſtate, 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. If any Man ſin we have an Advocate with the Father Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation: He continually appears in Heaven before the Father, As a Lamb that had been ſlain, Rev. 5. 6. And as the Bow in the Clouds, Rev. 4. 3. So that as long as Chriſt thus appears in the preſence of God for us, it is not poſſible our ſtate of Juſtification and Reconciliation can be again diſſolved.

And this is that bleſſed Embaſſy Goſpel Miniſters are employed about; he hath committed to them the Word of his Reconciliation.

In the laſt place, we are to enquire what and whence is this Efficacy of Preaching, to reconcile and bring home Sinners to Criſt.

That it's Efficacy is great in Convincing, Humbling and Changing the Hearts of Men, is paſt all Debate and Qneſtion. The Weapons of our Warfare (ſaith the Apoſtle) are not carnal but mighty through God, to the pulling down of ſtrong holds, caſting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth it ſelf againſt the Knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. No Heart ſo hard, no Conſcience ſo ſtupid, but this Sword can pierce and wound; in an Inſtant it can caſt down all thoſe vain Reaſonings and fond Imaginations, which the Carnal Heart hath been building all its Life long, and open a fair Paſſage for Convictions of Sin, and the Fears and Terrors of Wrath to come into that Heart that never was afraid of theſe things before. So Acts 2. 37. When they heard this they were pricked to the heart, and ſaid unto Peter, and the reſt of the Apoſtles, Men and Brethren, what ſhall we do?

What ſhall we do? Is the doleful Cry of Men at their Wits end? The Voice of one in deepeſt Diſtreſs, and ſuch Outcries have been no Rarities under the Preaching of the Word; its Power hath been felt by Perſons of all Orders and Conditions; the great and honourable of the Earth, as well as the poor and deſpicable. The Learned and the Ignorant, the Civil and Profane, the Young and the Old, all have felt the heart-piercing Efficacy of the Goſpel.

If you ask, whence hath the Word preached this mighty Power? The Anſwer muſt be, Neither from it ſelf, nor him that preaches it, but from the Spirit of God whoſe Inſtrument it it, by whoſe Bleſſing and Concurrence with it, it produceth its bleſſed Effects upon the Hearts of Men.

Firſt, This Efficacy and wonderful Power is not from the Word it ſelf; take it in an abſtract Notion, ſeparated from the Spirit, it can do nothing: It is called the fooliſhneſs of preaching, 1 Cor. 1. 21. Fooliſhneſs not only becauſe the World ſo accounts it, but becauſe in it ſelf it is a weak and unſuitable, and therefore a very improbable way to reconcile the World to God; that the ſtony Heart of one Man ſhould be broken by the Words of another Man, that one poor ſinful Creature ſhould be uſed to breath Spiritual Life into another, this could never be if this Sword were not managed by an Omnipotent Hand.

And beſides, we know what works Naturally, works Neceſſarily; if this Efficacy were inherent in the Word, ſo that we ſhould ſuppoſe it to work as other Natural Agents do, then it muſt needs convert all to whom it is at any time preached, except its Effect were miraculouſly hindered, as the Fire when it could not burn the three Children; but alas, thouſands hear it, that never feel the ſaving Power of it, Iſa. 53. 1. and 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

Secondly, It derives not this Efficacy from the Inſtrument by which it is miniſtred; let their Gifts and Abilities be what they will, it's impoſſible that ever ſuch Effects ſhould be produced from the ſtrength of their Natural or Gracious Abilities, 2 Cor. 4. 7. We have this Treaſure (ſaith the Apoſtle) in earthen Veſſels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.

'Εν ὀστρακίνοις σκεύεσιν.

The Treaſure of the Goſpel Light is carried ἐν ὀστρακίνοις σκεύεσιν, in earthen Veſſels, as Gideon and his Men had their Lamps in earthen Pitchers or in Oyſter-ſhells, for ſo the Word alſo ſignifies, the Oyſter-ſhell is a baſe and worthleſs thing in it ſelf; however, there lies the rich and precious Pearl of ſo great Value: And why is this precious Treaſure lodged in ſuch weak worthleſs Veſſels? Surely it is upon no other Deſign but to convince us of the Truth I am here to prove, That the Excellency of the Power is of God, and not of us; as it follows in the next Words. To the ſame purpoſe ſpeaks the ſame Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 3. 7. So then, neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increaſe.

Not any thing! What can be more diminutively ſpoken of the Goſpel Preachers? but we muſt not underſtand theſe Words in a ſimple and abſolute, but in a comparative and relative Sence: Not as if they were not neceſſary and uſeful in their place, but that how neceſſary ſoever they be, and what excellent Gifts ſoever God hath furniſhed them with; yet it is neither in their Power, nor Choice, to make the Word they preach effectual to Men: If it were, then the Damnation of all that hear us muſt needs lie at our Door: Then alſo, many thouſands would have been reconciled to God, which are yet in the ſtate of Enmity, but the Effect of the Goſpel is not in our Power.

Thirdly, But what Efficacy it hath to reconcile Men to God, it derives from the Spirit of God, whoſe Co-operation and Bleſſing (which is arbitrarily diſpenſed) gives it all the Fruit it hath.

* Mr. Anthony Burges.

Miniſters, ſaith one *, are like Trumpets which make no Sound, if Breath be not breathed into them. Or like Ezekiels Wheels, which move not, unleſs the Spirit move them; or Eliſha's Servant, whoſe Preſence doth no good except Eliſha's Spirit be there alſo: For want of the Spirit of God, how many thouſands of Souls do find the Miniſtry to be nothing to them? If it be ſomething to the purpoſe to any Soul, it is the Lord that makes it ſo. This Spirit is not limited by Mens Gifts or Parts; he concurs not only with their Labours, who have excellent Gifts, but oftentimes bleſſes mean, deſpicable Gifts, with far greater Succeſs: Beautiful Rachel is barren, and blear-ey'd Leah bears Children.

Ex duobus ætate jam grandibus impiis; cur iſte ita vocetur ut vocantem ſequatur ille autem non? nolito judicare, ſi non vis errare: inſcrutabilia ſunt judicia Dei: cujus vult miſeretur. Aug. de bono perſec. cap. 8.

Suppoſe, ſaith Auſtin, there be two Conduits in a Town, one very plain and homely, the other built of poliſhed Marble, and adorned with Excellent Images, as Eagles, Lions, Angels; the Water refreſhes as it is Water, and not as it comes from ſuch or ſuch a Conduit. 'Tis the Spirit that gives the Word all that Vertue it hath: He is the Lord of all ſaving Influences: He hath Dominion over the Word, over our Souls, over the Times and Seaſons of Converſion; and if any poor Creature attend the Miniſtry without Benefit, if he go away as he came, without fruit, ſurely we may ſay in this Caſe as Martha ſaid to Chriſt, in reference to her Brother Lazarus, Lord, If thou haſt been here, my Brother had not dy'd; ſo, Lord, if thou hadſt been in this Prayer, in this Sermon, this poor Soul had not gone dead, and carnal from under it. And now what remains, but that we apply this Truth in thoſe Uſes that it gives us.

Firſt Uſe of Information.

Is the Preaching of the Goſpel by Chriſt's Ambaſſadors the Way which God takes to reconcile Sinners to himſelf? Then how inexcuſable are all thoſe that continue in their ſtate of Enmity, tho' the Ambaſſadors of peace have been with them all their Lives long, wooing and beſeeching them to be reconciled to God?

O invincible, obſtinate, incurable Diſeaſe, which is aggravated by the only proper Remedy! Hath God been wooing and beſeeching you by his Ambaſſadors ſo many years to be reconciled to him, and will you not yield to any Intreaties? Muſt he be made to ſpeak in vain, to charm the deaf Adder? Well, when the milder Attribute hath done with you, the ſeverer Attribute will take you in hand.

The Lord hath kept an Account of every Year and Day of his Patience towards you, Luke 13. 7. Theſe three years I came ſeeking fruit on this Fig-tree, and find none; and Jer. 25. 3. Theſe three and twenty years have I ſpoken unto you, riſing early and ſpeaking, but ye have not hearkened.

Well, be you aſſured, that God hath both the Glaſs of your Time, and the Vials of his Wrath by him; and ſo much of his abuſed Patience as runs out of one, ſo much of his incenſed Wrath runs into the other: There is a Time when this Treaty of Peace will end, when the Maſter of the Houſe will riſe up, and the Doors be ſhut, Luke 13. 25. Then will you be left without Hope, and without Apology.

We read indeed of ſome poor and ineffectual Pleas that will be made by ſome at the laſt day; ſo Mat. 7. 22. We have propheſied in thy name, &c. Theſe Pleas will not avail, but as for you what will you plead? Poſſibly many thouſand Ideots, or poor weak-headed Perſons, may periſh; many young Ones that had little or no Time in the World to acquaint themſelves with Matters of Religion, or underſtand the Way of Salvation: Many Millions of Heathens, that never heard the Name of Chriſt, nor came within the Sound of Salvation; who will yet periſh, and that juſtly.

Now whatſoever Apologies any of theſe will make for themſelves in the laſt Day, to be ſure you can make none. God hath given you a Capacity, and Competent Underſtanding; many of you are wiſe and ſubtil in all your other Concernments, and only ſhew your Folly in the great Concernments of your Salvation: You cannot plead want of Time, ſome of you are grown gray-headed under the Goſpel; you cannot plead want of Means and Opportunities, the Ordinances and Miniſters of Chriſt have been with you all your Life long to this Day, ſure if you be Chriſtleſs now, you muſt alſo be ſpeechleſs then.

Infer. 2. Hence it alſo follows, That the World owes better Entertainment than it gives to the Miniſters of Chriſt. Chriſt's Ambaſſadors deſerve a better Welcome than they find among Men.

Your reſpects to them is founded upon their Office and Imployment for you, Heb. 13. 17. and 1 Theſ. 5. 12. They watch for your Souls, dare any of you watch for their Ruine? They bring glad Tidings, ſhall they return with ſad Tidings to him that ſent them? They publiſh Peace, ſhall they be rewarded with Trouble? O ungrateful World! We read in Eph. 6. 20. of an Ambaſſador in Bonds, and he no ordinary One neither: We read alſo a ſtrange Challenge made by another at his own Death, Acts 7. 52. Which of all the Prophets have not your Fathers perſecuted? And they have ſlain them which ſhewed before the Coming of the Juſt One. Some that break the Bread of Life to you, might want Bread to eat, for any regard you have to them. The Office of the Miniſtry, ſpeaks the abundant Love of God to you, your Contempt and Abuſe of it, ſpeaks the abundant Stupidity or Malignity of your Hearts towards God; what a ſad Proteſtation doth Jeremy make againſt his ungrateful People, Jer. 18. 20. Shall evil, ſaith he, be recompenced for good? for they have digged a pit for my Soul; remember that I ſtood before thee to ſpeak good for them, and to turn away thy Wrath from them.

God's Mercy is eminently diſcovered in the Inſtitution, and Satan's Malice is eminently diſcovered in the Oppoſition of the Miniſterial Office. Satan is a great and jealous Prince, and it is no Wonder he ſhould raiſe all the Forces he can to oppoſe the Ambaſſadors of Chriſt: When, ſaith One, the Goſpel comes into his Dominions, it doth, as it were, by Sound of Trumpet, and Beat of Drum, proclaim Liberty to all his Slaves and Vaſſals, if they will quit that Tyrant that hath ſo long held their Souls in Bondage, and come under the ſweet and eaſie Government of Chriſt: And can the Devil endure this, think you? If Chriſt ſend forth Ambaſſadors, no Wonder if Satan ſend forth Oppoſers; he certainly owes them a Spite, that undermine his Government in the World.

Mr. Gurnal's Chriſtian Armor.

Infer. 3. Hence it follows, That it nearly concerns all Chriſt's Ambaſſadors, to ſee that they be in a State of Reconciliation with God themſelves.

Shall we ſtand in Chriſt's ſtead by Office, and yet not be in Chriſt by Union? Shall we entreat Men to be reconciled to God, and yet be at Enmity with him our ſelves? O let us take heed, Leſt after we have preached to others, we our ſelves be as caſt-aways, 1 Cor. 9. 27. Of all Men living, we are the moſt miſerable if we be Chriſtleſs and Graceleſs: Our Conſciences will make more terrible Applications of our Doctrine to us in Hell, than ever we made to the vileſt of Sinners on Earth. O it's far eaſier to ſtudy and preſs a thouſand Truths upon others, than to feel the Power of one Truth upon our own Hearts; to teach others Faciendo quam faciendo: Duties to be done, than Duties by doing them.

They are ſad Dilemma's with which a Learned Writer poſes ſuch graceleſs Miniſters: If Sin be evil, why do you live in it? If it be not, why do you diſſuade Men from it? If it be dangerous, how dare you venture on it? If it be not, why do you tell Men ſo? If God's Threatnings be true, why don't you fear them? If they be falſe, why do you trouble Men needleſly with them, and put them into ſuch Frights without a Cauſe?

*Gildas Salv.p.*15, 16.

Take heed to your ſelves, leſt you ſhould cry down ſin, and not overcome it; leſt while you ſeek to bring it down in others, you bow to it, and become its Slaves your ſelves: It's eaſier to chide at ſin, than to overcome it. That is a ſmart Queſtion, Rom. 2. 21. Thou that teacheſt another, teacheſt thou not thy ſelf? A prophane Miniſter was converted by reading that Text once, but how many have read it as well as he, who never trembled at the Conſideration of it as he did?

2 Uſe for Conviction.

Is this the Method God uſes to reconcile Men to himſelf? O then Examine your ſelves, whether yet the Preaching of the Goſpel hath reconciled you to God. It's too manifeſt that many among us are in the ſtate of Enmity unto this Day: We may ſay with the Prophet, Iſaiah 53. 1. Who hath believed our Report? and to whom is the Arm of the Lord revealed? We offer you Peace upon Goſpel Terms and Articles, but our Peace returns to us again: Enemies you were to God, and Enemies you ſtill continue. The Evidence is undeniable; for,

1. Evidence.

Many of you were never convinced to this Day of your ſtate of Enmity againſt God, and without Conviction of this, Reconciliation is impoſſible; without Repentance there can be no Reconciliation, and without Conviction there can be Repentance: When we repent we lay down our Weapons, Iſa. 27. 4, 5. But how few have been brought to this? Alas! if a few poor, cold, heartleſs, ineffectual Confeſſions of Sin, may paſs for a due Conviction, and ſerious Repentance, then have we been convinced, then have we repented; but you will find if ever the Lord intend to reconcile you to himſelf, your Convictions and Humiliations for Sin will be other Manner of Things: This will coſt you more than a few cheap Words againſt Sin, 2 Cor. 7. 11. In that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, what Carefulneſs it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of your ſelves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement deſire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge?

2. Evidence.

Many of us never treated ſeriouſly with the Lord about Peace, and how then are we reconciled to him? What, a Peace without a Treaty? Reconciliation without any Conſideration about it? It can never be: When was the Time, and Where was the Place, that you were found in ſecret upon your Knees, mourning over the Sin of your Nature, and the Evils of your Ways? Certainly you muſt be brought to this, you muſt with a broken Heart bewail your Sin and Miſery.

Friend, That ſtony Heart of thine muſt feel Remorſe and Anguiſh for Sin, it will coſt thee ſome ſad Days and ſorrowful Nights, or ever thou canſt have Peace with God: It will coſt thee many a Groan, many a Tear, many a Hearty Cry to Heaven; if ever the Peace be made betwixt God and thee, thou muſt take to thee Words and turn to the Lord, ſaying, Take away all Iniquity, and receive me graciouſly. O for one Smile, one Token of Love, one Hint of Favour! The Child of Peace is not born without Pangs, and Agonies of Soul.

3. Evidence.

Many of us are not reconciled to the Duties of Religion, and Ways of Holineſs, and how then is it poſſible we ſhould be reconciled to God? What, reconciled to God, and unreconciled to the Ways of God? By Reconciliation we are made nigh: In Duties of Communion we draw nigh, and can we be made nigh to God, and have no Heart to draw nigh to God? It can never be.

Examine your Hearts, and ſay, is not the Way of Strictneſs a Bondage to you? Had you not rather be at Liberty to fulfil the Deſires of the Fleſh and of the Mind? Could you not wiſh that the Scriptures had not made ſome things elſe your Sins, and other things your Duties? Do you delight in the Law of God after the inner Man, and eſteem his Judgments concerning all things to be right? Do you love ſecret Prayer, and delight in Duties of Communion with God; or rather are they not an ungrateful Burden, and irkſom Impoſition? Give Conſcience leave to ſpeak plain.

4. Evidence.

Many of us are not Enemies to Sin, and how then are we reconciled to God? What, Friends with God, and our Luſts too? it cannot be. Pſal. 97. 10. Ye that love the Lord hate evil: The ſame hour our Reconciliation is made with God, there is an Everlaſting Breach made with Sin: This is one of the Articles or Conditions of our Peace with God, Iſa. 55. 7. Let the wicked forſake his ways, and the unrighteous Man his thoughts, and let him turn to the Lord, and he will have mercy on him; and to our God, and he will abundantly pardon.

But it's manifeſt in many of us, that we are no Enemies to Sin, we ſecretly indulge it, what bad Names ſoever we call it: We will commit ten Sins to cover one: We cannot endure the moſt ſerious, faithful, ſeaſonable, private, tender, and neceſſary Reproofs of Sin, but our Hearts ſwell and riſe at it: Sure we are not reconciled to God, whilſt we embrace his Enemy in our Boſoms.

5. Evidence.

We love not the Children of God, nor are reconciled to them that bear his Image, and how then can we be reconciled to God? 1 John 5. 1. He that loveth him that begat, loveth them alſo that are begotten: What, at Peace with the Father, and at War with the Children! It cannot be: Do not ſome that hope they have made their Peace with God, hate, revile and perſecute the Children of God? Surely in that Day we are reconciled to the Lord, we are reconciled to all his People; We ſhall then love a Chriſtian as a Chriſtian, and by this we know we are paſſed from Death to Life.

6. Evidence.

Laſtly, How can any Man think himſelf to be reconciled to God, who never cloſed heartily with Jeſus Chriſt by Faith, who is the only Days-man and Peace-maker; the alone Mediator of Reconciliation betwixt God and Man.

This is a ſure Truth, that all whom God accepts into Favour, are made accepted in the Beloved, Eph. 1. 6. If any Man will make Peace with God, he muſt take hold of his ſtrength, accept and cloſe with Chriſt, who is the Power of God, or he can never make Peace, Iſa. 27. He muſt be made nigh by the Blood of Chriſt, Eph. 2. 13. But alas, both Chriſt and Faith are Strangers to many Souls, who yet perſwade themſelves to be at Peace with God: O fatal Miſtake!

3. Uſe of Exhortation.

Laſtly, This Point deſerves a cloſe, vigorous Application in a Threefold Exhortation.

Firſt, To Chriſt's Ambaſſadors who treat with Souls in Order to their Reconciliation with God.

Secondly, To thoſe that are yet in their Enmity and unreconciled State.

Thirdly, To thoſe that have embraced the Terms of Peace, and ſubmitted to the Goſpel Overtures.

Firſt, To the Ambaſſadors of Reconciliation. God hath put a great deal of Honour upon you in this High and Noble Imployment: Great is the Dignity of your Office, to ſome you are The Savour of Death unto Death, and to others a ſavour of Life unto Life; and who is ſufficient for theſe things? 2 Cor. 2. 16. But yet the Duty is no leſs than the Dignity. O what manner of Men ſhould we be for Judgment, Serionſneſs, Affections, Patience and Exemplary Holineſs, to whom the Management of ſo great a Concern betwixt God and Man is committed!

Firſt, For Judgment and Prudence, how neceſſary is it in ſo weighty and difficult a Buſineſs as this! He had need be a Man of Wiſdom, that is to inform the Ignorant of the Nature and Neceſſity of this Great Work, and win over their Hearts to conſent to the Articles of Peace propounded in the Goſpel; that hath ſo many ſubtil Temptations to anſwer, and ſo many intricate Caſes of Conſcience to reſolve: There are many ſtrong Holds of Satan to be battered, and many ſtout and obſtinate Reſiſtances made, by the Hearts of Sinners which muſt be overcome; and he had need be no Novice in Religion, to whom ſo difficult a Province is committed.

Secondly, Let us be ſerious in our Work as well as judicious. Remember, O ye Ambaſſa- dors of Chriſt, you bring a Meſſage from the God of Heaven of Everlaſting Conſequence to the Souls of Men. The Eternal Decrees are executed upon them in your Miniſtry: To ſome you are the ſavour of Life unto Life, and to ſome the ſavour of Death unto Death, 2 Cor. 2. 16. Heaven and Hell are Matters of moſt awful and ſolemn Conſideration. O what an Account have we alſo ſhortly to give unto him that ſent us*!*

Theſe are Matters of ſuch deep Concernment, as ſhould ſwallow up our very Spirits; the leaſt they can do, is to compoſe our Hearts unto ſerioufneſs in the Management of them.

Vide Bowles Paſtor Evang. p. 136.

Thirdly, Be filled with tender Affections toward the Souls of Men, with whom you treat for Reconciliation: You had need be Men of Bowels as well as Men of Brains: You ſee a Multitude of poor Souls upon the brink of Eternal Miſery, and they know it not, but Promiſe themſelves Peace, and fill themſelves with vain Hopes of Heaven: And is there a more moving, melting Spectacle in the World than this! O think with what Bowels of Commiſeration Moſes and Paul were filled, when the one deſired rather to be blotted out of God's Book, and the other to be accurſed from Chriſt, than that Iſrael ſhould not be ſaved, Exod. 32. 33. and Rom. 9. 3. Think how the Bowels of Chriſt yearned over Jeruſalem, Mat. 23. 37. And over the Multitude, Mat. 9. 36. Let the ſame Mind be in you, which alſo was in Chriſt Jeſus.

Fourthly, Be patient and long-ſuffering towards Sinners: Such is the value of one Soul, that it's worth waiting all our Days to ſave it at laſt: The Servant of the Lord muſt not ſtrive, but be gentle unto all Men, apt to teach, patient, in meekneſs, inſtructing them that oppoſe themſelves, if God peradventure will give them Repentance, 2 Tim. 2. 24, 25. The Lord waits with Patience upon Sinners, and well may you. Conſider your ſelves, how long was God treating with you, ere you were won to him? Be not diſcouraged, if ſucceſs preſently Anſwer not Expectation.

Fifthly and Laſtly, Be ſure to back your Exhortations with drawing Examples, elſe you may Preach out your laſt Breath before you gain one Soul to God. The Devil and the Carnal Hearts of your Hearers, will put hinderances enough in the way of your Labours, don't you put the greateſt of all your ſelves. O ſtudy not only to Preach exactly, but to Live exactly; let the miſplacing of one Action in your Lives, trouble you more than the miſplacing of Words in your Diſcourſes: This is the way to ſucceed in your Embaſſy, and give up your Account with Joy.

Secondly, The Exhortation ſpeaks to all thoſe that are yet in a ſtate of Enmity, and unreconciled to God unto this Day. O that my Words might prevail, and that you would now be intreated to be reconciled to God! The Ambaſſadors of Peace are yet with you, the Treaty is not yet ended, the Maſter of the Houſe is not yet riſen up, nor the Door of Mercy and Hope finally ſhut: Hitherto God hath waited to be gracious, O that the long-ſuffering of God might be your Salvation: A Day is haſting when God will treat with you no more, when a Gulph ſhall be fixed betwixt him and you for ever, Luke 13. 25. O what will you do when the Seaſon of Mercy, and all Hopes of Mercy ſhall end together! When God ſhall become inacceſſible, inexorable, and unreconcileable to you for evermore.

O what wilt thou do, when thou ſhalt find thy ſelf ſhut up under Eternal Wrath! When thou ſhalt feel that Miſery thou art now warned of! Is this the Place where I muſt be! Are theſe the Torments I muſt endure! What, for ever! Yea, for ever: Will not God be ſatisfied with the Sufferings of a Thouſand Years? No, nor of Millions of Years! Ah Sinners, did you but clearly ſee the preſent and future Miſery of unreconciled ones, and what that Wrath of the great and terrible God is, which is comeing as faſt as the Wings of Time can bring it upon you, it would certainly drive you to Chriſt, or drive you out of your Wits. O 'tis a dreadful Thing to have God for your Eternal Enemy: To have the great and terrible God ſetting on Work his Infinite Power, to avenge the abuſe of his Grace and Mercy.

Believe it Friends, it's a fearful Thing to fall into Hands of the living God: Knowing the Terrors of the Lord we perſwade Men: An Eternal Weight hangs upon an inch of Time. O that you did know the Time of your Viſitation! That you would not dare to Adventure, and run the hazard of one Day more in an unreconciled State.

Thirdly and Laſtly, This Point ſpeaks to thoſe who have believed our Report, who have taken hold of God's Strength, and made Peace with him: Who had not obtained Mercy, but now have obtained Mercy: Who once were afar off, but now are made nigh by the Blood of Chriſt: With you I would leave a few Words of Exhortation, and I have done.

Firſt, Admire and ſtand amaz'd at this Mercy. I will praiſe thee O Lord (ſaith the Church, Iſa. 12. 1.) Though thou waſt angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comforteſt me. O how over-whelming a Mercy is here before you! God is at Peace, at Peace with you that were Enemies in your Minds by wicked Works, Coloſ. 1. 21. At Peace with you, and at Enmity with Millions as good by Nature as you: At Peace with you that ſought it not: At Peace for ever, no diſſolving this friendſhip for evermore. O let this Conſideration thaw your Hearts before the Lord, and make you cry, What am I Lord, that Mercy ſhould take in me, and ſhut out fallen Angels, and Millions of Men and Women as capable of Mercy as my ſelf! O the Riches! O the Depths of the Mercy and Goodneſs of God!

Secondly, Beware of New Breaches with God: God will ſpeak Peace to his People and to his Saints, but let not them return any more to Folly, Pſalm 85. 8. What if this State of Friendſhip can never be diſſolved, yet it is a dreadful Thing to have it clouded: You may loſe the Senſe of Peace, and with it all the Joy of your Hearts, and Comforts of your Lives, in this World.

Thirdly, Labour to reconcile others to God, eſpecially thoſe that are endeared to you by the Bonds of natural Relation: When Paul was reconciled to God himſelf, his Heart was full of heavineſs for others that were not reconciled, for his Brethren and Kinſmen according to the Fleſh, Rom. 9. 2, 3. When Abraham was become God's Friend himſelf, then, O that Iſhmael might live before thee! Gen. 17. 18.

Fourthly and Laſtly, Let your Reconciliation with God relieve you under all Burdens of Affliction you ſhall meet with in your way to Heaven: Let them that are at Enmity with God, droop under Croſſes and Afflictions, but don't you do ſo. Tranquillus Deus tranquillat omnia, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3. Let the Peace of God keep your Hearts and Minds. As nothing can Comfort a Man that muſt to Hell at laſt, ſo nothing ſhould deject a Man that ſhall through many Troubles win Heaven at laſt.

Serm. 4.

The Fourth SERMON.

Explaining the Work of the Spirit, as the internal and moſt effectual means of the Application of Christ.

JOHN VI. xliv.

No Man can come unto me, except the Father which hath ſent me, draw him.

OUR Laſt Diſcourſe informed you of the uſefulneſs and influence of the Preaching of the Goſpel, in order to the Application of Chriſt to the Souls of Men: There muſt be (in God's ordinary way) the external Miniſterial offer of Chriſt, before Men can have Union with him.

But yet all the Preaching in the World, can never Effect this Union with Chriſt in it ſelf, and in its own Vertue, except a ſupernatural and mighty Power go forth with it for that End and Purpoſe. Let Boanerges and Barnabas try their Strength, let the Angels of Heaven be the Preachers; till God draw, the Soul cannot come to Chriſt.

No ſaving Benefit is to be had by Chriſt without Union with his Perſon, no Union with his Perſon without Faith, no Faith ordinarily wrought without the Preaching of the Goſpel by Chriſt's Ambaſſadors, there Preaching hath no ſaving Efficacy without God's drawings, as will evidently appear by conſidering theſe Words, and the Occaſion of them.

Cameronis Myrothec. p. 139.

The Occaſion of theſe Words is found (as Learned Cameron well obſerves) in the 42 verſe. And they ſaid, Is not this Jeſus the Son of Joſeph, whoſe Father and Mother we know? Chriſt had been preſſing upon them in his Miniſtry, the great and neceſſary Duty of Faith, but notwithſtanding the Authority of the Preacher, the Holineſs of his Life, the Miracles by which he confirmed his Doctrine, they ſtill objected againſt him, is not this the Carpenters Son? From whence Chriſt takes the Occaſion of theſe Words: No Man can come unto me, except my Father which hath ſent me draw him, q. d. In vain is the Authority of my Perſon urged, in vain are all the Miracles wrought in your ſight, to confirm the Doctrine preached to you, till that ſecret Almighty Power of the Spirit be put forth upon your Hearts, you will not, you cannot come unto me.

The Words are a Negative Propoſition.

In which the Author, and powerful Manner of Divine Operation in working Faith are contained: There muſt be drawing before believing, and that drawing muſt be the drawing of God: Every Word hath its weight, we will conſider them in the Order they lie in the Text.

ὐδεὶς —— No Man] not one, let his natural Qualifications by what they will, let his external Advantages, in reſpect of Means and Helps, be never ſo great: It is not in the Power of any Man: All Perſons, in all Ages, need the ſame Power of God, one as well as another: Every Man is alike dead, impotent, and averſe to Faith in his Natural Capacity. No Man, or —— not one, among all the Sons of Men.

δύναται —— Can] or is able: He ſpeaks of impotency to ſpecial and ſaving Actions, ſuch as believing in Chriſt is: No Act that is ſaving, can be done without the Concurrence of ſpecial Grace. Other Acts that have a remote tendency to it, are performed by a more general concourſe and common Aſſiſtance, ſo Men may come to the Word, and attend what is ſpoken, remember, and conſider what the Word tells them; but as to believing, or coming to Chriſt, that no Man can do of himſelf, or by a general and common Aſſiſtance. No Man can.

ἐλθεῖν πρός με, —— Come unto me] (i. e.) believe in me unto Salvation. Coming to Chriſt, and believing in him, are Terms æquipollent, and are indifferently uſed to expreſs the Nature of ſaving Faith, as is plain from ver. 35. He that cometh to me ſhall never hunger, and he that believeth on me ſhall never thirſt: It Notes the Terms from which, and to which the Soul moves, and the voluntarineſs of the Motion, notwithſtanding that Divine Power by which the Will is drawn to Chriſt.

ἐὰν μὴ ὁ πατὴρ —— Except my Father] not excluding the other Two Perſons, for every Work of God relating to the Creatures is common to all the Three Perſons, nor only to Note that the Father is the firſt in order of working: But the Reaſon is hinted in the next Words.

ὁ πέμψας με —— Who hath ſent me] God having entred into Covenant with the Son and ſent him, ſtands obliged by that Paction to bring the promiſed Seed to him, and that he doth by drawing them to Chriſt by Faith: So the next Words tell us the Father doth.

ἑλκύσῃ, αὐτὸν —— Draw him] that is, powerfully and effectually incline his Will to come to Chriſt: Not by a violent Co-action, but by a benevolent bending of the Will which was averſe; and as it is not in the way of Force and Compulſion, ſo neither is it by a ſimple Moral Suaſion, by the bare Propoſal of an Object to the Will, and ſo leaving the Sinner to his own Election, but it is ſuch a Perſwaſion as hath a mighty overcoming Efficacy accompanying it: Of which more anon.

Non violenta coactio immediata, ſed voluntatis à deo averſæ benevola flexio. Glaſ. Rhet. Sacra, p. 236.

The Words thus opened, the Obſervation will be this:

Doct. That it is utterly impoſſible for any Man to come to Jeſus Chriſt, unleſs he be drawn unto him by the ſpecial and mighty Power of God.

No Man is compelled to come to Chriſt againſt his Will, he that cometh, comes willingly, but even that will and deſire to come is the Effect of Grace, Phil. 2. 13. It is God that worketh in you both to will, and to do, of his own good Pleaſure.

If we deſire the Help and Aſſiſtance of Grace (ſaith Fulgentius) even the Deſire is of Grace; Grace muſt firſt be ſhed forth upon us, before we can begin to deſire it: By Grace are ye ſaved through Faith, and that not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God, Eph 2. 8. Suppoſe the utmoſt degree of natural Ability, let a Man be as much diſpoſed and prepared as Nature can diſpoſe or prepare him, and to all this add the Propoſal of the greateſt Arguments and Motives to induce him to come; let all theſe have the Advantage of the fitteſt Seaſon to work upon his Heart; yet no Man can come till God draw him: We move as we are moved; as Chriſts coming to us, ſo our coming to him are the pure Effects of Grace.

Ut ergo deſideremus adjutorium, hoc quoque eſt gratiæ; ipſa namque incipit effundi, ut incipiat poſci. Fulgen. Epiſt. 6. ad Theod.

Three Things require Explication in this Point before us.

Firſt, What the drawing of the Father imports.

Secondly, In what Manner he draws Men to Chriſt.

Thirdly, How it appears that none come till they be ſo drawn.

Firſt, What the drawing of the Father imports.

To open this, let it be conſidered, that drawing is uſually diſtinguiſh'd in Phyſical and Moral. The former is by Co-action, Force, and Compulſion, this by a ſweet congruous Efficacy upon the Will: As to Violence and Compulſion, it is none of God's Way and Method, it being both againſt the Nature of the Will of Man which cannot be forced, and againſt the Will of Jeſus Chriſt, who loves to reign over a free and willing People, Pſalm 110. 4. The People ſhall be willing in the Day of thy Power: Or as that Word may be rendred, they ſhall be voluntarineſſes, as willing as willingneſs it ſelf: It is not then by a forcible Coaction, but in a Moral way of Perſwaſion, that God the Father draws Men to Jeſus Chriſt: He draws with the Bands of a Man, as they are called, Hoſ. 11. 14. (i. e.) in a way of rational Conviction of the Mind and Conſcience, and effectual Perſwaſion of the Will.

But yet by Moral Perſwaſion, we muſt not underſtand a ſimple and bare Propoſal, or tender of Chriſt and Grace, leaving it ſtill at the Sinners choice, whether he will comply with it or no. *For though God do not force the Will contrary to its Nature, yet there is a real internal Efficiency implied in this drawing, or an immediate Operation of the Spirit upon the Heart and Will, which in a way congruous and ſuitable to its Nature, takes away the Rebellion and Reluctance of it, and of unwilling makes it willing to come to Chriſt: And in this Reſpect we own a Phyſical, as well as a Moral Influence of the Spirit in this Work: And ſo the Scripture expreſſes it, Eph. 1. 19, 20. That we may know what is the exceeding greatneſs of his Power towards us who believe, according to the working of his mighty Power, which he wrought in Chriſt when he raiſed him from the Dead: Here is much more than a naked Propoſal made to the Will, there is a Power as well as a tender, greatneſs of Power, and yet more, the exceeding greatneſs of his Power; and this Power hath an actual Efficiency aſcribed to it, he Works upon our Hearts and Wills according to the working of his mighty Power which he wrought in Chriſt, when he raiſed him from the dead: Thus he fulfils in us all the good Pleaſure of his Will, and the Work of Faith with Power, 2 Theſ. 1. 11.

* Non videmus Deum concionantem, docentem, tamen ac ſi videmus, credimus, habet enim omnis veritas vim inclinativam, & major, majorem; & maxima, maximam: ſed cur ergo non omnes credunt evangelio? Reſpondeo, quod non omnes trahuntur à Deo. Baptiſt. Mantuanus de patientia, lib. 3. cap. 2.

And this is that which the Schools call gratia Efficax, effectual Grace, and others victrix Delectatio, an overcoming conquering Delight: Thus the Work is carried on with a moſt efficacious ſweetneſs. So that the Liberty of the Will is not infringed, whilſt the Obſtinacy of the Will is effectually ſubdued and over-ruled: For want of this there are ſo many almoſt Chriſtians in the World, hence are all thoſe vaniſhing imperfect Works which come to nothing, called in Scripture a Morning Cloud, an Early Dew: Had this mighty Power gone forth with the Word, they had never vaniſhed, or periſhed like Embryos as they do. So then, God draws not only in a Moral way, by propoſing a ſuitable Object to the Will, but alſo in a Phyſical way, or by immediate powerful Influence upon the Will: Not infringing the Liberty of it, but yet infallibly and effectually perſwading it to come to Chriſt.

Cæleſtis quædam & ineffabilis ſuavitas. Janſenius Aug. Lib. 4. cap. 1.

Secondly, Next let us conſider the marvelous Way and Manner, in which the Lord draws the Souls of poor Sinners to Jeſus Chriſt, and you will find he doth it.

1. Gradually,
2. Congruouſly,
3. Powerfully,
4. Effectually, and
5. Finally.

Firſt, This bleſſed Work is carried on by the Spirit gradually, bringing the Soul, ſtep by ſtep, in the due Method and Order of the Goſpel to Chriſt; Illumination, Conviction, Compunction, prepare the Way to Chriſt; and then Faith unites the Soul to him: Without Humiliation there can be no Faith, Mat. 21. 32. Ye repented not, that ye might believe: 'Tis the burdenſome Senſe of Sin that brings the Soul to Chriſt for reſt, Mat. 11. 28. Come unto me ye that are weary and heavy laden: But without Conviction there can be no Compunction, no Humiliation; he that is not convinced of his Sin and Miſery, never bewails it, nor mourns for it: Never was there one Tear of true Repentance ſeen to drop from the Eye of an unconvinced Sinner.

And without Illumination, there can be no Conviction, for what is Conviction but the Application of the Light which is in the Underſtanding or Mind of a Man to his Heart and Conſcience? Acts 2. 37. In this Order therefore the Spirit (ordinarily) draws Souls to Chriſt, he ſhines into their Minds by Illumination, applies that Light to their Conſciences by effectual Conviction, breaks and wounds their Hearts for Sin in Compunction, and then moves the Will to embrace and cloſe with Chriſt, in the way of Faith, for Life and Salvation.

Theſe ſeveral ſteps are more diſtinctly diſcerned in ſome Chriſtians than in others; they are more clearly to be ſeen in the Adult Convert, than thoſe that were drawn to Chriſt in their Youth; in ſuch as were drawn to him out of a State of Prophaneneſs, than thoſe that had the Advantage of a pious Education; but in this Order the Work is carried on ordinarily in all, however it differ in Point of clearneſs in the one, and in the other.

Secondly, He draws Sinners to Chriſt Congruouſly, and very agreeably to the Nature and Way of Man. So he ſpeaks, Hoſea 11.4. I drew them with the Cords of a Man, with Bands of Love: Not as Beaſts are drawn, but as Men are inclined and wrought to Compliance by rational Conviction of their Judgments, and powerful Perſwaſion of their Wills; the Minds of Sinners are naturally blinded by Ignorance, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. And their Affections bewitched to their Luſts, Gal. 3. 4. and whilſt it is thus, no Arguments or Intreaties can poſſibly prevail to bring them off from the ways of Sin to Chriſt.

Funibus
ominum
(i.e.) huma-is: Non uibus tra-
ac deduſolent
ves.

The way therefore which the Lord takes to win and draw them to Chriſt, is by rectifying their falſe Apprehenſions, and ſhewing them infinitely more good in Chriſt than in the Creature, and in their Luſts; yea, by ſatisfying their Underſtandings that there is Goodneſs enough in Jeſus Chriſt, to whom he is drawing them.

Firſt, To out-bid all Temporal Good, which is to be denied for his ſake.

Secondly, To preponderate all Temporal Evils which are to be ſuffered for his ſake.

Firſt, That there is more good in Chriſt than in all Temporal good Things, which we are to deny, or forſake, upon his Account: This being once clearly and convincingly diſcovered to the Underſtanding, the Will is thereby prepared to quit all that which entangles and withholds it from coming to Chriſt: There is no Man that loves Money ſo much, but he will willingly Part with it for that which is more worth to him than the Sum he Parts with to purchaſe it: Mat. 13. 45, 46. The Kingdom of Heaven is like to a Merchant-Man, ſeeking goodly Pearls, who when he hath found one Pearl of great Price, goeth and ſelleth all that he hath and buyeth it.

Such an invaluable Pearl is Jeſus Chriſt, infinitely more worth than all that a poor Sinner hath to part with for him, and is a more real good than the Creature. Theſe are but vain Shadows, Prov. 23. 5. Chriſt is a ſolid ſubſtantial Good: Yea, he is, and by Conviction appears to be a more ſuitable Good than the Creature: The World cannot juſtifie and ſave, but Chriſt can. He is a more durable Good than any Creature-comfort is, or can be: The faſhion of this World paſſeth away, 1 Cor. 7. 31. But durable Riches and Righteouſneſs are in him, Prov. 8. 17. Thus Chriſt appears in the Day of Conviction infinitely more excellent than the World, he out-bids all the offers that the World can make, and this gives the main ſtroke to this Work, of drawing a Soul to Jeſus Chriſt.

Secondly, And then (to remove every block out of the way to Chriſt) God diſcovers to the Soul enough in him to preponderate, and much more than recompence, all the Evils and Sufferings it can endure for his ſake.

'Tis true, they that cloſe with Chriſt, cloſe with his Croſs alſo: They muſt expect to ſave no more but their Souls by him: He tells us what we muſt truſt to, Luke 14. 26, 27. If any Man come to me, and hate not his Father and Mother, and Wife and Children, and Brethren and Siſters; yea, and his own Life alſo, he cannot be my Diſciple: And whoſoever doth not bear his Croſs, and come after me, cannot be my Diſciple.

To read ſuch a Text as this, with ſuch a Comment upon it as Satan and our own Fleſh can make, is enough to ſcare a Man from Chriſt for ever: Nor is it poſſible, by all the Arguments in the World, to draw any Soul to Chriſt upon ſuch Terms as theſe, till the Lord convince it, that there is enough, and much more than enough in Jeſus Chriſt, to recompence all theſe Sufferings and Loſſes we endure for him.

But when the Soul is ſatisfied, that theſe Sufferings are but external upon the vile Body, but the Benefit that comes by Chriſt is internal in a Mans own Soul, theſe Afflictions are but Temporal, Rom, 8. 18. But Chriſt and his Benefits are Eternal: This muſt needs prevail with the Will to come over to Chriſt, notwithſtanding all the evils of Suffering that Accompany him, when the reality of all this is diſcovered by the Lord, and the Power of God goes along with theſe Diſcoveries. Thus the Lord draws in our own way, by rational Convictions of the Underſtanding, and Allurements of the Will.

And it's poſſible, this may be the Reaſon why ſome poor Souls miſ-judge the workings of the Spirit of God upon themſelves, thinking they never had that wonderful and mighty Power of God in Converſion acting upon their Hearts, becauſe they find all that is done upon their Hearts that way, is done in the ordinary Courſe and Method of Nature: They conſider, compare, are convinced, and then reſolve to chuſe Chriſt and his Ways; whereas they expect to feel ſome ſtrange Operations that ſhall have the viſible Characters of the immediate Power of God upon them, and ſuch a Power they might diſcern, if they would conſider it as working in this Way and Method: But they cannot diſtinguiſh Gods Acts from their own, and that puzzles them.

Thirdly, The drawings of the Father are very powerful. The Arm of the Lord is revealed in this Work, Iſa. 53. 1. It was a powerful Word indeed, that made the Light at firſt ſhine out of Darkneſs, and no leſs Power is required to make it ſhine into our Hearts, 2 Cor. 5. 14. That Day in which the Soul is made willing to come to Chriſt, is call'd the Day of his Power, Pſalm 110. 3. The Scripture expreſſeth the Work of Converſion by a Threefold Metaphor, viz.

That of a Reſurrection from the dead, Rom. 6.4.

That of Creation, Epheſ. 2. 10. And

That of Victory or Conqueſt, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5. All theſe ſet forth the Infinite Power of God in this Work, for no leſs than Almighty Power is required to each of them; and if you ſtrictly examine the diſtinct Notions, you ſhall find the Power of God more and more illuſtriouſly diſplay'd in each of them.

To raiſe the Dead is the Effect of Almighty Power, but then the Reſurrection ſuppoſeth preexiſtent Matter. In the Work of Creation, there is no pre-exiſtent Matter, but then there is no Oppoſition: That which is not, rebels not againſt the Power that gives it Being. But Victory and Conqueſt ſuppoſes Oppoſition, all the Power of corrupt Nature arming it ſelf, and fighting againſt God, but yet not able to fruſtrate his Deſign.

Let the Soul whom the Father draws, ſtruggle and reluctate as much as it can, it ſhall come, yea, and come willingly too, when the drawing Power of God is upon it. O the Self-conflicts, the contrary reſolves with which the Soul finds it ſelf diſtracted and rent aſunder! The hopes and fears, the incouragements and diſcouragements, they will, and they will not! But victorious Grace conquers all oppoſition at laſt. We find an excellent Example of this in bleſſed Auguſtine, * who ſpeaks of this very Work, the drawing of his Soul to Chriſt, and how he felt in that Day two Wills in himſelf, one old, the other new; one Carnal, the other Spiritual, and how in theſe their contrary Motions and Conflicts he was torn aſunder in his own Thoughts and Reſolutions, ſuffering that unwillingly, which he did willingly. And certainly, if we conſider how deep the Soul is rooted by natural Inclination, and long continued cuſtom in Sin, how extreamly averſe it is to the Ways of ſtrict Godlineſs, and Mortification, how Satan, that invidious Enemy, that ſtrong Man armed, fortifies the Souls to defend his poſſeſſion againſt Chriſt, and intrenches himſelf in the Underſtanding, Will, and Affections, by deep rooted prejudices againſt Chriſt and Holineſs, it is the Wonder of Wonders to ſee a Soul quitting all its beloved Luſts, and fleſhly Intereſts and Endearments, and coming willingly under Chriſt's Yoak.

Suavis motus in verbo, & fortis tractus in Deo. Eſt enim quædam neceſſitas voluntaria. Moulin. Anat. Armin.

* Ita duæ voluntates meæ, una vetus, alia nova, illa carnalis, illa ſpiritualis confligebant interſe atq; diſcordando diſſipabant animam meam.——ibi enim magis jam non ego, quia ex magna parte id patiebar invitus, quod faciebam volens. Aug. confeſ. lib. 8. c. 5.

Fourthly, The drawings of God are very effectual: There is indeed a common and ineffectual Work upon Hypocrites and Apoſtates, call'd in Scripture a morning Cloud, an early Dew, Hoſ. 6. 4. Theſe may believe for a time, and fall away at laſt, Luke 8. 13. Their Wills may be half won, they may be drawn half way to Chriſt, and return again. So it was with Agrippa, Acts 26. 28. ἐν ὀλίγῳ πείθεις, within a very little thou perſwadeſt me to be a Chriſtian: But in God's elected ones it is effectual: Their Wills are not only almoſt, but altogether perſwaded to Embrace Chriſt, and quit the Ways of Sin, how pleaſant, gainful and dear ſoever they have been to them: The Lord not only draws, but draws home thoſe Souls to Chriſt, John 6. 37. All that the Father hath given me, ſhall come to me.

Suadere eſt conantis, perſuadere efficientis: Suadet qui conſulit, perſuadet qui quo vult indicit hominem. Eraſm.

It is confeſſed, that in the drawing home of the very elect to Chriſt, there may be, and frequently are, many pauſes, ſtands, and demurs; they have Convictions, Affections and Reſolutions ſtirring in them, which like early Bloſſoms ſeem to be nipt and die away again. There is frequently (in young ones eſpecially) an hopeful appearance of Grace, they make Conſcience of Sins, and Duties: They have ſometimes notable rouzings and awakenings under the Word, they are obſerved to affect retirements for Meditation and Prayer, and delight to be in the Company of Chriſtians; and after all this, youthful Luſts and Vanities are found to ſtifle and choak theſe hopeful beginnings, and the work ſeems to ſtand (it may be ſome years) at a pauſe, however at laſt the Lord makes it victorious over all oppoſition, and ſets it home with Power upon their Hearts.

Fifthly, To conclude, Thoſe whom the Father draws to Chriſt, he draws to him finally and for ever. The gifts and calling of God are without Repentance, Rom. 11. 29. They are ſo as to God the giver, he never repents that he hath called his People into the Fellowſhip of his Son Chriſt Jeſus: And they are ſo on the Believers part, he is never ſorry, whatever he afterwards meets with, that he is come to Chriſt.

There is a time when Chriſtians are drawn to Chriſt, but there ſhall never be a time in which they ſhall be drawn away from Chriſt, Jer. 10. 29. There's no plucking them out of the Fathers Hand. It was common to a Proverb in the Primitive Times, when they would expreſs an Impoſſibility, You may as ſoon draw a Chriſtian from Chriſt as do it: When Chriſt asked that Queſtion of the Diſciples, Will ye alſo go away? Lord (ſaith Peter in the name of them all) to whom ſhall we go? Thou haſt the Words of eternal Life, John 6. 68. They that are thus drawn, do with full purpoſe of Heart, cleave unto the Lord. And thus of the manner and quality of effectual drawing.

Thirdly, In the laſt place, I am to evince the impoſſibility of coming to Chriſt without the Fathers drawings: And this will evidently appear upon the conſideration of theſe two particulars.

Firſt, The difficulty of this Work is above all the power of nature to overcome.

Secondly, That little Power and Ability that Nature hath, it will never Employ to ſuch a purpoſe as this, till the drawing Power of God be upon the Will of a Sinner.

Firſt, If all the power of Nature were employ'd in this deſign, yet ſuch are the difficulties of this Work, that it ſurmounts all the Abilities of Nature: This the Scripture roundly and plainly affirms, Eph. 2. 8. By Grace are ye ſaved through Faith, and that not of your ſelves, it is the Gift of God. To think of Chriſt is eaſie, but to come to Chriſt is (to Nature) impoſſible: To ſend forth lazy and ineffectual wiſhes to Chriſt we may, but to bring Chriſt and the Soul together, requires the Almighty Power of God, Eph. 1. 19. The Grace of Faith by which we come to Chriſt, is as much the free Gift of God, as Chriſt himſelf who is the Object of Faith, Phil. 1. 29. To you it is freely given to believe. And this will eaſily let it ſelf into your Underſtandings, if you but conſider.

The { Subject, Act, and Enemies } of this Work of Faith, or coming to Chriſt.

Firſt, Conſider the Subject of Faith in which it it wrought, or what it is that is drawn to Chriſt: 'Tis the Heart of a Sinner; which is naturally as indiſpoſed to this Work, as the Wood which Elijah laid in order upon the Altar was to catch Fire, when he had poured ſo much Water upon it as did not only wet the Wood, but alſo fill'd up the Trench round about it, 1 Kings 18. 33. For it's naturally a dark, blind, and ignorant Heart, Job 11. 12. And ſuch an Heart can never believe, till he that commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſs do ſhine into it, 2 Cor. 5. 15.

Nor will it avail any thing to ſay, though Man be born in darkneſs and ignorance, yet afterwards he may acquire knowledge in the uſe of means, as we ſee many natural Men do in a very high degree: For this is not that light that brings the Soul to Chriſt, yea, this natural unſanctified light blinds the Soul, and prejudices it more againſt Chriſt than ever it was before, 1 Cor. 1. 21, 26.

As it is a blind and ignorant Heart, ſo it's a ſelfiſh Heart by Nature: All its deſigns and aims terminate in Self: This is the centre and weight of the Soul, no Righteouſneſs but 'tis own is ſought after, that, or none, Rom. 10. 3. Now for a Soul to renounce and deny Self in all its forms, modes, and intereſts, as every one doth that cometh to Chriſt; to diſclaim and deny natural, moral, and religious Self, and come to Chriſt, as a poor, miſerable, wretched, empty Creature; to live upon his Righteouſneſs for ever, is as ſupernatural and wonderful, as to ſee the Hills and Mountains ſtart from their Baſes and Centres, and fly like wandering Atomes in the Air.

Nay, this Heart which is come to Chriſt, is not only dark and ſelfiſh, but full of pride. O 'tis a deſperate proud Heart by Nature, it cannot ſubmit to come to Chriſt as Benhadads Servants came to the King of Iſrael, with Sackcloth on their Loyns, and Ropes upon their Heads. To take guilt, ſhame and confuſion of Face to our ſelves, and acknowledge the Righteouſneſs of God in our eternal Damnation; to come to Chriſt naked and empty, as one that juſtifies the ungodly: I ſay, Nature left to it ſelf, would as ſoon be Damned as do this: The proud Heart can never come to this, till the Lord have humbled and broken it by his power.

Seconly, Let us take the Act of Faith into conſideration alſo, as it is here deſcribed, by the Souls coming to Jeſus Chriſt, and you will find a neceſſity of the Fathers drawings, for this evidently implies that which is againſt the ſtream and current of corrupt Nature, and that which is above the Sphere and Capacity of the moſt refined and accompliſhed Nature.

Firſt, it's againſt the ſtream and current of our corrupt Nature to come to Chriſt. For let us but conſider the Term from which the Soul departs when it comes to Chriſt. In that Day it leaves all its Luſts and ways of Sin, how pleaſant, ſweet and profitable ſoever they have been unto it, Iſa. 55. 7. Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous Man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord: Way and thoughts, (i. e.) Both the practice, and delight of Sin, muſt be forſaken, the outward and inward Man muſt be cleanſed from it. Now there are in the boſoms of unregenerate Men ſuch darling Luſts, that have given ſo much practical and ſpeculative pleaſure, which have brought ſo much profit to them, which have been born and bred up with them, and which, upon all theſe accounts, are endeared to their Souls in that degree, that it's eaſier for them to die, than to forſake them: Yea, nothing is more common among ſuch Men, than to venture eternal Damnation, rather than ſuffer a ſeparation from their Sins.

And which is yet much more difficult in coming to Chriſt, the Soul forſakes not only its 'ſinful ſelf, but its righteous ſelf: (i. e.) not only its worſt Sins, but its beſt performances, accompliſhments, and excellencies. Now this is one of the greateſt ſtraits that Nature can be put to: Righteouſneſs by Works was the firſt Liquor that ever was put into a Veſſel, and it ſtill retains the tang and ſavour of it, and will to the end of the World, Rom. 10. 3. For they being ignorant of Gods righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the Righteouſneſs of God. οὐχ ὑπετάγησαν, they have not ſubmitted: To come naked and empty to Chriſt, and receive all from him as a free Gift, is to proud corrupt Nature the greateſt abaſement and ſubmiſſion in the World.

Let the Goſpel furniſh its Table with the richeſt and coſtlieſt Dainties that ever the Blood of Chriſt purchaſed, ſuch is the pride of Nature, that it diſdains to taſte them, except it may alſo pay the reckoning. If the old Hive be removed from the place where it was wont to ſtand, the Bees will come home to the old place, yea, and many of them you ſhall find will die there, rather than go to the Hive, though it ſtand in a far better place than it did before. Juſt ſo ſtands the caſe with Men. The Hive is removed, (i. e.) we are no more to expect Righteouſneſs as Adam did, by obeying and working, but by believing, and coming to Chriſt; but Nature had as lieve be damned as do this: It ſtill goes about to eſtabliſh its own Righteouſneſs.

Vertues, Duties, and Moral Excellencies, theſe are the Ornaments of Nature, here is Nature ſet off in its ſumptuous attire and rich Embelliſhments, and now to renounce it, diſclaim and contemn it as droſs and dung in compariſon of Chriſt as believers do, Phil. 3. 8. This, I ſay, is againſt the grain of Nature. We reckon it the ſtrange effect of Self-denial in Mahomet the Great, who being ſo enamoured with his beautiful Irene, would be perſwaded, upon reaſons of State, with his own Hand to ſtrike off her Head, and that when ſhe appeared with all her rich Ornaments before him, rather like ſuch a Goddeſs, as the Poets in their ecſtaſies uſe to feign, than a Mortal Creature: And yet certainly this is nothing to that Self-denial which is exerciſed in our coming to Chriſt.

Knowles Hiſtory of the Turks.

Secondly, And if we look to the other Term to which the Soul moves, we ſhall find it acting as much above the Sphere and Ability of improved Nature, as here it acts and moves againſt the ſtream and current of corrupted Nature: For how wonderful and ſupernatural an Adventure is that, which the Soul makes in the Day that it comes to Jeſus Chriſt!

Surely, for any poor Soul to venture it ſelf for ever upon Jeſus Chriſt whom it never ſaw, nay, upon Chriſt whoſe very exiſtence its own unbelief calls into Queſtion whether he be or no: And that when it's even weighed down to the Duſt, with the burdenſome Senſe of its own vileneſs and total unworthineſs, feeling nothing in it ſelf but Sin and Miſery, the workings of Death and fears of Wrath: To go to Chriſt, of whoſe pardoning Grace and Mercy it never had any the leaſt experience, nor can find any ground of hope in it ſelf that it ſhall be accepted; this is as much above the power of Nature, as it is for a Stone to riſe from the Earth, and fix it ſelf among the Stars: Well might the Apoſtle aſcribe it to that Almighty Power which raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, Eph. 1. 19, 20. If the Lord draw not the Soul, and that with an omnipotent Pull, it can never come from it ſelf to Chriſt. And yet farther, Thirdly, The Natural impoſſibility of coming to Chriſt will more clearly appear, if we conſider the Enemies to Faith, or what blocks are rol'd by Satan and his Inſtruments into the way to Chriſt: To mention (in this place) no more but our carnal reaſon, as it's armed and managed by the ſubtilty of Satan, what a wonder is it that any Soul ſhould come to Chriſt ?

Theſe are the ſtrong Holds (mentioned 2 Cor. 10. 4.) out of which thoſe objections, fears and diſcouragements ſally, by which the Soul is fiercely aſſaulted in the way to Chriſt ?

Wilt thou forſake all thy pleaſures, merry Company, and ſenſible comforts, to live a ſad, retired, penſive life ? Wilt thou begger and undo thy ſelf, let go thy comforts in hand, for an hope of that which thine Eyes never ſaw, nor haſt thou any certainty that it's any more than a fancy ? Wilt thou, that haſt lived in Reputation and Credit all thy life, now become the ſcorn and contempt of the World ? Thinkeſt thou thy ſelf able to live ſuch a ſtrict, ſevere, mortified and ſelf-denying a life, as the Word of God requires ? And what if Perſecution ſhould ariſe, (as thou muſt expect it will) canſt thou forſake Father and Mother, Wife and Children, yea, and give up thine own life too, to a cruel and bloody Death ? Be adviſed better, before thou reſolve in ſo important a matter : What thinkeſt thou of thy Fore-fathers, that lived and died in that way thou art now leaving ? Art thou wiſer than they ? Do not the generality of Men walk in the ſame Paths thou haſt hitherto walked in ? If this way lead to Hell as thou feareſt it may, think then how many Millions of Men muſt periſh as well as thy ſelf; and is ſuch a ſuppoſition conſiſtent with the gracious and Merciful Nature of God ? Beſides, think what ſort of People thoſe are unto whom thou art about to join thy ſelf in this new way ? Are there not to be found among them many things to diſcourage thee, and cool thy Zeal ? They are generally of the lower and baſer ſort of Men, poor and deſpicable : Seeſt thou not tho' their Profeſſion be Holy, how earthly, carnal, proud, factious, and hypocritical, many of them are found to be ! And doubtleſs the reſt are like them, though their Hypocriſie be not yet diſcovered.

O what ſtands and demurs ! What heſitations and doubts is the Soul clogg'd with in its way to Chriſt ! But yet none of theſe can withhold and detain the Soul, when the Father draws : Greater is he that is in us, than he that is in the World : And thus you ſee the Nature, Manner, and Efficacy of Divine drawings, and how impoſſible it is for any Soul to come to Chriſt without them.

The Inferences and Improvements of the Point follow.

Infer. 1. How deeply and throughly is the Nature of Man corrupted, and what an Enemy is every Man to his own happineſs, that he muſt be drawn to it ? Joh. 5. 40. You will not come unto me, that ye might have life.

Life is deſirable in every Mans Eyes, and Eternal is the moſt excellent Life ; yet in this the World is agreed rather to die and periſh for ever, than come to Chriſt for Life. Had Chriſt told us of Fields and Vineyards, Sheep and Oxen, Gold and Silver, Honours and Senſual Pleaſures, who would not have come to him for theſe ? But to tell him of Mortification, Self-denial, ſtrictneſs of Life, and Sufferings for his ſake, and all for an happineſs to be enjoyed in the World to come, Nature will never like ſuch a Propoſition as this.

You ſee where it ſticks, not in a ſimple inability to believe, but in an inability complicated with enmity, they neither can come, nor will come to Chriſt : 'Tis true, all that do come to Chriſt come willingly, but thanks to the Grace of God that hath freed and perſwaded the Will, elſe they had never been willing to come : Who ever found his own Heart firſt ſtir and move towards Chriſt ? How long may we wait and expect, before we ſhall feel our Hearts naturally burn with deſires after, and love to Jeſus Chriſt ?

This averſion of the Will and Affections from God, is one of the Maſter Roots of Original Sin. No Argument can prevail to bring the Soul to Chriſt, till this be maſter'd and over-powered by the Fathers drawings. In our motions to Sin we need trigging, but in all our motions to Chriſt we as much need drawing. He that comes to Heaven may ſay, Lord, if I had had my own way and will, I had never come here : If thou hadſt not drawn me, I ſhould never have come to thee. O the Riches of the Grace of God ! Oh unparallel'd Mercy and Goodneſs ! Not only to prepare ſuch a Glory of this for an unworthy Soul, but to put forth the exceeding greatneſs of thy power, afterwards to draw an unwilling Soul to the enjoyment of it.

Infer. 2. What enemies are they to God and the Souls of Men, that do all they can to diſcourage and hinder the Converſion of Men to Chriſt ? God draws forward, and theſe do all that in them lies to draw backward, (i. e.) to prejudice and diſcourage them from coming to Jeſus Chriſt in the way of Faith : This is a direct oppoſition to God, and a plain confederacy with the Devil.

O how many have been thus diſcouraged in their way to Chriſt, by their carnal Relations, I cannot ſay Friends ! Their greateſt Enemies have been the Men of their own Houſe : Theſe have pleaded (as if the Devil had hird and fee'd them) againſt the everlaſting welfare of their own Fleſh. O cruel Parents, Brethren, and Siſters, that jeer, frown, and threaten, where they ſhould encourage, aſſiſt and rejoice ! Such Parents are the Devils Children. Satan chuſes ſuch Inſtruments as you are above all others for this Work : He knows what Influence and Authority you have upon them, and over them : And what fear, love, and dependance they have for you, and upon you : So that none in all the World are like to manage the deſign of their Damnation ſo effectually as you are like to do it.

Will you neither come to Chriſt your ſelves, nor ſuffer your dear Relations that would ? Had you rather find them in the Ale-houſe, than in the Cloſet ? Did you inſtrumentally give them their Being, and will you be the Inſtruments of ruining for ever thoſe Beings they had from you ? Did you ſo earneſtly deſire Children, ſo tenderly Nurſe and provide for them, take ſuch delight in them, and after all this do what in you lies to Damn and Deſtroy them ? If theſe lines ſhall fall into any ſuch Hands, O that God would ſet home the Conviction and Senſe of this horrid Evil upon their Hearts.

And no leſs guilty of this Sin are ſcandalous and looſe Profeſſors, who ſerve to furniſh the Devil with the greateſt arguments he hath to diſſwade Men from coming to Chriſt : 'Tis your Looſeneſs and Hypocriſie by which he hopes to ſcare others from Chriſt. It's ſaid, Cant. 2. 7. I charge you by the Roes and Hinds of the Field, that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my beloved till he pleaſe.

Roes and Hinds (like young Converts, and comers towards Chriſt) are ſhy and timerous Creatures that ſtart at the leaſt ſound, or yelp of a Dog, and fly away: Take heed what you do in this caſe, leſt you go down to Hell under the guilt of damning more Souls than your own.

Infer. 3. Learn hence the true ground and reaſon of thoſe ſtrange, amazing, and ſupernatural effects, that you behold and ſo admire in the World, as often as you ſee Sinners forſaking their pleaſant profitable Corruptions and Companions, and embracing the ways of Chriſt, Godlineſs, and Mortification.

It is ſaid, 1 Pet. 4. 4. They think it ſtrange that you run not with them into the ſame exceſs of Riot: The Word is ἐν τῷ ξενίζειν, they ſtand at a gaze as the Hen ~~that~~ hath hatch'd Partridge Eggs doth, when ſhe ſees them take the Wing and fly away from her.

Beloved, it is the Worlds Wonder to ſee their Companions in Sin forſake them: Thoſe that were once as prophane and vain as themſelves, it may be more, to forſake their Society, retire into their Cloſets, mourn for Sin, ſpend their time in Meditation and Prayer, embrace the ſevereſt Duties, and content to run the greateſt hazards in the World for Chriſt; but they ſee not that Almighty Power that draws them, which is too ſtrong for all the ſinful ties and engagements in the World to withhold and detain them.

A Man would have wonder'd to ſee Eliſha leave the Oxen and run after Elijah, ſaying, Let me go, I pray thee, and kiſs my Father and Mother, and then I will follow thee; when Elijah had ſaid nothing to perſwade him to follow him, only as he paſt by him, he caſt his Mantle on him, 1 Kings 10 19, 20. Surely, that Soul whom God draws muſt needs leave all and follow Chriſt, for the Power of God reſteth on it: All carnal ties and engagements to Sin, break and give way, when the Father draws the Soul to Chriſt in the Day of his Power.

Infer. 4. Is this the firſt ſpring of ſpiritual Motion after Chriſt? Learn then from hence, how it comes to paſs that ſo many excellent Sermons and powerful Perſwaſions are ineffectual, and cannot draw and win the Soul to Chriſt. Surely it is becauſe Miniſters draw alone, and the ſpecial ſaving Power of God goes not forth at all times alike with their endeavours.

Paul was a choſen Veſſel, fill'd with a greater Meaſure of Gifts and Graces by the Spirit, than any that went before him, or followed after him; and as his Talents, ſo his Diligence in improving them was beyond any recorded Example we read of amongſt Men: He rather * flew like a Seraphim, than travelled upon his Maſters errand about the World. Apollo was an eloquent Preacher, and mighty in the Scriptures, yet Paul is nothing, and Apollo nothing; but God that gives the increaſe, 1 Cor. 3. 7. We are too apt to admire Men, yea, and the beſt Men are but too apt to go forth in the ſtrength of their own Parts and Preparations; but God ſecures his own Glory, and magnifies his own Power frequently in giving ſucceſs to weaker endeavours, and Men of lower abilities, when he withholds it from Men of more raiſed, refined, and excellent Gifts and Abilities.

It is our great Honour, who are the Miniſters of the Goſpel, that we are σύνεργοι, workers together with God, 1 Cor. 3 9. in his Strength we can prevail, the Weapons of our Warfare are mighty through God, 2 Cor. 10. 4. But if his Preſence, bleſſing and aſſiſtance, be not with us, we are nothing, we can do nothing.

If we prepare Diligently, pray Heartily, preach Zealouſly, and our hearers go as they came, without any ſpiritual Effects and Fruits of our Labours; what ſhall we ſay, but as Martha ſaid to Chriſt, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my Brother had not died: Had the Spirit of God gone forth with his eſpecial Efficacy and Bleſſing with this Prayer, or that Sermon, theſe Souls had not departed Dead and Senſeleſs from under it.

Infer. 5. Doth all Succeſs and Efficacy depend upon the Fathers drawings? Let none then deſpair of their unregenerate and carnal Relations, over whoſe obſtinacy they do, and have cauſe to mourn.

What if they have lain as many Years under the preaching of the Goſpel as that poor Man did at the Pool of Betheſday, and hitherto to no purpoſe? A time may come at laſt (as it did for him) when the Spirit of God may move upon the Waters; I mean, put a quickening and converting power into the means, and then the deſire of your Souls for them ſhall be fulfill'd.

It may be you have poured out many Prayers and Tears to the Lord for them, you have cried for them as Abraham for his Son, O that Iſhmael might live before thee! O that this poor Husband, Wife, Child, Brother, or Siſter, might live in thy ſight, and ſtill you ſee they continue at one rate, carnal, dead and ſenſeleſs: Well, but yet give not up your hopes, nor ceaſe your pious endeavours, the time may come when the Father may draw as well as you, and then you ſhall ſee them quit all, and come to Chriſt, and nothing ſhall hinder them. They are now drawn away of their own Luſts, they are eaſily drawn away by their ſinful Companions, but when God draws, none of theſe ſhall withdraw them from the Lord Jeſus. What is their Ignorance, Obſtinacy, and hardneſs of Heart, before that mighty Power that ſubdues all things to it ſelf? Go therefore to the Lord by Prayer for them, and ſay, Lord, I have laboured for my poor Relations in vain, I have ſpent my Exhortations to little purpoſe: The Work is too difficult for me, I can carry it no farther, but thou canſt; O let thy power go forth, they ſhall be willing in the Day of thy Power.

Infer. 6. If none can come to Chriſt except the Father draw them, then ſurely none can be drawn from Chriſt except the Father leave them: That power which at firſt drew them to Chriſt, can ſecure and eſtabliſh them in Chriſt to the end, John 10. 29. My Father which gave them me is greater than all, and no Man is able to pluck them out of my Fathers Hand.

When the power of God at firſt draws us out of our natural ſtate to Chriſt, it finds us not only impotent, but obſtinate, not only unable, but unwilling to come; and yet this power of God prevails againſt all oppoſition: How much more is it able to preſerve and ſecure us, when his fear is put into our inward parts, ſo that we dare not depart, we have no will to depart from him? Well then, if the World ſay I will enſnare thee, if the Devil ſay I will deſtroy thee, if the Fleſh ſay I will betray thee, yet thou art ſecure and ſafe, as long as God hath ſaid, I will never leave thee nor forſake thee, Heb. 13. 5.

Infer. 7. Let this engage you to a conſtant Attendance upon the Ordinances of God, in which this drawing Power of God is ſometimes put forth upon the Hearts of Men.

Beloved, there are certain Seaſons in which the Lord comes nigh to Men in the Ordinances and Duties of his Worſhip, and we know not at what Time the Lord cometh forth by his Spirit upon this Deſign: He many Times comes in an Hour when we look not for him, when we think not of him; I am found of them that ſought me not, Iſa. 65. 1. It's good therefore to be found in the way of the Spirit: Had that poor Man, that lay ſo long at the Pool of Betheſda, reaſoned thus with himſelf, So long have I lain here in vain expecting a Cure, it's to no purpoſe to wait longer, and ſo had been abſent at that very Time when the Angel came down, he had in all likelihood carried his Diſeaſe to the Grave with him.

How doſt thou know but this very Sabbath, this Sermon, this Prayer, which thou haſt no Heart to attend, and art tempted to neglect, may be the Seaſon, and Inſtrument, wherein the Lord may do that for thy Soul, which was never yet done upon it?

Infer. 8. To conclude, How are all the Saints engaged to put forth all the Power and Ability they have for God, who hath put forth his Infinite Almighty Power to draw them to Chriſt!

God hath done great Things for your Souls, he hath drawn you out of the miſerable State of Sin and Wrath, and that when he lets others go, by Nature as good as you, he hath drawn you into Union with Chriſt, and Communion with his glorious Priviledges. O that you would henceforth imploy all the Power you have for God in Duties of Obedience, and in drawing others to Chriſt as much as in you lies, and ſay continually with the Church, Draw me, we will run after thee, Cant. 1. 4.

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 5.

The Fifth SERMON.

EPHES. II. i.

And you hath he quickened, who were Dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins.

Opening that Work of the Spirit more particularly, by which the Soul is enabled to apply Chriſt.

IN the former Sermons we have ſeen our Union with Chriſt in the general Nature of it, and the Means by which it is effected, both External by the Preaching of the Goſpel, and Internal by the Drawings of the Father. We are now to bring our Thoughts yet cloſer to this great Myſtery, and conſider the Bonds or Ligaments by which Chriſt and Believers are knit together in a bleſſed oneneſs.

And if we heedfully obſerve the Scripture Expreſſions, and ponder the Nature of this Union, we ſhall find there are Two Bands which knit Chriſt and the Soul together, viz.

1. The Spirit on Chriſts part.
2. Faith on our part.

The Spirit on Chriſts part, quickening us with Spiritual Life, whereby Chriſt firſt takes hold of us, and Faith on our Part, when thus quickened, whereby we take hold of Chriſt: Accordingly this Union with the Lord Jeſus is expreſſed in Scripture ſometimes by one, and ſometimes by the other of theſe Means or Bonds by which it is effected. Chriſt is ſometimes ſaid to be in us; ſo Col. 1. 27. Chriſt in you the hope of Glory: And Rom. 8. 10. And if Chriſt be in you, the Body is Dead becauſe of Sin. And other Times it is expreſſed by the other Bond on our Part, as 1 John 5. 20. We are in him that is true, even in his Son Chriſt Jeſus: And 2 Cor. 5. 17. If any Man be in Chriſt, he is a new Creature.

Mount Piſgah, p. 22, 23.

The Difference betwixt both theſe, is thus aptly expreſſed by a late Author, “Chriſt is in Believers by his Spirit, 1 John 4. 13. The Believer is in Chriſt by Faith, 1 John 12. Chriſt is in the Believer by Inhabitation, Rom. 3. 17. The Believer is in Chriſt by Implantation, Rom. 6 35. Chriſt is in the Believer as the Head is in the Body, Col. 1. 18. As the Root in the Branches, John 15. 5. Believers are in Chriſt as the Members are in the Head, Eph. 1. 23. or as the Branches are in the Root, John 15. 1, 7. Chriſt in the Believer implieth Life and Influence from Chriſt, Col. 3. 4. The Believer in Chriſt implieth Communion, and Fellowſhip with Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 30. When Chriſt is ſaid to be in the Believer, we are to underſtand it in Reference to Sanctification; when the Believer is ſaid to be in Chriſt, it is in Order to Juſtification.

Thus we apprehend, being our ſelves firſt apprehended by Jeſus Chriſt, Phil. 3. 12. We cannot take hold of Chriſt, till firſt he take hold of us, no Vital Act of Faith can be exerciſed, till a Vital Principle be firſt inſpired: Of both theſe Bonds of Union we muſt ſpeak diſtinctly, and firſt of the firſt, Chriſt quickening us by his Spirit, in order to our Union with him, of which we have an Account in the Scripture before us, You hath he quickened who were Dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins: In which Words we find theſe two Things noted, viz.

1. The Infuſion of a Vital Principle of Grace.
2. The Total indiſpoſedneſs of the Subject by Nature.

Firſt, The Infuſion of a Vital Principle of Grace, You hath he quickened. Theſe Words [hath he quickened] are a Supplement, made to clear the Senſe of the Apoſtle, which elſe would have been more obſcure by Reaſon of that long Parentheſis, betwixt the firſt and the fifth verſes, for as the * Learned obſerve, this Word ὑμᾶς, you, is governed of the Verb συνεζωοποίησε, hath he quickened, verſe 5. So that here the Words are tranſpoſed from the plain Grammatical Order, der, by Reaſon of the Interjection of a long Sentence, therefore with good warrant our Tranſlators have put the Verb into this firſt Verſe, which is repeated Verſe the fifth, and ſo keeping faithfully to the Scope, have excellently cleared the Syntax and Order of the Words. Now this Verb συνεζωοποίησε, hath he quickened, imports the firſt Vital Act of the Spirit of God, or his firſt enlivening Work upon the Soul, in Order to its Union with Jeſus Chriſt: For look, as the Blood of Chriſt is the Fountain of all Merit, ſo the Spirit of Chriſt is the Fountain of all Spiritual Life: And until he quicken us, (i. e.) infuſe the Principle of the Divine Life into our Souls, we can put forth no Hand, or Vital Act of Faith, to lay hold upon Jeſus Chriſt.

* Illud ὑμᾶς regitur à συνεζωοποίησε, v. 5. eſt igitur hoc loco & hyperbaton & ſynchyſis & ἀποκοπὴ τῆς περιόδου quæ eſt ſpecies τοῦ ἀνανταποδότου, cujus quidem anomaliæ cauſa eſt ἡ παρεμβολὴ interjectio ſententiæ prolixioris. Piſcator. Pooles Synop.

This his quickening Work, is therefore the firſt in Order of Nature to our Union with Chriſt, and fundamental to all other Acts of Grace done and performed by us from our firſt cloſing with Chriſt throughout the whole courſe of our Obedience: And this quickening Act is ſaid, Verſe the fifth, to be together with Chriſt: Either noting (as ſome expound it) that it is the Effect of the ſame Power by which Chriſt was raiſed from the Dead, according to Eph. 1. 19. or rather to be quickened together with Chriſt, notes that new ſpiritual Life which is infuſed into our Dead Souls in the Time of our Union with Chriſt: For it is Chriſt to whom we are conjoined and united in our Regeneration, out of whom, as a Fountain, all Spiritual Benefits flow to us, among which this Vivification or quickening is one, and a moſt ſweet and precious one.

Ex Chriſto conjuncto nobiſcum ut capite cum membris profluunt in nos omnia beneficia in quorum numero eſt vivificatio. Rolloc. in Loco.

Zanchy, Bodius, and many others, will have this quickening to comprize both our Juſtification and Regeneration, and to ſtand oppoſed both to Infernal and Spiritual Death, and it may well be allowed; but it moſt properly imports our Regeneration, wherein the Spirit, in an ineffable and myſterious Way, makes the Soul to live to God, yea, to live the Life of God which was before Dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins: In which Words we have.

Secondly, In the next Place, the total indiſpoſedneſs of the Subjects by Nature: For as it is well noted by a * Learned Man, the Apoſtle doth not ſay of theſe Epheſians that they were half Dead, or Sick and Infirm, but Dead wholly, altogether Dead, deſtitute of any Faculty or Ability ſo much as to think one good Thought, or perform one good Act: You were Dead in reſpect of Condemnation, being under the damning Sentence of the Law, and you were Dead in reſpect of the Privation of Spiritual Life, Dead in Oppoſition to Juſtification, and Dead in Oppoſition to Regeneration and Sanctification: And the fatal Inſtrument by which their Souls Died is here ſhewed them, you were Dead in, or by Treſpaſſes and Sins; this was the Sword that kill'd your Souls, and cut them off from God. Some do curiouſly diſtinguiſh betwixt Treſpaſſes and Sins, as if one pointed at Original, the other at Actual Sins; but I ſuppoſe they are promiſcuouſly uſed here, and ſerve to expreſs the Cauſe of their Ruine, or Means of their Spiritual Death and Deſtruction: This was their Caſe when Chriſt came to quicken them, dead in Sin, and being ſo, they could not move themſelves towards Union with Chriſt, but as they were moved by the quickening Spirit of God.

* Non vocat hic ſemimortuos aut ægrotos ac infirmos, ſed prorſus mortuos, omnis facultate bene cogitandi aut agendi deſtitutui. Rolloc. in Loc.

Hence the Obſervation will be this,

Doct. That thoſe Souls which have Union with Chriſt, are quickened with a Supernatural Principle of Life by the Spirit of God in Order thereunto.

The Spirit of God is not only a living Spirit, formally conſidered, but he is alſo the Spirit of Life effectively or cauſally conſidered: And without his breathing or infuſing Life into our Souls, our Union with Chriſt is impoſſible.

It is the Obſervation of Learned Camero, that there muſt be an Unition before there can be a Union with Chriſt. Unition is to be conceived efficiently as the Work of God's Spirit, joyning the Believer to Chriſt, and Union is to be conceived formally, the joyning it ſelf of the Perſons together: We cloſe with Chriſt by Faith, but that Faith being a Vital Act, preſuppoſes a Principle of Life communicated to us by the Spirit; therefore it's ſaid, John 11. 26. Whoſoever liveth and believeth in me, ſhall never Die: The Vital Act and Operation of Faith ſprings from this quickening Spirit: So in Rom. 8. 1, 2. The Apoſtle having in the firſt Verſe opened the Bleſſed Eſtate of them that are in Chriſt, ſhews us in the ſecond Verſe how we come to be in him: The Spirit of Life (ſaith he) which is in Chriſt Jeſus, hath made me free from the Law of Sin and Death.

Obſervandum eſt unionem & unitionem inter ſe differre: unio eſt rerum actus, qui formâ rationem habet, nempe actus rerum unitarum quâ unitæ ſunt: unitio autem actus ſignificat cauſæ efficientis, &c. Camero de Eccleſ. p. 222.

There is indeed a quickening Work of the Spirit, which is ſubſequent to Regeneration, conſiſting in his exciting, recovering, and actuating of his own Graces in us; and from hence is the livelineſs of a Chriſtian; and there is a quickening Act of the Spirit in our Regeneration, and from hence is the firſt Spiritual Life of a Chriſtian, of this I am here to ſpeak, and that I may ſpeak profitably to this Point, I will in the Doctrinal Part labour to open theſe five Particulars.

Firſt, What this Spiritual Life is in its Nature and Properties.

Secondly, In what Manner it is wrought or inſpired into the Soul.

Thirdly, For what end, or with what Deſign this Life is ſo inſpired.

Fourthly, I ſhall ſhew this Work to be wholly Supernatural.

And then, Fifthly, Why this quickening muſt be Antecedent to our actual cloſing with Chriſt by Faith.

Firſt, We will enquire into the Nature and Properties of this Life, and diſcover (as we are able) what it is. And we find it to conſiſt in that wonderful change which the Spirit of God makes upon the Frame and Temper of the Soul, by his infuſing or implanting the Principles of Grace in all the Powers and Faculties thereof.

A change it makes upon the Soul, and that a marvellous one, no leſs than from Death to Life, for though a Man be Phyſically a living Man (i. e.) his natural Soul hath Union with his Body, yet his Soul having no Union with Chriſt, he is Theologically a dead Man, Luke 15. and Col. 2. 13. Alas, it deſerves not the Name of Life, to have a Soul ſerving only to Seaſon, and preſerve the Body a little while from ſtinking: To carry it up and down the World, and only enable it to eat and drink, and talk and laugh, and then Die: Then do we begin to live, when we begin to have Union with Chriſt the Fountain of Life, by his Spirit communicated to us; us: From this Time we are to reckon our Life * as ſome have done: There be many changes made upon Men beſides this, many are changed from Prophaneneſs to Civility, and from meer Civility to Formality, and a ſhadow of Religion, who ſtill remain in the State and Power of Spiritual Death notwithſtanding; but when the Spirit of the Lord is poured out upon us, to quicken us with the new Spiritual Life, this is a wonderful change indeed: It gives us an Eſſe ſupernaturale, a new ſupernatural Being, which is therefore call'd a new Creature, the new Man, the hidden Man of the Heart: The natural Eſſence and Faculties of the Soul remain ſtill, but it is diveſted of the old Qualities, and endowed with new Ones, 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are paſt away, behold all things are become new.

* Hic jacet Similis cujus ætas multorum annorum fuit, ipſe ſeptem duntaxat annos vixit.

And this Change is not made by altering and rectifying the Diſorders of the Life only, leaving the Temper and Frame of the Heart ſtill carnal; but by the Infuſion of a ſupernatural permanent Principle into the Soul, John 4. 14. It ſhall be in him a Well of Water: Principles are to a courſe of Actions, as Fountain or Springs are to the Streams and Rivers that flow from them, and are maintain'd by them: And hence is the evenneſs and conſtancy of renewed Souls in the courſe of Godlineſs.

Nor is this Principle or Habit acquired by accuſtoming our ſelves to Holy Actions, as natural Habits are acquired by frequent Acts, which beget a Diſpoſition, and thence grow up to an Habit or ſecond Nature, but it is infuſed or implanted into the Soul by the Spirit of God. So we read, Ezek. 36. 25, 26. A new Heart alſo will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you: It grows not up out of our Natures, but is put, or infuſed into us: As it's ſaid of the two Witneſſes, Rev. 11. 11. who lay Dead in a Civil Senſe three Days and an half, that the Spirit of Life from God entred into them; ſo it is here in a Spiritual Senſe, the Spirit of Life from God enters into the dead, carnal Heart: It's all by Way of ſupernatural Infuſion.

Nor is it limited to this or that Faculty of the Soul, but Grace of Life is poured into all the Faculties: Behold all things are become new, 2 Cor. 5. 17. The Underſtanding, Will, Thoughts and Affections, are all renewed by it: The whole inner Man is changed, yea, the Tongue and Hand, the Diſcourſes and Actions, even all the Ways and Courſes of the outward Man are renewed by it.

But more particularly, we ſhall diſcern the Nature of this Spiritual Life, by conſidering the Properties of it; among which theſe are very remarkable.

Firſt, The Soul that is joyned to Chriſt, is quickned with a Divine Life, ſo we read in 2 Pet. 1. 4. Where Believers are ſaid to be Partakers or Conſorts of the Divine Nature: A very high Expreſſion, and warily to be underſtood. Partakes of the Divine Nature, not eſſentially, ſo its wholly incommunicable to the Creature, nor yet Hypoſtatically and Perſonally, ſo Chriſt only was a Partaker of it, but our Participation of the Divine Nature muſt be underſtood in a way proper to Believers; that is to ſay, we partake of it by the Inhabitation of the Spirit of God in us, according to 1 Cor. 3. 16, 17. Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? The Spirit, who is God by Nature, dwells and actuates the Soul whom he regenerates, and by ſanctifying cauſes it to live a Divine Life: From this Life of God the unſanctified are ſaid to be alienated, Eph. 4. 18. but Believers are Partakers of it.

Secondly, And being Divine, it muſt needs be the moſt excellent and tranſlated Life that any Creature doth or can live in this World: It ſurmounts the natural, rational, and moral Life of the unſanctified, as much as the Angelical Life excels the Life that Flies, and Worms of the Earth do live.

Some think it a rare Life to live in Senſual Pleaſures, but the Scripture will not allow ſo much as the Name of Life to them; but tells us, they are dead whileſt they live, 1 Tim. 5. 6. certainly it is a wonderful Elevation of the Nature of Man, to be quickened with ſuch a Life as this. There are two Ways wherein the bleſſed God hath honoured poor Man above the very Angels of Heaven. One was by the Hypoſtatical Union of our Nature in Chriſt, with the Divine Nature; the other is by uniting our Perſons Myſtically to Chriſt, and thereby communicating Spiritual Life to us: This latter is a moſt glorious Priviledge, and in one reſpect a more ſingular Mercy than the former; for that Honour which is done to our Nature by the Hypoſtatical Union, is common to all good and bad, even they that periſh have yet that Honour; but to be implanted into Chriſt by Regeneration, and live upon him as the Branch doth upon the Vine, this is a peculiar Priviledge, a Mercy hedg'd in from the World that is to periſh, and only communicated to God's Elect, who are to live Eternally with him in Heaven.

Thirdly, This Life infuſed by the regenerating Spirit, is a moſt pleaſant Life. All Delights, all Pleaſures, all Joys, which are not Phantaſtick and Deluſive, have their ſpring and origin here, Rom. 8. 6. To be ſpiritually minded is Life and Peace, (i. e.) a moſt ſerene placid Life, ſuch a Soul becomes, ſo far as it is influenced and ſanctified by the Spirit, the very Region of Life and Peace: When one thing is thus predicated of another, in caſu recto, (ſaith a Learned Man) it ſpeaks their intimate Connexion: Peace is ſo connatural to this Life, that you may either call it a Life that hath Peace in it, or a Peace that hath Life in it: Yea, it hath its encloſed Pleaſures in it, Such as a ſtranger intermeddles not with, Prov. 14. 10. Regeneration is the Term from which all true Pleaſure commences, you never live a merry Day, till you begin to live to God: Therefore it's ſaid, Luke 15. 24. When the Prodigal Son was returned to his Father and reconciled, then they began to be Merry.

None can make another by any Words, to underſtand what that Pleaſure is which the renewed Soul feels diffuſed through all its Faculties and Affections in its Communion with the Lord, and in the ſealings and witneſſings of his Spirit. That is a very apt and well known ſimiltude which Peter Martyr uſed, and the Lord bleſſed to the Converſion of the Noble Marqueſs Galeacius: If, ſaid he, a Man ſhould ſee a Company of People dancing upon the Top of a remote Hill, he would be apt to conclude they were a Company of wild diſtracted People; but if he draw nearer and behold the excellent Order, and hear the raviſhing ſweet Muſick that is among them, he will quickly alter his Opinion of them, and fall a dancing himſelf with them.

All the Delights in the ſenſual Life, all the Pleaſure that ever your Luſts gave you, are but as the putrid ſtinking Waters of a corrupt Pond, where Toads lie croaking and ſpawning, to the Chryſtal Streams of the moſt pure and pleaſant Fountain.

Fourthly, This Life of God with which the regenerate are quickened in their Union with Chriſt, as it is a pleaſant ſo it is alſo a growing increaſing Life, John 4. 14. It ſhall be in him a Well of Water ſpringing up into Everlaſting Life.

It is not in our Sanctification, as it is in our Juſtification, our Juſtification is compleat and perfect, no defect is found there, but the new Creature labours under many Defects: All Believers are equally Juſtified, but not equally Sanctified: Therefore you read, 2 Cor. 4. 16. that the inward Man is renewed Day by Day: And 2 Pet. 3. 18. Chriſtians are exhorted to grow in Grace, and in the Knowledge of our Lord and Saviour: If this Work were perfect and finiſhed at once, as Juſtification is, there could be no renewing Day by Day, nor growth in Grace, Perfectum eſt cui nihil deeſt, & cui nihil addi poteſt: The Apoſtle indeed Prays for the Theſſalonians, That God would ſanctifie them, ὁλοτελεῖς — wholly, perfectly, 1 Theſ. 5. 23. And this is Matter of Prayer and Hope, for at laſt it will grow up to Perfection; but this perfect Holineſs is reſerved for the perfect State in the World to come, and none but * deluded proud Spirits boaſt of it here: But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be done away, 1 Cor. 13. 9, 10. And upon the Imperfection of the new Creature in every Faculty, that warfare and daily conflict ſpoken of, Gal. 5. 17. And experienced by every Chriſtian, is grounded: Grace riſes gradually in the Soul, as the Sun doth in the Heavens, which ſhineth more and more unto a perfect Day, Prov. 4. 18.

* Perfectio Sanctificationis in iſthac vita non refertur niſi in ſomniis quorundam Fanaticorum. Ameſius.

Fifthly, To conclude, this Life with which the regenerate are quickened, is an Everlaſting Life. This is the Record, that God hath given us Eternal Life, and this Life is in his Son, 1 John 5. 11. This Principle of Life, is the Seed of God, and that remains in the Soul for ever, 1 John 3. 9. It is no tranſient vaniſhing thing, but a fixed, permanent Principle, which abides in the Soul for ever; a Man may loſe his Gifts, but Grace abides: The Soul may, and muſt be ſeparated from the Body, but Grace cannot be ſeparated from the Soul: When all forſake us, this ſticks by us.

This infuſed Principle is therefore vaſtly different, both from the extraordinary Gifts of Prophecy, wherein the Spirit ſometimes was ſaid to come upon Men, under the Old Teſtament, 1 Sam. 10. 6, 10. And from the common vaniſhing Effects he ſometimes produceth in the unregenerate, of which we have frequent Accounts in the New Teſtament, Heb 6. 4. and John 5. 35. It's one thing for the Spirit to come upon a Man in the way of preſent Influence and Aſſiſtance, and another thing to dwell in a Man as his Temple.

And thus of the Nature and Quality of this bleſſed Work of the Spirit in quickening us.

Secondly, Having ſeen the Nature and Properties of the Spiritual Life, we are concerned in the next Place to enquire into the Way and Manner in which it is wrought, and infuſed by the Spirit: And here we muſt ſay, Firſt of all, That the Work is wrought in the Soul very myſteriouſly; ſo Chriſt tells Nicodemus, John 3. 8. The Wind bloweth where it liſteth, and thou heareſt the ſound thereof, but canſt not tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth, ſo is every one that is born of the Spirit: There be many Opinions among Philoſophers about the Original of Wind, but we have no certain Knowledge of it: We deſcribe it by its Effects and Properties, but know little of its Original: And if the Works of God in Nature be ſo abſtruſe and unſearchable, how much more are theſe ſublime and ſupernatural Works of the Spirit ſo?

We are not able to ſolve the Phænomena of Nature, we can give no Account of our Formation in the Womb, Eccleſ. 11. 5. Who can exactly deſcribe how the Parts of the Body are formed, and the Soul infuſed? It's curiouſly wrought in the loweſt Parts of the Earth, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſalm 139. 16. but how we know not. Baſil ſaith divers Queſtions may be moved about a Fly, which may Poſe the greateſt Philoſopher: We know little of the Forms and Eſſences of Natural Things, much leſs of theſe profound, and abſtruſe Spiritual Things.

Secondly, But tho' we cannot pry into theſe Secrets by the Eye of Reaſon, yet God hath revealed this to us in his Word, that it is wrought by his own Almighty Power, Eph. 1. 19. The Apoſtle aſcribes this Work to the exceeding greatneſs of the Power of God: And this muſt needs be, if we conſider, how the Spirit of God expreſſes it in Scripture by a new Creation: (i. e.) a giving Being to ſomething out of nothing, Eph. 2. 10. In this it differs from all the Effects of Humane Power, for Man always Works upon ſome pre-exiſtent Matter, but here is no ſuch Matter: All that is in Man, the Subject of this Work, is only a Paſſive Capacity or Receptivity, but nothing is found in him to contribute towards this Work: This ſupernatural Life is not, nor can it be educed out of natural Principles: This wholly tranſcends the Sphere of all natural Power: But of this more anon.

Thirdly, This alſo we may affirm of it, That this Divine Life is infuſed into all the natural Faculties and Powers of the Soul, not one exempted, 1 Theſ. 5. 23. The whole Soul and Spirit is the recipient Subject of it: And with reſpect to this general Infuſion into all the Faculties and Powers of the Soul, it's call'd a new Creature, a new Man, having an integral Perfection and fullneſs of all its Parts and Members: It becomes Light in the Mind, John 17. 3. Obedience in the Will, 1 Pet. 1. 2. In the Affections an heavenly Temper and Tenderneſs, Col. 3. 1, 2. And ſo is variouſly denominated, even as the Sea is from the ſeveral Shores it waſhes, tho' it be one and the ſame Sea. And here we muſt obſerve, lies one main Difference betwixt a Regenerate Soul, and an Hypocrite; * the one is all of a Piece, as I may ſay, the Principle of Spiritual Life runs into all and every Faculty and Affection, and ſanctifies or renews the whole Man; whereas the change upon Hypocrites is but Partial and Particular, he may have new Light, but no new Love, a new Tongue, but not a new Heart: This or that Vice may be reformed, but the whole Courſe of his Life is not altered.

* Ab uno de ſuper principio quod convenienter voluntati operatur dependent prima, ſecunda & tertia. Quemadmodum minima pars ferri lapidio magnetis ſpiritu movetur, per multos annulos ferreos extenſa: ita etiam qui ſunt virtute præditi, divino ſpiritu attracti, cum prima manſione conjungantur, deinceps autem alii uſque ad poſtremam. Clem. Alex. Strom. lib. 7.

Fourthly and Laſtly, This Infuſion of Spiritual Life is done inſtantaneouſly, as all Creation Work is: Hence it is reſembled to that plaſtick Power, which in a moment made the Light to ſhine out of darkneſs, juſt ſo God ſhines into our Hearts, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

'Tis true, a Soul may be a long time under the preparatory works of the Spirit, he may be under convictions and humiliations, purpoſes and reſolutions a long time; he may be waiting at the Pool of Betheſda, attending the Means and Ordinances, but when the Spirit comes once to quicken the Soul, 'tis done in a Moment: Even as it is in the infuſion of the rational Soul, the Body is long ere it be prepared and moulded, but when once the Embryo or Matter is ready, it's quickned with the Spirit of Life in an Inſtant: So it is here: But O what a bleſſed Moment is this! Upon which the whole weight of our eternal happineſs depends; for it is Chriſt in us (i. e.) Chriſt formed in us, who is the hope of Glory, Col. 1. 27. And our Lord expreſly tells us, John 3. 3. That except we be regenerate and born again, we cannot ſee the Kingdom of God. And thus of the way and manner of its infuſion.

Thirdly, Let the deſign and end of God in his quickening Work be next conſidered: For that end, and with that deſign and aim this Work is wrought. And if we conſult the Scriptures in this matter, we ſhall find this Principle of Life is infuſed in order to our glorifying God in this World by a life of Obedience, and our enjoying God in the World to come.

Firſt, Spiritual life is infuſed in order to a courſe of Obedience in this World, whereby God is glorified: So we read in Eph. 2. 10. Created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good Works, which God hath before ordained that we ſhould walk in them: Habits are to Actions, as the Root is to the Fruit, it is for Fruit ſake that we plant the Roots, and ingraff the Branches. So in Ezek. 36. 27. A new Spirit will I alſo put within you, and cauſe you to walk in my Statutes, and ye ſhall keep my Judgments and do them. This is the next, or immediate deſign and end, not only of the firſt infuſion of the Principle of Life into the Soul, but of all the exciting, actuating and aſſiſting Works of the Spirit afterwards. Now this principle of Spiritual life infuſed, hath a twofold influence into Obedience.

Firſt, This makes it ſincere and true Obedience, when it flows from an inward vital Principle of Grace. The Hypocrite is moved by ſomething ab extra, from without, as the applauſe of Men, the accommodation of fleſhly Intereſts, the force of Education; or if there be any thing from within that moves him, it is but Self-intereſt, to quiet a grumbling Conſcience, and ſupport his vain hopes of Heaven: But he never acts from a new Principle, a new Nature inclining him to Holy Actions. Sincerity mainly lies in the harmony and correſpondency of Actions to their Principles: From this infuſed Principle it is, that Men hunger and thirſt for God, and go to their Duties, as Men do to their Meals, when they find an empty craving Stomach.

O Reader, pauſe a little upon this ere thou paſs on, ask thy Heart whether it be ſo with thee: Are holy Duties connatural to thee? Doth thy Soul move and Work after God by a kind of ſupernatural inſtinct? This then will be to thee a good evidence of thy Integrity.

Secondly, From this infuſed Principle of Life, reſults the excellency of our Obedience, as well as the ſincerity of it: For by vertue and reaſon thereof, it becomes free and voluntary, not forced and conſtained, it drops like Honey of its own accord out of the Comb, Cant. 4. 11. without ſqueezing: Or as Waters from the Fountain without forcing, Joh. 4. 14. an unprincipled Profeſſor muſt be ſqueez'd by ſome weight of Affliction, ere he will yield one Tear, or pour out a Prayer, Pſal. 78.34. When he ſlew them, then they ſought him.

Now the freedom of Obedience is the Excelcy of it, Gods Eye is much upon that, 1 Cor. 9. 17. Yea, and the uniformity of our Obedience, which is alſo a ſpecial part of the beauty of it, reſults from hence: He that acts from a Principle, acts ſuently and uniformly, there is a proportion betwixt the Parts of his Converſation: This is it which makes us Holy, ἐν πάσῃ ἀναστροφῇ, in all manner of Converſation, or in every creek and turning of our Converſations, as the Word imports, 1 Pet. 1. 15. whereas, he that is moved by this or that external accidental motive, muſt needs be up and down, off and on, very uneven, like the Legs of a lame Man, as the Expreſſion is, Prov. 26. 7. which are not equal: Now a Word of God, and then the Diſcourſe runs muddy and prophane, or carnal again: All that evenneſs and uniformity that is in the ſeveral parts of a Chriſtians Life, is the effect of this infuſed Principle of ſpiritual Life.

Thirdly, Another aim and deſign of God in the infuſion of his principle of Life, is thereby to prepare and qualifie the Soul for the enjoyment of himſelf in Heaven: Except a Man be born again he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God, Joh. 3. 3. All that ſhall poſſeſs that Inheritance muſt be begotten agan to it, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4. This Principle of Grace is the very Seed of that Glory, it's Eternal Life in the Root and Principle, Joh. 17. 3. By this the Soul is attempered and qualified for that State and Employment. What is the Life of Glory, but the Viſion of God, and the Souls aſſimilation to God by that Viſion? From both which, reſults that unſpeakable joy and delight which paſſeth Underſtanding: But what Viſion of God, aſſimilation to God, or delight in God, can that Soul have, which was never quickned with the ſupernatural Principle of Grace? The Temper of ſuch Souls is expreſſed in that ſad Character, Zeck 11. 8. My Soul loathed them, and their Soul alſo abhorred me. For want of this vital Principle it is, that the very ſame Duties and Ordinances, which are the delights and higheſt pleaſures of the Saints, are no better than a meer drudgery and bondage to others, Mal. 1. 13. Heaven would be no Heaven to a dead Soul; this principle of Life, in its daily growth and improvement, is our Meetneſs as well as our Evidence for Heaven: Theſe are the main ends of its infuſion.

Fourthly, In the next place, according to the Method propoſed, I am obliged to ſhew you, that this quickening Work is wholly ſupernatural, it is the ſole and proper Work of the Spirit of God. So Chriſt himſelf expreſly aſſerts it, in Joh. 3. 6, 8. That which is born of the fleſh is fleſh, and that which is born of the ſpirit is ſpirit: The wind bloweth where it liſteth, and thou heareſt the ſound thereof, but canſt not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth, ſo is every one that is born of the Spirit.

Believers are the birth or off-ſpring of the Spirit, who produceth the new Creature in them in an unintelligible manner even to themſelves. So far it is above their own Ability to produce, that it is above their Capacity to underſtand the way of its Production: As if you ſhould ask, do you know from whence the Wind comes? No: Do you know whither it goes? No: But you hear and feel it when it blows? Yes: Why ſo is every one that is born of the Spirit: He feels the efficacy, and diſcerns the effects of the Spirit on his own Soul, but cannot underſtand or deſcribe the manner of its Production: This is not only above the carnal, but above the renewed mind to comprehend; we can contribute nothing, I mean actively, to the production of this Principle of Life: We may indeed be ſaid to concur paſſively, with the Spirit in it: That is, there is found in us a Capacity, aptneſs, or receptiveneſs of this Principle of Life: Our Nature is endowed with ſuch Faculties and Powers as are meer Subjects to receive, and Inſtruments to act this Spiritual Life: God only quickens the rational Nature with Spiritual Life.

It is true alſo, that in the progreſs of Sanctification, a Man doth actively concur with the Spirit, but in the firſt Production of this Spiritual Principle he can do nothing: He can indeed perform thoſe external Duties that have a remote tendency to it, but he cannot by the power of Nature perform any ſaving act, or contribute any thing more than a paſſive Capacity to the implantation of a new Principle: As will appear by the following Arguments.

Arg. 1. He that actively concurs to his own Regeneration, makes him to differ; but this is denied to all regenerate Men, 1 Cor. 4. 7. Who maketh thee to differ from another? And what haſt thou that thou didſt not receive?

Arg. 2. That to which the Scripture aſcribes both impotency and enmity, with reſpect to Grace, cannot actively, and of it ſelf, concur to the Production of it: But the Scripture aſcribes both impotency and enmity to Nature with reſpect to Grace. It denies to it a power to do any thing of it ſelf, John 15. 5. And which is leſs, it denies to it a power to ſpeak a Word, Mat. 12. 34. And which is leaſt of all, it denies it power to think a good Thought, 2 Cor. 3. 5. This impotency, if there were no more, cuts off all pretence of our active concurrence, but then if we conſider that it aſcribes enmity to our Natures as well as impotency, how clear is the caſe! See Rom. 8. 7. The carnal Mind is enmity againſt God. And Col. 1. 21. And you that were Enemies in your Minds by wicked Works. So then Nature is ſo far productive of this Principle, as impotency and enmity can enable it to be ſo.

Arg. 3. That which is of natural Production, muſt needs be ſubject to natural Diſſolution; that which is born of the Fleſh is Fleſh, a periſhing thing, for every thing is as its Principle is, and there can be no more in the effect, than there is in the cauſe: But this Principle of Spiritual Life is not ſubject to diſſolution, it is the Water that ſprings up into everlaſting Life, Joh. 4. 14. The Seed of God which remaineth in the regenerate Soul, 1 Joh. 3. 9. And all this becauſe it's born not of corruptible, but of incorruptible Seed, 1 Pet. 1. 23.

Arg. 4. If our new Birth be our Reſurrection, a new Creation, yea, a victory over Nature, then we cannot actively contribute to its Production; but under all theſe Notions it is repreſented to us in the Scriptures. It's our Reſurrection from the dead, Eph. 5. 14. And you know the Body is wholly paſſive in its Reſurrection: But tho' it concurs not, yet it gives pre-exiſtent Matter: Therefore the Metaphor is deſignedly varied, Eph. 4. 24. Where it's call'd a Creation: In which there is neither active Concurrence, nor pre-exiſtent Matter: But tho' Creation excludes pre-exiſtent Matter, yet in producing ſomething out of nothing, there is no reluctancy nor oppoſition; therefore to ſhew how purely ſupernatural this Principle of Life is, it is cloathed and preſented to us in the Notion of a victory, 2 Cor. 10. 4. And ſo leaves all to Grace.

Arg. 5. If Nature could produce, or but actively concur to the Production of this Spiritual Life, then the beſt Natures would be ſooneſt quickened with it; and the worſt Natures not at all, or at laſt and leaſt of all: But contrarily, we find the worſt Natures often regenerated, and the beſt left in the State of Spiritual death: With how many ſweet homilitical Vertues was the young Man adorned? Mark. 10. 21. yet graceleſs: And what a ſink of Sin was Mary Magdalen, Luk. 7. 37. yet ſanctified? Thus beautiful Rachel is barren, whilſt blear-ey'd Leah bears Children. And there is ſcarce any thing that effects and melts the Hearts of Chriſtians, more than this comparative conſideration doth, when they conſider Veſſels of Gold caſt away, and Leaden ones choſen for ſuch noble uſes. So that it's plain enough to all wiſe and humble Souls, that this new Life is wholly of ſupernatural Production.

Fifthly and laſtly, I ſhall briefly repreſent the neceſſary antecedent of this quickening Work of the Spirit to our firſt cloſing with Chriſt by Faith: And this will eaſily let it ſelf into our underſtandings, if you but conſider the Nature of the vital act of Faith; which is the Souls receiving of Chriſt, and reſting upon him for Pardon and Salvation: In which two things are neceſſarily included, viz.

1. The renouncing of all other hopes and dependencies.
2. The opening of the Heart fully to Jeſus Chriſt.

Firſt, The renouncing of all other hopes and dependencies whatſoever. Self in all its acceptations, natural, ſinful, and moral, is now to be denied and renounced for ever, elſe Chriſt can never be received, Rom. 10. 3. not only Self in its vileſt pollutions, but Self in its richeſt Ornaments, and endowments: But this is as impoſſible to the unrenewed and natural Man, as it is for Rocks or Mountains to ſtart from their Centre, and fly like wandering Atomes in the Air: Nature will rather chuſe to run the hazard of everlaſting Damnation, than eſcape it by a total renunciation of its beloved Luſts, or Self-righteouſneſs: This ſupernatural Work neceſſarily requires a a ſupernatural Principle. Rom. 8. 2.

Secondly, The opening the Heart fully to Jeſus Chriſt, without which Chriſt can never be received, Rev. 3. 20. but this alſo is the effect of the quickening Spirit, the Spirit of Life which is in Chriſt Jeſus. Sooner may we expect to ſee the Flowers and Bloſſoms open without the influence of the Sun, than the Heart and will of a Sinner open to receive Chriſt without a Principle of ſpiritual Life firſt derived from him: And this will be paſt doubt to all that conſider, not only the impotence of Nature, but the ignorance, prejudice, and averſations of Nature, by which the Door of the Heart is barr'd and chain'd againſt Chriſt, Joh. 5. 40. So that Nature hath neither ability nor will, power or deſire to come to Chriſt: If any have an Heart opened to receive him, 'tis the Lord that opens it by his Almighty Power, and that in the way of an infuſed Principle of Life ſupernatural.

Queſt. But here it may be doubted and objected, againſt this poſition, If we cannot believe till we are quickened with ſpiritual Life, as you ſay, and cannot be juſtified till we believe as all ſay, then it will follow that a regenerate Soul may be in the State of Condemnation for a time, and conſequently periſh if Death ſhould befall him in that juncture.

To this I return, That when we ſpeak of the priority of this quickening Work of the Spirit to our actual believing, we rather underſtand it of the priority of Nature, than of Time, the Nature and Order of the Work requiring it to be ſo: A vital Principle muſt, in order of Nature, be infuſed before a vital act can be exerted. Firſt make the Tree good, and then the Fruit good: And admit we ſhould grant ſome priority in time alſo to this quickening Principle, before actual Faith, yet the abſurdity mentioned would be no way conſequent upon that conceſſion: For as the vital act of Faith quickly follows the regenerating Principle, ſo the Soul is abundantly ſecured againſt the danger objected; God never beginning any ſpecial Work of Grace upon the Soul, and then leaving it, and the Soul with it, in hazard, but preſerves both to the finiſhing and compleating of his gracious deſign, Phil. 1. 6.

Firſt Uſe of Information.

Infer. 1. If ſuch be the nature and neceſſity of this Principle of Divine Life, as you heard it opened in the foregoing Diſcourſe, then hence it follows, That unregenerate Men are are no better than dead Men. So the Text repreſents them, You heth he quickened who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins: (i. e.) Spiritually dead, tho' Naturally alive; yea, and lively too as any other Perſons in the World. There is a threefold conſideration of Objects, Viz.

1. Naturally.
2. Politically.
3. Theologically.

Firſt, Naturally, To all thoſe things that are natural, they are alive: They can underſtand, reaſon, diſcourſe, project and contrive as well as others; they can eat, drink, build, plant, and ſuck out the natural Comfort of theſe things, as much as others. So their Life is deſcribed, Job. 21. 12. They take the Timbrel and Harp, and rejoice at the ſound of the Organ: They ſpend their Days in wealth, &c. And James 5. 5. Ye have lived in pleaſure upon Earth, as the Fiſh lives in the Water its natural Element, and yet this natural ſenſual Life is not allowed the name of Life, 1 Tim. 5, 6. ſuch Perſons are dead whilſt they live; 'Tis a baſe and ignoble Life, to have a Soul only to ſalt the Body, or to enable a Man for a few Years to eat, and drink, and talk, and laugh, and then die.

Secondly, Objects may be conſidered Politically, and with reſpect to ſuch things they are alive alſo: They can buy and ſell, and manage all their Worldly Affairs with as much dexterity, skill, and policy, as other Men; yea, the Children of this World are wiſer in their generation than the Children of light, Luke 16. 8. The intire ſtream of their Thoughts, Projects and Studies, running into that one Channel: Having but one deſign to manage, they muſt needs excel in worldly Wiſdom: But then,

Liberet me deus, ab homine unius tantum negotii.. Bern.

Thirdly, Thologicnlly conſidered, they are dead; without Life, Senſe or Motion, towards God, and the things that are above: Their underſtandings are dead, 1 Cor. 2. 14. and cannot receive the things that are of God: Their wills are dead, and cannot move towards Jeſus Chriſt, Joh. 6. 65. Their Affections are dead, even to the moſt excellent and ſpiritual Objects: And all their Duties are dead Duties, without Life or Spirit. This is the ſad caſe of the unregenerate World.

Infer. 2. This ſpeaks encouragemeuts to Miniſters and Parents, to wait in hopes of ſucceſs at laſt, even upon thoſe that yet give them little hope of Converſion at the preſent.

The Work you ſee is the Lords, when the Spirit of Life comes upon their dead Souls, they ſhall believe, aud be made willing; till then, we do but Plough upon the Rocks: Yet let not our Hand ſlack in Duty, pray for them, and plead with them; you know not in which Prryer, or Exhortation, the Spirit of Life may breathe upon them: Can theſe dry Bones live? Yes, if the Spirit of Life from God breathe upon them, they can, and ſhall live: What tho' their diſpoſitions be averſe to all things that are ſpiritual and ſerious, yet even ſuch have been regenerated, when more ſweet and promiſing natures have been paſſed by, and left under ſpiritual death.

It was the obſervation of Mr. Ward, upon his Brother Mr. Daniel Rogers, (who was a Man of great gifts and eminent Graces, yet of a very bad Temper and Conſtitution) Tho' my Brother Rogers (ſaith he) have Grace enough for two Men, yet half enough for himſelf.

It may be you have pray'd, and ſtriven long with your Relations and to little purpoſe, yet be not diſcouraged. How often was Mr. John Rogers, that famous ſucceſsful Divine, a grief of Heart to his Relations in his younger Years, proving a wild and lewd Young Man, to the great diſcouragement of his Pious Friends; yet, at laſt, the Lord graciouſly changed him, ſo that Mr. Richard Rogers would ſay, when he would exerciſe the utmoſt degree of charity or hope, for any that at preſent were vile and naught, I will never deſpair of any Man for John Rogers ſake.

Infer. 3. How honourable are Chsiſtians by their new birth! They are born not of blood, nor of the will of the fleſh, nor of the will of Man, but of God, Joh. 1; 13. (i. e.) not in an impure, or meer natural way, but in a moſt ſpiritual and ſupernatural manner: They are the Off-ſpring of God, the Children of the moſt High, as well by Regenaration as by Adoption; which is the greateſt advancement of the Humane nature next to its Hypoſtatical Union with the Second Perſon. Oh what honour is this for a poor ſinful Creature, to have the very life of God breathed into his Soul! All other Dignities of Nature are trifles compar'd with this: This makes a Chriſtian a ſacred hallowed Thing, the living Temple of God, 1 Cor. 6. 19. The ſpecial Object of his Delight.

Infer. 4. How deplorable is the Condition of the unregenerate World, in no better Caſe than dead Men! Now to affect our Hearts with the Miſery of ſuch a Condition, let us conſider and compare it in the following Particulars.

Firſt, There is no Beauty in the Dead, all their lovelineſs goes away at Death; there is no ſpiritual Beauty or lovelineſs in any that are unregenerate: 'Tis true, many of them have excellent Moral Homolitical Vertues, which adorn their Converſations in the Eyes of Men; but what are all theſe, but ſo many ſweet Flowers ſtrewed over a Dead Corps?

Secondly, The Dead have no Pleaſure nor Delight: Even ſo the Unregenerate are incapable of the Delights of the Chriſtian Life: To be ſpiritually minded is Life and Peace, Rom. 8. 6. (i. e.) this is the only ſerene, placid, and pleaſant Life: When the Prodigal, who was once Dead, was alive, then he began to be Merry, Luke 15. 24. They live in ſenſual Pleaſures, but this is to be dead while alive, in Scripture reckoning.

Thirdly, The dead have no Heat, they are as cold as Clay: ſo are all the Unregenerate towards God and Things above: Their Luſts are hot, but their Affections to God cold and frozen: That which makes a gracious Heart melt, will not make an unregenerate Heart move.

Fourthly, The Dead muſt be buried, Gen. 23. 4. Bury my Dead out of my ſight: So muſt the unregenerate be Buried out of God's ſight for ever: Buried in the loweſt Hell, in the Place of Darkneſs for ever, John 3 3. Woe to the unregenerate, good had it been for them they had never been Born.

Infer. 5. How greatly are all Men concerned to examine their Condition, with reſpect to ſpiritual Life and Death! It's very common for Men to preſume upon their Union with, and Intereſt in Chriſt: This Priviledge is by common Miſtake, extended generally to all that profeſs Chriſtian Religion, and practiſe the external Duties of it, when in Truth no more are, or can be united to Chriſt, than are quickened by the Spirit of Life which is in Chriſt Jeſus, Rom. 8. 1, 2. O try your Intereſt in Chriſt by this Rule, if I am quickened by Chriſt, I have Union with Chriſt. And,

ræſumen-
ſperant, ſperando
reunt. Aes.

Firſt, If there be ſpiritual Senſe in your Souls, there is ſpiritual Life in them: There are αἰσθητήρια, Senſes belonging to the ſpiritual, as well as to the animal Life, Heb. 5. 14. They can feel, and ſenſibly groan, under Soul preſſures, and burdens of Sin, Rom. 7. 24. The Dead feel not, moan not under the burdens of Sin, but the Living do: They may be ſenſible indeed of the evil of Sin with reſpect to themſelves, but not as againſt God; Damnation may ſcare them, but Pollution doth not; Hell may fright them, but not the offence of God.

Secondly, If there be Spiritual hunger and thirſt, it's a ſweet ſign of Spiritual Life; this ſign agrees to Chriſtians of a Day old, 1 Pet. 2. 2. Even new born Babes deſire the ſincere Milk of the Word: If Spiritual Life be in you, you know how to expound that Scripture, Pſalm 42. 1. without any other Interpreter than your own experience: You will feel ſomewhat like the gnawing of an empty Stomach, making you reſtleſs during the Interruption of your daily Communion with the Lord.

Thirdly, If there be ſpiritual Conflicts with Sin, there is ſpiritual Life in your Soul, Gal. 5. 17. Not only a Combat betwixt Light in the higher, and Luſt in the lower Faculties: Nor only Oppoſition to more groſs external Corruptions that carry more infamy and horror with them than other Sins do: But the ſame Faculty will be the Seat of War; and the more inward, ſecret and ſpiritual, any Luſt is, by ſo much the more will it be oppoſed and mourned over.

In a Word, the weakeſt Chriſtian may, upon impartial Obſervation, find ſuch Signs of ſpiritual Life in himſelf (if he will allow himſelf time to reflect upon the bent and frame of his own Heart) as Deſires after God, Conſcience of Duties, Fears, Cares, and Sorrows about Sin: Delight in the Society of heavenly and ſpiritual Men, a loathing and burden in the company of vain and carnal Perſons.

Obj. O but I have a very dead Heart to Spiritual Things.

Sol. 'Tis a ſign of Life that you feel, and are ſenſible of that deadneſs: And beſide, there's a great deal of Difference betwixt Spiritual Deadneſs and Death: The one is the State of the unregenerate, the other is the Diſeaſe of regenerate Men.

Obj. Some ſigns of Spiritual Life are clear to me, but I cannot cloſe with others.

Sol. If you can really cloſe with any, it may ſatisfie you, tho' you be dark in others: If a Child can't go, yet if it can ſuck; if it can't ſuck, if it can't cry, yet if it breathe it is alive.

NO ſooner is the Soul quickened by the Spirit of God, but it Anſwers in ſome meaſure the End of God in that Work, by its active Reception of Jeſus Chriſt, in the way of believing: What this Vital Act of Faith is, upon which ſo great a weight depends, as our Intereſt in Chriſt, and Everlaſting Bleſſedneſs, this Scripture before us will give you the beſt Account of it: Wherein (omitting the Coherence and Contexture of the Words) we have three Things to ponder.

Firſt, The high and glorious Priviledge conferr'd, viz. Power to become the Sons of God.

Secondly, The ſubject of this Priviledge deſcribed, As many as received him.

Thirdly, The Deſcription explain'd by way of Appoſition, even as many as believed on his Name.

Beza, hoc jus: Piſcator, hanc dignitatem. Lightfoot, prærogativam. Heinſius, privilegium: nec multo aliter voce ἐξουσίαι Helleniſtæ uſi videntur cum Chaldeorum שלטן expreſſerunt. Hein.

Firſt, The Priviledge conferr'd is a very high and glorious one, than which no created Being is capable of greater: Power to become the Sons of God: This Word ἐξουσίαν is of large Extent and Signification, and is by ſome rendred this Right, by others this Dignity, by others this Prerogative, this Priviledge or Honour: It implies a Title or Right to Adoption, not only with Reſpect to the preſent Benefits of it in this Life, but alſo to that bleſſed Inheritance which is laid up in Heaven for the Sons of God. And ſo Grotius rightly Expounds it of our conſummate Sonſhip, conſiſting in the actual Enjoyment of bleſſedneſs, as well as that which is inchoate: Not only a right to Pardon, Favour, and Acceptance now, but to Heaven, and the full Enjoyment of God hereafter. O what an Honour, Dignity, and Priviledge is this!

Secondly, The Subjects of this Priviledge are deſcribed: As many as received him. This Text deſcribes them by that very Grace, Faith, which gives them their Title and Right to Chriſt and his Benefits; and by that very Act of Faith, which primarily confers their Right to his Perſon, and ſecondarily to his Benefits, viz. receiving him, there be many Graces beſides Faith, but Faith only is the Grace that gives us right to Chriſt: And there be many Acts of Faith beſides receiving, but this receiving or embracing of Chriſt, is the juſtifying and ſaving Act: As many as received him, ὅσοι δὲ ἔλαβον αὐτὸν] as many, be they of any Nation, Sex, Age, or Condition. For there is neither Greek, nor Jew, Circumciſion, nor Uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, Bond or Free: But Chriſt is all, and in all, Col. 3. 11.

Λαμβάνειν & παραλαμβάνειν idem eſt. Grot.

Nothing but unbelief bars Men from Chriſt and his Benefits: As many as received him] the Word ſignifies to accept, take, or (as we fitly render) to receive, aſſume or take to us, a Word moſt aptly expreſſing the Nature and Office of Faith, yea, the very juſtifying and ſaving Act: And we are alſo heedfully to note its ſpecial Object, ἔλαβον αὐτὸν: The Text ſaith not αὐτὰ, his, but αὐτὸν, him, (i. e.) his Perſon, as he is cloathed with his Offices, and not only his Benefits and Priviledges. Theſe are ſecondary and conſequential Things to our receiving him. * So that it is a receiving, aſſuming or accepting the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which muſt have Reſpect to the Tenders and Propoſals of the Goſpel, for therein is the Righteouſneſs of God revealed from Faith to Faith, Rom. 1. 17. therein is Jeſus Chriſt revealed, propoſed, and offered unto Sinners, as the only way of Juſtification and Salvation, which Goſpel offer (as before was opened) is therefore ordinarily neceſſary to believing, Rom. 10. 11, 12, 13, &c.

* Oblatio eſt actio Dei, plerunque mediata facta in verbo; receptio eſt actio hominis, ita tamen ut ſimul quoque ſit beneficium Dei; nec enim homo poſſet recipere mediatorem niſi fides, quæ receptionis hujus eſt organon, à Deo daretur. Wendel.

Thirdly, This Deſcription is yet further explained, by this Additional Exegetical Clauſe, even to them that believe in his Name] here the Terms are varied, tho' the Thing expreſt in both be the ſame: What he call'd receiving there, is call'd believing on his Name here, to ſhew us that the very Eſſence of ſaving Faith conſiſts in our receiving of Chriſt. By his Name, we are to underſtand Chriſt himſelf: It is uſual to take theſe two, believing in him, and believing in his Name, as Terms convertible, and of the ſame Importance. הוא שמו ושמו הוא ipſe eſt nomen ſuum, & nomen ejus ipſe eſt: His Name his himſelf, and himſelf is his Name. So that here we have the true Nature, and precious Benefits of ſaving Faith, excellently expreſt in this Scripture: The Sum of which take in this Propoſition.

Druſius.

Doct. That the receiving of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, is that ſaving and vital Act of Faith, which gives the Soul right both to his Perſon and Benefits.

We cannot Act ſpiritually, till we begin to live ſpiritually: Therefore the Spirit of Life muſt firſt joyn himſelf to us in his quickening Work, (as was ſhewn you in the laſt Sermon) which being done, we begin to Act ſpiritually, by taking hold upon, or receiving Jeſus Chriſt, which is the Thing deſigned to be opened in this Sermon.

The Soul is the Life of the Body, Faith is the Life of the Soul, and Chriſt is the Life of Faith. There are ſeveral ſorts of Faith beſides ſaving Faith, and in ſaving Faith there are ſeveral Acts beſides the juſtifying or ſaving Act; but this receiving Act, which is to be our Subject this Day, is that upon which both our Righteouſneſs, and Eternal Happineſs, do depend. This as a Form, Differences ſaving Faith from all other kinds or ſorts of Faith: By this it is that we are juſtified and ſaved. To as many received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God: Yet it doth not juſtifie and ſave us by Reaſon of any proper Dignity that is found in this Act, but by Reaſon of the Object it receives and apprehends: The ſame Thing is often expreſt in Scripture by other Terms, as coming to Chriſt, John 6. 35. rolling or ſtaying upon Chriſt, Iſa. 50. 10. But whatever is found in thoſe Expreſſions, it is all comprehended in this, as will appear hereafter. Now, the Method into which I ſhall caſt the Diſcourſe of this Subject, that I may handle it with as much perſpecuity and profit as I can, ſhall be,

Forma vel aliquid formæ analogum ponitur differentiæ loco.

Firſt, To explain and open the Nature of this receiving of Chriſt, and ſhew you what it includes.

Secondly, To prove that this is the juſtifying and ſaving Act of Faith.

Thirdly, To ſhew you the Excellency of this Act of Faith.

Fourthly, To remove ſome Miſtakes, and give you the true Account of the Dignity and Excellency of this Act.

Fifthly, And then bring home all in a proper and cloſe Application.

Firſt, In the firſt Place then, I will endeavour to explain and open the Nature of this receiving of Chriſt, and ſhew you what is implied in it.

And indeed it involves many deep Myſteries and Things of greateſt weight: People are generally very ignorant and unacquainted with the Importance of this Expreſſion, they have very ſlight Thoughts of Faith, who never paſt under the illuminating, convincing and humbling

Work of the Spirit: But we ſhall find that ſaving Faith is quite another thing, and differs in its whole kind and nature from that traditional Faith, and common Aſſent, which is ſo fatally miſtaken for it in the World.

There are divers other Expreſſions by which the Nature of ſaving Faith is expreſt in Scripture, viz. eating Chriſts fleſh, and drinking his Blood, John 6. 40. coming to Chriſt, Mat. 11. 28. Having the Son, 1 John 5. 12. Truſting or depending upon him, for which the He*brew uſe three Emphatical Words,* בטח אמן & חסה The firſt ſignifies a firm and ſtable Truſt. The ſecond to lean or depend with Security. The third to betake ones ſelf to a Sanctuary for a Protection: All which is ſuppoſed or included in our receiving of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: In eating and drinking we muſt receive Meat and Drink; coming to Chriſt is neceſſarily ſuppoſed in receiving him, for there is no receiving at a Diſtance: Having the Son, and receiving him, are Notions of the ſame Importance; and for truſting, relying with Security, and betaking our ſelves to Chriſt for Refuge, they are all involved in the receiving Act: For as God offers him to us as the only prop of our Hearts and Hopes, ſo we receive him to rely upon him: And as he is held forth in the Goſpel as the only Aſylum, or City of Refuge, ſo we take or receive him, and accordingly betake our Souls to him for Refuge.

For Firſt, It is evident, that no Man can receive Jeſus Chriſt in the Darkneſs of natural Ignorance: We muſt underſtand and diſcern who and what he is, whom we receive to be the Lord our Righteouſneſs. If we know not his Perſon and his Offices, we do not take, but miſtake Chriſt. It's a good Rule in the Civil Law, non conſentit qui non ſentit: A miſtake of the Perſon invalidates the Match. He that takes Chriſt for a meer Man, or denies the Satisfaction of his Blood, or diveſts him of his Humane Nature, or denies any of his moſt glorious and neceſſary Offices, let them cry up as high as they will his Spirituality, Glory, and Exemplary Life and Death, they can never receive Jeſus Chriſt aright: This is ſuch a crack, ſuch a flaw in the very Foundation of Faith, as undoes and deſtroys all: Ignorantis non eſt conſenſus: All ſaving Faith is founded in Light and Knowledge, and therefore it's called Knowledge, Iſa. 53. 11. and ſeeing is inſeparably connected with believing, John 6. 40. Men muſt hear and learn of the Father before they can come to Chriſt, John 6. 45. the receiving Act of Faith is directed and guided by Knowledge. I will not preſume to State the Degree of Knowledge, which is abſolutely neceſſary to the Reception of Chriſt; I know the firſt actings of Faith are, in moſt Chriſtians, accompanied with much darkneſs and Confuſion of Underſtanding: But yet we muſt ſay in the general, that where-ever Faith is, there is ſo much Light as is ſufficient to diſcover to the Soul, its own Sins, Dangers, and Wants; and the All-ſufficiency, Suitableneſs, and Neceſſity of Chriſt, for the ſupply and remedy of all; and without this Chriſt cannot be received. Come unto me ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt, Mat. 11. 28.

Secondly, The receiving Chriſt neceſſarily implies the Aſſent of the Underſtanding to the Truths of Chriſt revealed in the Goſpel, viz. his Perſon, Natures, Offices, his Incarnation, Death and Satisfaction; which Aſſent, tho' it be not in it ſelf ſaving Faith, yet is it the Foundation and ground-work of it, it being impoſſible the Soul ſhould receive and fiducially embrace, what the Mind doth not Aſſent unto us as true and infallibly certain. Now there are three Degrees of Aſſent, Conjecture, Opinion and Belief. Conjecture is but a ſlight and weak Inclination to Aſſent to the Thing propounded, by Reaſon of the weighty Objections that lie againſt it. Opinion is a more ſteady and fixed Aſſent, when a Man is almoſt certain, tho' yet ſome fear of the contrary remains with him. Belief is a more full and aſſured Aſſent to the Truth, to which the Mind may be brought four Ways.

ide Dr. ater in m. 4. 3.

Firſt, By the perfect Intelligence of Senſe, not hindered or deceived. So I believe the Truth of theſe Propoſitions, Fire is hot, Water moiſt, Honey is ſweet, Gall is bitter.

Secondly, By the native clearneſs of Self-evidencing Principles. So I believe the Truth of theſe Propoſitions, The whole is more than a Part: The Cauſe is before the Effect.

Thirdly, By Diſcourſe, and rational Deduction. So I believe the Truth of this Propoſition, Where all the Parts of a Thing are, there is the whole.

Fourthly, By infallible Teſtimony, when any thing is witneſſed or aſſerted, by one whoſe Truth is unqueſtionable: And of this ſort is the Aſſent of Faith: Which is therefore call'd our receiving the witneſs of God, 1 John 5. 9. our ſetting to our Seal that God is true, John 3. 33. This prima veritas, Divine Veracity, is the very formal Object of Faith: Into this we reſolve our Faith. Thus ſaith the Lord, is that firm Foundation upon which our Aſſent is built: And thus we ſee good Reaſon to believe thoſe profound Myſteries of the Incarnation of Chriſt, the Hypoſtatical Union of the two Natures in his wonderful Perſon, the Myſtical Union of Chriſt and Believers, tho' we cannot underſtand theſe Things by Reaſon of the Darkneſs of our Minds. It ſatisfies the Soul to find theſe Myſteries in the written Word, upon that Foundation it firmly builds its Aſſent: And without ſuch an Aſſent of Faith, there can be no embracing of Chriſt: All Acts of Faith and Religion without Aſſent, are but as ſo many Arrows ſhot at random into the open Air, they ſignifie nothing for want of a fixed determinate Object.

Nec enim decebat ut cum Deus ad homines loqueretur argumentis aſſereret ſuas voces, tanquam aliter fides ei non haberetur: ſed ut oportuit eſt locutus, quaſi rerum omnium maximus judex, cujus eſt non argumentari, ſed pronunciare verum, &c. Lactantius falſa religione, p. (mihi) 179. Titubat fides ubi vacillat divinarum Scripturarum autoritas. Aug.

It is therefore the Policy of Satan, by injecting or fomenting Atheiſtical Thoughts, (with which Young Converts uſe to find themſelves greatly infeſted) to undermine and deſtroy the whole Work of Faith: But God makes his People victorious over them: Yea, and even at that Time they do Aſſent to the Truths of the Words, when they think they do not: As appears by their tenderneſs and fear of Sin, their Diligence and Care of Duty. If I diſcern theſe Things in a Chriſtians Life, he muſt excuſe me if I believe him not, when he ſaith he doth not Aſſent to the Truths of the Goſpel.

Thirdly, Our receiving Chriſt neceſſarily implies our hearty Approbation, liking, and Eſtimation, yea, the Acquieſcence of our very Souls in Jeſus Chriſt, as the moſt excellent, ſuitable, and compleat remedy for all our Wants, Sins and Dangers that ever could be prepared by the Wiſdom and Love of God for them: We muſt receive him with ſuch a Frame of Heart as reſts upon him, truſts to and relies upon him, if ever we receive him aright: To them that believe he is precious, 1 Pet. 2. 7. This is the only Soveraign Plaiſter in all the World that is large enough, and efficacious enough, to cure our Wounds: And therefore as Chriſt is moſt highly eſteemed, ed, and heartily approved, as the only Remedy for our Souls, ſo the ſovereign Grace and Wiſdom of God are admired, and the Way and Method he hath taken to ſave poor Souls by Jeſus Chriſt moſt heartily approved, as the moſt apt and excellent Method, both for his Glory and our Good, that ever could be taken: For 'tis a plain Caſe, that none will eſpouſe themſelves with conjugal Affections, to that Perſon whom they eſteem not as the beſt for them that can be choſen: None will forſake and quit all for his ſake, except they account him as the Spouſe did, The Chiefeſt of Ten Thouſand, Cant. 5. 10.

There are two things in Chriſt, which muſt gain the greateſt Approbation in the Soul of a poor, convinced Sinner, and bring it to reſt upon Jeſus Chriſt.

Firſt, That it can find nothing in Chriſt that is diſtaſteful or unſuitable to it, as it doth experimentally find in the beſt Creatures. In him is no weakneſs, but a fullneſs of all ſaving Abilities; Able to ſave to the uttermoſt: No Pride cauſing him to ſcorn and contemn the moſt wretched Soul that comes to him: No Inconſtancy or Levity, to cauſe him to caſt off the Soul, whom he hath once received: No Paſſion, but a Lamb for Meekneſs and Patience: There is not a Spot to be found in him, but He is altogether Lovely, Cant. 5. 16.

Secondly, As the Believer can find nothing in Chriſt that is diſtaſtful, ſo it finds nothing wanting in Chriſt that is neceſſary or deſirable: Such is the fulneſs of Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification, and Redemption, that is in Chriſt, that nothing is left to deſire, but the full Enjoyment of him. O ſaith the Soul, how compleatly happy ſhall I be, if I can but win Chriſt! I would not envy the Nobles of the Earth, were I but in Chriſt. I am an hungry and athirſt, and Chriſt is Meat indeed, and drink indeed; this is the beſt thing in all the World for me, becauſe ſo neceſſary, and ſo ſuitable, to the needs of a Soul ready to periſh. I am a Law-condemned, and a Self-condemned Sinner, trembling for fear of the Execution of the Curſe upon me every moment; in Chriſt is compleat Righteouſneſs to juſtifie my Soul; O there is nothing better for me than Chriſt. I ſee my ſelf plunged both in Nature and Practice, into the odious Pollutions of Sin, and in Chriſt is a Fountain opened for Sin and for Uncleanneſs: His Blood is a Fountain of Merit, his Spirit is a Fountain of Holineſs and Purity: None but Chriſt, none but Chriſt. O the manifold Wiſdom and unſearchable Love of God, to prepare, and furniſh ſuch a Chriſt, ſo fully anſwering all the Needs, all the Diſtreſſes, all the Fears and Burdens of a poor Sinner! Thus the believing Soul approves of Chriſt as beſt for it. And thus in believing, it gives Glory to God, Rom. 4. 21.

Fourthly, Receiving Chriſt conſiſts in the Conſent and Choice of the Will; and this is the opening and ſtretching forth of the Soul to receive him: Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power, Pſal. 110. 3.

'Tis the great Deſign, and main Scope of the Goſpel, to work over the Wills of poor Sinners to this: And this was the great Complaint of Chriſt againſt the incredulous Jews, John 5. 40. Ye will not come unto me that ye might have Life.

It is diſputed by ſome, whether Faith can be ſeated in two diſtinct Faculties, as we ſeem to place it, when we ſay it involves both the Approbation of the Judgment, and the Conſent of the Will. I will not here intangle my Diſcourſe with that fruitleſs Diſpute. I am of the ſame judgment with thoſe Divines, that think Faith cannot be expreſſed fully by any one ſingle Habit, or Act of the Mind or Will diſtinctly, for that (as one well notes) there are ſuch Deſcriptions given of it in Scripture, ſuch things are propoſed as the Object of it, and ſuch is the Experience of all that ſincerely believe; as no one ſingle Act, either of the Mind or Will, can anſwer unto: Nor do I ſee any thing repugnant to Scripture or Philoſophy, if we place it in both Faculties. Conſent (ſaith Vaſquez) ſeems to denote the Concourſe of the Will with the Underſtanding; but to leave that, it is moſt certain, the ſaving, juſtifying Act of Faith lies principally in the Conſent of the Will, which Conſent is the Effect of the Almighty Power of God, Eph. 1, 19. He allures and draws the Will to Chriſt, and he Draws with the Cords of a Man, (i. e.) He prevails with it by Rational Arguments: For the Soul being prepared by Convictions of its loſt and miſerable Eſtate by Sin, and that there is but one Door of Hope open to it for an Eſcape from the Wrath to come, and that is Chriſt; being alſo ſatisfied of the Fulneſs and Compleatneſs of his ſaving Ability, and of his Willingneſs to make it over for our Salvation, upon ſuch juſt and equal Terms; this cannot but prevail with the Will of a poor diſtreſſed Sinner, to conſent and chooſe him.

Dr. Owen in his Doctrine of Juſtification, p. 135

Conſenſus denotare videtur concurſum voluntatis cum intellectu, ad ſentiendum idem quod intellectus ſentit. 12 Q. 15. a. 1.

Fides non eſt virtus ſimplex, ſed diverſis conſtat partibus, notitia, aſſenſu, & fiducia, quæ ad eandem potentiam non pertinent. Wendelini Theol. p. 450.

Fifthly and Laſtly, The laſt and principal thing included in our receiving of Chriſt, is the reſpect that this Act of Acceptance hath, unto the Terms upon which Chriſt is tendred to us in the Goſpel, to which it is moſt agreeable, 1 Cor, 15. 11. So we preach, and ſo ye believed: Faith anſwers the Goſpel Offer, as the Impreſs upon the Wax doth the Engravings in the Seal; and this is of principal Conſideration, for there is no receiving Chriſt upon any other Terms but his own, propoſed in the Goſpel to us: He will never come lower, nor make them eaſier than they are, for any Mans ſake in the World; we muſt either receive him upon theſe, or part with him for ever as thouſands do, who could be content to agree to ſome Articles, but rather chooſe to be damned for ever, than ſubmit to all: This is the great Controverſie betwixt Chriſt and Sinners; upon this many thouſands break off the Treaty, and part with Chriſt, becauſe he will not come to their Terms; but every true Believer receives him upon his own, (i. e.) Their Acceptance of him by Faith, is in all things conſentaneous to the Overtures made of him in the Written Word. So he tenders himſelf, and ſo they receive him; as will be evident in the following Particulars.

Rom. 6. 17 ὑπηκούσατε δὲ ἐκ καρδίας εἰς ὃν παρεδόθητε τύπον διδαχῆς.

The Will like melted Metal, is delivered into the Goſpel mould, where it receives the ſame form and figure that the mould gives.

Firſt, The Goſpel offers Chriſt to us ſincerely and really, and ſo the true Believer receives and accepts him; even with a Faith unfeigned: 1 Tim. 1. 5. If ever the Soul be ſerious and in earneſt in any thing, it is ſo in this: Can we ſuppoſe the Heart of him that flies for his Life to the Refuge City, to be ſerious and in earneſt, to eſcape by flight the Avenger of Blood who purſues him, then is the Heart of a convinced Sinner ſerious in this Matter; for under that Notion is the Work of Faith preſented to us, Heb. 6. 18.

Secondly, Chriſt is offered to us in the Goſpel intirely and undividedly, as cloathed with all his Offices, Prieſtly, Prophetical, and Regal; as Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, Acts 16. 31. and ſo the true Believer receives him: The Hypocrite like the Harlot, is for dividing, but the ſincere Believer finds the need he hath of every Office of Chriſt, and knows not how to want any thing that is in him.

His Ignorance makes him neceſſary and deſirable to him, as a Prophet: His Guilt makes him neceſſary as a Prieſt: His ſtrong and powerful Luſts and Corruptions make him neceſſary as a King; and in Truth he ſees not any thing in Chriſt that he can ſpare; he needs all that is in Chriſt, and admires the infinite Wiſdom in nothing more, than the inveſting Chriſt with all theſe Offices, which are ſo ſuited to the poor Sinners Wants and Miſeries. Look, as the three Offices are undivided in Chriſt, ſo they are in the Believers Acceptance; and before this Trial no Hypocrite can ſtand, for all Hypocrits reject and quarrel with ſomething in Chriſt; they like his Pardon better than his Government. They call him Lord and Maſter, but it is but an empty Title they beſtow upon him; for let them ask their own Hearts, if Chriſt be Lord over their Thoughts, as well as Words; over their ſecret as well as open Actions; over their darling Luſts, as well as others; let them ask, who will appear to be Lord and Maſter over them, when Chriſt and the World come in Competition? When the Pleaſures of ſin ſhall ſtand upon one ſide, and Sufferings to Death, and deepeſt Points of Self-denial upon the other ſide? Surely 'tis the greateſt Affront, that can be offered to the Divine Wiſdom and Goodneſs, to ſeparate in our Acceptance, what is ſo united in Chriſt for our Salvation and Happineſs. As without any one of theſe Offices, the Work of our Salvation could not be compleated, ſo without Acceptance of Chriſt in them all, our Union with them by Faith cannot be compleated.

The Goſpel Offer of Chriſt includes all his Offices, and Goſpel Faith juſt ſo receives him, to ſubmit to him, as well as to be redeemed by him; to imitate him in the Holineſs of his Life, as well as to reap the Purchaſes and Fruits of his Death. It muſt be an entire receiving of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Thirdly, Chriſt is offered to us in the Goſpel Excluſively, as the alone and only Saviour of Sinners; with whoſe Blood and Interceſſion nothing is to be mixed; but the Soul of a Sinner is ſingly to rely and depend on him, and no other, Acts 4. 2. 1 Cor. 3. 11. and ſo Faith receives him, Pſal. 71. 16. I will make mention of thy Righteouſneſs, even of thine only. Phil. 3. 9. And be found in him, not having my own Righteouſneſs, which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Chriſt. To depend partly upon Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, and partly upon our own, is to ſet one foot upon a Rock, and the other in a Quick-ſand; either Chriſt will be to us all in all, or nothing at all, in Point of Righteouſneſs and Salvation; he affects not Social Honour; as he did the whole Work, ſo he expects the ſole Praiſe; if he be not able to ſave to the uttermoſt, why do we depend upon him at all? and if he be, why do we lean upon any beſide him?

Fourthly, The Goſpel offers Chriſt freely to Sinners as the Gift, not the Sale of God, Joh. 4. 10. Iſa. 55. 1. Rev. 22. 17. and even ſo Faith receives him. The Believer comes to Chriſt with an empty Hand, not only as an undeſerving, but as an Hell deſerving Sinner; he comes to Chriſt as to one that juſtifies the ungodly, Rom. 4. 5. Unto him that worketh not, but believeth in him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his Faith is counted for Righteouſneſs: Where by him that worketh not, he means a convinced, humbled Sinner, who finds himſelf utterly unable to do the Task the Law ſets him, (i. e.) perfectly to obey it; and therefore in a Law ſenſe is ſaid not to work; for it's all one as to the Intent and purpoſe of the Law, not to work, and not to work perfectly: This he is convinced of, and therefore comes to Chriſt as one that is in himſelf ungodly, acknowledging the Righteouſneſs by which he alone can ſtand before God; is in Chriſt, and not in himſelf, in whole, or in part; and by the way, let this encourage poor Souls, that are ſcattered and daunted for want of due qualifications, from cloſing with and embracing Chriſt: There is nothing qualifies any Man for Chriſt more, than a ſenſe of his unworthineſs of him, and the want of all Excellencies or Ornaments, that may commend him to Divine Acceptance.

Fifthly, The Goſpel offers Chriſt orderly to Sinners, firſt his Perſon, then his Priviledges. God firſt gives his Son, and then with him, or as a conſequent of that Gift, he gives us all things, Rom. 8. 32. In the ſame order muſt our Faith receive him. The Believer doth not marry the Portion firſt, and then the Perſon, but to be found in him is the firſt and great Care of a Believer.

I deny not but it's lawful for any to have an Eye to the Benefits of Chriſt. Salvation from Wrath is, and lawfully may be intended and aimed at: Look unto me, and be ye ſaved all ye ends of the Earth, Iſa. 45. 22. Nor do I deny but there are many poor Souls, who being in deep Diſtreſs and Fear, may and often do, look moſtly to their own Safety at firſt; and that there is much Confuſion, as well in the Actings of their Faith, as in their Condition; but ſure I am, it is the proper Order in believing, firſt to accept the Perſon of the Lord Jeſus: Heaven is no doubt very deſirable, but Chriſt is more: Whom have I in Heaven but thee? Pſal. 73. 25. Union with Chriſt, is in order of Nature antecedent to the Communication of his Priviledges, therefore ſo it ought to be in the Order and Method of believing.

Sixthly, Chriſt is adviſedly offered in the Goſpel to Sinners, as the Reſult of God's Eternal Counſel, a Project of Grace upon which his Heart and Thoughts have been much ſet, Zech. 6. 13. The Counſel of Peace was betwixt the Father and Son. And ſo the Believer receives him, moſt deliberately weighing the matter in his moſt deep and ſerious Thoughts; for this is a time of much Solitude and Thoughtfulneſs. The Souls eſpouſed are acts of judgment, Hoſ. 2. 19. on our part, as well as on Gods: We are therefore bid to ſit down and count the coſt, Luke 14. 28. Faith, or the actual receiving of Chriſt, is the reſult of many previous debates in the Soul: the matter hath been ponder'd over and over: the objections and diſcouragements, both from the Self-denying terms of the Goſpel, and our own vileneſs and deep guilt, have been ruminated, and lain upon our hearts day and night, and after all things have been balanced in the moſt deep conſideration, the Soul is determined to this concluſion, I muſt have Chriſt be the terms never ſo hard, be my ſins never ſo great and many I will yet go to him, and venture my Soul upon him; if I periſh, I periſh. I have thought out all my thoughts, and this is the reſult, Union with Chriſt here, or Separation from God for ever muſt be my lot.

And thus doth the Lord open the hearts of his Elect, and win the conſent of their Wills to receive Jeſus Chriſt upon the deepeſt conſideration, and debate of the matter in their own moſt ſolemn thoughts: they underſtand and Know, that they muſt deeply deny themſelves, take up his croſs and follow him, Mat 16. 24. renounce not only ſinful but religious Self; theſe are hard and difficult things, but yet the neceſſity and excellency of Chriſt makes them appear eligible, and rational, by all which you ſee Faith is another thing than what the ſound of that word (as it is generally underſtood) ſignifies to the underſtandings of moſt Men. This is that fiducial receiving of Chriſt here to be opened.

Secondly, Our next Work will be to evince this receiving of Chriſt as hath been opened, to be that ſpecial ſaving Faith of God's Elect: This is that Faith of which ſuch Great and Glorious Things are ſpoken in the Goſpel, which whoſoever hath ſhall be ſaved, and he that hath it not ſhall be damned; and this I ſhall Evidently prove by the following Arguments or Reaſons.

Arg. 1.

Firſt, That Faith which gives the Soul Right and Title to Spiritual Adoption, with all the Priviledges and Benefits thereof, is true, ſaving Faith.

But ſuch a receiving of Chriſt as hath been deſcrib'd, gives the Soul Right and Title to ſpiritual Adoption, with all the Priviledges and Benefits thereof.

Therefore ſuch a receiving of Chriſt as hath been deſcrib'd, is true and ſaving Faith.

The Major Propoſition is undeniable, for our Right and Title to Spiritual Adoption, and the Priviledges thereof, riſes from our Union with Jeſus Chriſt; we being united to the Son of God, are by Vertue of that Union reckon'd or accounted Sons, Gal. 3. 26. You are all the Children of God by Faith in Jeſus Chriſt: The Effect of ſaving Faith is Union with Chriſt's Perſon, the Conſequent of that Union is Adoption, or Right to the Inheritance.

The Minor is moſt plain in the Text: To as many as received him, to them gave he power or right to become the Sons of God: A falſe Faith hath no ſuch Priviledge annexed to it; no Unbeliever is thus dignified: No Stranger entitled to this Inheritance.

Arg. 2.

Secondly, That only is ſaving and juſtifying Faith, which is in all true Believers, in none but true Believers; and in all true Believers at all times.

But ſuch a receiving of Chriſt as hath been deſcrib'd, is in all true Believers, in none but true Believers; and in all true Believers at all times.

Therefore ſuch a receiving of Chriſt as hath been deſcrib'd, is the only ſaving and juſtifying Faith.

The Major is undeniable, that muſt needs contain the Eſſence of ſaving Faith, which is proper to every true Believer, at all times, and to no other.

The minor will be as clear, for there is no other Act of Faith, but this of fiducial receiving Chriſt as he is offer'd, that doth agree to all true Believers, to none but true Believers, and to all true Believers at all times.

There be three Acts of Faith, Aſſent, Acceptance and Aſſurance: The Papiſts generally give the Eſſence of ſaving Faith to the firſt, viz. Aſſent. The Lutherans, and ſome of our own give it to the laſt, viz. Aſſurance: But it can neither be ſo, nor ſo. Aſſent doth not agree only to true Believers, or juſtified Perſons. Aſſurance agrees to juſtified Perſons, and them only, but not to all juſtified Perſons, and that at all times.

Actus fidei conſiſtit in aſſenſu, quo quis aſſentitur alicui propoſitioni à deo revelatæ, propter authoritatem revelantis. Becan. Theol. Schol. Tom. 3. cap. 8. Q. 4.

Aſſent is too low to contain the Eſſence of ſaving Faith, it is found in the unregenerate as well as the regenerate: Yea, in Devils as well as Men, James 2. 19. 'tis ſuppoſed and included in juſtifying Faith, but it is not the juſtifying or ſaving Act. Aſſurance is as much too high, being found only in ſome Eminent Believers; and in them too but at ſome times: There's many a true Believer, to whom the Joy and Comfort of Aſſurance is denied: They may ſay of their Union with Chriſt, as Paul ſaid of his Viſion; whether in the Body or out of the Body, I cannot tell; ſo they whether in Chriſt or out of Chriſt, they cannot tell.

A true Believer may walk in darkneſs, and ſee no light, Iſa. 50. 10. Nay, a Man muſt be a Believer, before he know himſelf to be ſo; the direct Act of Faith is before the reflex Act; ſo that the juſtifying Act of Faith lies neither in Aſſent, nor in Aſſurance. Aſſent ſaith, I believe that Chriſt is, and that he is the Saviour of the Elect. Aſſurance ſaith, I believe, and am ſure that Chriſt died for me, and that I ſhall be ſaved through him. So that Aſſent widens the Nature of Faith too much, and Aſſurance upon the other hand ſtraitens it too much; but Acceptance, which ſaith, I take Chriſt in all his Offices to be mine, this fits it exactly, and belongs to all true Believers, and to none but true Believers; and to all true Believers at all times: This therefore muſt be the the juſtifying and ſaving Act of Faith.

Many new-born Chriſtians live like the new-born Babe Vivit & eſt vitæ neſcius ipſe ſuæ. Whole ſtock of many a Believer conſiſts in the bare direct acts of Faith.

Arg. 3.

Thirdly, That, and no other, is the juſtifying and ſaving Act of Faith, to which the Properties and Effects of ſaving Faith do belong, or in which they are only found.

This therefore muſt be the juſtifying and ſaving Act of Faith.

Firſt, By ſaving Faith Chriſt is ſaid to dwell in our Hearts, Eph. 3. 17. but it is neither by Aſſent, nor Aſſurance, but by Acceptance; and receiving him that he dwells in our Hearts; not by Aſſent, for then he would dwell in the unregenerate; nor by Aſſurance, for he muſt dwell in the unregenerate; nor by Aſſurance, for he muſt dwell in our Hearts before we can be aſſured of it: Therefore it is by Acceptance.

Secondly, By Faith we are juſtified, Rom. 5. 1. But neither Aſſent nor Aſſurance, for the Reaſons above, do juſtifie; therefore it muſt be by the receiving Act, and no other.

Thirdly, The Scripture aſcribes great Difficulties to that Faith by which we are ſaved, as being moſt croſs and oppoſite to the corrupt Nature of Man; but of all the Acts of Faith, none is clogg'd with like Difficulties, or conflicts with greater Oppoſitions than the receiving Act doth: About this Act hang the greateſt Difficulties, Fears, and deepeſt Self-denial. In Aſſent a Mans Reaſon is convinced, and yields to the Evidence of Truth, ſo that he can do no other but Aſſent to the Truth. In Aſſurance there is nothing againſt a Mans Will or Comfort, but much for it; every one deſires it: But it is not ſo in Acceptance of Chriſt, upon the Self-denying Terms of the Goſpel, as will hereafter be evinced. We conclude therefore, that in this conſiſts the Nature and Eſſence of ſaving Faith.

Thirdly, Having ſeen what the receiving of Jeſus Chriſt is, and that it is the Faith by which we are juſtified and ſaved: I next come to open the Dignity and Excellency of this Faith, whoſe Praiſes and Encomiums are in all the Scriptures: There you find it renowned by the Title of precious Faith, 2 Pet. 1. 7. enriching Faith, James 2. 5. The Work of God, John 6. 29. The great Myſtery of Godlineſs, 1 Tim. 3. 16. With many more rich Epithets throughout the Scriptures beſtowed upon it.

Now Faith may be conſidered two Ways, viz. either Qualitatively, or Relatively.

Conſidered Qualitatively, as a ſaving Grace, it hath the ſame Excellency that all other precious ſaving Graces have: As it is the Fruit of the Spirit, it is more precious than Gold, Prov. 8. 11, 19. And ſo are all other Graces as well as Faith: In this Senſe they all ſhine with equal Glory, and that a Glory tranſcending all the Glory of this World: But then conſider Faith Relatively, as the Inſtrument by which the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt is apprehended and made ours, and in that Conſideration it excels all other Graces.

This is the Grace that is ſingled out from among all other Graces, to receive Chriſt, by which Office it is dignified above all its Fellows: As Moſes was honoured above the many Thouſands of Iſrael, when God took him up into the Mount, admitted him nearer to himſelf than any other of all the Tribes might come; for they ſtood without the Rail, while Moſes was received into the ſpecial Preſence of God, and was admitted to ſuch views as others muſt not have: So Faith is honoured above all its fellow Graces in being ſingled out, and ſolemnly anointed to this high Office in our Juſtification: This is that precious Eye that looks unto Chriſt as the ſtung Iſraelites did to the brazen Serpent, and derives healing Vertue from him to the Soul. It is the Grace which inſtrumentally ſaves us, Eph. 2. 8. As it's Chriſts Glory to be the Door of Salvation, ſo it's Faiths Glory to be the golden Key that opens that Door.

What ſhall I ſay of Faith? 'Tis the Bond of Union, the Inſtrument of Juſtification, the Spring of ſpiritual Peace and Joy, the Means of Spiritual Livelihood and Subſiſtence: And therefore the great ſcope and drift of the Goſpel, which aims at, and preſſeth nothing more, than to bring Men and Women to believe.

Firſt, This is the bond of our Union with Chriſt: That Union is begun in our Vivification, and compleated in our actual receiving of Chriſt: The firſt is a bond of Union on the Spirits part, the ſecond a bond of Union on our Part. Chriſt dwelleth in our Hearts by Faith, Eph. 3. 17. And herein it is a door opened to let in many rich Bleſſings to the Soul: For by uniting us to Chriſt, it brings us into ſpecial Favour and Acceptation with God, Eph. 1. 6, Makes us the ſpecial Objects of Chriſts conjugal Love and Delight, Eph. 5. 29. Draws from his Heart ſympathy and tender Senſe of all our Miſeries and Burdens, Heb. 14. 15.

Secondly, 'Tis the Inſtrument of our Juſtification, Rom. 5. 1. Till Chriſt be received, (thus received by us) we are in our Sins, under Guilt and Condemnation; but when Faith comes, then comes Freedom: By him all that believe are juſtified from all Things, Acts 13. 38. Rom. 8. 1. For it apprehends or receives the pure and perfect Righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus, wherein the Soul, how guilty and ſinful ſoever it be in it ſelf, ſtands faultleſs and ſpotleſs before the Preſence of God: All Obligations to Puniſhment, are upon believing immediately diſſolved: A full and final Pardon ſealed. O precious Faith, who can ſufficiently value it!

Inveniri in Chriſto tacitam habet relationem ad Dei judicium; in iis nullam invenit condemnationem, quia juſtitiâ, qualem eſſe requirit. (i. e.) perfectâ accumulatâ exornatos nos invenit; nempe juſtitia Chriſti per fidem nobis imputata. Bern. in Loc.

What Reſpect, Reader, wouldſt thou have to that hand that ſhould bring thee a Pardon when on the Ladder or Block! Why, that Pardon, which thou canſt not read without Tears of Joy, is brought Thee by the Hand of Faith. O ineſtimable Grace! That Cloaths the pure Righteouſneſs of Jeſus upon our defiled Souls, and ſo cauſes us to become the Righteouſneſs of God in him; or as it is, 1 John 3. 7. Righteous as he is Righteous: Non formali & intrinſecâ Juſtitiâ, ſed relativâ: Not with a formal inherent Righteouſneſs of our own, but with a relative imputed Righteouſneſs from another.

I know this moſt excellent and moſt comfortable Doctrine of imputed Righteouſneſs, is not only denied, but derided by Papiſts. Stapleton calls it ſpectrum Cerebri Lutherani: The monſtrous Birth of Luther's Brain: But bleſſed be God, this comfortable Truth is well ſecured againſt all Attempts of its Adverſaries. Let their blaſphemous Mouths call it in Deriſion as they do, putative Righteouſneſs, (i. e.) a meer fancied or conceited Righteouſneſs: Yet we know aſſuredly Chriſts Righteouſneſs is imputed to us, and that in the Way of Faith. If Adam's Sin became ours by Imputation, then ſo do Chriſts Righteouſneſs alſo become ours by Imputation, Rom. 5. 17. If Chriſt were made a Sinner by the Imputation of our Sins to him, who had no Sin of his own, then we are made Righteous by the Imputation of Chriſts Righteouſneſs to us, who have no Righteouſneſs of our own, according to 1 Cor. 5. 21. This was the way in which Abraham, the Father of them that believe, was juſtified, and therefore this is the way in which all Believers, the Children of Abraham, muſt in like Manner be juſtified, Rom.

4. 22, 23, 24. Who can expreſs the worth of Faith in this one Reſpect, if this were all it did for our Souls?

But Thirdly, It is the Spring of our Spiritual Peace and Joy; and that as it is the Inſtrument of our Juſtification. If it be an Inſtrument of our Juſtification, it cannot but be the Spring of our Conſolation. Rom. 5. 1. Being juſtified by Faith, we have Peace with God: In uniting us with Chriſt, and apprehending and applying his Righteouſneſs to us, it becomes the Seed or Root of all the Peace and Joy of a Chriſtians Life. Joy, the Child of Faith, therefore bears its Name, Phil. 1. 25. The Joy of Faith. So 1 Pet. 1. 8, 9. Believing we rejoyce with Joy unſpeakable: We cannot forbear laughing when we are tickled, and can we forbear rejoicing while by Faith we are brought to the Sight and Knowledge of ſuch a priviledged State: When Faith hath firſt given, and then cleared our Title to Chriſt, Joy is no more under the Souls command: We cannot but rejoice, and that with Joy unſpeakable.

Fourthly, It is the means of our ſpiritual Livelihood and Subſiſtance: All other Graces, like Birds in the Neſt, depend upon what Faith brings in to them: Take away Faith, and all the Graces languiſh and die: Joy, Peace, Hope, Patience, and all the reſt, depend upon Faith, as the Members of the natural Body do upon the Veſſels by which Blood and Spirit are conveyed to them. The Life which I now live (ſaith the Apoſtle) is by the Faith of the Son of God, Gal. 2. 20. It provides our ordinary Food, and extraordinary Cordials, Pſalm 27. 13. I had fainted unleſs I had believed. And ſeeing it is all this to our Souls.

Fifthly, In the laſt Place, it is no wonder that it is the main Scope and Drift of the Goſpel, to preſs and bring Souls to believing: 'Tis the Goſpels grand Deſign to bring up the Hearts of Men and Women to Faith. The urgent Commands of the Goſpel aim at this, 1 John 3. 23. Mark 1. 14, 15. John 12. 36. hither alſo look the great Promiſes and Encouragements of the Goſpel, John 6. 35. and 37. ſo Mark 16. 16. And the oppoſite Sin of Unbelief is every where fearfully aggravated, and threatned, John 16. 8, 9. John 3. 18, 35. And this was the Third Thing premiſed, namely, A diſcovery of the Tranſcendant Worth and Excellency of ſaving Faith.

Fourthly, But leſt we commit a Miſtake here, to the Prejudice of Chriſts Honour and Glory, which muſt not be given to another, no not to Faith it ſelf; I promiſed you in the Fourth Place, to ſhew you upon what Account Faith is thus dignified and honoured: That ſo we may give unto Faith, the Things that are Faiths; and to Chriſt, the Things that are Chriſts.

And I find Four Opinions about the Intereſt of Faith in our Juſtification: Some will have it to juſtifie us formally, not relatively: (i. e.) upon the Account of its own intrinſical Value and Worth; and this is the Popiſh Senſe of Juſtification by Faith. Some affirm, that though Faith be not our perfect legal Righteouſneſs, conſidered as a Work of ours, yet the Act of believing is imputed to us for Righteouſneſs, (i. e.) God graciouſly accepts it inſtead of perfect legal Righteouſneſs, and ſo in his eſteem it's our Evangelical Righteouſneſs. And this is the Arminian Senſe of Juſtification by Faith.

Some there are alſo, even among our Reformed Divines, that contend that Faith juſtifies and ſaves us, as it is the Condition of the New Covenant. And laſtly, Others will have it to juſtifie us as an Inſtrument apprehending or receiving the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt; with which Opinion I muſt cloſe: When I conſider my Text calls it a receiving of Chriſt: Moſt certain it is,

That Firſt, It doth not juſtifie in the Popiſh Senſe, upon the Account of its own proper Worth and Dignity: For then,

Firſt, Juſtification ſhould be of Debt, not of Grace; contrary to Rom. 3. 23, 24.

Secondly, This would fruſtrate the very Scope and End of the Death of Chriſt; for if Righteouſneſs come by the Law, (i. e.) by the way of Works and Deſert, then is Chriſt Dead in vain, Gal. 2. 21.

Thirdly, Then the way of our Juſtification by Faith would be ſo far from excluding, that it would eſtabliſh boaſting, expreſly contrary to the Apoſtle, Rom. 3. 26, 27.

Fourthly, Then there ſhould be no Defects or Imperfections in Faith, for a defective and imperfect Thing can never be the Matter of our Juſtification before God: If it juſtifie upon the Account of its own Worth and proper Dignity, it can have no Flaw nor Imperfection in it, contrary to the common Senſe of all Believers. Nay, Fifthly, Then it's the ſame Thing to be juſtified by Faith, and to be juſtified by Works, which the Apoſtle ſo carefully diſtinguiſheth and oppoſeth, Phil. 3. 9. and Rom. 4. 6. So that we conclude it doth not juſtifie in the Popiſh Senſe, for any worth or proper Excellency that is in it ſelf.

Secondly, And it is as evident, it doth not juſtifie us in the Arminian Senſe, viz. as the τὸ credere, the Act of believing is imputed, or accepted by God, as our Evangelical Righteouſneſs, inſtead of perfect legal Righteouſneſs. In the former Opinion you have the dreggs of Popery, and here you have refined Popery. Let all Arminians know, we have as high Eſteem for Faith as any Men in the World, but yet we will not rob Chriſt to cloath Faith: We cannot embrace their Opinion, becauſe, Firſt, We muſt then dethrone Chriſt to exalt Faith: We are willing to give it all that is due to it, but we dare not deſpoil Chriſt of his Glory for Faiths ſake: He is the Lord our Righteouſneſs, Jer. 23. We dare not ſet the Servant above the Maſter: We acknowledge no Righteouſneſs but what the Obedience and Satisfaction of Chriſt yields us: His Blood, not our Faith; his Satisfaction, not our Believing it, is the Matter of our Juſtification before God.

Secondly, We dare not yield this Point, leſt we undermine all the Comfort of Chriſtians, by bottoming their Pardon and Peace upon a weak, imperfect Work of their own. Oh how tottering and unſtable muſt their Station be, that ſtand upon ſuch a Bottom as this! What ups and downs are there in our Faith, what mixtures of unbelief at all Times, and prevalency of unbelief at ſome times; and is this a Foundation to build our Juſtification and Hope upon? Debile fundamentum fallit opus: If we lay the ſtreſs here, we build upon very looſe ground, and muſt be at a continual loſs, both as to Safety and Comfort.

Thirdly, We dare not wrong the Juſtice and Truth of God at that rate, as to affirm that he eſteems and imputes our poor weak Faith for perfect legal Righteouſneſs: We know that the Judgment of God is always according to Truth: If the Juſtice of God requires full Payment, ſure it will not ſay it's fully ſatisfied by any Acts of ours, when all that we can do amounts not to one Mite of the vaſt ſum we owe to God. So that we deſervedly reject this Opinion alſo.

Ergo quia fides Chriſtum juſtitiam noſtram recipit & gratiæ dei in Chriſto omnia tribuit, ideo fidei tribuitur juſtificatio, maxime propter Chriſtum, & non ideo quia noſtrum opus eſt. Confeſ. Helv.

Thirdly, And for the Third Opinion, That it juſtifies as the Condition of the new Covenant, tho' ſome of great Name and Worth among our Proteſtant Divines ſeem to go that way, yet I cannot ſee, according to this Opinion, any Reaſon why Repentance may not as properly be ſaid to juſtifie us as Faith, for it is a Condition of the New Covenant as much as Faith, and if Faith juſtifie as a Condition, then every other Grace that is a Condition, muſt juſtifie as well as Faith. I acknowledge Faith to be a Condition of the Covenant, but cannot allow that it juſtifies as a Condition. And therefore muſt profeſs my ſelf beſt ſatisfied in the laſt Opinion, which ſpeaks it an Inſtrument in our Juſtification: It is the Hand which receives the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt that juſtifies us, and that gives it its value above all other Graces: As when we ſay a Diamond Ring is worth one Hundred Pounds, we mean not the Gold that receives, but the Stone that is ſet in it is worth ſo much: Faith conſider'd as an Habit, is no more precious than other gracious Habits are, but conſider'd as an Inſtrument to receive Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs; ſo it excels them all: And this inſtrumentality of Faith is noted in thoſe Phraſes, ἐπὶ τῇ πίστει, Rom. 3. 28. and διὰ τῆς πίστεως, By Faith and through Faith. And thus much of the Nature and Excellency of ſaving Faith.

Serm. 7.

The Seventh SERMON.

JOHN I. xii.

Text. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God; even to them that believe on his Name.

THE Nature and Excellency of ſaving Faith, together with its Relation to Juſtification as an Inſtrument in receiving Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs, having been diſcourſed Doctrinally already, I now come to make Application of it according to the Nature of this weighty and fruitful Point.

And the Uſes I ſhall make of it will be for our,

1. Information,
2. Examination,
3. Exhortation. And
4. Direction.

Firſt Uſe of Information.

Uſe 1. And in the firſt, this Point yields us many and great, and uſeful Truths, for our Information: As,

Infer. 1. Is the receiving of Chriſt the Vital and ſaving Act of Faith, which gives the Soul right to the Perſon and Priviledges of Chriſt. Then it follows, That the rejecting of Chriſt by unbelief, muſt needs be the damning and Soul-deſtroying Sin, which cuts a Man off from Chriſt, and all the Benefits purchaſed by his Blood. If there be Life in receiving, there muſt needs be Death in rejecting Chriſt.

There is no Grace more excellent than Faith, no Sin more execrable and abominable than Unbelief: Faith is the ſaving Grace, and Unbelief is the damning Sin, Mark 16. 16. He that believeth not ſhall be damned. See John 3. 18, 36. and John 8. 24.

And the Reaſon why this Sin of unbelief is the damning Sin is this, Becauſe in the Juſtification of a Sinner, there muſt be a Co-operation all the Concauſes that have a joint Influence into that bleſſed Effect: As there muſt be free Grace for an impulſive Cauſe, the Blood of Chriſt as the meritorious Cauſe, ſo of Neceſſity there muſt be Faith, the inſtrumental Cauſe, to receive and apply what the free Grace of God deſigned, and the Blood of Chriſt purchaſed for us. For where there are many ſocial Cauſes or Concauſes to produce one Effect, there the Effect is not produced till the laſt Cauſe be in Act.

To him give all the Prophets witneſs, that through his Name whoſoever believeth in him ſhall receive Remiſſion of Sins, Acts 10. 43. Faith in its Place, is as neceſſary as the Blood of Chriſt in its Place: 'Tis Chriſt in you the hope of Glory, Col. 1. 27. Not Chriſt in the Womb, nor Chriſt in the Grave, nor Chriſt in Heaven, except he be alſo Chriſt in you.

Tho' Chriſt be come in the Fleſh, tho' he died and roſe again from the Dead, yet if you believe not, you muſt for all that Die in your Sins, John 8. 24. And what a dreadful Thing is this! better die the death of a Dog, better die in a Ditch, than die in your Sins. If you die in your Sins, you will alſo riſe in your Sins, and ſtand at the Bar of Chriſt in your Sins: You can never receive Remiſſion, till firſt you have received Chriſt. O curſed unbelief, which damns the Soul; diſhonours God, 1 John 5. 10 ſlights Jeſus Chriſt the Wiſdom of God, as if that glorious Deſign of Redemption by his Blood, the Triumph and Maſter-piece of Divine Wiſdom, were meer fooliſhneſs, 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. fruſtrates the great Deſign of the Goſpel, Gal. 4. 11. and conſequently it muſt be the Sin of Sins: The worſt and moſt dangerous of all Sins: Leaving a Man under the Guilt of all his other Sins.

Infer. 2. If ſuch a receiving of Chriſt, as hath been deſcribed, be ſaving and juſtifying Faith, then Faith is a work of greater difficulty than moſt Men underſtand it to be, and there are but few ſound Believers in the World.

Before Chriſt can be received, the Heart muſt be emptied and opened: But moſt Mens Hearts are full of Self-righteouſneſs, and Vain-Confidence: This was the Caſe of the Jews, Rom. 10. 3. Being ignorant of Gods Righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves to the Righteouſneſs of God.

Mans Righteouſneſs was once in himſelf, and what Liquor is firſt put into the Veſſel, it ever afterwards ſavours of it: 'Tis with Adams Poſterity as with Bees, which have been accuſtomed to go to their own Hive, and carry all thither; if the Hive be removed to another Place, they will ſtill fly to the old Place, hover up and down about it, and rather die there, than go to a new Place. So it is with moſt Men. God hath removed their Righteouſneſs from doing, to believing; from themſelves, to Chriſt; but who ſhall prevail with them to forſake Self? Nature will venture to be damned rather than do it: There is much Submiſſion in believing, and great ſelf-denial: A proud ſelf-conceited Heart will never ſtoop to live upon the Stock of anothers Righteouſneſs.

Beſides, it is no eaſie Thing to perſwade Men to receive Chriſt as their Lord in all things, and ſubmit their Necks to his ſtrict and holy Precepts, tho' it be a great Truth that Chriſts Yoak doth not gall, but grace and adorn the Neck that bears it; that the trueſt and ſweeteſt Liberty is in our Freedom from our Luſts, not in our fulfilling them: Yet who can perſwade the carnal Heart to believe this? And much leſs will Men ever be prevailed withal, to forſake Father, Mother, Wife, Children, Inheritance, and Life it ſelf, to follow Chriſt: And all this upon the Account of ſpiritual and inviſible Things: And yet this muſt be done by all that receive the Lord Jeſus Chriſt upon Goſpel Terms; yea, and before the Soul hath any encouraging Experience of its own, to balance the manifold diſcouragements of Senſe and carnal Reaſon, improved by the utmoſt Craft of Satan to diſmay it: For Experience is the fruit and conſequent of believing. So that it may well be placed among the great Myſteries of Godlineſs, that Chriſt is believed on in the World, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

Jugum Chriſti non deterit ſed honeſtat colla. Bern.

Infer. 3. And then Thirdly, Hence it will follow, that there may be more true and ſound Believers in the World, than know or conclude themſelves to be ſuch. For as many ruine their own Souls by placing the Eſſence of ſaving Faith in naked Aſſent, ſo ſome rob themſelves of their own Comfort, by placing it in full Aſſurance. Faith, and Senſe of Faith, are two diſtinct and ſeparable Mercies: You may have truly received Chriſt, and not receive the Knowledge or Aſſurance of it, Iſa. 50. 10. Some there be that ſay, thou art our God, of whom God never ſaid you are my People: Theſe have no Authority to be call'd the Sons of God: Others there are of whom God ſaith, Theſe are my People, yet dare not call God their God: Theſe have Authority to be call'd the Sons of God, but know it not. They have received Chriſt, that's their ſafety; but they have not yet received the Knowledge and Aſſurance of it, that's their Trouble: The Father owns his Child in the Cradle, who yet knows him not to be his Father.

Now there are two Reaſons why many Believers, who might argue themſelves into Peace, do yet live without the Comforts of their Faith: And this may come to paſs, either from,

Firſt, The Evidence of the Premiſes.

Secondly, Or the weighty Importance of the Concluſion.

Firſt, It may come to paſs from the inevidence of the Premiſes. Aſſurance is a Practical Syllogiſm, and it proceeds thus:

All that truly have received Chriſt Jeſus, they are the Children of God.

I have truly received Jeſus Chriſt,
Therefore I am the Child of God.

The Major Propoſition is found in the Scripture, and there can be no doubt of that: The Aſſumption depends upon Experience, or internal Senſe. I have truly received Jeſus Chriſt: Here uſually is the ſtumble, many great Objections lie againſt it, which they cannot clearly Anſwer: As,

Obj. 1. Light and Knowledge are neceſſarily required to the right receiving of Chriſt, but I am dark and ignorant, many carnal unregenerate Perſons know more than I do, and are more able to Diſcourſe of the Myſteries of Religion than I am.

Sol. But you ought to diſtinguiſh of the Kinds and Degrees of Knowledge, and then you would ſee that your bewailed Ignorance is no Bar to your Intereſt in Chriſt. There are Two Kinds of Knowledge:

1. Natural.
2. Spiritual.

There is a natural Knowledge even of Spiritual Objects, a ſpark of Nature blown up by an advantagious Education, and though the Objects of this Knowledge be Spiritual Things, yet the Light in which they are diſcerned is but a meer natural Light.

And there is a Spiritual Knowledge of Spiritual Things, the Teaching of the anointing, as it's call'd, 1 John 2. 27, (i. e.) the Effect and Fruit of the Spirits ſanctifying Work upon our Souls, when the Experience of a Mans own Heart informs and teacheth his Underſtanding, when by feeling the workings of Grace in our own Souls, we come to underſtand it's Nature: This is Spiritual Knowledge. Now a little of this Knowledge is a better Evidence of a Mans Intereſt in Chriſt, than the moſt raiſed and excellent degree of natural Knowledge: As the Philoſopher truly obſerves: Præſtat paucula de meliori ſcientia deguſtaſſe, quam de ignobiliori multa: One drachm of Knowledge of the beſt and moſt excellent Things, is better than much Knowledge of common Things. So it is here, a little ſpiritual Knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, that hath Life and Savour in it, is more than all the natural ſapleſs Knowledge of the unregenerate, which leaves the Heart dead, carnal and barren: 'Tis not the Quantity but the Kind, not the Meaſure but the Savour: If you know ſo much of the Evil of Sin, as renders it the moſt bitter and burdenſome Thing in the World to you, and ſo much of the neceſſity and excellency of Chriſt, as renders him the moſt ſweet and deſirable Thing in the World to you, tho' you may be defective in many Degrees of Knowledge, yet this is enough to prove yours to be the Fruit of the Spirit: You may have a ſanctified Heart, tho' you have an irregular or weak Head: Many that knew more than you are in Hell, and ſome that once knew as little as you are now in Heaven: In abſoluto & facili ſtat æternitas: God hath not prepar'd Heaven only for clear and ſubtil Heads: A little ſanctified and effectual Knowledge of Chriſts Perſon, Offices, Suitableneſs, and Neceſſity, may bring thee thither, when others, with all their curious Speculations and Notions, may periſh for ever.

Obj. 2. But you tell me, that Aſſent to the Truths of the Goſpel is neceſſarily included in ſaving Faith, which tho' it be not the juſtifying and ſaving Act, yet it is pre-ſuppoſed and required to it: Now I have many ſtaggerings and Doubtings about the certainty and reality of theſe Things: Many horrid Atheiſtical Thoughts, which ſhake the aſſenting Act of Faith in the very Foundation, and hence I doubt I do not believe.

Sol. There may be, and often is, a true and ſincere Aſſent found in the Soul, that is aſſaulted with violent atheiſtical Suggeſtions from Satan; and thereupon Queſtions the Truth of it. And this is a very clear Evidence of the reality of our Aſſent, that whatever Doubts, or contrary Suggeſtions there be, yet we dare not in our Practice contradict or ſlight thoſe Truths or Duties which we are tempted to disbelieve. Ex. gr. we are aſſaulted with Atheiſtical Thoughts, and tempted to ſlight and caſt off all fears of Sin, and practice of religious Duties, yet when it comes to the Point of Practice, we dare not commit a known Sin, the awe of God is upon us: We dare not omit a known Duty, the tie of Conſcience is found ſtrong enough to hold us cloſe to it: In this Caſe, 'tis plain we do really Aſſent, when we think we do not. A Man thinks he doth not love his Child, yet carefully provides for him in Health, and is full of grief and fears about him in Sickneſs: Why now, ſo long as I ſee all Fatherly Duties performed, and Affections to his Childs welfare manifeſted, let him ſay what he will as to the want of Love to him, whileſt I ſee this, he muſt excuſe me if I do not believe him, when he ſaith he hath no Love for him. Juſt ſo is it in this Caſe, A Man ſaith I do not Aſſent to the Being, Neceſſity, or Excellency of Jeſus Chriſt: Yet, in the mean Time, his Soul is fill'd with Cares and Fears about ſecuring his Intereſt in him, he is found panting and thirſting for him with vehement Deſires, there's nothing in all the World would give him ſuch Joy, as to be well aſſured of an Intereſt in him; while it is thus with any Man, let him ſay or think what he will of his Aſſent, it's manifeſt by this he doth truly and heartily Aſſent, and there can be no better Proof of it than theſe real Effects produc'd by it.

Secondly, But if theſe, and other Objections, were never ſo fully anſwer'd for the clearing of the Aſſumption, yet it often falls out, that Believers are afraid to draw the Concluſion, and that fear partly ariſes from.

Firſt, The weighty Importance of this Matter.

Secondly, The ſenſe of the Deceitfulneſs of their own Hearts.

Firſt, The Concluſion is of Infinite Importance to them; it is the Everlaſting Happineſs of their Souls, than which nothing is, or can be, of greater weight upon their Spirits: Things in which we are moſt deeply concerned, are not lightly and haſtily received by us: It ſeems ſo great and ſo good, that we are ſtill apt (if there be any room for it) to ſuſpect the Truth and Certainty thereof, as never being ſure enough.

Thus when the Women that were the firſt Meſſengers and Witneſſes of Chriſts Reſurrection, Luke 20. 10, 11. came and told the Diſciples thoſe wonderful and comfortable Tidings, it's ſaid, That their Words ſeemed to them as idle Tales, and they believed them not: They thought it was too good to be true: Too great to be haſtily received; ſo is it in this Caſe.

Secondly, The Senſe they have of the Deceitfulneſs of their own Hearts, and the daily workings of Hypocriſie there, makes them afraid to conclude in ſo great a Point as this is.

They know that very many daily cozen and cheat themſelves in this Matter, they know alſo that their own Hearts are full of falſeneſs and deceit, they find them ſo in their daily Obſervations of them, and what if they ſhould prove ſo in this? Why then they are loſt for ever! They alſo know there is not the like danger in their Fears and Jealouſies, that would be in their vain Confidences and Preſumptions: By the one they are only deprived of their preſent Comfort, but by the other they would be ruined for ever: And therefore chuſe rather to dwell with their own Fears (though they be uncomfortable Companions) than run the Danger of ſo great a Miſtake, which would be infinitely more fatal. And this being the common Caſe of moſt Chriſtians, it follows that there muſt be many more Believers in the World than do think, or dare conclude themſelves to be ſuch.

Infer. 4. If the right receiving of Jeſus Chriſt be true ſaving and juſtifying Faith, then thoſe that have the leaſt and loweſt Degree and Meaſure of ſaving Faith, have Cauſe for ever to admire the Bounty and Riches of the Grace of God to them therein.

If you have received never ſo little of his Bounty by the Hand of Providence, in the good Things of this Life, yet if he have given you any meaſure of true ſaving Faith, he hath dealt bountifully indeed with you: This Mercy alone is enough to balance all other Wants and Inconveniencies of this Life. Poor in the World, rich in Faith, James 2. 5. O let your Hearts take in the full Senſe of this Bounty of God to you; ſay with the Apoſtle, Eph. 1. 3. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual Bleſſings in heavenly Places in Chriſt Jeſus. And you will in this one Mercy, find Matter enough of Praiſe and Thankſgiving, Wonder and Admiration to your dying Day, yea, to all Eternity: For do but conſider, Firſt, The ſmalleſt Meaſure of ſaving Faith which is found in any of the People of God, receives Jeſus Chriſt; and in receiving him, what Mercy is there which the believing Soul doth not receive in him, and with him? Rom. 8. 32.

O Believer, tho' the Arms of thy Faith be ſmall and weak, yet they embrace a great Chriſt, and receive the richeſt Gift that ever God beſtowed upon the World: No ſooner art thou become a Believer, but Chriſt is in thee the Hope of Glory: And thou haſt Authority to become a Son or Daughter of God? Thou haſt the Broad Seal of Heaven to confirm thy Title and Claim to the Priviledges of Adoption, for To as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God. To as many] be they ſtrong, or be they weak, provided they really receive Chriſt by Faith; there is Authority or Power given, ſo that it's no Act of Preſumption in them to ſay God is our Father, Heaven is our Inheritance. Oh precious Faith! the Treaſures of ten Thouſand Worlds cannot purchaſe ſuch Priviledges as theſe: All the Crowns and Scepters of the Earth, ſold at their full Value, are no Price for ſuch Mercies.

Secondly, The leaſt degree of ſaving Faith, brings the Soul into a ſtate of perfect and full Juſtification. For if it receive Jeſus Chriſt, it muſt therefore needs in him, and with him, receive a free, full, and final Pardon of Sin: The meaſure of Faith receives Remiſſion for the greateſt Sins. By him all that believe are juſtified from all things, Acts 13. 39. it unites thy Soul with Chriſt, and then as the neceſſary Conſequent of that Union, there is no Condemnation, Rom. 8. 1. οὐδὲν κατάκριμα, not one Condemnation, how many ſoever our Sins have been.

Thirdly, The leaſt meaſure or degree of ſaving Fath, is a greater Mercy than God hath beſtowed, or ever will beſtow upon many that are far above you in outward reſpects: All Men have not Faith: Nay, 'tis but a Remnant among Men that believe. Few of the Nobles and Potentates of the World, have ſuch a Gift as this: They have Houſes and Lands, yea, Crowns and Scepters, but no Faith, no Chriſt, no Pardon: They have Authority to rule over Men, but no Authority to become the Sons of God, 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27.

Say therefore in thy moſt debaſed, ſtraitned, afflicted Condition, Return to thy Reſt, O my Soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee.

Fourthly, The leaſt degree of ſaving Faith is more than all the Power of Nature can produce: There muſt be a ſpecial Revelation of the Arm of the Lord in that Work, Iſa. 53. 1. Believers are not born of Fleſh, nor of Blood, nor of the Will of Man, but of God, John 1. 12, 13. all believing Motions towards Chriſt, are the Effects of the Fathers drawing, Joh. 6. 44. a glorious and irreſiſtible Power goes forth from God to produce it, whence it's called the Faith of the operation of God, Col. 2. 12.

So then, Let not Believers deſpiſe the day of ſmall things, or overlook that great and infinite Mercy which is wrapt up in the leaſt degree of ſaving Faith.

Infer. 5. Learn hence the Impoſſibility of their Salvation, who neither know the nature, nor enjoy the means of ſaving Faith.

My Soul pities and mourns over the Infidel World. Ah! what will become of the Millions of poor Unbelievers! there is but one Door of Salvation, viz. Chriſt; and but one Key of Faith to open that Door: And as that Key was never given to the Heathen World, ſo it's laid aſide, or taken away from the People by their cruel Guides, all over the Popiſh World: Were you among them, you ſhould hear nothing elſe preſt as neceſſary to your Salvation but a blind implicit Faith, to believe as the Church believes; that is, to believe they know not what.

To believe as the Pope believes; that is, as an Infidel believes, for ſo they confeſs he may be, * and tho' there be ſuch a thing, as an explicite Faith ſometimes ſpoken of among them, yet it is very ſparingly diſcourſed, very falſly deſcribed, and exceedingly ſlighted by them, as the verieſt trifle in the World.

* Non enim fides interior Romani Pontificis eccleſiæ eſt neceſſari i.e. Canus Loc. Theol. p. 344.

Firſt, It is but ſparingly diſcourſed of: They love not to accuſtom the Peoples Ears to ſuch Doctrine: One of themſelves confeſſes that there is ſo deep a ſilence of explicit particular Faith in the Romiſh Church, that you may find many every where, that believe no more of theſe things than Heathen Philoſophers.

Navarr. cap. 11. p. 142.

Secondly, When it is preach'd or written of, it is falſly deſcribed; For they place the whole Nature and Eſſence of juſtifying and ſaving Faith in a naked Aſſent: Which the Devils have as well as Men, James 2. 19. no more than this is preſt upon the People at any time, as neceſſary to their Salvation.

Thirdly, And even this particular explicit Faith, when it is ſpoken or written of, is exceedingly ſlighted. I think if the Devil himſelf were in the Pulpit, he could hardly tell how to bring Men to a more low and ſlight eſteem of Faith; to repreſent it as a verier Trifle, and needleſs Thing than theſe his Agents have done. Some (a) ſay, if a Man believe with a particular explicit Faith, (i. e.) if he actually aſſent to Scripture Truths once in a Year, it is enough. Yea, and others (b) think it too much to oblige People to believe once in twelve Months; and for their eaſe tell them, if they believe once in twelve Years it is ſufficient: And leſt this ſhould be too great a Task, (c) others affirm, that if it be done but once in their whole Life, and that at the Point of Death too, it is enough, eſpecially for the rude and common People. Good God! what Doctrine is here! it was a Saying long ago of Gregory (as I remember) Malus Miniſter eſt niſus Diaboli: A wicked Miniſter is the Devil's Goſhawk, that goes a Birding for Hell, And O what Game have theſe Hawks of Hell among ſuch numerous flocks of People! O bleſs God while you live, for your Deliverance from Popery; and ſee that you prize the Goſpel, and Means of Grace you enjoy at an higher rate, leſt God bring you once more under that yoak, which neither you nor your Fathers could bear.

Second Uſe for Examination.

Doth ſaving Faith conſiſt in a due and right receiving of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt? then let me perſwade you to examine your ſelves in this great Point of Faith. Reflect ſolemnly upon the Tranſactions that have been betwixt Chriſt and your Souls: Think cloſe on this Subject of Meditation.

If all you were worth in the World lay in one precious Stone, and that Stone were to be tried by the Skilful Lapidary, whether it were true or falſe, whether it would fly or endure under the ſmart Stoke of his Hammer, ſure your Thoughts could not be unconcerned about the Iſſue: Why all that you are worth in both Worlds, depends upon the Truth of your Faith, which is now to be tried.

O therefore read not theſe Lines with a running careleſs Eye, but ſeriouſly ponder the Matter before you: You would be loth to put to Sea, tho' it were but to croſs the Channel, in a rotten leaky Bottom: And will you dare to venture into the Ocean of Eternity in a falſe, rotten Faith? God forbid: You know the Lord is coming to try every Man's Faith as by Fire, and that we muſt ſtand or fall for ever with the Sincerity or Hypocriſie of our Faith. Surely you can never be too exact and careful about that, on which your whole Eſtate depends, and that for ever.

Now there are three things upon which we ſhould have a very tender and watchful Eye for the diſcovery of the ſincerity of our Faith, and they are.

The { Antecedents
Concomitants
Conſequents } of Faith.

As theſe are, ſo we muſt judge and reckon our Faith to be. And accordingly they furniſh us with three general Marks or Trials of Faith.

Firſt, If you would diſcern the Sincerity of your Faith, examine whether thoſe Antecedents and preparative Works of the Spirit, were ever found in your Souls, which uſe to introduce and uſher it into the Souls of God's Elect: Such are Illumination, Conviction, Self-deſpair, and Earneſt Cries to God.

Firſt, Illumination is a neceſſary Antecedent to Faith: You cannot believe till God hath opened your Eyes to ſee your ſin, your miſery by ſin, and your remedy in Jeſus Chriſt alone: You find this Act of the Spirit to be the firſt, in order both of Nature and Time, and introductive to all the reſt, Acts 26. 18. To turn them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan to God. As Faith without Works (which muſt be a Conſequent to it) is dead, ſo Faith without Light, which muſt be an Antecedent to it, is blind: Faith is the Hand by which Chriſt is received, but Knowledge is the Eye by which that Hand is directed.

Well then, hath God opened your Eyes to ſee ſin and miſery in another manner than ever you ſaw it before? For certainly, if God have opened your Eyes by ſaving Illumination, preſent Apprehenſions of Sin and Danger, as betwixt the painted Lion upon the Wall or Sign-Poſt, and the real living Lion that meets you roaring in the Way.

Secondly, Conviction is an Antecedent to Believing: Where this goes not before, no Faith can follow after: The Spirit firſt convinces of ſin, then of Righteouſneſs, Joh. 16. 8. So Mark 1. 15. Repent ye, and believe the Goſpel: Believe it, O Man, that Breaſt of thine muſt be wounded, that vain and frothy Heart of thine muſt be pierced and ſtung with Conviction, Senſe and Sorrow for Sin: Thou muſt have ſome ſick days and reſtleſs nights for Sin, if ever thou rightly cloſe with Chriſt by Faith. 'Tis true, there is much difference found in the Srengrh, Depth, and Continuance of Conviction, and ſpiritual Troubles in Converts, as there is in the Labours and Travailing Pains of Women; but ſure it is, the Child of Faith is not ordinarily born without ſome Pangs. Conviction is the Application of that Light which God makes to ſhine in our Minds, to our particular Caſe and Condition, by the Conſcience; and ſure, when Men come to ſee their miſerable and ſad Eſtate by a true Light, it cannot but wound them, and that to the very Heart.

Thirdly, Self-deſpair, or a total and abſolute Loſs in our ſelves about Deliverance, and the way of Eſcape, either by our ſelves, or any other meer Creature, doth, and muſt go before Faith.

So it was with thoſe Believers, Acts 2. 37. Men and Brethren what ſhall we do? They are the Words of Men at a total Loſs: It is the Voice of poor diſtreſſed Souls that ſaw themſelves in Miſery, but knew not, ſaw not, nor could deviſe any way of eſcape from it, by any thing they could do for themſelves, or any other Creature for them: And hence the Apoſtle uſes that Emphatical Word, Gal. 3. 23. συγκεκλεισμένοι, (i. e.) ſhut up to the faith, (i. e) as Men beſieged in a Garriſon in time of a Storm, when the Enemy pours in upon them through the Breaches, and over-powers them: There is but one Sally-Port or Gate, at which they can eſcape, and to that they all throng, as deſpairing of Life if they take any other Courſe. Juſt ſo do Mens Convictions beſiege them, diſtreſs them, beat them off from all their Holds and Intrenchments, and bring them to a pinching diſtreſs in themſelves, ſhutting them up to Chriſt as the only way of Eſcape. Duties cannot ſave me, Reformation cannot ſave me, nor Angels nor Men can ſave me; there is is no way but one, Chriſt or Condemnation for evermore.

I thought once, that a little Repentance, Reformation, Reſtitution, and a ſtricter Life, might be a way to eſcape Wrath to come, but I find the Bed is too ſhort, and the Covering too narnow: All is but Loſs, Dung, Droſs, in compariſon with Jeſus Chriſt: If I truſt to thoſe Ægyptian Reeds, they will not only fail me, but pierce and wound me too, I ſee no Hope within the whole Horizon of Senſe.

Fourthly, Hence come vehement and earneſt Cries to God for Faith, for Chriſt, for Help from Heaven, to tranſport the Soul out of this dangerous Condition, to that ſtrong Rock of Salvation; to bring it out of this furious ſtormy Sea of Trouble, where it's ready to wreck every moment, into that ſafe and quiet Harbour, Chriſt.

O when a Man ſhall ſee his Miſery and Danger, and no way of eſcape but Chriſt, and that he hath no ability in himſelf to come to Chriſt, to open his Heart thus to receive him, but that this Work of Faith is wholly ſupernatural, the Operation of God; how will the Soul return again and again upon God, with ſuch Cries as that, Mark 9. 24. Lord help my Unbelief? “ Lord “ enable me to come to Chriſt: Give me Chriſt “ or I periſh for ever: What Profit is there in “ my Blood? Why ſhould I die in the ſight and “ preſence of a Saviour? O Lord it is thine “ own Work, and a moſt Glorious Work: Re“ veal thine Arm in this Work upon my Soul, “ I pray thee: Give me Chriſt, if thou deny “ me Bread: Give me Faith, if thou deny me “ Breath : It's more neceſſary, that I believe than “ that I live.

O Reader, Reflect upon days and nights that are paſt, the places where thou haſt been converſant: Where are the Bed-ſides, or the ſecret Corners where thou haſt beſieged Heaven with ſuch Cries? If God have thus enlightned, convinced, diſtreſſed thy Soul, and thus ſet thee a mourning after Chriſt, it will be one good ſign that Faith is come into thy Soul ; for here are certainly the Harbingers and Fore-runners of it, that ordinarily make way for Faith into the Souls of Men.

Secondly, If you would be ſatisfied of the ſincerity and truth of your Faith, then examine what Concomitants it is attended with in your Souls. I mean, what Frames and Tempers your Souls were in, at that time when you think you received Chriſt. For certainly, in thoſe that receive Chriſt, (excepting thoſe into whoſe Hearts, God hath in a more ſtill and inſenſible way infuſed Faith betime, by his Bleſſing upon pious Education) ſuch concomitant Frames of Spirit may be remark'd, as theſe following.

Firſt, The Heart is deeply ſerious, and as much in earneſt in this matter, as ever it was, or can be about any thing in the World. This you ſee in that example of the Jaylor, Acts 16. 29. He came in trembling and aſtoniſhed : It is the moſt ſolemn and important Matter, that ever the Soul had before it in this World, or ever ſhall, or can have : How much are the Hearts of Men affected in their outward Straits and Diſtreſſes, about the Concernments of the Body? Their Hearts are not a little concern'd in ſuch Queſtions as theſe, What ſhall I eat? what ſhall I drink? wherewithal ſhall I and mine be fed and cloathed? but certainly the Straits that Souls are in about Salvation, muſt be allowed to be greater than theſe ; and ſuch Queſtions as that of the Jaylors, Sirs! What muſt I do to be ſaved? make deeper Impreſſions upon the Heart, than what ſhall I eat, or drink? Some indeed, have their Thoughts ſinking deeper into theſe things than others : Theſe Thoughts lie with different Degrees of Weight of Men ; but all are moſt ſolemnly and awfully concerned about their Condition: All Frothineſs and Frolicks are gone, and the Heart ſettles it ſelf in deepeſt earneſt about its Eternal State.

Secondly, The Heart that receives Jeſus Chriſt, is in a frame of deep Humiliation and Self-abaſement. O when a Man begins to apprehend the firſt Approaches of Grace, Pardon and Mercy by Jeſus Chriſt to his Soul: A Soul convinced of its utter Unworthineſs and Deſert of Hell ; and can ſcarce expect any thing elſe from the juſt and holy God but Damnation, how do the firſt Dawnings of Mercy melt and humble it! “ O Lord, what am I that thou ſhouldeſt “ feed me and preſerve me! that thou ſhouldeſt “ but for a few years ſpare me, and forbear me! “ but that ever Jeſus Chriſt ſhould love me, “ and give himſelf for me, that ſuch a wretch-“ ed Sinner as I, ſhould obtain Union with his “ Perſon, Pardon, Peace and Salvation by his “ Blood! Lord, whence is this to ſuch a Worm “ as I? and will Chriſt indeed beſtow himſelf “ upon me? ſhall ſo great a bleſſing as Chriſt “ ever come within the Arms of ſuch a Soul as “ mine? will God in very deed be reconciled “ to me in his Son? what to me! to ſuch an “ Enemy as I have been! ſhall my Sins which “ are ſo many, ſo horrid, ſo much aggravated “ beyond the ſins of moſt Men, be forgiven me? “ O what am I vile Duſt! baſe Wretch, that “ ever God ſhould do this for me! And how is that Scripture fulfill'd and made good, Ezek. 16. 63. That thou maiſt remember, and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more, becauſe of thy ſhame, when I am pacified towards thee for all that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God. Thus that poor broken hearted Believer ſtood behind Chriſt weeping, and waſhing his Feet with Tears, as one quite melted down, and overcome with the Senſe of Mercy to ſuch a Vile Sinner, Luke 7. 38.

Thirdly, The Soul that receives Jeſus Chriſt is in a weary Condition, reſtleſs and full of Diſquietneſs, neither able to bear the Burden of Sin, nor knowing how to be diſcharged from it, except Chriſt will give it eaſe, Mat. 11. 28. Come unto me, that is, believe in me, you that are weary and heavy laden : If they do not look into their own Souls, they know there's no Safety, and if they do, there's no Comfort. O the burdenſome ſenſe of ſin overweighs them ; they are ready to fall, to ſink under it.

Fourthly, The Soul that rightly receive Chriſt is not only in a weary, but in a longing Condition : Never did the Hart pant more earneſtly for the Water-brooks : Never did the Hireling deſire the ſhadow, never did a condemned Perſon long for a Pardon, more than the Soul longs after Jeſus Chriſt. O ſaid David, that one would give me of the Waters of Bethlehem to drink. O ſaith the poor humbled Sinner, that one would give me of the open'd Fountain of the Blood of Chriſt to drink! O for one Drop of that precious Blood! O for one encouraging Smile from Chriſt! O now were ten thouſand Worlds at my Command, and Chriſt to be bought, how freely would I lay them all down to purchaſe him! but he is the Gift of God. O that God would give me Chriſt, if I ſhould go in Raggs, and hunger and thirſt all my days in this World!

Fifthly, The Soul in the time of its cloſing with, or receiving Chriſt, is in a ſtate of Conflict : It hangs between Hopes and Fears, Encouragements and Diſcouragements, which occaſions many a ſad ſtand and pauſe in the way to Chriſt ; ſometimes the number and nature of its ſins diſcourage it, then the Riches and Freeneſs of the Grace of Chriſt, erects his Hopes again : There's little hope, ſaith Unbelief, nay, it's utterly impoſſible ſaith Satan, as ever ſuch a Wretch as thou ſhould find Mercy ; now the Hands hang down. O but then there's a Neceſſity, an abſolute Neceſſity ; I have not the choice of two, but am ſhut up to one way of Deliverance : Others have found Mercy, and the Invitation is to all that are weary, and to all that are athirſt : He ſaith, he that cometh to him, he will in no wiſe caſt out ; now new Hopes inſpire the Soul, and the Hands that did hang down are again ſtrengthned.

Theſe are the Concomitant Frames that accompany Faith.

Laſtly,

3. Mark. Laſtly, Examine the Conſequents and Effects of Faith, if you would be ſatisfied of the truth and ſincerity of it: And ſuch are,

Firſt, Evangelical meltings, and ingenuous thawings of the heart under the apprehenſions of Grace and Mercy: Zech, 12. 10. They ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and ſhall mourn.

Secondly, Love to Chriſt, his ways and people. Gal. 5. 6. Faith worketh by love, (i. e.) it repreſents the love of God, and then makes uſe of the ſweetneſs of it by way of Argument, to conſtrain the Soul to all acts of Obedience, wherein it may teſtifie the reality of its love to God and Chriſt.

Thirdly, Heart purity, Acts 15. 9. Purifying their hearts by faith: it doth not only cleanſe the hands but the heart: no Principle in Man beſides Faith can do this: Morality may hide corruption, but Faith only purifies the heart from it.

Fourthly, Obedience to the commands of Chriſt, Rom. 16. 26. the very Name of Faith is call'd upon obedience: for it accepts Chriſt as Lord, and urges upon the Soul the moſt powerful Arguments in the World, to draw it to Obedienee.

In a word, let the poor doubting Believer, that queſtions his Faith, reflect upon thoſe things that are unqueſtionable in his own experience, which being well conſidered, will greatly tend to his ſatisfaction in this point.

Its very doubtful to you whether you believe, but yet in the mean while, it may be paſt doubt, (being a matter of clear experience) that you have been deeply convinced of ſin, ſtruck off from all carnal Props and Refuges, made willing to accept Jeſus Chriſt upon what terms ſoever you might enjoy him: you doubt whether Chriſt be yours, but its paſt doubt that you have a moſt high and precious eſteem of Chriſt, that you heartily long for him, that you prize and love all whether perſons or things, that bears his Image: that nothing in the World would pleaſe your hearts like a transformation into his likeneſs, that you had rather your Souls ſhould be fill'd with his Spirit, than your Houſes with Gold and Silver. 'Tis doubtful whether Chriſt, be yours, but its paſt doubt that one ſmile from Chriſt, one token of his love, would do you more good than all the honours and ſmiles of the World; and nothing ſo grieves you, as your grieving him by ſin doth: you dare not ſay that you have received him, nor can you deny but that you have had many ſick days and nights for him: that you have gone into many ſecret places with yearning bowels after him: whether he be yours or not, you cannot tell; but that you are reſolved to be his, that you can tell: whether he will ſave you is a doubt, but that you reſolve to lie at his feet, and wait only on him, and never look to another for Salvation, is no doubt.

Well, well; poor penſive Soul, if it be ſo, ariſe, lift up thy dejected head, take thine own Chriſt into thy arms. Theſe are undoubted ſigns of a real cloſure with Chriſt: thou makeſt thy ſelf poor, aud yet haſt great riches: ſuch things as theſe are not found in them that deſpiſe and reject Chriſt by unbelief.

3. Uſe of Exhortation.

3. Uſe, This Point is likewiſe very improveable by way of Exhortation, and that both to Unbelievers and Believers.

Firſt, to Unbelievers, who from hence muſt be preſt, as ever they expect to ſee the face of God in peace, to receive Jeſus Chriſt as he is now offered to them in the Goſpel: this is the very ſcope of the Goſpel, I ſhall therefore preſs it by three great Conſiderations, viz.

Firſt, What is in Chriſt whom you are to receive.

Secondly, What is in the offer of Chriſt by the Goſpel.

Thirdly, What is in the rejecting of that offer.

Firſt Motive.

Firſt, Conſider well what is in Chriſt whom I perſwade you this day to receive: did you know what is in Chriſt, you would never neglect or reject him as you do: For.

Firſt, God is in Chriſt, 2 Cor. 5. 19. the Deity hath choſen to dwell in his fleſh, he is God manifeſt in fleſh, 1 Tim. 3. 16. a Godhead dwelling in fleſh is the Worlds wonder: ſo that in receiving Chriſt, you receive God himſelf.

Secondly, The Authority of God is in Chriſt, Exod. 23. 21. My name is in him: him hath God the father ſealed, Joh. 6. 27. he hath the Commiſſion, the Great Seal of Heaven to redeem and ſave you: all Power in Heaven and Earth is given to him, Mat. 28. 18. he comes in his Fathers name to you, as well as in his own name.

Thirdly, The Wiſdom of God is in Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 24. Chriſt the wiſdom of God: yea, in him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge, Col. 2. 3. Never did the Wiſdom of God diſplay it ſelf before the Eyes of Angels and Men as it hath done in Chriſt. The Angels deſire to look into it, 1 Pet. 1. 12. yet they are not ſo much concerned in the project and deſign of this Wiſdom in Redemption as you are.

Fourthly, The fulneſs of the Spirit is in Chriſt: yea, it fills him ſo as it never did or will fill any Creature, Joh. 3. 34. God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure to him: all others have their limits, ſtints, and meaſures; ſome more, ſome leſs; but the Spirit is in Chriſt without meaſure. O how lovely and deſirable are thoſe Men that have a large meaſure of the Spirit in them! but he is anointed with the Spirit of Holineſs above all his fellows, Pſal. 45. 2, 7. Whatever Grace is found in all the Saints which makes them deſirable and lovely, Wiſdom in one, Faith in another, Patience in a third; they all centre in Chriſt as the Rivers do in the Sea: quæ faciunt diviſa beatum, in hoc mixta fluunt.

Fifthly, The Righteouſneſs of God is in Chriſt, by which only a poor guilty Sinner can be juſtified before God. 2 Cor. 5. 21. we are made the Righteouſneſs of God in him: he is יהוה צדקנו the Lord our Righteouſneſs, Jer. 23. 6. (i. e.) the Author of our Righteouſneſs, or the Lord who juſtifies us: by that Name he ſhall be known and call'd by his People, than which none can be ſweeter.

(i. e.) Autorem juſtitiæ noſtræ. Calv. in Loc.

Sixthly, The love of God is in Chriſt: yea, the very yearning bowels of Divine Love are in him: what is Chriſt but the love God wrapt up in fleſh and blood? 1 Joh. 4. 9, 10. In this was manifeſted the love of God towards us, and herein is Love that God ſent his Son: this is the higheſt flight that ever Divine Love made, and higher than this it cannot mount. O Love, unparallell'd and admirable!

Seventhly, The mercies and compaſſions of God are all in Chriſt, Jude v. 21. Mercy is the thing that poor Sinners want, its that they cry for at the laſt gaſp, its the only thing that can do them good. O what would they give to find Mercy in that great Day? Why, if you receive Chriſt, you ſhall with him receive Mercy: but out of him there is no Mercy to be expected from the hands of God: for God will never exerciſe Mercy to the prejudice of his Juſtice, and it is in Chriſt that Juſtice and Mercy meet and embrace each other.

Eighthly, To conclude, The Salvations of God are in Chriſt. Acts 4. 12. Neither is there ſalvation in any other. Chriſt is the door of Salvation, and Faith is the key that opens that door to Men: if you therefore believe not, (i. e.) if you ſo receive not Jeſus Chriſt as God hath offer'd him, you exclude your ſelves from all hopes of Salvation. The Devils have as much ground to expect Salvation as you: you ſee what is in Chriſt to induce you to receive him.

Motive 2

Next, I beſeech you conſider what there is in the offer of Chriſt to Sinners, to induce you to receive him. Conſider well to whom, and who Chriſt is offered in the Goſpel.

Firſt, To whom he is offered: not to the fallen Angels, but to you: they lie in chains of darkneſs, Jude 6. as he took not their nature, ſo he deſigns not their recovery; and therefore will have no treaty at all with them: but he is offered to you, creatures of an inferior rank and order by Nature: nor is he offered to the damned, the Treaty of Peace is ended with them. Chriſt will never make them another tender of Salvation: nor is he offered to millions of millions as good as you now living in the Word: the ſound of Chriſt and Salvation is not come to their ears; but he is offered to you by the ſpecial favour and bounty of Heaven: and will you not receive him? O then how will the Devils, the Damned, and the Heathens upbraid your folly! and ſay, had we had one ſuch tender of mercy, of which you have had thouſands, we would never have been now in this place of torments.

Secondly, Conſider how Chriſt is offered to you, and you ſhall find that he is offered.

Firſt, Freely as the gift of God to your Souls: you are not to purchaſe him, but only to receive him, Iſa. 55. 1. Ho, every one that thirſteth come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money let him come, &c.

Secondly, Chriſt is offered importunately by repeated intreaties, 2 Cor. 5. 20. As though God did beſeech you, we pray you in Chriſts ſtead, be ye reconciled to God. O what amazing condeſcenſion is here in the God of Mercy! God now beſeeches you, will you not yield to the intreaties of your God? O then what wilt thou ſay for thy ſelf, when God will not hear thee, when thou ſhalt intreat and cry for Mercy? Which brings us to the Motive 3.

Conſider the ſin and danger that there is in refuſing or neglecting the preſent offers of Chriſt in the Goſpel, and ſurely there is much ſin in it: the very malignity of ſin, and the ſum of all miſery, lies here: for in refuſing Chriſt,

Firſt, You put the greateſt contempt and ſlight upon all the Attributes of God that it is poſſible for a Creature to do: God hath made his Juſtice, his Mercy, his Wiſdom, and all his Attributes, to ſhine in their brighteſt glory in Chriſt: never was there ſuch a diſplay of the glory of God made to the World in any other way.

O then, what is it to reject and deſpiſe Jeſus Chriſt, but to offer the greateſt affront to the glory of God that it is poſſible for Men to put upon him?

Secondly, You hereby fruſtrate and evacuate the very deſign and importance of the Goſpel to your ſelves, you receive the grace of God in vain, 2 Cor. 6. 1. as good, yea, better had it been for you, that Chriſt had never come into the World, or if he had, that your lot had fallen in the dark places of the Earth, where you had never heard his name: yea, good had it been for that Man if he had never been born.

Thirdly, Hereby a Man murthers his own Soul. I ſaid therefore unto you, that you ſhall die in your ſins; for if ye believe not that, I am he, ye ſhall die in your ſins, Joh. 8. 24. unbelief is Selfmurther: you are guilty of the blood of your own Souls: Life and Salvation was offered you, and you rejected it: yea, Fourthly, The refuſing of Chriſt by unbelief will aggravate your damnation, above all others that periſh in ignorance of Chriſt. O 'twill be more tolerable for Heathens than for you: the greateſt meaſures of wrath are reſerved to puniſh the worſt of Sinners, and among Sinners none will be found worſe than Unbelievers.

Secondly, To Believers, this point is very uſeful to perſwade them to divers excellent Duties: among which I ſhall ſingle out two principal ones. viz.

1. To bring up their Faith of Acceptance to the Faith of Aſſurance.
2. To bring up their Converſations to the Principles and Rules of Faith.

Firſt, You that have received Jeſus Chriſt truly, give your ſelves no reſt till you are fully ſatisfied that you have done ſo, Acceptance brings you to Heaven hereafter, but Aſſurance will bring Heaven into your Souls now. O what a life of delight and pleaſure doth the aſſured Believer live! What pleaſure is it to him to look back and conſider where once he was, and where now he is: to look forward and conſider where he now is! and where ſhortly he ſhall be! I was in my ſins, I am now in Chriſt, I am in Chriſt now, I ſhall be with Chriſt, and that for ever, after a few days. I was upon the very brink of Hell, I am now upon the very borders of Heaven; I ſhall be in a little while among the innumerable company of Angels and glorified Saints, bearing part with them in the Song of Moſes, and of the Lamb, for evermore.

And why may not you, that have received Chriſt, receive the comfort of your Union with him? There be all the grounds and helps of Aſſurance furniſh'd to your hand: there is a real Union betwixt Chriſt and your Souls, which is the very ground-work of Aſſurance: You have the Scriptures before you which contain the ſigns of Faith, and the very things within you that anſwer thoſe ſigns in the Word. So you read, and ſo, juſt ſo you might feel it in your own hearts, hearts, would you attend to your own experience. The Spirit of God is ready to ſeal you, 'tis his office and his delight ſo to do. O therefore give diligence to this Work, attend the ſtudy of the Scriptures, and of your own hearts more, and grieve not the holy Spirit of God, and you may arrive to the very deſire of your hearts.

Secondly, Bring up your Converſations to the excellent Principles and Rules of Faith. As you have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk in him, Col. 2. 6. live as you believe: you received Chriſt ſincerely in your firſt cloſe with him, O maintain the like ſeriouſneſs and ſincerity in all your ways to the end of your lives: you received him intirely and undividedly at firſt, let there be no exceptions againſt any of his commands afterward: you received him excluſively to all others; ſee that you watch againſt all Self-righteouſneſs and Self-conceitedneſs now, and mingle nothing of your own with his Blood, whatever gifts or enlargements in Duty God ſhall give you afterwards.

You received him adviſedly at firſt, weighing and conſidering the ſelf-denying terms upon which he was offered to you, O ſhew that it was real, and that you ſee no cauſe to repent the bargain, whatever you ſhall meet with in the ways of Chriſt and Duty afterwards. Convince the World of your conſtancy and chearfulneſs in all your ſufferings for Chriſt, that you are ſtill of the ſame mind you were, and that Chriſt with his Croſs, Chriſt with a Priſon, Chriſt with the greateſt afflictions, is worthy of all acceptation: As you have received him, ſo walk ye in him; let him be as ſweet, as lovely, as precious to you now, as he was the firſt moment you received him: yea, let your love to him, delights in him, and ſelf-denial for him, increaſe with your acquaintance with him day by day.

Uſe of Direction.

Uſe. Laſtly, I will cloſe all with a few words of directions to all that are made willing to receive the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: and ſure it is but need that help were given to poor Chriſtians in this matter, it is a time of trouble, fear, and great temptation: miſtakes are eaſily made, and of dangerous conſequence: attend heedfully therefore to a few directions.

Direct. 1. Firſt, In your receiving Chriſt, beware you do not miſtake the means, for the end: many do ſo, but ſee you do not: Prayer, Sermons, Reformations, are means to bring you to Chriſt, but they are not Chriſt: to cloſe with thoſe Duties is one thing, and to cloſe with Chriſt is another thing: If I go into a Boat, my deſign is not to dwell there, but to be carried to the place whereon I deſire to be landed. So it muſt be in this caſe, all your Duties muſt land you upon Chriſt; they are but means to bring you to Chriſt.

Direct. 2. Secondly, See that you receive not Chriſt for a preſent ſhift, but for your everlaſting portion: many do ſo, they will enquire after Chriſt, pray for Chriſt, caſt themſelves (in their way) upon Chriſt, and the ſatisfaction of his Blood; when the efficacy and terror of Conſcience is upon them; and they feel the ſting of guilt within them: but as ſoon as the Storm is over, and the Rod that Conſcience ſhak'd over them laid by, there's no more talk of Chriſt then: Alas, it was not Chriſt, but quietnes that they ſought: beware of miſtaking peace for Chriſt.

Direct. 3. Thirdly, In receiving Chriſt come empty handed unto him: believing in him that juſtifies the ungodly, Rom. 4. 5. and know that the deepeſt ſenſe of your own vileneſs, emptineſs, and unworthineſs, is the beſt frame of heart that can accompany you to Chriſt: Many Perſons ſtand off from Chriſt for want of fit qualifications, they are not prepared for Chriſt as they ſhould be, (i. e.) they would not come naked, and empty, but have ſomething to commend them to the Lord Jeſus for acceptance. O this is the pride of Mens Hearts, and the Snare of the Devil: let him that hath no Money come: you are not to come to Chriſt becauſe you are qualified, but that you may be qualified with whatever you want, and the beſt qualification you can bring with you, is a deep ſenſe that you have no worth nor excellency at all in you.

Direct. 4. Fourthly, In receiving Chriſt, beware of dangerous delays. O follow on that Work till it be finiſhed: You read of ſome that are almoſt perſwaded, and others not far from the Kingdom of God. O take heed of ſickneſs in the birth, Hoſea 13. 13. Delays here are full of danger, life is uncertain, ſo are means of Grace too. The Man-ſlayer needed no Motives to quicken his flight to the Refuge City.

Direct. 5. Fifthly, See that you receive all Chriſt with all your heart: to receive all Chriſt, is to receive his Perſon cloathed with all his Offices; and to receive him with all your heart, is to receive him into your Underſtanding, Will, and all Affections, Acts 8. 37. As there is nothing in Chriſt that may be refuſed, ſo there is nothing in you from which he muſt be excluded.

Direct. 6. Laſtly, Underſtand that the opening of your hearts to receive the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, is not a Work done by any power of your own, but the Arm of the Lord is revealed therein, Iſa. 53. 1. It is therefore your Duty and Intereſt to be daily at the feet of God, pouring out your Souls to him in ſecret, for abilities to believe. And ſo much as to our actual reception of Chriſt.

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 8.

The Eighth SERMON.

PSALM XLV. vii.

Text. Setting forth the Believers Fellowſhip with Chriſt, the next end of his Application to them.

----Therefore God thy God, hath anointed thee with the Oyl of gladneſs above thy fellows.

THE Method of Grace in uniting Souls with Jeſus Chriſt, hath been opened in the former Diſcourſes; thus doth the Spirit (whoſe Office it is) make Application of Chriſt to God's Elect: The reſult and next Fruit whereof is Communion with Chriſt in his Graces and Benefits. Our Myſtical Union is the very ground-work and foundation of our ſweet Soul enriching Communion, and participation of Spiritual Priviledges; we are firſt ingraffed into Chriſt, and then ſuck the ſap and fatneſs of the Root: Firſt married to the Perſon of Chriſt, then endowed and enſtated in the Priviledges and Benefits of Chriſt. This is my proper Work to open at this time, and from this Scripture.

Hic Pſalmus propheticus eſt, continetque Epithalamium quo Chriſti cum eclesia nuptiæ celebranter idemq; habet argumentum quod canticum canticorum ejuſq; videtur eſſe Epitome. Coc. in Loc.

The Words read, are a part of that excellent Song of Love, that heavenly Epithalamium, wherein the ſpiritual Eſpouſals of Chriſt and the Church are figuratively, and very elegantly celebrated and ſhadowed. The ſubject matter of this Pſalm is the very ſame with the whole Book of the Canticles: And in this Pſalm, under the figure of King Solomon, and the Daughter of Ægypt whom he eſpouſed, the ſpiritual eſpouſals of Chriſt and the Church are ſet forth and repreſented to us. Among many rapturous and elegant expreſſions in praiſe of this glorious Bridegroom Chriſt, this is one which you have before you: God thy God hath anointed thee with the Oyl of gladneſs above thy fellows: (i. e.) enriched and fill'd thee in a ſingular and peculiar manner with the fulneſs of the Spirit, whereby thou art conſecrated to thy Office; and by reaſon whereof, thou out-ſhineſt and excelleſt all the Saints, who are thy fellows or copartners in theſe Graces. So that in theſe Words you have two parts.

Viz.

First, the Saints dignity, and

Secondly, Chriſt's pre-eminency.

Conſortes, participes, ſodales, ſocios. Vox Hebræa quodcunq; ſocietatis ſive communionis genus ſignificat. Muis.

Firſt, The Saints dignity, which conſiſts in this, that they are Chriſts fellows, the Hebrew Word—מחבריך is very full and copious, and is tranſlated Conſorts, Companions, Copartners, Partakers; or, as ours read it, Fellows: (i. e.) ſuch as are partakers with him in the anointing of the Spirit: Who do in their meaſure receive the ſame Spirit, every Chriſtian being anointed, modo ſibi proportionato, with the ſame Grace, and dignified with the ſame Titles. 1 Joh. 2. 27. Rev. 1. 6. Chriſt and the Saints are in common one with another: Doth the Spirit of Holineſs dwell in him? So it doth in them too: Is Chriſt King and Prieſt? Why, ſo are they too by the Grace of Union with him. He hath made us Kings and Prieſts to God, and his Father. This is the Saints dignity to be Chriſts fellows, conſorts, or copartners: So that look whatever Grace or Excellency is in Chriſt, it is not impropriated to himſelf, but they do ſhare with him; for indeed he was fill'd with the fulneſs of the Spirit for their ſakes and uſe: As the Sun is fill'd with light not to ſhine to it ſelf, but to others, ſo is Chriſt with Grace: And therefore ſome tranſlate the Text not præ conſortibus, above thy fellows, but propter conſortes, for thy fellows: Making Chriſt the firſt receptacle of all Grace, who firſt and immediately is fill'd from the Fountain the Godhead, but it is for his People who receive and derive from him according to their proportion.

Rivet.

This is a great truth, and the dignity of the Saints lies chiefly in their Partnerſhip with Chriſt, tho' our Tranſlation above thy fellows ſuits beſt both with the importance of the Word, and ſcope of the place.

Secondly, But then, whatever dignity is aſcribed herein to the Saints, there is, and ſtill muſt be, a pre-eminency acknowledged and aſcribed to Chriſt: If they are anointed with the Spirit of Grace, much more abundantly is Chriſt: God thy God, hath anointed thee with the Oil of gladneſs above thy Fellows.

Oleum ipſum eſt limpidum & pellucidum & flammis fomentum & alimoniam ſuppeditat; inde ſumpta metaphora ungere in Scriptura ſæpe ſignicat ſpiritus ſancto intus animum illuſtrare, & accendere in eo veram agnitionem dei & motus congruentes cum deo Mollerus in Loc.

By the Oil of gladneſs, underſtand the Spirit of Holineſs: Compared here with Oil, of which there was a double uſe under the Law, viz. a Civil, and a Sacred uſe: It had a ſacred and a ſolemn uſe in the Inauguration, and Conſecration of the Jewiſh Kings, and High Prieſts: It had alſo a Civil and Common uſe, for the anointing their Bodies, to make their Limbs more agile, expedite and nimble: To make the Face ſhine, for it gave a luſtre, freſhneſs, and liveline§s to the Countenance: It was alſo uſed in Lamps, to feed and maintain the Fire, and give them Light: Theſe were the principal uſes of Oil. Now, upon all theſe accounts, it excellently expreſſeth, and figuratively repreſents to us the Spirit of Grace poured forth upon Chriſt and his People: For,

Firſt, By the Spirit poured out upon him, he was prepared for, and conſecrated to his Offices: He was anointed with the Holy Ghoſt, and with Power, Acts 10. 38.

Secondly, As this precious Oil runs down from Chriſt the Head to the Borders of his Garments: I mean, as it is ſhed upon Believers, ſo it exceedingly beautifies their Faces, and makes them ſhine with Glory.

Thirdly, It renders them apt, expedite and ready to every good Work: Non tardat uncta rota.

Fourthly, It kindles and maintains the Flames of Divine Love in their Souls; and like a Lamp, inlightens their Minds in the knowledge of Spiritual things the anointing teaches them.

And this Oil is here call'd the Oil of gladneſs becauſe it is the cauſe of all joy and gladneſs to them that are anointed with it: Oil was uſed (as you heard before) at the Inſtalment of Soveraign Princes, which was the Day of the gladneſs of their Hearts: And among the common People it was liberally uſed at all their feſtivals, but never upon their Days of mourning: Whence it becomes excellently expreſſive of the Nature and uſe of the Spirit of Grace, who is the cauſe and Author of all joy in Believers, Joh. 17. 13.

Ἔλαιον ἀγαλλιάσεως dicitur id quod cauſam dat ſummi gaudii. Grot. in Heb. 1. 9.

And with this Oil of gladneſs is Chriſt ſaid to be anointed above his Fellows (i.e.) to have a far greater ſhare of the Spirit of Grace than they: For to every one of the Saints is given Grace according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt, Eph. 4. 7. But to him the Spirit is not given by meaſure, Joh. 3. 34. It hath pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell, Col. 1. 19. and of his fulneſs we all receive Grace for Grace, John 1.16. The Saints partake with him, and through him, in the ſame Spirit of Grace, for which reaſon they are his Fellows; but all the Grace poured out upon Believers, comes exceeding ſhort of that which God hath poured out upon Jeſus Chriſt. The Words being thus opened, give us this note.

Αὐτὸς ὑμῶν ἀπὸ τῆς δωρεᾶς τοῦ πνεύματος καὶ ἐπισπασάμενος χαρὸ ἐστιν ἀνθρώπῳ τὸ πνεῦμα καὶ ἡμῖν μετρηδὸς. O Ecum.

Doct. That all true Believers have a real communion or fellowſhip with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

From the Saints Union with Chriſt, there doth naturally and immediately reſult a moſt ſweet and bleſſed Communion or Fellowſhip with him in Graces and ſpiritual Priviledges, Eph. 1. 3. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly Places (or things) in Chriſt: In giving us his Son, he freely gives us all things, Rom. 8. 32. So in 1 Cor. 1. 30. Of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification and Redemption: And once more, 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. all are yours, and ye are Chriſts: What Chriſt is and hath is theirs by communication to them, or improvement for them: And this is very evidently carried in all thoſe excellent Scripture metaphors by which our Union with Chriſt is figured and ſhadowed out to us: As the Marriage Union betwixt a Man and his Wife, Eph. 5. 31. 32. You know that this conjugal Union gives the Wife Intereſt in the Eſtate and Honour of the Husband, be ſhe never ſo meanly deſcended in her ſelf: The natural Union betwixt the Head and Members of the Body, by which alſo the Myſtical Union of Chriſt and Believers is ſet forth, 1 Cor. 12. 12. excellently illuſtrates Fellowſhip or Communion betwixt them: For from Chriſt the whole Body fitly joined together, and compacted, by that which every Joint ſupplieth according to the effectual working in the meaſure of every part, maketh increaſe of the Body, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Eph. 4. 6. The Union betwixt the Graff and the Stock, which is another emblem of our Union with Chriſt, Joh. 15. 1. imports in like manner this Communion or Partnerſhip betwixt Chriſt and the Saints. For no ſooner doth the Graffe take hold of the Stock, but the vital Sap of the Stock is communicated to the Graff, and both live by one and the ſame Juice.

Ubi ego Cajus tu Caja. Uxor clareſcit in radiis mariti.

Now that the ſcope of this Diſcourſe be not miſtaken, let the Reader know that I am not here treating of the Saints Communion or Fellowſhip with God in Duties, as in Prayer, Hearing, Sacramsnts, &c. but of that Intereſt which Believers have in the good things of Chriſt, by Vertue of the Myſtical Union betwixt them through Faith: There is a twofold Communion of the Saints with Chriſt.

The firſt is an Act.
The ſecond is a State.

There is an actual Fellowſhip or Communion the Saints have with Chriſt in holy Duties: Wherein Chriſtians let forth their Hearts to God by deſires, and God lets forth his Comforts and Refreſhments again into their Hearts: They open their Mouths wide, and he fills them: This Communion with God is the Joy and Comfort of a Believers Life: But I am now to ſpeak of that here. It is not any Act of Communion, but the State of Communion, from which all Acts of Communion flow, and upon which they all depend, that I am now to treat of: Which is nothing elſe but the joynt Intereſt that Chriſt and the Saints have in the ſame things: As when a Ship, an Houſe, or Eſtate, is among many Partners, or Joint-Heirs, every one of them have a Right to it, and Intereſt in it, tho' ſome of them have a greater, and others a leſſer part. So is it betwixt Chriſt and his People: There is a κοινωνία (i. e.) a Fellowſhip or Joint-intereſt betwixt them, upon which ground they are call'd co-heirs with Chriſt, Rom. 8. 17. This Communion or Participation in Chriſts Benefits depends upon the Hypoſtatical Union of our Nature, and the Myſtical Union of our Perſons with the Son of God: In the firſt he partakes with us, in the ſecond we partake with him; the former is the remote, the later the next cauſe thereof.

In the Explication of this Point, I ſhall ſpeak to theſe Four things.

1. What are thoſe things in which Chriſt and Believers have Fellowſhip.
2. By what means they come to have ſuch Fellowſhip with Chriſt.
3. How great a Dignity this is to have Fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt.
4. And then apply the whole in divers practical Inferences.

Firſt, What are thoſe things in which Chriſt and Believers have Fellowſhip, to which I muſt ſpeak both negatively and poſitively.

Negatively.

Firſt, The Saints have no Fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt in thoſe things that belong to him as God: Such as his conſubſtantiality, coequality, and coeternity with the Father: 'Tis the Blaſphemy of the wicked Familiſts to talk of being Goded into God, and Chriſted into Chriſt: Neither Men or Angels partake in theſe things, they are the proper and incommunicable Glory of the Lord Jeſus.

Secondly, The Saints have no Communion or Fellowſhip in the Honour and Glory of his mediatory Works, viz. his Satisfaction to God, or Redemption of the Elect. 'Tis true we have the Benefit and Fruit of his Mediation and Satisfaction, his Righteouſneſs alſo is imputed to us for our Perſonal Juſtification, but we ſhare not in the leaſt with Chriſt in the Glory of his Work: Nor have we an inherent Righteouſneſs in us as Chriſt hath, to juſtifie us after as Chriſt hath; nor can we juſtifie and ſave others as Chriſt doth: We have nothing to do with his peculiar Honour and Praiſe in theſe things: Tho' we have the benefit of being ſaved, we may not pretend to the Honour of of being Saviours, as Chriſt is to our ſelves or others. Chriſts Righteouſneſs is not made ours as to its univerſal value, but as to our particular neceſſity: nor is it imputed to us as to ſo many cauſes of Salvation to others, but as to ſo many ſubjects to be ſaved by it our ſelves.

Secondly, But then, there are many glorious and excellent things which are in common betwixt Chriſt and Believers, tho' in them all he hath the pre-eminence, he ſhines in the fulneſs of them as the Sun, and we with a borrowed and leſſer light, but of the ſame kind and nature as the Stars. Some of theſe I ſhall particularly and briefly unfold in the following particulars.

Firſt, Believers have communion with Chriſt in his names and titles: they are call'd Chriſtians from Chriſt, Eph. 3. 15. from him the whole family in Heaven and Earth is named: this is that worthy name the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, James 2. 7. He is the Son of God, and they alſo, by their union with him, have power or authority to become the Sons of God, Joh. 1. 12. He is the heir of all things, and they are joynt heirs with him, Rom. 8. 17. He is both King and Prieſt, and he hath made them Kings and Prieſts, Rev. 1. 6. but they do not only partake in the names and titles, but this communion conſiſts in things as well as titles: and therefore,

Secondly, They have communion with him in his righteouſneſs, (i. e.) the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is made theirs, 2 Cor. 5. 21. and he is the Lord our righteouſneſs, Jer. 23. 6. 'Tis true, the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is not inherent in us, as it is in him; but it is ours by imputation, Rom. 4. 5, 11. and our union with him is the ground of the imputation of his righteouſneſs to us, 2 Cor. 5. 21. We are made the righteouſneſs of God in him, Phil. 3. 9. for Chriſt and Believers are conſidered as one Perſon, in conſtruction of Law; as a Man and his Wifes a Debtor and Surety are one: and ſo his payment or ſatisfaction is in our name, or upon our account.

Now this is a moſt ineſtimable priviledge, the very ground of all our other bleſſings and mercies. O what a benefit is this to a poor Sinner, that ows to God infinitely more than he is ever able to pay him, by doing or ſuffering; to have ſuch a rich treaſure of merit as lies in the obedience of Chriſt, to diſcharge in one intire payment all his debts to the laſt farthing? Surely ſhall one ſay, In the Lord I have righteouſneſs, Iſa. 45. 24. even as a poor Woman that owes more than ſhe is worth, in one moment is diſcharged of all her obligations, by her Marriage to a wealthy Man.

Thirdly, Believers have communion with Chriſt in his holineſs or Sanctification, for of God he is made unto them not only Righteouſneſs, but Sanctification alſo: and as in the former priviledge, they have a ſtock of merit in the blood of Chriſt to juſtifie them, ſo here they have the Spirit of Chriſt to ſanctifie them, 1 Cor. 1. 30. and therefore we are ſaid of his fulneſs to receive grace, for grace, Joh. 1. 16. (i. e.) ſay ſome, grace upon grace, manifold graces, or abundance of grace: or grace for grace; that is, grace anſwerable to grace: as in the Seal and Wax, there is line for line, and cut for cut exactly anſwerable each other: or grace for grace, that is, ſay others, the free grace of God in Chriſt, for the ſanctification or filling of our Souls with grace: be it in which ſenſe it will, it ſhews the communion Believers have with Jeſus Chriſt in grace and holineſs. Now holineſs is the moſt precious thing in the world, its the Image of God, and chief Excellency of Man: it is our evidence for glory, yea, and the firſt-fruits for glory: in Chriſt dwells the fulneſs of grace, and from him our Head it is derived and communicated to us: thus he that ſanctifieth, and they that are ſanctified, are all of one, Heb. 2. 11. You would think it no ſmall priviledge to have Bags of Gold to go to, and enrich your ſelves with, and yet that were but a very trifle in compariſon to have Chriſts Righteouſneſs and Holineſs to go to for your Juſtification and Sanctification. More particularly,

Fourthly, Believers have communion with Chriſt in his death: they die with him, Gal. 2. 20. I am crucified with Chriſt, (i. e.) the death of Chriſt hath a real killing and mortifying influence upon the luſts and corruptions of my heart and nature: true it is he died for ſin one way, and we die to ſin another way: he died to expiate it, we die to it when we mortifie it: the death of Chriſt is the death of ſin in Believers: and this is a very glorious priviledge: for the death of ſin is the life of your Souls: if ſin do not die in you by mortification, you muſt die for ſin by eternal damnation: if Chriſt had not died, the Spirit of God, by which you now mortifie the deeds of the body, could not have been given unto you: then you muſt have lived Vaſſals to your ſins, and died at laſt in your ſins: but the fruit, efficacy and benefit of Chriſts death is yours, for the killing thoſe ſins in you which elſe had been your ruine.

Fifthly, Believers have Communion with Chriſt in his life and reſurrection from the dead: as he roſe from the dead, ſo do they; and that by the power and influence of his vivification and reſurrection: 'tis the Spirit of life which is in Chriſt Jeſus that makes us free from the Law of ſin and death, Rom. 8. 2. our ſpiritual life is from Chriſt, Eph. 2. 1. And you hath he quickened who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins: and hence Chriſt is ſaid to live in the Believer, Gal. 2. 20. Now I live, yet not I; but Chriſt liveth in me: and it is no ſmall priviledge to partake of the very life of Chriſt, which is the moſt excellent life that ever any Creature can live: yet ſuch is the happineſs of all the Saints, the life of Chriſt is manifeſt in them, and ſuch a life as ſhall never ſee death.

Sixthly, To conclude, Believers have fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt in his glory, which they ſhall enjoy in Heaven with him: they ſhall be ever with the Lord, 1 Theſ. 4. 17. and that's not all, (tho as one ſaith, it were a kind of Heaven but to look through the Key-hole, and have but a glimpſe of Chriſts bleſſed face) but they ſhall partake of the glory which the Father hath given him, for ſo he ſpeaks, Joh. 17. 22, 24. and more particularly, they ſhall ſit with him in his Throne, Rev. 3. 21. and when he comes to Judge the World, he will come to be glorified in the Saints, 2 Theſ. 1. 10. So that you ſee what glorious and ineſtimable things are and will be in common betwixt Chriſt and the Saints. His Titles, his Righteouſneſs, his Holineſs, his Death, his life, his Glory. I do not ſay that Chriſt will make any Saint equal with him in Glory: That's impoſſible, he will be known from all the Saints in Heaven, as the Sun is diſtinguiſhed from the Stars; but they ſhall partake of his Glory, and be fill'd with Joy there; and thus you ſee what thoſe things are that the Saints have Fellowſhip with Chriſt in.

Secondly, Next I would open the Way and Means, by which we come to have fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt in theſe Excellent Priviledges; and this I ſhall do briefly in the following Poſitions.

Poſition 1.

Firſt, No Man hath fellowſhip with Chriſt in any ſpecial ſaving Priviledge by Nature, howſoever it be cultivated or improved; but only by Faith uniting him to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: 'Tis not the Priviledge of our firſt, but ſecond Birth. This is plain from Joh. 1. 12, 13. But to as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, even to as many as believed on his Name, who are born not of fleſh, nor of blood, nor of the will of man, but of God. We are by Nature Children of Wrath, Eph. 2. 3. we have fellowſhip with Satan in ſin and miſery: the wild Branch hath no Communication of the ſweetneſs and fatneſs of a more Noble and Excellent Root, until it be ingrafted upon it, and have immediate Union and Coalition with it, Joh. 15. 1, 2.

Soli verè fideles ſunt membra Chriſti, idq; non quatenus homines, ſed quatenus Chriſtiani: nec ſecundum primam generationem, ſed ſecundum regenerationem. Polanus Syntag. lib. 6. cap. 35.

Poſition 2.

Believers themſelves have not an equal ſhare one with another, in all the Benefits and Priviledges of their Union with Chriſt, but in ſome there is an Equality, and in others an Inequality; according to the Meaſure and Gift of Chriſt, to every one.

In Juſtification they are all equal: The weak and the ſtrong Believer are alike juſtified, becauſe it is one and the ſame perfect Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which is applied to the one and to the other, ſo that there are no different degrees of Juſtification, but all that believe are juſtified from all things, Acts 13. 39. and there is no Condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus, Rom. 8. 1. be they never ſo weak in Faith, or defective in Degrees of Grace. But there is apparent difference in the meaſures of their Sanctification, ſome are ſtrong Men, and others are Babes in Chriſt, 1 Cor. 3. 1. The Faith of ſome flouriſhes and grows exceedingly, 2 Theſ. 1. 3. the things that are in others are ready to dye, Rev. 3. 2. It's a plain caſe, that there is great Variety found in the degrees of Grace and Comfort among them that are jointly intereſted in Chriſt, and equally juſtified by him.

Poſition 3.

The Saints have not Fellowſhip and Communion with Chriſt, in the fore-mentioned Benefits and Priviledges by one and the ſame Medium, but by various Mediums and Ways according to the Nature of the Benefits in which they participate.

For inſtance, they have Partnerſhip and Communion with Chriſt (as hath been ſaid) in his Righteouſneſs, Holineſs and Glory, but they receive theſe diſtinct Bleſſings by divers Mediums of Communion: We have Communion with Chriſt in his Righteouſneſs by the way of Imputation, we partake of his Holineſs by the way of Infuſion; and of his Glory in Heaven by the Beatifical Viſion. Our Juſtification is a relative change, our Sanctification a real change, our Glorification a perfect change by Redemption, from all the remains both of ſin and miſery.

Thus hath the Lord appointed ſeveral Bleſſings for Believers in Chriſt, and ſeveral Channels of conveying them from him to us; by imputed Righteouſneſs we are freed from the Guilt of ſin, by imparted Holineſs we are freed from the Dominion of ſin, and by our Glorification with Chriſt we are freed from all the Reliques and Remains both of ſin and miſery let in by ſin upon our Natures.

Poſition 4.

That Jeſus Chriſt imparts to all Believers all the ſpiritual Bleſſings that he is filled with, and withholds none from any that have Union with him; be theſe Bleſſings never ſo great, or they that receive them never ſo weak, mean, and contemptible in outward reſpects. Gal. 3. 27. Ye are all the Children of God by faith in Jeſus Chriſt. The Salvation that comes by Chriſt is ſtiled the common Salvation, Jude 3, and Heaven the Inheritance of the Saints in light, Col. 1. 12. There is neither Greek nor Jew (ſaith the Apoſtle) Circumciſion nor Uncircumciſion, Barbarian, Scythian, bond or free, but Chriſt is all and in all, Col. 3. 11. He means, there is no Priviledge in the one to commend them to God, and no want of any thing in the other to debar them from God; let Men have or want outward Excellencies, as Beauty, Honour, Riches, Nobility, Gifts of the Mind, Sweetneſs of Nature, and all ſuch like Ornaments, what is that to God? He looks not at theſe things, but reſpects them, and communicates his Favour to them as they are in Chriſt: He is all, and in all. The Gifts and Bleſſings of the Spirit are given to Men as they are in Chriſt, and without reſpect to any external differences made in this World among Men: Hence we find excellent Treaſures of Grace in mean and contemptible Perſons in the World: Poor in the World, rich in Faith, and Heirs of the Kingdom; and as all Believers, without difference, receive from Chriſt, ſo they are not debarr'd from any Bleſſing that is in Chriſt: All is yours, for ye are Chriſts, 1 Cor. 3. ult. with Chriſt God freely gives us all things, Rom. 8. 32.

Poſition 5.

The Communion Believers have with Chriſt in ſpiritual Benefits is a very great Myſtery, far above the underſtanding of natural Men. There are no Footſteps of this thing in all the Works of Creation, therefore the Apoſtle calls it the unſearchable Riches of Chriſt, Eph 3. 8. ἀνεξιχνίαστον πλοῦτον τοῦ Χριστοῦ: The Word ſignifies that which hath no footſteps to trace it by: Yea, 'tis ſo deep a Myſtery, that the Angels themſelves ſtoop down to look into it, 1 Pet. 1. 12. Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, neither have entred into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him: but God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10.

Thirdly and Laſtly, I ſhall in a few Particulars open the Dignity and Excellency of this Fruit of our Union with Chriſt, and ſhew you, that a greater Glory and Honour cannot be put upon Man, than to be thus in Fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt, Joh. 17. 22. The Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them, that they may be one as we are one: And therefore more particularly let this be conſidered.

Firſt, With whom we are aſſociated, even the Son of God; with him that is over all, God bleſſed for ever. Our Aſſociation with Angels is an high Advancement, for Angels and Saints are fellow Servants in the ſame Family, Rev. 19. 20. and thro' Chriſt we are come to an innumerable Company of Angels, Heb. 12. 22. but what is all this to our Fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and that in another manner than Angels have? For tho' Chriſt be to them an Head of Dominion, yet not an Head of vital Influence as he is to his Myſtical Body the Church: This therefore is to them a great Myſtery, which they greatly affect to ſtudy, and pry into.

Secondly, What we are that are dignified with this Title, the Fellows or Co-partners with Jeſus Chriſt; not only Duſt by Nature, Duſt thou art, but ſinful Duſt; ſuch wretched Sinners as by Nature, and the Sentence of the Law, ought to be aſſociated with Devils, and Partakers with them of the Wrath of the Almighty God to all Eternity.

Thirdly, The Benefits we are partakers of, in and with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and indeed they are wonderful and aſtoniſhing things, ſo far as they do already appear, but yet we ſee but little of them, comparatively to what we ſhall ſee, 1 Joh. 3. 1, 2. Now are we the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we ſhall be, but we know that when he ſhall appear we ſhall be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is. O what will that be! to ſee him as he is, and to be transformed into his Likeneſs.

Fourthly, The Way and Manner in which we are brought into this Fellowſhip with Chriſt, which is yet more admirable. The Apoſtle gives us a ſtrange Account of it in 2 Cor. 8. 9. For you know the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich: He empties himſelf of his Glory, that we might be fill'd; he is made a Curſe, that we might enjoy the Bleſſing; he ſubmits to be crown'd with Thorns, that we might be crowned with Glory and Honour; he puts himſelf into the number of Worms, Pſal. 22. 6. that we might be made equal to the Angels: O the unconceivable Grace of Chriſt!

Fifthly, The reciprocal Nature of that Communion which is betwixt Chriſt and Believers: We do not only partake of what is his, but he partakes of what is ours: He hath fellowſhip with us in all our Wants, Sorrows, Miſeries, and Afflictions; and we have Communion with him in his Righteouſneſs, Grace, Sonſhip, and Glory: He takes part of our Miſery, and we take part of his Bleſſedneſs: Our Sufferings are his Sufferings, Col. 1. 24. O what an Honour is it to thee, poor Wretch, whom a great many would not turn aſide to ask how thou doeſt; to have a King, yea, the Prince of all the Kings of the Earth, to pity, relieve, ſympathize, groan and bleed with thee, to ſit by thee in all thy troubles, and give thee his Cordials, to ſay thy troubles are my Troubles, and thy Afflictions are my Afflictions: Whatever toucheth thee toucheth me alſo: O what Name ſhall we give unto ſuch Grace as this is?

Sixthly and Laſtly, Conſider the perpetuity of the Priviledge; your Fellowſhip with Chriſt is interminable, and abides for ever. Chriſt and the Saints ſhall be glorified together, Rom. 8. 17. while he hath any Glory, they ſhall partake with him. 'Tis ſaid indeed, 1 Cor. 15. 24. that there ſhall be a time when Chriſt will deliver up the Kingdom to his Father: But the Meaning is not that ever he will ceaſe to be an Head to his Saints, or they from being his Members: No, no, the Relation never ceaſes: Juſtification, Sanctification and Adoption, are everlaſting Things, and we can never be deveſted of them.

Infer. 1. Are the Saints Chriſt's Fellows? What Honourable Perſons then are they! and how ſhould they be eſteemed and valued in the World! If a King, who is the Fountain of Honour, do but raiſe a Man by his Favour, and dignifie him by beſtowing ſome Honourable Title upon him, what Reſpect and Obſervance is preſently paid him by all Perſons? But what are all the vain and empty Titles of Honour, to the glorious and ſubſtantial Priviledges with which Believers are dignified, and raiſed above all other Men by Jeſus Chriſt? He is the Son of God, and they are the Sons of God alſo: He is the Heir of all things, and they are Joint-heirs with Chriſt. He reigns in Glory, and they ſhall reign with him: He ſits upon the Throne, and they ſhall ſit with him in his Throne. O that this vile World did but know the Dignity of Believers, they would never ſlight, hate, abuſe, and perſecute them as they do! And O that Believers did but underſtand their own Happineſs and Priviledges by Chriſt, they would never droop and ſink under every ſmall trouble at that rate they do.

Infer. 2. How abundantly hath God provided for all the Neceſſities and Wants of Believers! Chriſt is a Store-houſe fill'd with Bleſſings and Mercies, and it's all for them: From him they receive abundance of Grace, and of the Gift of Righteouſneſs, Rom. 5. 17. of his Fulneſs they all receive Grace for Grace, Joh. 1. 16. all the Fulneſs of Chriſt is made over to them for the Supply of their Wants: My God ſhall ſupply all your need (ſaith the Apoſtle) according to his Riches in Glory by Jeſus Chriſt, Phil. 4. 19. If all the Riches of God can ſupply your needs, then they ſhall be ſupplied. Say not, Chriſt is in the Poſſeſſion of conſummate Glory, and I am a poor Creature ſtruggling with many Difficulties, and toyling in the midſt of many Cares and Fears in the World; for Care is taken for all thy Needs, and Orders given from Heaven for their Supply: My God ſhall ſupply all your Need. O ſay, with a melting Heart, I have a full Chriſt, and he is fill'd for me. His pure and perfect Righteouſneſs is to juſtifie me, his Holineſs is to ſanctifie me, his Wiſdom is to guide me, his Comforts are to refreſh me, his Power is to protect me, his All-ſufficiency is to ſupply me. O be chearful, be thankful, you have all your Hearts can wiſh; and yet be humble, it is all from free Grace to empty and unworthy Creatures.

Infer. 3. How abſurd, diſingenuous and unworthy of a Chriſtian, is it to deny or with-hold from Chriſt any thing he hath, or by which he may be ſerved or honoured? Doth Chriſt communicate all he hath to you, and can you with-hold any thing from Chriſt? On Chriſt's part it is not mine, and thine, but ours, or mine and yours, Joh. 20. 17. I aſcend to my Father, and your Father, to my God and your God. But O this curſed Idol Self! which impropriates all to its own Deſigns and Uſes. How liberal is Chriſt! and how penurious are we to him! Some will not part with their Credit for Chriſt, when yet Chriſt abaſed himſelf unſpeakably for them. Some will not part with a drop of Blood for Chriſt, when Chriſt ſpent the whole Treaſure of his Blood freely for us: Yea, how loth are we to part with a Shilling for Chriſt, to relieve him in his diſtreſſed Members, when as yet we know the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that though he was rich, yet for our ſakes he became poor, that we through his Poverty might be Rich! O ungrateful return! O baſe and diſingenious Spirits! The Things Chriſt gives us are great, the Things we deny to him are ſmall: He parts with the greateſt, and yet is denied the leaſt. The Things he communicates to us are none of ours, we have no Right nor Title by Nature, or any Deſert of ours to them, the Things we deny or grudge to Chriſt are by all Titles his own, and he hath the fulleſt and moſt unqueſtionable Title to them all: What he gives to us, he gives to them that never deſerved it; what we with-hold from him, we with-hold from one that hath deſerved that, and infinitely more from us, than we have, or are.

He intereſted you freely in all his Riches when you were Enemies; you ſtand upon Trifles with him, and yet call him your beſt and deareſt Friend: He gave himſelf and all he hath to you, when you could claim nothing from him; you deny to part with theſe Things to Chriſt, who may not only claim them upon the higheſt Title, his own Soveraignty, and abſolute Property, but by your own Act, who profeſs to have given all in Covenant to him: What he gives you returns no Profit to him, but what you give, or part with for him, is your greateſt Advantage. O that the Conſideration of theſe Things might ſhame and humble our Souls.

Infer. 4. Then certainly no Man is, or can be ſuppoſed to be a loſer by Converſion, ſeeing from that Day, whatever Chriſt is, or hath, becomes his.

O what an Inheritance are Men poſſeſſed of by their new Birth! Some Men cry out, Religion will undo you, but with what Eyes do theſe Men ſee? Surely you could never ſo reckon, except your Souls were ſo Incarnated as to reckon Pardon, Peace, Adoption, Holineſs and Heaven, for nothing: That Inviſibles are non-entites, and Temporals the only Realities. 'Tis true, the converted Soul may loſe his Eſtate, his Liberty, yea, his Life for Chriſt: But what then? Are they loſers that exchange Braſs for Gold? Or part with their preſent Comforts for an hundred-fold Advantage? Mark 10. 29. So that none need ſcare at Religion for the loſſes that attend it, whileſt Chriſt and Heaven is gain'd by it: They that count Religion their loſs, have their Portion in this Life.

Infer. 5. How ſecurely is the Saints Inheritance ſettled upon them, ſeeing they are in commons with Jeſus Chriſt? Chriſt and his Saints are joint-heirs, and the Inheritance cannot be alienated but by his Conſent, he muſt loſe his Intereſt, if you loſe yours: Indeed Adams Inheritance was by a ſingle Title; and moreover, it was in his own Hand, and ſo he might (as indeed he ſoon did) deveſt himſelf and his Poſterity of it: But it is not ſo betwixt Chriſt and Believers, we are ſecured in our Inheritance by Chriſt our Co-heir, who will never alienate it: And therefore it was truly obſerved by the Father, Fœlicior Job in ſterquilinio, quam Adamus in Paradiſo: Job was happier upon the Dunghil, than Adam was in Paradiſe. The Covenant of Grace is certainly the beſt Tenure: As it hath the beſt Mercies, ſo it gives the fulleſt Security to enjoy them.

Infer. 6. How rich and full is Jeſus Chriſt, who communicates abundantly to all the Saints, and yet hath more ſtill in himſelf than is communicated to them, although all they receive were brought into one heap.

Take all the Faith of Abraham, all the Meekneſs of Moſes, all the Patience of Job, all the Wiſdom of Solomon, all the Zeal of David, all the Induſtry of Paul, and all the tender-heartedneſs of Joſiah: Add to this all the Grace that is poured (though in leſſer meaſure) into all the Elect Veſſels in the World, yet ſtill it is far ſhort of that which remains in Chriſt, He is anointed with the Oil of gladneſs above his Fellows; And in all Things he hath, and muſt ever have the pre-eminence: There be many Thouſand Stars glittering above your Heads, and one Star differs from another Star in Glory, yet there is more Light and Glory in one Sun, than in the many Thouſand Stars: Grace beautifies the Children of Men exceedingly, but ſtill that is true of Chriſt, Pſalm 45. 2. Thou art fairer than the Children of Men, Grace is poured into thy Lips: For all Grace is ſecondarily and derivatively in the Saints, but it is primitively and originally in Chriſt, John 5. 26. Grace is imperfect and defective in them, but in him it is in its moſt abſolute Perfection and Fulneſs, Col. 1. 19. In the Saints it is mixed with abundance of Corruption, but in Chriſt it is altogether unmixed and excluſive of its oppoſite, Heb. 7. 26. So that as the Heathen ſaid of Moral Vertue, I may much more ſay of Chriſt, That were he to be ſeen with Mortal Eyes, he would compel Love and Admiration from all Men, for he is altogether lovely, Cant. 5. 17.

Infer. 7. What delight and ſingular Advantage muſt needs be in the Communion of the Saints, who have Communion with Jeſus Chriſt in all his Graces and Benefits!

That which we have ſeen and heard declare we unto you, that ye alſo may have Fellowſhip with us, and truly our Fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt, 1 John 1. 3. O 'tis ſweet to have fellowſhip with thoſe that have fellowſhip with God in Jeſus Chriſt. Chriſt hath communicated to the Saints varieties of Graces in different Meaſures and Degrees: And as they all receive from Chriſt the Fountain, ſo it's ſweet and moſt delightful to be improving themſelves by ſpiritual Communion one with another: Yea, for that end one is furniſh'd with one Grace more eminently than another that the weak may be aſſiſted by the ſtrong: As a Modern Divine well obſerves: Athanaſius was prudent and active, Baſil of an heavenly ſweet Temper, Chryſoſtome laborious without Affectation, Ambroſe reſolv'd and Grave, Luther couragious, and Calvin acute and judicious. Thus every one hath his proper Gift from Chriſt, the Fountain of Gifts and Graces, 1 Cor. 7. 7. One hath quickneſs of Parts, another ſolidity of Judgment, but not ready and preſential; one is zealous, but ungrounded; another well principled, but timorous; one is wary, and prudent; another open, and plain; one is trembling, and melting; another chearful, and joyous; one muſt impart his light, another his heat: The Eye, the knowing Man, cannot ſay to the Hand, the active Man, I have no need of thee. And O how ſweet would it be, if Gifts, Graces, and Experiences were frequently, and humbly imparted: But idle Notions, earthly-mindedneſs, ſelf-intereſts, and want of more Communion with Chriſt, have almoſt deſtroyed the Comfort of Chriſtian fellowſhip every where in the World.

Infer. 8. In a Word, thoſe only have ground to claim Intereſt in Chriſt, who do really participate of his Graces, and in whom are found the Effects and Fruits of their Union and Communion with him.

If you have Intereſt in Chriſt, you have Communion in his Graces and Benefits; and if you have ſuch Communion, it will appear in your maintaining daily actual Communion with God in Duties, whereby will be produced,

Firſt, The increaſe of your Sanctification, by freſh Participations from the Fountain: As Cloth which is often dipt into the Fat receives the deeper Dye, and livelier Tincture, ſo will your Souls by aſſiduous Communion with God. It will alſo be diſcerned,

Secondly, In your deeper Humiliation and ſpiritual Senſe of your own vileneſs: The more any Man partakes of God, and is acquainted with him, and aſſimilated to him, the more baſe and vile in his own ſight he ſtill grows, Job 42. 5, 6. Iſa. 6. 5.

Thirdly, It will appear in your more vehement longings after the full Enjoyment of God in Heaven, 1 Pet. 1. 8. and Rom. 8. 23. You that have the firſt Fruits, will groan within your ſelves after the full Harveſt, and ſatisfying Fruition: You will not be ſo taken with Things below, as to be Content with the beſt Lot on Earth for your Everlaſting Portion, O if theſe communicated drops be ſo ſweet, what is there in Chriſt the Fountain?

And thus I have opened the Method of Grace, in bringing home Chriſt and his Benefits to Gods Elect by Union, in order to Communion with him.

Thanks be to God for Jeſus Chriſt.

Serm. 9.

The Ninth SERMON.

Text. Containing the firſt general uſe of Exhortation, inviting all Men to apply Jeſus Chriſt.

MATTH. XI. xxviii.

Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt.

THE Impetration of our Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt, being finiſhed in the firſt Part, and the Way and Means by which Chriſt is applied to Sinners in the foregoing Part of this Treatiſe, I am now orderly come to the general Uſe of the whole; which in the firſt Place ſhall be by way of Exhortation, to invite and perſwade all Men to come unto Chriſt, who in all the former Sermons hath been repreſented in his Garments of Salvation, red in his Apparel, prepared and offered to Sinners as their All-ſufficient and only Remedy: And in the following Sermons will be repreſented in his perfumed Garments coming out of his Ivory Palaces, Pſalm 45. 8. To allure and draw all Men unto him.

For a general Head to this Uſe which will be large, I have choſen this Scripture, Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt.

Theſe Words are the Voice of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, in which there is a vital raviſhing ſound: 'Tis your Mercy to have ſuch a joyful ſound in your Ears this Day: And in them I will conſider their Dependance, Parts, and Scope.

As to their Dependance, it is manifeſt they have an immediate Relation to the foregoing Verſe, wherein Chriſt opens his Commiſſion, and declares the fulneſs of his Authority and ſaving Power, and the impoſſibility of coming to God any other Way: All things are delivered to me of my Father, and no Man knoweth the Son but the Father: Neither knoweth any Man the Father ſave the Son, and he to whomſoever the Son will reveal him, ver. 27.

This 28*th* Verſe is brought in Proleptically, to obviate the Diſcouragements of any poor convinced and humbled Soul, who might thus Object: Lord, I am fully ſatisfied of the fulneſs of thy ſaving Power, but greatly doubt whether ever I ſhall have the Benefit thereof. For I ſee ſo much Sin and Guilt in my ſelf, ſo great vileneſs, and utter unworthineſs, that I am overweighed, and even ſink under the Burden of it: My Soul is diſcouraged becauſe of Sin. This Objection is prevented in the Words of my Text, Come unto all ye that labour and are heavy laden, q. d. Let not the Senſe of your Sin and Miſery, drive you from your only Remedy: Be your Sins never ſo many, and the ſenſe and burden of them never ſo heavy, yet for all that, Come unto me: You are the Perſons whom I invite and call. I came not to call the Righteous, but Sinners to Repentance.

In the Words, Three Things are eſpecially remarkable.

1. The Souls ſpiritual Diſtreſs and Burthen: Weary and heavy laden.
2. Its Invitation to Chriſt under that Burthen: Come unto me.
3. Its incouragement to that great Duty: I will give you reſt.

Firſt, The Souls * ſpiritual Diſtreſs and Burthen, expreſt in two very Emphatical Words, οἱ κοπιῶντες ϗ πεφορτισμένοι, Ye that labour and are heavy laden. The Word which we tranſlate Labour, ſignifies a labouring even to faintneſs and tiring, to the Conſumption and waſte of the Spirits; and the other Word ſignifies ſuch a preſſure by Burden that is too heavy to be born, that we do even ſink down under it.

There is ſome Difference among Expoſitors about the Quality of this Burthen. Chryſoſt. And ſome others after him, expound it of Burden of the

* Οἱ κοπιῶντες qui laboratis, ſcil. ad defatigationem uſq; hac enim Emphaſi differt τὸ κοπιᾷν à verbo πονεῖν quod in genere ſignificat laborare. Piſcator in Loc. (i.e.) Qui ſentiūt onus peccatorum & ſub illo tantum non ſuccumbitis. Chryſoſtomus intelligit oneratos legalibus oneribus, nos verò in genere intelligimus univerſos eos qui peccatorum pondere, naturæque corruptæ malitiâ quam ſentiunt preſſi, ad ejiciendam pravitatem & aſſequendam juſtitiam luctantur, Tuſculus in Loc.

the legal Rites and Ceremonies, which was a heavy Burden indeed, ſuch as neither they, nor their Fathers could bear. Under the task and burden of theſe legal Obſervances, they did ſweat and toil to obtain a Righteouſneſs to juſtiſie them before God, and all in vain; and this is a pious Senſe, but others expound it of the burthen of Sin in general; the Corruption of Nature, and Evils of Practice, which Souls are convinced have brought them under the Curſe, and will bring them to Hell, and therefore labour and ſtrive all that in them lies, by Repentance and Reformation, to clear themſelves from it, but all in vain, whileſt they ſtrive in their own Strength. Such are they that are here called to come to Chriſt, which is the ſecond Thing; namely,

Secondly, The Invitation of burthened Souls to Chriſt: Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden: Come unto me, (i. e.) believe in me, lean and reſt your burthened Souls upon me. I am able to eaſe all your Burthens, in me is that Righteouſneſs and Peace which you ſeek in vain in all the legal Rites and Ceremonies: Or in your Repentance, Reformations and Duties, but it will give you no eaſe, 'twill be no Benefit to you except you come unto me. Faith is often expreſſed under this Notion, ſee John 6. 37. and John 7. 37. and it is to be further noted that [all] burthened Souls are invited to come. All ye that labour: Whatever your Sin or Guilt have been, whatever your Fears or Diſcouragements are, yet come, (i. e.) believe on me.

Thirdly, Here is the Encouragement Chriſt gives to this Duty, And I will give you reſt: ἀναπαύσω ὑμᾶς —— I will refreſh you, I will give you reſt from your labour, your Conſciences ſhall be pacified, your Heart at reſt and quiet in that Pardon, Peace and Favour of God which I will procure for you by my Death. But here it muſt be heedfully noted, that this Promiſe of reſt in Chriſt is not made to Men ſimply as they are Sinners, nor yet as they are burthened, and heavy laden Sinners, but as they come to Chriſt; (i. e.) as they are Believers. For let a Man break his Heart with Sin, let him weep out his Eyes for Sin, let him mourn as a Dove, and ſhed as many Tears for Sin (if it were poſſible) as ever there fell drops of Rain upon the Ground, yet if he come not to Chriſt by Faith, his Repentance ſhall not ſave him, nor all his Sorrows bring him to true Reſt. Hence Note, Quid alibi quæritis, quod non licet invenire? ego is ſum qui poſſum vos juvare ſolus. Muſc. in Loc.

Doct. 1. That ſome Souls are heavy laden with the burthenſome Senſe of Sin.

Doct. 2. That all burthened Souls are ſolemnly invited to come to Chriſt.

Doct. 3. That there is reſt in Chriſt for all that come to him under the heavy Burthen of Sin.

Doct. 1.

Some Souls are heavy laden, with the burthenſome Senſe of Sin.

Doct. 1. I do not ſay all are ſo, for Fools make a mock of Sin, Prov. 14. 9. 'Tis ſo far from being burthenſome to ſome, that it is a ſport to them, Prov. 10. 23. But when a Mans Eyes are opened to ſee the Evil that is in Sin, and the Eternal Miſery that follows it, (Sin and Hell being link'd together with ſuch ſtrong Chains as nothing but the Blood of Chriſt can looſe) then no Burden is like that of Sin: A wounded Conſcience who can bear? Prov. 18. 14. For let us but conſider the Efficacy that the Law of God hath upon the Conſciences of Men, when it comes in the ſpirituality and Power of it to convince and humble the Soul of a Sinner. For then,

What inward troubles for ſin are.

Firſt, The Memory of Sin long ſince committed is refreſh'd and revived, as if it had been but Yeſterday: There are freſh Recognitions of Sin long ſince acted, and forgotten, as if they had never been: What was done in our Youth is fetch'd back again, and by a new Impreſſion of fear and horror ſet home upon the trembling Conſcience. Job 13. 26. Thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, and makeſt me to poſſeſs the Sins of my Youth. Conſcience can call back the Days that are paſt, and draw up a new Charge upon the ſcore of old Sins, Gen. 42. 21. All that ever we did is recorded and entred into the Book of Conſcience, and now is the Time to open that Book, when the Lord will convince and awaken Sinners. We read in Job 14. 17. of ſealing up Iniquities in a Bag, which is an Alluſion to the Clerk of the Aſſizes, that takes all the Indictments that are made againſt Perſons at the Aſſizes, and ſeals them up in a Bag, in order to a Trial. This is the firſt Office and Work of Conſcience, upon which The ſecond, namely its Accuſations, do depend: Theſe Accuſations of Conſcience are terrible Things, who can ſtand before them? They are full, they are clear, and all of them referring to the approaching Judgment of the great and terrible God.

Conſcience dives into all Sins, ſecret as well as open, and into all the Circumſtances and Aggravations of Sin, as being committed againſt Light, againſt Mercy, againſt the ſtrivings, warnings, and regrets of Conſcience. So that we may ſay of the Efficacy of Conſcience, as it is ſaid Pſalm 19. 6. of the Influence of the Sun, nothing is hid from the heat and power thereof. Come (ſaith the Woman of Samaria) ſee a Man that hath told me all that ever I did, John 4. 29. Chriſt convinced her but of one Sin by that Diſcourſe, but Conſcience by that one fetcht in and charged all the reſt upon her. And as the Accuſations of Conſcience are full, ſo they are clear, and undeniable: A Man becomes ſelf-convinced, and there remains no ſhift, excuſe, or Plea, to defend himſelf: A Thouſand Witneſſes cannot prove any Point more clearly than one Teſtimony of Conſcience doth, Mat. 22. 12. The Man was ſpeechleſs, a mute; muzzled (as the Word ſignifies) by the clear Teſtimony of his own Conſcience: Theſe Accuſations are the ſecond Work or Office of Conſcience, and they make way for the Third, namely,

Thirdly, The Sentence and Condemnation of Conſcience: And truly this is an inſupportable Burthen: The Condemnation of Conſcience is nothing elſe but its Application of the condemning Sentence of the Law to a Mans Perſon: The Law curſeth every one that tranſgreſſeth it, Gal. 3. 10. Conſcience applies this Curſe to the guilty Sinner. So that it Sentences the Sinner in Gods Name and Authority, from which there is no Appeal: The Voice of Conſcience is the Voice of God, and what it pronounces in Gods Name and Authority, he will confirm and ratifie, 1 John 3. 20. If our Hearts, (i. e.) our Conſciences, condemn us, God is greater than our Hearts, and knoweth all things: This is that Torment which no Man can endure. See the Effects of it in Cain, in Judas, and in Spira, 'tis a real Foretaſte of Hell Torments: This is that Worm that never dies, Mark 9. 44. For look, as a Worm in the Body is bred of the Corruption that is there, ſo the Accuſations and Condemnations of Conſcience are bred in the Soul by the Corruption and Guilt that is there: As the Worm in the Body preys and bites upon the tender ſenſible inward Parts, ſo doth Conſcience touch the very quick. This is its third Effect or Work to ſentence and condemn, and this alſo makes way for a fourth, namely, Fourthly, To upbraid and reproach the Sinner under his miſery; and this makes a Man a very Terror to himſelf. To be pitied in Miſery is ſome Relief, but to be upbraided and reproached doubles our Affliction. You know it was one of the Aggravations of Chriſt's Sufferings, to be reproached by the Tongues of his Enemies, whileſt he hanged in Torments upon the curſed Tree; but all the Scoffs and Reproaches, the bitter Jeers and Sarcaſms in the World, are nothing to theſe of a Man's own Conſcience; this will cut to the very Bone.

O when a Man's Conſcience ſhall ſay to him in a day of trouble, as Reuben to his afflicted Brethren, Gen. 42. 22. Spake I not unto you, ſaying, do not ſin againſt the Child; and ye would not hear, therefore behold alſo his Blood is required. So Conſcience, Did I not warn you, threaten you, perſwade you in time againſt theſe Evils? but you would not hearken to me, therefore behold now you muſt ſuffer to all Eternity for it: The Wrath of God is kindled againſt thy Soul for it: This is the Fruit of thy own wilful Madneſs and Obſtinacy. Now thou ſhalt know the Price of ſinning againſt God, againſt Light, and Conſcience. O this is terrible! every bite of Conſcience makes a poor Soul to ſtartle, and in a terrible fright to cry, Oh the Worm! O the bitter foretaſte of Hell! A wounded Spirit who can bear?

This is a fourth Wound of Conſcience, and it makes way for a fifth, for here it is as the pouring out of the Vials, and the ſounding of thoſe Woe-trumpets in the Revelations; one Woe is paſt, and another cometh. After all theſe deadly Blows of Conſcience upon the very Heart of a Sinner, comes another as dreadful as any that is yet named; and that is,

Fifthly, The fearful Expectations of Wrath to come, which it begets in the Soul of a guilty Sinner: Of this you read, Heb. 10. 27. A fearful looking for of Judgment, and fiery Indignation: And this makes the ſtouteſt Sinner quail and faint under the Burthen of ſin. For the Tongue of Man cannot declare what it is to lye down aud riſe with thoſe fearful Expectations: The Caſe of ſuch ſinners is ſomewhat like that which is deſcribed in Deut. 28. 65, 66, 67. The Lord ſhall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of Eyes, and Sorrow of Mind, and thy Life ſhall hang in doubt before thee, and thou ſhalt fear day and night, and ſhalt have no Aſſurance of thy Life: In the morning thou ſhalt ſay, Would God it were evening, and at even thou ſhalt ſay, Would God it were morning, for the fear of thine heart, wherewith thou ſhalt fear, &c. Only in this it differs, in this Scripture you have the Terror of thoſe deſcribed, whoſe Temporal Life hangs in doubtful ſuſpence, but in the Perſons I am ſpeaking of, it is a trembling under the Apprehenſions and Expectations of the vengeance of eternal fire.

Believe it Friends, words cannot expreſs what thoſe poor creatures feel, that lie down and riſe under theſe fears and frights of Conſcience. Lord, what will become of me! I am free among the dead, yea, among the damned. I hang by the frail thred of a momentany life, which will, and muſt break ſhortly, and may break the next moment, over the everlaſting burnings: no pleaſant bread is eaten in theſe days, but what is like the bread of condemned Men.

And thus you ſee what the burden of ſin is, when God makes it to bear upon the Conſciences of Men, no burden of affliction is like it: loſſes of deareſt relations: ſorrows for an only Son are not ſo pungent, and penetrating as theſe: For,

Firſt, No Creature enjoyment is pleaſant under theſe inward troubles: in other troubles they may ſignifie ſomething to a Mans relief, but here they are nothing, the wound is too deep to be healed by any thing but the blood of Jeſus Chriſt: Conſcience requires as much to ſatisfie it, as God requires to ſatisfie him. When God is at peace with thee, (ſaith Conſcience) then will I be at peace with thee too; but till then, expect no reſt nor peace from me: all the pleaſures and diverſions in the World ſhall never ſtop my mouth; go where thou wilt, I will follow thee like thy ſhadow: be thy portion in the World as ſweet as it will, I will drop in Gall and Wormwood into thy Cup, that thou ſhalt taſte no ſweetneſs in any thing till thou haſt got thy pardon.

Theſe inward troubles for ſin, alienate the mind from all former pleaſures and delights; there's no more taſte or ſavour in them, than in the white of an Egg. Muſick is out of tune, all Inſtruments jarr and groan. Ornaments have no beauty, what heart hath a poor creature to deck that body, in which dwells ſuch a miſerable Soul! to feed and pamper that carcaſs that hath been the Souls inducement to, and inſtrument in ſin, and muſt be its companion in everlaſting miſery.

Secondly, Theſe inward troubles for ſin, put a dread into death beyond whatever the Soul ſaw in it before. Now it looks like the King of Terrors indeed: you read in Heb. 2. 15. of ſome that through fear of death are all their life long ſubject to bondage. O what a lively comment is a Soul in this caſe able to make upon ſuch a Text? they would not ſcare at the pale Horſe, nor at him that ſits on him, tho' his name be called Death, if it were not for what follows him, Rev. 6. 8. but when they conſider that Hell follows, they tremble at the very name, or thoughts of Death.

Thirdly, Such is the nature of theſe inward troubles of Spirit, that they ſwallow up the ſenſe of all other outward troubles: alas! theſe are all loſt in the deeps of Soul-ſorrows, as the little Rivulets are in the vaſt Sea: he that is wounded at the heart, will not cry oh at the bite of a Flea: and ſurely no greater is the proportion betwixt outward and inward ſorrows: A ſmall matter formerly would diſcompoſe a Man, and put him into a fret, now ten thouſand outward troubles are lighter than a feather: for, ſaith he, why doth the living Man complain? Am I yet on this ſide eternal burnings? O let me not complain then, whatever my condition be: have I loſſes in the World, or pains upon my Body? Alas! theſe are not to be named with the loſs of God, and the feeling of his wrath and indignation for evermore. Thus you ſee what troubles, inward troubles for ſin be.

2. How Souls are ſupported under ſuch troubles.

Secondly, If you ask in the ſecond place, how it comes to paſs that any Soul is ſupported under ſuch ſtrong troubles of Spirit, that all that feel them do not ſink under them; that all that go down into theſe deep waters of ſorrow, are not drowned in them: The anſwer is,

Firſt, Tho this be a very ſad time with the Soul (much like that of Adam, betwixt the breach of the firſt Covenant, and the firſt promiſe of Chriſt made to him) yet the Souls that are thus heavy laden do not ſink, becauſe God hath a moſt tender care over them, and regard to them: underneath them are the everlaſting arms, and thence it is they ſink not: were they left to grapple with theſe troubles in their own ſtrength, they could never ſtand; but God takes care of theſe mourners, that their Spirits do not fail before him, and the Souls that he hath made; I mean thoſe of his Elect, whom he is this way preparing for, and bringing unto Chriſt.

Secondly. The Lord is pleaſed to nouriſh ſtill ſome hope in the Soul under the greateſt fears and troubles of Spirit: tho it have no comfort or joy, yet it hath ſome hope in the bottom, and that keeps up the heart: the afflicted Soul doth in this caſe, as the afflicted Church, Lam. 3. 29. He putteth his mouth in the duſt if yet there may be hope: he ſaith, its good for a man to hope, and quietly to wait for the ſalvation of God: There are uſually ſome glimmerings or dawnings of mercy through Chriſt, in the midnight darkneſs of inward troubles: non dantur puræ tenebræ, In Hell indeed, there is no hope to enlighten the darkneſs, but it is not ſo upon Earth.

ὑποτύπωσις ut & τύπος est primum picturæ lineamentum: ſumitur hic pro exemplo, ut viderent quid ſibi ſperandum ſit a domino: gratiam eſſe uberiorem ac potentiorem peccato ne quis qui credit diffideret ſibi paratam eſſe veniam. Poli Synopſ. in loc.

Thirdly, The experiences of others, who have been in the ſame deeps of trouble, are alſo of great uſe to keep up the Soul above water. The experience of another is of great uſe to prop up a diſponding mind, whileſt as yet it hath none of its own: and indeed for the ſupport of Souls in ſuch caſes they were recorded, 1 Tim. 1. 16. For this cauſe I obtained mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all long ſuffering, for a pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe on him to life everlaſting: for an encouraging pattern, an eminent precedent to all poor ſinners that were to come after him, that none might abſolutely deſpair of finding mercy through Chriſt. You know if a Man be taken ſick, and none can tell what the diſeaſe is, none can ſay that ever they heard of ſuch a diſeaſe before, its exceeding frightful; but if one and another, it may be twenty, come to the ſick Mans bed-ſide, and tell him, Sir, be not afraid, I have been in the very ſame caſe that you now are, and ſo have many more, and all did well at laſt, why this is half a cure to the ſick Man. So it is here, a great ſupport to hear the experiences of other Saints.

Fourthly, As the experiences of others ſupport the Soul under theſe burdens, ſo the riches of free grace through Jeſus Chriſt uphold it: 'tis rich and abundant, Pſal. 103. ult. plenteous redemption, and 'tis free, and to the worſt of ſinners, Iſa. 1. 18. and under theſe troubles it finds it ſelf in the way, and proper method of mercy, for ſo my Text (a Text that hath upheld many thouſand drooping hearts) ſtates it: All this gives hope and encouragement under trouble.

Fifthly and laſtly, Tho' the ſtate of the Soul be ſad and ſinking, yet Jeſus Chriſt uſually makes haſte in the extremity of the trouble to relieve it, by ſweet and ſeaſonable diſcoveries of his grace: cum duplicantur lateres, venit Moſes: in the Mount of the Lord it ſhall be ſeen. It is with Chriſt as it was with Joſeph, whoſe bowels yearned towards his brethren, and he was in pain till he had told them I am Joſeph your brother. This is ſweetly exhibited to us in that excellent Parable of the Prodigal, Luke 15. when his Father ſaw him, being yet a great way off, he ran and fell upon his neck and kiſſed him; mercy runs nimbly to help, when Souls are ready to fall under the preſſure of ſin. And thus you ſee both how they are burthened, and how upheld under the burthen.

3. Why doth God make the burden of Sin lie ſo heavy upon the Souls of ſome Sinners.

Thirdly, If it be enquired in the laſt place, why God makes the burden of ſin preſs ſo heavy upon the hearts of poor ſinners, 'tis anſwered,

First, He doth it to divorce their hearts from ſin, by giving them an experimental taſte of the bitterneſs and evil that is in ſin: Mens hearts are naturally glewed with delight to their ſinful courſes; all the perſwaſions and arguments in the World, are too weak to ſeparate them and their beloved Luſts. The morſels of ſin go down ſmoothly and ſweetly: they roll them with much delectation under their tongues: and it is but need that ſuch bitter potions as theſe ſhould be adminiſtred to make their ſtomachs riſe againſt ſin, as that word uſed by the Apoſtle in 2 Cor. 7. 11. ſignifies, in that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, what indignation it wrought? it notes the riſing of the ſtomach with rage, a being angry even unto ſickneſs, and this is the way, the beſt and moſt effectual way to ſeparate the Soul of a ſinner from his Luſts; for in theſe troubles Conſcience ſaith, as it is in Jer. 4. 18. Thy way and thy doings have procured theſe things unto thee; this is thy wickedneſs, becauſe it is great, becauſe it reacheth unto thy heart.

Ἀγανάκτησις indignatio ſtomochatio Leigh's Critica, in verb.

Secondly, The Lord doth this, to make Jeſus Chriſt moſt welcome and deſirable to the Soul. Chriſt is not ſweet, till ſin be made bitter to us, Mat. 9. 12. They that be whole need not a Phyſician, but they that be ſick. If once God wound the heart of a ſinner, with the ſtinging ſenſe of ſin, then nothing in the World is ſo precious, ſo neceſſary, ſo vehemently deſired, and panted for, as Jeſus Chriſt: O that I had Chriſt, if I did go in raggs, if I did feed upon no other food all my days, but the bread and water of affliction! This is the language of a Soul filled with the ſenſe of the evil of ſin.

Thirdly, The Lord doth this to advance the riches of his free Grace in the eyes of Sinners. Grace never appears Grace, till Sin appear to be Sin. The deeper our ſenſe of the evil of ſin is, the deeper our apprehenſions of the free Grace of God in Chriſt will be. The louder our groans have been under the burden of ſin, the louder will our acclamations and praiſes be for our Salvation from it by Jeſus Chriſt. To me (ſaith Paul) the chiefeſt of ſinners, was this grace given, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Never doth the grace of a Prince melt the heart of a Traytor, as when Trial, Sentence, and all preparations for his Execution have paſt, before his unexpected Pardon comes.

Fourthly, The Lord doth this to prevent relapſes into ſin: In that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, what carefulneſs it wrought! 2 Cor. 2. 7. The burnt Child dreads the Fire; the Bird that is delivered out of the Tallons of the Hawk, trembles afterward at the noiſe of his Bells. After ſuch a diliverance as this, ſhould we again break thy Commandments? Ezra 9. 13, 14. Ask a poor penitent Soul, that hath been in the deeps of ſorrow for ſin, Will you return to your former courſe of ſin again? and it ſounds in his ears, as if you ſhould ask him, Will you run into the fire, will you go to the Rack again? O no, it hath coſt him dear already.

Fifthly, Laſtly, This the Lord doth, to make them both skilful and compaſſionate in relieving others that are under like inward troubles. None can ſpeak ſo judiciouſly, ſo pertinently, ſo feelingly to anothers caſe, as he that hath been in the ſame caſe himſelf: this furniſhes them with the tongue of the Learned, to ſpeak a word in ſeaſon to the weary Soul. By this means they are able to comfort others with the ſame comforts wherewith they themſelves have been comforted of God, 2 Cor. 1. 4.

Thus you have had a brief account, what the burden of ſin is, how ſouls are ſupported under that burden, and why the Lord cauſes ſin to lie ſo heavy upon the Souls of ſome Sinners. The improvement of all will be in a double Uſe, viz.

Of Information, and Direction.

Firſt Uſe for Information.

Infer. 1. Is there ſuch a load and burden in ſin? What then was the burden that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt felt and bare for us, upon whom the dead weight of all the ſins of all Gods elect lay! Iſa. 53. 6. He hath made the iniquities of us all to meet on him. Our burden is heavy, but nothing to Chriſts. O there's a vaſt difference betwixt that which Chriſt bare, and that which we bare. We feel but the ſingle weight of our own ſins. Chriſt felt the whole weight of all our ſins. You do not feel the whole weight that is in any one ſin: alas, it would ſink you, if God ſhould let it bear in all its aggravations and effects upon you, Pſal. 130. 2, 3. If thou Lord ſhouldſt mark iniquity, O Lord who ſhall ſtand! You would quail and ſink preſently: you can no more ſtand under it, than under the weight of a mighty Mountain. But Chriſt bare all the burden upon himſelf: his underſtanding was deep and large: he knew the extent of its evil, which we do not: we have many reliefs and helps under our burden, he had none: we have friends to counſel, comfort and pity us; all his friends and familiars forſook him, and fled in the day of his trouble: we have comforts from Heaven, he had frowns from Heaven: My God, my God, (ſaith he in that doleful day) why haſt thou forſaken me? there's no compare betwixt our load and Chriſt's.

Infer. 2. If there be ſuch a burden in ſin, then certainly ſinners will pay dear for all the pleaſure they find in ſin in the days of their vanity. What one ſaith of crafty counſels, we may ſay of all ſins; tho' they ſeem pleaſant in their firſt appearance, they will be found ſad in the event: they are honey in the mouth, but the gall of Aſps in the belly: they tickle the fancy, but rend the conſcience. O Sinner, thy mirth will certainly be turned into mourning, as ſure as thou liveſt, that vain and frothy breaſt of thine ſhall be wounded: thou ſhalt feel the ſting and pain, as well as reliſh the ſweet and pleaſure of ſin. O that thou wouldſt but give thy ſelf the leiſure ſeriouſly to ponder thoſe Scriptures in the Margent: methinks they ſhould have the ſame effect that the hand-writing upon the plaiſter of the Wall had upon that Jovial King in the height of a frolick, Dan. 5. 5. Reaſon thus with thine own heart, and thou wilt find the concluſion unavoidable: Either I ſhall repent for ſin, or I ſhall not: if I ſhall not, then muſt I howl under the wrath of God for ſin in the loweſt Hell for evermore. If I ſhall, then by what I have now read, of the throbs and wounds of Conſcience, I ſee what this heart of mine, this vain heart of mine, muſt feel in this World. O how much wiſer was the choice that Moſes made, Heb. 11. 25. the worſt of ſufferings, rather than the beſt of ſin, the pleaſures of ſin which are but for a ſeaſon!

Concilia callida prima ſpecie læta; tractatu dura, eventu triſtia Livy.

Prov. 20. 7. Prov. 23. 31, 32. Job 20. 12, 13, 14. James 1. 15. Rom. 6. 21.

Infer. 3. Is there ſuch a burden in ſin, then the moſt tender compaſſion is due debt to ſouls afflicted and heavy laden with ſin. Their condition cries for pity, whatever their tongues do: they ſeem to call upon you, as Job upon his friends, Have pity, have pity upon me, O ye my friends, for the hand of God hath touched me, Job 19. 21. and O let all that have felt the wounds and anguiſh of an afflicted Conſcience themſelves, learn from their own experience tenderly to pity and help others, Gal. 6. 1. You that are ſpiritually minded, reſtore (or ſet him in joint again) in the ſpirit of meekneſs, conſidering thy ſelf.

καταρτίζετε, luxata membra in ſuum locum reſtituere.

Iſrael was commanded to be kind to ſtrangers, for ſaith God, you know the heart of a ſtranger: and ſurely if any caſe in the World require help, pity, and all compaſſionate tenderneſs, this doth: and yet how do ſome ſlight ſpiritual troubles upon others? Parents ſlight them in their own Children, Maſters in their Servants; the more brutiſh and wicked they. O had you but felt your ſelves what they feel, you would never handle them as you do. But let this comfort ſuch poor creatures, Chriſt hath felt them, and will pity and help them: yea, he therefore would feel them himſelf, that he might have compaſſion upon you. If Men will not, God will pity you: if Men be ſo cruel to perſecute him whom God hath ſmitten, God will be ſo kind to pour balm into the wounds that ſin hath made: if they pull away the ſhoulder from you, and will not be concern'd about your troubles, except it be to aggravate them, God will not ſerve you ſo: but certainly you that have paſt through the ſame difficulties, you cannot be without compaſſion to them that are now grappling with them.

Infer. 4. How unexpreſſibly dreadful is the ſtate of the damned, who muſt bear the burden of all their ſins upon themſelves without relief or hope of deliverance! Mark. 9. 44. where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

O if ſin upon the Soul, that's coming to Chriſt for deliverance, be ſo burdenſome, what is it upon the Soul that is ſhut out from Chriſt, and all hopes of deliverance for ever! For do but ponder theſe differences betwixt theſe two burdens.

Firſt, No Soul is ſo capacious now, to take in the fulneſs of the evil and miſery of Sin, as they are, who were gone down to the Place of Torments. Even as the Joys of Gods Face above, are much unknown to them that have the foretaſts and firſt Fruits of them here by Faith, ſo the Miſery of the damned is much unknown, even to them that have in their Conſciences the bittereſt Taſte and Senſe of Sin in this World: As we have the Viſions of Heaven, ſo we have the Viſions of Hell alſo, but darkly through a Glaſs.

Secondly, No burden of Sin preſſeth ſo continually upon the Soul here, as it doth there: Afflicted Souls on Earth have intermiſſions and breathing times; but in Hell there are no lucid intervals: The Wrath of God there is ſtill flowing: It is in fluxu continuo, Iſa. 30. 33. A ſtream of Brimſtone.

Thirdly, no burden of Sin lies upon any of Gods Elect ſo long as the damned do, and muſt bear it: Our troubles about Sin are but ſhort, tho' they ſhould run parallel with the line of Life; but the Troubles of the damned are parallel with the endleſs line of Eternity.

Fourthly, Under theſe Troubles the Soul hath hope, but there all hope is cut off: All the Goſpel is full of hope, it breaths nothing but hope to Sinners that are moving Chriſtward under their Troubles: But in Hell the pangs of deſperation rend their Conſciences for ever. So that upon all accounts the State of the damned is inexpreſſibly dreadful.

Infer. If the burden of Sin be ſo heavy, how ſweet then muſt the Pardon of Sin be to a Sin-burdened Soul! Is it a refreſhment to a Priſoner, to have his chains knock'd off? A comfort to a Debtor, to have his debts paid, and obligations cancelled? What joy muſt it then be to a ſin-burthened Soul, to hear the voice of Pardon and Peace in his trembling Conſcience? Is the light of the morning pleaſant to a Man after a weary tireſome night? the Spring of the year pleaſant after a hard and tedious Winter? they are ſo indeed; but nothing ſo ſweet, as the favour, peace and pardon of God, to a Soul that hath been long reſtleſs and anxious under the terrors and fears of Conſcience: for tho after pardon and peace a Man remembers ſin ſtill, yet it is as one that remembers the dangerous Pits, and deep Waters, from which he hath been wonderfully delivered, and had a narrow eſcape. O the unconceivable ſweetneſs of a Pardon! Who can read it, and not wet it with tears of joy? Are we glad when the grinding pain of the Stone, or racking fits of the Cholick are over? And ſhall we not be tranſported, when the accuſations and condemnations of Conſcience are over? Tongue cannot expreſs what theſe things are; his joy is ſomething that no words can convey to the underſtanding of another, that never felt the anguiſh of ſin.

Infer. 6. Laſtly, In how ſad a caſe are thoſe that never felt any burden in ſin, that never were kept waking and reſtleſs one night for ſin?

There is a burthened Conſcience, and there is a benummed Conſcience. The firſt is more painful but the laſt more dangerous. O 'tis a fearful blow of God upon a Mans Soul, to ſtrike it ſenſeleſs and ſtupid, ſo that tho Mountains of guilt lie upon it, it feels no pain or preſſure: and this is ſo much the more ſad, becauſe it incapacitates the Soul for Chriſt, and is a preſage and fore runner of Hell. It would grieve the heart of a Man, to ſee a delirious perſon in the rage and height of a feaver, to laugh at thoſe that are weeping for him, call them fools, and telling them, he is as well as any of them: much ſo is the caſe of many thouſand Souls, the God of mercy pity them.

Second Uſe for Counſel.

The only further Uſe I ſhall make of this point here, ſhall be to direct and counſel Souls that are weary and heavy laden with the burden of ſin, in order to their obtaining true reſt and peace. And firſt, Firſt Counſel.

Satisfie not your ſelves in fruitleſs complaints to Men. Many do ſo, but its never the near. I grant its lawful in ſpiritual diſtreſſes to complain to Men; yea, and it is a great mercy if we have any near us in times of trouble, that are judicious, tender and faithful, into whoſe boſoms we may pour out our troubles: but to reſt in this ſhort of Chriſt, is no better than a ſnare of the Devil to deſtroy us. Is there not a God to go to in trouble? The beſt of Men, in the neglect of Chriſt, are but Phyſicians of no value. Be wiſe and wary in your choice of Chriſtian friends, to whom you open your complaints: ſome are not clear themſelves in the Doctrine of Chriſt and Faith, others are of a dark and troubled ſpirit as you are, and will but entangle you more. As for me (ſaith Job) is my complaint to man, and if it were ſo, why ſhould not my ſpirit be troubled? Job 21. 4. One hour betwixt Chriſt and thy Soul in ſecret, will do more to thy true relief, than all other Counſellors and Comforters in the World can do.

Second Counſel.

Beware of a falſe peace, which is more dangerous than your trouble for ſin can be. Many Men are afraid of their troubles, but I think they have more cauſe to fear their peace a great deal. There is a twofold peace that ruines moſt Men. Peace in ſin, and peace with ſin. O how glad are ſome perſons when their troubles are gone, but I dare not rejoyce with them: Its like him that rejoyces his Ague is gone, tho it hath left him in a deep Conſumption. You are got rid of your troubles, but God knows how you have left them: your wounds are skinn'd over, better they were kept open. There's no wiſe Woman would deſire to have her pains and throes ceaſe till the Child be born. And ſurely they have much to anſwer, that help on theſe deluſions, healing the hurt of Souls ſlightly, by crying peace, peace, when there is no peace. The falſe peace you beget in them, will be a real trouble to your ſelves in the iſſue, Jer. 6. 14.

Third Counſel.

Let all that are under inward troubles for ſin, take heed of drawing deſperate concluſions againſt themſelves, and the final ſtate of their own Souls. Tho your caſe be ſad, 'tis not deſperate: tho the night be troubleſome and tedious, keep on in the way to Chriſt, and light will ſpring up. To mourn for ſin is you duty; to conclude there is no hope for you in Chriſt, is your ſin. You have wronged God enough already, don't add a farther and greater abuſe to all the reſt, by an abſolute deſpair of mercy. 'Twas your ſin formerly to preſume beyond any promiſe, 'tis your Sin now to deſpair againſt many commands. I would ſay as the Apoſtle in another Caſe, I would not have you mourn as Men that have no Hope: Your Condition is ſad as it is, but yet it's much better than once it was: You were once full of Sin, and void of Senſe; now you have the Senſe of Sin, which is no ſmall Mercy; You were once quite out of the Way and Method of Mercy, now you are in that very Path wherein Mercy meets the Elect of God. Keep hope therefore at the Bottom of all your Troubles.

Fourth Counſel, Obſerve whether your Troubles for Sin produce ſuch Fruits and Effects in your Souls, as theirs do which end at laſt in Chriſt and Everlaſting Peace.

Firſt, One that is truly burdened with Sin will not allow himſelf to live in the ſecret Practice of Sin: Either your Trouble will put an end to your courſe of ſinning, or your ſinning will put an end to your Troubles. Conſult 2 Cor. 7. 11.

Secondly, True Sorrow for Sin will give you very low and vile Thoughts of your ſelves: As you were covered with Pride before, ſo you will be covered with Shame after God hath convinced and humbled you, Rom. 6. 21.

Thirdly, A Soul really burdened with Sin, will never ſtand in his own Juſtification before God, nor extenuate and mince it in his Confeſſions to him, Pſalm 51. 3, 4.

Fourthly, The burdens of Sin will make a Man ſet Light by all other burdens of Affliction, Lam. 3. 22. Mic. 7. 9. The more you feel Sin, the leſs you feel Affliction.

Fifthly, A Soul truly burdened for Sin, will take no hearty Joy or Comfort in any outward Enjoyment of this World, till Chriſt come and ſpeak Peace to the Soul, Lam. 3. 28. Juſt ſo the Soul ſits alone and keepeth ſilence; merry Company is a burden, and Muſick is but howling to him.

Fifth Counſel. Beware of thoſe Things that make your Troubles longer than they ought to be. There be ſeveral Errors and Miſtakes that hold poor Souls much longer in their Fears and Terrors than elſe they might be: And ſuch are,

Firſt, Ignorance of the Nature of ſaving Faith, and the Neceſſity of it: Till you come to believe, you cannot have Peace; and while you miſtake the Nature, or apprehend not the Neceſſity of Faith, you are not like to fall into that path of Peace.

Secondly, Labouring to heal the wounds that the Law hath made upon your Conſciences, by a more ſtrict Obedience to it for the Future, in the neglect of Chriſt and his Righteouſneſs.

Thirdly, In obſervance of what God hath already done for you, in theſe Preparatory works of the Law, in order to your Salvation by Jeſus Chriſt. O if you would but compare what you now are, with what you lately were, it would give ſome relief: But the laſt and principal Thing is this:

Concilia callida prima ſpecie læta; tractatu dura, eventu triſtia Livy.

Sixth Counſel, Haſten to Chriſt in the way of Faith, and you ſhall find reſt; and till then, all the World cannot give you reſt. The ſooner you tranſact with Chriſt in the way of Faith, the ſooner you ſhall be at Peace, and enter into his reſt: For thoſe that believe, do now enter into reſt. You may tugg and ſtrive, look this way and that, but all in vain; Chriſt and Peace come together. No ſooner do you come to him, and roll your burden on him, receive him as he offers himſelf, but the Soul feels it ſelf eaſed on a ſudden; being juſtified by Faith, we have Peace with God, Rom. 5. 1. And thus in finiſhing the firſt, we are brought home to the ſecond Obſervation.

Doct. 2.

That Sin-burdened Souls are ſolemnly invited to come to Chriſt.

This Point ſounds ſweetly in the Ear of a diſtreſſed Sinner, it is the moſt joyful Voice that ever the Soul heard; the Voice of bleſſing from Mount Gerezim, the raviſhing Voice from Mount Sion, Ye are come to Jeſus the Mediator. In opening of it I will ſhew,

1. What it is to come to Chriſt.
2. How Chriſt invites Men to come to him.
3. Why his Invitation is directed to burdened Souls.

Firſt, We will enquire what it is to come to Chriſt, and how many Things are involved in it.

In general, To come to Chriſt, is a Phraſe æquipollent, or of the ſame amount with the believing in Chriſt. It is an Expreſſion that carries the Nature and Neceſſity of Faith in it, and is reciprocated with believing, John 6. 35. He that cometh to me ſhall never hunger, and he that believeth in me ſhall never thirſt. Coming to Chriſt, is believing in Chriſt; and believing in Chriſt, is coming to Chriſt: They are Synonyma's, and import the ſelf ſame Thing: Only in this Notion of Faith there are many rich and excellent Things hinted to us, which no other Word can ſo aptly convey to our Minds: As,

Firſt, It hints this to us, That the Souls of convinced and burdened Sinners, do not only diſcern the reality of Chriſt, or that he is, but alſo the Neceſſity of applying Chriſt, and that their Eternal Life is in their Union with him: For this is moſt certain, that the Object of Faith muſt be determinate and fixed; the Soul muſt believe that Chriſt is, or elſe there can be no Emotions of the Soul after him: All coming preſuppoſes a fixed Term to which we come, Heb. 11. 6. He that cometh to God, muſt believe that God is. Take away this, and all Motion after Chriſt preſently ſtops. No wonder then that Souls, in their firſt Motions to Chriſt, find themſelves clogg'd with ſo many Atheiſtical Temptations, ſhaking their Aſſent to the Truth of the Goſpel at the very Root and Foundation of it: But they that come to Chriſt do ſee that he is, and that their Life and Happineſs lies in their Union with him; elſe they would never come to him upon ſuch Terms as they do.

Secondly, Coming to Chriſt, implies the Souls deſpair of Salvation any other way: The way of Faith is a ſupernatural way, and Souls will not attempt it, until they have tried all natural ways to help and ſave themſelves, and find it all in vain: Therefore the Text deſcribes theſe Comers to Chriſt as weary Perſons, that have been tugging and ſtriving all other ways for reſt, but can find none; and ſo are forced to relinquiſh all their fond Expectations of Salvation in any other way, and come to Chriſt as their Laſt and only Remedy.

Thirdly, Coming to Chriſt, notes a Supernatural and Almighty Power acting the Soul quite above its own natural Abilities in this Motion, John 6. 44. No Man can come to me, except my Father which hath ſent me draw him. It is as poſſible for the ponderous Mountains to ſtart from their Baſes and Centres, mount themſelves aloft into the Air, and there fly like wandring Atoms hither and thither; as it is for any Man of himſelf, (i. e.) by a pure natural Power of his own, to come to Chriſt: It was not a ſtranger thing for Peter to come to Chriſt, walking upon the Waves of the Sea, than for his, or any Mans Soul, to come to Chriſt in the way of Faith.

Fourthly, Coming to Chriſt, notes the voluntarineſs of the Soul in its Motion to Chriſt. 'Tis true, there's no coming without the Fathers drawing; but that drawing hath nothing of Coaction in it; it doth not deſtroy, but powerfully, and with an overcoming ſweetneſs, perſwade the Will. 'Tis not forced or driven, but it comes: Being made willing in the Day of Gods Power, Pſalm 110. 3. Ask a poor diſtreſſed Sinner in that ſeaſon, Are you willing to come to Chriſt? O rather than live. Life is not ſo neceſſary as Chriſt is. O with all my Heart, ten Thouſand Worlds for Jeſus Chriſt, if he could be purchaſed, were nothing anſwerable to his value in mine Eyes. The Souls Motion to Chriſt is free and voluntary, 'tis coming.

Fifthly, It implies this in it, That no Duties or Ordinances (which are but the Ways or Means by which we come to Chriſt) are, or ought to be central and terminative to the Soul: (i. e.) The Soul of a Believer is not to ſit down and reſt in them; but to come by them, or through them, to Jeſus Chriſt, and take up his reſt in him only. No Duties, no Reformations, no Ordinances of God, how excellent ſoever theſe things are in themſelves, and how neceſſary ſoever they are in their proper Place and Uſe, can give reſt to the weary and heavy laden Soul: It cannot Centre in any of them; and you may ſee it cannot, becauſe it ſtill gravitates, and inclines to another thing, even Chriſt; and cannot terminate its Motion till it be come to him. Chriſt is the Term to which a Believer moves; and therefore cannot ſit down by the way as well ſatisfied, as if he were at his Journies end. Ordinances and Duties have the Nature and Uſe of Means to bring us to Chriſt, but not to be to any Man inſtead of Chriſt.

Venite ad e, (i. e.) ffectibus dei, & ei religi- æ, & de- derii. Bur- enſis in oc.

Sixthly, Coming to Chriſt, implies an Hope or Expectation from Chriſt in the coming Soul. If it have no hope, why doth it move forward? As good ſit ſtill, and reſolve to periſh where it is, as come to Chriſt, if there be no ground to expect Salvation by him. Hope is the ſpring of Motion and Induſtry: If you cut off Hope, you hamſtring Faith: It cannot move to Chriſt, except it be ſatisfied at leaſt of the poſſibility of Mercy and Salvation by him. Hence it is, that when comers to Chriſt are ſtruggling with the Doubts and Fears of the Iſſue, the Lord is pleaſed to enliven their faint hopes, by ſetting on ſuch Scriptures as that, John 6. 37. He that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out: And Heb. 7. 25. He is able to ſave to the uttermoſt all that come unto God by him. This puts Life into Hope, and Hope puts Life into Induſtry and Motion.

Seventhly, Coming to Chriſt for Reſt, implies that Believers have, and lawfully may have an Eye to their own happineſs in cloſing with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. The poor Soul comes for reſt: It comes for Salvation: Its Eye and Aim is upon it: And this aim of the Soul, at its own good, is legitimated and allowed by that Expreſſion of Chriſt, John 5. 40. Ye will not come unto me that ye may have Life. If Chriſt blame them for not coming to him, that they might have Life, ſure he would not blame them, had they come to him for Life.

Eighthly, But Laſtly, and which is the principal Thing carried in this Expreſſion, Coming to Chriſt, notes the All-ſufficiency of Chriſt, to anſwer all the Needs and Wants of diſtreſſed Souls, and their betaking themſelves accordingly to him only for relief, being content to come to Chriſt for whatever they need, and live upon that fulneſs that is in him. If there were not an All-ſufficiency, in Chriſt, no Soul would come to him: For this is the very ground upon which Men come, Heb. 7. 25. He is able to ſave to the uttermoſt, all that come to God by him: εἰς τὸ παντελὲς, to the uttermoſt: In the greateſt plunges, difficulties and dangers: He hath a fulneſs of ſaving Power in him; and this encourages Souls to come unto him. One Beggar uſes not to wait at the door of another, but all at the doors of them they conceiveable to relieve them. And as this notes the fulneſs of Chriſt as a Saviour, ſo it muſt needs note the emptineſs and humility of the Soul as a comer to him. This is call'd Submiſſion, in Rom. 10. 3. Proud Nature muſt be deeply diſtreſſed, humbled and moulded, into another Temper, before it will be perſwaded to live upon thoſe Terms, to come to Chriſt for every Thing it wants, to live upon Chriſt's fulneſs in the way of Grace and Favour, and have no Stock of its own to live upon. O this is hard, but it's the way of Faith.

Secondly, In the next Place, let us ſee how Chriſt invites Men to come unto him, and you ſhall find the Means employ'd in this Work, are either Internal and Principal, namely the Spirit of God, who is Chriſt's Vicegerent, and comes to us in his Name and Room to perſwade us to believe, John 15. 26. Or External, namely the preaching of the Goſpel by Commiſſionated Embaſſadors, who in Chriſt's ſtead beſeech Men to be reconciled to God: (i. e.) to come to Chriſt by Faith, in Order to their Reconciliation and Peace with God. But all Means and Inſtruments employ'd in this Work of bringing Men to Chriſt, entirely depend upon the bleſſing and concurrence of the Spirit of God, without whom they ſignifie nothing: How long may Miniſters preach, before one Soul come to Chriſt, except the Spirit co-operate in that Work? Now as to the manner in which Men are perſwaded, and their Wills wrought upon to come to Chriſt, I will briefly note ſeveral Acts of the Spirit in order thereunto.

Firſt, There is an illuſtrating-work of the Spirit upon the Minds of Sinners, opening their Eyes to ſee their Danger and Miſery. Till this be diſcovered, no Man ſtirs from his Place: 'Tis Senſe of Danger that rouzes the ſecure Sinner, that diſtreſſes him, and makes him look about for Deliverance, crying, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? And 'tis the diſcovery of Chriſts Ability to ſave, which is the ground and reaſon, (as was obſerved above) of its Motion to Chriſt. Hence, ſeeing the Son, is joyned with believing or coming to him, in John 6. 40.

Secondly, There is the Authoritative Call, or commanding Voice of the Spirit in the Word; a Voice that's full of awful Majeſty and Power, 1 John 3. 23. This is his Commandment, that we ſhould believe on the Name of his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This Call of the Spirit to come to Chriſt rolls one great block, namely the fear of Preſumption, out of the Souls way to Chriſt, and inſtead of Preſumption in coming, makes it Rebellion, and inexcuſable Obſtinacy, to refuſe to come. This anſwers all Pleas againſt coming to Chriſt from our unworthineſs and deep guilt, and mightily encourages the Soul to come to Chriſt, whatever it hath been or done.

Thirdly, There are Soul-encouraging conditional Promiſes to all that do come to Chriſt in Obedience to the Command. Such is that in my Text, I will give you reſt: And that in John 6. 37. Him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out. And theſe breathe Life and Encouragement into poor Souls that hang back, and are daunted through own unworthineſs.

Fourthly, There are dreadful threatnings denounced by the Spirit in the Word, againſt all that refuſe or neglect to come to Chriſt, which are of great uſe to engage and quicken Souls in their way to Chriſt, Mark 16. 16. He that believes not ſhall be damned. Die in his Sins, John 8. 24. The Wrath of God ſhall remain on him, John 3. ult. Which is as if the Lord had ſaid, Sinners don't dally with my Chriſt: Don't be always treating, and never concluding or reſolving: For if there be Juſtice in Heaven, or Fire in Hell, every Soul that comes not to Chriſt, muſt and ſhall periſh to all Eternity: Upon your own Heads, let the Blood and Deſtruction of your own Souls be for ever, if you will not come unto him.

Fifthly, There are moving and working Examples ſet before Souls in the Word, to prevail with them to come, alluring and encouraging Examples of ſuch as have come to Chriſt under deepeſt guilt and diſcouragement, and yet found Mercy, 1 Tim. 1. 15, 16. This is a faithful ſaying, and worthy of all Acceptation, that Jeſus Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners, of whom I am chief: Howbeit (or nevertheleſs) for this Cauſe I obtained Mercy, that in me firſt Jeſus Chriſt might ſhew forth all long-ſuffering, for a Pattern to them which ſhould hereafter believe in him to Life everlaſting. Who would not come to Chriſt after ſuch an Example as this? And if this will not prevail, there are dreadful Examples recorded in the Word, ſetting before us the miſerable Condition of all ſuch as refuſe the Calls of the Word to come to Chriſt, 1 Pet. 3. 19, 20. By which alſo he went and preached to the Spirits which are in Priſon, which ſometime were diſobedient when once the long-ſuffering of God waited in the Days of Noah. The meaning is, the Sinners that lived before the Flood, but now are in Hell, clapt up into that Priſon, had the offers of Grace made them, but deſpiſed them, and now lie for their diſobedience in Priſon, under the Wrath of God for it, in the loweſt Hell.

Sixthly and Laſt, There is an effectual perſwading, overcoming and victorious Work of the Spirit upon the Hearts and Wills of Sinners, under which they come to Jeſus Chriſt. Of this I have ſpoken at large before in the Fourth Sermon, and therefore ſhall not add any thing more here. This is the Way and Manner, in which Souls are prevailed with to come to Jeſus Chriſt.

Thirdly, In the laſt Place, if you enquire why Chriſt makes his Invitations to weary and heavy laden Souls, and to no other, the Anſwer is briefly this:

Firſt, Becauſe in ſo doing, he follows the Commiſſion which he received from his Father; for ſo you will find it runs in Iſa. 61. 1. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe the Lord hath anointed me to preach good Tidings to the meek, he hath ſent me to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim Liberty to the Captives, and the opening of the Priſon to them that are bound. You ſee here now Chriſts Commiſſion binds him up: His Father ſent him to poor broken hearted Sinners, and he will keep cloſe to his Commiſſion. He came not to call the Righteous, but Sinners (i. e. ſenſible burthened Sinners) to Repentance, Matt. 9. 13. I am not ſent (ſaith he) but unto the loſt Sheep of the Houſe of Iſrael. Thus his Inſtructions and Commiſſion from the Father, limit him only to ſenſible and burthened Souls, and he will be faithful to his Commiſſion.

Secondly, The very Order of the Spirits work in bringing Men to Chriſt, ſhews us to whom the Invitations and offers of Grace in Chriſt are to be made. For none are convinced of Righteouſneſs (i. e.) of the compleat and perfect Righteouſneſs which is in Chriſt for their Juſtification, until firſt they be convinced of Sin; and conſequently, no Man will or can come to Chriſt by Faith, till Convictions of Sin have awakened and diſtreſſed them, John 16. 8, 9. This being the due Order of the Spirits Operation, the ſame Order muſt be obſerved in Goſpel Offers and Invitations.

Thirdly, It behoves, that Chriſt ſhould provide for his own Glory, as well as for our Safety, and not expoſe that, to ſecure this, but ſave us in that way which will bring him moſt Honour and Praiſe. And certainly ſuch a way as is this, by firſt convincing, humbling and burthening the Souls of Men, and then bringing them to reſt in himſelf.

Alas! Let thoſe that never ſaw or felt the evil of Sin, be told of Reſt, Peace and Pardon in Chriſt, they will but deſpiſe it, as a Thing of no value, Luke 5. 31. The whole need not a Phyſician, but thoſe that are Sick. Bid a Man that thinks himſelf ſound and whole, go to the Phyſician, and he will but laugh at the Motion. If you offer him the richeſt Compoſition, he will refuſe it, ſlight it, and it may be ſpill it upon the Ground: Ay, but if the ſame Man did once feel an acute diſeaſe, and were made to [redacted] groan under ſtrong Pains, if ever he come to know what ſick Days and reſtleſs Nights are, and to apprehend his Life to be in eminent Hazard, then Meſſengers are ſent one after another in Poſt-haſte to the Phyſician; then he begs him with Tears to do what in him lies for his relief; he thankfully takes the bittereſt Potions, and Praiſes the Care and Skill of his Phyſician with Tears of Joy; and ſo the Patients ſafety, and the Phyſicians Honour, are both ſecured. So is it in this Method of Grace. The Uſes follow.

Infer. 1. If Sin-burthened Souls are ſolemnly invited to come to Chriſt, Then it follows, that whatever guilt lie upon the Conſcience of a poor humbled Sinner, 'tis no Preſumption, but his Duty to come to Chriſt, notwithſtanding his own apprehended vileneſs and great unworthineſs.

Let it be carefully obſerved how happily that univerſal Particle All is inſerted in Chriſts Invitation for the Encouragement of Sinners. Come unto me [All] ye that labour: q. d. let no broken-hearted Sinner exclude himſelf, when as he is not by me excluded from Mercy: My Grace is my own, I may beſtow it where I will, and upon whom I will. 'Tis not I, but Satan that impales and incloſes my Mercy from humbled Souls that are made willing to come unto me: He calls that your Preſumption, which my Invitation makes your Duty.

Object. 1. But I doubt my Caſe is excepted by Chriſt himſelf, in Mat. 12. 31. where blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt is exempted from Pardon: And I have had many horrid blaſphemous Thoughts injected into my Soul.

Sol. Art thou a burdened and heavy laden Soul? If ſo, thy Caſe is not in that, or any other Scripture, exempted from Mercy: For the unpardonable Sin is always found in an impenitent Heart: As that Sin finds no Pardon with God, ſo neither is it followed with Contrition and Sorrow in the Soul that commits it.

Object. 2. But if I am not guilty of that Sin, I am certainly guilty of many great and heinous Abominations of another kind, too great for me to expect Mercy for, and therefore I dare not go to Chriſt.

Sol. The greater your Sins have been, the more need you have to go to Jeſus Chriſt. Let not a Motive to Chriſt, be made an Obſtacle in your way to him. Great Sinners are expreſly called, Iſa. 1. 18. Great Sinners have come to Chriſt, and found Mercy, 1 Cor. 6. 7. And to conclude, it's an high reproach and diſhonour to the Blood of Chriſt, and Mercy of God, which flows ſo freely through him, to object the greatneſs of Sin to either of them. Certainly you have not ſinned beyond the extent of Mercy, or beyond the efficacy of the Blood of Chriſt: But Pardon and Peace may be had, if you will thus come to Chriſt for it.

Object. 3. Oh but it's now too late; I have had many thouſand Calls by the Goſpel, and refuſed them; many Purpoſes in my Heart to go to Chriſt, and quenched them; my Time therefore is paſt, and now 'tis to no Purpoſe.

Sol. If the Time of Grace be paſt, and God intends no Mercy for Thee, how comes it to paſs thy Soul is now filled with Trouble and Diſtreſs for Sin? Is this the frame of a Mans Heart that is paſt hope? Do ſuch Signs as theſe appear in Men that are hopeleſs? Beſide, the Time of Grace is a ſecret hid in the Breaſt of God; but coming to Chriſt is a Duty plainly revealed in the Text: And why will you Object a Thing that is ſecret and uncertain, againſt a Duty that is ſo plain and evident? Nor do you your ſelves believe what you Object: For at the ſame time that you ſay your ſeaſons are over, it is too late; you are notwithſtanding found repenting, mourning, praying and ſtriving, to come to Chriſt. Certainly if you knew it were too late, you would not be found labouring in the uſe of Means. Go on therefore, and the Lord be with you. 'Tis not Preſumption but Obedience, to come when Chriſt calls; as here he doth, Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden.

Infer. 2. Hence it follows, That none have cauſe to be troubled, when God makes the Souls of their Friends or Relations ſick with the Senſe of Sin. It was the ſaying (as I remember) of Hierom to Sabinian, Nothing (ſaid he) makes my Heart ſadder, than that nothing can make my Heart ſad. 'Tis Matter of Joy to all that rightly underſtand the Matter, when God ſmites the Heart of any Man with the painful ſenſe of Sin, of ſuch ſickneſs it may be ſaid, This ſickneſs is not unto Death, but for the Glory of God Yet how do many carnal Relations lament and bewail this as a Miſery, as an undoing to their Friends and Acquaintance; as if then they muſt be reckon'd loſt, and never till then that Chriſt is finding and ſaving them. O if your Hearts were ſpiritual and wiſe, their groans for Sin would be as Muſick in your Ears. When they go alone to bewail their Sin, you would go alone alſo to bleſs God for ſuch a Mercy; that ever you ſhould live to ſuch a happy Day: You would ſay, now is my Friend in the bleſſed Pangs of the new Birth: Now is he in the very way of Mercy: Never in ſo hopeful a Condition as now. I had rather he ſhould groan now at the Feet of Chriſt, than groan hereafter under the Wrath of God for ever. O Parents, beware as you love the Souls of your Children, that you don't damp and diſcourage them, tempt or threaten them, divert or hinder them in ſuch Caſes as this, leſt you bring the Blood of their Souls upon your own heads.

Infer. 3. It alſo follows from hence, That thoſe to whom Sin was never any burthen, are not yet come to Chriſt, nor have they any Intereſt in him. We may as well ſuppoſe a Child to be born without any pangs or throes, as a Soul to be born again, and united to Chriſt without any ſenſe or ſorrow for Sin. I know many have great frights of Conſcience, that never were made duly ſenſible of the Evil of Sin: Many are afraid of burning, that never were afraid of ſinning. Slight and tranſient Troubles ſome have had, but it vaniſh'd like an early Cloud, lick'd up like a Morning Dew. Few Men are without checks and throbs of Conſcience at one Time or other, but inſtead of going to the Cloſet, they run to the Ale-houſe or Tavern for a Cure: If their ſorrow for Sin had been right, nothing but the ſprinkling of the Blood of Chriſt could have appeaſed their Conſciences, Heb. 10. 22. How cold ſhould the Conſideration of this thing ſtrike to the Hearts of ſuch Perſons! Methinks, Reader, if this be thy Caſe, it ſhould ſend thee away with an aking Heart: Thou haſt not yet taſted the bitterneſs of Sin, and if thou do not, then ſhalt thou never taſte the ſweetneſs of Chriſt, his Pardons and Peace.

Infer. 4. How great a Mercy is it for Sin burthened Souls, to be within the Sound and Call of Chriſt in the Goſpel!

There be many thouſands in the Pagan and Popiſh Parts of the World, that labour under diſtreſſes of Conſcience as well as we, but have no ſuch reliefs or means of Peace and Comfort as we have that live within the joyful ſound of the Goſpel. If the Conſcience of a Papiſt be burdened with guilt, all the relief he hath, is to afflict his Body to quiet his Soul: A Penance or Pilgrimage is all the relief they have. If a Pagan be in trouble for Sin, he hath no Knowledge of Chriſt, nor Notion of a Satisfaction made by him. The voice of Nature is, Shall I give my firſt-born for my Tranſgreſſion, the fruit of my Body for the ſin of my Soul? The damned endure the terrible blows and wounds of Conſcience for ſin, they roar under that terrible laſh, but no voice of peace or pardon is heard among them. It is not, Come unto me ye that labour and are heavy-laden, but depart from me ye curſed.

Bleſſed are your ears, for you hear the voice of peace, you are come to Jeſus the Mediator, and to the blood of ſprinkling. O you can never ſet a due value upon this priviledge.

Infer. 5. How ſweet and unſpeakably relieving is the cloſing of a burdened Soul with Jeſus Chriſt by faith! 'Tis reſt to the weary Soul.

Soul-troubles are ſpending and waſting troubles. The pains of a diſtreſſed conſcience are the moſt acute pains. A poor Soul would fain be at reſt, but knows not where; he tries this duty and that, but finds none; at laſt he falls into the way of believing; he caſts himſelf, with his burden of guilt and fear, upon Chriſt, and there is the reſt his Soul deſired. Chriſt and Reſt come together: till Faith bring you to the boſome of Jeſus, you can find no true reſt; the Soul is rolling and toſſing, ſick and weary, upon the billows of its own guilt and fears. Now the Soul is come like a Ship toſſed with Storms and Tempeſts, out of a raging Ocean into the quiet Harbour; or like a loſt Sheep that hath been wandring in wearineſs, hunger and danger, into the Fold. Is a ſoft Bed in a quiet Chamber, ſweet to one that is ſpent and tired with Travel? Is the ſight of a ſhoar ſweet to the Shipwreck'd Mariner, that looks for nothing but death? Much more ſweet is Chriſt to a Soul that comes to him preſſed in conſcience, and broken in ſpirit, under the ſinking weight of ſin.

Italiam, Italiam, læto clamore ſalutant. Virg.

How did the Italians rejoyce, after a long and dangerous Voyage, to ſee Italy again! Crying with a loud and united voices, which made the very Heavens ring again, Italy! Italy! But no ſhoar is ſo ſweet to the weather-beaten Paſſenger, as Chriſt is to a broken-hearted Sinner: this brings the Soul to a ſweet repoſe, Heb. 4. 3. We which have believed, do enter into reſt: and this endears the way of Faith to their Souls ever after.

Infer. 6. Learn hence the uſefulneſs of the Law, to bring Souls to Jeſus Chriſt. Its utterly uſeleſs as a Covenant to juſtifie us, but exceeding uſeful to convince and humble us. It cannot relieve or eaſe us, but it can, and doth awaken and rouze us: its a fair glaſs to ſhew us the face of ſin; and till we have ſeen that, we cannot ſee the face of Jeſus Chriſt.

The Law, like the fiery Serpent, ſmites, ſtings and torments the conſcience: This drives us to the Lord Jeſus lifted up in the Goſpel, like the Brazen Serpent in the Wilderneſs, to heal us. The uſe of the Law, is to make us feel our ſickneſs; this makes us look out for a Phyſician. I was alive once without the Law (ſaith Paul) but when the Commandment came ſin revived, and I died, Rom. 7. 9. The hard, vain, proud hearts of Men, require ſuch an Hammer to break them to pieces.

Infer. 7. Its the immediate duty of weary and heavy laden ſinners to come to Chriſt by Faith, and not ſtand off from Chriſt, or delay to accept him upon any pretence whatſoever.

Chriſt invites and commands ſuch to come unto him, 'tis therefore your ſin to neglect, draw back, or defer, whatever ſeeming reaſons and pretences there may be to the contrary. When the Jaylor was brought (where I ſuppoſe thee now to be) to a pinching diſtreſs that made him cry, Sirs, what muſt I do to be ſaved? the very next counſel the Apoſtles gave him, was, Believe on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and thou ſhalt be ſaved, Acts 16. 30, 31. And for your encouragement know, he that calleth you to come, knows your burden, what your ſins have been, and troubles are, yet he calls you: if your ſin hinder not Chriſt from calling, neither ſhould it hinder you from coming. He that calls you, is able to eaſe you; to ſave to the uttermoſt all that come to God by him, Heb. 7. 25. Whatever fulneſs of ſin be in you, there is a greater fulneſs of ſaving power in Chriſt. Moreover, he that calls you to come, never yet rejected any poor burdened Soul that came to him: and hath ſaid he never will, Joh. 6. 37. He that cometh unto me, I will in no wiſe caſt out. Fear not therefore, he will not begin with thee, or make thee the firſt inſtance and example of the feared Rejection.

And Laſtly, Bethink thy ſelf, what wilt thou do, and whether wilt thou go in this caſe, if not to Jeſus Chriſt? Nothing ſhall eaſe or relieve thee, till thou doſt come to him. Thou art under an happy neceſſity to go to him. With him only is found reſt for the weary Soul. Which brings us to the third and laſt Obſervation.

Doct. 3.

That there is reſt in Chriſt for all that come unto him under the heavy burden of Sin.

Noc dicit εἰσήλθομεν ingreſſi ſumus, ſed εἰσερχόμεθα ingredimur, ſignificans, initia quietis fideles nunc habere: plenam quietem ſuo tempore conſecuturos. Pareus in loc.

REST, is a ſweet word to a weary Soul, all ſeek it, but none but Believers find it. We which have believed, (ſaith the Apoſtle) do enter into reſt, Heb. 4. 3. He doth not ſay they ſhall, but they do enter into reſt; noting their ſpiritual reſt to be already begun by Faith on Earth in the tranquility of Conſcience, and ſhall be conſummated in Heaven in the full enjoyment of God. There is a ſweet calm upon the troubled Soul after believing, an eaſe or reſt of the mind, which is an unſpeakable mercy to a poor weary Soul. Chriſt is to it, as the Ark was to the Dove, when ſhe wandred over the watery World, and found no place to reſt the ſoal of her foot. Faith centers the unquiet ſpirit of Man in Chriſt, brings it to repoſe it ſelf and its burden on him. It is the Souls dropping Anchor in a Storm, which ſtays and ſettles it.

The great debate which coſt ſo many anxious thoughts, is now iſſued into this Reſolution; I will venture my All upon Chriſt, let him do with me as ſeemeth him good. It was impoſſible for the Soul to find reſt, whileſt it knew not where to beſtow it ſelf, or how to be ſecured from the wrath to come; but when all is embarqued in Chriſt for Eternity, and the Soul fully reſolved to lean upon him, and truſt to him; now it feels the very initials of eternal reſt in it ſelf: it finds an heavy burden unloaded from its ſhoulders: it is come as it were into a new World: the caſe is ſtrangely altered. The word reſt in this place notes, (and is ſo rendered by ſome) a recreation: 'tis reſtored, renewed and recreated as it were, by that ſweet repoſe it hath upon Chriſt. Believers know, that faith is the ſweeteſt recreation you can take. Others ſeek to divert vert and loſe their troubles by ſinful recreations, vain company, and the like; but they little know what the recreation, and ſweet reſtoring reſt, that faith gives the Soul, is. You find in Chriſt what they ſeek in vain among the Creatures. Believing is the higheſt recreation known in this World. But to prevent miſtakes, three Cautions need to be premiſed, leſt we do in ipſo limine impingere, ſtumble at the threſhold, and ſo loſe our way all along afterward.

Caution 1.

You are not to conceive, that all the Souls fears, troubles and ſorrows, are preſently over and at an end, as ſoon as it is come to Chriſt by faith. They will have many troubles in the World after that, it may be more than ever they had in their lives: Our fleſh (ſaith Paul) had no reſt, 2 Cor. 7. 5. They will be infeſted with many temptations after that, that it may be the aſſaults of Satan may be more violent upon their Souls than ever: horribilia de deo, terribilio de fide: Injections that make the very bones to quake, [redacted]: they will not be freed from ſin, that reſt remains for the People of God; nor from inward trouble and grief of Soul about ſin. Theſe things are not to be expected preſently.

Luther upon his Converſion was ſo buffeted by Satan, Ut nec calor, nec ſanguis, nec ſenſus, nec vox ſupereſſet.

Caution 2.

We may not think all Believers do immediately enter into the full actual ſenſe of reſt and comfort, but they preſently enter into the ſtate of reſt. Being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God, Rom. 5. 1. (i. e.) we enter into the ſtate of peace immediately. Peace is ſown for the righteous, and gladneſs for the upright in heart, Pſal. 97. 11. And he is a rich Man that hath a thouſand Acres of Corn in the ground, as well as he that hath ſo much in his Barn, or the Money in his Purſe. They have reſt and peace in the ſeed of it, when they have it not in the fruit: they have reſt in the promiſe, when they have it not in poſſeſſion: and he is a rich Man that hath good Bonds and Bills for a great ſum of Money, if he have not twelve pence in his Pocket. All Believers have the Promiſe, have reſt and peace granted them under Gods own hand in many Promiſes; which faith brings them under: and we know that the truth and faithfulneſs of God ſtands engaged to make good every line and word of the Promiſe to them. So that tho' they have not a full and clear actual ſenſe and feeling of reſt, they are nevertheleſs by Faith come into the ſtate of reſt.

Caution 3.

We may not conceive, that Faith it ſelf is the Souls reſt, but the means and inſtrument of it only. We cannot find reſt in any work or duty of our own, but we may find it in Chriſt, whom Faith apprehends for Juſtification and Salvation.

Having thus guarded the Point againſt miſapprehenſions by theſe needful Cautions, I ſhall next ſhew you, how our coming to Chriſt by Faith brings us to reſt in him. And here let it be conſidered what thoſe things are that burden, grieve and diſquiet the Soul, before its coming to Chriſt, and how it is relieved and eaſed in all thoſe reſpects by its coming to the Lord Jeſus: and you ſhall find,

Firſt, That one principal ground of trouble, is the guilt of ſin upon the Conſcience, of which I ſpake in the former point. The Curſe of the Law lies heavy upon the Soul, ſo heavy that nothing is found in all the World able to relieve it under that burden: as you ſee in a condemned Man, ſpread a Table in Priſon with the greateſt dainties, and ſend for the rareſt Muſicians, all will not charm his ſorrow; but if you can produce an authentick Pardon, you eaſe him preſently: juſt ſo it is here, Faith plucks the thorn out of the conſcience which ſo grieved it, unites the Soul with Chriſt, and then that ground of trouble is removed: for there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt, Rom. 8. 11. The ſame moment the Soul comes to Chriſt, it is paſt from death to life; is no more under the Law, but Grace. If a Mans Debt be paid by his Surety, he need not fear to ſhew his face boldly abroad: he may freely meet the Sergeant at the Priſon door.

Secondly, The Soul of a convinced Sinner is exceedingly burdened with the uncleanneſs and filthineſs wherewith ſin hath defiled and polluted it. Conviction diſcovers the univerſal pollution of heart and life, ſo that a Man loaths and abhors himſelf by reaſon thereof: If he do not look into his own corruptions, he cannot be ſafe: and if he do, he cannot bear the ſight of it; he hath no quiet: Nothing can give reſt, but what gives relief againſt this evil. And this only is done by Faith uniting the Soul with Jeſus Chriſt. For tho it be true, that the pollution of ſin be not preſently and perfectly taken away, by coming to Chriſt, yet the burden thereof is exceedingly eaſed: for upon our believing, there is an heart-purifying principle planted into the Soul, which doth by degrees cleanſe that Fountain of corruption, and will at laſt perfectly free the Soul from it, Acts 15. 9. Purifying their hearts by faith: and being once in Chriſt, he is concerned for the Soul, as a Member now of his own myſtical body, to purifie and cleanſe it, that at laſt he may preſent it perfect to the Father without ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing, Eph. 5. 26. The reigning power of it is gone immediately upon believing, and the very exiſtence and being of it ſhall at laſt be deſtroyed. O what reſt muſt this give under thoſe troubles for ſin?

Thirdly, It was an intolerable burden to the Soul to be under the continual fears, alarms and frights of Death and Damnation. Its life hath been a life of bondage upon this account, ever ſince the Lord opened his eyes to ſee his condition. Poor Souls lie down with tremblings, for fear what a night may bring forth. 'Tis a ſad life indeed to live in continual bondage to ſuch fears. But Faith ſweetly relieves the Trembling Conſcience, by removing the guilt which breeds it; fears. The ſting of Death is Sin; when guilt is removed, fears vaniſh. Smite Lord, ſmite, ſaid Luther, for my ſins are forgiven. Now if ſickneſs come, 'tis another thing than it was wont to be, Iſa. 33. 24. The Inhabitant ſhall not ſay I am ſick, the people that dwell therein ſhall be forgiven their iniquities: a Man ſcarce feels his ſickneſs in compariſon to to what he did, whilſt he was without Chriſt, and hope of pardon.

Feri Domine, feri, nam à peccatis meis abſolutus ſum, Luth.

Fourthly, A convinced ſinner out of Chriſt ſees every thing againſt him: nothing yields any comfort, yea, every thing increaſes and aggravates his burthen, whether he look to things paſt, preſent, or to come. If he reflect upon things paſt, his Soul is filled with anguiſh to remember the ſins committed, and the ſeaſons neglected; and the precious mercies that have been abuſed: if he look upon things preſent, the caſe is doleful and miſerable: nothing but trouble and danger; Chriſtleſs, and Comfortleſs: and if he look forward to things to come, that gives him a deeper cut to the heart than any thing elſe; for tho it be ſad and miſerable for the preſent, yet he fears it will be much worſe hereafter; all theſe are but the beginning of ſorrows: and thus the poor awakened Sinner becomes a Magor miſſabib; fear round about.

But upon his coming to Chriſt, all things are marvelouſly altered: a quite contrary face of things appears to him: every thing gives him hope and comfort which way ſoever he looks: ſo ſpeaks the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. All things are yours, (ſaith he) whether life, or death; or things preſent, or things to come, all is yours, and ye are Chriſts, and Chriſt is Gods: they are ours, (i. e.) for our advantage, benefit and comfort; more particularly upon our coming to Chriſt,
